Zippy's Insurance (Cartoon comedy)	500 ft.
Zippy's Pets (Cartoon comedy)	500 ft.
The Unknown (Cartoon comedy)	500 ft.

Moe Streimer

A Daughter of the Don	10 reels

Submarine Film Corporation

The Submarine Eye	7 reels

U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corp.

Just a Woman (Charlotte Walker).

W. H. Productions Co.

William S. Hart as Two Gun Man in "The Bargain"	6 reels
William S. Hart in "The Bandit and the Preacher"	5 reels
William S. Hart in "The Hell Hound of Alaska"	5 reels

Also Series of two-reel W. H. Hart productions.
Satan's Pawn (Bessie Barriscale).

Western Import Co.

Mickey (Mabel Normand).

Wholesome Films Corporation

The Penny Philanthropist (Peggy O'Neil and Ralph Morgan), D.	5
Cinderella and the Magic Slipper (Special Children's Cast), Juv.	4

His Awful Downfall (Rex Adams), 1,000 feet, C.
Little Red Riding Hood (Juvenile), 4,000 feet.

World Pictures

Over Here	5 reels

Short Subjects Current and Coming

Educational Film Corp. of Amer.

SCENICS—EDUCATIONAL

Jan. 2.	A World of Dreams	800 ft.
Jan. 9.	A Trip Through Japan, No. 3	900 ft.
Jan. 16.	The Hound of the Hills	700 ft.
Jan. 23.	Making of an American Officer	1,000 ft.
Jan. 30.	Just for Joy	900 ft.
Feb. 6.	The Trail to the Sky	700 ft.
Feb. 13.	The Ridge Roamers	800 ft.
Feb. 20.	A Mountain Observatory	1,000 ft.
Feb. 27.	The Forbidden Isle	900 ft.
Mar. 6.	From Here to Summerland	800 ft.
Mar. 13.	Strange Fishermen of Russia	900 ft.
Mar. 20.	Our Hawaiian Army	1,000 ft.
Mar. 27.	The Making of the Plotless Picture	700 ft.
Apr. 3.	The Making of Russian Caviar	850 ft.
Apr. 10.	White Water and Windy Willie—Where the Clouds Come From	1,000 ft.

DITMARS "LIVING BOOK OF NATURE"

Jan. 14.	The Animals in Midsummer	500 ft.
Jan. 28.	Life in the Insect World	500 ft.
Feb. 11.	Turtles of All Lands	500 ft.
Feb. 25.	Evolution	500 ft.
Mar. 11.	Animal Traits	500 ft.
Mar. 25.	Adaptation	500 ft.
Apr. 8.	Night Animals	500 ft.

CARTOONS

Apr. 22.	Vanity and Vengeance (Katzenjammer Kids)	500 ft.
Apr. 29.	Doing His Bit (Happy Hooligan)	500 ft.
May 6.	Der Two Twins (Katzenjammer Kids)	500 ft.

BENJAMIN CHAPIN'S PARAMOUNT SERIES

The Son of Democracy.

Famous Players-Lasky Corp.

PARAMOUNT BRAY PICTOGRAPHS

Mar. 4. In the Moonshine Country; Stage Women's War Relief; Magic for Home Use; Cartoon: Pinkerton Pup's Portrait.

Mar. 11. War and the Motorcycle; Hawaii and Her Natives; Cartoon by Wallace Karlson.

Mar. 18. Rose Culture; Uncle Sam's Coin Factory; Physical Culture Terpsychore; Cartoon: Hornets of the Sea, by J. F. Leventhal.

Mar. 25. Lumbering for Wartime; Hawaiians and Their Strange Customs; Women in the World of Work (Interior Decorating); Cartoon: Bobby Bumps, by Earl Hurd.

Apr. 1. Training Women Sharpshooters; Our Bone Relations; A New Use for a Houseboat; Cartoon by — "Me and Gott" — Bray Studios.

Apr. 8. Grizzly Bear Pets; Uncle Sam's Stamp Factory; Cartoon by Wallace Karlson.

Apr. 15. Women in the World of Work; Hawaii, The Beautiful; Cartoon by Earl Hurd.

Apr. 22. Microscopic Revelations; Horse Training by Experts; Scientific Rose Culture; Cartoon by Bray Studios.

Apr. 29. Titles Unavailable.

PARAMOUNT BURTON HOLMES TRAVELOGUES

Mar. 4. On the Way to the Front with the Chinese Labor Corps.
Mar. 11. The Alaska Cruise.
Mar. 18. A Summer Day in Skaguay.
Mar. 25. Over the White Pass.
Apr. 1. Down the Yukon.
Apr. 8. In Happy Honolulu.
Apr. 15. Peerless Pineapples of the Pacific.
Apr. 22. High Spots of Hawaii.
Apr. 29. Our Filipino Fighting Force.

PARAMOUNT ARBUCKLE COMEDIES

Mar. 18. The Bell Boy.
Apr. —. No April Release Reported.

PARAMOUNT MACK SENNETT COMEDIES

Mar. 11. Sheriff Nell's Tussle.
Mar. 25. Those Athletic Girls.
Apr. 8. Friend Husband.
Apr. 22. Saucy Madeline.

PARAMOUNT FEATURE—"THE SON OF DEMOCRACY"

Mar. 4. My First Jury.
Mar. 11. Tender Memories.
Mar. 18. A President's Answer.
Mar. 25. Native State.
Apr. 1. Down the River.
Apr. 8. The Slave Auction.
Apr. 15. Under the Stars.

Fox Sunshine Comedies

Feb. 3.	Hungry Lions in a Hospital	2 C
Feb. 17.	Are Married Policemen Safe?	2 C
Mar. 3.	Her Husband's Wife	2 C
Mar. 17.	A Selfmade Lady	2 C
Apr. 7.	A Waiter's Wasted Life	2 C

MUTT AND JEFF ANIMATED CARTOONS

Mar. 24.	The Decoy	½ reel
Mar. 31.	Back to the Balkans	½ reel
Apr. 7.	The Freight Investigation	½ reel
Apr. 14.	The Leak	½ reel

General Film Company

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES
(O. HENRY STORIES)

Lost on Dress Parade (Patsy De Forrest, Evart Overton)	2 D
Nemesis and the Candy Man (Wm. Dunn, Miriam Miles)	2 D
The Rubaiyat of a Scotch Highball (Agnes Ayres, Edward Earle)	2 D
The Buyer from Cactus City (William Dunn, Miriam Miles)	2 D

ESSANAY
GEORGE ADE FABLES
ESSANAY COMEDIES (1 reel)

The Soup and the Fish Ball	1 C
A Tough Knight	1 C
Our Little Nell	1 C
Check Your Hat, Sir	1 C
Wild Algy of Piccadilly	1 C
All Stuck Up	1 C
The Lie That Failed	1 C
The Jazbo Sheriff	1 C

SNAKEVILLE COMEDIES
(One reel each)

Slippery Sam and the Green-Eyed Monster.
When Macbeth Came to Snakeville.
Slippery Slim and His Tombstone.
Slippery Slim and the Impersonator.
When Slippery Slim Met the Champion.
Snakeville's New Waitress.
Slippery Slim's Dilemma.

ESSANAY SCENICS

Water Powers of Western Canada	1 Sc.
Through Canada from Coast to Coast	1 Sc.
How Canada and the Farmer Co-operate in Grain Raising	1 Sc.
Agricultural Opportunities in Western Canada	1 Sc.
Water Powers of Eastern Canada	1 Sc.
A Romance of Rails and Power	1 Sc.
Grand Canyon of Arizona and Canyon de Chelley	1 Sc.

CHAPLIN COMEDIES

By the Sea	1 C
In the Park	1 C
Work	2 C
A Woman	2 C
The Tramp	2 C
His New Job	2 C

JAXON FILM CORP.

"A DAUGHTER OF UNCLE SAM" SERIAL (Jane Vance, Wm. Sorelle) 12 Episodes	1 D

JAXON COMEDIES

The Unofficial Maneuver	1 C
What Occurred on the Beach	1 C
An All-Fools' Day Affair	1 C
Beating Him to It	1 C
Forced Into Matrimony	1 C

JUDGE BROWN STORIES

Thief or Angel	2 C-D
The Accusing Toe	2 C-D
The Rebellion	2 C-D
A Boy Built City	2 C-D
I'm a Man	2 C-D

SPARKLE COMEDIES

On the Love Line	1 C
The Detective	1 C
Smashing the Plot	1 C
After the Matinee	1 C
Double Cross	1 C
The Best of a Bad Bargain	1 C

THREE C COMEDIES

Stealing a Sweetheart (Lou Marks, Pearl Shepard, Oom Paul)	1 C
A Hash House Romance (Lou Marks, Pearl Shepard, Oom Paul)	1 C
The Hod Carrier's Million (Claude Cooper, Virginia Tracy Clark, Kenneth Clarendon)	1 C

HANOVER FILM COMPANY

Camille (Helen Hesperia)	6 D
The Marvelous Maciste	6 D

PHYSICAL CULTURE PHOTO PLAYS CO.

Physical Culture Magazine (Issued Monthly)	1 Edc.

PIEDMONT PICTURES CORPORATION
(SELBURN COMEDIES)

Hubby's Holiday	2 C
Too Much Elephant	1 C
Wedding Bells and Lunatics	1 C
His College Proxy	1 C

BLUE RIDGE DRAMAS
(Ned Finley)

The Return of O'Garry	2 D
Mountain Law	2 D
The Raiders of Sunset Gap	2 D

CLOVER COMEDIES

The Wooing of Coffee Cake Kate	1 C
Rip Roaring Rivals	1 C
He Couldn't Fool His Wife	1 C
By Heck, I'll Save Her	1 C
The Paper Hanger's Revenge	1 C

EBONY COMEDIES

A Black Sherlock Holmes	1 C
Spying the Spy	1 C
The Porters	1 C
A Milk Fed Hero	1 C
Busted Romance	1 C
Spooks	1 C

EXPORT AND IMPORT FILM CO. (Inc.)

Why—The Bolsheviki	5 D

NOVELTY FILMS
(Cartoons, Novelties, Scenics)

ME, der Kaiser; Our Heroes; Strange Sights in the Pacific Islands	1
Power, Pro and Con; England's Leaders on Land and Sea; Scenic	1
The Girth of a Nation; 4 Famous Battles of the Civil War; Scenic	1

DUPLEX FILMS, INC.

Shame (Zena Keefe)	7 D

Goldwyn Pictures Corp.
CAPITOL COMEDIES

Bill's Baby	2 reels
Bill's Predicament	2 reels

King Bee Comedies

Feb. 1.	The Stranger	2 reels
Feb. 15.	His Day Out	2 reels
Mar. 1.	The Rogue	2 reels
Mar. 15.	The Orderly	2 reels
Apr. 1.	The Scholar	2 reels
Apr. 15.	The Messenger	2 reels
May 1.	The Handy Man	2 reels

George Kleine System

MONTGOMERY FLAGG'S COMEDIES
"GIRLS YOU KNOW"

Feb. 13.	The Matinee Girl	2 C
Feb. 27.	The Artist's Model	2 C
Mar. 13.	The Man Eater	2 C
Mar. 27.	The Stenog
Apr. 10.	The Art Bug

Metro Pictures Corporation

METRO-DREW COMEDIES

Mar. 4.	Before and After Taking	1 C
Mar. 11.	His Strength of Mind	1 C
Mar. 18.	Special Today	1 C
Mar. 25.	When a Man's Married	1 C
Apr. 1.	Gas Logic	1 C
Apr. 8.	A Youthful Affair	1 C

Mutual Film Corporation

STRAND (BILLIE RHODES)

Mar. 5.	Waltzing Around	1 reel
Mar. 12.	Finishing Mary	1 reel
Mar. 19.	His Quaker Girl	1 reel
Mar. 26.	Up She Goes	1 reel
Apr. 2.	She Couldn't Grow Up	1 reel
Apr. 9.	For Art's Sake	1 C
Apr. 16.	Her Helping Hand	1 C

SCREEN TELEGRAM

Issued Sunday and Wednesday of Each Weed

MUTUAL-CHAPLINS

Oct. 29.	The Adventurer	2 C

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Sunday, April 14, 1918

Pipe the Whiskers (Harold Lloyd, Bebe Daniels, Harry Pollard) Rolin	1 C
Whispering Wires of War (War film)	1 reel

Wednesday April 17, 1918

Hearst-Pathe News, No. 32	1 top

Saturday, April 20, 1918

Hearst-Pathe News, No. 33	1 top

Sunday, April 21, 1918

It's a Wild Life (Harold Lloyd, Bebe Daniels, Harry Pollard), Rolin	1 C
Trinidad—British West Indies (Travel)	1 reel

Wednesday, April 24, 1918

Hearst-Pathe News, No. 34	1 top

Saturday, April 27, 1918

Hearst-Pathe News, No. 35	1 top

SERIALS

"The House of Hate" (Astra)
Two reels each
(Pearl White, Antonio Moreno, Paul Clerget, John Webb Dillion, Peggy Shaner)

Mar. 24. Third Episode, A Woman's Perfidy.
Mar. 31. Fourth Episode, The Man from Java.
Apr. 7. Fifth Episode, Spies Within.
Apr. 14. Sixth Episode, A Living Target.
Apr. 21. Seventh Episode, The Germ Menace.

(Continued on page 2428)

Monthly Index of Releases

All releases of the month are listed. In the index, C. stands for "Comedy"; Cart., for "Cartoon"; C.-D., for "Comedy Drama"; D., "Drama"; Juv., "Juvenile"; Sc., "Scenic"; Top., "Topical." The figure before the abbreviation is the number of reels, date is the date of release and the figure the page of Motion Picture News on which the picture was reviewed. The second number refers to the music chart for the picture. The number in parenthesis ( ) refers to the page whereon will be found the "Ready-Made Ad-Talk." Numbers preceded by an asterisk * refer to "Short Subjects in Review."

FEATURES

AMARILLY of Clothesline Alley (Lasky-Paramount), 5D, Mar. 11, 1762 (1732)
American Buds (Fox-Standard), 6C-D, Feb. 24 ....1765 (1733)
American Live Wire, An (Vitagraph), 5D, Mar. 18 .... (1887)
Ann's Finish (Mutual-American), 5D, Mar. 11 ....1923 (1887)
Another Foolish Virgin (Triangle), 5D, Mar. 31 .... ——
Answer, The (Triangle), 7D, Mar. 17 ....1924 (1886)

BEAUTY in Chains (Universal), 5D, Mar. 11 ....1767 (1733)
Beggar Women, The (Pathe), 5D, Mar. 17 ....1608 (1579)
Beloved Traitor, The (Goldwyn), 5D, Feb. 24 ....1763 1767 (1283)
Bluebird, The (Lasky-Artcraft), 5D, Mar. 31 .... ——
Blue Jeans (Metro-Special), 7D .... ——
Brace Up (Bluebird), 5D, Mar. 18 ....1764 ——
Brass Check, The (Metro), 5D, Mar. 11 .... (2054)
Breakers Ahead (Metro), 5D, Mar. 25 .... ——
By Right of Purchase (Select), 6D, Mar. — ....1923 ——

CAST-OFF, The (Foursquare-Ince), 7D .... (1437)
Claim, The (Metro), 5D, Mar. 18 .... (2054)
Curse of Iku, The (Essanay-Perfection), 7D 1926 (2055)

DADDY'S Girl (Pathe-Diando), 5D, Mar. 3 ....1316 (1437)
Daughter of France, A (Fox Special), 5D, Mar. 24 ....2094 (1886)
Daughter of the Gods, A (Fox-Standard), 5D, Mar. — ....1791 ——
Debt of Honor, The (Fox Special), 5D, Mar. 10 ....1763 (2055)
Desired Woman, The (Vitagraph), 5D, Mar. 11 .... ——
Devil's Wheel, The (Fox Special), 5D, Mar. 17 ....1766 (1887)
Draft 258 (Metro Special), 7D .... ——

EVE'S Daughter (Lasky-Paramount), C-D, Mar. 4 ....1611 (1579)

FAITH Endurin' (Triangle), 5D, Mar. 17 ....1922 (1887)
Family Skeleton, The (Lasky-Paramount), 5D, Mar. 11 ....1612 (1579)
Floor Below, The (Goldwyn), 6D, Mar. 10 ....1764 (1436)

GIRL and the Judge, The (Mutual-Frohman), 5D, Mar. 18 .... (1886)
Girl in the Dark, The (Bluebird), 5D, Mar. 4 ....1612 (1733)
Girl Who Wouldn't Quit (Universal), 5D, Mar. 25 ....2094 ——
Girl With the Champagne Eyes (Fox Special), 5D, Mar. 3 ....1468 (1282)
Great Adventure, The (Pathe), 5D, Mar. 10 ....1467 (1436)
Guilty Man, The (Paramount-Ince), Second Review, 5D, Jan. 28, 1766 (1146)
HARD-ROCK Breed, The (Triangle), 5D, Mar. 10 ....1611 (1732)
Headin' South (Artcraft), 5D, Feb. 25 ....1609 (1733)
Heiress for a Day (Triangle), 5C-D, Mar. 3 ....1466 1946 (1437)
Hillcrest Mystery, The (Pathe-Astra), 5D, Mar. 24 ....2092 (2055)
Home Trail, The (Vitagraph), 5D, Mar. 25 .... ——
House of Glass, The (Select), 5D, Mar. — 1608 1947 (1578)
Huck and Tom (Lasky-Paramount), 5C, Mar. 4 ....1613 (1732)
Humdrum Brown (Hodkinson-Paralta), 6D, Mar. 15 .... ——
Hungry Eyes (Bluebird), 5D, Mar. 11 ....1628 (1733)

INNOCENT'S Progress (Triangle), 5D, Mar. 24 ....2094 ——

KAISER, The (Renowned Pictures), 7 Hist. (S. R.) ....1767 ——
Kid is Clever, The (Fox Special), 5C-D, Mar. 31 .... (2054)
Knife, The (Select), 5D, Mar. — ....1631 ——

LA TOSCA (Lasky-Paramount), 5D, Mar. 25 ....2093 ——
Legion of Death, The (Metro Special), 7D .... ——
Little Red Decides (Triangle), 5D, Feb. 24 ....1318 1787 (1436)
Love Me (Lasky-Paramount), 5D, Mar. 18 ....1926 (1887)

MARRIAGE Bubble, The (Triangle), 3D, Mar. 31 ....1925 ——
Midnight Trail, The (Mutual-American), 5D, Mar. 11 ....1609 (1283)
Moral Law, The (Fox Special), 5D, Feb. 17 ....1922 ——
Moral Suicide (Graphic Film Corp.), 7D, S. R. 1922 (1887)
Mrs. Slacker (Pathe-Astra), 5D, Mar. 31 .... ——
My Four Years in Germany (My Four Years in Germany, Inc.), 10 Hist. (S. R.) ....1768 ——

NANCY Comes Home (Triangle), 5D, Mar. 24 ....2095 ——
Naughty, Naughty! (Lasky-Paramount), 5CD, Mar. 25 .... (2054
Nobody's Wife (Universal), 5D, Mar. 4 ....1609 (1579)

PAIR of Sixes, A (Essanay-Perfection), 5C-D, Mar. — 2092 (1732)
Powers That Prey (Mutual-American), 5D, Mar. 4 ....1765 (1436)
Prunella (Lasky-Paramount), 5D, Mar. 18 .... ——

ROUGH Lover, The (Bluebird), 5D, Feb. 25 ....1468 (1578)
Ruggles of Red Gap (Kleine-Essanay), 7D, Feb. 25 ....1608 (707)

SEA Panther, The (Triangle), 5D, Mar. 10 ....1926 (1886)
Shell Game, The (Metro), 5D, Mar. 4 .... (1732)
Shoes That Danced, The (Triangle), 5D, Mar. 3 ....1467 1946 (1437)
Shuttle, The (Select), 5D, Mar. — 1472 (1437)
Sign Invisible, The (First Nat. Exh.), 6D, Mar. — ....1614 ——
Six Shooter Andy (Fox Special), 5D, Feb. 24 ....1468 1947 (1436)
Slacker, The (Metro Special), 7D .... ——
Song of the Soul, The (Vitagraph), 5D, Mar. 4 ....1762 (1579)
Soul in Trust, A (Triangle), 7D, Feb. 24 ....1786 (1579)
Splendid Sinner, The (Goldwyn), 6D, Mar. 24 .... ——
Spurs of Sybil (World), 5D, Mar. 4 ....1469 (1578)
Sunshine Nan (Lasky-Paramount), 5D, Mar. 11 ....1763 (1732)

THIEVES' Gold (Universal), 5D, Mar. 18 ....1925 ——
Thing We Love, The (Lasky-Paramount), 5D, Feb. 18 .... (1578)
Triumph of Venus, The (Victory Film), 7D, Mar. — ....1610 ——

Wanted, A Mother (World), 5D, Mar. 18 ....1766 ——
Wasp, The (World), 5D, Mar. 11 ....1610 (1578)
Way Out, The (World), 5D, Mar. 25 ....1924 (1886)
Whispering Chorus, The (Lasky-DeMille), 5D, Mar. 25 ....2093 ——
Wild Youth (Paramount-Blackton), 5D, Mar. 18 ....1928 (1886)
Wine Girl, The (Bluebird), 5D, Mar. 25 ....1927 (2054)
Within the Cup (Hodkinson-Paralta), 7D, Mar. 1 .... ——
Woman and the Law, The (Fox-Standard), 7D, Mar. 17 ....1764 ——
Woman Eternal, The (Shubert-Hammerstein), 8D ....1610 ——

SHORT SUBJECTS

ACCUSING Toe, The (Judge-Brown-General), 2C-D .... ——
Adam and Some Eves (Paramount-Klever Komedy), Mar. — 1470 (1283)
Agricultural Opportunities in Western Canada (General-Essanay), 1Sc ——
All Stuck Up (General-Essanay), 1C .... ——
All Fur Her (Jester), 2C, Mar. — ....1923 ——
Artists' Model, The (Flagg-Kleine), 1C .... ——
At Sword's Point (Universal-Nestor), 1C, Mar. 4 .... ——

BACK to the Balkans (Fox-Mutt & Jeff), ½ Reel Cartoon, Mar. 31 .... ——
Beating Him to It (Jaxon-General), 1C .... ——
Before and After Taking (Metro-Drew), 1C, Mar. 4 .... ——
Bell Boy, The (Paramount-Arbuckle), 2C, Mar. 11 ....1926 ——
Best of a Bad Bargain, The (Sparkle-General), 1C .... ——
Black and White (Judge Brown-General), 2C-D .... ——
Black Sherlock Holmes, A (Ebony-General), 1C .... ——
Boy Built City, A (Judge Brown-General), 2C-D .... ——
Broncho Billy's Leap (Essanay-Kleine), 1C, Mar. 11 ....1614 ——
Bull's Eye, The (Universal Serial):
  The Swing of Death (Fifth Episode), 2D, Mar. 4 .... ——
  On the Brink (Sixth Episode), 2D, Mar. 11 .... ——
  Riding Wild (Seventh Episode), 2D, Mar. 18 .... ——
  The Flaming Crisis (Eighth Episode), 2D, Mar. 25 .... ——
Buxton (Derbyshire, Eng.), (Pathe), Split Reel Trav., Mar. 3 .... ——
By Injunction (O. Henry-General), 2D 1924 (1886)

CAUGHT with the Goods (Triangle), 1C, Mar. 17 .... ——
Cavern of Terror, The (Vitagraph), Episode of "Vengeance—and the Woman," 2D, Mar. 4 .... ——
Children's Dances (Pathe), Split Reel, Ed., Mar. 17 .... ——
Circumstantial Evidence (Christie Film Co.), 1C 1470

DEADLY Torpedo, The (Universal), Episode of "The Mystery Ship" Serial, 2D, Mar. 18 .... ——
Decoy, The (Fox-Mutt and Jeff), ½ Reel Cartoon, Mar. 24 .... ——
Desperate Chance, The (Vitagraph), Episode of "Vengeance—and the Woman," 2D, Mar. 11 .... ——
Detective, The (Sparkle-General), 1C .... ——
Did She Do Wrong? (Triangle-Keystone), 2C, Mar. 10 .... ——
Discord in a Flat, A (Triangle), 1C, Mar. 3 .... ——
Double Cross (Sparkle-General), 1C .... ——

FARE, Please (Pathe-Rolin), 2C, Mar. 17 1766
Fight in Mid-Air, The (Universal), Episode of "The Mystery Ship" Serial, 2D, Mar. 25 .... ——
Finishing Mary (Mutual-Strand), 1C, Mar. 12 1923
Flaming Crisis, The (Universal), Episode of "The Bull's Eye" Serial, 2D, Mar. 25 .... ——
Flowers of the Orient, The (Universal-Finley), Split Reel, Ed., Mar. 18 .... *1455
Flyer in Folly, A (Universal-L-Ko), 2C, Mar. 6 .... ——
Forced Into Matrimony (Jaxon-General), 1C .... ——
Forced Marriage, The (Universal), Episode of "The Mystery Ship" Serial, 2D, Mar. 11 .... ——
Fork Over (Triangle), 1C, Mar. 24 .... ——
From Here to Summerland (Educ. Film Corp.), 1 Ed., Mar. 15 1301

GASOLINE Wedding, A (Pathe-Rolin), 1C, Mar. 3 .... ——
Geysers of Yellowstone, The (Universal-Finley), Split Reel, Sc., Mar. 11 .... *1455
Girl of the Prophecy, The (Pathe), Episode of "The Hidden Hand" Serial, 2D, Mar. 3 1611
Good Elk, A (Triangle), 1C, Mar. 31 .... ——
Grandeur of Switzerland, The (Universal-Finley), Split Reel, Trav., Mar. 4 .... ——
Grand Canyon of Arizona and Canyon de Chelley (General-Essanay), 1 Sc. .... ——

HAND of Fae, The (Vitagraph), Episode of "Vengeance—and the Woman" Serial, 2D, Mar. 25 .... ——
Her Bohemian Party (Triangle), 1C, Mar. 31 .... ——
Here Come the Girls (Pathe-Rolin), 1C, Mar. 17 .... ——
Hidden Hand, The (Pathe Serial), The Girl of the Prophecy (Fifteenth Episode), 2D, Mar. 3 1611
His Hidden Shame (Triangle), 1C, Mar. 3 .... ——
His Quaker Girl (Mutual-Strand), 1C, Mar. 19 1925
His Strength of Mind (Metro-Drew), 1C, Mar. 11 .... ——

His Wife Knew About It (Drew), 1C, Mar. 25	——
Hooded Terror, The (Pathe), Episode of "The House of Hate" Serial, 2D, Mar. 10	——
House of Trickery, The (Universal), Episode of "The Mystery Ship" Serial, 2D, Mar. 4	——
House of Hate, The (Pathe-Astra Serial):
The Hooded Terror (First Episode), 2D, Mar. 10	1318
The Tiger's Eye (Second Episode), 2D, Mar. 17	1469
A Woman's Perfidy (Third Episode), 2D, Mar. 24	1764
The Man from Java (Fourth Episode), 2D, Mar. 31	1924
How Canada and the Farmer Co-operate in Grain Raising (General-Essanay), 1 Sc.	——
How Mr. Noodle Went to a Masque Ball (Universal-Finley), Split Reel, Mar. 25	——
Husband's Wife, A (Fox-Sunshine), 2C, Mar. 3	——
INDIAN Fisherman, The (Universal-Finley), Split Reel, Ed., Mar. 4	1301
In Poverty's Power (Pathe), Episode of "The Price of Folly" Serial, 2D, Feb. 24	1468
In the Dark (Christie Film Co.), 1C	1470
JACKIE'S Clothes (Pathe-International), Ed., Split Reel, Mar. 10	——
Janitor's Fall, A (Triangle), 1C, Mar. 24	——
Jazbo Sheriff, The (General-Essanay), 1C	——
Jumping Jacks and Jail Birds (Big V), 1C, Mar. 4	——
LADY Killer's Doom, A (Triangle-Keystone), 2C, Mar. 3	——
Let's Go! (Pathe-Rolin), 1C, Mar. 24	1766
Lie That Failed, The (General-Essanay), 1C	——
Look Pleasant, Please! (Pathe-Rolin), 1C, Mar. 10	——
MAN Eater, The (Flagg-Kleine), 2C	——
Man from Java, The (Pathe), Episode of "The House of Hate" Serial, 2D, Mar. 31	1924
Masked Riders, The (Universal), Episode of "The Mystery Ship" Serial, 2D, Mar. 2	——
Matinee Girl (Flagg-Essanay), 1C, Mar. 11	1614
Meddlers and Moonshiners (Big V), 1C, Mar. 11	——
Mountain Law (Blue Ridge-General), 2D	——
Mud (Triangle-Keystone), 2C, Mar. 17	——
Mosquito (Universal-Finley), Split Reel, Ed., Mar. 18	——
Mum's the Word (Christie Film Co.), 1C	1470
NIGHT of His Life, The (Christie Film Co.), 1C	1470
OFFICER and a Gentleman (Favorite Film), 2D, Mar. 4	——
On the Brink (Universal), Episode of "The Bull's Eye" Serial, 2D, Mar. 11	——
On the Jump (Pathe-Rolin), 1C, Mar. 31	1925
On the Love Line (Sparkle-General), 1C	——
One More American (Lasky-Paramount), 5D	1319 (1283)
Our National Parks (Pathe), Split Reel, Trav., Mar. 3	*1748
PESTS of Our Fruit Trees (Pathe), Ed. Split Reel, Mar. 24	*1748
Picturesque France—the Canteres (Pathe), Trav. Split Reel, Mar. 17	*1593
Picturesque France (Pathe), Trav. Split Reel, Mar. 24	*1748
Playwright's Wrong, A (Triangle-Keystone), 2C, Mar. 31	——
Porters, The (Ebony-General), 1C	——
Price of Folly, The (Pathe Serial):
The Rebound (Seventh Episode), 2D, Mar. 3	1612
Shifting Sands (Eigth Episode), 2D, Mar. 10	1765
RAIDERS of Sunset Gap, The (Blue Ridge-General), 2D	——
Rathskeller and the Rose, The (O. Henry-General), 2D	1924
Rebellion, The (Judge Brown-General), 2C-D	——
Rebound, The (Pathe), Episode of "The Price of Folly" Serial, 2D, Mar. 3	1612
Reckoning, The (Vitagraph), Episode of "Vengeance—and the Woman" Serial, 2D, Apr. 1	——
Return of O'Garry, The (Blue Ridge-General), 2D	——
Riding Wild (Universal), Episode of "The Bull's Eye" Serial, 2D, Mar. 18	——
Rip Roaring Rivals (Clover-General), 1C	——
Romance of Rails and Power, A (General-Essanay), 1Sc	——
SAFE Danger, A (Triangle-Keystone), 2C, Mar. 24	——
Sands of Doom (Vitagraph) Episode of "Vengeance—and the Woman" Serial, 2D, Mar. 18	——
Self-Made Woman, A (Fox Sunshine), 2C, Mar. 14	——
She Didn't Do It (Triangle), 1C, Mar. 10	——
Shifting Sands (Pathe), Episode of "The Price of Folly" Serial, 2D, Mar. 10	1765
Slippery Sam and the Green Eyed Monster (General-Snakeville), 1C	——
Slippery Slim and the Imposter (General-Snakeville), 1C	——
Slippery Slim's Dilemma (General-Snakeville), 1C	——
Slippery Slim and His Tombstone (General-Snakeville), 1C	——
Snakeville's New Waitress (General-Snakeville), 1C	——
Social Shock Absorber, A (Triangle), 1C, Mar. 17	——
Song and the Sergeant, The (O. Henry-General), 2D	1924
Special To-Day (Metro-Drew), 1C, Mar. 18	——
Spirits (Pathe), Katzenjammer Cartoon (Split Reel), Mar. 10	——
Spooks (Ebony-General), 1C	——
Spying the Spy (Ebony-General), 1C	——
Stripes and Stumbles (Big V), 1C, Mar. 25	——
Swing of Death, The (Universal), Episode of "The Bull's Eye" Serial, 2D, Mar. 4	——
TELEGRAPHIC Tangle, A (Drew), 1C, Mar. 18	——
Their First Quarrel (Drew), 1C, Mar. 11	——
Thief or Angel (Judge Brown-General), 2D	1925 (2054)
Those Athletic Girls (Paramount-Mack Sennett), 2C, Mar. —	1924
Through Canada from Coast to Coast (General-Essanay), 1 Sc	——
Thunderer of the Waters, The (Reiben Films Corp.), 1 Ed., Mar. 4	*1593
Tiger's Eye, The (Pathe), Episode of "The House of Hate" Serial, 2D, Mar. 17	——
Tramps and Traitors (Big V), 1C, Mar. 18	——
Trimmed Lamp, The (O. Henry-General), 2D	1612 (1578)
Turtles of All Lands (Educ. Film Corp.), 1 Ed., Mar. 11	*1455
UNBELIEVER, The (Edison Special), 7D	1320
Universal Screen Magazine, No. 60, Mar. 2, 1 Top	*1301
Universal Screen Magazine, No. 61, Mar. 9, 1 Top	*1455
Universal Screen Magazine, No. 62, Mar. 16, 1 Top	——
Universal Screen Magazine, No. 63, Mar. 23, 1 Top	*1748
Universal Screen Magazine, No. 64, Mar. 30, 1 Top	*1916
Unfaithful (Triangle), 2D, Mar. 31	1925 (2054)
Unlucky Louis (Favorite Film), 1C, Mar. 4	——
Up She Goes (Mutual-Strand), 1C, Mar. 26	——
VALLEY of the Dordagne, The (France), (Pathe), Trav., Split Reel, Mar. 31	*1916
WALTZING Around (Mutual-Strand), 1C, Mar. 5	——
Water Powers of Eastern Canada (General-Essanay), 1Sc	——
Water Powers of Western Canada (General-Essanay), 1Sc	——
When a Man's Married (Metro-Drew), 1C, Mar. 25	——
When Macbeth Came to Snakeville (General-Snakeville), 1C	——
When Slippery Slim Met the Champion (General-Snakeville), 1C	——
Where Rolls the Oregon (Universal-Finley), Split Reel, Trav., Mar. 18	*1593
Why, the Bolsheviki? (Export and Import), 5D	——
Wild Fowl Nurseries of Southern Oregon (Universal-Finley), Split Reel, Ed., Mar. 25	*2068
Wives and Worries (Triangle), 1C, Mar. 10	——
Woman's Perfidy, A (Pathe), Episode of "The House of Hate" Serial, 2D, Mar. 24	1764
Wooing of Coffee Cake Kate, The (Clover-General), 1C	——

(Continued from page 2426)

Triangle Distributing Corp.

TRIANGLE COMEDIES

Mar. 3. A Discord in A Flat..............1 C
Mar. 3. His Hidden Shame..............1 C
Mar. 10. Wives and Worries..............1 C
Mar. 10. She Didn't Do It..............1 C

KEYSTONE RELEASES

Mar. 17 Mud (Ray Griffith, Peggy Pearce, Max Asher, Henry Depp..............2 C
Mar. 24. A Safe Danger (Al Edmonds, Rae Godfrey, Sylvia Ashton, Chris Richards..............2 C
Mar. 31. A Playwright's Wrong (Wm Franey, Dora Rogers, Milt Sims, Maude Wayne)..............2 C
Apr. 7. First Aid (Maud Wayne)..........2 C
Apr. 14. Mr. Briggs Closes the House (Edward Brady)..............2 C
Apr. 21. Their Neighbor's Baby (Fritzie Ridgeway)..............2 C
Apr. 28. Mr. Miller's Economies (Edward Brady, Chas. Dorian)..............2 C

Universal Film Company

Monday, April 22, 1918
NESTOR—The Stolen Keyhole (Harry Mann)..............1 C
Wednesday April 24, 1918
L-KO—A Rural Riot (Hughie Mack, Dave Morris)..............2 C
Monday, April 29, 1918
NESTOR—It's a Cruel World (Gale Henry, Wm. Franey)..............1 C
Wednesday, May 1, 1918
L-KO—Father's Sons and Chorus Girls (Dave Morris, Frenchy Bianchi..........2 C

UNIVERSAL ANIMATED WEEKLY

Apr. 3. Number 18.
Apr. 10. Number 19.
Apr. 17. Number 20.
Apr. 24. Number 21.
May 1. Number 22.

UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE

Apr. 6. Issue Number 65.
Apr. 13. Issue Number 66.
Apr. 20. Issue Number 67.
Apr. 27. Issue Number 68.
May 3. Issue Number 69.

UNIVERSAL CURRENT EVENTS

Apr. 6. Issue Number 47.
Apr. 13. Issue Number 48.
Apr. 20. Issue Number 49.
Apr. 27. Isue Number 50.
May 3. Issue Number 51.

LYONS-MORAN STAR COMEDIES

Apr. 8. A Pigskin Hero..............1 reel
Apr. 15. The Tail of a Cat..............1 reel
Apr. 22. ....1 reel
Apr. 29. Mum's the Word..............1 reel

SERIALS

"THE BULL'S EYE

Two Reels Each
(Eddie Polo)

Apr. 1. Ninth Episode, Dynamite.
Apr. 8. Tenth Episode, Coyotes of the Desert.
Apr. 15. Eleventh Episode, Fired.
Apr. 22. Twelfth Episode, Burning Lands.
Apr. 29. Thirteenth Episode, Sold at Auction.

"THE LION'S CLAWS

Two Reels Each
(Marie Walcamp)

Apr. 1. First Episode, A Woman's Honor.
Apr. 8. Second Episode, Beasts of the Jungle.
Apr. 15. Third Episode, The Net of Terror.
Apr. 22. Fourth Episode, A Woman's Scream.
Apr. 29. Fifth Episode, The Secret Document.

BOY SCOUTS TO THE RESCUE

Universal Special

Apr. 15. Aides of a Nation, No. 1........2 reels
Apr. 22. On the Trail, No. 2..............2 reels
Apr. 29. The Great Mine Disaster, No. 3.2 reels

FINLEY NATURE STUDIES

Split Reel

Apr. 1. Number 12, "A Day at Yellowstone Park" and "Beautiful Devon—the Land of Romance, England."
Apr. 8. Number 13, "Sea Birds and Animals" and "The Land of Long Ago."
Apr. 15. Number 14, "Wild Animals at Yellowstone" and "Atop the Alps" (Scenic) Split reel.
Apr. 22. Number 15, Wild Bird Pets" and "In and Around Key West, Fla." (Scenic) Split reel.

Vitagraph

BIG V COMEDIES

Mar. 18. Tramps and Traitors.
Mar. 25. Stripes and Stumbles.
Apr. 1. Sleuths and Slackers.
Apr. 8. Rummies and Razors.
Apr. 15. Counts and No Counts.
Apr. 22. Whistles and Windows.
Apr. 29. Flirts and Fakirs.

VITAGRAPH COMEDIES

Feb. 4. Surprising Husband.
Feb. 11. Coals for the Fire.
Feb. 18. Sweets to the Sour.
Feb. 25. Their Godson.

VENGEANCE AND THE WOMAN (Serial)

Mar. 11. The Desperate Chance (Twelfth Episode).
Mar. 18. Sands of Doom (Thirteenth Episode).
Mar. 25. The Hand of Fate (Fourteenth Episode).
Apr. 1. The Reckoning (Fifteenth Episode).

THE WOMAN IN THE WEB (Serial)

(Hedda Nova, J. Frank Glendon)

Apr. 8. Caught in the Web (First Episode).
Apr. 15. The Open Switch (Second Episode).
Apr. 22. The Speeding Doom (Third Episode)
Apr. 29. The Clutch of Terror (Fourth Episode).

DREW COMEDIES

(Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew)

Mar. 11. Their First Quarrel.
Mar. 18. Telegraphic Tangle.
Mar. 25. His Wife Knew About It.
Apr. 1. Following the Scent.
Apr. 8. The Home Cure.
Apr. 15. The Deceivers.
Apr. 22. Beautiful Thoughts.
Apr. 29. All for the Love of a Girl.

FAVORITE FILM FEATURES

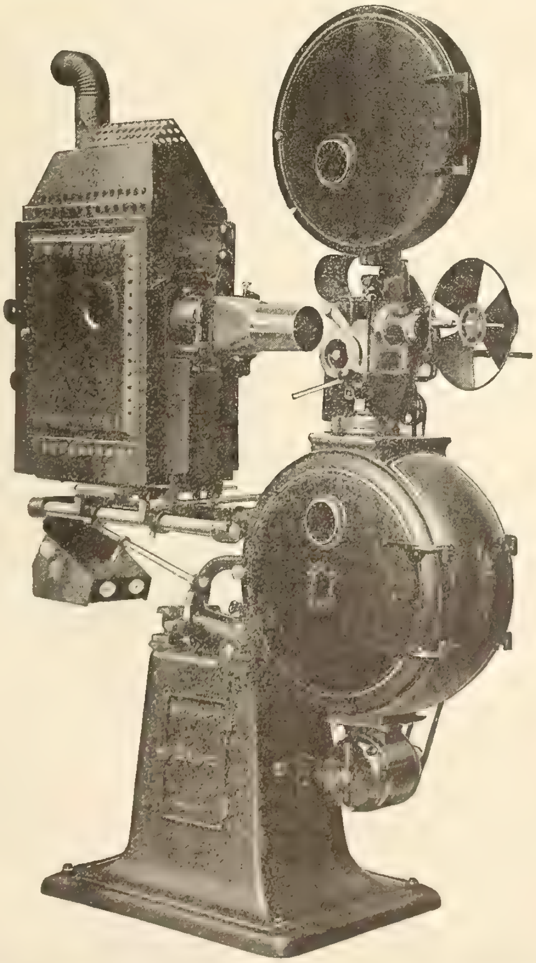
Mar. 4. An Officer and a Gentleman.......2 D
Mar. 4. Unlucky Louis..............1 C

DREW COMEDIES

Apr. 1. Following the Scent..............1 reel
Apr. 8. The Home Cure..............1 C
Apr. 15. The Deceivers.
Apr. 22. Beautiful Thoughts..............1 C
Apr. 29. All for the Love of a Girl..........1 C

Accessory News

— SECTION OF MOTION PICTURE NEWS —



You Need GOOD Projectors Now

More Than Ever Before

Never was a good Projector so essential in your showing of perfect pictures.

Never have you had such an opportunity to purchase a Projector which will give you uninterrupted service—utmost economy, with perfect projection, as in the Motiograph De Luxe.

Its very appearance shows its tremendous strength and unlimited capacity for work. These staying powers mean continuous service for its user. MOTIOGRAPH DE LUXE is the REAL Thrift Projector of the day.

You're assured of perfect projection, and will run longer at the least expense.

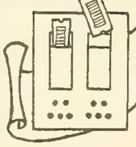
That's exactly the Service you ought to have in these War times—and that's exactly what you will get from the Motiograph De Luxe.

Write for literature

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co.

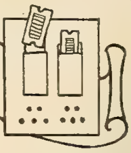
564-572 West Randolph Street
Chicago, Illinois

WESTERN OFFICE:
833 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.



"Automaticket" System

Used the World Over



FIRST AND FOREMOST

The AUTOMATICKET SYSTEM	is the acknowledged leader in the motion picture ticket field.
The AUTOMATICKET SYSTEM	the most modern electric machine for dispensing tickets on the market, is " FIRST " on merit and will always be " FOREMOST " in improvements.
The AUTOMATICKET SYSTEM	completely systematizes the box office end of the moving picture theatre. The equipment includes every modern ticket selling and change making accessory.
The AUTOMATICKET SYSTEM	reduces waiting line losses by dispensing tickets rapidly and precisely as called for.
The AUTOMATICKET SYSTEM	through its locked ticket chambers protects exhibitors against losses through carelessness or otherwise. It registers every ticket sold.
The AUTOMATICKET SYSTEM	is made up in from one to five units, dispensing 1—2—3—4 or 5 different priced and different colored tickets according to admission charged.
The AUTOMATICKET SYSTEM	is a time tested ticket selling system that has proved its worth to thousands of small and large exhibitors throughout the country, including the big circuits.
The AUTOMATICKET SYSTEM	will effect saving that will pay its cost in a short time and earn profits on its investment for a long time.
The AUTOMATICKET SYSTEM	is a registered name and all AUTOMATICKET equipment is stamped with the full name—" Automatic Ticket Selling and Cash Register Company." It is a performance pledge backed by ten years of successful operation.

Send for our pamphlet, " The Heart of Your Business." It gives some facts that have a vital bearing on your box office receipts. Send for it TODAY.

·Automatic TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTER Company·

Factory 235 west 55th St. ·Sales Offices·· 1733 BROADWAY··· NEW YORK CITY.

Accessory News

SECTION OF MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Devoted to the technical branches of the motion picture industry, containing records of the latest accomplishments in the mechanical and scientific field; projection helps, inventions and suggestions; camera devices analyzed and commented upon; musical cue sheets for important feature pictures; improvements and innovations in the building and furnishing field.

No charge is made in these departments for answering questions of any nature. Correspondence is invited.

E. Kendall Gillett..Editor

Alfred S. Cory..................................Technical Editor

Feature Music

WE have been endeavoring to impress upon the theatre managers and owners the importance of music—good music—high-class music—played on instruments which can produce this grade of musical entertainment, and from replies and questions which we have received our efforts do not seem to have been entirely in vain.

In addition to acknowledging the importance of the instrument, we must not underrate the musical library. This is one of the absolute essentials. It is all very nice to have a man at the instrument who can improvise, but if he depends entirely upon this or upon classical selections he is not going to make active inroads on those 5,000,000 additional patrons of which we spoke last week.

Popular music—present-day selections—up to the minute tunes, must be played in order to attract the younger element, who comprise so large a part of the potential five million. I went to a picture house the other night where as an opening number our national anthem was played. The audience arose and just as the chorus started a slide was thrown on the screen giving the words, and everyone sang. It was one of those impressive things which appeal and help bind the American people together, making them a unit. It has particular power in the picture house—the amusement center of every man, that place where all naturalized Americans from every corner of the globe gather and where, shoulder to shoulder with American-born, they sing of the land which claims them.

The same thing applies today to the new patriotic popular airs " Over the Top," " We Are Going Over," " Somewhere in France There Is a Lily," " America Makes the World Safe for Democracy," " I'm Going to Hang the Kaiser," " Knock the Hell Out of Heligoland," etc. These are all known to a greater or less extent to the audiences. They can, however, be played up and made a feature of the performance. Slides with the words of the chorus can be shown with the request that all the audience join in. This means that those tunes which are so familiar to our boys in khaki will also become familiar to those at home. All this helps bind us closer together to the end that we become a unified American nation. Try it.

In considering popular music, however, we must not think alone of war songs, for should they be overdone they would lose their power as an added picture house attraction. We must not forget or overlook the popular selections, waltzes, etc., which have a snap to them and which are remembered after the show, as, for example, " Nona," " Missouri Waltz," " Love Cannot Say Good-bye," " Are You From Heaven ? " " Blue Rose Waltz " and many others which can be used as curtain raisers or played when the show is over, saying nothing of being used in the cue sheet at the proper time to interpret the picture.

All these things are important—and any theatre man who thinks he can get along without proper music properly rendered, against increased competition, and make a success is either a gambler in the advanced stages of insanity or an optimist gone wrong. It can't be done—the proper musical equipment must be there and the proper music must be played.

It has often been said that the day of the slap-bang pianist who permits his or her mind to wander away while " playing the pictures " has gone. But it is not amiss to repeat here that the music nowadays must fit the picture as it unfolds upon the screen, and fit it like a glove. The progress of the motion picture has been so great that your pianist, organist or conductor can not lag behind with the excuse that any old tune will do for any scene. If you are not on the job, your competitor is, and the public is unusually alive to such things.

Exhibitors who have been neglecting the important music end of their theatre may at first declare that the expense of " being up to date " is too great for them. But with a closer look into the future there is not the least doubt this idea will be dispelled as quickly as it came. It has been proven over and over that the money expended on music and its proper presentation in motion picture theatres has been well spent, and that the exhibitors have been repaid many times over.

We will be only too glad at any time to help with either. We know the value of the instruments and we know the musical selections which are of greatest value, and beyond this we know and fully realize that exhibitors to get ahead must be on their toes musically. E. K. Gillett.

Society of Motion Picture Engineers

WHEN this issue of the News is off the press the spring meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers will be in full swing at Rochester. This meeting should be the most important and interesting in the history of the industry. The transactions of the meeting, which will be published in a short time, should be of inestimable value to the business. Those men who have made the trip to Rochester are doing it not for their own glory or for any reward they may get, but from the unselfish standpoint of helping our industry hasten along toward mechanical perfection.

Since the last meeting in New York the membership has grown and the right kind of men have been added, but we need more—we need more representatives from the film companies among others, for the more members we have from all branches the more quickly will the goal toward which the Society is striving be reached.

E. K. Gillett.

Equipment
Operating

Projection

Questions Answered

Chapters on Intermittent Movements—I

The Geneva-Stop, or Star-Wheel and Cam

(Continued from last week)

THE motion of the star-wheel and the intermittent-sprocket attached thereto, during the shift interval, or period of movement, is of considerable interest, as the manner in which the film is advanced by an intermittent movement has an important bearing upon the useful life of the film.

It is possible to ascertain the velocity with which the star-wheel (and intermitttent sprocket) are rotating at any given instant during the period of movement of a Geneva intermittent, and thus to determine the velocity with which the film is travelling across the aperture at any instant during the shift interval of the star-wheel.

Referring again to Fig. 2, and considering the motion of the star-wheel S during any shift interval, it will be apparent that the angular velocity of the star-wheel starts from zero, increases to a maximum as the cam-pin P crosses the line S. C. at the point P_2, and then decreases to zero again when the pin leaves the slot at P'.

When an expression is found which represents the angular velocity of the star-wheel at any instant during the shift interval, a curve may be drawn from the data thus obtained which will show graphically the character of the movement imparted to the film by any type of Geneva-stop intermittent.

Let p, Fig. 2, be any point in the travel of the cam-pin (P) when in the star slot corresponding to the radius S*p*.

Draw *p*M perpendicular to S C.

Let θ represent the angle p S C.

Let ϕ represent the angle p C S.

Let K represent the center distance between the star-wheel (S) and the cam (C).

(Note. K is a constant for any given movement.)

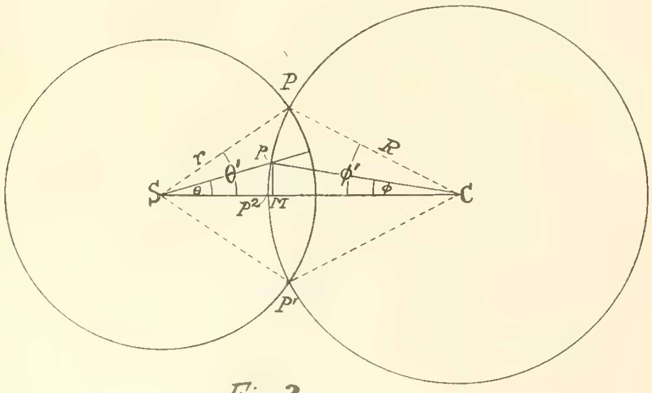

Fig.2.

Let A represent the angular velocity of the star-wheel (in terms of the angular velocity of the cam) at any instant during the shift.

Let a represent the angular velocity of the cam at any instant during the shift.

Then, by reasoning which need not be given in detail,

$$A = \frac{R \times (K \text{ cosine } \phi - R)}{C^2 + R^2 - 2RK \text{ cosine } \phi} \times a$$

This equation gives the angular velocity, A, of the star-wheel in terms of a, which latter is the known velocity of the cam, or pin-wheel, at any instant of the shift movement determined by the value of ϕ, and it is evident that by taking different values for ϕ the relative velocity of the star-wheel can be represented by curves such as are shown in Fig. 3. The curve A in Fig. 3 represents the angular velocity of a three-slot star at any instant during its shift interval, while curve B gives the same values for a four-slot star.

In Fig. 2, $\phi' = \text{P C S}$

and

$$\theta' = \text{P S C}$$

which represent the starting values of the angles ϕ and θ when the cam pin P is just commencing to enter the star-slot. Therefore, in the case of a three-slot star (where R equals $\sqrt{3} \times r$) and a four-slot star (where R equals r), the initial angular velocity of the star-wheel, A_1, is zero, since R equals K cosine ϕ'.

Coming next to the velocity of travel of the film during the shift interval, this is determined partly by the angular velocity of the star-wheel and partly by the radius of the intermittent sprocket, which latter is of course dependent upon the size and character of the star-wheel.

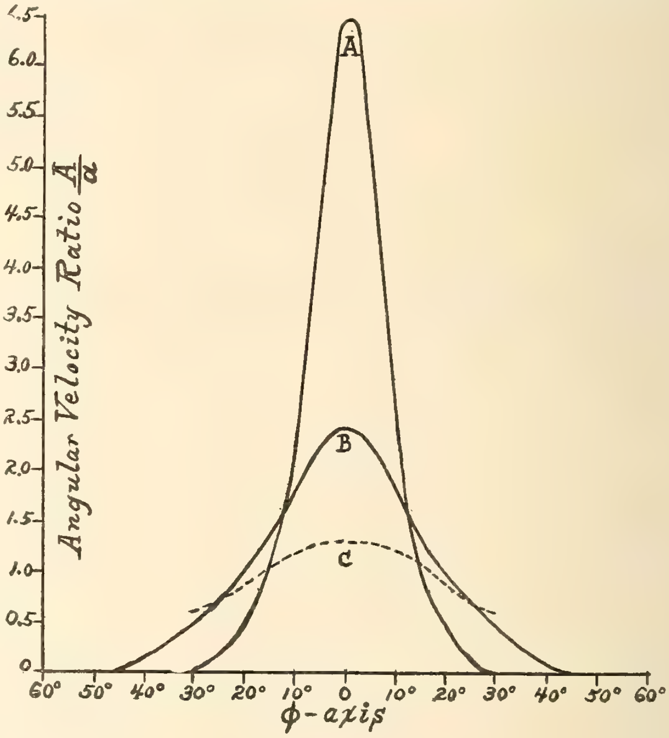

Fig.3.

Let 2*r'* represent the diameter of the intermittent sprocket, which is attached to the star-wheel and rotates about the same axis; then as the length of film moved across the aperture at each shift (regardless of the character of the movement) is known, we have

$r' \times 2\,\theta'$ = the length of film moved at each shift, which is known to be ¾ inch (the height of a film picture). Thus it is seen that $r' = \frac{3}{8\,\theta'}$ inches, and in the case of the usual four-slot star (90° shift interval)

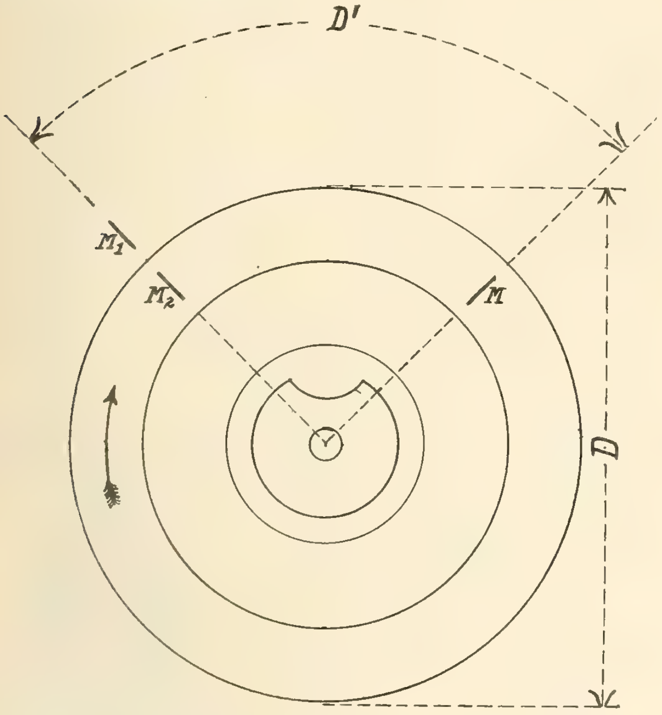
$$\theta' = \frac{180°}{4} = 45°$$

from whence

$r' = .477$ inch, approximately. As is apparent, the smaller the angle traversed by the star-wheel during one shift, the larger must the intermittent sprocket be. It also follows from the foregoing that the linear velocity of the film at any instant during the shift interval of the star-wheel may be plotted in the form of a curve where the abscissa represents the time consumed in shifting the film ¾ inch and the ordinate at any point represents the velocity of the film at the instant of the shift corresponding to the position of that point on the abscissa axis.

Such curves are found to be almost identical in form with the curves (Fig. 3) which represent the angular velocities of star-wheels at any instant during their period of movement.

It is interesting to study the curves which show the velocities of the various types of Geneva movements throughout the course of their shift interval, and also the corresponding curves which illustrate the velocity of travel of the film at any instant during its movement by the intermittent, for in this way an idea may be readily gained as to the amount of strain which is imposed upon the film by the various types of Geneva movements. Fig. 3 shows, for instance, that in the case of the three-slot star the shifting of the film starts slowly but attains a high rate of speed in the middle of the shift, slowing down again as the cam-pin leaves the slot of the star. The curve for the customary four-slot star shows that the characteristics of the movement are the same, i.e., the movement starts slowly, attains considerable velocity at the middle of the shift (when the cam-pin is at the bottom of the star-slot) and then slows gradually down again as the pin is leaving the slot of the star.



$$\text{Period of Movement} = D' \text{ or } \theta$$
$$\text{Ratio—Movement to Rest} = \frac{D \times 3.1416}{D'} \text{ or } \frac{2\pi}{\theta}$$

Fig. 4.

Another case of interest is when the cam-pin does not make a radial entry into the star-slot, and the character of the movement imparted to the star in such a case is shown by the (dotted) curve C, Fig. 3. Curve C represents the angular velocity of a six-slot star, where $R = r$, and where the cam-pin deviates considerably from a radial entrance into the star slot. As the curve shows, the impact of the cam-pin against the side of the star-slot results in a sudden, or abrupt, starting of the star-wheel, but the star does not attain such a high velocity at the middle of the shift as do the three-slot and the four-slot stars represented by the curves A and B.

Although the angular velocity of a star-wheel, or the linear velocity of the film, at any period during the shift interval can only be calculated by recourse to mathematics involving the constants of a given intermittent, the speed of a Geneva movement, or in other words, the ratio of its period of movement to its period of rest may be readily ascertained by any operator in the following manner, reference being had to Fig. 4.

In Fig. 4 the largest circle represents the flywheel of a projector mechanism. The circumference of the flywheel is first ascertained, by measuring the diameter, D, and multiplying this by 3.1416. An index mark M_1 is now made in any convenient place on the main frame of the mechanism, and the flywheel is next turned slowly until the position is reached at which the star-wheel (or intermittent sprocket) just barely commences its movement. Another mark M is now made near the rim of the flywheel in a position right in line with the mark M_1 on the mechanism frame, and the flywheel is then slowly turned until the star-wheel has made a complete revolution. When it is seen that the star-wheel has just stopped moving, another mark, M_2, is made near the rim of the flywheel at the position coinciding with the index mark, M_1, on the mechanism frame.

(Note. In the drawing, Fig. 4, the marks are shown in the positions which they occupy after the flywheel has been turned through the necessary angle to accomplish one complete shift of the star.)

The circumferential distance D′ (around the rim of the flywheel) between the marks M and M_2 is now measured with a flexible steel tape, a piece of paper, or other suitable means, and it is then apparent that the diameter of the flywheel (previously found) divided by the circumferential distance D′ between the marks M and M_2 will give the ratio of the period of movement of the intermittent to its period of rest.

(Note. The ratio of the Power movement may be also determined in this way.)

California Operators Invent Change-Over Signal Device

THROUGH the courtesy of R. S. Tice, late of Pacific Grove, Calif., but now of the U. S. Navy, we are enabled to present a description of still another signal device for use on motion picture projecting machines to indicate the approaching finish of a reel so that the second projector may be made ready for accomplishing a perfect change-over.

The new device, upon which a United States patent will be very shortly granted, is called the "Tyclar" Change-over Signal Device, and is the joint invention of Mr. Tice and C. B. Clark of the Iris theatre, Pacific Grove, Calif.

As Fig. 1 shows, the device is primarily intended for use in an operating-room equipped with two projecting machines, although it can also be used on a single machine as a signal to indicate the approaching end of the reel. The device is electrically operated from a battery, and the connections for a two-machine installation are shown by Fig. 1. In Fig. 1 the upper magazines of the two projectors are designated by the figures 1, the casings containing the terminals and contacts of the indicator, are designated by the figures 4, while the figures 2 represent the amount of film on the supply reels of the respective machines at the stage of operation when one reel is nearing its end.

Fig. 1.

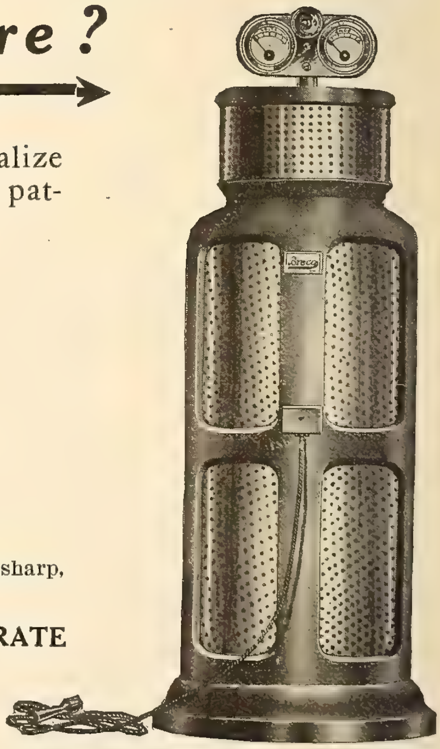
The mechanical idea embodied in the Tyclar indicator is similar to that employed in several other devices of like nature, and consists, as figures 2 and 3 show, of a roller 3 which rests on the surface of the film on the supply reel, this roller being mounted on the end of an arm which, in turn is hinged in a suitable manner.

The Tyclar indicator differs from others of apparently similar principle, however, in that the arm which carries the roller 3 is divided into two sections, each separately hinged, and is in reality two separate arms. The two arms are designated 18 and 21 respectively, in the figures.

A study of Figs. 2 and 3 will make it apparent that the function of the arms 18 and 21 is to close an electrical circuit at definite periods during the projection of a film, thus ringing a bell and supplying the desired change-over signal to the operator. The arms 18 and 21 are made of metal, and are connected to the battery circuit which operates the device in the manner shown by Figs. 1 and 2. When, therefore, the radius of the film reel has become sufficiently short, due to a portion of the film having passed through the projector, the roller 3 and its accompanying arms are lowered to such a position that the arm 21, and later the arm 18 come into contact with the screws 15 and 16 (Fig. 3). As will be inferred, the screws 15 and 16 are likewise connected into the battery circuit, and when the arms 21 and 18 come respectively into contact with the screws 15 and 16, the circuit is closed and the bell (designated by 7 in Fig. 1) is rung. Fig. 3 also shows that the contacts, or screws, 15 and 16, are adjustable as to height, so that the arms 18 and 21 may be made to operate the signal at any desired distance from the end of the reel. The only requirement which is essential to the satisfactory operation of the Tyclar indicator is that the hubs of the film reels used should be of practically the same diameter.

The manner in which the Tyclar indicator is to be manipulated by the projection machine operator is readily understood from



Can I Display a Better Picture ?

This is a question exhibitors are asking everywhere, for they realize it is the quality of picture displayed that holds their customers' patronage.

Why not give your patrons the best, keep them coming and do it at a big saving?

THE BRECO CONVERTER

THE MODERN METHOD OF
CHANGING A. C. TO D. C.

Was designed for your particular benefit. It enables the operator to display a clear, sharp, brilliant picture, free from eye strain or flicker.

HIGHLY EFFICIENT, ECONOMICAL, VERY EASY TO OPERATE

Will operate one or two arcs at a big saving in current. Very easy to install. Takes up little space and can be operated without special instructions.

LOW IN PRICE UPKEEP MINIMUM

Get particulars of this modern necessity

THE BRECO ELECTRIC CO. Sole Licensees 206 Huron St., Toledo, Ohio, U.S.A.

Write us today for descriptive literature

the drawings, but a few remarks concerning the use of the device may not be out of place on the present occasion.

In the circuit from which the device is operated is a switch (designated by 5 in Fig. 1) which controls the operation of both indicators. When the bell is first rung by the indicator on Number 1 machine, the operator is warned that the reel has only a few more minutes to run (the exact distance from the end of the reel being governed by the adjustment of screw 15, Fig. 3.) The operator then turns the switch, 5, one notch to the right, which makes the proper connection so that the bell will again ring when the second arm of the indicator on number 1 machine closes the circuit by coming into contact with screw 16, Fig. 3. The second ringing of the bell apprises the operator that the end of the reel is just about reached, whereupon he changes over to number 2 machine. By turning switch 5 another notch to the right the indicator on number 2 machine is put into proper circuit to operate the signal in due course, and the ringing of the bell by the respective indicators is accomplished by keeping the arms and screws of the devices in proper circuit by manipulation of the switch 5 after each signal is sounded. Switch 5 contains a number of sets of successive contacts which need not be described in detail here.

Mr. Tice advises us that three sets of the Tyclar indicators are in use in Pacific Grove, Calif., and vicinity, and he hopes to have a set in operation in the East at the earliest favorable opportunity. The indicators may be readily attached to the supply-magazines of all standard projectors, and this may be accomplished with very little trouble, as only two small bolts are required to hold the device in place. The Tyclar indicator will be further reported upon when we have seen the same in operation, and when the device is put upon the market, announcement to that effect will also be made through these columns.

The Surbrite Crystal Projection Screen

IN the fall of 1917 we were favored with a visit from T. W. Ridley of London and Middlesborough, England, who advised us at that time that a new projection surface called Crystal Surbrite, was being placed on the market, in England, by the British Patent Surbrite Company, Ltd., of London, with whom Mr. Ridley is connected.

For the past week Mr. Ridley has again been in New York on a business mission, and has succeeded in having a Surbrite screen installed in the projection rooms of Joseph Miles, 220 West Forty-second street, New York, where we were able to witness a demonstration of the new projection surface in company with Mr. Ridley.

An important feature of the Crystal Surbrite screen is that it can be supplied in any desired size as a single sheet with no seams. The basis of the Surbrite screen is linoleum, which forms a heavy and durable support for the Surbrite surface which is a metallic coating of silver color and rough matte finish.

A reel of film was projected for our inspection, first upon the Surbrite Screen, and then upon a popular American make of metallic surface or semi-reflecting screen.

The projection on the Surbrite screen was characterized by a fine plastic appearance of the screen-picture, and in addition the falling off in illumination from one side to the other of the projected picture, when viewed at an acute angle, was much less noticeable than in the case of the well-known screen with which the comparison was made.

In respect of its reflecting properties, or brilliancy, however, the Surbrite screen was far below the attainments of the other projection surface at the same amperage, and with respect to reflecting power the Surbrite is rather below the average American semi-reflecting screen for projection purposes. This is not necessarily a drawback, as with high amperage the projection on present day metallic screens is frequently so intense as to be glaring, and consequently fatiguing to the spectators' eyes.

Mr. Ridley advises us that the Crystal Surbrite screens are selling well in England, but that it has been difficult to continually keep pace with the demand on account of shortage of the materials required in manufacture. This circumstance has also operated to prevent the introduction of the Surbrite screen into the United States on an extensive scale, at the present time, but we are requested to state that there are a number of the Crystal Surbrite screens available in this country, and full information concerning the same, prices, etc., may be had upon application to H. A. Robinson & Company, 128 Water street, New York City.

The Essential Requirements
for Improved Projection
are
SPEER CARBONS

SPEER Alterno Combinations
for A.C. Work
and
SPEER Hold-Ark Combinations
for D.C. Work
Produce Incomparable Results

Write today for descriptive folders. Read the unbiased opinions of operators

Place an order now with your Supply House

"The Carbons with a Guarantee"

Manufactured by
SPEER CARBON COMPANY
ST. MARYS, PA.

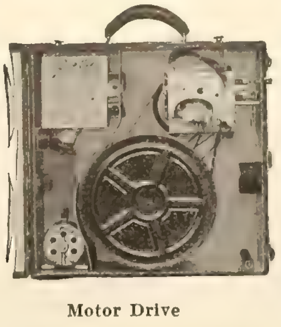
THE CARBON THAT CHANGES A. C. TO D. C.

Noiseless operation, pure white light and a steady burning, has made the new National White A. C. Special Moving Picture Carbon the leader in the field.

It is absolutely unnecessary for you to invest a single cent in extra equipment to obtain excellent, low cost projection on alternating current.

A TRIAL ORDER WILL CONVINCE YOU

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY
Largest Exclusive Dealers to the Moving Picture Trade
300-302 Mallers Building 5 South Wabash Avenue
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
Dealers in Motiograph, Standard and Simplex Moving Picture Machines, National Carbons, Minusa Screens and Everything for the Theatre
WE SELL ON THE INSTALLMENT PLAN



Small Town Exhibitors!

When your Electric Current Supply Fails—

Attach the De Vry to Storage Batteries, and your show goes on without delay.

Any size picture up to twelve feet; any throw up to seventy-five feet.

Used by Western Electric Company, General Electric Company, Westinghouse Elec. Mfg. Co., National Lamp Works.

Motor Drive
Size 17"x17"x7" over all.
Weighs but Twenty Pounds.
Takes Standard Size Reels and Film.

THE DE VRY CORPORATION, 117 North Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.

The Camera

The Preparation of Isocyanines

THE disappearance of German dyes from the American market, due to the long period of the present war, has been responsible for great activity in this country along the line of dyestuff manufacture, and it is gratifying to note that great strides have been made in the production of dyestuffs which were previously thought impossible of production in this country.

Insofar, however, as Isocyanine dyes, such as are used in the color-sensitizing of photographic plates and films are concerned, there does not seem to be any experimental or production work being carried out in this country, although Isocyanines of the most important class have been successfully produced in England for upwards of two years past, and the English color-sensitizing dyes are equal in every respect to the best that ever came out of Germany.

The reason why the Isocyanines have not come in for attention at the hands of the American chemists is probably to be found in the fact that these dyes are only required in infinitesimally small amounts compared with the dyes used in the textile and other industries, but it would doubtless prove gratifying to all devotees of orthochromatic and color photography to know that all chemicals and substances requisite to the manufacture of their photographic materials could be produced right at home, and it is in the hope of stimulating interest in the domestic production of Isocyanine color-sensitizers that we reprint the following notes concerning the preparation of these substances from the Color Trade Journal of September, 1917:

SYNTHETIC DYES IN PHOTOGRAPHY

"There are two dyestuffs, namely Pinacyanol and Orthochrome T, which are valuable for the color-sensitizing of photographic plates. These two dyes were formerly made in Germany, but their preparation has been studied by Harrison and Bottomley, and these chemists have renamed them Formo-cyanine and Tolucyanine respectively.

"For their synthetic preparation the following substances are required: Ethyl iodide, quinaldine, para-toluquinoline and para-toluquinaldine. Quinaldine is prepared by heating together aniline, nitrobenzol, and paraldehyde in the presence of concentrated hydrochloric acid. Toluquinaldine is made in an analogous manner, using para-toluidine and para-nitrotoluol in place of aniline and nitrobenzol. Toluquinoline is prepared by the general method of Schaup's synthesis, by heating together a mixture of para-toluidine, para-nitrotoluol, glycerine and sulphuric acid.

"The first stage in the preparation of the dyestuffs themselves consists in the condensation of the quinoline bases with equimolecular parts of ethyl iodide, and the resulting iodide compound is then converted into the respective dyestuffs as follows:

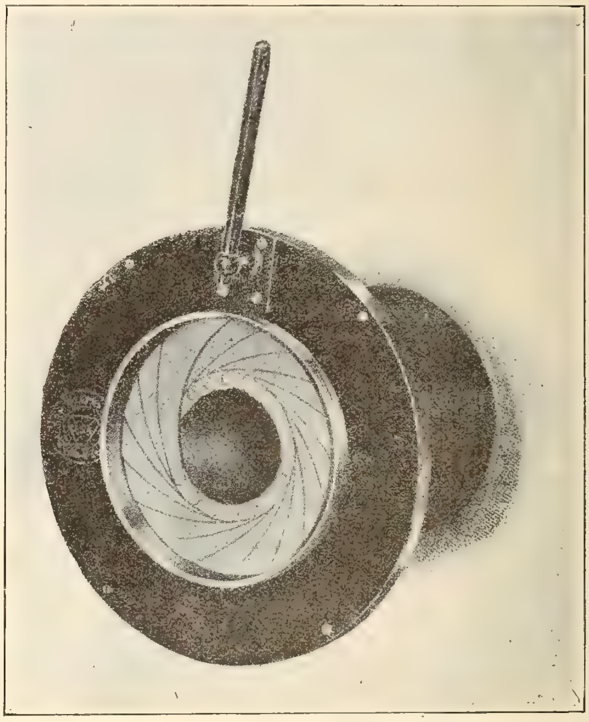
"For Formo-cyanine (Pinacyanol) 30 parts of the quinaldine ethyl iodide compound are dissolved in hot alcohol, mixed with 10 parts of formaldehyde (40 per cent) and 15 parts of caustic soda solution (16 per cent), and heated on the water bath for half an hour. After cooling the solution is diluted with 500 parts of water, whereupon the dyestuff separates out completely, and after drying is purified by recrystallization from hot wood alcohol. In place of the latter solvent pyridine may also be employed (see D. R. P. No. 172,118).

"For the preparation of Tolu-cyanine (Orthochrome T) use 30 grams of the para-toluquinaldine compound with ethyl iodide, dissolving in 800 c.c. of alcohol and mixing while hot with a solution of 6 grams of caustic potash in alcohol. The reaction takes place very quickly and is finished within a few minutes. The dyestuff is then precipitated by the addition of a 10 per cent solution of common salt, washed with water, dried and extracted with ether to remove any resinous bodies which are likely to be present. The dyestuff may also be precipitated with ether and purified by recrystallization from dilute alcohol (see D. R. P. No. 167,159)."

Bausch and Lomb Introduce Vignetter for Cinematography

ABOUT two years ago we were advised by the Bausch & Lomb Optical Company, of Rochester, N. Y., that they intended to bring out an Iris Dissolver, or so-called Round Vignetter, for use on motion picture cameras. The device did not appear upon the market at that time, however, because the energies of the Bausch & Lomb concern have been largely concentrated on work of national importance during the last two years, and will doubtless continue so for the duration of the war.

As the Vignetter has, however, been perfected in the meantime, a few were made up by the Bausch & Lomb Company, and the accompanying cut gives an idea of the appearance of the new device.



Bausch & Lomb Vignetter

The Vignetter, as it is termed by the makers, is of the usual iris diaphragm type, and has a handle which throws from side to side, whereby the opening may be varied from 2¾ inches in diameter down to completely closed. The small opening which always remains in the center of a closed iris is covered at the proper instant by an extra wing, which works in unison with the leaves of the diaphragm.

The Vignetter is threaded on both sides so that the handle may be located either at the back or the front of the device, according to the preference of the user. The makers advise us that inasmuch as they are not prepared to undertake the fitting of these Vignetters to the various types of cameras, they are supplied with the threaded parts, or collars, as mentioned, so that they may be attached to the camera in any manner which suits the convenience of the purchaser.

We would especially draw the attention of all readers to the fact that the Bausch & Lomb Vignetter is described at this time entirely as an item of news, and we wish to emphasize the fact that the Bausch & Lomb Optical Company are not prepared to supply the Vignetters at the present time. Therefore, if any reader who, as Professor De Morgan said, peruses three lines of a book and thinks he knows the entire contents, after a hasty examination of the present article is prompted to write the Bausch & Lomb Company, let him refrain from doing so, for insofar as the Vignetter is concerned they are at present unable to make a single delivery.

Operator Constructs His Own Cine Camera

A. L. Stone, Jr., of San Mateo, Cal., a member of the National Anti-Misframe League, sends the following description of a motion picture camera which he has constructed from an Edison projector mechanism, and encloses a short section of negative made with the camera. Mr. Stone says:

"I am writing to tell you how I made a camera, using an old Edison exhibition model head which I bought for a few dollars. A Powers 5 head will answer the same purpose. The main feature about this camera is that I used a 3½ in. equivalent focus projection lens. Although I was the only one that thought it would work, it worked, and worked far above my expectations. I built the box or camera 16 in. high and 8 in. wide, which is the height and width of an Edison head, and then I made it 12 in. long, which will give ample room for the magazines. Of course you must cut off the flicker shutter.

"The left side should be hinged so you can get at the magazines. I built the magazines 4 in. square, although they can be built bigger. The magazines must be built light-proof, and it is a good idea to line them with black cloth. The hole where the film leaves the magazines should have a flap made of cloth that runs on the film so no light can enter the magazine. The iron arm that holds the lower magazine should be cut off just before it leaves the head and the tension spring and pulley put on the lower magazine inside the camera. If you want you can put a hole in the back of the camera between the magazines and opposite the aperture, so you can see to focus the pictures when the camera is all closed up, but of course, the hole would have to be covered up when the camera is in operation.

"By just opening the door of the camera and looking at the film in the aperture you can almost get as good results in the focusing. The only drawback to this camera is the weight and bulkiness. I am enclosing one picture that I took with it but it is a little fogged. Notice that I had it focussed for the trees in the background instead of the actor, but I will know better next time. A 2-inch E. F. lens would be better than a 3½ E. F. lens."

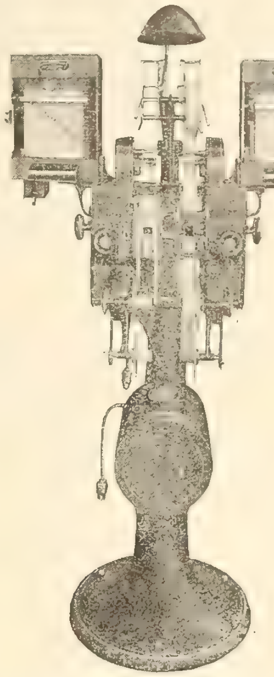
Comment: The great number of moderate priced cine cameras now on the market has tended to reduce the experiments of operators in constructing their own cameras for motion photography, but it is always interesting to hear of an operator, or experimenter, who has built his own camera, because it is no easy matter to design and construct a motion picture camera which will operate successfully, and most successful home-made cine cameras which we have seen bore evidence of marked mechanical ingenuity on the part of their constructors. Doubtless this is true in the present instance, for Mr. Stone's letter gives one the impression that he is an enthusiast on the subject, but we cannot comment upon Mr. Stone's mechanical efforts in the absence of photos showing his camera mechanism. He is, however, invited to send in some views of his camera for further mention in the Camera Department.

We have seen Mr. Stone's proposition to use a projector lens as camera objective put into practice on previous occasions, and the photographic results are, as he remarks, surprisingly good. If, however, the correspondent aims to take motion pictures which are comparable to good professional work, it will be necessary for him to secure an anastigmatic objective (preferably of two-inch E. F.) of the type regularly sold for cinematographic work. The first cost of such an objective will be compensated for by the fact that the objective can be used on any other camera which the owner may acquire.

As the question is quite often asked as to whether a projection objective is suitable for cinematography, it may be well to draw attention here to the shortcomings of the customary projection lens as regards its use in photography. In the first place, the achromatism of the average projection objective is not such as is best for photography, which matter was gone into in detail in the Camera Department a year or so ago. In most instances, therefore, the visual focus and the photographic (or actinic) focus do not coincide, and the film image focussed in the usual way will not appear of utmost sharpness in the developed films unless a correction in the focal distance has been made prior to taking the picture. This correction is a very slight amount, and rather difficult to administer without a micrometer focussing mount.

It might be thought that this chromatic error, being of such a

For Quality and Service—



The Duplex Automatic Step Printer

Used by all of the foremost laboratories

Duplex Machine Company, Inc.

316-318 SEVENTY-FIFTH ST. BROOKLYN, N. Y.

Mark This Well X

The trials and care of the producing period need not be carried into the DEVELOPMENT and PRINTING stage.

Our reputation and responsibility justify you in entrusting this work to us. The results of our efforts will satisfy the most critical. Prompt service is combined with quality work.

EVANS FILM MFG. CO.

416-24 West 216th Street. New York City

Telephone St. Nicholas 3443

FOR SALE

Moye & Bastie's Motion Picture Cameras with Goerz Celor and Zeiss Tessar lenses, tripods, etc.

8 x 10 Plate Cameras with R. R. lenses and tripods

KALEM COMPANY

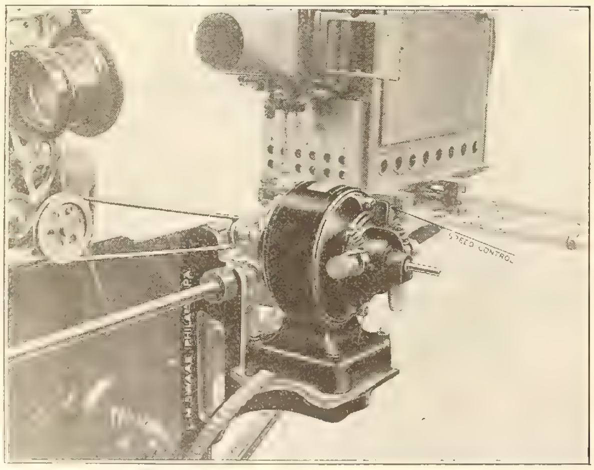
235 West 23rd Street New York

Silver bullion of a quality equal to that used by the United States Mint goes into the manufacture of

EASTMAN FILM

It may be properly inferred that the demands are rigidly exacting.

EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.



SWAAB'S MOTOR DRIVE EQUIPMENT
FOR POWER No. 6A, COMPLETE
110 or 220 volts, A. C. or D. C. $30.00, Net
Positively no discount to anyone.
The most simple, compact, cheap and efficient speed control on the market.
Information supplied to EXHIBITORS and OPERATORS immediately on application.
Write To-day
LEWIS M. SWAAB, 1327 Vine St., Philadelphia
SIMPLEX Distributors

small order, would not appreciably influence the photographic results, but its effect is to rob the images of the real crisp definition which is the ideal of every photographer (excepting, of course, the fuzzytypers, whose true status has not yet been defined).

Another awkward feature of the projection lens when used as a camera objective, is the absence of a suitably located adjustable diaphragm (or iris) wherewith to regulate the intensity of the transmitted light. A projection objective at full aperture would deliver an overwhelming flood of light to the highly sensitive cine film, and it is therefore a primary requisite that the aperture, or intensity, of the objective be under control, when it is used for the purpose of photography.

Neither the front nor the rear of a compound objective is a suitable place for a diaphragm, and it is a troublesome proposition to have to remove the components of an objective every time the size of stop requires to be changed, as is necessary if the diaphragms are inserted between the components. An iris diaphragm from a small photographic objective may be sometimes inserted to good advantage, but this requires the barrel of the projection lens to be cut in two, and the diaphragm soldered between the halves. Even with such an arrangement, the means for manipulating the diaphragm generally interfere with the focussing device, so it appears to be most advantageous to use the sort of objective that is specifically intended for cinematography.

It would be interesting to learn how Mr. Stone has surmounted some of these difficulties, not mentioned in his letter, and he is invited to amplify his description in another communication, which would doubtless be of interest to Camera Department readers.

Society of Motion Picture Engineers Issues Transactions of October Meeting

THE printed transactions of the last meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, held at the Hotel Astor, New York City, on October 8-9, 1917, have just been issued; the latest booklet being number five in the series, which, together, contain all of the technical papers read at the various meetings of the Engnneers from the founding of the Society in 1916.

Included in the present issue (No. 5) of the Transactions are the president's address to the New York meeting; the standards adopted at that meeting, and also the most recent additions to the Society's lexicon of motion picture nomenclature. The standards adopted at the October meeting were detailed in the NEWS in our report of that meeting, and the new nomenclature will also be found incorporated into the Society's separate publication on Standards, which appeared in December, so it only remains to make mention of the technical papers which appear in the most recent issue of the Transactions.

Will C. Smith has contributed a set of very instructive diagrams showing the extent to which a projected picture is distorted at various inclinations of the axis of projection to the surface of the screen, and some explanatory remarks by Mr. Smith are entitled "Offset Projection."

The president, C. Francis Jenkins, contributes an article on "The Motion Picture Booth," which contains his startling recommendation that the walls of the operating-room should be made of glass, so that the audience can "keep tabs" on the operator.

Of particular interest is the report of the Committee on Electrical Devices, prepared by Messrs. Wible, Kunzmann, Campe, Mayer, Moulton and Burrows. The work of these gentlemen deserves the highest commendation, and their report, which covers rectifiers and motor-generator equipment can be read with profit by all theatre owners and projection men.

The Mazda lamp as a feasible projection illuminant is treated from various angles in an article by A. R. Dennington entitled, "The Projection of Motion Pictures by Means of Incandescent Lamps," and some further remarks concerning the advantages of such lamps are embodied in the concluding article, "Light Intensities for Motion Picture Projection," by Messrs. J. T. Caldwell and R. P. Burrows, which has already been reprinted in the Projection Department of the NEWS through the courtesy of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

Copies of number five of the Engineers' Transactions may be secured for 25 cents each by applying direct to the Society, 712 Eleventh street, Washington, D. C., and we are advised that a limited number of copies of all previous issues of the Society's Transactions are still available.

Music and the Picture

Review of Latest Compositions

1—"Somebody's Done Me Wrong," by Skidmore. A typical and characteristic coon song. (J. W. Stern, 102 W. 38th St., New York City.)

2—"Valse Parfume," by Romberg. A melodious waltz by the composer of the famous "Auf Wiedersehen" and "Blue Paradise" music. (J. W. Stern, 102 W. 38th St., New York.)

3—"My Paradise Waltz," by J. S. Zemecnick. A tuneful waltz movement. (Published by Sam Fox, Cleveland, Ohio.)

4—"My Belgian Rose Waltz," by Benoit and Garton. A waltz of exceptional beauty, most appropriate for society dramas. (Leo Feist Edition.)

5—T. B. Harms, 62 West 45th St., have just issued the following extracts from the following famous musical comedies:

1—From "Toot Toot":
  "The Last Long Mile," one-step.
  Medley fox-trot, "Let's Go," etc.
  "If There Is Anything You Want," etc.
  Medley one-step, "Wake Up Dancing" and "If."
2—From "Oh Lady, Lady":
  Selection (concert size).
  Fox-trot, "When Ships Come Home" and "You Found Me."
  One-step, "Before I Met You."
  "Not Yet" (Hotel Ed.).
  "When the Ships Come Home" (Hotel Ed.).
  "You Found Me and I Found You" (Hotel Ed.).
3—From "Flo Flo":
  Selection (concert size).
  "There's One Little Girl" (Hotel Ed.).
  "I Don't Know What You Can See in Me" (Hotel Ed.).
  "Good-Bye, Happy Days," waltz.
4—From "Her Regiment":
  Selection (Harmonium, 25c).
  "American Serenade" (can be used concert or fox-trot).
  "Some Day," waltz song (Hotel Ed.).
  "Twixt Love and Duty" (Hotel Ed.).
5—From "Leave It to Jane":
  Selection (concert size).
  "Siren's Song" (Hotel Ed.).
  "Leave It to Jane" (Hotel Ed.).
  "Crickets Are Calling" (Hotel Ed.).
  "Just You Watch My Step," one-step.
  Medley fox-trot (contains three titles).
  "There It Is Again," medley waltz.

6—"Song of Songs," by Moya. The most celebrated theme intermezzo published and an indispensable number for the motion picture musician. (Chappell edition.)

7—Chappell & Co., 41 East 34th St., New York, announce that the following hits from "Jack O'Lantern" are now ready for sale:

  "A Sweetheart of My Own."
  "Wait Till the Cows Come Home."
  "Along Came Another Little Girl."
  "Jack o' Lantern" (Candyland), one-step.
  "Come and Have a Swing With Me."

8—"When the Flowers Bloom on No Man's Land," by Archie Gottler. The supreme hit in war songs. Archie Gottler's wonderful idea which has taken the country by storm. A song with a melody you can't forget. (Kalmar, Puck & Abrahams edition.)

9—"Carry Me Back to Old Virginny Waltz." This grand old melody has been offered as a song. Its great success had led the publishers to also publish it as a waltz. (Oliver Ditson edition.)

10—"Among the Roses," reverie, by M. L. Lake. A composition destined to become a nation's favorite. A melody which will thrill, inspire and charm even the coldest audience. (Carl Fischer edition.)

Music Publishers and the War

War is nothing new to popular publishers, for they have been at war with some one ever since the popular music game became an established industry, and when no outsider would fight with them they usually started a war among themselves. Even the under valued song writer isn't the most peaceful soul on earth. Did you ever see one coming out of a publisher's office on royalty day looking as if he wished to make peace with all the world? With the song writer, life is a continuous war, a fight to get ideas, one to land his stuff, and another to see that his stuff gets proper exploitation; to say nothing about royalties.

In spite of all this, publishers and song writers have been indirectly informed that the government does not care to see any peace songs, which is about the same as telling Irishmen that there should be nothing but home rule in Ireland. Song writers blame the Kaiser for many of their troubles, and if they can help put him out of commission by writing war songs they won't have to be coaxed to do it. And if the performers and musicians will take to the war songs as they should no one will have any cause to complain about song writers not doing their bit.

There are plenty of good ideas in the air for excellent war songs; and just now some of the keen minds among the fraternity appear to be hitting the right track. "Liberty Bell, It's Time to Ring Again," and "Like Washington Crossed the Delaware Pershing will Cross the Rhine" are showing the way. The big events and the critical moments that occurred during the past wars of this country should furnish fine material for patriotic hits. And the man who can dig them out and phrase the ideas in an attractive manner will get some of the golden harvest, be he a seasoned writer or an unknown scribbler in a tank town. An historical cycle of war songs appears to be coming, and there are any number of subjects that possess all the essentials of a successful song. The lives and careers of Washington, Grant, Lincoln, Sheridan, as well as the big battles of all our past wars, are replete with good ideas, the kind, if properly handled, will find a welcome with our fighters and the public.

The present war has made the public and our officials realize that popular sheet music and publishers are of some value after all, that they have a hold on the public's heart and are willing to exercise that hold for the benefit of all mankind. Ever since the war began several publishers have kept salaried men out helping the government by recruiting, entertaining the soldiers and sailors, and now by drawing crowds to help sell Liberty Bonds and War Stamps. Only the other day one publisher had two men selling war stamps at the Flatiron Building, and the boys worked as if their very lives depended upon their success. And don't forget that the government knows all about this work and just what firms are going out of their way to do their bit. Down at Washington every one may be busy looking after troops and enemy activities, but they find time to keep an eye on their friends. Do you happen to be one?

E. M. Wickes.

Picture Patrons Appreciate Good Music

MINNEAPOLIS theatredom seems to be in the habit of consistently combining art and business. The motto seems to be to "Get the artist with business sense into business." We offer an illustration. Julius K. Johnson, manager of the New Garrick theatre in the Flour City. Mr. Johnson is the New Garrick organist.

For three years while Lowell V. Calvert was manager at the New Garrick, Julius Johnson sat at the organ and touched the keys to the tunes of the circus calliope and Victor Herbert, and Wilhelm Telm, and the Second Hungarian. People came to the New Garrick because of its music.. They came week after week with faithful consistency—to hear the New Garrick music. When all the bills of the theatre screens were generally conceded poor for any certain week, people shrugged their shoulders and said, "Well, let's go to the New Garrick then, we'll hear the music even if the picture isn't extra!" So consistently they came. They still come.

When Lowell Calvert was called to the colors, Messrs. Finkelstein and Ruben decided on Mr. Johnson for manager. So Mr. Johnson became manager. And he now "orges" as well as manages.

Before coming to the New Garrick, Minneapolis, Mr. Johnson was organist at the Strand theatre, New York City, when "Roxy" Rothapfel had the house. "Roxy" had been manager of the Lyric theatre in Minneapolis before coming to New York; Johnson was his organist at the Lyric, and Johnson went along to the Strand, New York.

Once upon a time Mr. Johnson was a church organist; and he now blandly admits that the church elders prophesied eternal perdition for him when he left them to enter the theatre game.

"THE INNOCENT'S PROGRESS"

(Triangle Production)

Theme: "Last Spring" (Dramatic) by Grieg

1—"Whims Allegretto," by Schumann (4 minutes and 50 seconds), until—T: "Bubbles and Dreams."

2—Continue to action (1 minute and 15 seconds), until—T: "The Life she meets."

3—Theme (2 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "Tessa's bright eyes."

4—Continue to action (2 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "In the days that follow."

5—"Sieste" (Characteristic Lente), by Laurens (11 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "At length comes a night, etc."

6—"Pathetic Andante," by Paul Vely (1 minute and 40 seconds), until—T: "Buffeting the storm, etc."
Note—Watch for Railroad effects.

7—"Characteristic Tremolo," by Lovenberg (1 minute and 35 seconds), until—T: "I came to see you."

8—Storm Furioso to action (1 minute), until—S: Interior of restaurant.

9—Theme (2 minutes and 15 seconds), until—T: "In the fraternity club."

10—"Sweet Jasmine" (Melodious Allegretto), by Bendix (1 minute and 55 seconds), until—T: "The age old menace."

11—Storm Furioso to action (1 minute and 15 seconds), until—T: "Masters, Valet to two generations."

12—"Dramatic Narrative," by P. Perment (3 minutes), until—T: "The storm increases."

13—Continue to action (1 minute and 20 seconds), until T: "The most prominent actor in N. Y."

14—Theme (4 minutes and 45 seconds), until—T: "The storm brings another visitor."

15—"Dramatic Tension," by Sol. P. Levy (3 minutes and 45 seconds), until—T: "Larned's tense suppression."
Note—Open with ff Tympany Rolls.

16—"Tragic Theme," by Paul Vely (3 minutes and 50 seconds), until—T: "I thought it was the end."

17—"Sorrow Theme," by Ed. Roberts (5 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "Ready to start West."

18—"Pastel Menuet" (3/4 Allegro Giocoso), by Paradis (3 minutes and 50 seconds), until—T: "While in a sun baked land."

19—Theme (2 minutes and 40 seconds), until—T: "At the fountain of experience."

20—"Elegy" (Dramatic Melody), by Massanet (2 minutes and 30 seconds), until—T: "At length Madeline writes, etc."

21—Piano Solo improvise to action (20 seconds), until—S: Tessa leaves piano.

22—"Dramatic Andante," by E. Ascher (2 minutes and 35 seconds), until—T: "Alone and never so lonely."

23—"Lamento" (Dramatic Pathetic), by Gabriel Marie (1 minute and 25 seconds), until—T: "The eternal feminine."

24—Theme (6 minutes), until * * * * * END.

"THE SUBMARINE EYE"

Selected and Compiled by M. Winkler

Love Theme: "A Deep Sea Romance" (Andante Mod.) by M. L. Lake

Undersea Theme: "Fourteen Fathoms Deep" (A Deep Sea Mysterioso) by M. L. Lake

Theme, for the Prologue: "Dramatic Tension" by Sol. P. Levy

1—"Characteristic" (6/4 Andante), by Ziegler (32 bars), until—Opening.

2—"After Sunset" (Dramatic Moderato), by Pryor (16 bars), until—T: "Denise de Fontenelle."

3—Theme for the Prologue (24 bars), until—S: Man writing on book.

4—"Melody of Peace" (Sacred Andante), by Martin (20 bars), until—S: In graveyard.

5—Theme for the Prologue (32 bars), until—M: Man writing on book.

6—"Nocturno in F" (3/4 Andante), by Krzyanowski) (94 bars), until—S: Interior of club rooms.

7—Theme for the Prologue (20 bars), until—S: (Second time)) Man writing on book.

8—"Wild Rosebud" (Moderato), by Tobani (32 bars), until—S: Fade in on ship.

9—Short Agitato (16 bars), until—S: Interior ship's cabin.

10—Theme for the Prologue (16 bars), until—S: Man writing on book.

11—"By the River" (Romance) (12/8 Animato), by Morse (32 bars), until—S: Island—both being pulled on beach.

12—Slow Cello Movement (12 bars), until—T: "When night came."

13—Theme for the Prologue (40 bars), until S: Close up of book.

14—"Sweet Jasmine" (Melodious Allegretto), by Bendix (160 bars), until—T: "But all this was long ago."

15—"Ala Ballerina" (Valse Lente), by Bendix (64 bars), until—T: "Dorothy Morgan had always."

16—"Allegro Tremolo" (12 bars), until—S: Speeding launch.

17—Love Theme, by Abbott Lee (24 bars), until—T: "The inner knowledge."

18—"Illusion," Intermezzo (Mod.), by Bustanoby (120 bars), until—T: "The Morgan Green House."

19—"Yester Love" (Intermezzo Andantino), by Borch (64 bars), until—S: Miss Hartley arrives in auto.

20—"To Spring" (6/4 Allegro), by Grieg (48 bars), until—T: "Thirty years ago."

21—"Storm Furioso" (80 bars), until—T: "We could not open it."

22—"Melody," by Friml (106 bars), until—S: Fade in to hall room.

23—"Melodious Valse Lente" (96 bars), until—S: In garden.

24—Undersea Theme (42 bars), until—T: "As a Mother cares."

25—"Dramatic Narrative" (4/4 Andante), by P. Pement (40 bars), until—T: "Confident of success."

26—Undersea Theme (18 bars), until—S: Fish under dock.

27—Continue pp (8 bars), until—T: "The unpretentious manner."

28—"Evening Breeze" (2/4 Allegretto Idyl), by Langey (144 bars), until T: "It had been a wonderful, etc."

29—Undersea Theme (24 bars), until—T: "Too deep, Missy, call Buller."

30—"Berceuse" (Moderato), by Karganoff (32 bars), until—T: "The Treasure Island."

31—Undersea Theme (144 bars), until—T: "Fourteen Fathoms Deep."

32—"Dramatic Recitative," by Sol. P. Levy (112 bars), until—T: "Deep Sea Divers are not, etc."

33—"Pearl Fisher." (Selection), by Bizet (34 bars of first movement "Allegro non Troppo"), until—(104 bars of second movement "Andante non Troppo"), until—T: "Sharks!"

34—Undersea Theme (128 bars), until—S: Barnett on ladder.

35—Tragic Theme (Andante Molto) (96 bars), until—S: Barnett taking things out of safe.

36—Dramatic Tension No. 9, by Andino (32 bars), until—T: "Your Governor was right."

37—Love Theme (48 bars), until—S: Ship bell.

38—"Cavatine" (3/4 Dramatic), by Bohm (16 bars), until—S: Nell and Miss T. walking off.

39—"Under the Leaves" (Poco Agitato), by Thome (92 bars), until—S: Wireless operator.

40—Love Theme (32 bars), until—T: "In all the years."

41—Undersea Theme (48 bars), until—S: Buller swimming.

42—"Tremolo" (8 bars), until—S: Speeding launch.

43—"Dramatic Andante," by Ascher (40 bars), until—S: Launch slows down.

44—Love Theme (32 bars), until—S: Buller comes up on board of ship.

45—Undersea Theme (34 bars), until—S: Buller descending into water.

46—"Dramatic Agitato," by Hough (80 bars), until—S: Buller coming out of water.

47—"Ein Maerchen" (Dramatic Fantasia), by Bach (64 bars), until—S: Barnett coming out of water.

48—Love Theme (72 bars), until * * * * * END.

Portland Gets Two Organs

Portland, Ore., is to have two magnificent photo-theatre organs soon. This month Manager J. C. Stille of the Peoples theatre will have his $25,000 Robert Morton orchestral pipe organ ready for dedication, while within two months the Liberty will present to the Portland public the biggest and most expensive theatre orchestral organ in the country, a $50,000 Wurlitzer Hope-Jones unit orchestral organ.

E. J. Myrick, manager of the Liberty, has been busy for two weeks receiving sections of the Wurlitzer, which are arriving in six cars from Tonowanda, New York.

Fred Scholl will preside over the Morton at the Peoples, which reproduced a twenty-five piece symphony orchestra, while Albert Hay Malotte will handle the giant Wurlitzer.

Malotte is on his vacation at present, while Henri Monet, the other Liberty organist, is awaiting the call for the National Army.

"NANCY COMES HOME"

(Triangle Production)

Reviewed on page 2095

Theme: "Love Theme" by Abbot Lee

1—"Les Sylphes" (Valse Impromptu), by Bachman (3 minutes and 45 seconds), until—T: "Mrs. Jerry in Ballou."

2—"Dramatic Recitative," by Sol. P. Levy (1 minute and 30 seconds), until—T: "Nancy Worthing in her third year."

3—"Garden of Love" (Caprice), by E. Ascher (2 minutes and 25 seconds), until—T: "Nancy'll be here at 4:15."

4—"By the River" (Romance) (12/8 moderato), by Morse (2 minutes and 10 seconds), until—S: "Near Railroad station."

5—"Reve Amour" (Melodious Allegretto), by Zameznik (2 minutes and 20 seconds), until—T: "They told me at school, etc."

6—Sorrow Theme, by Ed. Roberts (3 minutes and 50 seconds), until—T: "Poor little girl, etc."

7—"Ballerinas Vision" (Valse Lente), by Braham (3 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "The child has inherited."

8—"Pathetic Andante," by P. Vely (50 seconds), until—T: "A day in which dreams come through."

9—Theme (3 minutes and 30 seconds), until—T: "I'll take the roadster, etc."

10—"Canzonetta" (Moderato), by Nicode (4 minutes and 45 seconds), until—S: Girl packing coat into leather bag.

11—"Valse Lente," by Schuette (2 minutes), until—T: "The eagerly awaited dinner."

12—"Erotik" (Dramatic), by Grieg (3 minutes and 30 seconds), until—S: Nancy running up the stairs to her room.

13—"Illusion" (2/4 Mod. Intermezzo), by Bustanoby (3 minutes and 50 seconds), until—T: "All dressed up, and no place to go."

14—Theme (2 minutes and 40 seconds), until—S: Interior of restaurant.

15—"Aurora" (Ballet Intermezzo), by Von der Mehden (2 minutes), until—S: Young man dancing.

16—Popular jig to action (1 minute), until—S: Young man with gun.

17—Watch Shot, followed by 18—"Dramatic Agitate," by Hough (2 minutes and 30 seconds), until—T: If you're innocent, etc.

19—"Dramatic Tension," by Sol. P. Levy (3 minutes and 20 seconds), until—S: Girl in bed.

20—Continue to action (15 seconds), until—T: "Next morning."

21—"Dramatic Tension," by Reissiger (4 minutes and 20 seconds), until—T: "I'd like to see the fellow."

22—"Moderato Agitato," by Becker (2 minutes and 25 seconds), until—T: "It was a lady who pawned."

23—"L'Adieu" (Dramatic), by Fararger (3 minutes), until—T: "Fancy my boy being, etc."

24—Theme (2 minutes and 50 seconds), until—S: until * * * * * END.

General Comments

"The Meaning of Y. M. C. A." has just been published by Fred Forster, which, translated into song parlance, means "You must come across!" "Blue Rose Waltz," and "Military Waltz," by Frederick Knight Logan, are selling as fast as presses can turn them out.

"Love Cannot Say Good-by," by R. De Vivo, and published by The Times Music Company, 145 West Forty-fifth street, New York, is being used as a feature with many of the better grade of romantic photoplays.

Fred Vandersloot is not worrying about the coming summer, for his "Love Melody" and "Nona" look like the two most natural instrumental hits that he has ever issued.

The Meyer Cohen Music Company, Inc., is now prepared to meet the demands of the trade and profession. "There's a Vacant Chair in Every Home Tonight," and "Mothers of France" are getting a big hold on singers and musicians.

James W. Casey, who is now on the road, is flooding the offices of the Echo Music Company with orders for "My Hawaii, I Hear You Calling," and "My Golden West."

"You've Been Your Mother's Baby Long Enough," which Gilbert and Friedland feature at the Riverside this week, is, without a doubt, the best baby song on the market, and a wonderful number for motion picture plays.

Publishers have discovered that peace songs are not looked upon with favor by our government. There will be plenty of time for peace songs after some one gets the Kaiser by the throat and makes him say "Uncle, Uncle, Uncle Sam, Blease Gimme Beace."

"MISSOURI-WALTZ"

The World's Greatest
and
Most Popular Waltz

For Piano - - - 30c Per Copy
For Orchestra - 11 and Piano 25c
For Orchestra - Full and Piano 35c

Forster Music Publisher, Inc.
509 So. Wabash Avenue
CHICAGO, ILL.

NONA

THE SENSATIONAL WALTZ HIT!!

Waltz, for Piano - - -	15c
Vocal - - - - -	15c
Orchestra, 11 and Piano -	25c
Orchestra, Full and Piano -	35c

The Tune That Sticks

WHY?

IT'S DIFFERENT!

VANDERSLOOT MUSIC PUB. CO.
WILLIAMSPORT, PA.

"WOMAN AND THE LAW"

(Fox Production)

Reviewed on page 1764

Theme: "Lost Happiness" by Eilenberg

Note—The only proper orchestra rests in this picture are Cues Nos. 32 and 38.

1—Theme (1 minute and 30 seconds), until—T: "In the quiet and refined atmosphere, etc."

2—"A la Cubana," by Granados (1 minute and 50 seconds), until—T: "And as each day would slip, etc."

3—"Sweet Reverie," by Tschaikowsky (2 minutes and 5 seconds), until—T: "Fifteen years later, in New York."

4—"Cyclone in Darktown" (Rag), by G. D. Barnard (2 minutes and 40 seconds), until—T: "There is a beautiful blonde outside."

5—Continue ppp (25 seconds), until—T: "Colonel Thomas La Salle, etc."

6—"Romance," by O. Mericanto (3 minutes and 40 seconds), until—T: "It was through the firmness, etc."

7—Continue pp (1 minute and 20 seconds), until—T: "In sunny Chile."

8—"Manzano," Intermezzo by Brooks (3 minutes), until—S: Jack meets the Castillo girl.

9—Continue pp (25 seconds), until—T: "After a month in the tropics.

10—"Beauiful Girls of Valencia," Waltz by Morena (2 minutes and 40 seconds), until—T: "It was his custom to call up, etc."

11—Continue pp and slow (40 seconds), until—T: "Paris."

12—"Bonds of Love," Waltz by Roth (2 minutes and 30 seconds), until—T: "A very pronounced example."

13—Theme (1 minute and 50 seconds), until—T: "The following month in South Africa."

14—"Andante Pathetique," by Godard (2 minutes), until—T: "Fifth Ave., New York."

15—Theme (1 minute and 30 seconds), until—T: "Josie Sable, that type, etc."

16—Continue to action (1 minute), until—T: "The passing of time brought, etc."

17—Continue pp (25 seconds), until—T: "After six years filled, etc."

18—"Awakening of Spring," by Bach (3 minutes and 35 seconds), until—T: "And thus the little mother suffered, etc."

19—"Last Spring," by Grieg (4 minutes and 30 seconds), until—T: "Deep into the night he returned."

20—Theme (1 minute and 45 seconds), until—T: "Frequent meetings between Jack and Josie."

21—"Les Patineurs," Waltz by Waldteufel (1 minute and 15 seconds), until—S: Interior of room.

22—Continue pp and slow (1 minute and 25 seconds), until—T: "Get off my Papa's lap, etc."

23—"Chanson D'Amour," by Saar (4 minutes), until—T: "Determination born out of, etc."

24—"Tragic Theme," by Paul Vely (1 minute and 30 seconds), until—S: Jack's wife enters the room of Jack's mistress.

25—Continue ff (1 minute and 15 seconds), until—T: "After remaining in the closet, etc."

26—Continue pp (15 seconds), until—T: "The Castillo Secretary, etc."

27—Melody from Opus 16, by Paderewsky (2 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "So it's fifty, fifty."

28—Continue to action pp or ff (30 seconds), until—S: The fight.

29—Short Agitato to action (25 seconds), until—S: After the fight.

30—Theme ff (1 minute and 50 seconds), until—T: "I shall not let you, etc."

31—Continue fff (35 seconds), until—T: "The details of the divorce, etc."

32—Orchestra Rest (about 6 minutes), until—T: "With the passing of the time, etc."

33—Theme (3 minutes), until—T: "I am going to call up mother."

34—"Dramatic Tension," by Sol. P. Levy (2 minutes and 50 seconds), until—T: "You can't have him now."

35—Silence—Just Watch Shot. This effect is very important.

36—Followed by

37—"Lamento," by Gabriel Marie (2 minutes and 30 seconds), until—S: Interior of Court Room.

38—Orchestra Rest (About 9 minutes), until—S: Jury comes in again.

39—Silence (30 seconds), until—T: "Not Guilty."

40—Solemn March, by Haendel, until * * * * * END.

"JUST A WOMAN"

(Frank Hall Production)

Reviewed on page ????

The timing is based on a speed limit of fourteen minutes per reel (one thousand feet)

Theme: "Sorrow Theme" by Edouard Roberts

1—"Anvil Chorus," from "Il Trovatore," by Verdi (1 minute and 15 seconds), until—T: "Anna, wife of Jim Ward."

2—"Pathetic Andante," by Paul Vely (2 minutes and 20 seconds), until—T: "Jim Ward, Lee Becker."

3—Repeat "Anvil Chorus" (same as cue No. 1), (45 seconds), until—S: Anna arrives with basket.

4—"Dramatic Adagio," by Kretschmer (1 minutes and 45 seconds), until—T: "There it knocks him off."

5—Continue ff. (2 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "Take care, Anna, the Mills," etc.

6—"Dramatic Tension, No. 1, by E. Ascher (50 seconds), until—S: Anna returns home.

7—"L'Adieu" (dramatic), by Favarger (5 minutes and 50 seconds), until—T: "Have faith, this is what God," etc.

8—Theme (4 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "I'm going over to Fred's shack."

9—Repeat "Anvil Chorus" pp. (same as cue No. 3), (1 minute and 30 seconds), until—T: Fred, my boy, you got it."

10—Continue, pp. (1 minute and 5 seconds), until—T: "Looking back, Anna."

11—"Dramatic Narrative," by Pauline Pement (1 minute and 15 seconds), until—T: "Within six months."

12—"Intermezzo" (moderato), by Huerter (4 minutes and 5 seconds), until—T: "Many a self-made man," etc.

13—Theme (1 minute and 25 seconds), until—T: "And within six years."

14—"Sieste" (characteristic Lente, by Laurens (2 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "Think it over, my way," etc.

15—"Dawn of Love" (Melodious Allegretto), by Bendix (2 minutes), until—T: "The Prentis Reception."

16—"Ballerinas Vision" (Valse Lente), by Bendix (5 minutes and 20 seconds), until—T: "And in New York"

17—"The Vampire" (a dramatic theme), by Sol. P. Levy (1 minute and 30 second), until—T: "The alluring world," etc.

18—Popular songs to action (carbaret scene), (2 minutes and 30 seconds) until—T: "Her interest aroused," etc.

19—Repeat "The Vampire" (same as cue No. 17), (3 minutes and 30 seconds), until—T: "And when Jim returned home."

20—"Heloise" (Moderato Int.), by O. Langey (2 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "As time rolls on."

21—Theme (2 minutes and 25 seconds), until—T: "At last his home becomes," etc.

22—"Cavatine" (dramatic Mod.), by Bohm (3 minutes and 35 seconds), until—T: "Nothing can justify the man," etc.

23—Theme (1 minutes and 15 seconds), until—T: "Mentally and physically no longer," etc.

24—"L'Adieu" (dramatic), by Karganoff (4 minutes), until—T: "I've come to say good-bye."

25—"Erotik (dramatic melody), by E. Grieg (3 minutes and 45 seconds), until—T: "Compelled by his promise."

26—Theme (2 minutes and 20 seconds), until—T: "Anna, on arriving in New York."

27—"Pathetic Andante," by Margis-Berger (1 minutes and 15 seconds), until—T: "We flatter those we scarcely know," etc.

28—Tragic theme, by P. Vely (3 minutes), until—T: "Jim having lost sense." etc.

29—"Serenade" (dramatic Mod.), by Widor (6 minutes and 20 seconds), until—T: "My boy taken from me," etc.

30—"Lamento" (dramatic-pathetic), by Gabriel Marie (3 minutes and 50 seconds), until—T: "The Epilogue, 1917."

31—Dramatic Maestoso," by Loraine (40 seconds), until—T: "Jim escorted by his soldier son."

32—Theme (2 minutes), until—S: Interior of factory.

33—Continue, pp. (45 seconds), until—T: "And so will our boy," etc.

34—Short battle hurry, to action (25 seconds), until—S: Flashback to former scene.

35—Silence (20 seconds), until—T: "The proudest day," etc.

36—"Sons of Uncle Sam" (patriotic march), by McCoy (1 minute and 15 seconds), until—T: "Father in heaven, watch," etc.

37—Theme (35 seconds), until * * * END.

Theatres Changing Hands

ILLINOIS

It is planned to improve the Liberty theatre, Murphysboro, to the tune of $12,000 or $15,000, and though no definite date has been set for the commencement of operations, the management aims to have all titivations completed by early fall.

INDIANA

The Lyric theatre, Indianapolis, is to be remodeled and enlarged this summer, according to plans announced by Barton & Olson, the owners. They expect to start the work within the next thirty days, and complete it in the autumn. The remodeled theatre will seat 2,500 persons, about twice its present capacity. The improvements, as designed by Vonnegut, Bohn & Mueller, the architects, will cost about $125,000. Barton & Olson have obtained a ninety-nine-year lease on the property, having forty-one foot frontage, just south of the theatre. This space will be incorporated in the new theatre, giving the entire building a frontage of 112 feet and a depth of ninety feet.

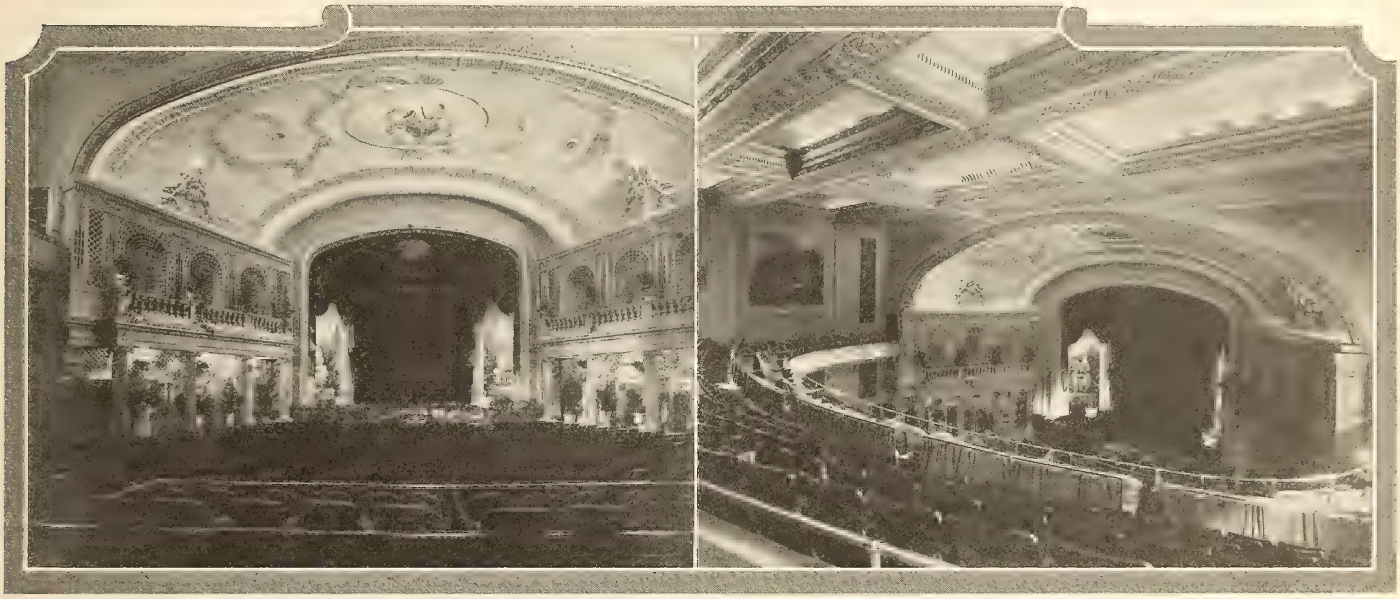
THE BARTOLA

You pay no middleman's profit when you buy a Bartola. You get 100% value for every dollar you pay.

Write for particulars.

CHAS. C. PYLE, General Sales Agent, 707-712 Mallers Bldg., Chicago, Ill. Factory, Oshkosh, Wis.

Theatres Worth While



Two Views of the Interior of the Handsome Liberty Theatre, Portland, Ore.

Liberty One of Nation's Finest

UNQUESTIONABLY one of the handsomest motion picture houses in the world is the Liberty, Portland, Ore., one of the Jensen and von Herberg houses. E. J. Myrick, a member of the Advisory Board of the Exhibitors' Service Bureau is the managing director of this splendid house. The photographs reproduced here give some faint idea of the beauties of the theatre and the many artistic angles.

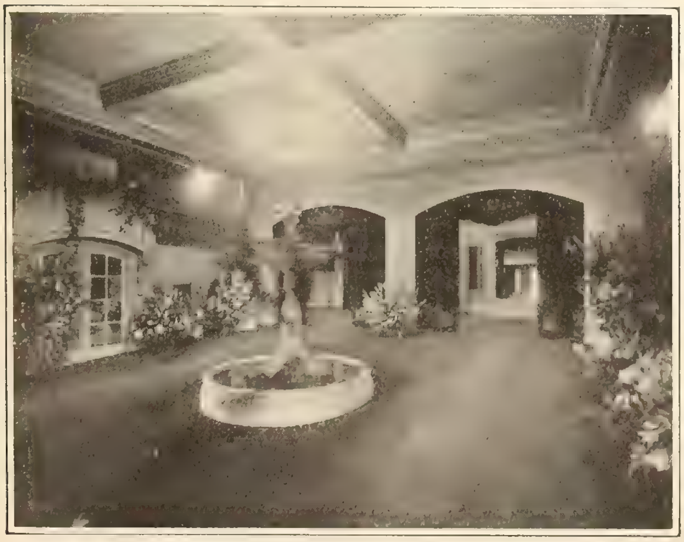
Here is a description of the house as prepared by a visitor:

"As we enter the theatre, we see a fine reproduction of a celebrated bit of sculpture—a fountain, representing the Boy and the Goose—by the artist Verraccio. From here we proceed up the ramp, a comfortable incline to the mezzanine floor, where we enter the main reception room, furnished in the Adam's style of architecture of the Georgian period.

"The color effect is warm grey walls, reflecting the warmth of a rose carpet and the curtains a beautiful printed linen on a background on which is printed charming baskets of flowers in colors to harmonize with the general colorings of the carpet and furnishings.

"From this room we see the trellised balconies with beautiful flower boxes and hanging baskets with large mirrors reflecting an arbor and producing a vista effect displaying the rich coloring of the furniture, including writing desks, comfortable chairs and lamps, giving a soft, radiant glow of color throughout the room.

"From the reception room we enter the ladies' retiring room where every comfort for the guests can be found from reclining couches to dressing tables with all accessories. The curtains are of Adam's designed chintz. The men's smoking room is practical and comfortable, the color effect being deep old gold, with smoker stands and easy, comfortable chairs.



Foyer, Liberty Theatre, Portland, Ore.

YOUR THEATRE'S PICTURE

Let Us Know When It Is Ready aud We Will Tell You the Data We Want

WE are anxious to print pictures and descriptions of the "Worth While Theatres" in this department—especially the new houses. However, with the present delays that are encountered in the shipment of building materials, it is impossible for us to keep any accurate account of the days for future openings and we invite managers to send in photographs of such new houses, both interior and exterior views together with description and we will then send a blank for the additional data that we need.

Established houses which have not been pictured in the NEWS are invited to share these columns. This matter is intended not only to give an account of the better houses, no matter the size, but also to give hints which may prove of value in future construction and equipment.

In sending photos be sure to enclose them in cardboard to prevent breakage.

rest naturally and easily on the stage, you are sure to feel that whatever program is rendered here is bound to be produced under an environment that will bring out the best there is in it.

"On either side of the screen and an integral part of it are miniature waterfalls—replicas of the famed Multnomah and Bridal Veil cascading in a brilliance of color from 'back stage' through settings absolutely true to nature; all this blending gradually and naturally with the Italian pergolas and garden scheme which serve as a most graceful foreground for a giant Wurlitzer Hope-Jones Unit Orchestra.

"The effect—charming, subtle—brings the audience intimately in touch with the performance—makes one feel that personal enjoyment that comes from a sense of participation.

"Above the stage is a valance decorated with lotus flowers, crowned with a huge cornice in which is represented the emblem of Life, being thoroughly Egyptian in feeling. Underneath this massive valance hangs the large stage curtain, in which over two hundred yards of specially made velvet were used. The color is burnt orange, relieved with specially woven braids and deep fringes of burnt orange and black. As the center curtain falls, the two side curtains rise. The curtains are controlled by a special motor.

"The walls, on either side of the arch are decorated with two magnificent convas reproductions of the famous paintings by the noted artist Fraganard, the original paintings of which were presented to the Metropolitan Museum of Art by the late J. Pierpont Morgan. One represents Recollections, the other the Crowning of Love.

"The lighting features of the theatre are wonderful and have been given special attention in producing a soft, harmonious effect on all colorings used. There is no glare or disturbing features. The light produces a pleasing, restful effect, enhancing the richness of colors used in the paintings and furnishings.

"The idea of the entire decorating and furnishing of the Liberty was to avoid any theatrical effect and to produce an atmosphere of art associated with a feeling of refinement and culture."

Symphony Theatre Opens May 1

FURTHER announcments were made during the week concerning the new Symphony theatre which will soon come into being at Broadway and Ninety-fifth street. The building, which is shown here is now being remodeled by Kennedy Theatres, Inc., and will open its doors about May first. The policy of the Symphony will be to show super-features, news reels, educational and travel films and to offer novelties in vocal and instrumental numbers.

An orchestra of fifty pieces will be used, says the announcement, these coming from the Metropolitan opera house and being under the direction of Signor Carlo Ronchi.

The Symphony will have 1,200 orchestra seats and 400 lounging chairs in the mezzanine tier of boxes where smoking will be permitted. Work on the remodeling is being rushed and there is every assurance that it will be ready by the opening date.

Building Being Remodeled for Symphony Theatre

Aubrey M. Kennedy, long well known in producing circles, is taking his first step as an exhibitor. With him will be associated Charles L. Cole, for many years associated with the Pantages interests.

Strand Theatre Charleston's Pride

STRAND THEATRE, Charleston, W. Va., is now one of the largest houses in that section, the capacity having been —does your business fall off in hot weather?

It won't if the "Typhoon Twins" cool your theatre.

Their fresh-as-sea-air breezes will make your entire house delightfully cool and restful during the hot, sultry summer months.

Folks will come to your show just "to cool off." They will be glad they came—and anxious to come again.

Their extra nickels and dimes will easily pay for your "Typhoon Twins" long before the Summer is over.

The "Typhoon Twins" are low in cost—Easily installed.

Write us for full information TODAY.

TYPHOON FAN COMPANY
BOX 106, 1544 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

INFORMATION

I am interested in Motion Picture Photography and would like

Without Obligation

on my part to obtain information on the equipment as checked

CAMERAS
CAMERA ATTACHMENTS
TRIPODS
LENSES
FILM STOCK
STUDIO LIGHTS
LABORATORY APPARATUS
DEVELOPING AND PRINTING

(Tear out this advertisement and mail to MOTION PICTURE NEWS, 729 7th Avenue, New York.)

Name ....
Theatre ....
Address ....
....

enlarged to 1,400. The building occupies a plot 60 by 120 at the corner of Summers and State streets, in the business section of the city.

The building is one story, the most of the street portions being occupied by stores, with the entrance at the corner. It is constructed of brick, concrete and steel and was opened on October 16, 1916. It is owned by T. L. Kearse and managed by C W. Graner. Mr. Jearse also owns the Hippodrome, Colonial, Elk and Alhambra in the same city.

The exterior color scheme is dark red with the woodwork painted white, while the interior is finished in light tan highlighted with gold.

The ventilating system was especially designed for the house as was the lighting plan. The projection room is equipped with three Simplex machines which have a throw of 115 feet to a Gold King screen. The projection room is equipped with a dissolving machine, speed control and motor driven.

Strand Theatre, Charleston, W. Va.

Music is one of the big features of the house, being supplied by an orchestra of sixteen pieces. The box office has a National Cash Register ticket selling equipment.

Bills are changed three times a week, six to eight shows of eight reels each being given daily at five and ten cents for the matinee and ten and fifteen in the evening. Select, Fox and Triangle pictures are shown. The theatre advertises in the newspapers, morning and evening and through the billboards.

Directory of New Theatres

ALABAMA

The City Commissioner of Birmingham has under advisement a project to construct an open air theatre in Capitol Park, to cost not exceeding $3,000, and Robert Lawrence, director of the Community Sings, has been requested to present the matter before the commission in detail. It is the idea of the community sing director to place seats to take care of from 5,000 to 7,000 people, and there will be entrances from Eighth avenue and Sixth avenue. The plan further calls for walls built in the form of trellises, painted white and green, with vines and flowers planted around them. Commissioners Hornady and Brown were willing to order the plan executed at once, while Dr. Barrett and Commissioner Taylor asked that they be allowed time to further investigate the matter and report at the next meeting. The plan called for paying for the work with city notes over a term of years.

ARIZONA

W. R. Black, manager of the Pastime theatre, at Holbrook, contemplates instituting motion picture theatres at St. Johns and Springerville, providing suitable buildings can be secured at satisfactory terms.

CALIFORNIA

Ground has been broken by K. E. Parker, at San Jose, for the new South Street theatre, which he hopes to have completed and ready for use in the early fall.

Frank A. McDonald has secured a lease on the property, 518 South Main street, Los Angeles, for a term of four years, and it is his intention to open a modern motion picture theatre therein.

The Florence theatre, Pasadena, was formally opened by Manager Schuhmann a few days with J. Warren Kerrigan in "The Turn of a Card."

ILLINOIS

Work has been resumed on the erection of the new theatre at Litchfield under the personal supervision of Manager Kneedler.

M. Zelechower, a progressive motion picture exhibitor of South Genesee, is seeking a site for a new combination motion picture and vaudeville playhouse at Waukegan, and has temporarily turned the management of the Broadway at Genesee over to his son, Joseph.

The People's theatre, northeast corner Forty-seventh and Marshfield avenue, Chicago, is nearing completion. The cost is placed at $300,000, while the land is valued at $150,000. Plans for the structure were drawn

Any Place That a Theatre Will Pay—This Will Pay

$600 to $3,120 Net Profits Yearly

Exhibitors face the task of keeping up their profits and attendance notwithstanding the high cost of releases, high rent and taxes.

The Butter-Kist Pop Corn Machine has actually solved the problem!

Not in one or two—not in a few score—but literally in hundreds of moving picture theatres all over America.

Butter-Kist requires no wheat—no sugar—appeals to all patriots now more than ever.

Cash in on our national advertising in the great publications like the Saturday Evening Post—cash in on the public sentiment that favors this pop corn confection in wartime—cash in on the people who come to your theatre eager and willing to buy this toasty flavored Butter-Kist.

Machine occupies but 26 by 32 inches floor space. Stands anywhere. Runs itself. Handsomely built. Beautifies any lobby or foyer.

BUTTER-KIST

Pop Corn Machine

No other pop corn has Butter-Kist's toasty flavor. Brings people from blocks around. Increases attendance. Actual records prove this beyond a doubt.

Our liberal plan makes it easy for theatre owners to get these profits.

Get Full Proof Free!

Write at once for interesting book of photographs, signed sales records and documentary evidence from film exhibitors and store keepers throughout the land.

Make 3 cents extra profits from thousands of admissions to your theatre. Don't rob yourself of this opportunity by doubting our word. Get the evidence from men in your own line of business in towns of all sizes. Write for this book at once.

Holcomb & Hoke Manufacturing Company
687-701 Van Buren Street Indianapolis, Indiana

Mail This Coupon for Full Proof

HOLCOMB & HOKE MANUFACTURING COMPANY,
687-701 Van Buren Street,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

Gentlemen:—
Without obligation to me, mail your book of Butter-Kist Profits and evidence from theatre owners and film exhibitors.

Name of Theatre..

My Name..

Address..

Comfort plus Good Picture EQUALS
SATISFIED PATRONS

You have the picture. Have you the necessary comfort? You must have only the right sort of seating equipment to give a satisfactory reply to this question.

OUR

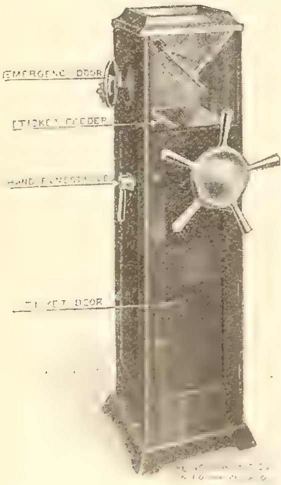
OPERA CHAIRS

Assure

That necessary comfort to patrons and economy to you. Low prices, but high quality. Quick shipment of many styles.

Write for Catalogue N.

STEEL FURNITURE CO.
1475 Buchanan Ave., S. W., Grand Rapids, Mich.



"NEWMAN"
Ticket Chopper

Safeguard against having your tickets used over again and resold. Circumstances sometimes cause many men to yield to temptation. Newman's ticket choppers positively chop and positively insure you against any collusion between ticket seller and ticket taker. The most practical and most attractive choppers made. Write in for 1918 Catalog of Ticket Choppers, Brass Frames and Rails.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
717-19 Sycamore Street, Cincinnati, O.
68 W. Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.
Established 1882
Coast Representative — G. A. Metcalfe, 119 Golden Gate Ave., San Francisco, Cal.
Canadian Representative—J. T. Malone Films, Rialto Theatre Bldg., Montreal, Can.
Frames, Easels, Rails, Grilles, Signs, Choppers, Kick Plates, Door Bars

Printing, Developing, Toning, Tinting

Titles
Domestic Foreign

Empire City Film Laboratories, Inc.
345 West 40th Street New York

by Architects C. W. and George L. Rapp. The theatre will contain 2,200 seats. It will be available for vaudeville, drama, musical comedy or motion pictures. In addition to the theatre there will be four stores, each 17 x 50 feet.

Owing to the delay in the delivery of steel, the opening of the new Midway theatre, Rockford, has been postponed until June 10, Max and Aaron Asher, lessees, announce. The new house will have a seating capacity of 2,000 on one floor. There will be a wide foyer back of the seating with five aisles entering therefrom. The Asher Bros. intend to use a large orchestra in connection with the pipe organ.

IOWA.

N. C. Rice has taken over the management of the Call Opera House at Algona.

KENTUCKY

The Kozy Theatre Company has been incorporated in Paducah with a capital of $6,000. Rodney C. Davis, R. R. Kirkland and L. F. Keller are behind the project, which is to erect a modern motion picture theatre in Paducah.

MASSACHUSETTS

The new theatre building being erected on South Main Street, Fall River, for A. A. Spitz is fast nearing completion and the owners fully expect to have the house ready for occupancy by the end of the month.

Plans have been drawn and accepted for a new theatre at Chelsea. It will be erected on the site of the present Park Hotel, in Chelsea Square, which will be demolished to make room for the new structure. It will be built by John H. Lacey, who owns the present property and is a well known hotel man of Boston, conducting the Copley Square Hotel, on Huntington Avenue.

MEXICO

The new Eden theatre in Juarez, which has just been completed at a cost of $60,000, was formally opened a few days ago under the management of J. G. Camacho. The theatre, which is situated immediately opposite the Constitution plaza, is of adobe and concrete construction and has a spacious stage, inclined floor and a seating capacity of 600. A film service of pictures produced in Los Angeles will be run, and Spanish titles will be interpolated at the bottom of the screen by a device of which Francisco Norte of El Paso is the inventor.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Plans are being prepared for the installation of a motion picture theatre in the premises now occupied by the Hitzum Bowling Alleys at Nashua.

The Star theatre on Lowell street, Manchester, will undergo complete alterations in May, it was announced by Manager E. J. Caron. The theatre will be remodeled, and the seating capacity will be enlarged from the present capacity of 1,100 to 2,000, according to present plans. Manager Caron plans to make it the largest motion picture house in the State.

During the past few days Manager Caron and Manager William O'Neill, of the Auditorium and Palace theatre, have held several conferences relative to the occupancy of the Auditorium theatre by the Star Amusement management during the period of alteration, it is rumored.

NEW YORK

Menger and Ring Company, of New York, were awarded the contract by the Majestic theatre for the construction of a new front at the theatre and for improvements in the lobby of the Utica theatre. The new plans call for a more attractive entrance, and also better display of announcements of features appearing at the theatre. No expense is to be spared in employing the latest ideas in theatre construction.

Ambrey H. Kennedy, president of the Kennedy Theatres, and Thomas Healy, have leased for a long term of years the market building that was built by Vincent Astor at Broadway and Ninety-fifth street, New York City, for the purpose of turning it into a modern motion picture theatre.

The building was constructed two years ago, and has been used for some time just by the Crystal Carnival Ice Rink. It will be opened about May 1, after extensive alterations have been made and will be known as the Symphony theatre.

The house will have a seating capacity of 1,500, and will be arranged practically on one floor. It will have no balconies, but around it will run a mezzanine tier of boxes. There will be an orchestra of 58 pieces and a pipe organ.

J. A. McCormick has sold for Louis Karasik and Alexander MacDonald two plots measuring 53 feet on Church Avenue and 223 feet on Gravesend Avenue, Brooklyn, beginning at a point 108 feet north of Church Avenue, to a client of J. J. Kramer, who plans to build a one-story brick theatre and stores. The entrance to the theatre will be on Church Avenue, and it will have a seating capacity of 1,600.

Ground was broken Monday last for the new motion picture theatre, to

UNIVERSAL
Motion Picture Camera

more speed, better results, at half the price.

Write for 6 new features

Burke & James, Inc.
240 E. Ontario St., Chicago

Theatre and Exchange Mailing List Service

We rent lists of or address contemplated or existing theatres, exchanges, state rights owners, publicity mediums and producers, selected as to territory, class, etc. Twenty thousand changes were recorded in our list last year. Its use means a saving to you of from 30 to 50% in postage, etc.

MOTION PICTURE DIRECTORY CO.
80 Fifth Avenue, New York
Phone, 3227 Chelsea
425 Ashland Block, Chicago
Phone, 2003 Randolph
Addressing Multigraphing
Printing N 158 Typewriting

Reputation and Art Laboratories

Reputation is a structure that is never complete.

We are building ours—the work we do for you is its foundation. Therefore, every job is made perfect in order that our Reputation will stand firm.

ART LABORATORIES

Developing — Titles — Printing

316 East 48th Street

Murray Hill 6973 Edmond Kuhn, Supt.

Office

Bryant 8324 1476 Broadway

be known as the Strand, to be built at the corner of Rockwell Place and Fulton Street, Brooklyn, for the Mitchel H. Mark Realty Corporation, owners of the Strand theatre in Manhattan. The building is to be erected on the site purchased five years ago by the city for subway purposes and resold in the Real Estate Exchange at public auction to the Freel Investing Company, of which Philip A. Curren is president, through Matthew V. O'Malley as broker in the transaction. The first spadeful of earth marking the beginning of the project was dug by Moe Mark, of the Mark Strand Theatre Company, which will operate the house. Thomas Lamb, architect of the building, said: "This theatre will be an improvement on the Strand in Manhattan, and I can safely say will be the most modern motion picture home in the United States, because the company back of the project has planned to spare no expense in providing the most luxurious place possible for the exhibition of moving pictures. The space allotted for the orchestra will accommodate 150 musicians. The lobby will be 75 feet square. There will be a roof garden for summer night exhibitions and a smoking room for men, as well as waiting rooms for women, which will be fitted up so that babies may be cared for while their parents attend the performances."

The capacity of the house will be 6,500. The root garden will accommodate 1,500 and the lobby will be provided with lounges for the convenience of persons waiting for their friends. The plans provide for an ornamental structure, which, the architect says, will be a notable improvement for the downtown theatrical district. The main entrance will be on Fulton Street, adjoining the Majestic theatre. There will be an automobile entrance on Ashland Place.

OHIO

Great interest is being displayed over the rumor that a motion picture theatre is to-be erected on the site of the Lesley Carter homestead in Dayton.

The house is exceptionally well located for a theatre, and the sentiment connected with the present owner of the property is calculated to make it a splendid investment, in the opinion of Dayton theatrical men who are familiar with the situation.

Jennie M. Gregory, of Geneva, is about to erect a motion picture theatre here for the Manheim-Wolcott Amusement Company, of Cleveland, who have agreed to take a ten-year lease at a rental of $1,500 a year.

The Firestone Park Theatre Company, of Akron, is going to build an elaborate photoplay house in Akron in the Firestone allotment, which is estimated will cost in the neighborhood of $22,000. The Practical Engineering Company, of Akron, is now making the plans for the structure.

F. B. Strawn, a prominent Cleveland jeweler, has had plans drawn for the erection of a motion picture theatre at 13413 St. Clair avenue, Cleveland. E. E. Smith, located in the Williamson Building, is the architect, but no details of the structure have been announced.

PENNSYLVANIA

Lee Socks, proprietor of the haberdashery at No. 15 South Third street, Easton, will obtain possession of the Nightingale Building, at No. 447-440 Northampton street. He will go on with the erection of a fine modern theatre on that site.

Stahl Bros., theatrical men, of Farrell, are rapidly enlarging the scope of their operations, their last venture being the completion of plans for the erection of a new $100,000 model theatre at Oil City, to replace the two playhouses which they now control there.

TENNESSEE

Plans for the erection of a new Orpheum theater in Memphis to replace the present playhouse, which will be converted into a popular vaudeville establishment, are now afoot, it is learned.

M. Myerfeld, president of the Orpheum circuit; Martin Beck, managing director, and Mort Singer, Chicago representative, are now en route to Memphis from San Francisco, and upon their arrival here they will select a site for the new building. Several possible locations have already been offered by local realty men.

The new theatre will be located somewhere in the heart of the business section and will be one of the finest modern structures on the Orpheum circuit. It will compare favorably with the playhouses recently erected in St. Louis and Kansas City. Complete assurance that the deal will be consummated has been obtained.

TEXAS

The Interstate Amusement Company has leased the Dallas Opera House, Dallas, corner of Main and St. Paul streets, for a period of three years, and plans are already being made for the improvement of the entrance and interior of the building.

A Liberty theatre is now under construction at Camp Bowie, Fort Worth, and soldiers soon will be using smileage books to purchase tickets of admission.

MY SUGGESTIONS

As to Lobby Displays Proved

A SUCCESS

Suggestions Gladly Given

WM. F. LIBMAN

LOBBY EXPERT

of

MENGER, RING & WEINSTEIN, Inc.

304-306 W. 42d St. New York

Catalogue Ready

WHY HESITATE to SAVE yourselves MONEY on
M. P. Supplies and Accessories.
VISIT the INDEPENDENT
MOVIE SUPPLY CO. and receive
PERSONAL ATTENTION
Room 603 729 7th Ave., N. Y.

TransVerteR

Automatically supplies only such voltage as arc requires. No waste of current in ballast.

HERTNER ELECTRIC & MFG. CO.
W. 114th St., Cleveland, Ohio, U.S.A

Business Offerings

TWO POWER 6A Machines for sale—practically new — used two months—will sell at a sacrifice—apply Mr. E. Kerman, Maytrix Photoplays, 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City. Telephone Bryant 5426.

WHO NEEDS a "live wire"? Producing end. Age 24, exempt, moderate salary. Schulman, 944 Aldus Street, New York.

Music Rolls for sale for 65 note electric pianos. All in good condition. 75 cents per roll. Address Lyric Theatre, Salem, Ill.

REMBUSCH SCREEN Co

ALL KINDS OF MOTION PICTURE SCREENS EST. 1903

SHELBYVILLE, INDIANA.

For Better Music

The Fotoplayer

62 West 45th Street AMERICAN PHOTO PLAYER CO. New York City

REMEMBER

IT'S THERE

With The

SERVICE

That's why those who want SERVICE, always use it.

With the fleet and wherever DEPENDABILITY counts,

Power's Cameragraph
Is Always ON DECK

Nicholas Power Company
Incorporated
Pioneers of Projection
90 Gold St., New York, N. Y.

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH
· ASSURES ·
PEERLESS PROJECTION

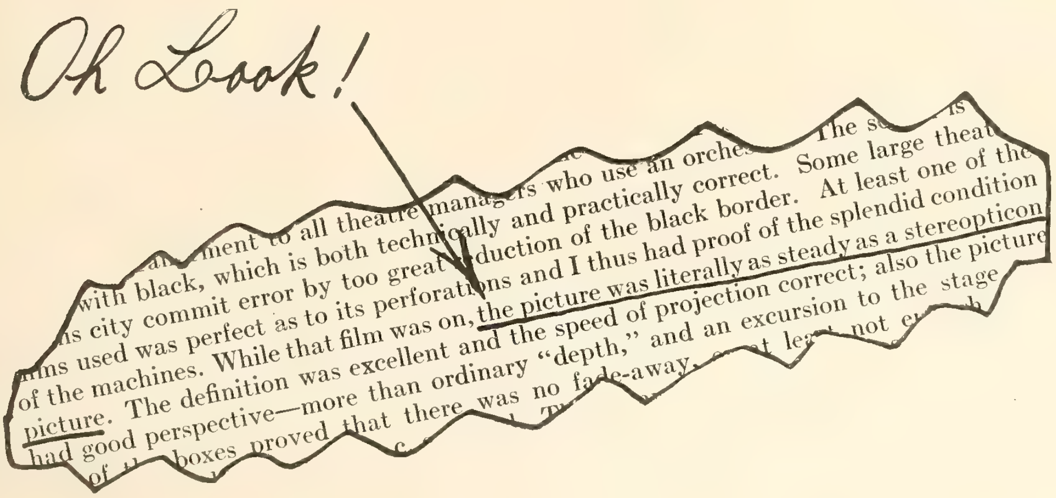
THE WILLIAMS PRINTING COMPANY, NEW YORK

Simplex

In the March 30 Moving Picture World there was an item by Mr. F. H. Richardson, the projection expert, on the Academy of Music, Fourteenth Street, New York.

Such an innocent-looking item: small type, and typographically as monotonous as a brick wall.

But those who read it could scarcely suppress an exclamation——



Oh Look!

ment to all theatre managers who use an orches The s is with black, which is both technically and practically correct. Some large theat s city commit error by too great duction of the black border. At least one of the ns used was perfect as to its perforations and I thus had proof of the splendid condition of the machines. While that film was on, the picture was literally as steady as a stereopticon picture. The definition was excellent and the speed of projection correct; also the picture had good perspective—more than ordinary "depth," and an excursion to the stage boxes proved that there was no fade-away, least not e

Well, it so happened that the name of the Projectors was not given.

But that didn't puzzle those who have made a study of Projectors; for they know that only the Simplex can project a picture literally as steady as a stereopticon picture

However, if you don't yet know, we'd like to make you acquainted with the Simplex and with the man who sells it and who renders satisfying service to Simplex Users in your section.

Take this expert's testimony at its full face value. He has no axe to grind

THE PRECISION MACHINE CO. INC.
317 East 34th: St. New York

"Carry On!"

That's a great word combination and it should mean as much right here in prosaic business as it does "Over There" where Our Boys are battling and bleeding for the Cause—Your Cause and My Cause.

Don't just buy a Liberty Bond—Buy Liberty Bonds; buy all you can, and then buy some more.

Don't just sit and say: "Business as Usual"—get out and do; and if you do it right, you will enjoy the privilege of giving more to our Government than usual.

The man who doesn't do more than his bit right now, isn't worth a Trumpeter's Toot; the motion picture industry today has the opportunity of a lifetime to give and to do and to help Win the War.

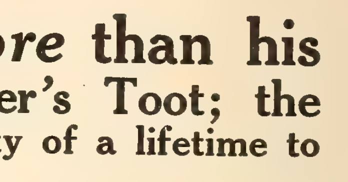
Come on Fellows! Carry On!

Rothacker

FILM MFG. CO. CHICAGO, U.S.A.



There are reasons—
Come and see them.

APRIL 27, 1918

Motion Picture News

Reg. in U. S. Patent Office

DOMINATES THE FIELD

DEPOSITS
Paramount Pictures
ARTCRAFT PICTURES

How Wide Is the Cashier's Smile?

An exhibitor's business ability is never greater than the greeting he receives at the bank. The man who shows always is welcomed with open arms, for he is a stable citizen—he holds the good will of his community.

Paramount and Artcraft Pictures

(Nationally Advertised)

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY CORPORATION
ADOLPH ZUKOR Pres JESSE L. LASKY Vice Pres CECIL B DE MILLE Director General
NEW YORK

LIBRARY OF CO
1918
MAY 1
PERIODICAL DIV

VOL. XVII-NO. 17 Entered as Second Class Matter, October 13, 1913, at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3rd, 1879 PRICE 10 CENTS

HARRY CAREY
PRODUCTION

WITH BEAUTIFUL
MOLLY MALONE

"The SCARLET DROP"

A DRAMA AS VIVID AND THRILLING AS THE DAYS OF '63

DIRECTED BY JACK FORD

PRODUCER OF THOSE BIG WINNERS
"THE PHANTOM RIDERS"
"STRAIGHT SHOOTING" & OTHER
HARRY CAREY SUCCESSES

BOOK THRU YOUR NEAREST UNIVERSAL EXCHANGE OR UNIVERSAL FILM M'F'G CO.
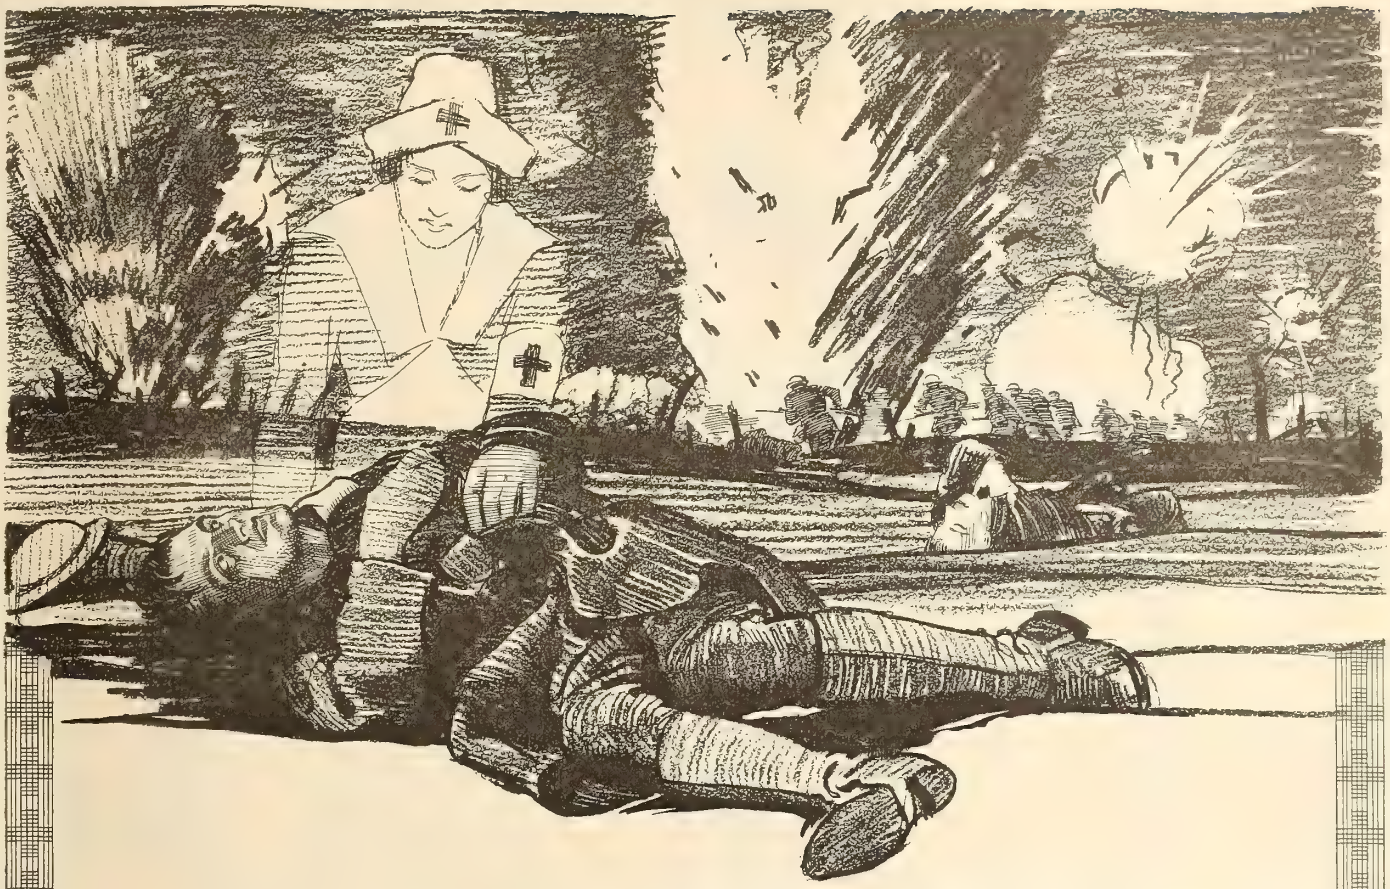
CARL LAEMMLE......PRES.
1600 BROADWAY N.Y.



The Twenty-two Million Members of the

AMERICAN RED CROSS

are ready to crowd the theatres of the exhibitors who show

"THE SPIRIT OF THE RED CROSS"

a splendid twenty-five minute motion picture

By James Montgomery Flagg

Produced by Jack Eaton and E. F. Warner for the American Red Cross

THIS thrilling drama, furnished at no cost to you, is a part of the new campaign for Red Cross Funds. When you show it you tie-up with the patriotic efforts of the most influential people in your community.

Released on April 28th

These Exchanges Are Booking It NOW.

Famous Players-Lasky Corp.
Fox Film Corp.
Goldwyn Distributing Corp.
Metro Pictures Corp.
Pathe Exchange, Inc.
Select Pictures Corp.
Universal Film Corp.
Vitagraph
World Film Corp.

(This advertising space contributed by the Motion Picture News, and is acknowledged by Jesse L. Lasky, Chairman, Red Cross Committee National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.)

Are You Booking all of these?

ARTCRAFT PICTURES

for

March and April
In order of release

MARY PICKFORD
in "Amarilly of Clothesline Alley"

CECIL B. De MILLE'S
"The Whispering Chorus"

Maeterlinck's
"THE BLUE BIRD"

WILLIAM S. HART
in "The Tiger Man"

ELSIE FERGUSON
in "The Lie"

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS
in "Mr. Fix-It"

Paramount Pictures

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY CORPORATION
ADOLPH ZUKOR Pres. JESSE L. LASKY Vice Pres. CECIL B. DE MILLE Director General
NEW YORK

ARTCRAFT PICTURES

SELECT SP PICTURES

There's magic in her name!

NORMA TALMADGE

presented by JOSEPH M. SCHENCK

drawing powerfully in the box offices of the country in her latest Select Picture

"BY RIGHT of PURCHASE"

Directed by CHARLES MILLER

The appealing story of the woman who built a barrier to her own happiness

Norma Talmadge's money-winning Select Pictures, previously released, include:

"THE MOTH"
"THE SECRET OF THE STORM COUNTRY"
(A Sequel to "Tess of the Storm Country")
"GHOSTS OF YESTERDAY"

DISTRIBUTED BY
SELECT PICTURES CORPORATION

SELECT SP PICTURES

Winsome and winning—let her win for your box office!

CONSTANCE TALMADGE

presented by LEWIS J. SELZNICK in the superb story by Frances Hodgson Burnett (author of "Little Lord Fauntleroy")

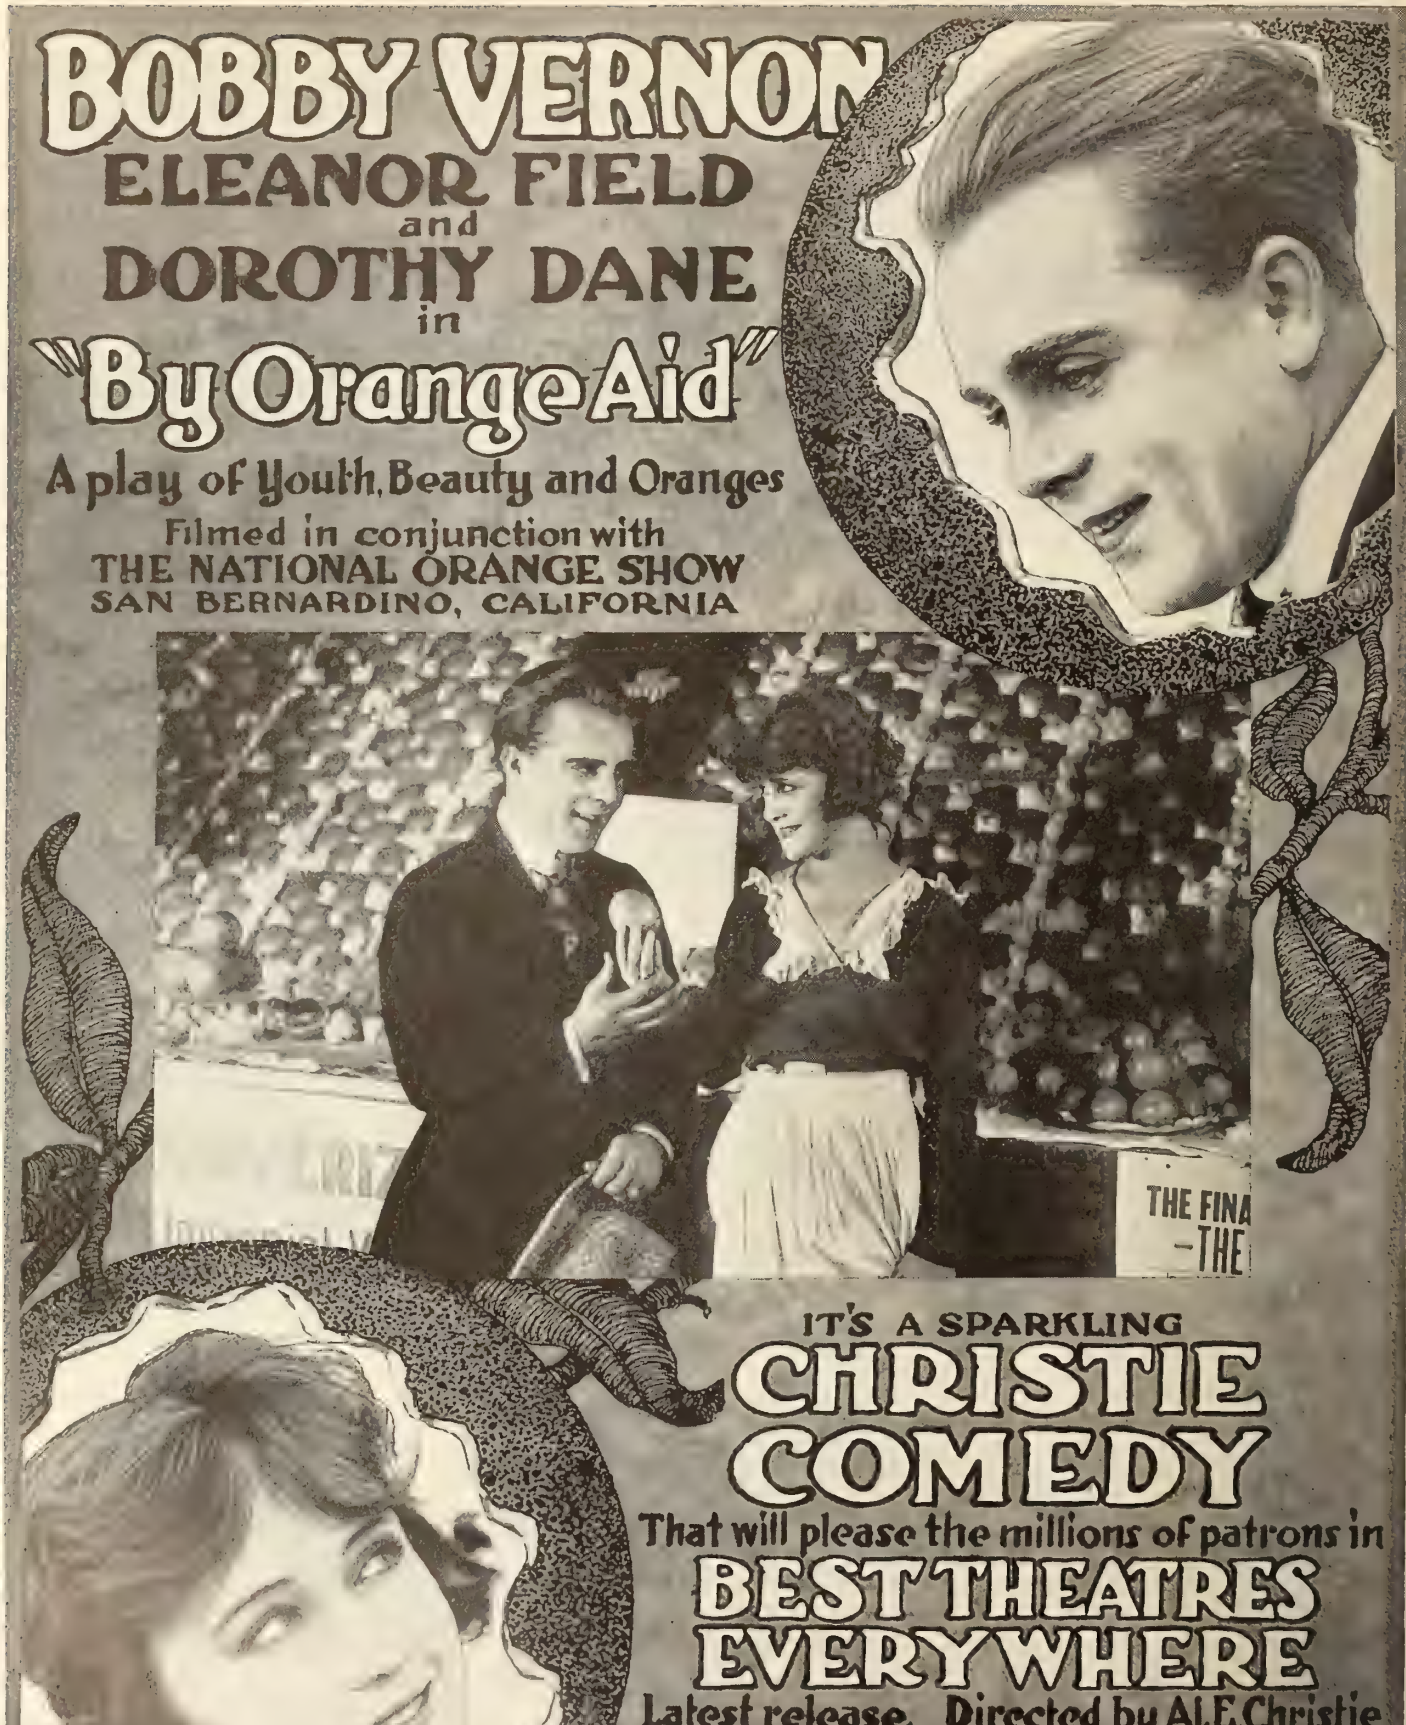
"THE SHUTTLE"

scenario by Margaret Turnbull and Harvey Thew

Directed by ROLLIN STURGEON

Your audiences will applaud "The Shuttle"—as dramatic as "Scandal," as pleasing as "The Honeymoon" and "The Studio Girl"

DISTRIBUTED BY
SELECT PICTURES CORPORATION



BOBBY VERNON
ELEANOR FIELD
and DOROTHY DANE
in
"By Orange Aid"

A play of Youth, Beauty and Oranges

Filmed in conjunction with
THE NATIONAL ORANGE SHOW
SAN BERNARDINO, CALIFORNIA

IT'S A SPARKLING
CHRISTIE COMEDY
That will please the millions of patrons in BEST THEATRES EVERYWHERE

Latest release. Directed by Al. E. Christie

NEW RELEASE EACH WEEK THRU FOREMOST INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES

CHRISTIE FILM CO.
INC.
LOS ANGELES

"A Chance to Get the S.R.O. Weatherbeaten"

"'Over the Top' will be tremendously popular everywhere in the United States and ought almost literally to coin money for exhibitors. Underline this attraction on your schedule for early showing. We say early because the film right now is on the crest of its popularity. It has had more publicity and advertising than probably any other work on the same general subject and you want to collect on it."

—Wid's.

"In a Class by Itself"

"Produced on a scale of magnificence and wealth of detail, such as the silent drama has seldom known and beyond doubt carrying as strong an appeal as any of the best war pictures that have yet been screened. It must inevitably not only duplicate but outdo the printed pages as a drawing card of tremendous interest, the big film surely stands in a class by itself."

Exhibitor's Trade Review.

"Should Be Shown in Every Town and Hamlet"

"This film should be shown in every town and hamlet in America. A sincerity unequaled marks every foot of the film from beginning to end. Never in the history of filmdom has there been a screen of such vital importance to the country at large—Every cent expended to see 'Over the Top' is paid cheerfully for it brings value received in true picturization entertainment."

—Billboard.

"Vitagraph Measures Up to a Big Opportunity and Scores a Victory"

"I want to say that I have never seen a reproduction of boys going 'over the top' that will compare with this one. It is so realistic you will forget it is a picture. Each punch in the picture is strong enough to form the basis of a five reel feature."

—Motion Picture News.

"Will Be Heralded With Delight"

"The photoplay based upon 'Over the Top,' the best known of all war books is bound to prove popular. Empey's initial appearance on the screen will be heralded with delight by his host of readers. It is difficult to believe that these scenes were not taken at the front, so realistically have they been projected on the screen."

—Dramatic Mirror.

"Surest Box-Office Attraction of the Year"

"'Over the Top' should prove one of the surest box-office attractions released within a year. The exhibitor who does not make money with it can blame only himself and his methods of exploitation."

—Morning Telegraph.

ALBERT E. SMITH
PRESENTS

"OVER THE TOP"

with Sergt. ARTHUR GUY
EMPEY (HIMSELF)

Supported by LOIS MEREDITH, JAMES MORRISON
And an ALL STAR VITAGRAPH CAST

A Marvelous Photoplay of Empey's World-Famous Book

Directed by WILFRID NORTH
Under the supervision of ALBERT E. SMITH
Scenario by ROBERT GORDON ANDERSON

VITAGRAPH

Still Packing the LYRIC THEATRE-N.Y.

VITAGRAPH

A FIVE PART BLUE RIBBON FEATURE

by WILLIAM ADDISON LATHROP

Directed by PAUL SCARDON

ALBERT E· SMITH Presents

HARRY MOREY

with FLORENCE DESHON

in

"A Bachelor's Children"

A human drama—a drama of love and the failings that are human—

A motion picture with the golden laughter of little children beaming at you from the screen—

A play that will attract patrons with its unusual title, and hold their interest with its whimsical theme—

And big, virile Harry Morey in the role of a man's man with a great heart—a strong man who rights a great wrong and in doing so, wins the girl of his dreams.

Conceded—The best picture in which Bushman and Bayne ever appeared

Metro Pictures Corporation presents

FRANCIS X.

BUSHMAN

BEVERLY

and BAYNE

in the famous Saturday Evening Post success by Kenneth Roberts

With NEATNESS and DISPATCH

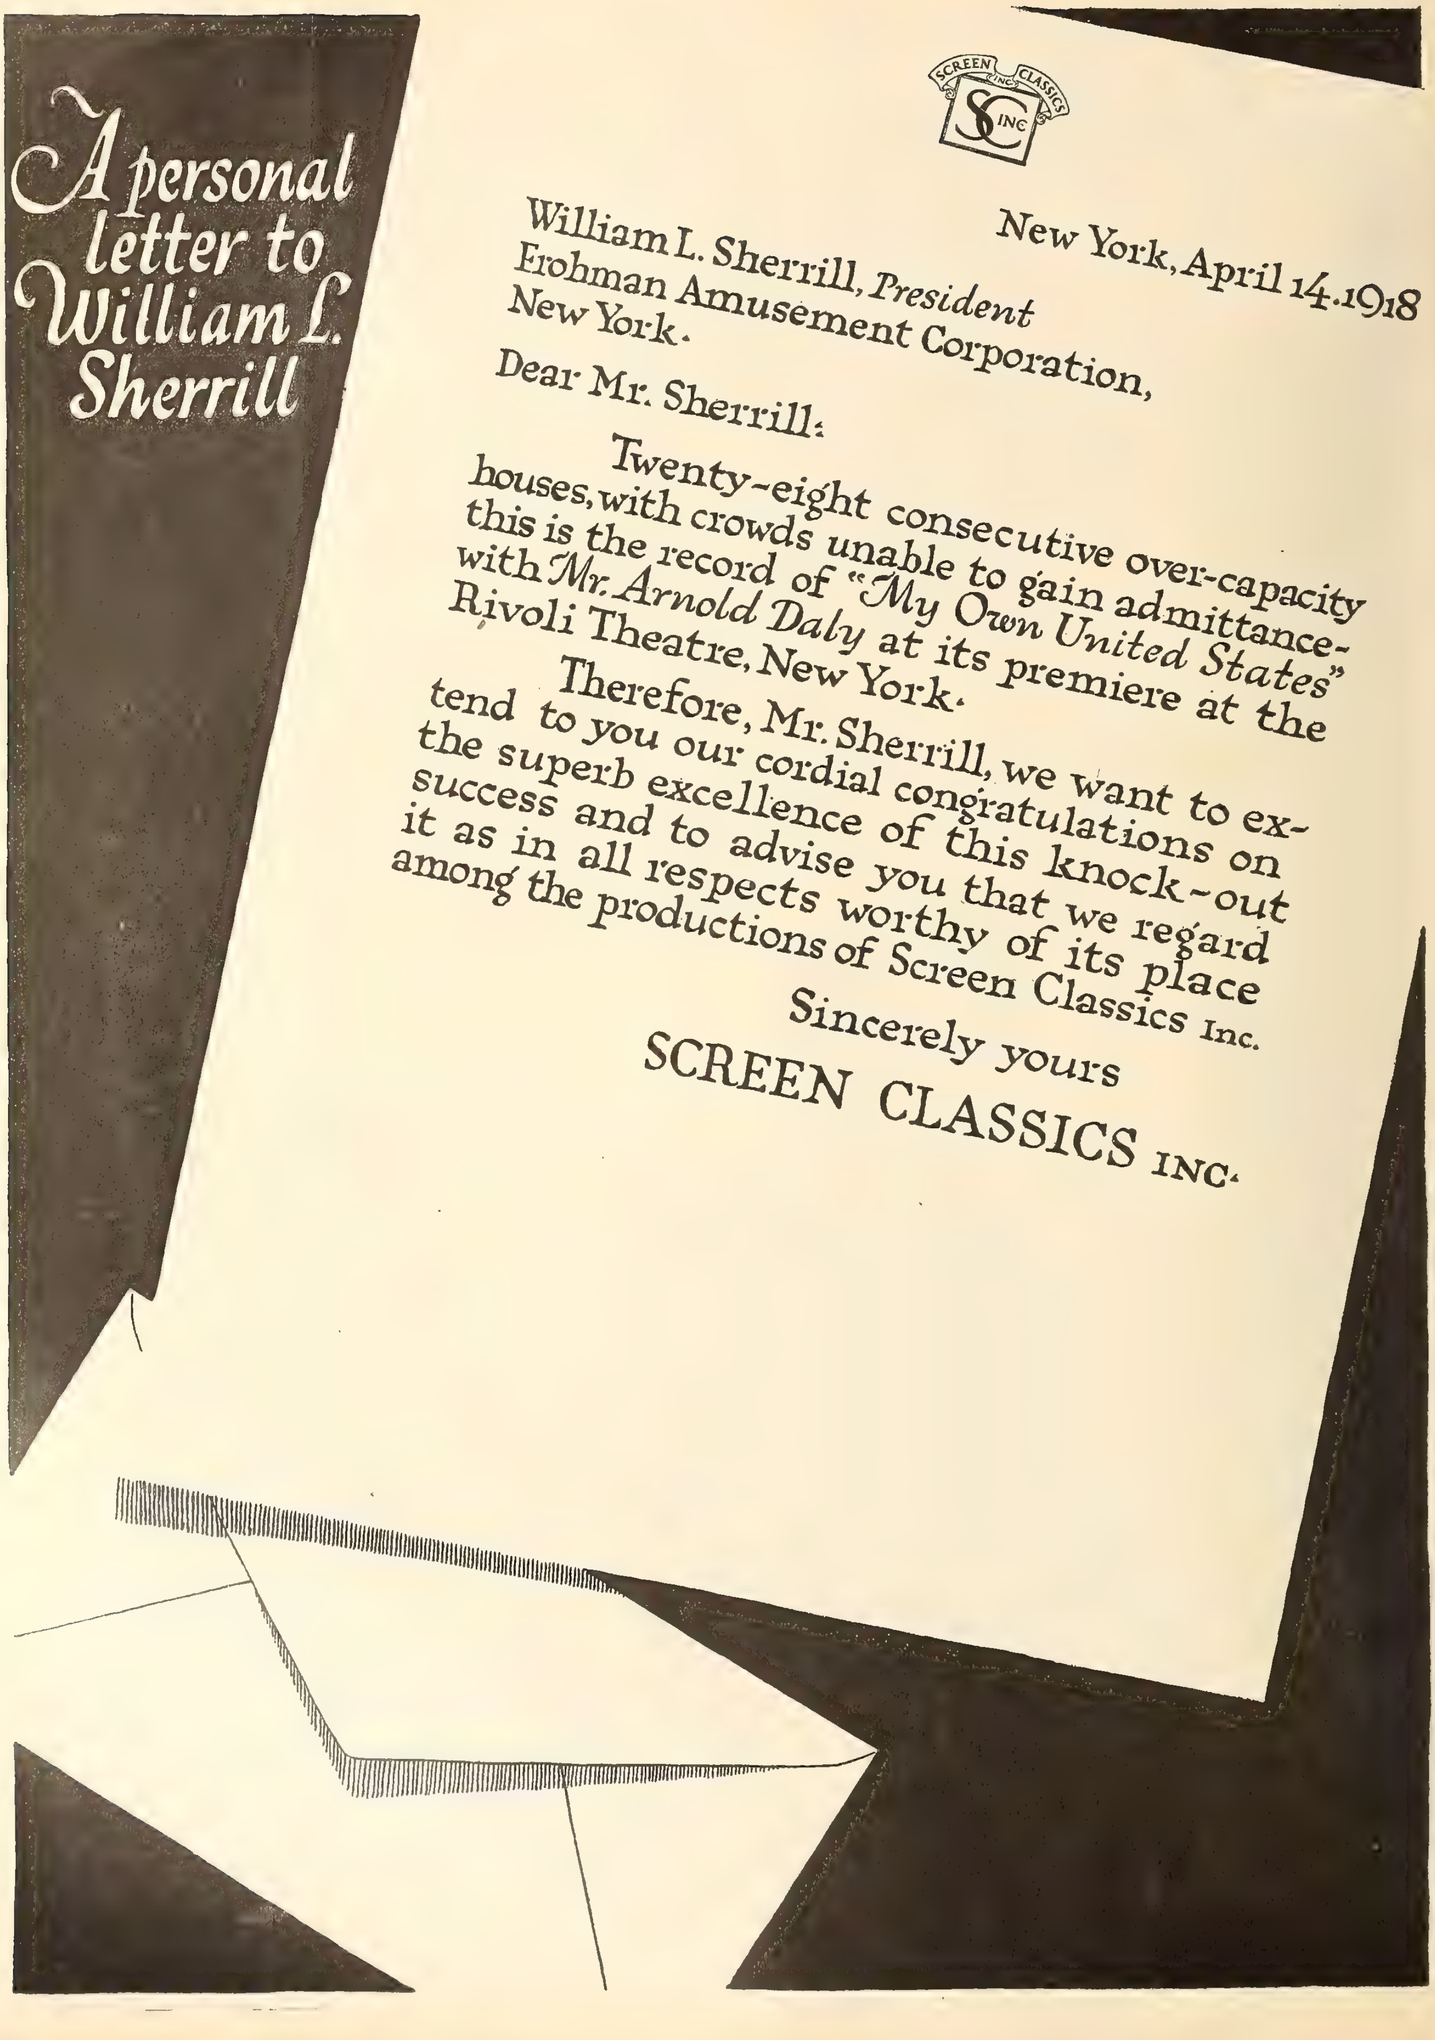
Adapted by June Mathis and Luther A. Reed and directed by William S. Davis in Five acts of exceptional charm.

Released by METRO PICTURES CORPORATION APRIL 15.

MAXWELL KARGER Manager of Productions



A personal letter to William L. Sherrill

SCREEN CLASSICS INC.

New York, April 14. 1918

William L. Sherrill, President
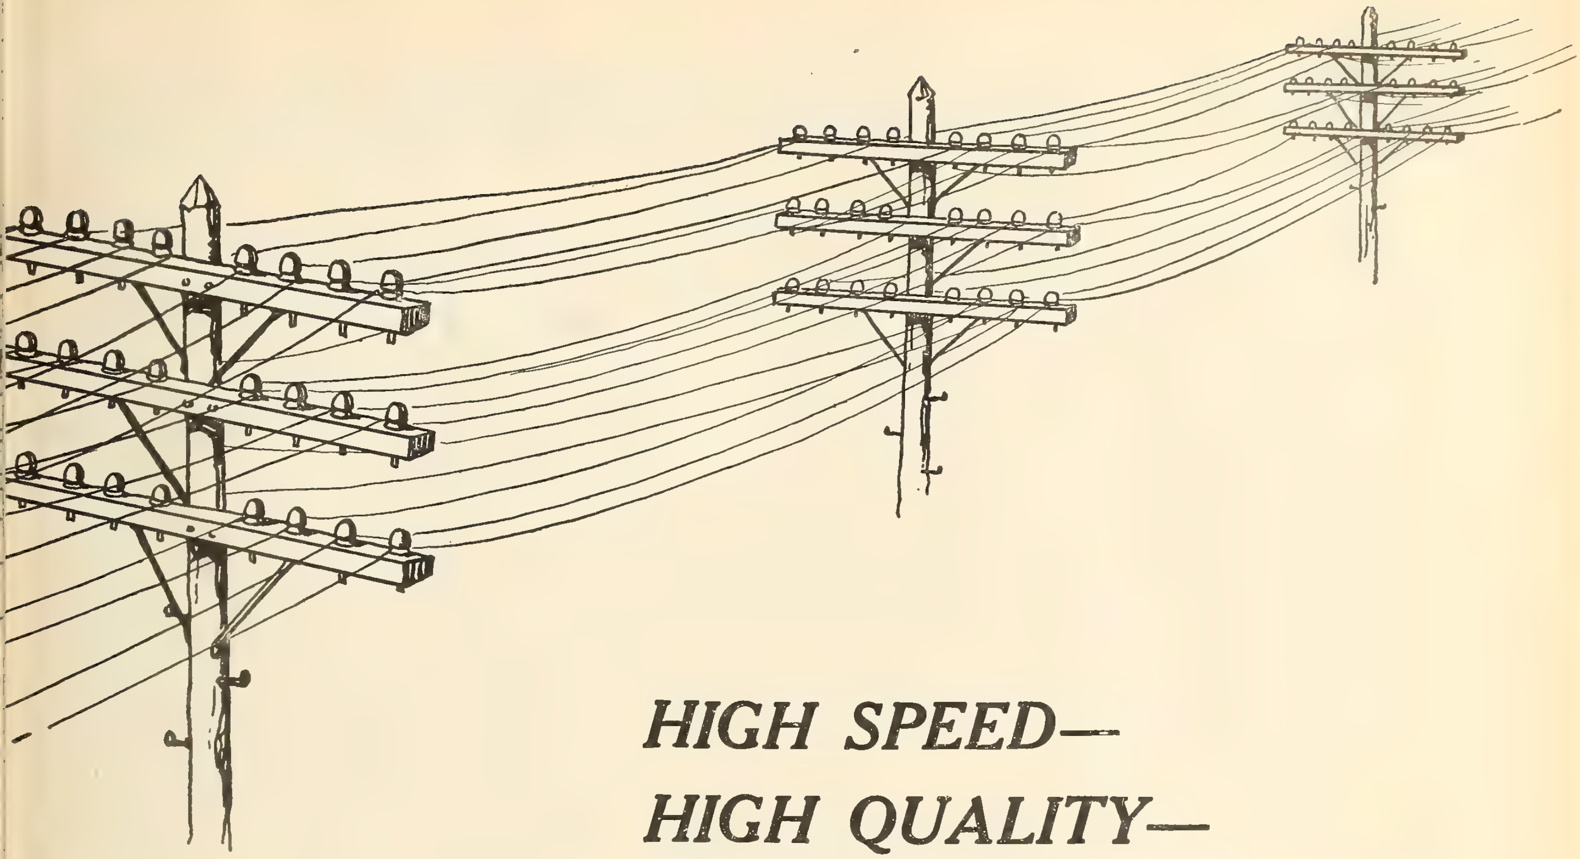
Frohman Amusement Corporation,
New York.

Dear Mr. Sherrill:

Twenty-eight consecutive over-capacity houses, with crowds unable to gain admittance—this is the record of "My Own United States" with Mr. Arnold Daly at its premiere at the Rivoli Theatre, New York.

Therefore, Mr. Sherrill, we want to extend to you our cordial congratulations on the superb excellence of this knock-out success and to advise you that we regard it as in all respects worthy of its place among the productions of Screen Classics Inc.

Sincerely yours
SCREEN CLASSICS INC.



HIGH SPEED—
HIGH QUALITY—
WIDEST NEWS SOURCES

Three thousand screens demonstrate twice a week the superiority of the

SCREEN TELEGRAM

At all exchanges of the
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION

Goldwyn Pictures

THESE GREAT EXHIBITORS KNEW A REAL STAR THE MOMENT THEY SAW HER.

"IN my nine years as an exhibitor"—says J. A. Clemmer, the big Seattle exhibitor—"I was never so sure of a star's future as I was of Madge Kennedy. Now she proves everything I predicted for her in 'The Danger Game.'"

Aaron J. Jones, Chicago's great exhibitor-magnate, says: "There are not more than three stars of the screen who equal or exceed the box-office drawing power of Madge Kennedy in Chicago and surrounding territory. She is the most profitable 'discovery' of the screen in the past two years. 'The Danger Game' is a wonder."

Nathan Ascher, head of Ascher Bros.' chain of theatres, says: "What I previously wrote you about Madge Kennedy in 'The Danger Game' was really mild. We ran it at our best theatres yesterday and the audiences enjoyed it better than any picture shown in months. Our business in three houses where Madge Kennedy was billed was record-breaking . . . We are very happy with Goldwyn Pictures."

Robert Lieber, Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, the most powerful exhibitor of the Central West, says: "I knew Madge Kennedy was a winner the moment I first saw her in 'Baby Mine.' Every resource at our command was employed to introduce her properly to Indianapolis. In 'The Danger Game' she sets a wonderful pace in melodramatic comedy."

J. A. Quinn, owner of the Rialto, Los Angeles, and one of the alert and able showmen of the industry, says: "In Los Angeles school girls and high school girls are just crazy about Madge Kennedy. You know what that means . . . She is made; she is one of the most splendid discoveries of the screen."

What we have quoted from five big exhibitors is now being said by thousands of others throughout America.

Popularity with the public has established Madge Kennedy's box-office popularity with exhibitors. Are you playing her pictures in your theatre?

Her Newest Picture:

MADGE KENNEDY

in THE DANGER GAME

By Roy Somerville
Directed by Harry Pollard

GOLDWYN PICTURES CORPORATION

Samuel Goldfish, President Edgar Selwyn, Vice President
16 East 42nd Street New York City

REX BEACH PICTURES

ALL through the night, under a dim half-moon brave Dave Law watched General Longorio's federal soldiers dig his own grave.

In the hacienda nearby was his bride-to-be, beautiful Alaire Austin, who would be forced to wed this wily Mexican leader.

But Dave Law was not buried in a Mexican grave and Alaire Austin escaped with the man she loved.

How—as well as a thousand other thrills—you encounter only when you see the greatest American author's biggest screen production.

REX BEACH'S

Screen Classic of the Great Southwest

HEART of the SUNSET

Directed by Frank Powell

Now Ready for Immediate Release

GOLDWYN DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION
16 East 42nd Street New York City

CAPITOL COMEDIES

For Nation-wide Release Beginning Monday, May 6.

THE surest-fire comedian in the cleanest, funniest and fastest comedies now available in the entire industry.

Twenty-six two-reel comedies a year—One Every Second Monday. Destined at once to take the place of less popular and less clever comedies you have been obliged to book.

Goldwyn places its stamp of indorsement on and predicts that

"SMILING BILL" PARSONS

in

CAPITOL COMEDIES

will be an instaneous "hit" and popular favorite with the millions of fun-loving Americans.

The first three "Smiling Bill" Parsons Comedies are:

"Bill's Baby"	Released May 6
"Bill's Predicament"	Released May 20
"Birds of a Feather"	Released June 3

Write or wire at once to your nearest Goldwyn office for prices and playing dates.

GOLDWYN DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION
16 East 42nd Street New York City

"Blue Blood"
"Social Ambition"
"Honor's Cross"

"GIVE US THE THRILLS OF LIFE!"

MILLIONS of Americans demand "punch" and power in screen drama and exhibitors instantly convey this public demand to the producers of motion pictures. Goldwyn is fortunate in having obtained three virile Selexart productions filled to the brim with dramatic power and box-office strength; productions made by the same skilled forces that have just produced the successful "Carmen of the Klondike." You can book under one contract for immediate presentation:

The picture that reveals the ruin and disaster caused by a tainted ancestry—a drama of a woman's greed for power and wealth, starring:

HOWARD HICKMAN
in Blue Blood

by J. Grubb Alexander Directed by Elliott Howe

A gripping drama of a young girl's fight against the powers that prey, starring again after a long absence from the screen:

RHEA MITCHELL
in
Honor's Cross

by H. B. Daniel Directed by Wallace Worsley

Another drama of Alaskan dance-halls, and a girl's struggle to reclaim a man who had lost his grip on life. Another big money-getter like "Carmen of the Klondike" and "The Flame of the Yukon"—with the two popular stars:

RHEA MITCHELL
and
HOWARD HICKMAN
in Social Ambition

by W. E. Wing Directed by Wallace Worsley

Prints and accessories of these productions are in all Goldwyn offices and exhibitors who have seen them pronounce these Selexart pictures to be among the best box-office bets of the Spring season. Write or telegraph your nearest Goldwyn branch for playing dates.

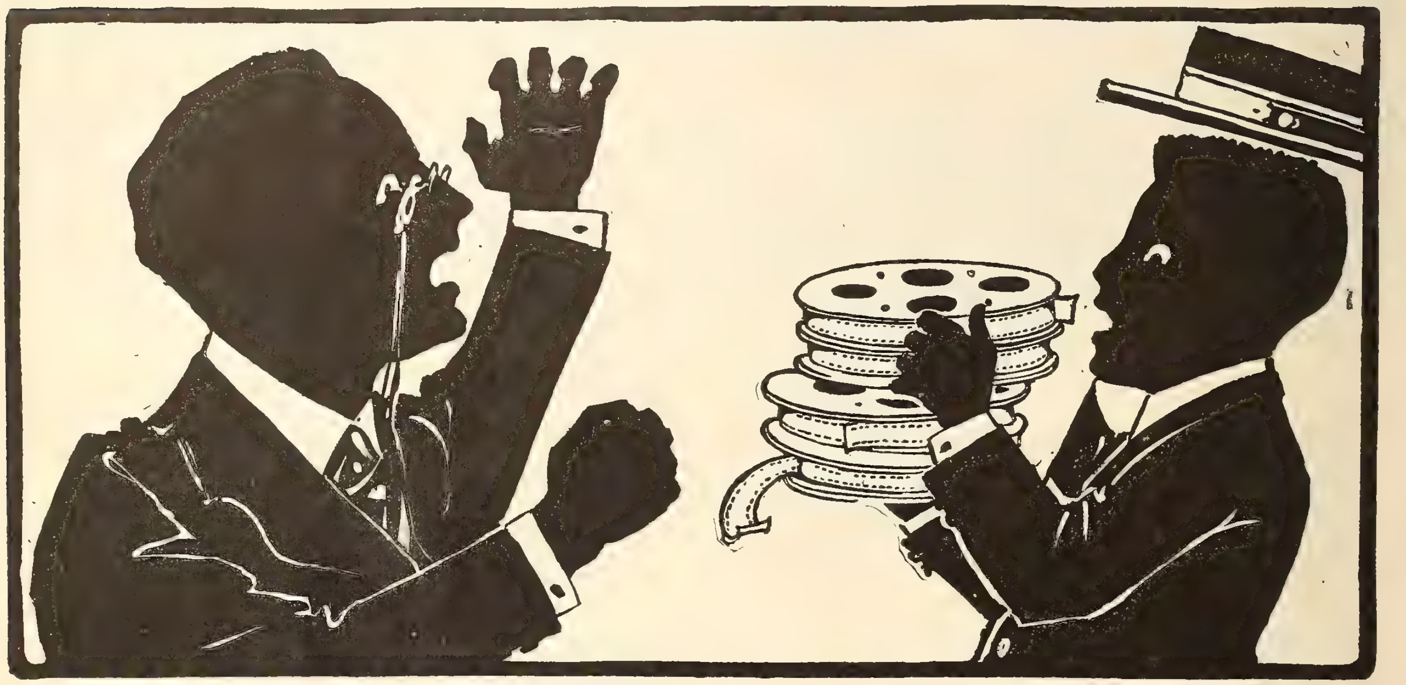
GOLDWYN DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION
16 East 42nd Street New York City

"Little Talks with Foreign Buyers"
—No. 9

By

Paul H Cromelin

President



"MADERNELL!"

HERE'S the single word that describes the feelings of foreign film buyers who get their American films from exporters whose main possession is "a desk and a map of the world." Inter-Ocean's main asset is its knowledge of the needs of the foreign market, plus its ability to successfully cater to those needs AND ITS FACILITIES FOR THIS. No shipping delays for Inter-Ocean customers. No invoice bother. No poster and advertising shortages. And finally—nojunk! Just the best of America's new films, with stories that are appreciated in each customer's territory and with stars like—

ETHEL CLAYTON
ALICE BRADY
CARLYLE BLACKWELL
JUNE ELVIDGE
MADGE EVANS
(World Pictures)

BESSIE BARRISCALE
J. WARREN KERRIGAN
HENRY B. WALTHALL
LOUISE GLAUM
CHARLES GUNN
(Paralta Plays)

If American films are worth having, they are worth having right. Avoid export worries by getting the pick of American films through the house that has made foreign buyers' representation a science.

INTER-OCEAN FILM CORPORATION

PAUL H. CROMELIN
PRES. & GEN'L MGR.

220 W. 42ND ST.
NEW YORK CITY

"WE OPERATE EVERYWHERE"—LARGEST DISTRIBUTORS OF FILMS IN FOREIGN FIELDS

READY FOR WORLD SALE—52 World Films a year, featuring Ethel Clayton, Clara Kimball Young, Alice Brady, Carlyle Blackwell and June Elvidge; 24 Paralta Plays a year, featuring Bessie Barriscale, J. Warren Kerrigan, Henry B. Walthall and Louise Glaum; the great features, "Whither Thou Goest," "Today," "Mad Lover," "Hunting Big Game in the Frozen North," "The 13th Labor of Hercules"; the surefire comedy brands, Vim, Black Diamond, Bingo, "Charley" (Mabel and Fatty) cartoons.

LOUISE GLAUM

PARALTA PLAYS

PICK OF THE PICTURES

BESSIE BARRISCALE

CURRENT ISSUE

BESSIE BARRISCALE

in

"BLINDFOLDED"

Directed by
Raymond B. West

Written by
E. Richard Schayer

Robert Brunton, Manager of Productions

All the preachers and "uplifters" in the world
couldn't possibly do for the little she-cracksman,
Peggy Muldoon,
what a small volume of Emerson's Essays
did for her.
She read.
And thence she proved that one female burglar could become a woman good and true!

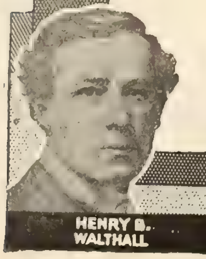
PARALTA PLAYS, Inc.

8 WEST 48th STREET
NEW YORK CITY

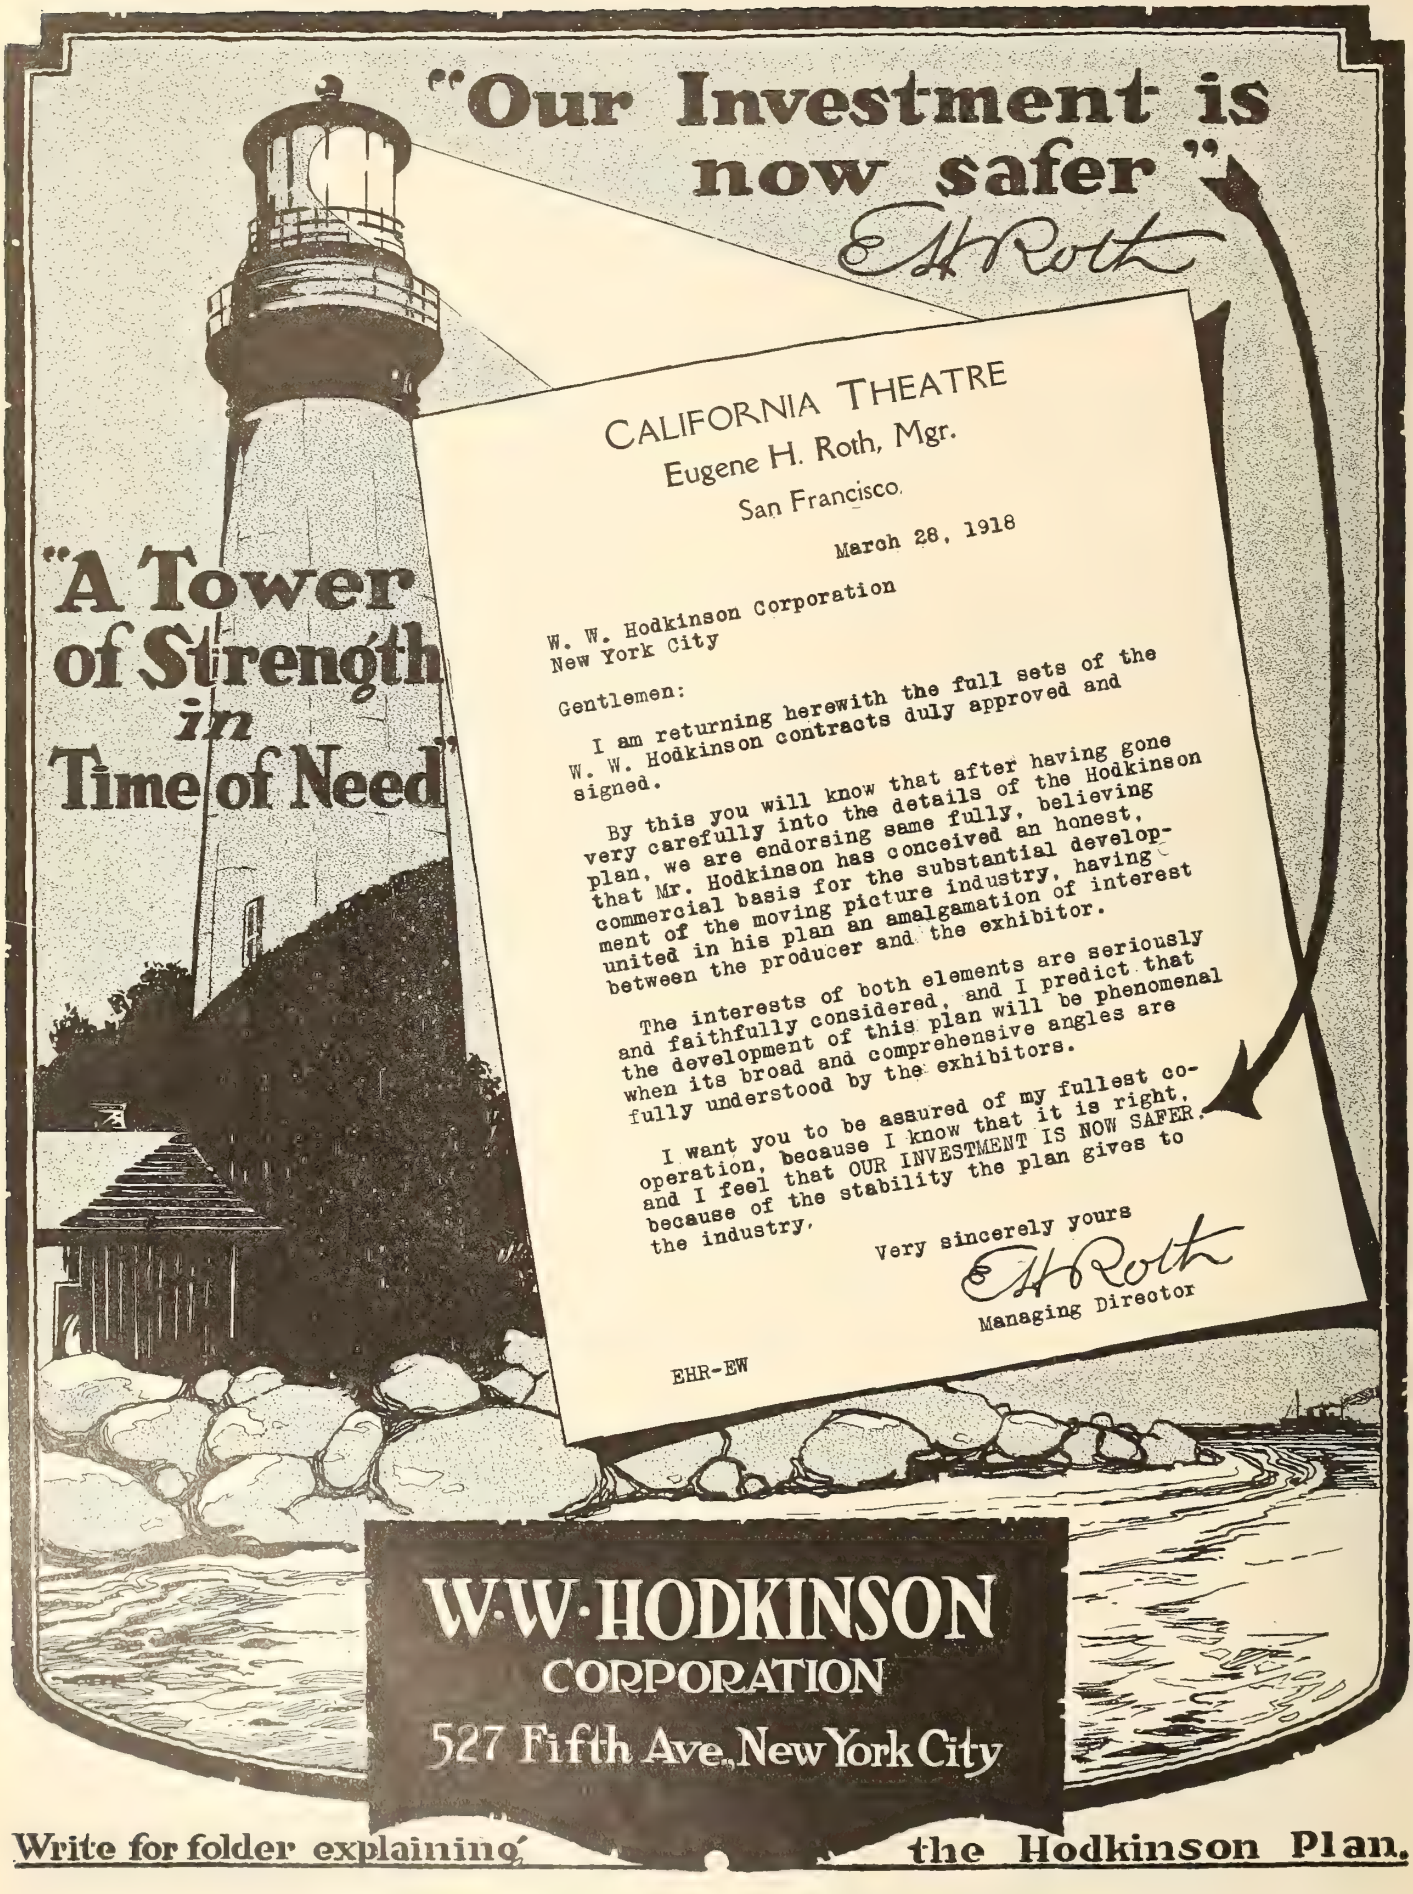
Foreign Distributors: Inter-Ocean Film Corporation.

Canadian Distributors: Globe Films, Ltd.



DISTRIBUTED THROUGH
"HODKINSON SERVICE"
AT ALL GENERAL FILM EXCHANGES

J. WARREN KERRIGAN



"Our Investment is now safer"
E H Roth
"A Tower of Strength in Time of Need"

CALIFORNIA THEATRE
Eugene H. Roth, Mgr.
San Francisco.

March 28, 1918

W. W. Hodkinson Corporation
New York City

Gentlemen:

I am returning herewith the full sets of the W. W. Hodkinson contracts duly approved and signed.

By this you will know that after having gone very carefully into the details of the Hodkinson plan, we are endorsing same fully, believing that Mr. Hodkinson has conceived an honest, commercial basis for the substantial development of the moving picture industry, having united in his plan an amalgamation of interest between the producer and the exhibitor.

The interests of both elements are seriously and faithfully considered, and I predict that the development of this plan will be phenomenal when its broad and comprehensive angles are fully understood by the exhibitors.

I want you to be assured of my fullest co-operation, because I know that it is right, and I feel that OUR INVESTMENT IS NOW SAFER because of the stability the plan gives to the industry.

Very sincerely yours
E H Roth
Managing Director

EHR-EW

W·W·HODKINSON
CORPORATION
527 Fifth Ave., New York City

Write for folder explaining the Hodkinson Plan.

LOUISE GLAUM

PARALTA PLAYS

PICK OF THE PICTURES

BESSIE BARRISCALE

Current Iſſue

Louise Glaum

in

Wallace Worsley
Direction

"An Alien Enemy"

Robert Brunton
Mgr. Productions

Conceived and written by MONTE M. KATTERJOHN

A razor cuts deep;
but turns at a slight obstruction,
because there is little substance
backing its thin edge.
Let's have a Cleaver
with keen edge and heavy back.
Our Boys in France
are the cutting edge.
Now we must weld
a mighty back.
Three Billion Dollars worth of Liberty Bonds will do it.
And the chain forged by our enemies to enslave Civilization
we will hew assunder
with that perfect Cleaver!
You'll find the Reason Why
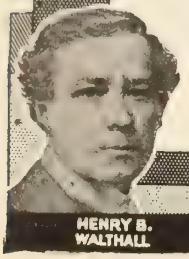
in"An Alien Enemy."

PARALTA PLAYS, Inc.

Eight West Forty-eighth Street
New York City

Foreign Distributors: Inter-Ocean Film Corp.
Canadian Distributors: Globe Films Ltd.



DISTRIBUTED THROUGH
"HODKINSON SERVICE"
AT ALL GENERAL FILM EXCHANGES

J. WARREN KERRIGAN

GENERAL FILM COMPANY

EBONY COMEDIES

Honest-to-John Laugh Producers that Appeal to Fans of All Tastes and Ages

Showmanship means suiting the majority. EBONY COMEDIES—with their novel presentation of real negro players beaming with quaint racial happiness—please every audience.

Every picture theatre now can have a "colored act" on its bill, just as every vaudeville house carries one as an indispensable feature. It is a reliable box-office help. Book the series—beginning with:

- A BLACK SHERLOCK HOLMES
- SPYING THE SPY
- THE PORTERS
- A MILK FED HERO
- A BUSTED ROMANCE
- SPOOKS

Produced by EBONY FILM CORPORATION Chicago

Distributed by General Film Company, New York
Thirty Exchanges

GENERAL FILM COMPANY

The Thrill Serial for Patriotic Audiences

A DAUGHTER of UNCLE SAM

with JANE VANCE
and William Sorelle

The sensational spy serial—the most timely picture of the day.

It has abolished the "No Man's Land" of poor business for hundreds of showmen.

It is doing for the wise exhibitor what the Liberty Loan is doing for the war. Put your box-office in the first line trenches of prosperity now.

Twelve Episodes
One Reel Each

Produced by the JAXON FILM CORPORATION, New York City

Distributed by General Film Company, New York

THIRTY EXCHANGES

BUY A LIBERTY BOND

TRIANGLE

The REAL Tax

THE REAL TAX is not altogether the REEL Tax.

The REAL Tax is levied before you ever receive the picture. It is frequently levied in the sumptuous offices of picture promoters who handle stars and who spend their time in the manipulation of pictures.

It is levied when promoter and so-called star get together and exact hundreds of thousands a year from a producer for the reputation that the star has,—or is supposed to have.

This tax is then added to the cost of the film rented to the exhibitor. The exhibitor, carried away by the sound of the promoter's voice, the supposed reputation of the wonderful star, the glowing tales of a press agent and the big, black display type in advertisements, rushes into the pit especially dug for him by the promoter.

There is also another REAL tax.

That is the tax levied by what is politely called competition, but which in reality is merely artificially promoted cut-throat bidding.

That is the tax which the exhibitor pays when he is forced to bid against his brother exhibitor to get a picture which he thinks he should run, but which if he does show, usually means a loss to him. Both exhibitors shove up the price by their mutual bidding until neither is able to make money.

There is still another REAL tax.

That is the tax in unjustified expenses and waste, found at so many motion picture studios. It is the waste which comes from irresponsibility, from lack of executive talent, from the domineering tactics of stars who show up any old time, keep a big force waiting for them and thus eat up the bank balance by their idleness.

TRIANGLE

But the greatest tax of all comes at the box office when these pictures, so sensationally touted, fail to draw the money to cover the exhibitor's investment.

These are REAL Taxes—the taxes of " STAR " salaries, Competitive Bidding, Mismanagement—all of which lead to Box Office Loss for the exhibitor.

TRIANGLE service is the salvation for exhibitors who believe the exhibition of motion pictures is a legitimate business, who believe that they are entitled to a reasonable profit and who believe that they should not be forced to pay these REAL taxes.

As far as the REEL tax is concerned, TRIANGLE has borne it since its inception by the government, and is still maintaining the policy of not passing it on to the exhibitor.

TRIANGLE pictures are drawing the crowds and pleasing exhibitors. This is due to human interest stories, excellent production and proper casts of players. Hundreds of enthusiastic letters from exhibitors are positive proof of the soundness of the TRIANGLE policy.

TRIANGLE plays absolutely fair and square with each exhibitor.

TRIANGLE prices enable every exhibitor to make money.

TRIANGLE co-operation is a powerful force for success.

Every new TRIANGLE exhibitor means one more protest registered against the REAL tax extortions of the industry.

Cast your ballot for TRIANGLE.

TRIANGLE DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION

1457 BROADWAY :: :: NEW YORK

William Fox presents

WILLIAM FARNUM

IN

True Blue

Written and staged by Frank Lloyd.

STANDARD
PICTURES

FOX
FILM CORPORATION

William Fox presents

WILLIAM FARNUM

IN

True Blue

Written and staged by Frank Lloyd.

STANDARD PICTURES

FOX FILM CORPORATION

The SUPREME SENSATION

FILMED BY WILLIAM FOX- NOW READY!
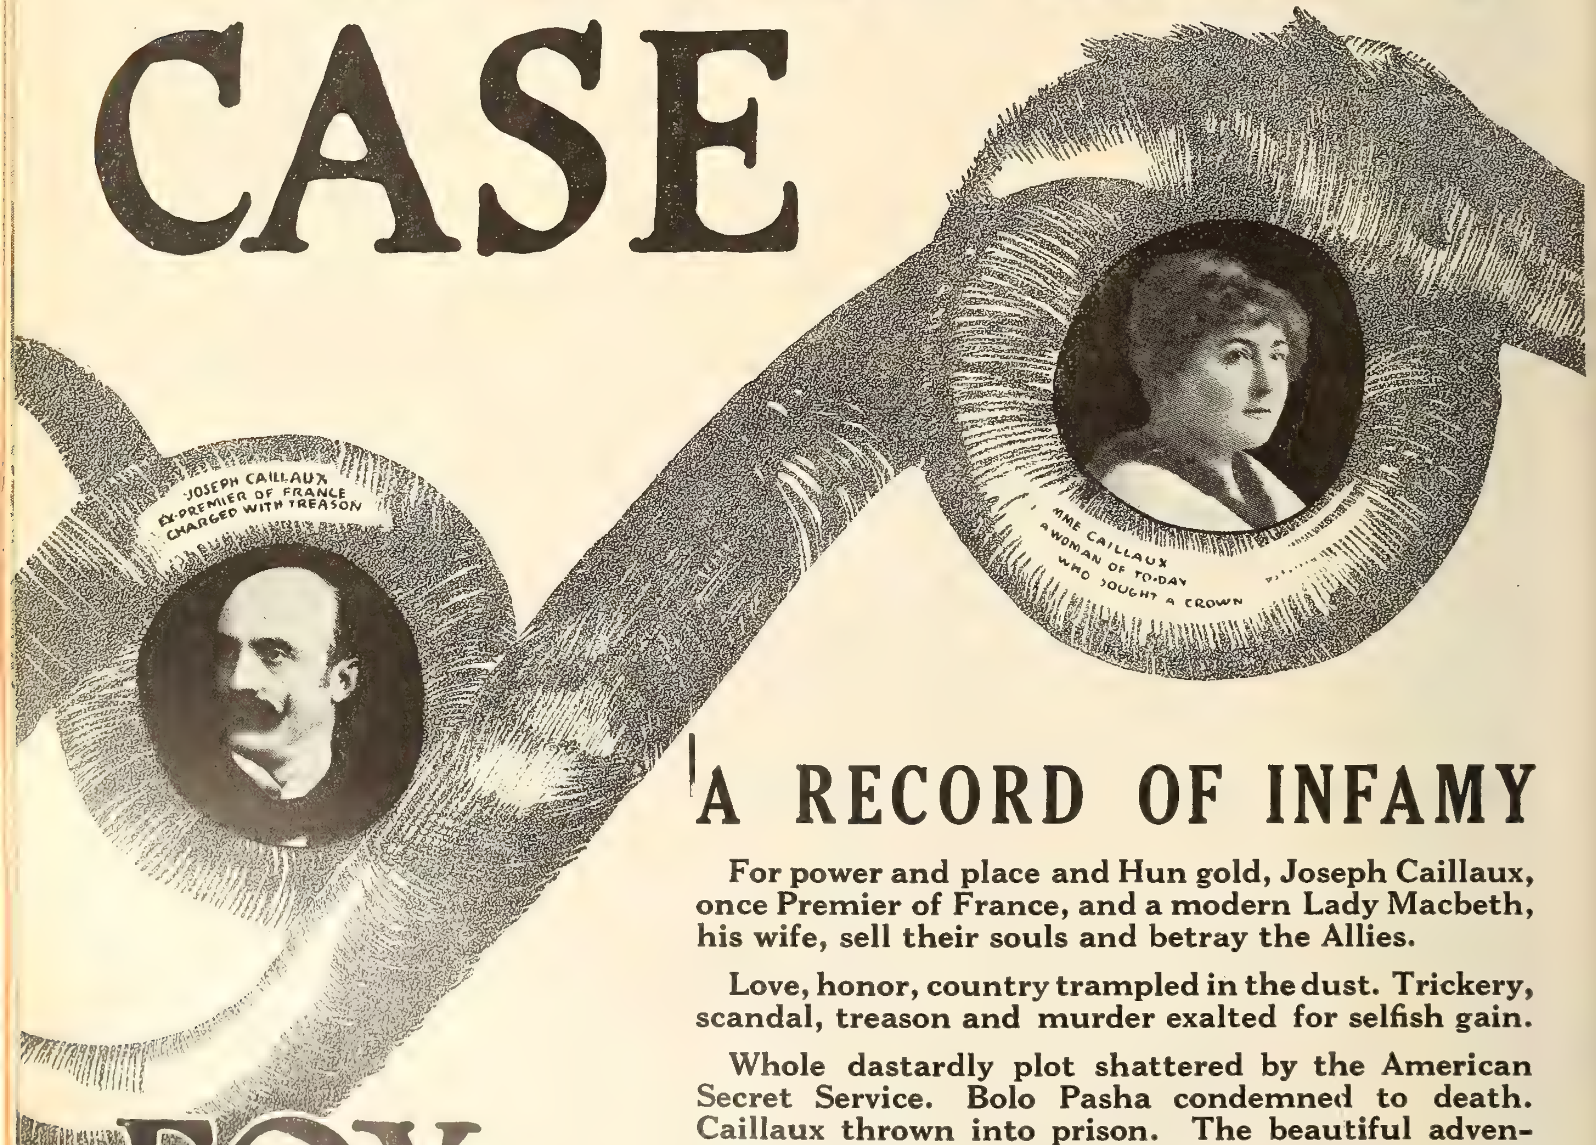
WILL REVELATIONS STRIKE AMERICANS?
WHO TOOK THE KAISER'S PROPAGANDA MONEY?

The CAILLAUX CASE



JOSEPH CAILLAUX
EX-PREMIER OF FRANCE
CHARGED WITH TREASON
MME CAILLAUX
A WOMAN OF TO-DAY WHO SOUGHT A CROWN

A RECORD OF INFAMY

For power and place and Hun gold, Joseph Caillaux, once Premier of France, and a modern Lady Macbeth, his wife, sell their souls and betray the Allies.

Love, honor, country trampled in the dust. Trickery, scandal, treason and murder exalted for selfish gain.

Whole dastardly plot shattered by the American Secret Service. Bolo Pasha condemned to death. Caillaux thrown into prison. The beautiful adventuress scorned and abhorred by an outraged people.

Truth stranger than fiction—and a hundred times more thrilling!

FOX
FILM CORPORATION

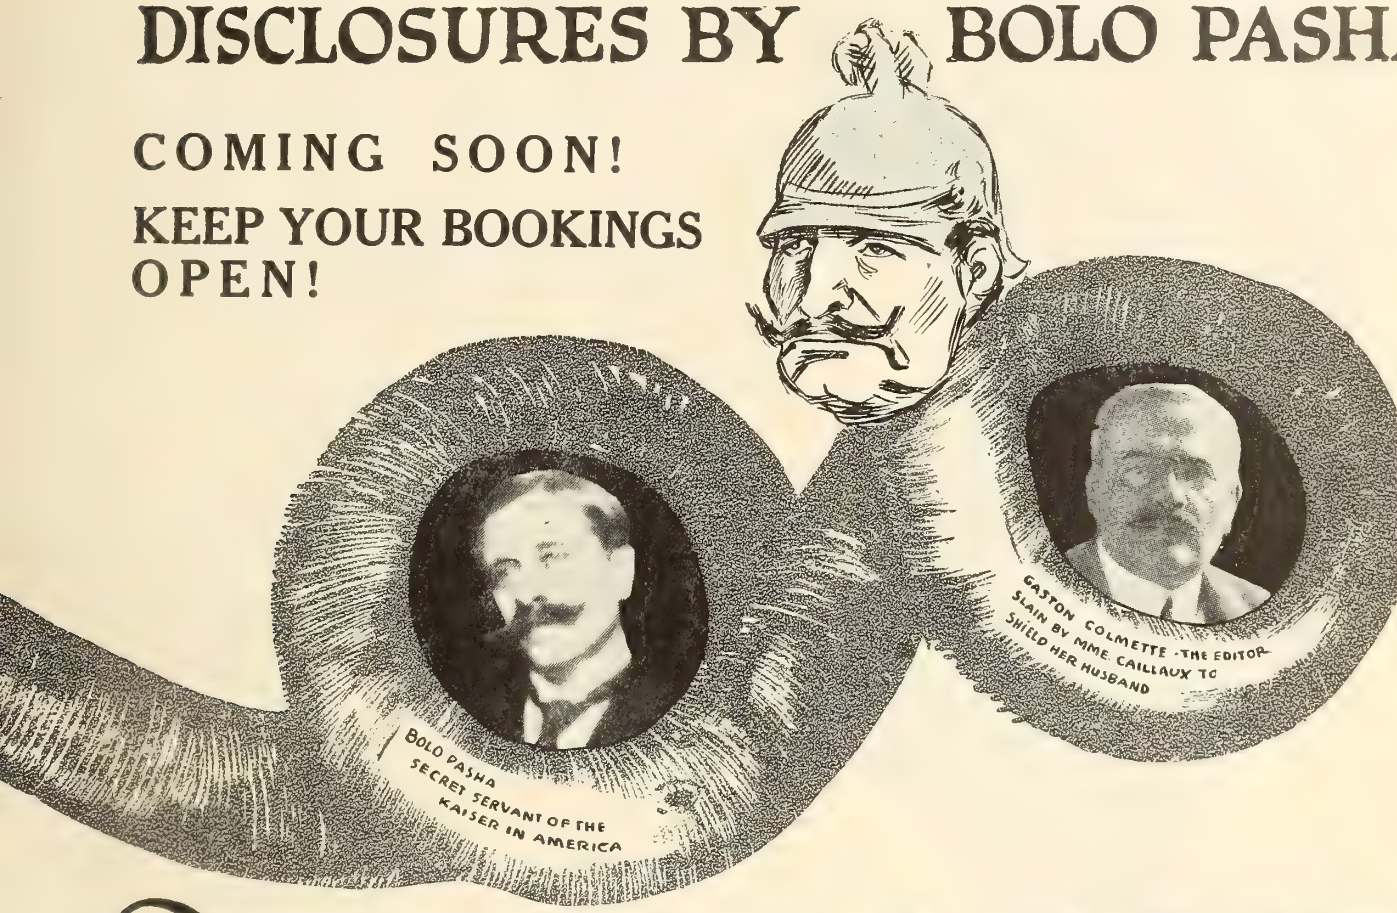
OF MODERN TIMES

RELEASE DATE POSTPONED!

CABLES FROM PARIS INDICATE AMAZING DISCLOSURES BY BOLO PASHA!

COMING SOON!

KEEP YOUR BOOKINGS OPEN!



GASTON COLMETTE - THE EDITOR SLAIN BY MME. CAILLAUX TO SHIELD HER HUSBAND
BOLO PASHA SECRET SERVANT OF THE KAISER IN AMERICA

The CAILLAUX CASE

WILL REVEAL ALL

Bolo's execution has been postponed to permit further confessions that threaten to involve other world figures and affect the course of the War.

This master film will expose every character, every event, every intrigue and scandal of the Caillaux ring.

Directed by Richard Stanton and played by an all-star cast. Settings exact duplicates of original scenes.

Watch the cables and the press! Communicate today with your nearest Fox Exchange for bookings!

STANDARD PICTURES

FOX

FILM CORPORATION

Pathé

© FANNIE WARD

FRANK KEENAN

ALL REPORTS TO THE CONTRARY PATHÉ WILL CONTINUE TO RELEASE FEATURE PICTURES OF THE HIGHEST GRADE!

The rumor has been spread, and presumably by persons who are not disinterested, that Pathé would discontinue the release of feature pictures.

The rumor has no basis of truth.

Pathé will continue to release features of the highest quality.

Pathé will continue to serve the exhibitor by giving him quality productions at a reasonable price.

Pathé invites the attention of exhibitors to the exceptional attractions listed on the opposite page, all of which are features which will be released during the coming months.

BESSIE LOVE

BRYANT WASHBURN

IRENE CASTLE

Pathé

PATHÉ HAS NOW, EITHER FINISHED OR IN THE MAKING, A A SUPPLY OF FEATURES SUFFICIENT FOR THE NEXT SIX MONTHS

Among them are the following;

FANNIE WARD in "A Japanese Nightingale"
"The Yellow Ticket"
"The Narrow Path"

FRANK KEENAN in "The Bells"
"More Trouble"

BESSIE LOVE in "A Little Sister of Everybody"
"How Could You Caroline?"
"Carolyn of the Corners"

BRYANT WASHBURN in "The Range Rider"
"Kidder & Ko"
"The Whistling Man"
"All Wrong"

IRENE CASTLE in "The First Law"
"The Girl From Bohemia"

GLADYS HULETTE in "Annexing Bill"
"The Waif"

BABY MARIE OSBORNE in "Dolly Does Her Bit"
"The Soul of a Child"
"The Evidence"

Pathé invites comparison by exhibitors between the attractions listed above and competing productions on the basis of quality and price.

GLADYS HULETTE
BABY MARIE OSBORNE
CREIGHTON HALE

WILLIAM A. BRADY

ANNOUNCES

That during the next twelve months he will confine his motion picture activities to the production on the screen of the following great plays:

WAY DOWN EAST

written by Lottie Blair Parker, elaborated by Jos. R. Grismer. Played nineteen consecutive years in American theatres.

LIFE

by Thompson Buchanan and William A. Brady. "The biggest melodrama ever staged in New York City."—N. Y. Sun.

LITTLE WOMEN

from Louisa Alcott's great book—more copies of it printed in forty years than anything Charles Dickens ever wrote.

CHEER BOYS, CHEER

A famous Drury Lane melodrama by the authors of "The Whip."

SINNERS

By Owen Davis—Ran a year at the Playhouse, New York City.

FIVE IN A YEAR. ALL BIG.

Sold to territorial buyers.

For full particulars write

M. WEISSBERG

WILLIAM A. BRADY'S PLAYHOUSE

137 WEST 48th STREET NEW YORK CITY

Facts Pertaining to

WILLIAM A. BRADY'S

Big Picture

"STOLEN ORDERS"

It is finished It is in 8 reels

The principal characters are acted by 6 well known stars

KITTY GORDON
JUNE ELVIDGE
MADGE EVANS

CARLYLE BLACKWELL
MONTAGU LOVE
GEORGE MacQUARRIE

and 10,000 others of lesser repute

A companion picture to " The Whip," written by the same authors—Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton. Staged by Arthur Collins. Originally produced at the Drury Lane Theatre, London, where it has been revived five times since the commencement of the War. Now made into a motion picture by Harley Knoles, assisted by George Kelson, at a cost exceeding $150,000.

You remember " The Whip," don't you? It is said to be the one picture made in recent years that coined money the world over for everyone that touched it.

Those experts who have seen " Stolen Orders " in the rough declare it to be a better picture than " The Whip."

It is full of snap, has no padding, keeps you on edge from start to finish, tells a story of love, intrigue, conspiracy, adventure, war, diplomacy, mystery, crime and hate—in fact, just three serials packed into eight sizzling reels of picture punches.

Sir William Jury has offered $60,000 for the rights in Great Britain.

It will be first shown in a Broadway Theatre about May 1st.

It is for sale to territorial buyers the World over.

For full particulars write

M. WEISSBERG

WILLIAM A. BRADY'S PLAYHOUSE
137 WEST 48th STREET NEW YORK CITY

"HIS DAUGHTER PAYS"

THE BIGGEST OFFERING
OF 1918
FEATURING THE INCOMPARABLE

GERTRUDE McCOY

AND A NOTED
CAST

FOR TERRITORIAL RIGHTS
APPLY
TO

PIEDMONT PICTURES CORPORATION

729 SEVENTH AVE.
NEW YORK CITY
LONDON PARIS

PHONE BRYANT 7046

"Outing-Chester Pictures"

(TRAVEL SCENICS)

Booked in Entirety by Harold Edel, Managing Director of the

Strand Theatre

New York City

This action follows the highest praise ever accorded any scenic or educational pictures by the trade's expert critics

There Is the Real Breath of Nature in These, the Tang of the Great Out-Doors, the Realness of Life, the Pulsing Bigness of the World That Will Thrill and Move Everyone.

Issued in Single Reels—One a Week—Starting April 22

Produced by

C. L. Chester In Co-operation with "Outing"

The Outdoor Life and Sporting Magazine of America

Read what the trade papers say about these wonderful releases:

They are quite the best scenic and travel pictures that have been presented in some time. Both as to photography and genuine interest, they stand out far above the ordinary. Tinting of the highest grade.
—Exhibitors Trade Review.

They show the touch of a practised hand. Films of this kind give the best answer why moving pictures are popular. —Sunday Telegraph.

Pronounced winners. Unusually dramatic and interesting. The material is decidedly out of the ordinary. "Corking!" It is the only word that covers adequately the mingled amusement, pleasure and genuine interest with which we viewed the "Outing-Chester" pictures. —Motion Picture News.

The "Outing-Chester" series give promise of setting a new standard for particularly worthwhile and interesting educational films. They should prove of the utmost value to exhibitors, and are a worthy addition to any program. —Dramatic Mirror.

Of unusual interest and good quality. More beautiful than pen can tell. Tinted and toned and subtitled in an entertaining as well as in an instructive manner. —Moving Picture World.

Mr. Chester has accomplished marvels. Worthwhile picture of great educational value; extremely interesting exhibition. —Billboard.

Works of art revealing little known wonders of nature. Entertainment and educational value of the series is unusually high. Everyone should see the "Outing-Chester" pictures. By all means don't miss them. —New York Review.

Communicate with

Jesse J. Goldburg

sole sales and exploitation representative.

Times Building Bryant—847 New York City

Congratulations Mr. McCormic

It will be copied all over America - to th

Whether it was your Patriotism, keen showmanship or the extra profits

the fact that

The Circle Theatre Indianapolis, Ind. is one of the three finest Theatres in America

FIRST NATIONAL EXHIBITORS CIRCUIT

Ambassador
JAMES W. GERARD
The American who defied the Kaiser

A "First National" Attraction

The Production that combines

MY FOUR YEARS

Produced by Mark M. Dintenfass and Harry M. Warner on your striking success!

immense advantage of countless exhibitors

You have given "My Four Years in Germany"

2 Weeks at The Circle

the first Attraction ever given longer than a week at your house, is a notable achievement.

And best of all, it is turning them away the second week

It takes nerve and real showmanship to successfully break a long established rule at such a theatre as the Circle — but you have demonstrated that "My Four Years in Germany" upsets all precedents — For which we thank you.

The First National Exhibitors Circuit
Inc.

Patriotism and Profits

IN GERMANY

Directed by William Nigh. Scenario by Chas A Logue

HERBERT BRENON'S MASTERPIECE

THE FALL OF THE ROMANOFFS

With Iliodor Himself

Carries a vital message to all Americans.

The maelstrom of intrigue and class hatred with the grim background of the great war upon which this remarkable picture is based—

The tale told and role enacted by Iliodor, who himself lived the feverish life of the Petrograd Court—

The consummate artistry with which it has been picturized by Herbert Brenon—

THESE MAKE A GREAT PICTURE

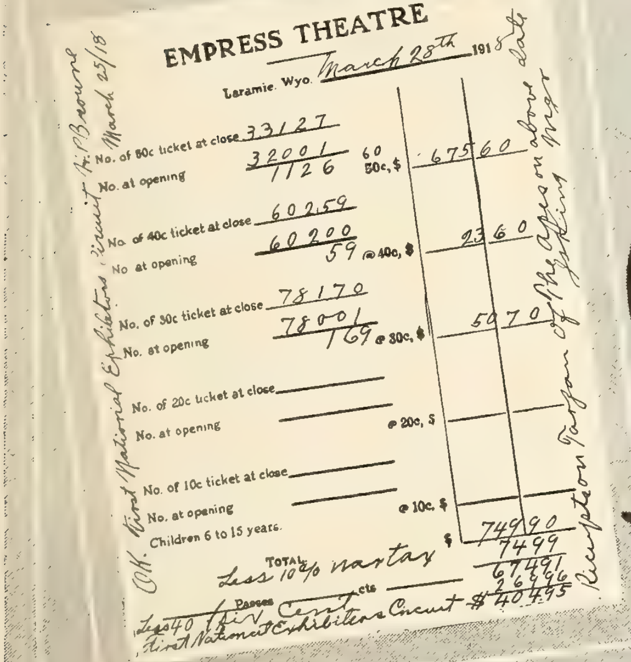
See It and You Will Run It

Your judgment as an exhibitor will tell you what it means to your theatre

FIRST NATIONAL EXHIBITORS CIRCUIT

A "FIRST NATIONAL" ATTRACTION

Look what Tarzan Took



EMPRESS THEATRE

Laramie. Wyo. March 28th 1918

No. of 50c ticket at close 33127
No. at opening 32001
1126 60 50c, $ 675 60

No. of 40c ticket at close 60259
No at opening 60200
59 @ 40c, $ 23 60

No. of 30c ticket at close 78170
No. at opening 78001
169 @ 30c, $ 50 70

No. of 20c ticket at close
No. at opening @ 20c, $

No. of 10c ticket at close
No. at opening @ 10c, $
Children 6 to 15 years.

TOTAL $ 749 90
Less 10% war tax 74 99
674 91
Passes cts 269 96
Less 40 per cent First National Exhibitors Circuit $404 95

O.K. First National Exhibitors Circuit H. P. Browne March 25/18

Receipts on Tarzan of The Apes on above date Sterling Mgr

at Laramie Wyoming population 4962

$749.40
in one day

Such business has never before been done by any Picture is smashing all records! accomplishing the impossible! It would get blood out of a turnip!

Tarzan of the Apes

Produced by the National Film Corp'n. of America
A "First National" Attraction
Book at any First National Exchange

An Announcement Exclusively Upon Pictures of

Robertson-Cole Company, of New York, London, Calcutta, Singapore and Sidney; and Arrow Film Corporation, of New York, control the rights of the motion pictures in the following schedule and offer them for your consideration.

"The Eagle's Eye"—There isn't any conversation capable of telling the world-appeal of the only great serial ever made. Produced by Wharton, of Ithaca, a name that spells volumes.

"The Woman Eternal"—A picture as big as all out-doors; as thrilling as primal impulses can make it; as charming as Elaine Hammerstein is. Advanced Pictures Corporation.

"The Struggle Everlasting"—Florence Reed at her best in Milton Royle's great play. A Harry Rapf masterpiece.

"The Eleventh Commandment"—A picture that sounds the depths of purest love and stirs every emotion. Starring Lucille Lee Stewart. Another production of Advanced Pictures Corporation.

"The Eyes of the World"—Harold Bell Wright's triumph in novel writing expressed on film in compelling pictures. Has played to $200,000. Produced by W. H. Clune, of Los Angeles.

"The Finger of Justice"—The story of "over the top" in the trenches of morality. The Biggest question answered in the biggest way. Done in pictures by Paul Smith of San Francisco.

"The Great White Trail"—A thrilling tale of the frozen wildernesses of Alaska. Tense melodrama in a novel setting. Wharton, Inc., made it up to their standard.

"The Accidental Honeymoon"—Captain Robert Warwick—now with Gen. Pershing—and delightful Elaine Hammerstien in a delicious drama of sustained interest to the end of the film. Harry Rapf's interesting contribution.

"Ramona"—Helen Hunt Jackson's wonderful story of humanity in its makings. Another W. H. Clune offering.

"Souls Redeemed"—An Edward Warren Production in sumptuous setting, with an all-star cast.

"Weavers of Life"—Just a nice little picture that never fails to please. Another Warren production.

"The Master Crook"—Starring Edmund Breese—a corking bit of drama greatly worth while. Produced by Apollo Pictures, Inc.

"Raffles"—With John Barrymore. This is as big a winner as the play was. It merits a whole page of explanation. Picturized by L. Lawrence Weber Photo Dramas, Inc.

"Passing of the Third Floor Back"—With Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson—the foremost English star; directed by Herbert Brenon.

for Buyers of Foreign Rights

World-wide Interest

Owned by The Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson Passing of the Third Floor Back Company.

"The Fall of the Romanoffs"—with Iliodor. A Brenon picture of the most thrilling scenes of Russian war and politics. Owned by Al. H. Woods.

"Free and Equal"—An Ince production dealing with social equality; a play upon the whole gamut of human emotion. Another Al. H. Woods production.

"The Zeppelin's Last Raid"—Thomas Ince's successor to "Civilization." Starring Howard Hickman and Enid Markey. U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation.

"Those Who Pay"—Another of Thomas Ince's gems of genius, featuring Bessie Barriscale. Owned by U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation.

"The Belgian"—with Valentine Grant and Walker Whiteside; directed by Sydney Olcott. All that its name stands for, and owned by U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation.

"Just a Woman"—Directed by Julius Steger and featuring Charlotte Walker. Pages of publicity can say no more. A big number of the U. S. Exhibitors' program.

"Nine Tenths of the Law"—Featuring Mitchell Lewis, the famous star of "The Barrier" and "The Bar Sinister." U. S. Exhibitors' newest production.

"The Crucible of Life"—With Gertrude McCoy in the star's role. U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation.

And FOUR "FOUR-SQUARES"

"The Silent Witness"—With Gertrude McCoy.
"The Sin Woman"—With Irene Fenwick.
"Fringe of Society"—With Milton Sills and Ruth Rowland.
"The Cast-Off"—With Bessie Barriscale.

THE CREST PICTURES

"The Grain of Dust"—With Lillian Walker and Edith Day.
"The Lust of the Ages"—Featuring Lillian Walker. Directed by Harry Revier.

JESTER COMEDIES

Twede-Dan is a tremendous favorite in foreign countries and William Steiner is making comedies that are with him as a star.

For terms, rates and screening of all these subjects communicate with

ROBERTSON-COLE COMPANY

Singer Building Times Building
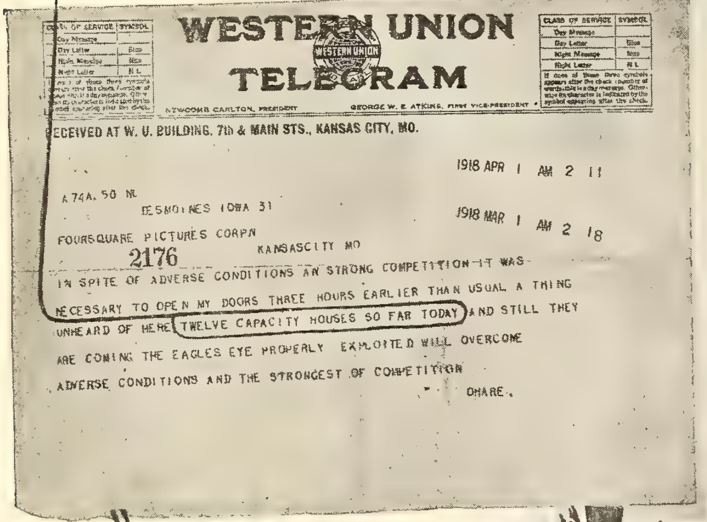
NEW YORK
Arrow Film Corporation, Times Building
Exclusive Purchasers

EAGLEYEZING HOUSE RECORDS

"12 CAPACITY HOUSES SO FAR TODAY" This telegram from Mr. O'Hare of the Majestic Theatre Des Moines Ia. proves that "THE EAGLE'S EYE" is without equal in drawing power if it is treated as a special production.

The Dreamland's capacity is 420 The first episode of "THE EAGLE'S EYE" played to $ 747 25 in two days. Mr. Botzum used only the advertising and publicity material carried in stock for every exhibitor by all Foursquare exchanges. It sold this great serial to a point unequalled in Akron.



WESTERN UNION TELEGRAM

NEWCOMB CARLTON, PRESIDENT GEORGE W. E. ATKINS, FIRST VICE-PRESIDENT

RECEIVED AT W. U. BUILDING, 7th & MAIN STS., KANSAS CITY, MO.

1918 APR 1 AM 2 11

A 74A. 50 NL

DESMOINES IOWA 31

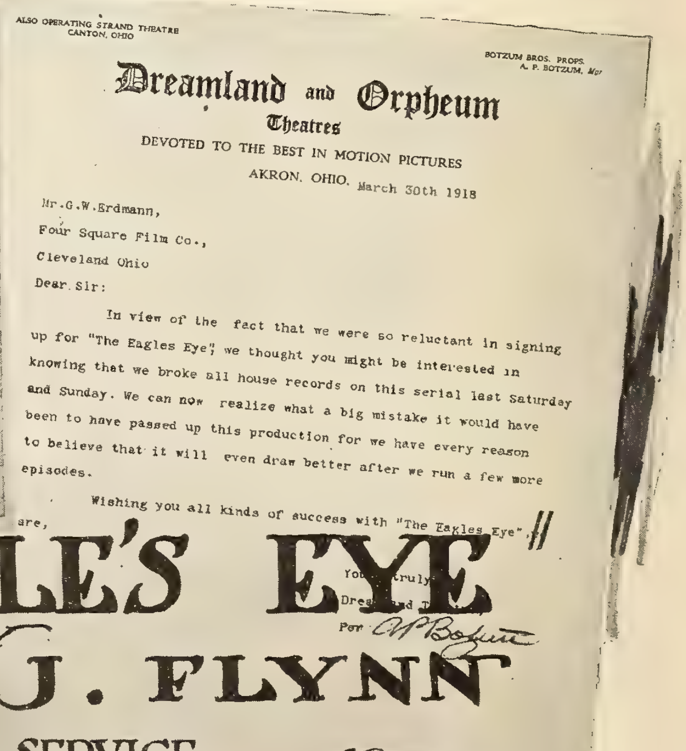
1918 MAR 1 AM 2 18

FOURSQUARE PICTURES CORPN

2176 KANSASCITY MO

IN SPITE OF ADVERSE CONDITIONS AN STRONG COMPETITION IT WAS NECESSARY TO OPEN MY DOORS THREE HOURS EARLIER THAN USUAL A THING UNHEARD OF HERE TWELVE CAPACITY HOUSES SO FAR TODAY AND STILL THEY ARE COMING THE EAGLES EYE PROPERLY EXPLOITED WILL OVERCOME ADVERSE CONDITIONS AND THE STRONGEST OF COMPETITION

OHARE.



ALSO OPERATING STRAND THEATRE
CANTON, OHIO

BOTZUM BROS. PROPS.
A. P. BOTZUM, Mgr

Dreamland and Orpheum
Theatres
DEVOTED TO THE BEST IN MOTION PICTURES

AKRON, OHIO, March 30th 1918

Mr. G. W. Erdmann,
Four Square Film Co.,
Cleveland Ohio

Dear Sir:

In view of the fact that we were so reluctant in signing up for "The Eagles Eye", we thought you might be interested in knowing that we broke all house records on this serial last Saturday and Sunday. We can now realize what a big mistake it would have been to have passed up this production for we have every reason to believe that it will even draw better after we run a few more episodes.

Wishing you all kinds of success with "The Eagles Eye", are,

Yo truly,
Drea T
Per A P Botzum

Played at Dreamland, Akron two (2) days the first Episode
You can use this

"THE EAGLE'S EYE"

BY

WILLIAM J. FLYNN

(RECENTLY RETIRED)

CHIEF of the U.S. SECRET SERVICE

PRODUCED BY THE WHARTONS

WITH THE POPULAR STARS
KING BAGGOT and MARGUERITE SNOW

DISTRIBUTED BY FOURSQUARE EXCHANGES

Atlanta, Ga........73 Walton St.
Boston, Mass......16 Piedmont St.
Buffalo, N. Y....47 West Swan St.
Chicago, Ill....207 S. Wabash Av.
Cincinnati, O..301 Strand Th. Bldg.
Cleveland, O......312 Sloan Bldg.
Dallas, Texas. 1911½ Commerce St.
Denver, Colo.....1735 Welton St.
Detroit, Mich..304 Jos. Mack Bldg.
Kansas City, Mo..1120 Walnut St.
Los Angeles, Cal..514 W. Eighth St.
Minneapolis, Minn....16 N. 4th St.
NewYork, N. Y...729 Seventh Ave
Philadelphia, Pa.....1325 Vine St
Pittsburgh, Pa.....127 Fourth Ave.
San Francisco..191 Golden Gate Av.
Seattle, Wash.....2014 Third Ave.
St. Louis, Mo. 301 Empress Th. Bldg.

CANADA FOURSQUARE-SUPERFEATURES, LTD.

Toronto, Ont...........59 Victoria St.
Montreal, Que..204 St. Catherine, St. W.
Winnipeg, Man......215 Phoenix Block
St. John, N. B.......19 Market Square

For further information address The Whartons' Publicity and Supply Department, 1476 Broadway, New York

Only The BEST Pictures Are Bought by The U.S. Exhibitors Corporation

MEN

by Harry S. Sheldon

A Bacon-Backer Production is the Latest Big Buy

With

Anna Lehr

Charlotte Walker

Robert Cain

Frank G. Hall, Pres. U.S. Exhibitors, Says; "Watch it go over the big circuits!"

FOURSQUARE PICTURES

DISTRIBUTORS, HOME OFFICE 729 SEVENTH AVE. N.Y.

EXCHANGES

ATLANTA, 73 Walton Street
BOSTON, 48-50 Piedmont Street
BUFFALO, 47 West Swan Street
CHICAGO 207 So. Wabash Avenue
CLEVELAND 310 Sloan Building
CINCINNATI 310 Strand Theatre Building
DENVER. 1735 Welton Street
DALLAS 1911½ Commerce Street
DETROIT 304 Jos. Mack Building
KANSAS CITY, 1120 Walnut Street
LOS ANGELES, 514 West 8th Stree
MINNEAPOLIS, 206 Film Exchange Building
NEW YORK 729 Seventh Avenue
PITTSBURGH, 127 Fourth Avenue
PHILADELPHIA, 1325 Vine Street
SAN FRANCISCO 191 Golden Gate Avenue
SEATTLE 2014 Third Avenue
ST. LOUIS, 301 Empress Theatre Building

Canada

SUPERFEATURES, Ltd.

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (215 Phoenix Block)
ST. JOHN, N. B. (19 Market Square)
MONTREAL Que. (204 St. Catheri St., W.)
TORONTO, Ont (59 Victoria Street)

GREATER NEW YORK EXHIBITORS SELECT

Harry Rapf's Box Office Attractions of

FLORENCE REED in

"The Struggle Everlasting"

and ROBERT WARWICK in

"The Accidental Honeymoon"

with ELAINE HAMMERSTEIN

FOR FIRST RELEASES OF WITH POSITIVE GUARANTEE 225 EXHIBITORS BOOKING SYNDICATE DAYS SOLID IN NEW YORK CITY

"Prerelease of 'The Struggle Everlasting' at the Adelphi theatre, commencing April 8, for first 3 days broke all house records for those days.
A. J. Wolf, Mgr."

STATE RIGHTS MEN!

This is your opportunity to offer your exhibitors two genuine attractions—two bona-fide box office winners, guaranteed to make money if properly exploited.

Communicate

ARROW FILM CORP.
TIMES BUILDING NEW YORK CITY

Produced by

HARRY RAPF
1564 Broadway New York City

THIS SPEAKS FOR ITSELF

SPECIAL REPORT

of

The National Board of Review of Motion Pictures
70 FIFTH AVENUE
NEW YORK CITY

To HARRY RAPF

Gentlemen:

We wish to advise you that the majority comment on your photoplay ACCIDENTAL HONEYMOON reviewed by The National Board of Review on APRIL 1, 1918 was as follows:

ENTERTAINMENT VALUE EXCELLENT EDUCATIONAL VALUE

ARTISTIC VALUE: Dramatic interest of story GOOD Coherence of narrative CLEAR Acting GOOD Photography EXCELLENT Technical handling EXCELLENT Costuming (if period production) Atmospheric quality of scenic setting EXCELLENT Historical value (if period production)

MORAL EFFECT GOOD

GENERAL COMMENT: A delightful romance rich in humor and filled with artistic pictures taken out of countr life itself.

Motion Picture News

Vol. 17 No. 17. April 27, 1918

The Week in the Film World at a Glance

FEATURES

DIARY OF A SUCCESSFUL EXHIBITOR..........2576
PICTURES THAT CAN BE "SOLD" (WM. A. JOHNSTON) 2497
SPEAKING EDITORIALLY 2498
SERVING IT WITH SPEED AND GINGER..........2499
LETTERS FROM A SELF-MADE EXHIBITOR TO HIS SON 2500
WHAT KIND OF A FELLOW IS—GRIFFITH?..........2509
DIARY OF A SUCCESSFUL EXHIBITOR..........2516
THE INDEPENDENT FIELD TICKER..........2545

OF SERVICE TO EXHIBITORS

Nothing Happened—Until Seelye Spoke..........2502
A. E. A. Plans for Convention..........2504
Push Liberty Loan Drives..........2505
Live News from the Producers..........2528
Coming Program Offerings..........2541
In and Out of West Coast Studios..........2548
In the Independent Field..........2543

NEWS OF THE WEEK

Exhibitors' Service Bureau..........2510
Rothapfel's Answers to Exhibitors..........2517
Ready-Made Ad-Talks 2522
Newsy Items from the Studios..........2552
Short Subjects in Review..........2554
Releases—Current and Coming..........2567-68-69-70
Projection Department 2574
Music and the Picture..........2581
Theatres Worth While..........2584
Glances at the Programs..........2542
Exhibitor to Exhibitor Service Bureau..........2526

SCREEN EXAMINATIONS

"Alien Enemy, An" (Paralto)..........2555
"Bandit and the Preacher, The" (W. H. Productions-Hart) 2563
"Blindness of Divorce, The" (Fox Standard)..........2564
"Boss of Lazy Y" (Triangle)..........2556
"Business of Life, The" (Vitagraph)..........2565
"Busy Inn, The" (Pathe-Russian Art)..........2586
"Conquered Hearts" (Ivan Film Productions)..........2563
"Dog's Life, A" (Chaplin-First National)..........2555
"Gamble for Love, A" (Broadwest Films)..........2563
"Her Helping Hand" (Mutual-Strand)..........2583
"Hey, There" (Rolin-Pathe)..........2564
"Honor in Pawn" (Broadwest Films)..........2563
"Rip Roaring Rivals" (Clover-General)..........2556
"Romance of the Underworld, A" (Frank A. Keeney)..2564
"Ruler of the Road" (Pathe)..........2565
"Saucy Madeline" (Paramount-Mack Sennett)..........2565
"Scarlet Drop, The" (Universal-Harry Carey Special)..2585
"Tiger Man, The" (Artcraft)..........2565
"Unclaimed Goods" (Lasky-Paramount)..........2586
"Up the Road with Sallie" (Select)..........2555
"Waiter's Wasted Life, A" (Fox-Lehrman)..........2556
"Woman in the Web, The" (Vitagraph)..........2555
"Wooing of Coffee Cake Kate, The" (Clover-General)..2556
"Law of the Great Northwest (Triangle)..........2585
"Lost on Dress Parade" (O. Henry-General)..........2564
"Marriage Lie, The" (Universal)..........2583
"Playing the Game" (Paramount-Ince)..........2566
"Purple Lily, The" (World Film)..........2566

Newsy Announcements of the Week Found in the Ad-Pages

Harry Carey in Picture of the Days of '63..........2452
"The Spirit of the Red Cross"..........2453
The Artcraft Pictures for March and April..........2454-55
The Magic of Norma Talmadge's Name..........2456
"The Shuttle" Features Constance Talmadge..........2457
The Latest Christie Comedy, "By Orange Aid"..........2458
Opinions on "Over the Top"..........2459
Harry Morey in "A Bachelor's Children, with Florence Deshon 2460
"With Neatness and Dispatch," Bushman and Bayne's Best 2461
A Letter to William L. Sherrill on "My Own United States 2462
The Current Issue of the Mutual Screen Telegram..........2463
Big Exhibitors Praise Madge Kennedy and Her Latest Picture, "The Danger Game"..........2464
Rex Beach's "The Heart of the Sunset"..........2465
Goldwyn's Comedy Lead—Bill Parsons..........2466
The Selexart Pictures Released by Goldwyn..........2467
Inter-Ocean's Weekly Talk with Foreign Buyers..........2468
"Blindfolded" Is Bessie Barriscale's Second Paralta Release 2469
The Hodkinson Plan..........2470
Louise Glaum in "An Alien Enemy"..........2471
Ebony Comedies on the General Film Program..........2472
"A Daughter of Uncle Sam"..........2473
Triangle on the Question of "The Real Tax"..........2474-75
William Fox Presents William Farnum in "True Blue".2476-77
Fox Standard Pictures Presents Sensational Photoplay Based on Caillaux Case..........2478-79
Pathe's Quintette of Feature Stars..........2480
Pathe Has Features to Extend Over Six Months..........2481
Brady to Produce "Way Down East," "Life," "Little Women" and Other Big Features..........2482
Facts Pertaining to Brady's "Stolen Orders," Now Ready..2483
Piedmont Pictures Presents "His Daughter Pays," with Gertrude McCoy 2484
The "Outing-Chester Pictures"..........2485
The Record "My Four Years in Germany" Is Making.2486-87
"Fall of the Romanoffs," a First National..........2488
What "Tarzan of the Apes" Brought in One Day..........2489
Robertson-Cole Handle Product for Export..........3490-91
"The Eagle's Eye," Biggest of Patriotic Serials..........2492
Hoffman Foursquare Pictures..........2493
Rapf Features Chosen by Greater New York Exhibitors to Head Program 2494
Rothapfel Praises "Ruggles of Red Gap"..........2496
An Unsolicited Endorsement of "The Kaiser"..........2550-51
"The Doctor and the Woman"..........2557
And More About It..........2558-59
And More 2560
Universal Special Productions..........2561
Universal's Best Serial—"The Lion's Claws"..........2562

WM. A. JOHNSTON, Pres. and Editor. HENRY F. SEWALL, Vice-Pres. E. KENDALL GILLETT, Sec. and Treas.

Published on Tuesday every week by MOTION PICTURE NEWS, Inc., 729 Seventh Ave., New York, N. Y. 'Phone 9360 Bryant. Chicago Offices, Mgr. Wm. J. McGrath, 110 So. Dearborn St.; 'Phone 755 Randolph. Los Angeles Offices, Mgr. J. C. Jessen, 429 South Figueroa St.; 'Phones 780 Pico, F-4661. Subscription $2 a year, postpaid, in United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands. Canada, $3. N. B.—No agent is authorized to take subscriptions for Motion Picture News at less than these rates. Have the agent who takes your subscription show his credentials and coupon book.

Copyright, 1918, by Motion Picture News, Inc.

GEORGE K. SPOOR

presents

TAYLOR HOLMES

IN

A PAIR OF SIXES

By Edward Peple

'Ruggles' Called Great Success

S. L. Rothapfel, after showing "Ruggles of Red Gap," featuring Taylor Holmes, at his Rialto Theatre, New York, wrote:

"It was a perfect delight. Not alone is it one of the most amusing but, in my opinion, it strikes a new note in the production of motion pictures. To me it proves without question that the most subtle humor can be portrayed upon the screen if done intelligently and with artistry, of which 'Ruggles of Red Gap' is a perfect example.

"Not alone did my business jump up in leaps and bounds from the first showing, but I have received hundreds of commendatory letters and any number of personal compliments on its showing. Clean, wholesome and in good taste this picture so ably presented will do more to uplift and bring the motion picture into good repute than any film I have seen in the past two or three years."

Backed by National Billboard Advertising

Essanay

GEORGE KLEINE SYSTEM

Distributors

Perfection Pictures

APR 17 1918

©CI.B412559

"When you see it in 'The News' It's News"

Motion Picture News

HAS THE QUALITY CIRCULATION OF THE TRADE

"The Exhibitors' Medium of Communication"

Volume 17. No. 17 April 27, 1918

Pictures That Can Be "Sold"

IN this swiftly moving industry some very large developments take place right under our nose; and we with our nose close to the swiftly moving grindstone do not sense their import.

It is apparent to anyone that within the past few weeks New York has seen in rapid succession more big pictures and more good pictures—by far—than in any previous and similar period of time.

The fact that so many so-called "specials" have appeared so closely together has drawn particular attention to the immediate period and its remarkable output.

But as a matter of fact a number of equally big and outstanding productions have been released right along within the past few months.

In fact, we may regard the first quarter of 1918 as a remarkable era of "special" picture production, one that should and will go down in the history of the industry as marked by a very superior attainment in quality production.

* * * *

NOW let us add to this important fact the following figures:

In 1915 the average length of pictures was 1.65 reels.

In 1916—2.23.

In 1917—2.77.

In December, 1917, the average length jumped suddenly to 3.88.

We dare say that at the present moment the average picture length is 4.50 reels or even more.

For two years—1915-'16—there was little change; nor in 1917, until the sudden increase in December, just preceding the release, from many quarters, of pictures of extraordinary length and quality.

It would seem that we have jumped suddenly into a new and distinct era of production and one which will have a marked bearing upon the future art and commerce of this industry.

What is this era?

It is nothing more or less, in our opinion, than that which we have been prophesying and hoping for right along—namely, the era of fewer pictures, better pictures and longer runs—that cause and effect circle which, in our belief, is destined to salvationize this business and the lack of which has been its greatest economic evil.

Let us make some observations right here.

* * * *

IN speaking of the increase of length in pictures we don't mean to fix quality by this mark. One might say that the "special" is a fine picture despite its length. It takes a fine picture to stand so dangerous a length.

Nor do we mean to say that the dropping off in production of short-length pictures is a wholly happy sign.

The point is that very much fewer short-length pictures are being made today; and they are being made very much better. They are becoming "features," in fact—as they should be. Witness the new style of scenic which is now featured; and the famous Chaplins.

And we believe that we shall some day have two-reel Fairbanks and two-reel Pickfords, just as we now have two-reel Chaplins, Harts and Sennetts; and these short subjects will be just as prominent among "fewer pictures, better pictures and longer runs" as are the present five-reel star pictures. In fact, we doubt exceedingly if five-reel Chaplins will ever equal in entertainment values the two-reel Chaplin product.

Quality, of course, not length, makes feature pictures.

But to go back—this is obviously the day of the "special"—or at least the very bright dawn of a "special" era.

And "specials" are better pictures because, largely, they are fewer pictures.

And being better they promise longer runs.

* * * *

"THE KAISER" and "My Four Years in Germany" have been playing, almost opposite each other, to crowded houses for three and four weeks.

Previously "Tarzan of the Apes" ran for many weeks to packed houses. And before this "Les Miserables" enjoyed also an extended and highly profitable run.

"Hearts of the World"—the New York speculators have been asking fancy prices—is destined for long runs in the big cities. Clune, in Los Angeles, has already booked the picture for twelve weeks.

"My Own United States" opened at the Rialto to such a packed house that our own reviewer had to enter by a secret door. On the day following the long box-office line was one of the sights of Broadway.

"The Blue Bird" made the Rivoli management consider a two weeks' run. In our estimation it could have broken the present week-run policy of the Strand, Rialto and Rivoli with a successful four weeks' run.

"The Unbeliever" was a Rivoli success, has been marked "extra big" on week runs in a number of cities and ran successfully for five weeks at the Majestic in Detroit.

Longer runs!

These pictures make longer runs practical.

(Continued on following page)

Speaking Editorially:

The Co-operative Tendency

A FEW high lights stand out as a result of the gathering of prominent exhibitors at the Hotel Astor last week to discuss the various co-operative booking propositions.

The first is that more and more exhibitors are showing a real interest and tendency towards some sort of co-operation.

The second is that the clear-thinking majority of these exhibitors realize that their co-operation should extend only to the booking and exhibiting of pictures, and that between those fun functions and the producing of pictures there is a high and impassable wall.

That the exhibitors should by their words register strong opposition to any sort of movement that made their desire for co-operation solely the food of stock promotion was to be expected.

The gratifying facts are that so many voices were raised in sincere, straight, business talk, and that the convention was not, as some exhibition gatherings have been, and as so many pessimists prophesied this would be, a mere Bolshevik assemblage of agitation and anvil pounding.

* * * *

The Motion Picture in Picardy

WE met a lieutenant returning from the old Fighting Sixty-ninth last Saturday. His conversation unfolded a message that should add just a bit of the spice of life to the heart of every motion-picture man.

"You don't know what a factor in life the motion picture is until you have returned from your first round in the trenches to a dinky French village, as cheerless on a wet night as the North Pole would be, and find that some kind Providence has brought a projection machine and some film to the depot.

"A big barn is cleaned out hurriedly, a sheet stretched across one end, and in a few minutes the space is packed with mud-bespattered men. Say, the cheer that goes up when the first picture flickers on the screen would warm your heart.

"After that it is silent. The men seem to be breathing in every flicker on the sheet. The motion picture brings home right smack up before your eyes—and bringing home to the boys in France is working a miracle."

* * * *

Hats Off to New Haven

WITH everybody saying good words about the wonderful feat of New Haven exhibitors in pledging $50,000 within twenty minutes to the Liberty Loan drive it seems like rubbing it in to make mention of the event here.

But no one was ever hurt by "rubbing in" praise, and, surely, too much cannot be said for the picture men of New Haven.

Our hat is off—and with it the hats of the industry.

* * * *

Does Vaudeville Pay?

AN exhibitor who rebelled against the lofty increase in his film rentals last Fall turned his theatre, a leading house in a city of 50,000, over to vaudeville. He stood a loss of $10,000 in a few weeks and then went back to pictures.

Help Us Out

A READER asks us to secure some facts for use in an article in our feature series that will explain "Why film salesmen are commonly referred to as 'Film Pirates' by exhibitors and even among themselves."

We thought we had gone a step towards answering the question with our previous feature "Why is a Film Salesman?" That breezy contribution told of the overplus of salesmen striving for the business of a comparatively few exhibitors in some territories, of the methods practised by some to get business, and so on.

Evidently it didn't tell all the story—or at least it didn't answer the question in the minds of our recent letter writer, who, by the way, signs himself, "Salesman in the Tall Uncut."

We are interested; we would like to learn more on the question. Can our letter writer or any other reader tell us "Why film salesmen are commonly referred to as 'Film Pirates' by exhibitors and even among themselves?"

* * * *

"Willie" Moore's Bravery

OUR respects and regards—in the highest—and in saying "our" we may speak, surely, for the entire industry, to one "Willie" Moore, formerly office boy for Harry Raver, now Sergeant William J. Moore, of the old fighting 69th of New York.

On his breast is now pinned that which all men covet most and that which speaks most highly of manhood—a French Croix de Guerre.

May not the picture industry steal a share of the glory achieved by "Willie" Moore, formerly of Times Square and Film Row?

* * * *

Pictures That Can Be "Sold"

(Continued from preceding page)

These pictures are showing the way, and breaking the way, for longer runs for all pictures that stand up.

* * * *

IT is not only that they have the entertainment values which longer runs demand, but these "fewer and better pictures" are sold intensively to the exhibitor who in turn sells them intensively to his public.

Selling force is put behind them.

In other words they are advertised.

Advertising service goes out with them; and longer runs make it possible for this advertising to do its work.

This kind of pictures is sending the industry swiftly along to its true goal—profit to all concerned, a greater motion picture public and, finally, the opportunity to join effectively the two great forces of pictures and public advertising.

We reiterate that all present problems of waste, mismanagement and misunderstanding are incidental to this one, deep, broad factor of "fewer pictures, better pictures, longer runs."

W A Johnston

Serving It with Speed and Ginger

RUMORS, rumors, everywhere, and not a confirmation in sight. That is the story of one phase of last week.

Another phase is that, even without the rumors, you had the feeling every minute that big news was apt to pop out on you at any minute.

It couldn't be helped. What with the influx of exhibitors for the Co-operative Convention, then the arrival of the First National members, well, with that encouragement, who wouldn't start a rumor?

And who didn't?

No one that we know of.

Why, by Friday our lapels had been half pulled off by volunteers who dragged us behind the massive pillars of Mrs. Astor's hostelry to impart some new whispered bit of information—or misinformation.

* * * *

FIRST of all, of course, the gathering of exhibitors to discuss co-operative movements had to bring its own share of rumors. They flew thick and fast, but the week ended with only two in real evidence.

One declared that with the return of W. W. Hodkinson to New York within the next few weeks there would be some announcements of importance regarding the Hodkinson plan.

These, the rumorers had it, would concern a number of minor changes in the method—not the principle—by which the Hodkinson plan would become applicable more generally to the great body of exhibitors of all classes.

* * * *

ANOTHER rumor which held its ground to the end of the week, but which still failed to bring forth any measure of confirmation, was to the effect that Mutual and Vitagraph were keeping a close eye on the movement towards co-operation and might be ready to talk business at any moment that something tangible presented itself.

The other rumors growing out of the Co-operative Convention—they came in droves—will be found on the news pages directly following.

And, by the way, the story of that gathering makes considerable interesting reading matter. You don't want to miss it—if you were so foolish, or busy, as to miss the convention.

* * * *

BUT Dame Rumor wasn't satisfied with one crack at the Mutual organization. She came back again—via a Chicagoan in town for the week's festivities.

The tale was that the coming meeting of Mutual's Board of Directors would result in something of a reorganization, an absorption of Mutual's many subsidiary's into one whole organization.

There were other details—all as vague in their import as the above. The general idea conveyed was that Mutual was seeking to still further knit and solidify its organization.

THEN the First National meeting had to have a set of rumors all its own, of course. You can't have a First National meeting without a new batch of rumors.

Very few of which seem to worry the First National men themselves, and fewer still to ever work out.

Last week's most persistent one was that the First National was to modify its working methods in many sections so as to get further away from the exchange principle of operation and closer to the co-operative booking plan.

The latter method is being successfully used by Emanuel Mandelbaum, who has the First National franchise for Ohio.

* * * *

THE rest of the rumors we'll have to pass up. They are just the same ones you are certain to get any time you succeed in coralling four or more film men in the Astor corridor. They are probably just as apt to pan out into anything with the semblance of truth as any of the rumors that have lived and died unsung in the past six months.

For example, under the strong encouragement the merger rumor had to come to life again. And so on.

But you, Mr. Reader, whether in New York or Oskaloosa, have just as good an imagination as ours—so go to it and make up your own rumors. They will probably be just as reliable as the Astor brand.

* * * *

WE told you all about this week's feature article in the last issue, so we can't use any space telling you of that here.

While the doings at the Co-operative Convention—especially the climax supplied by C. R. Seelye—speak for themselves.

Naturally you'll want to know all about what the industry is doing in the Liberty Loan drive. With everyone doing so much it makes a big story, but to combine white paper saving with easy reading we've crammed it as close as possible into Page 2502

Speaking of the Liberty Loan reminds us of a word of praise we intended to say for that "Carry On" advertisement by Watterson R. Rothacker on the back cover of last week's NEWS. It is one of the best bits of Liberty Loan copy we have yet read, and to the best of our notice it is original with Rothacker.

* * * *

ARE you following that discussion on "What Is Wrong with Pictures" in the Exhibitors' Service Bureau? You should—especially if you are a producer.

The big exhibitors composing our Advisory Board—a regular First National of our own—haven't minced words in giving their opinions, and the combined rentals paid by them surely make their opinions of hefty value.

That Omaha live wire, Thomas, has some sizzling remarks to make this week, particularly with reference to comedies. Page 2512

Letters from a Self-Made Exhibitor to His Son

(This is the second of a series of letters from Bill Grimm, owner of a chain of picture theatres, to his son Cuthbert. Against his father's advice, Cuthbert has invested $10,000 in a picture theatre in Skowhegan, N. Y. The first letter appeared in a recent issue of Motion Picture News.)

EDITORS' NOTE: Cuthbert has written a letter complaining of prices, his inability to decide the relative merits of the various methods of booking, the brashness of the salesmen and the "gypping" tactics of the exchange managers. It brought this reply.

Dear Cuthbert:

Your eight-page hard luck story has been received and read with great relish and much amusement. I won't start this early pulling that "I told you so" stuff, but I cannot refrain from asking you what sort of a ping pong game you thought you were horning into when you grabbed off that showshop in Skowhegan.

All these trials and tribulations about which you are complaining merely represent a minor portion of your daily job from now on. You must expect to encounter many problems and you must learn to use your brains just as you would in any other business. A dull brain is as fatal in the theatre business as a dull razor in a barber shop. A barber doesn't have to use his head but he'll lose out badly if he neglects his hone. Poor pictures and macerated film lose a lot of theatre patrons and poor soap and lacerated cuticle start a lot of barber shop patrons shaving themselves.

The question of prices and booking methods is a relative one; it all depends on where you sit. If you are without opposition you tell the exchange manager to accept your prices or stay out of your town, and it's dollars to doughnuts that YOUR price won't be a fair one. If you have opposition the exchange manager tells YOU to pay his prices or he'll serve your competitor and once again it is probable that HIS prices are eminently unfair. But it's an "average proposition"; what he loses in dealing with the unopposed exhibitor he has to make up on the geezer who is up against stiff opposition. And that is the "fillum" game in a nutshell. I repeat, "It's an average proposition."

"With a little imagination, Son, I could start pulling that 'I Told You So' stuff, and put you in the same class with the tried-but-weakened guys who came out second best in the picture classic."

You say that you can't figure out what is the best method of booking, from the exhibitor's standpoint. Cheer up, son, there are 18,000 exhibitors just like you in these little old United States. All any of us are certain of is that none of them were designed to HELP the exhibitor. You have your choice of the program, the star series, the "open" or independent market and, lastly, a combination of all three. And you are in the happy position of the man who has been chased to the edge of a precipice by a hungry grizzly; you can jump, or stand pat until His Nibs ambles up and dines off your choicest cuts. Either way you lose. As yet no booking method has been devised which offers a fair break for both producer and exhibitor and, until some such method IS devised, and put into execution, you are going to continue to lose, because the producer is sitting in the golden chair and he elects that you shall lose rather than he. And I don't know as I blame him.

You are not in the position of the average retailer who can take a little bit of everything in his line, find out the good sellers, and discard the rest at little or no loss. Right now there are more than twenty features being released weekly on regular schedules and also a large number of independent productions. And you have only seven days a week open. Likewise your competitor. If you both decide that some certain program or star series is the most desirable thing in sight you are going to bid up the price to a point where a profit is impossible, while the exchange manager sits in a ringside seat and applauds joyously. And if you both have similar ideas on service for your seven days your film bill weekly is going to look like the National Debt. Between you, you can only utilize a scant half of the feature output and you will both be eternally changing to other brands hoping against hope that the new stuff will do the trick. That's how the ubiquitous "fillum" salesmen about whom you are complaining hold down their jobs; they are paid to make you believe that THEIR stuff is what you want.

I will admit that many salesmen are "brash," especially to a newcomer in the game, like yourself. Their selling methods all assay up about the same. Mr. I. Sellum of New York, and elsewhere, blows into town on the 10.10 and coming up from the station he gives Skowhegan the lightning once-over. By the time he gets to the theatre he knows more about your town than its oldest inhabitant. Also he has lamped your billboard advertising, your window display, and your lobby decorations, and he is prepared to point out to you the error of your ways. He consents to read your dinky little house organ of which you are immeasurably proud, and shakes his head ominously. It seems that when it comes to advertising you are all wrong. In half an hour he remodels your theatre from coal bin to grids, rewrites all your advertising and rebooks your service.

He is handling Shootem's Sooperfeatures and he solemnly assures you that each and every one of them has got "The Birth of a Nation" looking like a filler. Maybe you fall, and maybe you don't, but in any event, he blows back into town a few weeks later selling Windem & Grindem Mastersooperpictures and you learn that these productions have Sooperfeatures backed clear off the map. And two months later he again looms into sight representing the Singeum Distributing Corporation, a program bunch. He dismisses his two former products with a disdainful wave of the hand, and you finally are driven to what every wide-awake exhibitor has to do; seeing the stuff yourself. And then, as your picture judgment is probably rotten, you pick the wrong subjects or deal with the wrong companies and—the grizzly takes another bite.

Now as to the various methods of booking. Let us assume that you were being canvassed by frank, honest salesmen representing each plan of booking. (I know what you are thinking, but this is only supposition.) Here's the program man: "We are turning out fifty-two pictures a year, one a week, and you must use them in order, selecting none and skipping none. Some are great; some are fair and some are just plain rotten. We make you a price which is very moderate and offer you a program which averages up well. If you bought our GREAT stuff in the open market it would cost you much coin. At the same time, I'll admit that you could buy our poorer stuff at a lower price than we are asking. But it's a good 'average' proposition."

THE editors desire to express thanks for the stills used to illustrate this article to the following producers: Artcraft, for the circle of Raymond Hatton, in "The Whispering Chorus," on the opposite page; Harry McRae Webster Productions, Inc., for the cut of Niles Welch, in "Reclaimed," at the top of this page, and Goldwyn Pictures Corporation for the illustration in this column, which is a moment in "The Face in the Dark," starring Mae Marsh.

Now the star series man: "We sell our pictures by the series, each series featuring a star. We have great stars, fair stars and poor stars. If you take all our stuff we'll let you have ALL the great stars, but if you are only going to take a portion of our output we will have to split the big stars between you and your competitor. The big stars are going to cost you many yen; the fair stars will set you back a little more than the average program price, and the poor stars will run at about program prices. Yes, we are making our big stars carry our fair and poor ones, naturally. But it's a good average proposition."

Finally you have the independent man: "I have 'steen pictures and about half of them are worldbeaters and cost me a wad of dough. The rest are pure mouse bait. Take all I've got and I'll make you an interesting price, but if you are going to pick out my winners and leave me holding the bag with the lemons I'll have to soak you good and plenty so as to cover what I DON'T get on the flivvers. It's just an average proposition." And there you have it. As the polite murderer said: "How would you prefer to die; shooting, knifing or strangling?"

One time I had the good fortune to have three salesmen representing the three styles of booking visit me on the same day and I staged a star bout by getting them all together and telling them to go to it. I dared any one of them to convince me that his plan was the best for the exhibitor. My office sounded like Wall Street on a bullish morning. And after an exhausting three-hour session I shook hands gravely with all three and said that I had decided, after listening to their arguments, to make my own pictures and save money.

At the present writing the best result can be obtained by the average exhibitor of your type, operating under the daily change policy, by combining these various methods; some program, some star series and a little wide open booking. This has its obvious disadvantages but so have all the others. To the man making only four or three changes a week the problem is a harder one, while the two-a-week man and the whole-week man must either discard the program idea entirely or persuade the program people to let down the bars on rigid adherence to the use of one-a-week. Some fellows in keenly competitive districts pay for program stuff and don't use it, but this is a mighty expensive policy. And there are a few of the big fellows who can coolly indicate what they want and how they want it and GET it.

"You'll get more wrinkles than I ever had, trying to figure out the best booking method."

In closing I want to advise you not to get in the habit of yelping too loudly against the exchange man. I am for the exhibitor all the time but I have no fool illusions about him and I consider him anything but a milk-white, sainted martyr. He hits in the clinches and fouls when he gets the chance just as readily as the exchange man. The average exhibitor believes that the exchange man is out to trim him and the exchange man knows that the exhibitor is after his hide and, in most cases, they are both right. You are now a member in good standing in one of the few really great industries where there is little or no co-operation or mutual confidence between manufacturers and retailers, and that is one of the fundamental reasons why it is a damn good business to stay out of. Eventually we will achieve some sound, stable operating basis, but not yet, not yet. And you'll see a lot of new faces along Fillum Row before we arrive at that happy condition.

"Fork over the check, Son. If you've got opposition, just kiss your own price goodbye and listen to what the exchangeman says."

Come again when the spirit moves you.

Affectionately,

Dad.

P. S.—I'm still holding that place as usher in my theatre open for you, as you are not "over the fence" on this deal yet, and the cat is liable to jump backwards.

SUNDAY OPTION BILL BURIED

Senators Gilchrist and Whitney Object to Its Advancement to Passage

THE Welsh bill, whose passage would have given the municipalities of New York State the right of decision for or against Sunday motion picture shows, came to naught.

Although the motion picture interests, and loyal friends of exhibitors and producers, left no stone unturned to put the bill through, its advancement to the order of final passage was objected to by Senators Gilchrist and Whitney on April 9 at Albany, and it was consigned to the legislative cemetery of general orders.

The measure passed the Assembly the week previous, and was reported favorably by the Codes Committee. It remained for the Senate to place the snag upon which it would hang.

New York exhibitors, however, still have the satisfaction of knowing they will not be placed in the "slacker" class.

Nothing Happened Until Seelye Spoke

Then the Astor Meeting Wound Up in a Comedy—Incidentally Nine Exhibitor Circuits with 2,000 Booking Days Joined Hands in First Step Toward National Organization

IT was a great week, boys—a two-day convention and a three-day aftermath. It's hard to say which was the most interesting—the convention or the aftermath.

The convention ought to win—on the strength of C. R. Seelye's speech on behalf of the United Theatres plan, a few extracts from which appear on the following page.

But the aftermath also benefits by the presence of the only C. R. Seelye, so it is an even break.

All in all, "a good time was had by all." The exhibitors opposed to the United plan succeeded in mustering nine exhibitor circuits with a list of nineteen hundred bookings, and appointed a representative committee to consider plans for nationalization. They succeeded also in giving Mr. Seelye enough rope to induce him to make a speech. And in the aftermath they succeeded in a number of conferences in bringing for a series of interesting admissions from Mr. Seelye.

No Trust Fund Yet

The statements made by Seelye to various visiting exhibitors are in brief: "That the Guaranty Trust Company of New York requested the withdrawal of the United account, and that as yet no trust fund has been established for the ninety per cent. of funds which exhibitors buying stock are told will be kept in escrow; that the overhead expense of the United is now $7,000 a week, and it will soon be $10,000 (at 10 per cent. for expenses, this would make necessary the sale of $100,000 worth of stock every week); that a reorganization of United might soon come about which would place J. A. Berst in the presidency, with Lee Ochs dropped on the skids to the soft berth of 'Chairman of the Board of Directors.'"

These reports were all part of the aftermath. Mingled with them were numerous humorous incidents. The first came at a dinner party Wednesday night, when Sydney Cohen, president of the New York State Exhibitors' League, declared that he had been offered $5,000 worth of stock to join forces with the United.

"Why you're a piker," shot back Charles Pettijohn, "you, the president of the New York League, and only offered $5,000. Why, I don't hold a single office and I was offered $10,000 worth of stock to-day."

The second laugh spread about the Astor on Wednesday, when Louis Blumenthal, vice-president of the United, was quoted as saying that the whole convention was a scheme concocted by Wm. A. Johnston, of Motion Picture News to "show up" the United stock-selling plan.

Aside from these details the high light of the convention was found in Seelye's speech and the repartee it evoked. When Seelye, for example, confessed that the picture game was mere piker's play for him and that his real mission in life was to help President Wilson out by settling the Food Control problem, Sydney Cohen replied:

"As a New York exhibitor, I want to say that I am sorry you did not go into Food Control three or four years ago, before you were with Pathe and Vitagraph. I always found your methods very arbitrary and you would never let an exhibitor see you or come into your office."

To Seelye's declaration that the United's real purpose was the erection of a monument to C. R. Seelye in the picture business, Mr. Cohen made the reminder that monuments are only for dead ones.

And so it went, Frank Rembusch, Fred Herrington and Byron Parks being among the others who took various occasions to straighten Seelye out. Once the speaker brought trouble on himself. Turning to Charles Pettijohn he asked:

"Won't you agree that the organization is democratic with the stock held by exhibitors in all parts of the country?"

"Not if you let me appoint the officers and chairman of the board of directors," replied Pettijohn.

The convention drew to it a very remarkable representation of exhibitors considering the manner in which it was called, and the fact that all attending were present at their own expense. Among those present when the convention convened on Monday afternoon were:

Harry Dull of Detroit; Ira H. Simmons, New York; William McGee of Detroit; Harry M. Crandall, of Washington, D. C.; I. N. Wids, W. C. Hunt, Wildwood, N. J.; Fred G. Nixon-Nirdlinger, Philadelphia;; M. Spiers, Philadelphia; M. E Felt, Philadelphia; J. M. Schine, Gloversville, New York; William L. Sherrill, Frohman Amusement Corporation; H. A. Palmer, New York; Moe Streimer, New York; Joseph S. Klot, New York; John T. Collins, Rutherford, N. J.; King Perry, Detroit; C. R. Seeyle, United Pictures Theatres, Inc.; Milton M. Goldsmith, Toronto, Canada; Sydney S. Cohen, New York; Samuel Berman, Brooklyn; Jesse Goldburg, New York; W. P. Rodgers, New York; Harry Rapf, Oscar I. Lamberger, Ivan Film Production; Chandos Brenou, representing Herbert Brenon Productions; H. A. Brink, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Edward H. Brink, W. W. Hodkinson Corporation; I. Sanders, Brooklyn; Joseph A. Golden, president, Triumph Film Corporation; A. Silperstein, New York; Alfred S. Black, Rockland, Mo.; Raymond Pawley, treasurer, W. W. Hodkinson Corporation; C. S. Nordlie and C. E. Shurtleff, W. W. Hodkinson Corporation; J. W. McKay, Paralta Plays; Lester Park, Lillian Walker Productions; F. J. Herrington, Pittsburgh; Frank Rembusch, Indianapolis; Byron Park, Salt Lake City; John Manheimer, New York; Louis Frank, Chicago.

Subsequently delegates from other sections, particularly Chicago, arrived so that the gathering was considerably enlarged on Tuesday.

The convention got down to business after a statement by C. C. Pettijohn, as to the purpose for which it had been assembled. Mr. Pettijohn was elected chairman; Frank Rembusch, who called the meeting, related the various co-operative efforts that had been made in the industry, dating back to the meeting, July 15, 1915, of the National Theatres Owners' Association in Chicago.

He made the point that all such movements had failed, because of the fact that the plans had not been EXHIBITOR CONTROLLED, those which had been established and were working on a national scale, had brought more distress to the exhibitors than relief by overbidding for popular stars, and then boosting rental prices.

Mr. Rembusch at the instigation of the meeting, then explained a working chart of a proposed exhibitor owned co-operative association, which he had hurriedly prepared, to form as the basis for a discussion.

Harry Crandall, of Washington, analyzed the chart with Mr. Rembusch following his explanation and analyzed some of its possible objectionable features, to which Mr. Rembusch accented, reiterating that it had been presented solely for the purpose to get a full expression of opinions.

William L. Sherrill, speaking as a producer, expressed the hope that some sort of a practical co-operative association could be organized as the result of the convention and relating the experiences of the Producers to Exhibitors Affiliated, frankly confessed that he had come to the opinion that such an organization would have to be effected by the exhibitors, as the independent producers had found, by practical experience, their inability to do so. Mr. Sherrill said, however, that unless such an association was quickly formed, the independent producers could not remain in business.

Sydney Cohen, president of the Motion Pictures Exhibitors League of New York, and of the Exhibitors Booking Syndicate, Inc., of New York, was then asked to explain the operations of the latter organization.

Mr. Cohen told of the practical application of the co-operative idea, with two productions obtained from Harry Rapf, who had agreed to release these pictures in such manner for the purpose of demonstrating the value of co-operative booking to exhibitors and producers. The speaker outlined the remarkable savings which exhibitors had gained on these two pictures by this manner of booking. He stated that

Seelye Steals the "Them Babies" Prize from Lee Ochs

Being Some Nuggets of Wisdom Dropped by C. R. Seelye in His Address on Behalf of the United Picture Theatres at the Hotel Astor Convention

¶ The Prize Remark:

"They criticize the personnel of our organization, some of the officers, but what of that? Wasn't it even said that Washington was a terrible skirt-chaser?"

¶ The Second Best:

"This picture business is only a piker's game, a bare million a week. I am only doing this to erect a monument for myself and to my achievement. My friends say I am a fool, I should be doing bigger things. Some of the biggest men in the country have spoken to me, and let me tell you men, when I finish this, when I have erected this monument, I am going into Food Control."

¶ To Byron Parks, who has organized exhibitors in six states:

"You're a bright kid, sonny, but you've a lot to learn. If I had you under my training for a few years I would make a film man of you just as I have other Film Exchange Managers and Salesmen. Come to my school."

¶ Referred to Producers:

"I could pay Chaplin twice as much money as he is getting now and give him to exhibitors for less. I could get any of the big stars."

¶ Referred to Exhibitors:

When the American Druggists' Society started they took in all the exhibitors who wanted to come in and let the others alone. But after they were fully organized—it was different."

the only flaw in the plan, was the fact that since the New York body operated independently, their supply of pictures was limited. He expressed the hope that it would be possible to so nationalize the New York plan that worthy producers would be attracted by the market provided, and distribute their pictures generally through such a channel.

The New York president made plain, however, that he was strongly opposed to such an undertaking unless the control of such an association was invested absolutely in the hands of exhibitors.

"We don't want to pay the freight, and let one or two fellows get all the gravy," the speaker said. "Nor do we want to finance any organization where the money isn't under our immediate control. We are capable of exerting our own booking power and doing it justly, to everybody concerned—including the producer. We must play fair with him or soon we are going to be in the position where there will be no independent producers, and we'll have to dance when one or two monopolistic groups of producers crack the whip. I am unalterably opposed to any stock promoting proposition, or any proposition which will put the producer at the mercy of any small group of men, who may dictate to him what he will or will not get for his product.

The electrifying talk of the whole convention was given by Byron Park of Salt Lake City, who followed Mr. Cohen. Mr. Parks has banded the exhibitors in six of the Rocky Mountain states into a co-operative association, along the lines of the New York exhibitors, and proved to have a thorough grasp of the subject of co-operation and a comprehensive knowledge, based on experience of its strength and weaknesses.

Following Mr. Parks, the convention adopted a motion for the appointment of a committee to consider the whole subject of co-operative booking and report back to the convention the following day. This committee consisted of the following names: Sydney Cohen, chairman; Harry Crandall, Washington; Thomas Hamlin, Minneapolis; Alfred S. Black, Rocklane, Me.; Frank Rembusch, Indianapolis; Byron Park, Salt Lake City; Fred Herrington, Pittsburgh; W. C. Hunt, Wildwood, N. J.; John Manheimer, New York City; M. Spiers, Philadelphia; Nixon Nirdlinger, Philadelphia; Louis Frank, Chicago; Joseph Hopp, Chicago.

When the convention convened at 11 o'clock Tuesday a recommendation was presented and adopted, deciding that the committee be continued and as fast as new units are completed they name an additional member who can serve on this committee until a final national organization is completed.

Already formed and operating, are the Exhibitors' Booking Syndicate of Greater New York, the Associated Theatres, Inc. of Indianapolis, The Motion Picture Theatre Association of Illinois, The Associated Theatres, Inc. of Illinois, the United Exhibitors' Association of Philadelphia and Eastern Pennsylvania. The Exhibitors' Booking Association of the Inter-Mountain States, the North and South Carolina Exhibitors' Booking Association, the Exhibitors' Booking Association of Michigan and the Tri-State Exhibitors' Circuit of Pittsburgh and Exhibitors' Booking Association of Indiana.

Ochs Quits Review—Blumenthal Out of United

Those who thought the "show" was over when the exhibitors attending the Co-operative Convention left town were given a surprise late Monday when a statement from Lee Ochs indicated that considerable post-mortem thinking had resulted in further shifting about in the Trade Review and United Theaters yards.

The statement issued by Ochs, and dated April 13th, follows in full:

"To the Motion Picture Industry:

"I have this day resigned as president of the Exhibitors' Trade Review, and as a director I have disposed of my stockholdings in the publication, severing completely all relations with that company and the publication.

"The activities I have recently embarked upon in behalf of the exhibitors of the United States require my whole time and energy. I am no longer in a position to devote the amount of attention to Exhibitors' Trade Review that is required by the presidency of that enterprise. Nor is Exhibitors' Trade Review as urgently in need of my services as in its early days. I feel that I am now free to transfer my whole energies to another movement equally important to the exhibitor and that it is for the best interests that I sever my connection with Exhibitors' Trade Review as I have done.

"At the same time it is my duty as president of the United Picture Theaters of America to announce that for equally important reasons Louis F. Blumenthal has withdrawn from the latter concern and severed his connection with it in every way."

Plan Convention of A. E. A.

Directors Meet in New York and Decide on Chicago as Scene of Association's First Annual Gathering Next June

THE directors of the American Exhibitors' Association met at the Hotel Astor Tuesday, April 9, and made complete arrangements for the holding of their first annual convention this year. In accordance with the general principles upon which this association was founded, and especially because of the need of economy in everything pertaining to pictures, there will be no exposition of any kind. The association believes that better results will come to the industry by holding a business conference rather than the "hoo-rah" that has attended gatherings in the past. The place of the convention has been changed from Detroit to Chicago because many directors were more favorable to Chicago, it being recognized as one of the greatest motion picture centres. The time was changed, to take place about the middle of June, although the committee may change this if they see fit. The meeting will last three or four days, and every branch of the industry will be invited to attend and enter into the various conferences that are arranged. It is proposed that big questions which confront the industry will be taken up at various hours during each day, and some of the most prominent men in all branches of the industry will be invited to participate and lead the discussions. One of the features is the noon day luncheon on a war basis, and all who attend will have an opportunity to get together and become better acquainted.

The committee in charge of the convention consists of Frank Rembusch, National Secretary, of Indianapolis; Louis Frank, National Director, of Illinois, and King Perry, State Secretary, Michigan.

Full particulars with reference to time and date will be announced later. Entertainment will be supplied to those attending. It is proposed to have promptness and good order as a motto, and every exhibitor in the United States, no matter what his affiliations may be, will be welcome to attend the meeting.

Inasmuch as there is such need of good sound business discussions at the present time, this meeting will, no doubt, be favored by the entire industry, and the attendance will be large as a result. Headquarters will be opened at Chicago this week.

As this is the first annual meeting of the American Exhibitors' Association, it is safe to say that nothing will be left undone for the comfort, convenience and pleasure, and especially the good of all who participate in this gathering. Everybody is welcome and suggestions are desired.

New Haven Exhibitors Dine and Buy Bonds

New Haven motion picture theatre owners, assembled at an informal dinner of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of New Haven, on April 9, subscribed $50,000 for Liberty Bonds. They were headed by S. Z. Poli, Palace and Bijou theatres, $10,000; Moses Slepack, Globe theatre, $5,000; L. M. Sagal, $5,000, and Benjamin Slade, Poli chief counsel, $2,000.

W. E. Spragg, Olympia manager, as toastmaster, brought out from Mayor David E. FitzGerald, the chief speaker, that Sunday shows in New Haven are "now favored by the best people in the community," and from Major L. M. Ullman, the Republican local leader, that "Sunday shows will be given regularly here at all times in the future."

Mayor FitzGerald, to whom the moving picture theatre owners pay $500 weekly for the Sunday privilege (under the State Emergency law), showed that these receipts are used for support of dependent families of soldiers, for various charitable institutions, and "$500 was given the Grand Army veterans, who had promised the Government a war ambulance and needed that amount to make up their total."

Two hundred members of the association and their guests attended the dinner, and after the formal speeches discussed their problems until early morning. Representatives of all the film companies were present, with many city officials.

Northwest Exhibitors Gleeful

Hundred Houses Opened During Past Week—Exhibitors' Convention at Minneapolis Has Been Scheduled for May 6-7

"ARE we downhearted? No!" This is the slogan of Northwest exhibitordom.

Theatres all over the Northwest are opening up, and bookings are coming in rapidly. According to returns obtained from Minneapolis exchanges there are probably one hundred more photoplay houses operating now than there were two weeks ago. All told there are practically 1,200 picture houses working at full crank in the territory now. The number of reopenings is increasing from day to day in continually increasing percentages. Some theatre men, 'tis true, are still slightly in doubt as to the weather conditions and are holding off probably to the last of this month that they may be more certain of the continuance of good weather, but the majority are "up and at 'em" as they should be.

The Northwest Exhibitors Convention, finally settled for May 6 and 7, will go through in perfect harmony with all points of contention between exhibitors and exchangemen amicably settled. At least, such is the advance report from Minneapolis. Though there was some talk that exchangemen would balk at contributing to the convention fund, in the belief that the exchangeman does not derive the benefit from the convention that he might, the talk has ceased. All is being prepared for May 6 and 7, and the exchangemen will do their bit.

Instead of buying space at the convention as was the custom in previous years, the agreement this year, for the exchangemen, is that they stand the expense of the convention entertainment for one day. The exchange managers agreed that they preferred this rather than space. And all is well.

Committees appointed by Mr. Eselin, are as follows: Publicity—W. A. Steffes, Northern theatre, Minneapolis, chairman; O. Rowe, Blue Mouse, St. Paul; Charles G. Branham, Strand, Minneapolis.

Reception—B. B. Watson, New Garden; Ed Hinz, Cozy; Al. Hill, Grand View; George Garrish, Third Ward theatre, all of Minneapolis.

Badges—P. E. Hayes, Nokomis, chairman; W. G. True, Princess, both of Minneapolis.

Program—D. W. Chamberlin, Empress, chairman; Fred Upham, Rialto; Martin Lyndale, of Minneapolis.

Entertainment—W. A. Steffes, Northern; Dan Eselin, University; P. E. Hayes, Nokomis, Minneapolis.

The executive committee consists of Ed. Flynn, manager of the Minneapolis Fox exchange; Chas. Stambaugh, manager Standard Film Co., of Minneapolis, and Sid Lewis, Rialto Theatre Supply Co., Minneapolis.

Brady to Show New Film on Broadway

William A. Brady announced this week that his picture, "Stolen Orders," which is said to equal "The Whip" in its thrilling qualities, is finished and is now undergoing its final cutting, titling and printing and will be shortly shown at a Broadway theatre.

Harley Knoles and Mr. Brady have been working on this picture off and on for five months, but the climatic conditions at Atlantic City during January and February have delayed its completion before now.

It is released in eight reels and will be disposed of on a basis similar to that adopted with "The Whip"—to territorial buyers.

Kansas League Holds Annual Meeting

The Kansas branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, of which Charles H. Barron is secretary, plans to hold its annual meeting in McPherson, Kan., on the 22 and 23 of April.

Another Star "Adopted"

Louise Huff, Paramount player, was "adopted" last week by Battery B, 144th Field Artillery, the regiment known as the "Grizzlies," as its "Little Sister"—a reversal of the ordinary procedure, whereby the film stars have been adopting the soldiers.

Industry Adds Momentum to New Loan

Stars Sweep Whole Country Before Them as They Boost Sales Skyward—Producers and Exhibitors Go Over the Top with the Rest

SINCE the Third Liberty Loan Drive smashed through the first line of enemy defenses on April 6, the life of sundry and various persons within the industry has certainly not been like Sunday on the farm. From office boy to internationally popular stars, everyone has been up and doing, boosting the sale of Liberty Bonds skyward with unceasing vigor that augurs well for the Loan and ill for the Kaiser.

There is hardly a large motion picture producer, exhibitor or star who has not put everything aside for the moment to lend a hand to the cause. And that this aid has proven invaluable is evidenced in the manner in which the populace is loosening its purse strings in favor of the Loan.

Zukor Has His Day

As if in continuation of the good work already started, as set forth in MOTION PICTURE NEWS last week, it was announced this week that Saturday, April 20, has been named Adolph Zukor Motion Picture Day in honor of the president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation by the Stage Women's War Relief, in its Liberty Loan Drive. The Liberty theatre in front of the Public Library on Fifth Avenue and 42nd street will be turned over to Mr. Zukor on this day for a big drive for Liberty Bond subscriptions, together with a traveling theatre, which will appear at prominent theatrical and motion picture centers throughout the city.

A big campaign for this day is now being prepared by Mr. Zukor in collaboration with Miss Katherine Emmett, Chairman of the Liberty Loan Drive of the Stage Woman's War Relief, and many motion picture stars have already promised to make public appearances to sell bonds. Among those who are expected to make personal appeals are Pauline Frederick, Elsie Ferguson, Lina Cavalieri, Jack Pickford, George M. Cohan, Marguerite Clark, Billie Burke, Crauford Kent, Anita Loos, Courtenay Foote, Gertrude McCoy, Frank Losee, J. W. Johnson and other screen players.

Hart Gets Into Action

Wm. S. Hart has for some time been preparing for his crusade on behalf of the Third Liberty Loan. His tour started at San Diego on April 12, and the following itenarary was arranged: Los Angeles, 13; Salt Lake, 15; Spokane, 18; Seattle, 19; Tacoma, 20; Portland, 22; Oakland, 24; San Francisco, 25; Mr. Hart is accompanied by his business manager, E. S. Allen, and by Sam Rork, publicity representative. The tour is undertaken at the personal request of Secretary McAdoo and "Bill" has expressed himself as feeling highly honored by the invitation and the fact that he has been entrusted with so important a mission. As Hart says: "Every dollar I possess is in bonds except $824, and that is in War Savings Certificates."

Fox Contributes Film

Marie Dressler, World Star, Is Doing Her Bit In the Liberty Loan Campaign

One hundred and twenty prints of a Liberty film in which William Farnum, Fox star, plays the principal role, have been requested by William G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, for use in floating the Third Liberty Loan. For more than a month Farnum, his director, Frank Lloyd, and their company of picture players, have been utilizing every spare moment at Hollywood, in the production of the film, which is said to be a striking argument for national support of the Liberty Loan in addition to being a highly interesting feature aside from its patriotic aspect.

Acceptance of the film came to Farnum in the form of a telegram from Frank R. Wilson, Secretary McAdoo's assistant, in charge of publicity in the Liberty Loan campaign, in which Wilson expressed the appreciation of Farnum's patriotic effort on the part of his chief.

In addition to the production of the film, William Farnum and Director Lloyd have concluded a tour in which thousands throughout California were urged to support the Loan.

Metro Very Active

Metro is aiding the Loan drive throughout the United States, with its stars and patriotic productions. President Richard A. Rowland has placed the entire organization behind the movement, and has written a letter to each of the firm's twenty-seven exchanges urging them to get behind the Government in every possible way. Two of Metro's stars, Arnold Daly and Emmy Wehlen, have already distinguished themselves as four minute speakers.

Miss Wehlen is making a two weeks' tour of eleven Eastern cities.

Christine Mayo, Metro's player of adventuress roles, is one of the first women of the stage with the right to wear the button of the Liberty Legion. Miss Mayo, who is a confirmed seller of Liberty bonds, and not content to rest upon past laurels, is working hard in the present drive. At present she is devoting her energies to the outlying districts, considering that the metropolitan section of New York is already well covered by other workers. Even though she is at present busy in preparation of Metro's All-Star production, "The House of Mirth," which is being directed by Albert Capellani, she sells bonds after her work for the day is over.

Rivalry in Vitagraph Ranks

Enthusiasm to do their bit is running high at the Vitagraph West Coast studios. Each company is intent upon getting in more subscriptions, and of larger denomination than the other companies of the studios. One of the little touches that brought an additional human element into the subscribing other than providing for our men in the trenches and the Government in their effort to meet the call of the war without heavy taxation, occurred when William Duncan bought a $500 bond for his cameraman W. S. Smith—"Steve."

Chaplin Draws Crowds

According to police estimates, 50,000 people gathered before the New York Sub-Treasury building in Wall street, to listen to the Liberty Loan speeches of Charlie Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks. The financial thoroughfare was jammed with human beings from William street to Broadway, while masses of enthusiastic sightseers overflowed south into Broad street and north into Nassau.

The meeting, which had been arranged by Joseph Hartigan, director of the Speakers' Bureau of the Second Federal Reserve District, was opened a few minutes after twelve o'clock by Charlie Chaplin.

Trailers Widely Used

Although handicapped by lack of time the motion picture committee of the Seventh Federal Reserve District, of which Chicago is the headquarters, had its campaign under full steam on the opening day of the Liberty Loan drive, the particular activity assigned to this committee was that of motion picture cooperation with a view to securing the greatest possible amount of publicity through the medium of the screen.

It was decided to concentrate on a series of ten fifty-foot trailers.

Gerard Film at Army Camps

Dates Set for Showing of " My Four Years in Germany " to Soldiers in All Cantonments of the National Army

HOLLIS COOLEY, chief of the United States Military Service Department, which handles the film contracts for all Government cantonment theatres, has made a formal request to the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, through Fred Falkner, sales manager of the New Jersey exchange, for prints of Ambassador Gerard's "My Four Years in Germany," to be shown at all army encampments throughout the country.

According to Mr. Cooley, the Government desires every man in the service to see the picture, that tells so graphically the reasons why we must fight the Imperial German military autocracy. Special admission prices have been set by the authorities in charge of the cantonment houses, and the income derived therefrom will be utilized in furthering the work of the department which Mr. Cooley heads.

The following paragraph gives a list of the various encampments, with the dates that have been suggested for showings of the Gerard picture:

Camp Devens, Mass., April 25, 26, 27; Camp Meade, Md., May 23, 24, 25, 26; Camp Lee, Va., April 25, 26, 27, 28; Camp Jackson, S. C., May 16, 17, 18, 19; Camp Gordon, Ga., May 23, 24, 25, 26; Camp Sheridan, Ala., week of May 27; Camp Pike, Ark., April 25, 26, 27, 28; Camp Funston, Kan., June 13, 14, 15, 16; Camp Dodge, Ia., May 9, 10, 11, 12; Camp Grant, Ill., April 25, 26, 27, 28; Camp Custer, Mich., May 16, 17, 18, 19; Camp Taylor, Ky., May 9, 10, 11, 12; Camp Sherman, Ohio, May 30, 31, June 1, 2.

G. A. Smith in Gov't Service

WITH the greatly increased supply of negative being received from the large force of cameramen sent abroad by the United States, the organization of the Division of Films, Committee on Public Information, is being rapidly expanded by Charles S. Hart, its director. An announcement is made of the appointment of G. A. Smith as Manager of Distribution, to arrange for the widespread handling of the U. S. official war pictures of this country.

For more than three years Mr. Smith has been connected with Pathe in executive positions. A short time ago he was appointed Assistant Director General of Productions, from which position he resigned to accept the appointment to the Division of Films.

Charles S. Hart, director of the division, is building up an organization of practical motion picture men, another addition to his staff being H. C. Hoagland, formerly general manager of Selig and more recently head of Pathe's scenario department.

Mr. Smith has had thorough experience in handling war films, having managed the successful campaigns of Official Government Pictures, Inc., which controls the British war pictures.

For eight years before entering the motion picture business Mr. Smith was a newspaper man in New York. He entered the service of Pathe in 1915 as serial manager, and in that department handled the advertising campaigns on fifteen serials. He is a man of experience in the important angles of the motion picture business—production, distribution and executive work.

Soldiers to See " The Son of Democracy "

The Community Motion Picture Bureau has made arrangements with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for the exhibition of the Lincoln-Chapin series, "The Son of Democracy," at the various military cantonments and army posts throughout the country.

Funkhouser Ordered to Pass " Cleopatra "

General Manager W. R. Sheehan, of the Fox Film Corporation, has received the following telegram from C. W. Eckhardt, manager of the Fox Chicago office:

"After weeks of delay and repeated demands for excessive eliminations, Major Funkhouser has been ordered by the Chicago Corporation Counsel's office to issue white or general permit for 'Cleopatra.' This action followed viewing of the picture, in which they quickly foresaw certain defeat if the question of showing this great historical masterpiece was brought into the Federal Court or before a jury in the state courts. This is another decisive victory for the Fox Film Corporation in its fight for freedom from oppressive, autocratic one-man censorship. The whole film industry is deeply indebted to you for your unflinching stand and vigorous fight, which will be the determining factor in the passage of the proposed ordinance governing censorship and abolishing the obnoxious condition existing today."

Apollo Gets More Main St. Frontage in Peoria

The Apollo Amusement Company, of Peoria, Ill., through Dee Robinson, president, has closed a 99-year lease of the Bestor property on Main street, adjoining the Apollo. This gives the Apollo company 85 feet of frontage in the very heart of the city, the block on Main street between Adams and Jefferson being probably the most desirable in the downtown district. The property is 171 feet deep. The frontage now under 99-year lease to the Apollo is estimated to be worth $300,000. It is predicted that the present luxurious Apollo theatre will be transformed into one twice the size and that in architectural design and artistic adornment it will have no superior in the United States. The Apollo Amusement Company announces its intention of studying the most modern structures devoted to the silent drama, and embodying all the desirable features in their new house.

Educational Films Buys " Mexico of Today "

VICE-PRESIDENT AND GENERAL MANAGER E. W. HAMMONS, of the Educational Films Corporation, announced this week that his company had acquired the sole distribution rights to George D. Wright's "Mexico of Today," which will be in a series of twelve pictures. These portray the entire Southern nation as it is at present, showing the life of the people, their industries, the country, etc. While it is premature to make announcement of bookings, it is known that one of the largest exhibitors has acquired these and that they will be given a special presentation.

Seventy-eight theatres showing Educational's product in Greater New York alone was the record made last week. Practically every theatre on Broadway presented one of these pictures. Besides the Rialto, Rivoli and Strand, the Katzenjammer cartoons were shown at ten of the Loew houses, five Proctor houses in the city and nineteen others outside, and these and other pictures, including the Bruce Scenics Beautiful, the Ditmars "Living Book of Nature" and the Newman travel pictures, were shown at such other theatres as the Standard, Savoy, Eighty-first Street, Seventy-seventh Street, Japanese Gardens and the Claremont.

During the week the New Jersey Metro Corporation, Herman F. Janes manager, acquired the rights for Northern New Jersey for the Katzenjammer and Happy Hooligan cartoons, the Bruce scenics, the Ditmars pictures and the Newman travelogues.

Simplex for Griffith Feature

D. W. GRIFFITH not only selected the Simplex projector, manufactured by the Precision Machine Company, Inc., 317 East Thirty-fourth street, New York City, for the screening of his latest picture, "Hearts of the World," at the Forty-fourth Street theatre, New York City, but has decided on this make of projection machine for the showing of the same picture at the Olympic theatre, Chicago, beginning Monday, April 22; at the Majestic theatre, Boston, beginning Monday, April 15, and at the Garrick theatre, Philadelphia, beginning Monday, April 29.

Previous Griffith film spectacles screened with Simplex machines were "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance." The numerous companies sent on the road by the Epoch Film Corporation, which controlled "The Birth of a Nation" road organizations, were equipped with Simplex projectors.

The machines at the Forty-fourth Street theatre, New York City, were installed by Ben Turner, chief operator and electrician for the Griffith Company, in collaboration with B. F. Porter, exclusive distributor for the Simplex projector in New York City, Long Island and Northern New Jersey. Mr. Turner will supervise the installation of the Simplex machines in the Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, and other houses scheduled to show "Hearts of the World" in the near future.

New Corporations

FOLLOWING is a list of new companies within the industry which were incorporated during the week ending April 13, according to the records of the Corporation Trust Company of Jersey City, N. J.

NEW YORK

SAM LEVY AMUSEMENT ENTERPRISES, INC., Manhattan. Theatrical and motion pictures. Capital, $10,000. Incorporators: Ashler Kleinman, Samuel Levy, Lionel P. Kristeller.

EXHIBITORS' BOOKING SYNDICATE, INC., Manhattan. General moving picture business. Capital, $10,000. Incorporators: Charles L. O'Reilly, Isidore Edelstein, John Manheimer.

CARLOS FILM CORPORATION, Manhattan. General film and theatrical, etc. Capital, $250,000. Incorporators: Abraham Carlos, Abraham B. Samuelson, Richard Croker, Jr.

REGINALD WARDS, INC., Nyack. Motion picture business. Capital, $100,000. Incorporators: Reginald Wards, Rose Schulkind, Harry G. Kosch.

MILLER-WEISS AMUSEMENT CORPORATION, Brooklyn. Motion picture business. Capital, $10,000. Incorporators: Max Miller, Meyer Weiss, Sigmund Schwartz.

NEW JERSEY

ALLIED THEATRES, INC., Newark. Moving picture theatres, amusement enterprises, etc. Capital, $10,000. Incorporators: Edward Cottrell, Edith M. Austin, Herman Heidelberger.

PENNSYLVANIA

SCRANTONIA PHOTOPLAY CORPORATION, Scranton. Dealing in photoplay and moving picture scenes, etc. Capital, $10,000. Incorporators: George W. Shepherd, C. Robert De Bayr, Corinne H. Weeks.

Rapf's Productions Syndicate's Releases

Sidney Cohen, president of the Exhibitors' Booking Syndicate of Greater New York and of the New York State League, in his address before the meeting held at Hotel Astor last week, by prominent exhibitors and producers of the country spoke of the success of the first two releases of the syndicate, "The Struggle Everlasting," featuring Florence Reed, and "The Accidental Honeymoon," featuring Robert Warwick and Elaine Hammerstein, both Harry Rapf's productions.

Mr. Rapf's contract with the Exhibitors' Booking Syndicate was signed after a committee of exhibitors had viewed both "The Struggle Everlasting" and "The Accidental Honeymoon," and approved of them as box-office attractions. It was then stipulated that at least 225 days' booking would be guaranteed, but now it is estimated that the Greater New York run alone will count up to from 400 to 500 days on each feature.

Strand Celebrates Fourth Anniversary

In celebration of the fourth anniversary of the opening of the Strand theatre, New York City, Manager Edel is offering a varied and excellent program this week. It includes Charlie Chaplin's first comedy in his new million-dollar series, "A Dog's Life;" Mae Marsh in her latest Goldwyn photodrama, "The Face in the Dark," from Irvin S. Cobb's thrilling detective story of the same name, and a special bill of shorter features as well as a superb musical program. The theatre has been tastefully decorated for the occasion.

Higher Prices Hit Harrisburg

Exhibitors Hail Advance as Only Hope of Future Profit—Other Theatres in Vicinity Also Follow Suit

NOT only have the leading motion picture theatres in the residential section of Harrisburg, Pa., decided to follow the example of the central business district houses in raising their prices to fifteen cents, but, it is learned from exchange men doing business with theatres in the smaller towns in that section of the state, that the movement has reached them, too, and that the realization is coming to theatre managers generally that their only hope of future profits lies in the tendency toward higher admittance fees.

Within the last few days the Royal, National and Grand theatres—all first-class houses in the residential districts of Harrisburg—have gone to fifteen cents, following the lead of the downtown houses, which went to that figure, through mutual agreement, when the war tax became effective last Fall, and since have placed the amount of the tax on the public in addition to the fifteen cent rate. The Star theatre, in Hummelstown, and the leading theatre in Annville, both near Harrisburg, have adopted the fifteen cent rate. Exhibitors who have made the experiment declare that the venture is not resulting in any falling off in attendance.

J. L. Healy, a prominent exchange man, who is manager of the Harrisburg Film & Supply Company, Chestnut and Dewberry streets, who does a large business in renting films among theatres in the smaller towns of Central Pennsylvania, notes a marked and healthful tendency among theatre managers to advance their prices.

"With the war taxes and other increased financial burdens exhibitors generally with whom I do business are coming to realize that the very life of their business depends on getting more money for the entertainment they provide. It has been my observation that those houses that have the courage to go to fifteen cents are not losing money by adopting that policy, but are, on the contrary, profiting by the change.

"The public appears to be in a frame of mind in which it is willing to pay for quality in film shows, and motion picture theatre patrons are beginning to feel that the houses that, in these times of the high cost of everything, are sticking to the old rates of ten cents, must be offering an inferior sort of entertainment. Most motion picture fans appear now to be more willing to pay fifteen cents, with the assurance they are going to see a good show, than to pay ten for a show that is more likely to be of an inferior sort. It is a healthful state of mind for the public to be in, and this willingness of the public to pay a little more for the real goods is what is going to prevent lots of small town theatres from closing their doors."

Screen Classics Widens Scope

Handles Productions of Our Manufacture in Addition to Taking Over Other Features of Merit—Has Big List

SCREEN CLASSICS, INC., entered into newer activities during the past week by acquiring all the Metro specials already in release, and announcing an enlarged field of activity which is calculated to bring it to a dominating point in the field of larger productions. As previously announced, Screen Classics, Inc., was organized to present the bigger, finer pictures.

It is now announced that this company will not only handle productions of its own manufacture, but will acquire other productions, made independently, provided they pass the tests required in the matter of bigness of theme, beauty of photography and power of story and action. Screen Classics, Inc.'s first production, "Revelation," with Nazimova, met with instant success, and its second, "Lest We Forget," with Rita Jolivet, is being booked throughout the country for long runs. Its third production, "My Own United States," was acquired from William L. Sherrill, president of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, and this has done well at the Rivoli theatre. It was used by Mr. Rothapfel to open the Liberty Loan drive at his theatre, and Mr. Rothapfel's prediction on the net earnings of this picture were even greater than "The Slacker." The fourth Screen Classics, Inc., will be the Dolly Sisters in "The Million Dollar Dollies," acquired from the Emerald Pictures Company and featuring the New York stage favorites.

Under its enlarged policy Screen Classics, Inc., has taken over "Blue Jeans," with Viola Dana; "The Slacker," with Emily Stevens; "Draft 258," with Mabel Taliaferro, and "The Legion of Death," with Edith Storey. These latter, which are Metro productions, will in the future be exclusively controlled by Screen Classics, Inc., and will be distributed through an arrangement effected between Screen Classics, Inc., and Richard A. Rowland, president of the Metro Pictures Corporation, through the Metro exchanges throughout the United States.

Screen Classics, Inc., will have entire control of the new Nazimova series, the first of which will be "Toys of Fate."

Pictures in New Orleans Tulane Theatre

The Tulane theatre, the leading dramatic house of New Orleans, has closed the regular season and Manager T. C. Campbell has inaugurated the policy of presenting a series of high-class special motion picture features, with the same attention to detail and musical accompaniment as is given to a road show. The first production shown was "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," which had big patronage, at prices ranging to one dollar top.

It Must Have Been a "Hummer"

Listen to What William Lord Wright Has to Say About Pathe's Eat-Fest—All Celebrities Present

THE semi-annual dinner, dance and doings of the Pathe Club, held Saturday evening, April 6, at Hotel McAlpin, was a five-reel feature in every detail. There wasn't a fade-out in the entire production. The photography was clear as a bell, the closeups were numerous and the situations were striking, especially when Tom North struck the floor while doing the "Eel Squirm."

There were nearly two hundred ladies and gentlemen in the cast, ably directed by Jack Kyle, late of the Cherry Sisters Stock Company.

With the exception that there was perhaps too much footage in the ballroom scenes the story moved rapidly along from start to finish.

The atmosphere was strong and gripping, being furnished by Joe Dunn who ate Bermuda onions during the intermissions.

Between every Virginia reel (a drammer of the sunny South) the Asthma duo, organized by Colonel P. A. Parsons and Don Ramirez-Torres, sang the sweet songs of childhood.

During the evening Mr. Quimby, manager of the Sales Department, sprung several new and side-splitting jokes, among them being, "Why does a chicken cross the street," and "When is a door not a door?"

There is some argument as to the character of the next function. Some are standing firmly for a quilting bee in the first M. E. Church or an apple paring, while others are partial to a barn-raising or carpet-chance contest.

A good time was had by all Saturday evening.

Among the guests of honor were: Petronious of "Quo Vadis" fame, who wishes to star in Nero's next State Rights feature, "Burning Rome;" Lydia E. Drinkum, Dock Cook, who is strong for snow stuff; Tarleton Winchester of the Repeating Arms Company, M. Franconi, the mezzo-soprano, whose vocal selections from Ill Trovadore are too well known to need repetition here, and Captain Werkmeister, the Irene Castle of the club, gamboled extensively and impartially.

Among those who attended were the following and their wives: Paul Brunet, Mr. Huot, G. Bardet, D. Blyth, S. Candelier, J. A. Dunn, C. F. Frisch, C. Julien, S. Machnovitch, Tom North, P. A. Parsons, Ramirez-Torres, F. A. Quimby, C. Van Arsdale, H. Lewis, F. R. Long, B. Millhauser, A. J. Picard, Stott, F. G. Wiley, Champion; Mrs. Gasnier, Mrs. Furtner; Messrs. C. A. Brady, F. Duffy, J. M. Grevers, A. Goodman, A. Heaney, J. Humm, J. W. Kyle, Two Roches—Mique and Eddie, M. Kohn, J. J. Kinney, E. M. Mardrus, Willim March, C. H. Moore, J. A. O'Shanghnessy, Charles Zenker, Prince J. Paleologue, M. R. Regalado, S. Rubenstein, J. T. Richards, A. Reinlieb, G. A. Smith, A. Werkmeister, T. Winchester, A. Van Rossum, F. Drewes, M. J. Etchingham, H. Stravers, Encio, R. J. Sheridan, Churbuck, Harold M. Davis, E. St. George Hardin, F. H. Knocke, M. Frejman, F. N. Rothenberg, Charles A. Logue, Arthur B. Reeve; Misses Pearl White, B. Freedman, L. Muller, A. M. Pryor, L. Fassano, A. Stolovites, C. B. Jacobson, S. Gilde, J. Vander Linden, F. B. Roset, G. Traverso, K. L. Davis, A. O'Brien, A. W. Schutt, B. McNeill, R. Goodman, A. Tomson, H. Rosenzweig, C. Wahman, M. Cheney, Hellecy, Finnegan, Prost, P. Turk, Dougherty.

Fox Grasps Another Opportunity

Films the Caillaux Case of France and Plans to Startle World with It Shortly—Considered "Scoop"

THE Caillaux case of France is soon to be shown on the screen. Together with an announcement that Bolo Pasha, alleged associate of Joseph Caillaux, former Premier, has made far-reaching disclosures on the eve of his execution for treason, comes a parallel announcement that the entire Caillaux-Bolo intrigue has been filmed by William Fox. Mr. Fox also announces that the release of this big photodrama has been withheld, but solely that the picture may include the momentous episodes which are expected to follow Bolo's revelations.

The Fox organization has centered its energies in the production of "The Caillaux Case." It has capitalized the news interest of the events surrounding the unsavory public career of Joseph Caillaux; the trial and acquittal of his wife on the charge of murdering Gaston Calmetto, editor of the Paris Figaro; Caillaux's alleged connections with Bolo in spreading pro-German propaganda in France and America; the exposure of these activities by the United States Government; Bolo's condemnation to death; Caillaux's imprisonment on a charge of treason, and has also woven into the play various scandals, intrigues and marital sensations in the lives of the "evil genius of France" and his beautiful wife.

Speaking of the production, William Fox declared that "The Caillaux Case," in all its intricate international ramifications, was the greatest intrigue of modern times.

"The famous Dreyfus case," he declared, "cannot be compared with this affair in scope, in the prominence of its leading character, or in its vital significance to the democracies of the world. I believe 'The Caillaux Case' is the most far-reaching, the most vital drama that my organization has ever made for the screen. I doff my hat to the splendid work done by Richard Stanton in directing it. I shall release it with a sense of supreme pride."

Visited Universal City

J. A. Morrison, manager of the Star theatre, Merford, Ontario, and also part owner of the Eugene theatre, Eugene, Ore., was a recent visitor at Universal City, Cal.

In and Out of Town

Among those who were in town for the meeting of the exhibitors and producers, held at Hotel Astor last week, were: Frank J. Rambusch, president of the American Exhibitors' Association of Indiana; William McGee and King Perry, representing the A. E. A of Detroit; Fred Nixon Nirdlinger and M. Spiers, representing the United Exhibitors' Association of Philadelphia and Eastern Pennsylvania; Byron Parks, of the Inter-Mountain States A. E. A.; Fred Harrington, Pittsburgh; Louis Frank, representing the Motion Picture Theatres' League, Philadelphia; Sidney Cohn, president of the Exhibitors' Booking Syndicate of Greater New York; M. F. Tobias, representing the exhibitors of Upper New York; Harry Crandall, prominent exhibitor of Washington, D. C., and Lester Park.

Those of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit who have arrived in New York to attend the meeting of that organization, opening Monday, are: Aaron Jones, Chicago; Emanuel Mandelbaum, Cleveland; M. P. Dewess, Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada; J. S. Jensen, Butte, Mont.; William Servies, St. Louis; E. V. Richards, New Orleans; F. V. Fisher, Seattle; T. L. Tally, Los Angeles, and H. O. Schwalbe, Philadelphia. Others are expected Monday. The above-named are stopping at the Hotel Astor.

Harry Dunn, of the Filmusic Company, Los Angeles, left New York Wednesday of last week after a week in town on business.

Charles Chaplin, who is in New York boosting for the Third Liberty Loan, is stopping at the Ritz-Carlton.

Sidney Chaplin, brother of the comedian, is in New York.

Pershing Thanks Universal for Album

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company has just received a letter from General John J. Pershing, which is highly prized by President Carl Laemmle. The letter is autographed by the General and is written on his official stationery and thanks the Universal for the Pershing letter of cheer album and the spirit which prompted its sending. The album contained the autographs of President Wilson and all the members of his Cabinet, many Senators and Governors and thousands of prominent citizens.

General Pershing wrote: "The receipt of the war album has touched me very deeply. The letter of cheer contained in the album will prove a great inspiration to the American Army in France, and it is my greatest desire that we may prove ourselves worthy of the love and confidence of our people at home as expressed therein. The album is indeed a handsome souvenir and will remain in my family. Many, many thanks.

What Kind of a Fellow Is—Griffith?

Being a Glance at the Real Human Side of the Big Men of the Picture Game Caught in Action

By William A. Johnston

DAVID W. GRIFFITH isn't going to be exactly satisfied when he reads this article.

But that is a feeling he must share with us. Mr. Griffith's dissatisfaction won't be any greater than our own is certain to measure when the last word is written.

For Mr. David W. Griffith has an advantage over us—he knows, perhaps better than any one else does, just what kind of a fellow Griffith is.

While we, after many close-up personal observations and considerable investigation among his intimates, have to confess that we either don't know or we can't tell within the narrow confines of this page—what kind of a fellow Griffith is.

It can't be done. He's too many-sided—there are too many kinds of Friffith fellow. Contrast, for example:

The Griffith whose favorite poet is Browning, and favorite poem "The Ring and the Book," with the Griffith whose "show sense" and acumen have made his productions the record money-earners of the business.

Or, contrast the Griffith with mentality tremendous enough to dream the big dreams that made "The Birth of a Nation," "Intolerance," and "Hearts of the World," with the Griffith whose personality when in conversation with you shouts forth in every manner and word—light-hearted, unreserved, ingenuous boyishness.

Once more we say—it can't be done.

Were we to write of the Griffith of achievement this would become a page of tribute, packed with six-cylinder adjectives and ninety horsepower sentences.

On the other hand, if we tell you of the genial open-hearted, "great big grown-up kid" that his associates know—you won't believe it is the same Griffith.

But, no matter how much you have liked and admired the Griffith productions, you would admire and like the real Griffith a great deal more.

You warm up to him—because he warms up to you.

He just bubbles enthusiasm, an effervescing enthusiasm that seems divided equally between the joy of living and the pleasures of your conversation.

No matter how little real value there may be in your opinion on the particular topic, you get the opinion that he values it.

There's a knack to that—but it isn't a knack that can be acquired. It has to be born in you.

Another point. When David Griffith comes to New York it may be taken for granted that he has considerable business to attend to, but does he therefore hie himself to imposing and dignified seclusion, with "Not Welcome" signs in the office?

He does not. He locates himself in a Times Square office that is easily located, and in which, after you have located it, you find him easily accessible.

Yes, accessible even to advertising solicitors—which, according to Fred Beecroft, is the height of accessibility.

He likes to have you tell him that you liked his picture — not with the air of one seeking flattery, but with a manner which seems to say, "Well, why did you like it, what phase impressed you?"

Which makes you weigh your words carefully—you experience a mixed sensation, a feeling that, on the one hand, he is aiming to profit by your "spectator's viewpoint," and on the other that he is seeking to learn if you appreciated some subtle point in the picture that he doesn't expect every one to recognize.

He was born in Kentucky—but he doesn't use that fact as excuse for a poes, he isn't a professional Southerner.

Some years ago there were several ways of irritating him. One

(Continued on page 2528)

ICE
ICE
ICE
LITTLE LUNCH COUNTER
IN OUT
HE LUNCHES IN 3 MINUTES
PALMER
HE PUTS ICE IN HIS BATH TO MAKE IT COLD
HIS SOMBRERO DECORATED WITH WINDOWS

Exhibitor Service Bureau

Minneapolis Theatres "Shy"

Most of Them Fail to Do Their Part in Supporting Papers That Print the News Most Generously

MINNEAPOLIS Saturday and Sunday newspapers offer an inspiration in co-operation. We regret to say that many of the Minneapolis exhibitors do not offer anything more than despair in the way that they fail to take advantage of the opportunities that are offered them.

Taking all three newspapers into consideration, Minneapolis has the best co-operation of any city that we have yet taken up in this series. No theatre in that city has the right to object to the play that it is getting for the money that it is spending. There is little matter printed in the week day issues about motion pictures, but in the absence of more general advertising we, with our desire to see the press give the fullest space to the activities of the film world, could not expect the dailies to do more than they are doing.

Like so many cities, the failure of the smaller houses to advertise is the cause. They probably excuse this on the ground that they "cannot afford it," but without a personal visit to the houses we would be willing to stand by the general declaration that there is not a theatre in Minneapolis that cannot afford to use a minimum amount of space in the papers there, not only on Sundays but during the week. They are missing an opportunity that is not presented to theatres in most of the cities.

And just let us say this here. About two years ago there was a wonderful turn of newspapers toward motion picture publicity. They threw their pages wide open and tried to get real news from the publicity departments of the head offices. Many of them begged for the sort of matter that they wanted—and failed to get it—and in lots of cases the papers became disgusted and cut down the matter to local matter. That was the day when the producer was depended upon, but today the newspaper is depending on the local exhibitor and the local exhibitor that fails to encourage the paper that is trying to help him is deliberately cutting his own throat.

Minneapolis, in the last census, had a population of 353,000. It has seventy-four motion picture houses. Six of these might be classed as first-run houses. Sixty-eight others are included under the suburban heading. Two of these, the New Calhoun and the Lagoon, seating respectively 1,100 and 1,300 are very near the first-run class.

Now the Minneapolis situation is rather unusual in that it is to an extent a syndicate city. Finkelstein and Ruben own all the "Loop" houses except one, the Strand and one of the neighborhood houses. One of the theatres that is classified under the F. & R. heading is not at present under that ownership, but is soon to become so. The F. & R. houses are booked from the general office; the Strand is a strictly open booking theatre. The New Lyric, the New Garrick, the New Unique and the New Aster are the syndicate "Loop" houses. The New Garden is the theatre the syndicate is expected to take over. The New Calhoun is the neighborhood theatre.

Now what is the advertising lesson from these theatres? The "Loop" theatres advertise daily. According to the papers before us the Strand is far the most liberal advertiser during the week, using large and intelligently employed space. The New Calhoun and Lagon theatres advertise Saturdays and Sundays. Four of the other neighborhood houses advertise regularly and about eight irregularly—quite irregularly. That's a mighty poor showing for them.

There are three daily newspapers in Minneapolis:

Journal, Evening Daily and Sunday.

News, Evening Daily Only (Motion Picture Department Saturday).

Tribune, Morning, Evening and Sunday.

And let us say here that with only three daily newspapers in a city of this size the theatres have mighty little excuse for failing to use newspaper space, for they have to advertise in only one morning, two afternoon and two Sunday papers to reach everyone in the city. It is centralized circulation at a comparatively low advertising rate and the Minneapolis theatres are overlooking a chance that exhibitors in a lot of other cities would like to have.

The Journal devotes four pages to amusements, three of which we have reproduced opposite. The first page is given to a New York letter, an article by the dramatic editor, Charles M. Miles, either on a stage or screen subject, and a third story of general interest—in this case, "Belasco Talks About the Ideal Movie." The second page, which we have not shown, is devoted to legitimate and vaudeville house mention largely, though there is a column headed "Anxious Askers' Questions Answered" which deals with motion picture players as well as others.

Although the reproduction is small please note the excellence of the layout on the third page of the Journal's amusement section. Large cuts are given the first run houses and the photos of Rita Jolivet, Alice Joyce, Ruth Clifford and W. S. Hart stand out almost like paintings and the scene cut from "The Kaiser" is striking. On this page there are brief summaries of the attractions at the leading theatres and in another column casts of the features that are being given their first local showing during the week. In addition there is a weekly contest for the identification of players by their eyes, profile, etc.

The fourth-page reproduced is devoted to advertising and in the case of the current issue the text matter does not refer to motion pictures, though it generally does. The advertising of the motion picture houses and the others is not classified, but we find only fifty-five inches of motion picture advertising, though the Garrick also carries a large advertisement of "Lest We Forget" in another part of the paper.

Certainly the space that the Journal gives to motion picture matter, when it is considered that there is only about two and a half columns of advertising, is most generous. Only nine theatres are represented.

The News has no Sunday edition and so gives its display on Saturday and most attractively. On the first page there is the layout on the first run pictures, which occupies a half page. The management of the Strand theatre has shown its sense of values by buying four columns of space regularly under the layout, a place where a display will attract the utmost in attention. The remainder of the page is filled with stories about the new pictures being shown locally.

The second page is devoted to the week's installment of "The Hidden Hand" and motion picture stories. Let us say here that the newspaper is wise to include the motion picture serial in the general department instead of sinking it away in the regular magazine or fiction section.

The third page is devoted to general news of the picture world, stories about the local houses and a unique feature—"Where You Can See the Stars in Minneapolis." This is another form of the "Chart" feature of which we have commented several times, though we do not believe that it is quite as good.

An astonishing thing is that this feature includes ALL of the theatres of Minneapolis, whether they are advertising or not. It is a commendable enterprise on the part of the News and shows that it has the welfare of the patrons at heart. It does not give the dates of showings, but advises the reader to phone the theatre for the day of the week that the star may be seen. Of course this is done so that it won't be a straight-out free advertisement for the theatre that does not advertise, but we would recommend to the News that it limit this matter to the theatres

(Continued on page 2520)

How Minneapolis Newspapers Aid the Motion Picture

At the top at the left and in the center, and in the center of the lower row are three pages from the Journal. The center row and at the left of the lower row four pages from the News. At the right of the top and bottom rows two pages from the Tribune

THE SUNDAY JOURNAL.

HENRY MILLER HAS OWN THEATER AND NEW LIGHT COMEDY

DAVID WARFIELD RETURNS IN "THE MUSIC MASTER"

TRYING TO FIND MEANING OF TERM "GLORY OF ART"

BELASCO TALKS ABOUT THE IDEAL MOVIE

The Movie Mirror

GRIFFITH'S NEW WAR FILM IS PRODUCED

THEATERS The Minneapolis Tribune MOVIES

LYRIC IT'S HART "TIGER MAN"

Garrick RITA JOLIVET "Lest We Forget"

PRO-GERMANS THE KAISER STRAND

METROPOLITAN DAVID WARFIELD "The Music Master"

SHOW OF WONDERS

MAUD POWELL

Orpheum SALLIE FISHER RUTH ROYE AVON COMEDY FOUR

SHUBERT Potash and Perlmutter In Society

CALHOUN KOEHLER BAND NATIVE HAWAIIANS

GRAND SEVEN KIDDING KIDS

PANTAGES "OVER THERE"

PALACE

UNIQUE DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

ASTER ALICE BRADY "The Knife" Alice Joyce "The Song of a Soul"

LAGOON

GAYETY THE BIG REVIEW OF 1918

GARDEN MONROE SALISBURY RUTH CLIFFORD "RED, RED HEART"

PHILHARMONIC CLUB

The SCREENS

THRILLS TO FEATURE ALL FILM OFFERINGS

STRAND To the Public "THE KAISER" CALL THE MARINES You May Hiss and Hoot To Your Heart's Content

THE HIDDEN HAND BY ARTHUR B. REEVE

NEW GARDEN MONROE SALISBURY RUTH CLIFFORD "RED, RED HEART"

YOUR FAVORITE FILMS AT NEIGHBORHOOD THEATERS

WHERE YOU CAN SEE THE STARS IN MINNEAPOLIS

FIRST RELEASES FOR NEXT WEEK

Resinol

IN HALLS OF SCIENCE U. S. BREAKS DOWN MANY WAR HAMPERS

STANDARDS BUREAU ANSWER SCORES OF EQUIPMENT QUERIES

Movies

Thomas Pleads For Lighter Stories

FROM Omaha and New Orleans there come this week very frank answers to the question: "What is the matter with pictures?"

It is remarkable how, as this symposium continues, the opinions of the members of the Advisory Board agree on the chief faults with the features of today. Certainly, when this series is concluded the producers will have the advantage of the best advice about what the public wants.

In anouncing this Advisory Board we predicted that it would result in great service to the industry, and here this first expression of opinion is furnishing a guide to the makers of pictures that they can safely follow as coming from the most representative body of exhibitors ever gathered together.

Read what H. M. Thomas, of the Strand, Omaha, tells you about the need of three or four comedy-dramas to each emotional effort. He tells of the features that have gone over big at his house and of some that have failed. And he takes a little rap at some of the comedies.

Ernst Boehringer, veteran southern exhibitor whose new New Orleans house, the Liberty, will soon be opened, wants pictures made for themselves and not for length.

H. M. THOMAS, manager of the Strand theatre, Omaha, comes forward with a most interesting analysis of the problem as to what is the matter with pictures. Every word that he writes is well worth reading carefully. One of the points that he makes is that the public wants more of the light comedy dramas, and he would have three or four of these to every emotional drama:

Regarding your inquiry with reference to better pictures, I think you have touched the most vital matter affecting the industry to-day—a subject in which every one connected with the business is bound to be vitally interested.

I think the most important place to improve pictures at the present time is in the scenario department, for the very simple reason that we are getting too many features with rehashed plots, or features where the heart interest and punches are so few and far between that the interest of the spectator lags.

It's all right to talk about giving us better captions, more artistic photography, better casts, and all that sort of stuff, but if the story is not "there," the public goes out saying that was a "poor" picture, while if the story has heart interest, the proper punches, does not drag, and is even fairly made, the majority of the public goes out satisfied. Please understand me, I think we should improve the photoplay every possible way, but to my mind the most important factor to-day is the story. I further honestly believe that there will not be much improvement in the story line under the present system of scenario departments.

The embryo author must be encouraged and helped. When he sends in a story, it should be given careful attention, the good points marked, as well as the bad ones. Then if it is not possible to use the story or any parts thereof, a long letter pointing out the bad faults and asking for further scripts. This may take some time and money but that is one of the ways we are going to get out of the built-to-order scenario generally, simply a new twist to some old plot which has been done time and time again. Personally, I am against director-author scripts, for, in the first place, either the story or direction suffers, and in most cases it's the story, the director simply building up a working continuity from things he has seen before, with a new "piece of business" here and there. I candidly believe that it would pay the big producing companies to work as hard on scenario writers as on big stars, but this seems to be one of the things they neglect, and as a result our patrons are dissatisfied time and time again at seeing absolutely punchless, plotless stories—just 5,000 feet of moving pictures—that's all you can call them.

I guess it's the universal opinion of theatre managers that the public prefers light, clean comedy-dramas on the order of Fairbanks and Ray, so it's needless for me to comment further on this phase of the question, simply to add that Omaha is no exception to the rule, and that these are the kind of pictures that go the best here.

Personally I have my "ire" up just now against the fairy-tale fantastic spectacle. My audiences simply abhor them (except the children and a few old ladies), and yet the producers seem determined to still give them to us. Marguerite Clark in "Snow White" was a big success because it was about the first fairy story, but Marguerite Clark in "The Seven Swans" was a big flop in my house—not because the picture was any less artistically produced than the former, but simply because the audiences had been "fairy-storied" out.

As I note, my honorable colleagues state, give us stories, not footage, and this is one of the things I admire about a Fairbanks picture. While, to my mind, there is more action in one of these features than any other, THE FOOTAGE IS LESS THAN ANY OTHER FEATURES WE SHOW, simply proving the fact that some one connected with Mr. Fairbanks' establishment realizes that it's action and not footage the public wants.

I find that Omaha audiences, at any rate, enjoy good, fast melodrama once in a while, and also enjoy society dramas where the action does not lag, but, especially with this class of stories, the directors seem to think one of the requisites is to make them slow-moving, and as a result the audience goes to sleep.

If I were connected with a producing company making a program of, say, eight pictures a month, I would try to give my customers three to four light comedy-dramas on the order of Fairbanks, J. Pickford, Ray, Taylor Holmes, Ann Pennington, Vivian Martin, George Walsh and many other stars who appear in productions of a light vein; one highly emotional drama, along the order of Miss Ferguson, Miss Frederick, etc.; one melodrama once in a while of the Western order; one society drama, introducing beautiful sets and well-gowned men and women.

I believe the public prefer light comedy-dramas in preference to anything else, and by giving them once a week—that is, when two features are shown each week—they would be more satisfied than any other way.

I know my audiences are tired of war pictures, especially those that show war scenes—not because they are unpatriotic, but simply because they have been "war-pictured" to death.

War pictures dealing with spies operating in America or based

ADVISORY BOARD, EXHIBITORS SERVICE BUREAU

Samuel L. Rothapfel, Rialto and Rivoli theatres, New York.
Thomas D. Soriero, Park theatre, Boston, and Strand theatre, Lowell.
Harold B. Franklin, Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo.
Edw. L. Hyman, Victoria theatre, Buffalo.
E. Mandlebaum, Loew's Stillman theatre, Cleveland, Ohio.
Mrs. Joseph Grossman, Standard theatre, Cleveland, Ohio.
S. Barret McCormick, Circle theatre, Indianapolis.
Theo. L. Hays, New Garrick theatre, St. Paul.
M. W. McGee, Majestic theatre, Detroit.
Chas. G. Branham, Strand theatre, Minneapolis, Minn.
E. V. Richards, Jr., General Manager, Saenger Amusement Co., New Orleans.
Ernst Boehringer, Liberty theatre, New Orleans.
F. L. Newman, Royal and Regent theatres, Kansas City, Mo.
H. M. Thomas, Strand theatre, Omaha.
P. E. Noble, American theatre, Butte, Montana.
George E. Carpenter, Paramount-Empress theatre, Salt Lake.
Sam W. B. Cohn, Liberty theatre, Spokane, Wash.
G. F. Fullerton, Advertising Manager, Greater Theatres Co., Seattle, Wash.
E. J. Myrick, Liberty theatre, Portland, Ore.
Ralph Ruffner, Columbia theatre, Portland, Ore.
Eugene H. Roth, California theatre, San Francisco.
J. A. Partington, Imperial theatre, San Francisco.
Sidney Grauman, Grauman's theatre, Los Angeles.

Orleanian Scores the "Super-Features" on local patriotic themes go over all right, but when they move the story over to Europe some how the interest drags.

I think one of the main needs of the picture game today, especially for the houses showing more than a feature and weekly, is suitable comedies.

We must have comedies, but not the kind we are getting in a majority of cases. Girls in one-piece bathing suits, comedians in grotesque make-up, whose chief idea of comedy is to ogle some girl's leg or run around minus their trousers, or some other suggestive piece of business, will not make a comedy that picture patrons like. The thing for comedy producers to remember is that their audiences, or at least the majority of them, are not "fly," but ladies and gentlemen who have never seen Mr. Ziegfeld's Follies as one extreme or an American circuit burlesque show as the other extreme; not that I wish to cast any reflections on either of these organizations, but comedy bits which get over for the seasoned theatregoer at the Follies or burlesque fan at the wheel show do not appeal to the majority of picture-going people.

It's possible to make pictures that are funny and at the same time clean and full of pep. I never saw a better comedy in my life than "The Bell Boy," with Fatty Arbuckle, yet it's clean, full of action and MAKES YOU LAUGH. Give us more comedies with a sequence of a plot dealing with home life, something like the Drews, and our audiences will also be better satisfied. I am not against introducing pretty girls in a comedy, or slapstick comedy either, for that matter, but give it to us in a clever rather than suggestive manner.

Another thing that has just struck me as being a matter that needs improvement is the everlasting hug and kiss finish of every ninety-nine out of one hundred pictures. Give us some artistic finishes once in a while.

I have been in the picture game for a long, long time, and one of the hopeful signs I see at the present time is the fact that producers and directors are becoming aware of the fact that the exhibitor really knows what the public wants, because he's the man who deals with them, and that they are now giving his requests and statements serious consideration, whereas a few years ago they thought, "Oh, he's only a poor little exhibitor, what does he know about picture-making?"

ERNST BOEHRINGER, who is soon to open the handsome Liberty theatre, New Orleans, and who is one of the oldest and most successful exhibitors in the country, makes a strong plea for the elimination of mere footage. He declares that there is no class of patrons that appreciate these long, drawn-out affairs. Entertainment is the big thing that the public demands in the picture house.

Primarily, the producer is wrong in assuming that the public cares for pictures of considerable length. It has always been wrong to establish an arbitrary length for "features" and to pad up or prune down to the set standard. Better by far 3,500 feet than 5,000, if the extra 1,500 is shoddy. The recent trend to longer pictures fills us with apprehension. Prefixing "super" to "feature" and adding 2,000 or 3,000 feet is a move in the WRONG direction. The public will abide a picture of 7 or 8 reels once in a while, IF ACTION JUSTIFIES the length. But then, how many such pictures have we been shown? Try to remember how many you have seen!

We are glad Motion Picture News has started this discussion. We are glad the producer wants to know what the public wants and believe the producer will make what the public wants when the exhibitors who KNOW tell him what is wanted. There are exhibitors who are in the business to stay who have made it their business to KNOW what the public wants and who will be glad to tell. And we hope those who know and who will contribute to this discussion will not confine their views to or be guided by their own individual cases only, but will bear in mind the viewpoint of hundreds of exhibitors in their territories whose houses may be more modest, but who nevertheless make up the great number of "days" each picture plays. For the producer obviously cannot make pictures for a FEW ultra theatres running pretentious programs which consume two hours or more. Even so, ninety per cent. of the patronage of these ultra theatres do not care for pictures of 7 or 8 reels. The plain fact is that pictures of this length are usually pruned down by the house manager either to fit the music or the time which may be devoted to the showing of the feature, or the film is speeded atrociously.

We KNOW that the patrons of New Orleans' photoplay theatres DO NOT care for the extreme length features—whether in its best or in its most modest theatres.

In the final analysis, the patron is the paying-for-it-all-guy. He is a tired business man, perhaps, or just a plain, unassuming clerk. He is looking for ENTERTAINMENT. And mark this truth: The more IMPORTANT his position in the business world, the less inclined he be to wrestle with lengthy, weighty problem plays when he goes to "the pictures." He likes a good story, but doesn't want it too long. This type of the species will visit a big downtown house with his family, or, may be after a business conference, in the company of a friend. If you have watched his you will know that he has the same capacity for enjoying the pictures as his stenographer or his office boy. And, if you know his tastes, you know that he prefers lighter recreation and a varied program. A feature running not more than an hour, if possible, a news film and a comedy—yes, the slapstick stuff, at that. He has stepped out of his work-day character, and has become one of the genus fan.

And running down the social scale you will find the same intolerance of very long pictures. When you reach the shirt-sleeve neighborhood houses you will find them impatient of the feature unless it is very mellow melodrama or very woolly Western; the elders are as eager as their offspring for the 'steenth episode of the blood-curdling serial which is to follow.

So WHERE does the "superfeature" fit in? We grant that there is business for a real superproduction once in a while, but we deny that four-fifths of the so-called "superfeatures" or "Specials" are anything but inflated five-reelers, or have merit beyond them.

Thus far we have not approached the subject from the angle suggested by the Motion Picture News. But LENGTH of pictures is no less important than any of the other elements which will form the bases of the various suggestions which will result from this discussion. As regards the betterment of the picture itself, many points suggest themselves. An important one is the disbanding of stock companies and the hiring for each individual production of actors peculiarly fitted for the roles they undertake to portray. This is being done to great advantage by at least one producer as a fixed policy, and his productions offer a sharp contrast to those in which a big star is exploited and surrounded in a hit-or-miss way by mediocre talent picked from the players on the lot. "Ruggles of Red Gap" and "A Pair of Sixes" are instances in mind.

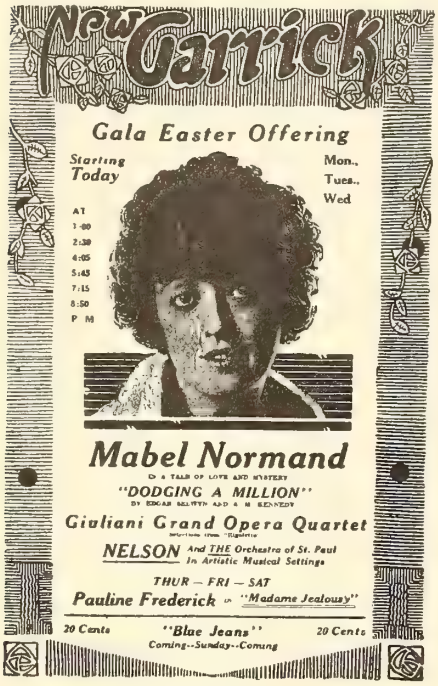
In our theatre we will seek to avoid morbid plays or plays with morbid situations. We will avoid crook plays unless they are exceedingly well produced; as an example, "Loaded Dice." Incidentally in it, Pathe has shown us how a murder may be established without being shown, a clever bit of screen craft. And we will avoid as much as possible costume play. It is most unpopular.

There is no denying the psychology of dress and luxurious surroundings. The vast majority of photoplay's patrons, not being wealthy, love to live in a little world of luxury, even if only in communion with the screen. This truth, perhaps, explains why the amazingly clever portrayals of celebrated character actors whose scenes are laid in squalid surroundings fail so ignominously in spite of their wonderful artistry. The black coat and decollete, an atmosphere of elegance, will always be prime favorite. Sharing its popularity is the sweet, wholesome countryside atmosphere.

We prefer a production of a published book or story. Not all books and stories are adaptable to the screen, but the producer who exercises discretion will find many; and those which are adaptable are apt to be real stories. They were in the first place accepted by editors who are more likely connoisseurs of story material than the producer's scenario editor. And such films, if released with original title of story, have better pulling power.

Your Idea---and Ours

GARRICK THEATRE, St. Paul, Minn., is achieving some unusually artistic effects in recent displays. Effort is being made to get away from the ordinary type announcements and to attract attention by the surroundings given the advertisement.



New Garrick

Gala Easter Offering

Starting Today

Mon., Tues., Wed

AT 1:00 2:30 4:05 5:45 7:15 8:50 P M

Mabel Normand

IN A TALE OF LOVE AND MYSTERY

"DODGING A MILLION"

BY EDGAR SELWYN AND A. M. KENNEDY

Giuliani Grand Opera Quartet

Selections from "Rigoletto"

NELSON And THE Orchestra of St. Paul In Artistic Musical Settings

THUR — FRI — SAT

Pauline Frederick in "Madame Jealousy"

20 Cents "Blue Jeans" 20 Cents

Coming--Sunday--Coming

For instance, in announcing the Easter bill a border carrying out the effect was used. The name of the theatre was displayed above everything else, and that is the correct principle for the New Garrick, for it is determined on a policy of institutional advertising and Manager Thomas L. Hays is certainly getting there with it. One peculiar thing strikes one about this display, and that is the relatively small type that is used for the title of the picture. The cut brings out the Mabel Normand end of the announcement and the name of the star centers the attention immediately under the cut so that the title is readily to be seen, yet there is more or less of an "eye hunt" for it, and we would have used larger type here, sacrificing either the names of the authors of the story or reducing the type for the second half of the week announcement.

To try and to fail is still success if it has made you think.

ONE reader writes: "Why do you pick out bad advertising and comment on

THE G-R-A-N-D New Million Dollar PhotoPlay Theater

CONTINUOUS—10 A. M. TO 11 P. M.

Personally Directed by Mr. Harry Davis PRICES 1500 Seats 25c 1000 Seats 15c Loge & Private Box Seats

Artcraft Super Feature

WM. S. HART in "THE TIGER MAN"

Week Starting Monday Morning, April 8th

A Schedule of the 8 Performances Daily Now on View at Box Office, Where Patrons Can Ascertain [illegible] Starting Hour of Each Program.

SUNSHINE COMEDY- "SELF MADE LADY"

BURTON HOLMES TRAVELOGUE "DOWN the YUKON"

GRAND'S NEWS WEEKLY OF INTERNATIONAL EVENTS.

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA PLAYS ALL DAY

April 15—SEE NEXT TUESDAY'S NEWSPAPERS.

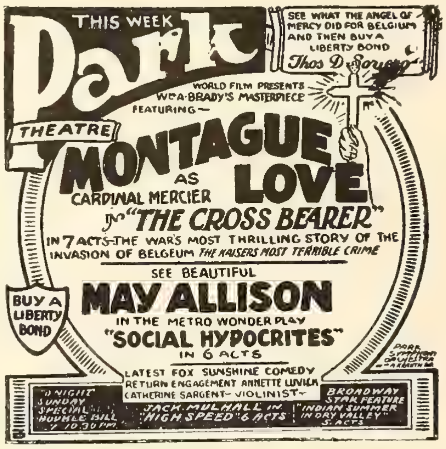
city. The Walnut, Strand and Family, unit if it is not sent to you?" He refers to one of his own theatres which was recently reproduced here with some comment that was not at all flattering. And so we'll answer: The reason is to keep others from falling into the same habit, to encourage exhibitors in communities to get better displays. It generally follows that where one consistently good advertiser springs up there are others to follow and the display of that city shows general progress.

It is for this reason that we are taking this from the Pittsburg papers. Here is the display of a house that advertises itself as "The Million Dollar Theatre," yet in the Sunday papers it occupies a space two inches deep across two columns and uses the shoddiest old-time type that could be found in any printing house.

Mere words do not make a house. The atmosphere counts, and nowhere more than in the advertising.

At any rate, don't let's have an Idea-less day.

THOMAS D. SORIERO, manager of the Park theatre, Boston, never loses an opportunity to do "special occasion" advertising. For instance, at Easter or Christmas or whatever the occasion may be, he always gets a little touch of the season, as it were, in his displays.



THIS WEEK Park THEATRE

SEE WHAT THE ANGEL OF MERCY DID FOR BELGIUM AND THEN BUY A LIBERTY BOND Thos D Soriero

WORLD FILM PRESENTS WM A. BRADY'S MASTERPIECE FEATURING—

MONTAGUE LOVE AS CARDINAL MERCIER IN "THE CROSS BEARER"

IN 7 ACTS-THE WAR'S MOST THRILLING STORY OF THE INVASION OF BELGEUM THE KAISERS MOST TERRIBLE CRIME

SEE BEAUTIFUL MAY ALLISON IN THE METRO WONDER PLAY "SOCIAL HYPOCRITES" IN 6 ACTS

BUY A LIBERTY BOND

PARK SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

LATEST FOX SUNSHINE COMEDY

RETURN ENGAGEMENT ANNETTE LUVICH

CATHERINE SARGENT- VIOLINIST-

TONIGHT SUNDAY SPECIAL DOUBLE BILL 7 TO 10.30 PM.

JACK MULHALL IN "HIGH SPEED" 6 ACTS

BROADWAY STAR FEATURE "INDIAN SUMMER IN DRY VALLEY" 5 ACTS

This advertisement of the Park stands out against all of the others in the Boston Sunday papers because it is the only one that carries the Liberty Bond angle. Mr. Soriero picked "The Cross Bearer" because it a particularly fitting picture to show on the inauguration of the loan and he admonished the public twice in each of his displays to buy a Liberty Bond.

There is more than mere patriotism in this sort of work. It shows the public that the theatre is alive and up to the minute, and the ordinary patron is pretty apt to conclude that the live theatre manager is reasonably sure to have a show that is just as timely and that he is taking advantage of everything in the way of giving NOW presentations.

Travel with Us This Week

OVER THE ROUTE OF GOOD PICTURES

GOOD ONLY FROM

April 1st to April 7th Inclusive

NO STOPS

Nicollet Theatre Nicollet at Grant St. Phone Nic. 3012 J. M. Bergstrom, Jr., Mgr.

"THE HOUSE OF COURTESY"

MONDAY-TUESDAY, APRIL 1st-2nd

William S Hart Artcraft

The World's Greatest Producer

THOS. H. INCE

Presents

WM. S. HART

The foremost delineator of Western types and stories the world has ever known.

In

"A Square Deal"

AND THE TWELFTH EPISODE

("A Desperate Chance")

"VENGEANCE AND THE WOMAN"

Featuring the greatest daring serial team living

WILLIAM DUNCAN and CAROL HOLLOWAY

THE PLAYERS IN THE TWELFTH EPISODE

HENRY BLAKE	WILLIAM DUNCAN
BESSIE BLAKE	CAROL HOLLOWAY
Black Jack	George Holt
Jim Morgan	Fred Burns
Cal Hawkins	S. E. Jennings
Curley Brown	Pat Rooney

ADDED FEATURES

"HER FAME AND SHAME"

"Some komedy"

AND

LATEST PICTORIAL TRAVELOGUE.

Coming Attractions Soon

ALICE JOYCE and HARRY MOREY In

"RICHARD THE BRAZEN"

WM. DESMOND In

"THE SEA PANTHER"

"LITTLE RED DECIDES"

With

JACK CURTIS and BARBARA CONNOLEY

WALLACE REID In

"NAN OF MUSIC MOUNTAIN"

(Schedule)-(Time Table)

Daily Continous 7 to 11 P. M.

Sundays and Holidays Continous 2 to 11 P. M.

Come any time before 9:30 P. M. and see a full show (Round Trip)

Last Stop 9:30 P. M.

Tickets

Adults 15c Children (under 12) 5c

"SOMETHING original and different each week, if possible," is the motto of Manager J. M. Bergstrom, Jr., of the Nicollet theatre, Minneapolis. That means he is constantly on the job and that the man who is trying to put over something different every week is bound to get there.

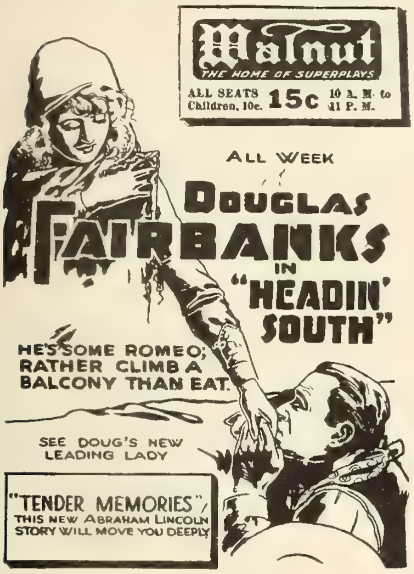
Here is an idea that he has just used and it can be employed with success by any house, especially by neighborhood theatres. He used a strip twenty-one inches long and four and a half wide in the form of a railroad ticket. This folds so as to fit into a narrow envelope such as are used in railway ticket offices, bearing the words "Nicollet Special" and the picture of a train. We have reproduced here only the first and last parts of the "ticket." Casts are given for all of the productions, changes being made four times a week, and in each case there is a small cut of the star. This is a novelty that will attract attention.

"House of courtesy" is the motto of the Nicollet.

Summer's nearly here. Time to get "all het up" over the big things that you are going to do to increase your patronage.

IT is a delight to see the great improvement being made by three of the Cincinnati houses. We have several times commented on the almost uniformly bad advertising done by the theatres of that city. The Walnut, Strand and Family, un-

What Live Wires Are Doing



Walnut

THE HOME OF SUPERPLAYS

ALL SEATS 15c Children, 10c. 10 A. M. to 11 P. M.

ALL WEEK

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS IN "HEADIN' SOUTH"

HE'S SOME ROMEO; RATHER CLIMB A BALCONY THAN EAT.

SEE DOUG'S NEW LEADING LADY

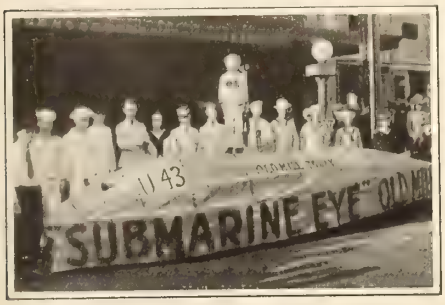
"TENDER MEMORIES", THIS NEW ABRAHAM LINCOLN STORY WILL MOVE YOU DEEPLY

der the same management, have tried to do more than the others and have gotten much better effects. Now these theatres have taken another step forward and, instead of using mere type matter, employ specially designed advertising.

This display on Douglas Fairbanks in "Headin' South" is especially good for a number of reasons. There is ample white space, the name of the theatre and the prices are properly displayed and there is the love element to the drawing that will certainly appeal to the woman element. There's a good phrase in: "He's Some Romeo; Rather Climb a Balcony Than Eat." How many people who have shown this picture figured that there would be a lot of people interested in the fact that "Doug" has a new leading woman? When you stop and estimate how many admirers this actor has among the fair sex, you see at once what the interest would be in the fact that he is making love to a new one—in this picture.

Misery may love company, but there won't be much of the latter in a theatre when the misery is in the picture.

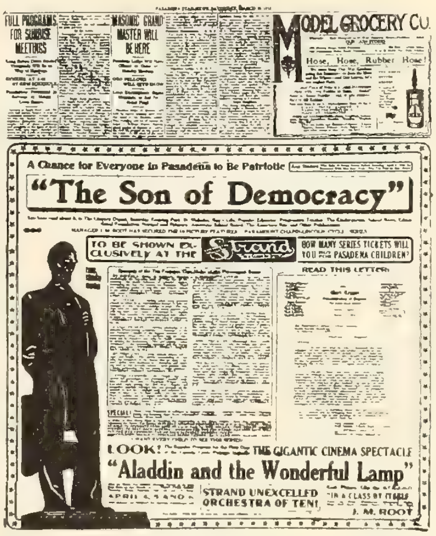
HARRY B. HEARN, manager of the Old Mill theatre, Dallas, Texas, did big business with "The Submarine Eye" as the result of the exploitation that he devoted to it. One of the things that he did to boost it was the use of an imitation submarine.



The lobby of the theatre was built with wall painting all around representing ships coming in and the floor covered with fake sea moss. Real sailors and costumes helped give the effect. Gongs were sounded each half hour in the lobby and in the theatre with the calls "One bell and all's well." Admission prices were worded "First Cabin," "Lower Deck," "Upper Deck" and "Steerage." All the lights about the house and lobby were in green during the showing of the picture.

HERE is a sample of advertising that is far from satisfactory. We have reproduced the full page from the Pasadena Star-News. Now, just as a lay reader, what is the first thing that strikes you on glancing at the page?

Now, the newspaper page is twenty inches deep. The advertisement of the Strand is fifteen inches across the page. The first impression that we get is that the theatre has tried to save money instead of using the whole page. Of course, that is not the case, for the display is a most generous one, but the advertiser would have gained a much better effect by having used six full columns, which would have amounted to the same space as he did occupy. There would have been better chance for display and there would not have been the skimpy effect.



FULL PROGRAMS FOR SUNRISE MEETINGS

MASONIC GRAND MASTER WILL BE HERE

MODEL GROCERY CO.

Hose, Hose, Rubber Hose!

A Chance for Everyone in Pasadena to Be Patriotic

"The Son of Democracy"

TO BE SHOWN EXCLUSIVELY AT THE Strand

HOW MANY SERIES TICKETS WILL YOU ... PASADENA CHILDREN?

READ THIS LETTER

SPECIAL!

LOOK! THE GIGANTIC CINEMA SPECTACLE

"Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp"

APRIL ...

STRAND UNEXCELLED ORCHESTRA OF TEN!

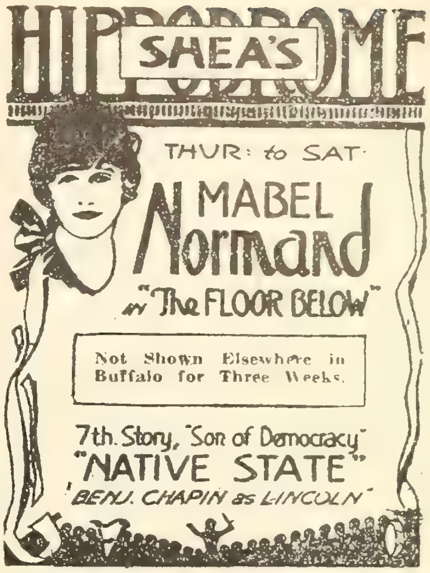
"IN A CLASS BY ITSELF"

J. M. ROOT

While of course this advertisement is meant to be constructive, there is just about ten times as much reading as there should have been.

Some people have to sit on a pin now and then to know that there are such things as pins in the world.

IN answer to some recent criticisms of the card system employed by some leading theatres for their daily advertising, we have been asked to print specimens of good advertising that can be obtained in small space. The writers point out that there are a number of papers published in their cities and that the rates are too high to permit big displays in all of the papers.



SHEA'S HIPPODROME

THUR: to SAT

MABEL Normand in "The FLOOR BELOW"

Not Shown Elsewhere in Buffalo for Three Weeks.

7th. Story, "Son of Democracy"

"NATIVE STATE"

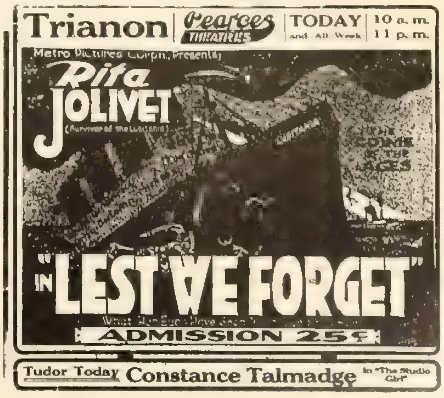
BENJ. CHAPIN as LINCOLN

So to answer this inquiry we take another city where conditions are the same, Buffalo. There are five dailies there and their rates seem to us to be unusually high, but Harold B. Franklin, manager of Shea's Hippodrome, has found a way to use small space and get effects. The display reproduced here is one column and occupies a space three inches deep. That gives room for white space around the cut, which is especially designed for each picture. It is certainly a solution of the problem, for the display stands out strong among the other amusement advertising.

The fellow at the head of the procession never gets anyone's dust in his eyes.

HERE is a good advertisement, yet it violates many principles. Still it is good because it enters into the spirit of the picture with its black and white effects and its shadowy background suggestive of the call of death that came with the torpedoing of the Lusitania. It would have been better had the same idea been carried out in the arrangement of the name of the theatre and the prices and hours. If this had been in black and white effect there would have been no jarring of the eye, no hint that this type matter refers to a different subject.

See what we mean? Below the advertisement there is the type effect referring to another one of the Pearce theatres. It is quite apparent to the eye that there are two separate announcements being made.



Trianon | Pearce's Theatres | TODAY and All Week | 10 a. m. 11 p. m.

Metro Pictures Corpn. Presents

Rita JOLIVET

(Survivor of the Lusitania)

In "LEST WE FORGET"

ADMISSION 25¢

Tudor Today Constance Talmadge in "The Studio Girl"

And They Lived Happily Ever After

This is the fifteenth and last of the present series of "The Diary of a Successful Exhibitor." This man has contributed a business building story and there should be scores of others who have profited by his experiences. If there is demand he may resume the series at a later date, and certainly he will contribute articles from time to time.

By a Successful Exhibitor

FROM what other exhibitors have told me, I am pretty sure that the majority use short subjects entirely as fillers for their programs—with the object of merely getting a certain number of reels rather than achieving any special variety of program or getting pictures that go together well. I found out that there were two evils found in dealing with short subjects. First, the inclination to regard them as fillers, and then as the absolute contrast the disposition of some exhibitor to try to "uplift" his audience.

Let me say right here that while unquestionably the motion picture is the greatest educator that the world has ever known, yet you cannot get people to come into your theatre if you notify them in advance that you are going to educate them. Now, my town is merely a typical American small city with the varied elements, working population, professional classes, etc. Probably if I had tried to make any "high-brow" appeal with my short subjects I would have drawn a certain element to the theatre, but would have kept away a larger number of regulars who would have thought that I was going to take the amusement out of the pictures and put instruction in its place.

We had a woman's organization in our town that we will call the Athena Club. It was composed of some 250 of the "leaders" in female thought. There could never anything happen that they did not meet and have a resolution of some sort passed and published in the local paper. They took themselves so seriously that one would have thought that they were deciding the destinies of the nation. But still it remained that there were two hundred and fifty of these members and these were, to me, two hundred and fifty patrons.

So I made it a special task to appeal to these people. I had arranged to book a series of some twelve travel pictures, and at an expense of only $10 I was able to get some of these reels for a special showing to this club. It was a big event and there were special invitations issued—by the members, and it happened that on the morning I showed the first of these I had nearly five hundred of the club members and their friends in the theatre. This was at a morning exhibition and the admission was not to the public. In the first place, these exhibitions caused more or less of curiosity on the part of those who were not invited as to what they were all about. And whether the pictures were good or not they made boosters out of everyone present. My girl cashier, to whom I have referred before, observed that a great percentage of these women came again and pictures were shown as a part of the regular bill.

"Don't you see," she told me, "that they have bragged about these pictures so much that they feel that they have to come to show the people that the pictures are as good as they said they were?"

I had these endorsements of the club women printed without great display on them. I did not want to have the pictures looked upon as being sponsored by these women, though I did want their support. And this reminds me of a "clever stunt" that my competitor pulled about this time. He booked a picture that had a very suggestive title, but which really didn't amount to anything, good or bad, but he thought that it would be a good idea to sensationalize it, and so he had a minister of the city who was intensely fond of publicity. So this exhibitor turned over the exploitation book and a number of scene pictures to the minister and got him to condemn it in a sermon. You will remember that we did not run Sundays, and so I was surprised when on a Sunday night my editor friend called me up and asked me to come to the office. Then he showed me a copy of the sermon that had been sent in to him for publication.

"It is as raw a fake as I ever saw," he said. "I just wanted to show it to you, because now I am going to throw it into the stove." But I interceded and asked that he print it. He was willing to grant me the favor, but insisted that it would hurt all motion pictures, and that he thought that I was taking the wrong angle. Possibly I would have been had I not done so, and had I not determined that I was going to make this competitor of mine pay for every break that he made. The story was run. The picture was shown. It was not half as bad as its title. The people who were impressed by the minister's sermon stayed away. Those who were convinced by it went to the theatre and were disappointed because they did not find the suggestiveness that it promised. It hurt both ways.

I have impressed on you how thoroughly I was converted to publicity. Two days later I took three full columns of space, and all I used in it was this:

"There are good people and bad. The most of the former are respected citizens; a good share of the latter are in the penitentiary.

"There are good pictures and bad ones. The decent ones are the only ones that we allow to be shown at the Waterford.

"We know what pictures are before we show them. We promise you nothing that we do not deliver. And we promise you cleanliness all the time."

Everybody read that advertisement, and scores of them that knew nothing about the picture that had been offered at the other theatre came to me and asked what I meant. I told them.

Three days later the owner of the two other houses came to me with his second offer for a merger of interests.

In the meantime I had added the school interest. Every two weeks I took some picture—short subjects generally—around to the various schools and had them shown, and the teachers themselves gave talks with them. A portable screen and a few curtains that could be hung over the windows did the trick. I was lucky in the fact that the head of the school board was a believer in pictures and that he readily granted the permission. Every one of these pupils talked about the pictures at home, and this brought the parents out to see them.

It was a brief development to send the pictures around to the country schools. It cost me money to do this—more than most exhibitors would care to put up, for I could not afford to show these pictures unless I got all the people available in each community to attend. So I used a feature, short subjects and just a little more than my regular show, without the music. You should have seen the crowds that I got at these performances, which were, of course, free, and you can well imagine the prestige that they gave my house and the increased patronage that I got from the country.

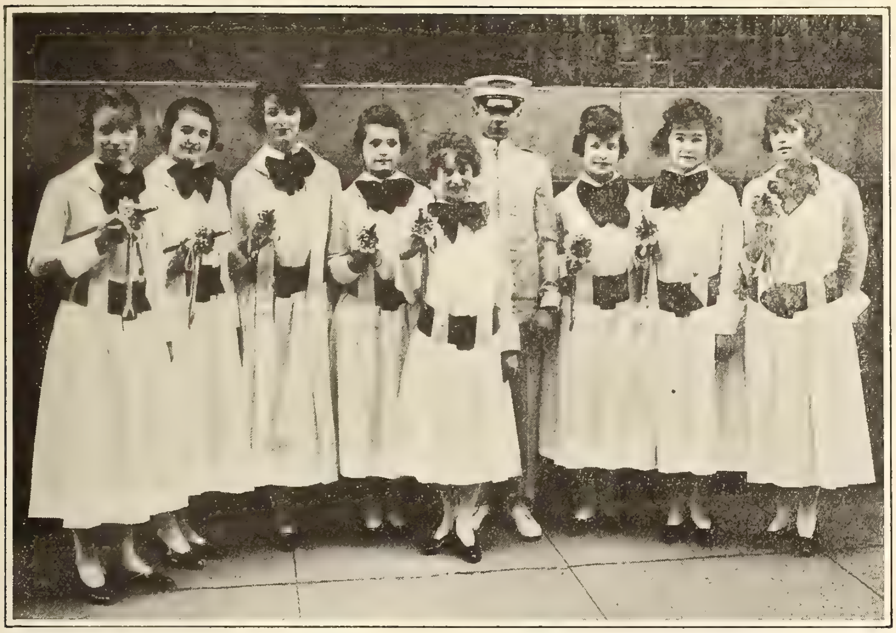
During the world's championship I showed the pictures of the series and gave free admissions to every baseball player. I made friends of them for life. In similar manner I tried to appeal to every organization, every class, every human element, in some way and to get the appeal home, not as a specialty, but because my theatre was covering the world.

Now I had the bulk of the patronage of my town and I had established my theatre through my district so thoroughly that the chances were ten to one that any one who came to town looking for amusement would attend my theatre. I had succeeded in making my theatre THE theatre of this neck of the woods.

And so I refused the offer of my competitor to merge our interests. He admitted that my theatre had won the cream of the patronage, but he suggested that the three houses could appeal to different classes. I could not see it that way. But I made him an offer for his interests. I really had not realized until that time how far down the ladder he had gone. He snapped it up.

Next month I am going to open the two others, after some important repairs have been concluded. I am also going to open two other houses in different parts of this county. Some of these days, if the demand is sufficient, I will tell you about some of the policies followed there and some of the other things that I used in the Waterford.

But in the meantime, the little cashier, whom I have mentioned several times, and myself are going on our honeymoon trip and let the organization that we have built up run the house in the meantime. It ought to be easy, without any opposition.



Athletic girl ushers of the Liberty theatre, Portland, Ore., in the "Buster Brown" costumes they wore Easter week.

This Week at the Strand

WE sure did have some time getting into the Strand theatre Sunday. Charlie Chaplin had the house packed, the immense lobby filled, and then a line of people a block long in front of the house. For the people who had to wait to buy tickets we were sorry, but we had to wait a half hour ourselves before we could even get into the theatre. And it was worth it to laugh and hear the thousands of others laugh through the three reels of "A Dog's Life."

This was presented, too, with specially arranged music that added to the picture, the jazz effects being given in the cafe scenes and "Only a Bird in a Gilded Cage" being used as the girl sings—on the screen.

"Roumanian Poem," which was used several weeks ago is again the overture at the Strand, and this is shown with lighting effects that are most effective. Church bells announce the approach of the national fete, then night comes and with it the storm with the lightning, thunder and rain cleverly shown, and then comes the crowing of the roosters and the assembly of the people for the fete, and finally the national anthem.

The Topical opens with Hearst-Pathe pictures of an "American Camp," showing the final preparations for the front, and then follow H.-P. pictures of opening of the baseball season at San Francisco. Paramount-Bray supplies training of police horses, and then pictures of the Italian heroes. Then come pictures of the visit of the King and Queen of England to the home army and here "God Save the King" is played.

But the big punch comes with the ending, Hearst-Pathe pictures of the arrival of American soldiers on the Picardy front. The audience simply goes wild, and there is not only applause but continued shouting. Patriotic selections, ending with "Over There" are used.

Miss Dorothy South then follows singing "The Star" and "Love Is the Best of All," and then comes the feature, Mae Marsh in "The Face in the Dark." Beautiful special Japanese settings are used in the next musical number, the duet from "Madame Butterfly" sung by Rosa Lind and Giovanni Cammello.

And then—the roar of laughter. The audience was just at the right pitch for the Chaplin comedy. There had been no comedy in the remainder of the bill, and every one was keyed up for a good laugh—and none was disappointed.

Rialto and Rivoli

(Continued from page 2518)

"rhythm of light," if the expression may be pardoned.

Then comes the feature, Elsie Ferguson in "The Lie," an unusually strong picture, and after this there is a lighter effect given with the "Fanese Lantern Dance"—no pun—executed by Miss Dorothy Smoller. The bill closes with another one of the Drew comedies.

Yes, there's something new about this comedy, "A Youthful Affair." It was suggested by Master Arthur Rothapfel, the young son of S. L., and already at his age one of the best critics of motion pictures that you want to see.

Now, look back over these two bills. Figure out the number of chorus and other musical effects, the special settings, the scores of things done to make the two shows perfect satisfaction to every one. It takes work, lots of work, but as we told you at the start all the work in the world couldn't do it if the theatre didn't have the organization that Rothapfel has built up.

Myrick Dresses Athletic Ushers as "Buster Browns" on Easter

ON Easter Sunday, E. J. Myrick, the live-wire manager of the Liberty theatre, Portland, Ore., handed his many patrons, who are kept ever on edge for service innovations, a costume surprise, his dozen girl ushers greeting the public decked out in white-and-black Buster Brown outfits, the niftiest thing in theatre attache garb ever seen in the Northwest.

White poplin suits, with huge white collar and cuffs, wide black patent leather belts and black patent leather pumps, with white silk stockings, and cute little swagger sticks adorned by old-fashioned corsage bouquet with purple and white ribbon streamers, completed the costume.

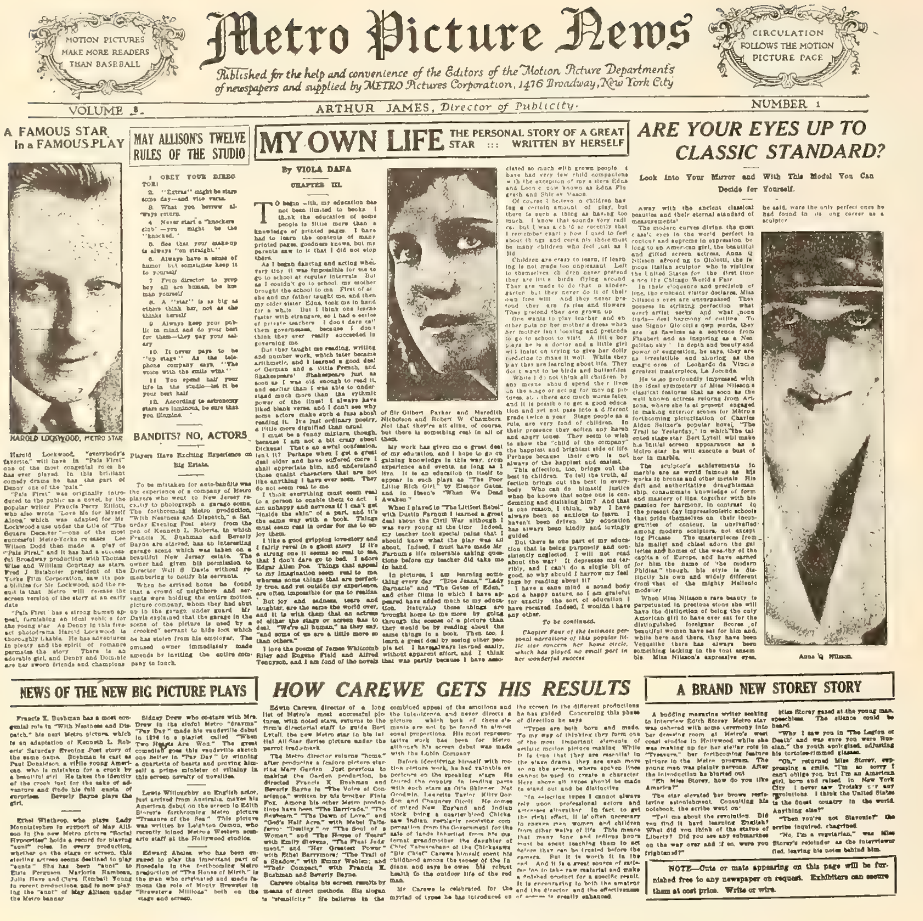
The Liberty girls are a healthy, bright, and sparkling squad. Much of this is due to Myrick's athletic adjunct to Liberty service. Efficiency is his slogan, with an eye ever towards public approbation, and to insure the best possible service from his girls he has inaugurated a gymnasium class, with lessons three mornings a week on the Liberty roof, as well as fire drills three days each week. He has installed shower baths in the basement of the theatre so that the girls have every convenience.

Myrick has put one over on the country with his athletic-girl stunt, for the Liberty is the first house to introduce the gymnasium as a part of its equipment. However, he's a pioneer in many things, and at present has a clay-modeller on his staff, preparing slides for his curtains; has just built marble tree stands for sidewalk decoration, and is installing a huge $50,000 Wurlitzer Hope-Jones Unit Orchestral organ, part of which attracts attention as a window display in a big department store.

Milwaukee House Features Its Short Subjects

MANAGER R. C. WHEELER, of the Downer theatre, Milwaukee, believes that short subjects are not only worth running, but they are worth talking about. In a recent issue of his house organ he devotes as much space to the first of the Judge Brown stories, the short subject for that day, as he does to the feature, Douglas Fairbanks in "Headin' South."

Mr. Wheeler works on the theory that his patrons are interested in everything that he shows them, and he plans the program on the policy of giving the public only worth-while productions, in the short as well as in the feature subjects. This is giving one hundred per cent exploitation to the whole offering.



MOTION PICTURES MAKE MORE READERS THAN BASEBALL

Metro Picture News

CIRCULATION FOLLOWS THE MOTION PICTURE PACE

Published for the help and convenience of the Editors of the Motion Picture Departments of newspapers and supplied by METRO Pictures Corporation, 1476 Broadway, New York City

VOLUME 3. ARTHUR JAMES, Director of Publicity. NUMBER 1

A FAMOUS STAR In a FAMOUS PLAY

MAY ALLISON'S TWELVE RULES OF THE STUDIO

MY OWN LIFE THE PERSONAL STORY OF A GREAT STAR ::: WRITTEN BY HERSELF

By VIOLA DANA

CHAPTER III.

ARE YOUR EYES UP TO CLASSIC STANDARD?

Look Into Your Mirror and With This Model You Can Decide for Yourself.

HAROLD LOCKWOOD, METRO STAR

BANDITS? NO, ACTORS

Anna Q. Nilsson.

NEWS OF THE NEW BIG PICTURE PLAYS

HOW CAREWE GETS HIS RESULTS

A BRAND NEW STOREY STORY

NOTE—Cuts or mats appearing on this page will be furnished free to any newspaper on request. Exhibitors can secure them at cost price. Write or wire.

Metro's New Form of Press Sheet for the Newspaper

Metro Issues Press Sheet That Newspapers Will Accord Welcome

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION has just issued the first copy of the new style of press sheet which is intended for newspapers only and which goes a long way toward solving the problems of the photoplay editors who are really looking for news matter. The whole sheet is about fifteen inches square, the matter being printed so that it can readily be clipped.

It is the matter, however, that is contained on this sheet that attracts especial attention for it is written in real newspaper syle and without the string of adjectives, exaggerations and positive untruths that seem to find such a considerable space in much of the matter that is sent to the newspapers. There are several of the longer stories telling about the stars and coming productions. In this one is printed the third chapter of Viola Dana's story of her life.

One thing which we especially commend and which will be appreciated by photoplay editors is that the mats or cuts which will be supplied free to newspapers are without trademarks or other lettering. A photoplay editor on any decent newspaper will only use as a last resort a cut that has the company's name plastered all over it, making it resemble an advertisement rather than a news feature. This department has commented many times on that failing, and it is with relief that the change in the Metro plan is noted.

Whether you are showing Metro pictures or not, it will be worth your while to call the attention of this press sheet to the photoplay editors in your town. Of course, if you show the Metro product it will do you direct good, but even if you do not there will be indirect benefit in getting the paper in the habit of printing the sort of matter that interests the fans and works for greater popularity of motion pictures.

Great Majority of Minneapolis Houses Ignore Their Advertising Opportunity

(Continued from page 2510)

THAT DO ADVERTISE. We believe that the paper is going further in giving service than there is any need of doing and that this plan will encourage the smaller houses not to advertise. They certainly can use a small space, and make it pay.

We believe in co-operation in the fullest measure, but co-operation cannot be one-sided and the theatre that does not show the disposition to join with the newspaper when that paper is doing a most commendable work, certainly merits no sympathy from the press. Yes, we are for the theatre, but we are for the best interests of the theatres as a whole and not for those that are willing to stay back in yesterday, hoping, possibly, to profit a little from the enterprise of others.

On the fourth page there is another attractive feature under the heading "First Releases for Next Week" in which the stories and casts of the new features are given. There is also a column on "The Men Behind," written by Abram Altrowitz, the photoplay editor. Nine theatres are represented with a total of eighty-six inches of advertising, slightly more than four ordinary columns.

The Tribune devotes two pages to motion pictures, the first being taken up with advertisements of all the theatres, a cut of Fairbanks and a bunch of kiddies and news stories about pictures. The other page is given to an immense layout on productions at the local first run houses, stories of the productions and news matter. Besides the separate advertisement of the Garrick in another part of the paper, the Tribune carries fifty-three inches of advertising, representing nine theatres.

There is one slight improvement that we might suggest to all of the Minneapolis papers and that is to devote a column of more space to short gossip about the stars and coming productions. This will be found more interesting than a mass of the longer stuff.

But by and large the Minneapolis papers are far in the lead on the Saturday and Sunday showings. They are doing even more than the theatre co-operation warrants them doing, and we again strenuously urge the theatres to wake up to their opportunity and take full advantage of the chances for exploitation that they have.

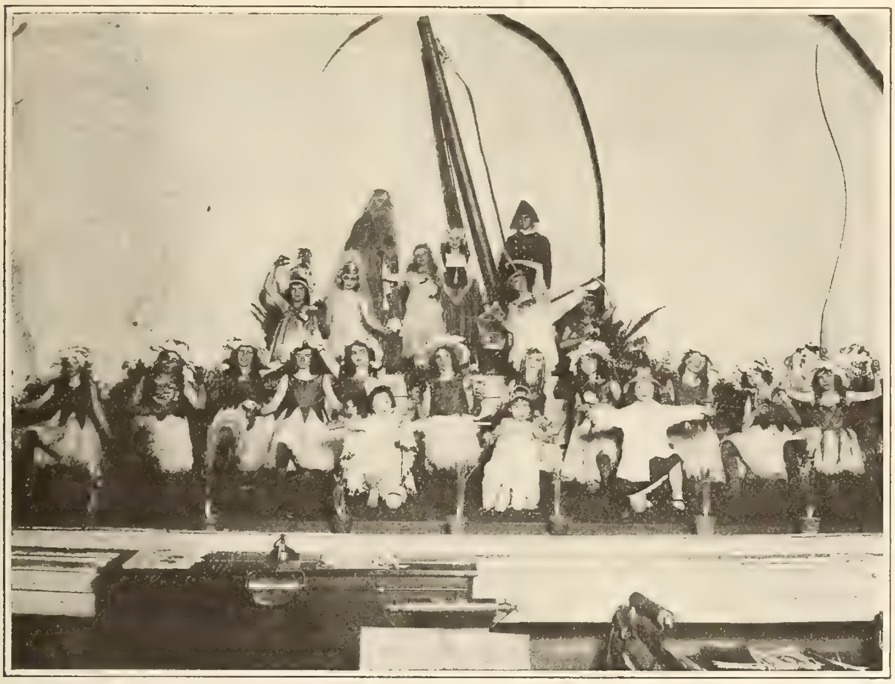
With the exception of the Strand and the New Garrick, which uses large space in the daily issues, the theatres seem to do little advertising during the week. The News devotes three columns of space to them on Monday and more in the middle of the week. These are real reviews written by the dramatic editor or his assistant. The Journal devotes space to reviews of new pictures. We note none in the Morning or Evening editions of the Tribune. Only five of the theatres, the Strand, Garrick, Lyric, Unique and Aster advertise daily, so far as the papers that we have show. Certainly in such cases and where they use only small space they could expect no further favors during the week.

In brief, Minneapolis newspapers have certainly done their part. We are mighty glad to see that and mighty sorry that there are so many theatres that fail to take advantage of it.

Boston People Hear Park Overture on Phone

After weeks of work at the Park theatre, Boston, Manager Thos. D. Soriero has finally completed an apparatus whereby the Park's popular Symphony Orchestra can be heard in anybody's home by just calling the Park theatre on the phone. This new apparatus will be in working condition for the whole of next week.

Wm. A. Krauth, director of the orchestra, has arranged special music, taking in the selections for the last thirty years up to the present popular hits.



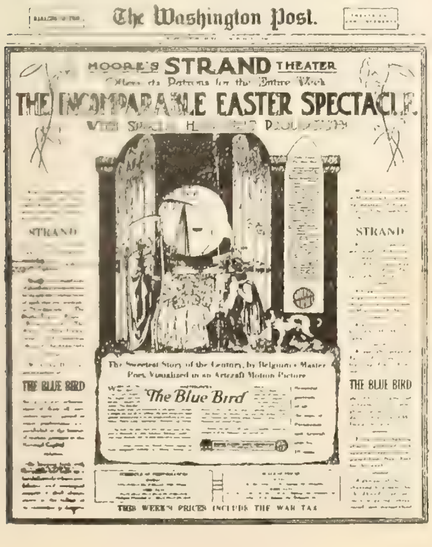
Ensemble flower ballet used by Tom Moore at the Strand theatre, Washington, on "The Bluebird" presentation.

"Bluebird" Spurs Exhibitors to Unusual Advertising and Presentation Methods

"BLUEBIRD" gave a number of exhibitors an opportunity to do their greatest work in the way of presentation of the Maeterlinck masterpiece in film form. Many others will probably present the picture in an unusual way.

Advertising done by exhibitors on this picture has been interesting and artistic. Three of the first available efforts are reproduced here. Tom Moore, of Washington, used unusually large space in announcing the showing at his Strand theatre. He used the first page of the amusement section of the Washington Post and used the general design furnished by Artcraft together with his local announcements.

Managing Director Jack Kuhn, of the Stillman theatre, Cleveland, Ohio, had an artistic quarter-page announcement in the Sunday papers, using a cut that is familiar through its use by Artcraft in announcing the production in its advertisement in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS. The Easter border was employed with excellent effect.



The Washington Post.

MOORE'S STRAND THEATER

Offers its Patrons for the Entire Week

THE INCOMPARABLE EASTER SPECTACLE

STRAND

THE BLUE BIRD

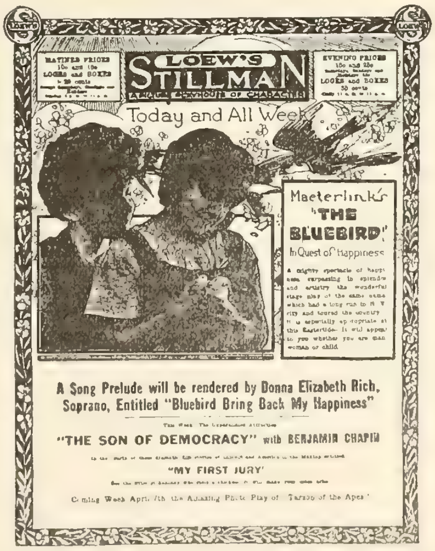
The Sweetest Story of the Century, by Belgium's Master Poet, Visualized in an Artcraft Motion Picture

The Blue Bird

STRAND

THE BLUE BIRD

THIS WEEK'S PRICES INCLUDE THE WAR TAX



MATINEE PRICES 10c and 15c LOGES and BOXES 20 cents

LOEW'S STILLMAN

EVENING PRICES 15c and 25c LOGES and BOXES 30 cents

Today and All Week

Maeterlink's "THE BLUEBIRD" In Quest of Happiness

A mighty spectacle of happiness surpassing in splendor and artistry the wonderful stage play of the same name which had a long run in N. Y. city and toured the country. It is especially appropriate at this Eastertide. It will appeal to you whether you are man woman or child.

A Song Prelude will be rendered by Donna Elizabeth Rich, Soprano, Entitled "Bluebird Bring Back My Happiness"

"THE SON OF DEMOCRACY" with BENJAMIN CHAPIN

"MY FIRST JURY"

Coming Week April 7th the Amazing Photo Play of "Tarzan of the Apes"

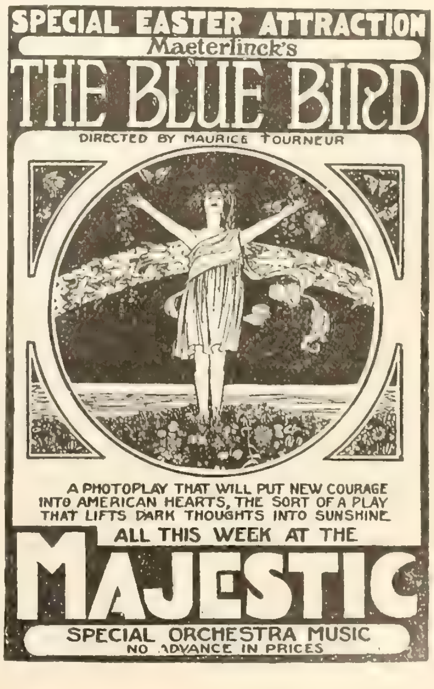
Max Stearn used a space three columns wide and slightly more than nine inches deep in announcing the presentation at his Majestic theatre, Columbus, Ohio. This specially designed display carries out the spirit of Easter and of youth thoroughly, and makes one of the best displays possible in a limited amount of space.

Mr. Moore used a special prologue in his presentation of the "Bluebird" in the capital city. The photograph reproduced on this page gives only a slight idea of the beauty of the settings. First, by arrangement with the Shuberts, the original stage setting of the Memoryland scene with its special "shadow box" lighting effects, was secured from New York. Thereupon arrangement was made with Miss Cora B. Shreve, the foremost ballet instructress in the capital, to stage a special Happiness Ballet, with a solo toe dancer and an ensemble of twenty coryphees. Mr. Jarvis was again secured and the prologue finally staged as follows:

Overture by the augmented symphony orchestra, featuring Clare Kummer's song, "The Blue Bird," with slow curtain revealing stage dimly lighted with blue tone, fleecy clouds drifting slowly by; "The Blue Bird" second chorus sung off stage. Gradually expanding light until stage, banked in flowers, is discernible;; toe dance by Gloria Kennett, in spotlight; ensemble flower ballet, at conclusion of which Miss Kennett again appeared, ending ballet with tableau picture. Foreword to the picture by Mr. Jarvis, as Father Time, at top of steps back stage with Tyltyl and Mytyl in costume, with bird cage, etc. Scene then parted revealing barge under full sail, in which Father Time, Tyltyl and Mytyl started on the journey to Memoryland. Quick curtain and immediate projection of the picture.

This introduction, wholly within the spirit of Maeterlinck's masterpiece, and Artcraft's filmization of it, led perfectly into the screen story, afforded an additional advertising feature of local interest.

While Mr. Kuhn did not use any special stage setting at the Stillman, he inserted an additional piece of film before the picture itself. In the photoplay the first title flashed is the announcement of the fable of the quest of the Bluebird and concludes with the announcement that happiness can be found at home. Just here Mr. Kuhn inserted a piece of film that contained the words of the song, "Bluebird, Bring Back My Hapiness to Me." This film contained a number of bluebirds flying around the song at the time the words were on the screen. During this time a singer sang the song from the side of the stage, never appearing to detract from the theme of the picture. All of the lights were in blue, dimmed effect.



SPECIAL EASTER ATTRACTION

Maeterlinck's

THE BLUE BIRD

DIRECTED BY MAURICE TOURNEUR

A PHOTOPLAY THAT WILL PUT NEW COURAGE INTO AMERICAN HEARTS, THE SORT OF A PLAY THAT LIFTS DARK THOUGHTS INTO SUNSHINE

ALL THIS WEEK AT THE

MAJESTIC

SPECIAL ORCHESTRA MUSIC

NO ADVANCE IN PRICES

Ready Made Ad-Talks

Jewel Carmen in "The Bride of Fear"—A Sensational Story

(Fox—Five-Reel Production)

Married to a crook, who lets it be thought that he is dead, a lovely girl falls in love with a man worthy of her, only to have the husband reappear, is the interesting theme of "The Bride of Fear," the Fox photodrama which will be seen on ——— at the ——— theatre. The manner of the husband's reappearance, moreover, is such as to form one of the most exciting climaxes ever evolved in a dramatic plot. In the leading role of Ann Carter ——— patrons will be given the opportunity of seeing Jewel Carmen, newest of Fox stars. Miss Carmen was born in Kentucky, which may or may not account for the fact that she is strikingly beautiful. Nor does she have to depend upon her beauty to bring her fame, for she has already demonstrated that she is one of the most versatile and finished actresses on the screen. The manner in which she interprets the role of "The Bride of Fear" constitutes a real triumph. Beautiful settings, including a yacht scene, have added to the unusual plot to make this a striking example of photoplay production. Ann Carter, despairing of life, turns on the gas. A crook rescues her, and not knowing he is a thief she marries him, out of sheer gratitude more than for any other reason. The police arrest him and he is sent to prison, and Ann becomes secretary to a wealthy man, whose son falls in love with her. Upon Ann's being told that her husband has died in an attempt to escape from prison her engagement to her employer's son follows. One night the crook climbs into her bedroom and demands that she help him rob the house, and when she refuses he attempts to strangle her. A fight between Ann's two husbands follows—and that is where we leave the story, the ending of which is graphically told on the screen. Charles Gorman plays the crook, L. C. Shumway the second husband, and Charles Bennett the latter's father, Ann's employer. The story of "The Bride of Fear" is by Bennett Cohen and the scenario by S. A. Franklin, who also directed the production.

Jewel Carmen will be seen in "The Bride of Fear" at the ——— theatre on ———.

"The Purple Lily" Gives Kitty Gordon Fine Opportunities

(World—Five-Reel Production)

"The Purple Lily," which will be seen on ——— at the ——— theatre, has an unusual number of notables in its cast. Kitty Gordon, the internationally famous beauty, is the star and featured with her is Muriel Ostriche, almost equally well known to motion picture fans. Howard Kyle, of the Actors' Equity Union, has the role of a cure. Mr. Kyle, who has long been prominent in theatricals, decided to get some actual working experience in the motion picture industry so as to be of further aid to Union members who are working in pictures. Clay Clement, son of the famous Clay Clement who endeared himself to the hearts of so many people by his stage impersonations, and Frank Mayo, son of another famous old-time actor of the same name, are also in the cast. "The Purple Lily" is the unusual story of a beautiful woman, the wife of a simple mountaineer, who longs for excitement and life's thrills and takes advantage of the first opportunity which presents itself to achieve this ambition. In the mountains many exciting things occur as the result of her leaving home. She journeys by dog sled to the big city and there meets another man. She has all the excitement that she craves and in the end returns to her man in the mountains, her simple home and the ordinary, everyday things of life which she has so long known and which, unwittingly, she has grown to love dearly. The mountain scenes were taken in the Adirondacks in the dead of winter. The entire company went there for the purpose of taking the scenes and two weeks were occupied in filming them. Naturally, with such scenery and under such conditions the effects secured are beautiful. George Kelson had charge of the directing of the production.

Kitty Gordon comes to the screen of the ——— theatre on ——— in "The Purple Lily."

"Who Killed Walton?" Presents J. Barney Sherry in Mystery Play

(Triangle—Five-Reel Production)

Do you like a thrilling mystery romance? Then go to the ——— theatre on ——— and see "Who Killed Walton?" the Triangle photoplay which features J. Barney Sherry and pretty Mary Mersch. In fact, it is doubtful if Anna Katherine Greene or Sir Arthur Conan Doyle ever wrote a mystery story more tense, gripping or thrilling than this love mystery of Bohemian life. The story, originally called "The Veil," was written by Norman Sherbrooke and appeared in one of the popular magazines. Walton, an artist, is asked to illustrate a novel for Marian Kulen, successful rival of Elsa Armitage for his affections. Walton invites Marian to dinner at a notorious restaurant adjoining his studio. There they are seen by Elsa. Walton makes advances to Marian, who promptly leaves him. At the door a boy tells her she is wanted at the phone. The message is from Booth, her fiancee and a reformer, who rebukes her for being at the place. Marian, unnerved, falls in a faint. Meanwhile, Elsa has followed Walton to his studio where the two quarrel, Walton falling dead in his chair. With the aid of a friendly waiter Elsa carries the unconscious form of Marian to the studio where she leaves her beside the body of the artist. When Marian awakens she discovers Walton's dead body beside her and flees in terror from the studio. She is taken by the police and Booth, the reformer, rejects her as a murderer. But George Hamilton, a politician friend, comes to her aid, obtains a confession from Elsa and vindicates Marian, who gives him her love. Mary Mersch has the role of Marian Emien and J. Barney Sherry as George Hamilton is much more in evidence than the above brief recital of the story would indicate. Others in the cast are Dora Rodgers, Frank Bonn and Edwin Brady. Thomas N. Neffron directed the production.

READY-MADE AD-TALKS PUBLISHED IN LAST WEEK'S ISSUE

April 20, 1918.

FEATURES

TITLE OF PLAY	PRODUCER
"Boss of Lazy Y"	Triangle	5 reels
"The Life Mask"	Petrova Pictures (First National Release)	6 reels
"The Splendid Sinner"	Goldwyn	6 reels
"The Heart of the Sunset"	Goldwyn	7 reels
"The Bluebird"	Paramount-Artcraft	6 reels
"My Four Years in Germany"	First National Release	9 reels
"Little Miss No-Account"	Vitagraph	5 reels
"The Honor of His House"	Paramount	5 reels
"The Red, Red Heart"	Universal	5 reels
"A Camouflage Kiss"	Fox	5 reels
"The Lie"	Artcraft	5 reels
"Rough and Ready"	Fox	6 reels
"The Richest Girl"	Mutual	5 reels

At the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week, J. Barney Sherry and Mary Mersch in "Who Killed Walton?"

"Life or Honor?" Presents an Amazing Problem and Solves It

(Ivan Production—6,500 Feet)

"Life or Honor?" an Ivan production, featuring an all-star cast of players, will be presented at the ——— theatre's offering to its patrons on ———. The question treated in this big play is one of the greatest of human existence, and the story will hold all in gripping suspense until the very end. The picture is replete with novel situations, both from the artistic as well as the photographic standpoint, and is a marked departure from the usual Ivan output. Perhaps never before has Leah Baird, who heads the cast and already has a long list of screen successes to her credit, had such a fine opportunity to display her artistry as in this production. Violet Palmer, who made an excellent impression in "The Blue Streak," has the ingenue lead, and James Morrison, who has a double role, wins new laurels, especially in his characterization of a Filipino half-breed. Ben Hendricks, well known in the spoken drama, delineates the picturesque character of a crabbed old bachelor and woman-hater. Ed. Mackay and Harry Burkhardt also have prominent roles. The drama presents a question which concerns a man's life and a woman's honor. If the one is to be saved the other is bound to be besmirched. In both cases the parties involved are absolutely innocent. What's to be done? The picture answers the question, and in such a way that there is no room left for further doubt.

"Life or Honor?' is the ———'s attraction announced for ———.

Mae Marsh in Irvin S. Cobb's Latest Screen Drama, "The Face in the Dark"

(Goldwyn—Six-Reel Production)

Irvin S. Cobb is represented in the long list of screen dramas once more, when Mae Marsh presents the principal role in Mr. Cobb's "The Face in the Dark," which will be seen on the screen of the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week. In the supporting cast with Miss Marsh in this Goldwyn production are seen Niles Welch in the role of the leading man, Alec B. Francis, Harry C. Myers, whom you all will remember for his fine work in comedies and for his excellent support to Arthur Johnson who was the leading light on the screen when Biograph first ventured into the field of feature screen dramas; Donald Hall, Willard Dalshiell, Isabelle Lamon and Alice Wilson. The production was made by Goldwyn under the direction of Hobart Henley, with I. C. Bitzer at the camera. The picture is in six reels. Miss Marsh has the role of Jane Ridgeway, daughter of a secret service man, retired. Her interest in the problems which confront detectives is taken naturally and she becomes most clever in solving mysteries and following up clues. Her father is now a bank examiner. The neighborhood in which Jane lives has been invested with burglars for a year past and no one seems to be able to run down the offenders. The method used by the burglars is found to be the same always. The outer doors of a safe are opened without apparent difficulty and a small amount of valuables is taken. Ridgeway, Jane's father, works in collusion with the crooks and fears lest his daughter's cunning will detect him in his crime. Jane's sweetheart is paying teller in a country bank and is accused of a robbery by her father and his pals. Then it is that Jane's faculties are set to work and a clue leads to her father as the real robber. Her father also comes forward with a solution. How does it all work out? See Mae Marsh in "The Face in the Dark" at the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week.

Bryant Washburn in "Twenty-One"—Ripping Comedy—Star Impersonates Dual Role

(Pathe—Five-Reel Production)

Bryant Washburn in his first Pathe comedy-drama, "Twenty-One," will be seen on the screen of the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week. If you want to smile, laugh—and on many occasions, roar—come and see the hero of the popular "Skinner" stories, in this feature. Mr. Washburn is supported by Gertrude Selby. He impersonates a dual role, Jimmie Mufferton and "Battling" Dave Carey. Jim Mufferton, on arriving at majority, turns himself loose and forever forsakes his mother's apron-strings. On his twenty-first birthday, he cashes a check for one thousand cold dollars and starts forth to seek adventure. The goddess of chance leads him to the home of "Battling" Dave Carey. Jimmie notes a strong likeness and persuades the pugilist to change places with him and allow him to wear the "shoes" of the mighty battler for forty-eight hours. This is agreed and the Battler settles down in the luxurious home of Jimmie while Jimmie becomes the Battler and waits for adventure. Nothing really exciting happens during the twenty-four hours, scheduled for the agreement to run other than the fact that "Battling" Dave has enjoyed the luxuries of Jimmie's home so thoroughly that he decides to remain and get better acquainted with the "girl next door," whom he has seen and admired. "The girl next door" has been the object of Jimmie's admiration also, but he has kept at a distance. The fact remains that "Battling" Dave refuses to change places and Jimmie is obliged to meet a regular battler in the prize-ring. He meets the occasion with the fortitude of a warrior and discovers he has "up his sleeve" a regular punch. Jimmie's opponent wakes at the end of the tenth round and discovers that it is all over but the shouting. But see how Jimmie fares in his adventures when Bryant Washburn appears on the screen of the ——— theatre ——— week.

"The Law of the Great Northwest," Big Story of Virgin Country

(Triangle—Five-Reel Production)

Magnificent pictures of outdoor scenery, superb acting and an engrossing story all serve to make "The Law of the Great Northwest," which comes to the ——— theatre on ———, one of the photoplay events of the season. Titian-haired Margery Wilson and Eugene Corey are co-starred in this smashing story of the fur country where the nose of a rifle lays down the law. Hal Sinclair, factor of the Northern Trading Company at Fort Roscher, robs the traders so pitilessly that independent traders open a store and bring him to the verge of ruin by their fair dealing. Entering into a conspiracy with Mont Brennon, Sinclair shoots up the independents and the mounted police are informed of the outrage. Officer Jamieson is sent to investigate and arrives at Fort Roscher simultaneously with Charles Morin, scion of a rich French-Canadian family. Also comes into the romantic life of the community Petain Monest, whose fortune has been lost in a bank failure. Accompanying Petain is his daughter, Marie. Morin enters the fur trading business and Sinclair decides to drive him out. Marie wins the hearts of Morin, Sinclair and Officer Jamieson, but loses her own to Morin. Overhearing a plot between Sinclair and Brennon to kill Morin she steals to the saloon where the murder is to be committed and shoots Brennon as he is about to fire. She is handed over to Jamieson as a slayer, but when the facts are laid before the officer he realizes that her act was justified. Jamieson sees Marie and Morin happily united and himself wins promotion for ending the reign of terror at Fort Roscher.

"The Law of the Great Northwest," featuring Margery Wilson and Eugent Corey, will be the attraction at the ——— theatre on ———.

"His Majesty, Bunker Bean," with Jack Pickford—Rip-Roaring Comedy

(Paramount—Five-Reel Production

Jack Pickford, who has made a success in motion pictures in spite of, rather than because of, the fame of his industrious sister Mary, comes to the ——— theatre on ——— in his newest Paramount picture, "His Majesty, Bunker Bean," screen version of Harry Leon Wilson's popular story which first appeared as a serial in the "Saturday Evening Post" and was subsequently staged with great success. In adapting it to the screen, Julia Crawford Ivers has done a remarkably good piece of scenario writing and the fine directing of William D. Taylor has also contributed toward making it one of the season's best comedy photoplay offerings. In the juvenile star's support are seen Louise Huff, Jack McDonald, Frances Clanton, Peggy O'Connell, Edythe Chapman, Hart Noxie and Gustaf von Seyffertitz. Bunker Bean, personal stenographer to a millionaire, works evenings for a theosophist who specializes in reincarnation. A clairvoyant tells him he is Napoleon and Bunker believes it. His bolstered self-respect gains him interest in the eyes of "The Flapper," youngest daughter of his employer, and their attending a ball game at the invitation of her father strengthens the bond between them. Another visit to the clairvoyant buys him the information that farther back he was an Egyptian king, Ram-tah the Great, whose mummy lies in state in an ancient tomb. For many thousands of dollars from an opportunely inherited fortune Bunker buys the alleged mummy from the professor, and from its acquisition to its finish at the hands, or paws, of his inquisitive puppy, he lives and has his being in a world apart. Fancying himself at heart a king, he not only becomes well acquainted with the awesome family of his boss, but makes a tremendous killing in Wall Street and marries "The Flapper." All this, however, before the inquisitive puppy investigates the inside filling of the "mummy." After that—well, things turn out all right for Bunker, and there are heaps of fun in the story as it is told.

"His Majesty, Bunker Bean," with Jack Pickford, is the attraction at the ——— theatre on ———

Dainty Marguerite Clark Is Coming in "Rich Man, Poor Man"

(Paramount—Five-Reel Production)

The philosophers say that the mere possession of riches does not bring wealth. Hence it follows that when a rich man loves noboby and nobody loves him, he is the poorest man in the world. This is the theme illustrated in "Rich Man, Poor Man," the photoplay attraction at the ——— theatre on ———. Marguerite Clark, the dainty and tiny Paramount star who recently has been seen in the charming "Bab" series, has the leading role which is one of the best in which the "sweetest girl in pictures" has ever been seen in this city. It is certain that her many admirers here will turn out in force to welcome her again. Frederick Warde, the veteran tragedian, has the leading supporting role, that of John Beeston, an irascible financier who has plenty of money but little of love in his heart until sweet Betty Wynne enters his household, presumably as his grandchild. Beeston, cold-hearted and selfish, is despised by everyone for his eccentricities and erratic temperament. Betty has spent many years in a boarding house, nevertheless is unassuming and altogether charming. Through a forgery of which she is ignorant, committed by a man who seeks solely to promote her happiness, the old man is persuaded to take her in, in the belief that she is the daughter of his own daughter whom he has disowned for marrying against his wishes. It so happens that Betty is in love with a certain young man and it develops that this young man is in reality the grandson of the millionaire, son of the disowned daughter. When the imposture regarding Betty is revealed to the old man he refuses to give her up, fearing that her loss will forever banish from his life the sunshine which she has brought into it. However, everything turns out happily in the end, the climax being reached through a series of unusually effective scenes. The story of "Rich Man, Poor Man" is based upon the novel of the same name by Maximilian Foster and was adapted for the screen by George Broadhurst.

At the ——— on ———, Marguerite Clark in "Rich Man, Poor Man."

BIGGER RECEIPTS

You Won't Get Them Unless You Go After Them

EVERYONE agrees that it would be very delightful to have bigger box-office receipts. Some exhibitors sit and wait for the increased cash to come in. Others have learned that they have to get out and hustle for it.

One of the principal ways is through advertising, in your newspapers, in your house organ and by word of mouth. Make it a point to keep people thinking and talking about motion pictures as much as you can. Keep the gossip of the plays and players before your patrons.

Sergeant Arthur Guy Empey in His "Over the Top"—Thrilling Drama of the War

(Vitagraph Nine-Reel Special)

You have read Sergeant Arthur Guy Empey's "Over the Top" and were thrilled by its stirring passages of the realities that are happening hour after hour, day after day and week after week in the first line trenches "over there." The Vitagraph Company, under the direction of Wilfred North and the personal attention of Sergeant Empey, who has the leading role in the drama, reproduced his story to the screen. It is a marvelous revelation of modern warfare, with Sergeant Empey going "over the top." Sergeant Empey had the actual experience and he tells of his thrilling adventures in nine reels of the most stirring, thrilling war drama ever presented on the screen for the review and entertainment of the American public. Empey is supported in this production by Frank Morrison, whom you will remember for his work on former Vitagraph productions. Mr. Morrison has the part of the coward, and his exhibition of acting in this picture is one that you all will remember for its sincerity and its fine execution. Lois Meredith and Betty Blythe have the leading feminine roles. There is a love story written into and coupled with the war scenes that makes this production well worth seeing and one that you will never forget. Arthur Donaldson, who is seen in the leading character role, gives a fine exhibition of acting before the camera. In short, the entire production is one that will inspire all with the thought that America is in this war to win and that America will win. Every scene, every reel contains a punch. There is interest for all.. See Sergeant Empey in his "Over the Top," which is to be shown on the screen of the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week.

Sergeant Arthur Guy Empey in "Over the Top."

The Latest Judge Brown Drama, "The Rebellion"—Three Truant Boys

(General Two-Reel Production)

Judge Brown's latest contribution to the list of two-reel screen dramas is titled "The Rebellion," produced under the direction of King W. Vidor and released on the General program. In the cast are seen Robert Lansing, Robert Planett, Martin Pendleton, J. G. Underhill, Sadie Clayton, Hugh Saxton, William White and Wharton Jones. Howard, Steve and Oc, three youngsters, tiring of parental rule, rebel and seek freedom in other parts of the country. The first night away from home is spent in the loft of a barn. The next day finds them in the hands of the law. The youngsters are taken to the Juvenile Court. Howard, the son of a rich man, explains that the reason why he ran away from home is that he is tired of formal meals, servants, society and the whole blamed business of formality practised in his father's home. Steve complains that he is compelled to practice on the piano, and Oc complains that his mother is overworked and that his food has been poorly cooked. The judge calls in the fathers of the three truants and tells them the boys must have the control of the household for one week. What happens to the three truants and how are they brought around to the right way of living and thinking?

Come to the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week and see the latest Judge Willis Brown two-reel drama, "The Rebellion."

May Allison Starred in "Social Hypocrites," Adapted from Play, "Bridge"

(Metro Five-Reel Production)

May Allison, whom you all will remember as co-starring with Harold Lockwood in Metro productions of a year or more ago, has returned to the screen and is starring in her own right in her first Metro production, since her return, "Social Hypocrites," adapted from Alicia Ramsey's popular play, "Bridge," by June Mathis and Albert Capellani. The picture was produced by Metro under the direction of Albert Capellani, with Eugene Gaudio at the camera. The picture is in five reels, and in the supporting cast with Miss Allison are seen Frank Currier, Joseph Kilgour, Henry Kolker, Stella Hammerstein, Marie Wainwright, Maggie Breyer, Ethel Winthrop and Stephen Gratton. Miss Allison has the role of Leonore Fielding, daughter of Colonel Francis Fielding, of the Coldstream Guards. Early in his life the Colonel was accused by the Earl of St. Albans of cheating in a card game. The Earl was the Colonel's rival for the hand of the young Duchess of St. Keverne. Fielding attempted in vain to exonerate himself from the charge and, failing, left London and went to Paris, where he married a girl of the masses, who died soon after the birth of Leonore. Years pass and Leonore matures into a beautiful woman, who shares her father's poverty. The old man frequents the gambling resorts and his luck is against him. He goes with his daughter to Monte Carlo and there Leonore meets M. Royle, who in reality is Lord Royle Fitzmaurice, nephew of Duchess of St. Keverne, her father's old love. Royle knows Fielding's story and decides to become his friend. Leonore becomes a gambling enthusiast, and during the course of a game at the famous resort she is accused of cheating and compared to her father. Dr. Sampson, her father's physician, champions her cause. What develops from this situation?

May Allison at the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week in "Social Hypocrites."

O. Henry's Best, "The Rubaiyet of the Scotch Highball"—Earle and Ayres

(General Two-Reel Production)

O. Henry's most amusing story and considered by many to be the best of his short stories, "The Rubaiyet of a Scotch Highball," has been adapted to the screen and produced by the Broadway Film for release on the General program. Agnes Ayres and Edward Earle are seen in the two principal roles. This is a corking good drama and one that every patron of the ——— theatre should see. It is two reels in length and contains a punch and plenty of comedy in every scene of the two thousand feet which go to make up its exposition. The two principal characters are in a class with some of the best screen stars. Mr. Earle has been seen of late in Vitagraph Blue Ribbon features and has made a decided hit in five-reelers. Miss Ayres also has been seen in Vitagraph features, always to advantage. O. Henry's best contribution to the screen is entertainment from start to finish. Rob Babbitt has met the one girl in Sullivan County, New York. They had been attracted first by Omar Khayyam's Rubaiyet, had married and had come to New York to settle down. They drift into New York's Bohemian district and drink gets the better of Bob. He conquers the habit, but how?

See the latest exposition of O. Henry's work on the screen, "The Rubaiyet of the Scotch Highball," at the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week.

The First of the Ned Finley Blue Ridge Dramas, "Mountain Law"

(General Film Two-Reel Production)

"Mountain Law," the first of the Blue Ridge dramas, produced by Ned Finley and released on the General program, contains a powerful theme and is presented by Mr. Finley and supporting company in a strong, virile manner. It is a story of the mountains, written by L. Case Russell, who is responsible for Mme. Petrova's biggest success, "The Life Mask." It has a strength of purpose, its theme rings true as steel and there is a punch in every scene. The picture is only two reels in length, but it contains action in every foot of those two reels—real, live action, filled with tense moments as clean and brisk as the mountain air. In the supporting cast with Mr. Finley, who has the leading role and who directed, are seen Marion Henry, Richard Neil, Harry Hamill and Charles Robins. In a small mountain village in the heart of the Blue Ridge, Fannie Bruce comes to teach the village school. For twenty years there has existed a feud between the families of the Claytons and the Danceys. Rob Clayton, member of the school board, returns home one evening and finds his father dead goes to Dancey's cabin and kills the father and his two sons. Bob falls in love with Fannie and she decides to reform him. She accomplishes what twenty long years have failed to do—heal the differences between two warring families.

"Mountain Law," the first of the Ned Finley Blue Ridge dramas, will be seen on the screen of the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week.

Exhibitors Box Office Reports

LAST MINUTE REPORTS

These Reports Came "Under the Wire" as Motion Picture News Went to Press

"Revelation" (Metro-Nazimova)—"Business held steady. Picture gave wonderful satisfaction." (Four days.) "Liked by everybody." (Five days.)

"Bunker Bean" (Paramount-Jack Pickford)—"Wonderful satisfaction." (Three days.)

"Lest We Forget" (Metro-Rita Jolivet)—"Big success." (Four days.)

"The Whispering Chorus" (Paramount-De Mille)—"Average."

"The Tiger Man" (Artcraft-Hart)—"Good picture but locally all exhibitors are killing Hart with reissues."

"The Kaiser" (Jewel)—"Biggest hit since 'Birth of a Nation.' Broke all house records."

"The Cross Bearer" (World)—"Picture very good, but I'm in a Pro-German neighborhood." (St. Louis.)

"The Witch Woman" (World Film)—"Good Picture.

"The Blue Bird" (Artcraft)—"Splendid picture, but our patrons don't take to this kind." "Disappointment from every angle, box office and patrons. They do not want fairy tales."

"Humdrum Brown" (Paralta-Walthall)—"Poor picture, even for Saturday."

Editor's Note: The Box Office Report chart includes all pictures released within the previous eight weeks on which a sufficient number of exhibitor reports have been received to base a verdict. In the column "Average of Exhibitors' Reports" the term "Extra Big" indicates a picture which far surpassed expectations; "Big" means a picture doing better than the usual business for that day under average conditions; "Average" is the grading given the production on which business held up to normal; "Poor" indicates the picture falling below normal in box office and entertainment value.

TITLE, STAR, AND BRAND	AVERAGE OF EXHIBITORS' REPORTS	EXHIBITORS' OWN COMMENTS
AMARILLY OF CLOTHESLINE ALLEY (Mary Pickford—Artcraft)	Big	"Excellent and well liked by all." "Pleasing picture, plenty of good laughs and satisfactory box office attraction." "Keep Mary in this class of stuff and everyone will be happy." "Good picture." "Please immensely. Neilan a great director. Good cast and some human characters."
AMERICAN LIVE WIRE, AN (Williams—Vitagraph)	Average	"It will satisfy at any rate." "Nothing extra, but fair card." "Earle popular here." "Very poor. Lacks story interest."
ANSWER, THE (Rubens—Triangle)	Average	"No comments received."
ANN'S FINISH (Fischer—Mutual)	Average	"Fair program offering." "Held well for three days."
BELL BOY, THE (Arbuckle—Paramount)	Big	"Thanks to Roscoe, Keating and St. John am drawing them in despite Holy Week." "Great Stuff!"
BELOVED TRAITOR, THE (Marsh—Goldwyn)	Average	"Did not draw." "Fair picture." "Conventional subject." "Good story, but star not popular here."
BIT OF JADE (Minter—Mutual)	Average	"Minter is well liked."
BLUE BLAZES RAWDEN (Hart—Artcraft)	Average	"Well liked." "Hart reissues are hurting his new pictures." "Big." "His worst picture." "Two days to capacity."
BRACE UP (Rawlinson—Bluebird)	Average	No comments received with reports.
BRASS CHECK, THE (Bushman-Bayne—Metro)	Average	"Big. Bushman coming back strong." "Good Bushman but stars are not liked here." "Few more like this and Bushman will class 1A." "Not as good as usual for Bushman.' "Very good." "Star does not have his old drawing power. Good picture."
BROADWAY BILL (Lockwood—Metro)	Average	"Lockwood good; story poor." "They all like Lockwood." "Excellent picture but Lockwood is not a pugilist." "Very good." "Star well liked. Good picture."
CAPTAIN OF HIS SOUL, THE (Desmond—Triangle)	Average	"Desmond has done better."
CLEOPATRA (Bara—Fox)	Big	"Will play a return date on this sure." "Good picture, business rotten (maybe Holy Week?)." "Great show." "Excellent."
CLAIM, THE (Story—Metro)	Average	"Good business." "Exceptionally strong Western, Story at her best." "Story has no drawing power here." "Star is popular."
CUPID'S ROUND-UP (Mix—Fox)	Big	"Very good picture." "Fine picture; star will be popular." "Just what my patrons want."
DEVIL'S WHEEL, THE (Brockwell—Fox)	Big	"Great picture." "Some title for my class." "Big. William Scott deserves equal credit with star."
DEBT OF HONOR, THE (Hyland—Fox)	Average	"Fair picture." "Not much." "Pleasing picture."
DESIRED WOMAN, THE (—Vitagraph)	Average	"Only a fair picture."
FAITH ENDURIN' (Stewart—Triangle)	Big	"This star drawing better every time." "Fine value." "Good picture. Well received. One of Stewart's best."
EAGLE'S EYE, THE (Wharton Serial)	Big	"Continues pleasing." "First episode went over big." "Drew fair business in poor serial town."
FAMILY SKELETON, THE (Ray—Paramount)	Average	"Sermon has no place on the screen. Keep Ray in Rube roles." "Very disappointing." Ray drew them but it didn't please." "Ray draws very well." "Poorest Ray in long time."
FIGHTIN' GRIN, THE (Farnum—Bluebird)	Average	"Not up to Farnum's standard." "Poor picture for Bluebird." "Farnum popular here."
FLOOR BELOW, THE (Normand—Goldwyn)	Big	"Very good. Best yet from Normand." "Nice picture, fully up to Goldwyn standard." "Mabel big favorite." "Picture good though drew poor. Six reels too long for small house."
FLARE-UP SAL (Dalton—Paramount)	Big	"While good it didn't go over." "Pleased everybody." "As good as Dalton has done." "Big." "Ince Standard. Standard at her best in this type of play"
FLASH OF FATE (Rawlinson—Universal)	Big	"They want good melodrama." "Pleasing." "Picture mediocre."
GIRL AND THE JUDGE, THE (Tell—Mutual)	Average	"Very nice picture."
GIRL IN THE DARK, THE (Myers—Bluebird)	Average	No comments received with reports.
GIRL WITH CHAMPAGNE EYES, THE (Carmen—Fox)	Average	"A good picture." "Went big for me." "Average value." "Star not popular." "Very good picture." "Below Fox standard."
GHOSTS OF YESTERDAY (Talmadge—Select)	Big	"Best Talmadge to date." "Star becoming more popular with each picture." "A good bet." "Great with the women." "Conceded one of Talmadge's best."
HARD ROCK BREED (Wilson—Triangle)	Big	"Went very well." "Good title; sounds picturesque." "Great picture, strong cast."
HANDS DOWN (Salisbury—Bluebird)	Big	"Not Salisbury's best by any means." "If anybody but Bluebird had this they'd ask $150 for it."
HEADIN' SOUTH—Artcraft)	Extra Big	"This star made our Holy Week business best we ever had. Will play return on this." "Not as good as others. Stealing Hart's stuff won't do." "Great medicine for the box office."
HEIRESS FOR A DAY (Thomas—Triangle)	Average	"Pleased audience extremely well." "Clean comedy drama." "Fine picture."
HIDDEN PEARLS (Hayakawa—Paramount)	Average	"Good picture." "Drew well; star popular here." "Story has objectionable episode."
HIRED MAN, THE (Ray—Paramount)	Big	"Three days; great." "Star becoming great favorite; show well done." "Ray a coming big star." "Star very pleasing."
HIS ROBE OF HONOR (Walthall—Paralta)	Poor	"Fair picture but star does not draw." "Title bad." "Little too long." "Too heavy and slow."
HOPPER, THE (Mong—Triangle)	Average	No comments received with reports.
HOUSE OF GLASS, THE (Young—Select)	Average	"Up to standard." "This kind will bring Clara back."
HOUSE OF HATE, THE (Pathe Serial)	Big	"Sustains interest."

TITLE, STAR, AND BRAND	AVERAGE OF EXHIBITORS' REPORTS	EXHIBITORS' OWN COMMENTS
HUCK AND TOM (Jack Pickford—Paramount)	Big	"Fine for family trade." "Good clean stuff that brings business." "Dandy picture." "Becoming very popular." "Excellent."
INNOCENT (Ward—Pathe)	Big	"Pleased most of my patrons and drew well." "Good picture; fair drawing card." "Didn't take as well as it ought." "It's a shame to make Fanny act so young." "Very good. This star is sure to please." "Good feature."
JACK SPURLOCK, PRODIGAL (Walsh—Fox)	Poor	"Did not please." "Star draws them big, but story is off." "Walsh pulls well." "Not up to his standard." "Poor picture for George Walsh."
KEYS OF THE RIGHTEOUS (Bennet—Paramount)	Poor	"Title against picture; story did not go." "Just fair." "Not a drawing card." "Title killed it."
LA TOSCA (Fredericks—Paramount)	Average	"Good production, well staged, but not generally liked." "This type of picture does not draw well." "People do not care for this kind of play. Anything with costume is dead."
LAND OF PROMISE, THE (Burke—Paramount)	Average	"Star was killed by serial, 'Gloria's Romance'!"
LES MISERABLES (Farnum—Fox)	Extra Big	"Capacity, great feature." "Return engagement, business held up all week." "Great story; great production." "Very fine production. "Farnum does his best work."
LIGHT WITHIN, THE (Petrova—First National)	Average	"Nothing big." "Just a fair feature." "Good picture."
LIMOUSINE LIFE (Thomas—Triangle)	Average	"Appeals to the ladies, but not the men."
LOVE ME (Dalton—Paramount)	Average	"Star well liked. This is a dandy picture." "Big business for me." "Fair drawing power, but watch this star." "One of the best we have had."
LOADED DICE (Keenan—Pathe)	Big	"Remarkable. Great production." "Good picture." "No drawing power." "Ought to have done better; comments good." "Morbid story. Lots of crime. Very dramatic." "Good story but this star gets no dough." "Splendid picture, though story is morbid. Star fine."
MADAME JEALOUSY (Fredericks—Paramount)	Average	"Star not popular in this picture." "Not suited for pictures, too deep. Waste of time to produce such stuff." "Nix." "Patrons don't like this style."
MENACE, THE (Vitagraph)	Average	"Good picture, both are going to make stars." "Fair production." "Excellent picture but no pull." "Poor picture."
MOTHER'S SIN, A (Williams—Vitagraph)	Average	"Not up to standard but star got it over." "Below average." "Just a picture."
MORAL LAW, THE (Brockwell—Fox)	Average	"Poor photography, subject will not please." "Story good." "Photography punk, picture the same." "Good picture."
NANCY COMES HOME (Triangle)	Average	"Story pleased."
NEW LOVE FOR OLD (Hall—Universal)	Average	No comments received with reports.
NEARLY MARRIED (Kennedy—Goldwyn)	Average	"Public divided on this star, she don't draw here."
NOBODY'S WIFE (Lovely—Universal)	Average	No comments received with reports.
OTHER MAN, THE (Morey—Vitagraph)	Average	"Good picture, Morey popular." "Perfect—100." "Liked.' "Star and Grace Darmond well liked."
OTHER WOMAN, THE (Hyland—Pathe)	Average	"They liked this." "Excellent picture, attractive star."
ONE MORE AMERICAN (Beban—Paramount)	Average	"Good picture and pleased public." "Beban doesn't draw." "Good, pleasing picture." "One of the most interesting pictures in a long time." "Very good." "He is an artist."
PAINTED LIPS (Lovely-Universal)	Average	No comments received with reports.
PETTICOAT PILOT, A (Martin—Paramount)	Average	No comments received with reports.
REVENGE (Storey—Metro)	Average	"Not satisfactory to our patrons." "Back to the nicolet with this sort."
RUGGLES OF RED GAP (Holmes—Essanay)	Big	"Everybody enjoyed and boosted this."
SPLENDID SINNER (Garden—Goldwyn)	Big	"Very good, but nothing to make them talk or send others." "Magnificent production but ending very bad. Splendid work by star." "Very good picture."
SIX SHOOTER ANDY (Mix—Fox)	Poor	"Good picture but not in it with Mix's first." "Title too melodramatic." "They didn't come." "Fair Western; pleased." "Poor picture. Poor photography."
SON OF DEMOCRACY (Chapin—Paramount)	Big	"Exceptionally good attraction." "Fair but did not hold up with first week." "Good family card." "Keeping them away." "Fine stuff."
SONG OF SONGS (Ferguson—Paramount)	Average	"Fine picture. Ferguson will prove drawing card soon."
STELLA MARIS (Pickford—Artcraft)	Average	"Great. We cut to 5879 feet." "One of her best." "Business held up on second day to first." "Made big hit."
SHELL GAME (WEHLEN—Metro)	Average	"Very pleasing picture." "Excellent production." "Well liked by all."
SHOES THAT DANCED (Starke—Triangle)	Average	"Pleased."
SILENT SACRIFICE (Brady—Select)	Average	"Fair picture, but no knockout."
STRONG WAY, THE (Elvidge—World)	Average	No comments received with reports.
SUNSHINE NAN (Pennington—Paramount)	Average	"Poor offering." "Star's last production well liked and patrons expected better picture.'
THING WE LOVE (Reid—Paramount)	Poor	"Poor picture."
TURN OF A CARD, THE (Kerrigan—Paralta)	Big	"Broke all house records. Four days." "Better than his first." "This company has them all beaten."
UNFAITHFUL and MARRIAGE BUBBLE (Combination Bill—Triangle)	Average	No comments received with reports.
UNDER SUSPICION (Bushman-Bayne—Metro)	Average	"Everyone seemed to like this." "Best Bushman in months." "Well Liked."
WEAVER OF DREAMS (Dana—Metro)	Average	"Dana holds up fairly well. Picture no good." "Poor attraction."
WHIMS OF SOCIETY (Clayton—World)	Average	No comments received with reports.
WIDOW'S MIGHT, THE (Eltinge—Paramount)	Average	"Very good picture." "Clean, excellent novelty." "Fine, one of his best." "Eltinge best in this so far." "Better business than last one, Eltinge improving as draw." "Stories of this star too much alike."
WIFE HE BOUGHT, THE (Myers—Bluebird)	Big	"Excellent attraction."
WILD STRAIN, THE (Vitagraph)	Average	No comments received.
WORLD FOR SALE (Blackton—Paramount)	Poor	"Strong acting made this better than average" (E.). "Ordinary" (E.). "A very funny picture to make out, poor drawing card" (E.). "Not much picture for Blackton" (S.). "Mediocre. Lacks realism; too artificial; lacks punch—photography and scenery perfect" (N.). "Over their heads" (N.). "Not up to expectations."
WASP, THE (Gordon—World)	Average	No comments received.
WOOING OF PRINCESS PAT, THE (Vitagraph)	Poor	"No room for this type."
WILD WOMEN (Carey—Universal)	Big	"Good stuff."

FLASHBACKS

Individual Reports Received on Reissues and Pictures Released Previous to February

Alimony (First National)—"Extra big my first day, and dropped to average for next two days."

Bab's Burglar (Paramount)—"Just an average picture and average business."

Belgian, The (State Rights)—"Audience not over enthused. Not up to standard. Too slow."

Broadway Love (Bluebird)—"Poor feature but big business."

Camouflage Kiss, The (Fox)—"In four days jumped from average to big and back again."

Crisis, The (Selig)—"Very good show, but do not like war pictures."

Daybreak (Metro)—"Star not liked."

Divine Sacrifice (World)—"Kitty Gordon does not draw at box-office."

Dodging a Million (Goldwyn)—"Star not well known here, but made good." "Pleasing picture."

Fall of the Romanoffs (First National)—"Did extra good first and last day of week run. Big for balance."

Fields of Honor (Goldwyn)—"Played three days to poor business."

Freedom of the World (Goldwyn)—"One of best patriotic offerings we ever had."

Fringe of Society (Foursquare)—"Very good picture."

Heart of a Lion, The (Fox)—"Star does not draw any more. Picture not up to standard."

Little Patriot (Pathe)—"Good. Pleased all."

Headin' South (Artcraft)—"Big business for my two days."

Man Above the Law (Triangle)—"Poor."

Outwitted (Metro)—"Strong picture. Fine. Big business."

Primrose Ring, The(Paramount)—"Average."

Rose of Blood, The (Fox)—"Fine picture pleased."

Rose of the World (Artcraft)—"Star attracting more attention with every release."

Seven Swans (Paramount)—"Fairy shows hurting Clark."

Shirley Kaye (Select-Young)—"Well produced and logical feature." "Not much action."

Spirit of '17 (Paramount)—"Big business."

Stella Maris (Artcraft)—"One of Pickford's best."

Troublemakers (Fox)—"Excellent story. Lee kids great."

Turn of a Card (Paralta)—"Broke all house records."

Unbeliever (First National)—"Greatest and most appealing war picture ever made."

Whip, The (State Rights)—"Some picture."

Within the Law (Vitagraph)—"Good picture, but business was very poor."

Womanhood (Vitagraph)—"Wonderful production. Went over big."

EXHIBITOR TO EXHIBITOR REVIEW SERVICE

[These reviews, by P. S. Harrison, are based solely on the entertaining qualities of the picture. All other factors are considered of secondary importance.]

"Passing of the Third Floor Back"

"Not Up to Expectations," Says Reviewer of This

(First National Exhibitors Circuit—Released in April)

SIR JOHNSTON FORBES-ROBERTSON, who starred in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," on the stage, is a celebrity with an international reputation. He is considered the rightful successor to Irving. His acting is very effective on the screen. One wonders why the director did not avail himself of these elements to produce a photoplay that would measure up to the star's ability.

This picture is very poorly directed and edited. It is chiefly an aggregation of short scenes, mostly close-ups, none of them exceeding two feet in length. At least that is the impression one gets. It is very fatiguing and straining to the eye because of the constant changes.

The story was written by Jerome K. Jerome, an author who is well known to the American public, and although on the stage it made quite a hit with the better class, its entertaining value on the screen is very narrow as it will appeal to a limited number only. It might be classed more as a sermon than as an entertainment.

"The Tiger Man"

Hart in a Typical Hart—"Enuf Sed"

(Artcraft—April 1)

HART fans will not be disappointed with this offering, although there really is nothing new in it. The story is an absorbing narrative of the desert in the days of the gold rush and offers Hart the opportunity of portraying the role of a desperate leader of a gang of outlaws who is reformed by a young preacher's wife.

The usual thrills typical of all Hart photoplays abound in this one also. It is very well directed, and the photography is excellent.

"The Marriage Lie"

Carmel Myers in a Strong Not Up to Record "U" Standard

(Bluebird—April 22)

THIS offering falls below the standard the Universal has accustomed us to lately. It started off with a good promise but ended very poorly. Besides, it comes dangerously near to being suggestive, although it doesn't actually cross the line.

The picture has been adapted from the story by Blair-Mall, published in the Parisienne Magazine, and deals with a young engineer who, in order to secure a position claims he is married while he was not, therefore, to hide his deception, is compelled to find a "would be" wife whom he marries in the end.

I don't like this half-way-clean idea in pictures, and I am sure the majority of the exhibitors don't. But why waste money and good material on suggestive or near suggestive stories, when the clean ones are in demand and can find a better market?

This picture will get by with a middle-class audience.

"Blindness of Divorce"

A Strongly Dramatic Preachment on Divorce

(Fox-Standard—6 Reels—April 7)

THIS is a very strong dramatic offering that will hold the interest and entertain those who like this kind of a subject.

The story is based on the divorce question, the author-director attempting to portray some of its evils. The selection of such a theme for picturization is not wise. It is too delicate to handle, and besides, people go to the theatre to be entertained, not to be reformed or moralized to.

From a critic's standpoint the biggest mistake the author could have made was to permit the divorced wife to lose the sympathy of the spectator, which was all hers from the start, by having her conduct a questionable resort. In the eyes of the public there could be no justification for such an act on her part.

It reminds me of the picture, "The Sin Ye Do," produced by Triangle about two years ago with Frank Keenan as star. It will surely bring the tears. While this picture is not grewsome, I am afraid it will not leave a pleasant taste.

"Playing the Game"

Charles Ray's Latest Is Pronounced His Best.

(Ince-Paramount—April 22)

YOU will find "Playing the Game" a clean and interesting story full of the sort of action which will give Ray admirers a wholesome entertainment. I feel safe in stating it is the best Ray on the Paramount program so far.

The story was written by Julian Josephson, and depicts Ray as the dissipating son of a millionaire who later inherits his father's millions, and who, in order to show he is man enough to make a success without his father's money, goes to his own ranch unrecognized, works as a common laborer, makes good and wins the love of the foreman's daughter just at the time his identity becomes known.

The story possesses good continuity, and was well directed. Among the supporting cast, little Doris deserves special mention.

This picture will please any audience.

"Unclaimed Goods"

Vivian Martin's Charm Puts Over a Slender Story

(Paramount—April 15)

THERE is a certain charm to Vivian Martin that helps pull over every picture of hers. It makes no difference whether the story is plausible or improbable—it will be a hit just the same. There is not a miss with her, at least I have never seen one that I could condemn. When I first saw her in "Little Miss Brown" I thought then that, given the opportunity, she would be sure of making good. Well, Mr. Frank Garbutt has given her all the opportunity in the world and she has made good.

"Unclaimed Goods" is a melodrama story quite impossible but original, chock-full of action from start to finish. The story is about a Western girl, daughter of a sheriff, who is sent to a mining town by express, the same as a piece of merchandise or a dumb animal. She is unclaimed and about to be sold at auction to pay the express charges when a man, whom she has befriended, rescues her at the cost of his life, and she finds happiness in the love of the express agent who cared for her during her detention.

There is a good deal of shooting in it, but, being a Western photoplay, this feature will be overlooked. Although a dance hall scene is shown, this picture is clean and will certainly entertain. Director Rollin Sturgeon deserves credit for his good work.

Harrison Ford, Casson Ferguson, Dick La Reno, George Kunkie, George McDaniels in the unsympathetic role of the villain, and Carmen Phillips, as his sweetheart, do their bit excellently. By the way, Dick La Reno is a pleasing personality; so is Harrison Ford. Give us more of them.

"With Neatness and Dispatch"

Bushman and Bayne Hit the Bill Again

(Metro—April 15)

JUST to convince any fairminded producer, scenario writer, director, or whoever has been responsible for some of the "junk" we have been getting in the past and are still continuing to get, that it doesn't take two murders, a rape and a suicide to make an entertaining picture, I am pointing to "NEATNESS AND DISPATCH."

CLEAR, CRISP BOX OFFICE APPRAISALS

The story is very thin indeed, but it has been handled so successfully by Director William S. Davis, that I consider it one of the best comedy-dramas released for some time on the Metro program.

Although it differs in plot if compared to "Haunted Pajamas," it comes up to it in quality. Mr. Bushman's acting is as good as I have ever seen him do, outside of "Pennington's Choice." Miss Bayne plays her part with "neatness."

This offering is clean and will please any audience. Book it, and after you play it, tell your exchange you want more of this kind.

CAST

Paul Donaldson	Francis X. Bushman
Geraldine Ames	Beverly Bayne
Roger Burgess, Police Commissioner	Frank Currier
Mary Ames	Sylvia Arnold
Aunt Letitia	Ricca Allen
Director	Wm. S. Davis

THE STORY

Geraldine and Mary Ames live with their aunt Letitia, an old maid who thinks girls should not receive the attentions of men. Mary is about to elope with her sweetheart, a young engineer, but is discovered and locked in her room.

Geraldine goes to the Police Commissioner, an old friend of her father, and asks him to loan her a crook to break down the door and help her sister escape. Paul Donaldson, his nephew, fascinated with her, begs his uncle to let him impersonate the crook. The situations that arise from this are very humorous. That night three real crooks enter the house to rob and Donaldson overpowers them, locking them in a closet. The household is aroused, the police called, and when the Police Commissioner arrives Donaldson surrenders the culprits. Geraldine to her amazement finds out the real truth about him and they are engaged.

"The Busy Inn"

A Russian Art Drama, Foreign to American Taste

(Pathe—April 14)

THIS offering will not please an American audience, particularly the better class.

"The Busy Inn," by Alexander Ostrovsky, gives an insight into the life of Russia and is based on the scheming and fraud practiced by many middle-class innkeepers, which is hardly of interest to the present day picturegoers. It is a suggestive picture.

"A Mother's Secret"

Ella Hall in a Heart Interest Tale That Should Please

(Bluebird—April 29)

ELLA HALL must consider herself very lucky indeed, that the one who is responsible, had the happy thought of furnishing her with clean stories all the time. Her pictures have always been above the average, more or less, while some have made big hits. For instance: "Jewel" and "The Little Orphan."

"A Mother's Secret" is an interesting picture with very good action all the way through, and I am sure it will please. Miss Hall fits in a little child's clothes as nicely as she does in grown woman's. The element of heart appeal abounds in this offering, which is good enough to show to any audience. In fact, you should encourage good clean pictures by booking them. Book this one.

CAST

Angela	ELLA HALL
Captain Eldone	T. C. Critterden
Mrs. Eldone	Mary Mirsch
Howard Grey	Emory Johnson

THE STORY

Lady Eldone, in her capacity as Red Cross nurse, is visiting her husband at the front. As she is leaving, a shell falls upon the cottage, and buries Captain Eldone beneath the ruins. It was thought he was killed.

Lady Eldone leaves for the States. The London government, thinking she has in her possession the plans for a new gun invented by her late husband, instructs Howard Grey to watch her and see that she will not dispose of them to a hostile government.

Angela, her now grown daughter from a former husband, upon being informed of her mother's return, comes to her. Fearing that Angela's presence might disclose her real age, Lady Eldone decides not to make her presence known.

Later, two spies from a hostile government, break open the safe, and take a tin box in which it was thought Lady Eldone kept the plans of Captain Eldone's new gun. Grey arrives at the house in time to take the plans away from the spies. He is about ready to open it when Captain Eldone enters, still weak from his wounds but very much alive. Lord Eldone explains that the plans had been destroyed when the shell fell on the cottage but himself escaped although stunned by the explosion, and later dug out.

Grey learns that Angela, with whom he got acquainted before by chance, is the daughter of Lady Eldone, and feeling he is in love with her, takes her in his arms, while Lady and Captain Eldone are happily reunited.

"Dolly Does Her Bit"

Babie Marie Osborne in a Sure Fire for the Kiddies and Grown-ups

(Pathe—April 29)

THIS offering I am sure will prove a delight to children, owing to the introduction of a mechanical doll that can walk and salute like a human being. The cute little pranks of Baby Marie will please the grown-ups also.

The picture is based on a story by Lucy Sarver and deals with a Red Cross Bazaar where Dolly takes the place of the mechanical doll that was destroyed by a runaway horse. The little colored boy who is her companion in the picture will also bring many a laugh. The action is swift and will hold one's interest to the end.

ADVERTISING SUGGESTIONS—Play up very strong on the mechanical doll in the picture, which can walk like a human being. Place a life-size doll inside of the box office window or inside the theatre where it can be seen by children, with the inscription, "Dolly Does Her Bit," and the date. This will be a splendid medium for attracting attention.

"A Dog's Life"

Charlie Returns Triumphantly in a Three-Reel Laugh-Fest

I WOULD suggest to those of the exhibitors who expect to play "A Dog's Life" to fasten the roof of their theatre more securely as it is liable to blow off from laugh explosions.

The return of Mr. Chaplin to the screen is very triumphant and well worth our long wait. It seems this long absence from it has given him a rest that enabled his creative mind to introduce some new stunts which are entirely original and bound to find favor with the picture-goer. For instance he and his dog visit a dancing hall but are ejected as no dogs are allowed in. He puts the dog inside his wide trousers and walks in undisturbed towards the orchestra. There is a hole in the trousers through which the tail of the dog protrudes. The tail wiggles and hits the base drum. The drummer wonders who is striking the false notes. This part of the picture is really a scream.

The ending is very humorous and original. Charlie marries the girl he met in the cafe, and with the money his dog dug out and which had a varied career, buys a home in the country. He is seen planting onions, taking one out of his vest pocket each time. The final scene shows his wife and himself in a loving pose looking over the basket presumably the cradle of their baby. The next close-up scene shows the basket and the dog with several puppies resting comfortably.

Every well thinking exhibitor will surely thank Mr. Chaplin for sparing the picture-goers any vulgarity. The comedy is as clean as a whistle, therefore fit to show to any audience.

"The Face in the Dark"

(Goldwyn—April 21)

"THE FACE IN THE DARK" is slow in starting but it gains speed with each scene reaching a strong climax in the last reel and presenting rather a unique ending.

The story was written by Irvin Cobb, and Miss Marsh is given the role of a detective who, after a bank robbery, discovers the unpleasant fact that her own father is the one who burglarized it, to find in the end, to her great delight, that he was only acting as a detective trying to capture the leader of a gang of counterfeiters.

As a whole it is a clean picture above the average, that will appeal to the better element especially the women.

Live News from the Producers

Fay Tincher Joins World Film

Her First Picture on the Program Called "Some Job," Released May 1—Returns to Coast This Week

FAY TINCHER, comedienne, and for a year and a half the head of her own company, is the latest addition to the World Film Corporation staff, according to official announcement from World Film offices this week.

This definite announcement puts to rest a number of rumors that have originated in various sources since the arrival of Miss Tincher in New York, from the coast, this week. She came East, it is said, on twenty minutes' notice, from Hollywood, where, in the Willis-Inglis Studios, she has been making her own comedies, under Al Santell's direction. Her first picture on the World program will be "Some Job." It is scheduled for release May 1.

Beside being a new departure in announcing her type comedy for almost immediate release on the World program, the signing of Fay Tincher, by World, is considered of unusual interest.

Miss Tincher received her training for the legitimate stage under the tutelage of Arthur Hopkins and appeared in vaudeville in New York and on tour. Returning to New York three and a half years ago, after a brief tour, a director for David Griffith approached her in the sitting room of a New York hotel and asked her if she would not like to go into pictures. "I don't mind," Miss Tincher is quoted with having replied. The director, who did not know her identity, then took Miss Tincher to see David Griffith, and Miss Tincher, who did not know who Mr. Griffith was, decided that she might as well play a part in "The Battle of the Sexes." Such artists as Donald Crisp, Lillian Gish, Owen Moore, Robert Herron and Mary Alden were already at work on the feature.

Fay Tincher Has Been Engaged to Star in World Pictures

Her activities were then transferred to the coast where the Reliance-Majestic, releasing on the Mutual program offered the "Bill, the Office Boy" series, with Fay Tincher as the Stenographer, a character which created for her a following. When Mr. Griffith left Reliance-Majestic, Miss Tincher was co-starred with De Wolf Hopper on the Triangle-Fine Arts program and her work in "Don Quixote," "Mr. Good, the Samaritan" and "Sunshine Dad," with Mr. Hopper, made for her a following in every part of the country. Following her work with De Wolf Hopper, she was featured as a star in her own comedies on the Triangle-Fine Arts program.

"Some Job" and "Main 1-2-3" will be her first World releases.

She will return to California this week and in the Inglis-Willis Studios, will begin work on a new feature for World program release. A rumor that she would return East, following this, to do a five-reeler in World's Fort Lee studio, has not been verified.

Lytell Finishes Exteriors for Metro Play

BERT LYTELL, who will make his first appearance as a Metro star in "The Trail to Yesterday," a screen version of Charles Alden Seltzer's popular novel, is getting settled for a long stay in Hollywood, the home of Metro's West Coast studios. Lytell and his supporting company arrived in Los Angeles last Monday from the East after a stopover of about a fortnight in Arizona, on location, where exteriors were photographed on some of the great ranches of the cattle country near the Mexican border.

With the arrival of Lytell there are now three stars at work at the Metro Hollywood studios, the others being Edith Storey and Viola Dana. Anna Q. Nilsson, Lytell's leading woman; Robert Kurrle, cameraman; Harry S. Northrup, Ernest Maupin and John A. Smiley, of the supporting cast, and Finis Fox, Director Carew's brother and assistant also went.

Fox Explains Reason for Changing Feature

"Exhibitors who wish to know whom they have to thank for our unusual action in placing a Standard picture such as 'American Buds' with the Special Feature schedule," said William Fox this week, "may learn now that they themselves are responsible for the boon."

"American Buds" stars Jane and Katherine Lee, and was made under the direction of Keanan Buel in Georgia for the most part. It was intended for a Standard picture. It was during the finishing period when the film was being cut and made ready for release, Mr. Fox says, that pressure brought to bear by the organization's branch managers throughout the country forced the change.

General Orders More Paper for Jaxon Serial

Confirmation of the success anticipated for "A Daughter of Uncle Sam," the patriotic serial produced by the Jaxon Film Corporation, has made it necessary to order large quantities of new paper for each of the twelve episodes, General Film Company reports. An unusually large order for paper and other supplies was placed several months ago for the serial. Nevertheless this has proved to be inadequate, practically all of the thirty General exchanges in the United States and Canada reporting that their supplies of posters and other advertising material have been exhausted.

Arbuckle and Company Are Marooned on Location

Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle and company are still at San Gabriel Canyon, Cal., where for four weeks they have been marooned much of the time and flooded by the heavy rains while attempting to make exteriors for the new Paramount-Arbuckle comedy, "Moonshine."

"What Kind of a Fellow Is —Griffith?"

(Continued from page 2509)

was to print his name, "David W. (Larry) Griffith; another was to suggest that the screen's future lay solely as a second-hand purveyor of stage adaptations, and a third was to ask him if he considered the "close-up" and "flashback" mere passing crazes or permanent institutions.

To-day there's one way of arousing him. Ask him if he considers "Hearts of the World" better than "The Birth of a Nation."

An hour later your ears will ring with his words, "There's no basis of comparison. They are different ——"

Encouraging Reports Received by W. H.

Reports received from the various exchanges throughout the country by W. H. Productions Company, indicate that its series of twenty-eight Sennett Comedies is meeting with success.

To date there have been five subjects released, "A Small Town Bully," featuring Mabel Normand, Mack Sennett, Roscoe Arbuckle and Owen Moore; "Friendly Enemies," featuring Chester Conklin and Sydney Chaplin; "His Diving Beauty," featuring Mabel Normand, Roscoe Arbuckle and Mack Swain; "A Polished Villain," with Al St. John, Charles Arling and Mae Bush, and "His Bitter Half," featuring Polly Moran and Charles Murray.

State right buyers are also signing up for the Shorty Hamilton Series, it is stated. There are sixteen two-reel Western comedy dramas in the series. Requests are being received at the home office of the W. H. Productions Company from exhibitors throughout the various sections of the country for bookings.

"Satan's Pawn," the first of the Bessie Barriscale Series, will be released in May. More than fifty per cent of the country has already been sold. Advertising is composed of newspaper cuts, facsimiles of posters, lobby display and press stories. The lobby display consists of a set of ten 8 x 10s and six 11 x 14's; and the posters are in two styles of one's, two styles of three's and one six sheet.

"The Bandit and the Preacher," the second Hart feature, which is now being released, is drawing big business, it is reported. It features William S. Hart, Robert Edeson, Clara Williams, and Rhea Mitchell.

Laemmle Urges Employees Buy Thrift Stamps

As the answer to a request from Washington, President Laemmle has written every Universal employee a personal letter requesting that each join the company War Saving Society, and pledge a stipulated amount of their weekly stipend toward the purchase of War Saving Stamps. In the letter Present Laemmle writes:

"We all have tried to do our bit in the Liberty Loan issues, and we must continue to do whatever we possibly can to aid our country in this present crisis.

"Our boys OVER THERE need food, clothing and supplies, and as Americans the very least we can do is to see that they get them. We must help until it HURTS and PINCHES us."

Next Minter Picture for Release May 6

The next Mary Miles Minter picture from the studios of the American Film Company, Inc., will be "The Greater Call." It is set for release on May 6.

Miss Minter has lately been appearing in a distinctly different type of picture, plays of more dramatic force, and "The Greater Call" is said to provide her with new opportunity to show her ability in pictures of this kind.

Empey Film Still Going Big

Third Week of "Over the Top," at the Lyric Theatre, Shows No Diminution of Popularity of Vitagraph Feature

ENTERING its third week at the Lyric theatre, New York, "Over the Top," Vitagraph's reproduction of Sergeant Arthur Guy Empey's book, in which the soldier-author appears as the star, continues to play to capacity. The big production, which brings the front line trenches and No Man's Land vividly before the eyes of the American people, has been one of the sensations of the year in New York theatricals, both from the standpoint of spoken and screen dramas. Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company, under whose supervision the production was made, and Wilfrid North, who directed it, have been the recipients of congratulations from all branches of the industry.

The week of April 8 was "American Defense Society week" at the Lyric, the patriotic organization having had speakers on the stage at every performance during the seven days. These speakers included some of the most notable public men and women now engaged in patriotic work in the country. Among them were George H. Mann, of the American Defense Society; Mrs. B. Bennett-Burleigh, daughter of one of England's most famous war correspondents; Corporal R. Derby Holmes, of the British Army, author of "A Yankee in the Trenches;" Norman Taylor, Hamlin Garland, the author; Eleanor Gates, author of "The Poor Little Rich Girl" and other plays; Sir John Foster Fraser, F.R.G.S., F.Z.S., noted English author and journalist; Dr. Henry Smith Williams, M.D., LL.D., of the American Defense Society; Frederick F. Moore, editor and publisher; Richard A. Purdy, vice-president of the Hudson Trust Company of New York; Ellis Parker Butler, the author; Channing Pollock, author and playwright; Lieut. "Bill" O'Hara, former pitcher of the New York Giants and now an officer in the British Army, and Dr. de Santo, an Italian journalist.

Empey, who sold more than one million dollars worth of bonds in the second Liberty Loan drive, was one of the first workers to get on the job at the opening of the third campaign. On the night preceding the opening of the drive on Liberty Day, April 6, he delivered six addresses in New York at which he stirred his hearers to patriotic pledges, and on Monday, he had the honor of opening the Liberty theatre, in front of the New York Public Library on Fifth avenue. This theatre, run under the auspices of the Stage Women's War Relief Committee, has been one of the most potent factors in the present campaign in the metropolis, and Empey, by his daily talks, has been instrumental in selling many thousands of dollars worth of bonds. He is out to make a record of $2,000,000 in personal bond sales during this campaign.

Gaumont Weekly In Demand

Pell Mitchell, Editor of News and Graphic, the Two Gaumont Weeklies, Reports on Their Reception

GAUMONT COMPANY reports the reception given its news weeklies, the News and the Graphic, is more encouraging than its officials ever expected. Pell Mitchell, the editor of these weeklies, says that the independent news reels are in great demand. He said:

"The independent field had long suffered for the want of a pictorial news service; and to have this need supplied not only with a semi-weekly release reaching the screen a day earlier than any other news-reel, but with one which easily leads the others in quality and appearance, has taken the state rights buyers by storm, and they have not hesitated to express their approval in unmistakable adjectives.

"When the Gaumont Company, yielding to the many requests for this news service, decided to enter the independent field, it assured the state right buyers that in the News and Graphic it would produce two news-reels which had never been surpassed. The loyal and enterprising Gaumont news service, which has been in training since the infancy of the motion picture industry, stood back of this promise.

"The typographical appearance, or what is known in newspaper parlance as the 'make-up,' of the News and Graphic is the most attractive which has yet been shown upon the screen. In keeping with this artistic appearance, I insist that every subject included in these reels must not only be of timely 'front-page' news interest, but that the photography and laboratory work must be of the standard used in the best feature photoplays.

"This means that the News and Graphic cost more than other news-reels to produce, but that it pays to produce only the best is evidenced by the many letters of congratulatory approval which pour into the offices of the Gaumont Company from all sections of the United States. The Pacific Coast reports that exhibitors and public pronounce them the best news-reels ever shown in the West. The Central and Southern states are emphatic in their approval. On the Atlantic Coast, the Rialto theatre, in New York City, which makes a critical selection each week of the best subjects from all topical releases, last week showed three times as many Gaumont subjects as from all other news-reels."

Julian Starts Work on a Detective Drama

Rupert Julian, who has returned to Universal City after supervising in person the opening of "The Kaiser" at the Broadway theatre, New York, has begun work on a new detective drama in which Ruth Clifford and himself will star.

Fox Seeks More Foreign Trade

Plans for Intensive Campaign Under Way for Several Weeks—Abraham Carlos in Charge of the Work

WILLIAM FOX this week announced that Fox Film Corporation has put into operation plans for an extensive drive in the foreign field to build up still more the already vast interest that the organization has abroad. It has required many weeks, the announcement reads, to formulate the plans now rapidly becoming effective.

The campaign is being carried on under the direction of A. Carlos, and confidence is expressed in the belief that the results will prove most satisfactory.

"Although it is, of course, far too early to give forth any definite accomplishments due to the present campaign," the statement continues, "or to venture predictions because they may seem rash, it is nevertheless true that important developments will occur within the very immediate future.

"The drive is to consist, in general outlines, of a vigorous advertising and publicity program, of short and long trips by each branch manager which will cover practically all of his territory, of thorough circularization of the cinemas, and of intensive salesmanship.

"Mr. Fox has always been a firm believer in the prospects for expansion abroad and is of the opinion that the present is precisely the time for a concentrated effort. The exchanges which will be the central points from which the campaign will be directed on orders from the home office will be six in Canada, nine in the United Kingdom, one covering Spain and Portugal, two for Scandinavia and Russia, four in Australia, one for New Zealand, six for South America, and the agencies in Rome, Moscow and Paris.

"The Blindness of Divorce," a Wm. Fox Standard Picture, Claims an All-Star Cast. Here Are Charles Clary and Rhea Mitchell

"The foreign business of Fox Film Corporation has already proved a potent factor in the growth of the organization. Mr. Fox was the first American producer to enter the foreign field on his own account. Translators at the home office put the titles into French, Spanish, Dutch, Portuguese, Greek and even Chinese and Japanese."

Vitagraph Serial Breaks Booking Records

"THE WOMAN IN THE WEB," Vitagraph's newest serial which started on its career last week in hundreds of theatres in the United States and Canada, broke all pre-release records of the company's serials, according to an announcement by Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the Vitagraph distributing organization. The new mark set Mr. Irwin attributes largely to the success which exhibitors have had with Vitagraph's other two serials, "The Fighting Trail" and "Vengeance—and the Woman." He feels that the names of Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph company, and Cyrus Townsend Brady as authors have now come to be regarded as guarantees of a serial's excellence. To this, together with the splendid riding and stunts which exhibitors have come to look for in Vitagraph serials, the distributing chief attributes a large part of the impetus given the company's latest offering.

Hedda Nova and J. Frank Glendon are starred in "The Woman in the Web," which was produced under the direction of David Smith and Paul Hurst. The first two episodes, "Caught in the Web" and "The Open Switch," evidently made a fine impression on the trade press critics, judging from their reviews. The entire serial is said to be an unending chain of thrills, each episode ending with a smashing climax. The titles and release dates of the succeeding thirteen episodes are as follows: April 22, "The Speeding Doom"; April 29, "The Clutch of Terror"; May 6, "The Hand of Mystery"; May 13, "Full Speed Ahead"; May 20, "The Crater of Death"; May 27, "The Plunge of Horror"; June 3, "The Fire Trap"; June 10, "Out of the Dungeon"; June 17, "In the Desert's Grip"; June 24, "Hurled to Destruction"; July 1, "The Hidden Menace"; July 8, "The Crash of Fate"; July 15, "Out of the Web."

Among the thrilling adventures in which Hedda Nova and Mr. Glendon participate, according to an advance announcement from the Vitagraph offices, is one filmed at the crater of Mount Kilauila, the company having been taken to Hawaii to make the scenes where they are said to have run awful risks.

Bessie Love Decorated for Thrift Stamps Sales

Bessie Love, the Pathe screen star, was decorated last week for "meritorious service" by Motley H. Flint, chairman of the National War Savings Committee of Los Angeles. This high honor has been conferred on but three other citizens of that city and Miss Love today is receiving hundreds of congratulatory letters and telegrams.

The decoration of Miss Love followed her vigorous campaign throughout Los Angeles in the interest of the sale of United States War Savings Stamps. It is estimated that she brought more than $10,000 to the Government through her appeals.

The presentation was made by Chairman Flint in the directors' room of the Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank before a select audience of leading citizens of Los Angeles.

Life Under "Big Top" in Enid Bennett's Latest

The smell of the tanbark and the thrill of the big top is imparted to the screen in Enid Bennett's newest Paramount picture, "The Biggest Show on Earth," written by Florence Vincent and directed by Jerome Storm under the personal supervision of Thomas H. Ince.

For this is a circus story, and to gain the correct atmosphere Mr. Ince leased the biggest part of a real circus, rented a big piece of ground and had the tents erected and everything arranged just as though a show were to be given. A den of jungle-bred lions was secured, a troop of clowns engaged, with riders, trainers and others. And Miss Bennett had to enter the lions' cage. She did it and the result was satisfying—or will be to the audiences, 'tis said.

Western Drama Without Gun Play

That the public has grown to appreciate and look forward to the surprise element found in the O. Henry stories is said to be indicated by the success scored by "By Injunction," described as a snappy two-reel comedy-drama of the West which is notable for the fact that six-shooters and other Western artillery are strangely unemployed. General Film reports that although the story is liberally sprinkled with cowboys and ranch atmosphere, the author did not find it necessary to introduce gun play or rough riding to provide entertainment.

Settings a Feature of the First Russell Picture

Interior settings said to have been built with a remarkable eye to detail are an outstanding feature of "Hearts or Diamonds?" the first of the William Russell Productions starring William Russell. It is a story of city life by William Hamilton Osborne. In Mr. Russell's supporting cast are Charlotte Burton, Howard Davies, Carl Stockdale, Robert Klein and John Gough.

Hearst-Pathe News Shows Foch in Command

Simultaneously with his first published utterance, Hearst-Pathe News No. 29 presents intimate pictures of General Foch, the new commander-in-chief of the Allied forces in Europe, whose control of the unified troops of France, Great Britain and America was brought about largely through the efforts of President Wilson.

An intimation that a supreme Allied offensive is planned is contained in General Foch's statement when he says: "The future will show the full measure of our success. We are going to try to do better and to get an upper hand of the Boche. I cannot say what will happen but all is going well." Coincidentally, Hearst-Pathe News No. 29 shows General Foch and detachments of the American, British and French troops in the now famous Allied Tactical Reserve Army, the outgrowth of the Marseilles conference. The soldiers are shown marching in full equipment ready to respond to the order to rout the Boche, and their excellent morale and condition are strikingly depicted.

Bara Campaign Attracts Unusual Attention

The unusual advertising and publicity campaign that has been carried on in the motion picture trade papers on behalf of "The Soul of Buddha," the new Theda Bara super-production, has attracted wide attention among exhibitors, according to reports from various Fox branch managers. It is said that the element of mystery has aroused great curiosity, and Fox announces now that prints of this Standard Picture are available at all exchanges.

Artcraft Pictures for New Pittsburgh House

When the New Grand theatre was opened to the public of Pittsburgh, recently, the feature selected by Harry Davis for the opening presentation of this million-dollar picture palace was "Headin' South," the Artcraft picture starring Douglas Fairbanks. All Artcraft pictures will be shown in this house, Mary Pickford in "Amarilly of Clothes Line Alley" having followed the Fairbanks production.

Elsie Ferguson, One of Artcraft's Box-Office Winners

American Soldiers Now Serving In France Under General Foch, Are Shown In a New Release of Hearst-Pathe News

Artcraft Announces War Film

"Women and the War" is D. W. Griffith Production Being Prepared for Release—Notable Players in Cast

At the New York headquarters of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president and head of the producing department, last week announced that the initial D. W. Griffith production to be released under the Artcraft trade-mark, is now under way on the West Coast. "While Mr. Griffith does not desire at the present time to give any inkling of the plot, it is permitted to state that the story covers the experiences of an American in Europe, who is caught in the wave of the war," said Mr. Lasky. "Though at first actuated by the spirit of the adventurer, he rises to the best emotions and ambitions and performs noble deeds, presenting many thrilling scenes. Big battle views are also included in this story, offering an international romance as its chief theme.

"Mr. Griffith has not as yet decided upon a title for this production although it has been temporarily named, 'Women and the War.' Among the players who appear are Robert Harron, Lillian Gish, George Fawcett and Adolph Lestina. In addition many noted personages will be seen in this film, including the Princess of Monaco, the Countess of Masserene, Lady John Lavery, Miss Bettina Stuart-Wortley, Miss Violet Keppel, the Countess of Drogheda, Lady Diana, the Hon. Mrs. Montagu, Miss Elizabeth Asquith and Miss Lilly Elsie.

"This production should not be confused with 'Hearts of the World,' Mr. Griffith's current release, staged in conjunction and under contract with the British Government. That subject is being handled by Mr. Griffith's own organization. The first of the D. W. Griffith productions to be released under the Artcraft trademark will, it is expected, be ready for presentation early in June."

Immediately prior to Mr. Griffith's departure for Europe last year, to take motion pictures in conjunction with the British Government, the producer became affiliated with Artcraft for the exploitation of a series of super-photoplays. Actual work in connection with this contract was postponed until this work was finished. "Women and the War" will be the first Griffith film to be handled through the regular distributing channels in several years.

Goldwyn's Second Selexart Now Ready

"Honor's Cross" is announced as second Selexart-Goldwyn feature, now available throughout North America. Rhea Mitchell is starred and the subject is said to be all story, without a superfluous flash in the entire drama. It is described as a gripping tale of a girl's fight against the powers that prey, in this case the principal power being the "Hon." Thomas Dolan, a politician.

One of the strongest situations in the drama is afforded when Dolan and one of his several protection-money collectors meet for a midnight conference. "Would you take a chance on the rope for real dough?" is the question Dolan springs on him. After a moment's thought Dolan's lieutenant is seen nodding his head in assent. Fifty thousand dollars is the price demanded for the job and agreed upon.

Next is shown the District Attorney's office, with the prosecutor questioning a group of men and women caught in the raid. In an empty loft of a building adjoining the District Attorney's office Dolan's assistant is seen with rifle in hand aiming through the open window. He fires and the prosecutor falls with a bullet in his arm. Believing he has committed murder, Dolan's man escapes. Later he is suspected when the police fail to find him in his usual haunts. He is captured and confesses that Dolan was the instigator.

The latter is arrested at his home by detectives led by the District Attorney, whose armless sleeve is mute evidence of how close the criminal came to "the rope for real dough."

Kehrleins Try Hodkinson Plan

Los Angeles Exhibitors Now Copartners of Distributor with Roth and Others—Kinema to Show New Product

AN announcement given out this week by the home office of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation would seem to indicate that the Hodkinson co-partnership plan is developing very rapidly along the lines which have been set forth by Mr. Hodkinson from time to time.

The announcement, which deals mainly with the latest "tie-in" of the Kehrlein Brothers in Los Angeles, is as follows:

"Exhibitors who have followed with interest the building of the Hodkinson structure throughout the West, with the first recruits in the persons of Greaves and Ellison of Denver, and later the acquisition of Mr. Roth of the California theatre, will be interested to know that the Kehrlein Brothers of Los Angeles, owners of the Kinema theatres in Los Angeles, Fresno, and Oakland, joined Mr. Hodkinson as active co-partners in his plan, which aims at the mutual benefit of all sections of the industry."

The Kinema theatre is one of the latest to be erected in Los Angeles, and will doubtless present the Hodkinson product in the future. The same applies to Fresno and Oakland.

This latest development means that the entire West, from and including Denver to the Pacific Coast, from Seattle to Los Angeles, is now complete. A great section of the United States has been allotted and the exhibitors mentioned above, together with others who are to be announced later, will proceed at once to the development of their individual parts in the co-partnership.

In a letter to the local General Film office in San Francisco, which is representing the Hodkinson Corporation at that point, Eugene Roth, of the California theatre, makes some significant statements.

The statement from the Hodkinson home office continues by saying that it believes that these frank and straightforward statements of Mr. Roth will be of vital interest to every exhibitor at the present time, confronted as he is by a number of conflicting plans, propositions, and ideas, all having points of resemblance, but each capable of vastly different results.

Judge Brown on Juvenile Story Writing

JUDGE WILLIS BROWN, whose stories of boy life are being issued in short-length weekly releases through General Film Company, was induced to analyze the psychology of the acceptable juvenile photoplay in plain terms. Having obtained the background for his work as an author of boy stories in many years' experience as a juvenile court judge in Salt Lake City, Chicago and other cities and in the organization of Boy City settlements throughout the country, Judge Brown's authority to speak on the subject is unquestioned. He says:

"As a student of boyhood, I have been accredited with some ability to forget what most people remember. In my judgment, one wishing to express the viewpoint of a boy of fourteen must think as a boy of fourteen. In writing juvenile stories my whole plot is based upon the activity and viewpoint of boys with boys, and not of a man with boys.

"There are writers of boy stories whom I greatly admire and whose work is marvelously entertaining, but the expressions of the character which they portray are those of an adult, and in order to make it enjoyable and boyish, these adult traits are presented as done in a boyish manner. It is difficult to read one of these stories and then attempt to tell it. And in attempting to screen it, stripped as it must be of all verbiage and adroit adult conclusions, we have as a result a very meager plot and one which in a majority of instances does not get over.

"One very prominent manufacturer has featured children to a great extent in recent productions. We find love, intrigue and hoochie-koochie dancing by little mites of babies, in fact, children doing adult things in a very amateurish and childish manner, the effect being all the more pronounced because it is so unreal to what would be the nature of the child. Children of their own accord would never do what some screen children do. Therefore, after the first natural effect of admiration of child actors, one becomes weary and the picture does not hold the attention.

Judge Willis Brown Produces the Judge Brown Series of Boy Pictures for General Film Release

Detroit Gives Miss Kennedy Royal Greeting

"Miss Madge Kennedy, the Goldwyn star, is in Detroit today at the request of Mr. John N. Kunsky to speak in behalf of the Liberty Loan." This was the novel method employed by the management of the Madison theatre, Detroit, last week in introducing Miss Kennedy to her admirers, who greeted the announcement with a roar of applause. Following this there was an attractive film showing a set decorated with Liberty Loan posters and Miss Kennedy standing in the foreground. This dissolved into a patriotic title, followed by another dissolve into a close-up of the star. When the film died away Miss Kennedy was discovered by a spotlight, standing on the stage. When the applause had died away a stirring appeal for the purchase of bonds was made by the star of "The Danger Game," which she herself had the pleasure of hearing applauded by the throng of spectators.

"Baree" Company Back at Hollywood Studio

With the filming of exterior scenes for "Baree, Son of Kazan," a forthcoming Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature, practically completed under the direction of David Smith, the company headed by Nell Shipman and Alfred Whitman, has returned to the Hollywood Studio from the snow-clad mountains around Truckee, Cal. Reports of wonderful snow scenes have reached the Eastern Vitagraph offices from the log cabin settlement, built specially for this picture in the big timber region north of Truckee. The entire company passed a month in the wilds.

Director Smith has been enthusiastic from the start about the picture possibilities of the James Oliver Curwood story.

Williamson Novel Adapted for Edith Storey

Edith Storey has begun work in "The Demon," her next Metro subject, at Metro's West Coast Studios in Hollywood. In this production, which follows, "Treasure of the Sea," "The Claim" and "The Legion of Death," Miss Storey is directed by George D. Baker, manager of productions at Hollywood. Mr. Baker also made the adaptation for the screen.

"The Demon" is a picturization of the widely read novel of the same name, by C. N. and A. M. Williamson. The scenes are laid in Corsica, Algiers and the U. S.

First National Exchange Enlarges Quarters

Extensive additions are being made to the quarters of the First National Exchange, 509 Fifth avenue, New York city. The demand for "Tarzan of the Apes" and the first of the Chaplin comedies made under his $1,000,000 contract are said to have so increased the business of the First National throughout the metropolitan district that more space has become an urgent necessity to take care of the bookings and the distribution of film.

Dorothy Phillips at Work on New Society Play

Dorothy Phillips, Bluebird star, has begun working in a new society drama, which is being directed by Allen J. Holubar. William Stowell, who has been seen with Miss Phillips in numerous productions, will be her leading man. "Discipline and Genevra" was the title of the magazine story upon which the photoplay is based. It is the story of a young girl, too closely cloistered from worldly affairs by a Puritanical father, who when released from the family fireside and protection finds the dizzy maze of the world too complicated for her to navigate without slipping by the wayside.

Wallace MacDonald Has Second Triangle Role

Wallace MacDonald, who made his first Triangle appearance in the recent picture, "The Shoes That Danced," with Pauline Starke, has the leading role in "Mlle. Paulette," a forthcoming Triangle production scheduled for May release. MacDonald was the winner of first place for "Charm" and third place for "Handsomeness" in the recent contest conducted by the Motion Picture Classic Magazine.

Interesting Cast in "The Face in the Dark"

For the drama of the Secret Service, "The Face in the Dark," released April 21, and in which Mae Marsh appears as star, Goldwyn has provided a cast of experienced and capable players. As leading man Niles Welch appears for the first time in a Goldwyn picture, although he has been seen in the past in the support of nearly every player of note in motion pictures. Alec B. Francis, remembered with pleasure for his work in Goldwyn's "The Cinderella Man," essays the role of Miss Marsh's father. Harry C. Myers, lately a star himself, plays a gentleman crook, while Isabelle Lamon emerges from several years in a convent school to resume her work before the camera. Others in the cast are Donald Hall, Willard Dashiell, Gladys Fairbanks and Inez Marcelle.

Goldwyn Expects Mae Marsh In "The Face in the Dark" to Surpass Her Former Successes

Constance Talmadge Has Not a Dual Personality, But She Is a Regular Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde When It Comes to Acting. On the Left Is How the Camera Caught Her In "Scandal," and On the Right Is a Sample of Her Innocence in "The Studio Girl"

Stage Managers Seek Constance Talmadge

THE legitimate stage is holding out its arms alluringly to Constance Talmadge, it became known last week. To back this discovery up Select Pictures Corporation announced through its publicity department that a number of producing managers have offered to loosen the strings of their respective purses if Miss Talmadge will only consent to sign her name on the dotted line.

But (and if this was put in pictures it would be the end of the story) Miss Talmadge cannot listen to the call of the stage—in fact, Select Pictures says she cannot even hear it—because she is bound for a number of years to Select Pictures Corporation, which produces her pictures, and to Lewis J. Selznick, who presents her in them.

Although Select Pictures admits that by strange coincidence four of these offers arrived at once—two from the East, one from Chicago and one from the West (there are no producers in the South)—none of the names of the producers was announced or made known. It was said, however, that the four disagreed as to the type of artist Miss Talmadge's acting represents. One declared she is a farceuse, and he could prove it by citing "The Honeymoon." The next said this was all wrong, and that she is an exponent of "high comedy," and he could prove it by citing "Scandal." Following this the two remaining producers combined their forces as judges and passed the opinion along that Miss Talmadge is best in straight drama, and cited "The Shuttle" to prove it. For it is agreed in all quarters that there she made a decided hit.

At last reports the star was said to be very much puzzled.

Atmosphere Sought For New Pathe Serial

THE first episode of "The Wolf-Faced Man," the new Pathe Western serial being made by the Diando Film Corporation at its studios at Glendale, California, under the direction of Stuart Paton, has already been filmed and is said to contain thrills in plentiful numbers.

In his search for true atmosphere and realism, Mr. Paton recently took the entire company to the mountains 300 miles east of Fresno to obtain the proper setting for one series of scenes being filmed. One of these scenes showed George Larkin, leading man, and Betty Compson, leading woman, taking a dive down a precipitous mountainside in a flume. Pathe says that there was more realism to the scene than the script called for and the director intended to give, as the weight of the log carried it past the barriers erected to stop it and the two actors with it. All that saved the two from being dashed down into a chasm far below was the fact that the flume made a sharp turn before the water fell 75 feet into the chasm. The log caught on the turn sufficiently to enable Miss Compson and Mr. Larkin to throw themselves over the side of the flume. They were lacerated by being mashed between the banks of the flume and the log, but felt happy because they escaped as lightly as they did.

"The Wolf-Faced Man" was written by Lucien Hubbard and W. A. S. Douglas. Mr. Hubbard is also writing the continuity for the serial. No definite release date has been set, but it probably will be placed on the Pathe program before fall.

Scenes in New Jersey

Oscar Apfel has transported himself with Kitty Gordon, Muriel Ostriche, Frank Mayo and company to the George Gould estate at Lakewood, New Jersey, making

Former Keystoners in Drama

Change in Triangle-Keystone Policy, Eliminating Slapstick, Offers Comedy Players Initial Feature Roles, and Vice Versa

WITH the consolidation of the Triangle-Keystone playing forces at Culver City some months ago, the casting directors at the dramatic end of the lot took advantage of the many new types made available by the removal of the Keystoners from Hollywood. Subsequently, numerous well-known Keystoners were drafted for the regular features and several, as a result of their marked dramatic ability, have been elevated to leading roles in forthcoming productions.

The changes in the Keystones also have enabled many of the feature players to appear in comedy roles. The slapstick regime ended with the March schedule, and a new type of comedy was inaugurated. The demand for comedies of a different order was supplied by scripts from authors such as Mrs. Kate Corbaley, author of the $1,000 prize play, "Real Folks." Several two-reelers by Mrs. Kate Corbaley are scheduled for April release, "First Aid" and "Mr. Briggs Closes the House." Frank Condon, well-known Saturday Evening Post writer, has been engaged to write continuity for the comedies, and Charles Mortimer Peck, author and editor who recently joined the Triangle forces, has scenarioized them.

The first of the comedy stars to be drafted for the regular features was Claire Anderson, who has twenty-five Keystones to her credit. She appears in "The Answer," playing opposite Joe Bing. She will be seen in a forthcoming society drama, "Mlle. Paulette," with Wallace MacDonald as her leading man.

Gloria Swanson is introduced in a dramatic role in "Society for Sale," an April release, in which the former comedienne plays opposite William Desmond. She is now working in "Her Decision," with J. Barney Sherry and Darrell Foss.

Others who have made the change from comedy to drama are Myrtle Lind, who plays the leading role in "Nancy Comes Home;" Frank Bonn and Dora Rodgers, who are seen in "Who Killed Walton?;" Peggy Pearce, in "Judith;" Ward Caulfield, in "The Love Brokers" and "Judith;" Ray Griffith, in "The Siren in the House," and Maud Wayne in "The Loyalty of Taro San."

On the other hand, many of the dramatic players are being initiated into comedy roles in the new slapstickless Keystones. Fritzie Ridgeway has the leading feminine role in "The Neighbor's Baby." Charles Dorian plays opposite Miss Ridgeway. Jack Livingston, well-known juvenile, is cast in a forthcoming Keystone. Myrtle Rishdell, who made her first appearance as a Triangle player in "Nancy Comes Home," is cast in "Mr. Briggs Closes the House." Edward Brady has a leading role in "Mr. Briggs Closes the House," and is also featured in another April release, "Mr. Miller's Economies," all of which are designated "refined comedy."

First National Helps on Chaplin Comedy

TO assist exhibitors in the exploitation of "A Dog's Life," first of the new Charlie Chaplin comedies, and the only picture that the comedian has made in the past eight months, the First National Exhibitors Circuit has gotten out a complete line of lithographic paper, window cards, lobby displays, lantern slides and press matter.

The lithographic posters, printed in full colors, include two different one-sheets, a three-sheet, a six-sheet and a twenty-four-sheet. They all depict actual scenes in the comedy. This is said to be the first time that a twenty-four-sheet has ever been issued for Chaplin.

In providing full sets of window cards and photo-gelatine lobby displays for each of the forthcoming eight comedies, the executives of the circuit evince the determination to leave no stone unturned in giving the series every advertising adjunct that exhibitors require in putting over big dramatic features.

Following out this idea a four-page press sheet has also been issued on "A Dog's Life," containing a complete supply of ready-to-clip matters and sample lay-outs of twenty-four different newspaper and program cuts available in various sizes. This is claimed to be the first time in Chaplin's entire screen career that a press sheet of so comprehensive a nature has been issued on any of his individual releases, which is rather remarkable, considering the star's drawing power and the wide interest of fans in his personality.

Chaplin's youthful admirers, a unique cartoon herald, picturing the big moments in Charlie's life from his birth up to the appearance in the first of his big comedies, has also been published for free distribution. R. M. Brinkerhoff drew the pictures.

Viola Dana at Work on "Nita's Wooing"

HAVING finished her work in "Riders of the Night" at Metro's West Coast studios, Viola Dana is ready to start on the production of "Nita's Wooing," in which she will be directed by Frank Reicher. Mr. Reicher has received the script of the scenario written by Albert Shelby Le Vino, who is also the author of the original story, and the director has selected several locations in the orange country and on the cattle ranches of California which are said to offer fine opportunities for photography.

After the completion of "Nita's Wooing," Miss Dana will return from Hollywood to the East, under the terms of her contract with Metro, which calls for her presence at the company's New York plant six months in the year.

Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, In "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," Distributed By First National

Notable Characterizations in "Third Floor Back"

The production of Jerome K. Jerome's "Passing of the Third Floor Back," starring Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson and released by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, is said to be noteworthy for its sharply drawn characters. In addition to Sir Johnston's characterization of "The Stranger," a duplication of his memorable stage performance, Augusta Haviland as Mrs. Sharpe, the cheating landlady; Molly Pearson as Stasia, the spiteful and neglected slavey; Ben Graham as the bullying and bombastic Major Tompkins; Ketty Galanta, the Major's beautiful but unhappy daughter; George Le Guere as Christopher Penny, the talented but spineless artist; Thornton Bastion as Harry Larkcom, the unscrupulous young bounder; Ricca Allen as Miss Kite, the painted lady of uncertan years and lineage, and Sydney Goldin as Jape Samuels, the picturesque Jewish "promoter," are all said to give a remarkable sense of vitality to the whole production.

Biograph Superintendent's Gift from Petrova

As a farewell token and a tribute of appreciation of service well rendered, Madame Petrova, when she left the Biograph studio at East 175th street, New York, to continue her work at her own studio at 230 West 38th street, presented Thomas Persons, superintendent of the Biograph Building, with a handsome pair of diamond cuff links, set in platinum.

Six Clover Comedies Are Completed

The completion of the first six Clover Comedies, which General Film is distributing, is announced from the Denver studios of the National Film Corporation. Productions plans for these weekly releases are being worked out far in advance. "Bud" Duncan, Dot Farley and "Kewpie" Morgan are the principal players.

Liberty Loan Drive in Animated Weekly

Inauguration of the Liberty Loan drive is the feature of the Universal Animated Weekly No. 19, released April 10. The subject opens with views of President Wilson reviewing the Seventy-ninth Division, National Army, at Baltimore, where he sounded the keynote of the tremendous campaign. From marching men and cheering crowds the scene shifts to Philadelphia, where Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, asserting "There will be no peace until America has achieved Victory!" unveils a statue of the Goddess of Liberty.

From Philadelphia the camera takes you to Washington, where George Creel, Chairman of the Committee on Public Information, boards an aeroplane and flies away for Baltimore, there to drop Liberty Loan literature upon the heads of the crowds at the President Wilson review. While in Washington the camera registers the Liberty Loan activities of Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks and Miss Mary Pickford, who address great throngs from the steps of the National Capitol.

Another jump of the camera follows Chaplin and Fairbanks to New York.

Features Near Completion for Wm. Fox

One production was finished at the William Fox studios last week, "Brave and Bold," in which George Walsh is starred, and several more are now almost complete.

"Brave and Bold," George Walsh's newest vehicle, was screened under the direction of Carl Harbaugh, whose most recent film was "Jack Spurlock—Prodigal," also starring Walsh. Both June Caprice and Virginia Pearson are well toward the end of productions in work in the East.

Another picture almost finished is "Peg of the Pirates," Peggy Hyland's second production for William Fox, which O. A. C. Lund has been directing in the South for several weeks. Jane and Katherine Lee have started upon a new film suited to the particular lines of endeavor in which they do so well. Kenean Buel is again supervising and staging the play.

Out West, Tom Mix is progressing with "Ace High," which Lynn Reynolds is directing.

Gladys Brockwell is still working on "The Scarlet Road," under the direction of Edward J. Le Saint, and William Farnum is expected to begin a new picture this week with Frank Lloyd as director.

Women Scenarioists Are in Majority

In the scenario-writing business, at least among those connected with the Famous Players-Lasky studios in Hollywood, women are in the majority, according to a statement from that company. At the studio where so many Paramount and Artcraft pictures are produced, there are six women scenarioists — Jeanie MacPherson, Frances Marion, Marion Fairfax, Elizabeth Kennedy, Margaret Turnbull and Beulah Marie Dix, while over at the Morosco studio, where Gardner Hunting does plays, he is balanced by Julia Crawford Ivers.

World Staff Writes Round-Robin Play

Little Madge Evans Furnishes Many Bright Spots on World Pictures Programs

ONE of the most unusual stunts to be pulled off by a scenario department since the inception of such adjuncts to the industry is now being done by the scenario staff of World Pictures. Five of the seven members of the staff are now engaged in writing a film story in which each will be responsible for the story and continuity contained in one reel.

In addition to the five actively engaged in the work, Charles S. Sarver, scenario editor, is acting as general supervisor of the work, while another member of the staff is acting as a sort of free lance, able to jump in wherever needed to help out the story and continuity, and he will also write the subtitles for the production. The experiment is being watched with great interest because of the fact that in novel and serial story writing such a combination of authors has never proved a success.

Bi-weekly conferences are now being held at which the story is being rounded into shape, all discrepancies removed and perfect continuity and sequence assured. It is felt that with the skill, experience and brains of all five persons working on the same story the result is certain to be a film attraction of tremendous power and box-office boosting force.

The World scenario staff members combining on this production are Charles S. Sarver, scenario editor; Clara S. Beranger, Wallace C. Clifton, Harry Hoyt, Hamilton Smith, Lucien Hubbard and George D. Proctor.

Miss Barriscale Completes "Patriotism"

THE final scenes of Bessie Barriscale's sixth Paralta production, "Patriotism," have been taken at the company's studios in Los Angeles. The story, while it deals with the war situation in Scotland and with modern conditions, is said to be not essentially a war plot. There are no battle scenes in the entire production, the atmosphere of conflict merely being utilized to form an appropriate background for the story.

Miss Barriscale appears in the role of Patricia Haldine, a Scotch girl, who gives over her life and home to the care and comfort of the soldiers who have returned from the front.

The picture was directed by Raymond B. West, who is now engaged in cutting and assembling it for release by Paralta Plays, Inc. Jane Holly and R. B. Kidd collaborated on the authorship of the plot, and Julian Louis Lamothe prepared the screen version.

Charles Gunn, who but recently was engaged by Paralta, makes his debut with that company in the leading role opposite Miss Barriscale. The supporting cast of the picture includes Herschell Mayall, Joseph J. Dowling, Arthur Allardt, Roy Laidlaw, Clifford Alexander, Ida Lewis, Baby Mary Jane Irving, and other players of note.

"Patriotism" is said to be a production which maintains the high standard set by Miss Barriscale since her connection with Paralta and promises to even be a better drawing card for the exhibitors than her five previous releases.

As soon as preparations are completed, Miss Barriscale will commence work upon her next picture, in which she will be directed by her husband, Howard Hickman.

Earle Williams Busy on MacGrath Story

Earle Williams and his company have begun work at Vitagraph's Hollywood Studios on "The Girl in His House," a forthcoming Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature. This picture, which gives every promise of being one of Mr. Williams's best efforts, is adapted from the story of that name by Harold MacGrath, which was run in serial form in the Ladies Home Journal. Grace Darmond, who is becoming one of Vitagraph's greatest favorites, is Mr. Williams's leading woman.

Sills Has Big Role in "The Yellow Ticket"

In the Pathe-Astra production of A. H. Woods' stage success, "The Yellow Ticket," in which Fannie Ward is to be the star and Warner Oland is to play the part of Baron Andrey, created on the stage by John Mason, Milton Sills has been chosen for the role of Julian Rolfe. This is the role in which John Barrymore was seen in the original production. "The Yellow Ticket" is one of the important productions in Pathe Selective Feature Service, recently announced.

Bathing Beauties Would Be a Rather Tame Name for These L-Ko Fair Maidens, Who Contribute Physical Charms aplenty to the Julius Stern Brand of Laugh Makers

Universal Loans Ralph Graves to Tourneur

RALPH GRAVES, who recently signed a contract with Universal to play opposite Ella Hall, has been loaned by President Carl Laemmle to Maurice Tourneur, who has cast Graves in the leading role of "Sporting Life," the big Drury Lane theatre production, on which Tourneur has started production at Fort Lee.

Tourneur, whose most recent achievement was the screening of Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird," and who was also responsible for "The Whip," is a believer in types more than in the names of stars. He wants screen presence and screen acting ability and the "type to fill the part." The very best in "casting" a picture is his first aim, after which he is ready to take all responsibility for the finished product.

Graves, who was described recently by a story sent out by Universal as the youngest leading man in captivity, stands six feet three inches without his shoes and is built in proportion. He was the type Tourneur desired for the lead in "Sporting Life." This information was conveyed to President Laemmle of Universal, who immediately got into communication with Graves, and with his consent, the services of the young star were offered to Tourneur. The offer was accepted immediately and for several weeks Graves will be working in the production, "Sporting Life," instead of opposite Ella Hall at Universal City. Upon the completion of "Sporting Life" Graves will proceed immediately to the big production plant of Universal on the West Coast.

"Blindness of Divorce" Scores Sensation

"THE BLINDNESS OF DIVORCE," the latest William Fox standard picture to be released, is said to have created a social sensation in Brooklyn, where it was first shown at the Folly theatre, at Graham avenue and Debevoise street. It appears that, totally without intention on the part of Author-director Frank Lloyd, this picture parallels to a certain extent a divorce case which occurred a few years ago in that very neighborhood. The rumor that "The Blindness of Divorce" was practically a picturization of this case, and even explained some of the mysteries connected with the subsequent careers of the principal parties, quickly spread all over the district and combined with the regular clientele to crowd the theatre to its utmost capacity for the four days shown. A repeat is likely.

However fortuitous such an opening, William Fox is said to deprecate any such sensational advertising in connection with this home reform picture,—which he declares was not founded on any particular divorce case, but aims to expose the evils of the practice of rushing to the courts for separation on the slightest domestic dissention. That there are many parallels to the Lloyd story cannot be doubted, because the author made a comprehensive study of the problem all over the country before starting to draft the scenario. Therefore it is probable that in almost every neighborhood where the new picture is shown spectators will recognize familiar cases.

Although there is no star in this standard picture, it is played by several Fox favorites, such as Charles Clary, Rhea Mitchell, Bertha Mann, Bertram Grassby, Willard Louis and Marc Robbins.

John Bowers Signs with World for Two Years

John Bowers, who has attained great popularity among motion picture fans, through his work in various World productions, has just been signed by World Pictures for two years, with privilege of renewal for a long period. Mr. Bowers will be featured in all productions in which he appears and he will be seen in support of the leading women stars of the concern.

Mr. Bowers has been seen in a number of World Pictures as leading man for Ethel Clayton, June Elvidge and others. One of his forthcoming pictures will be "Journey's End," in which he is leading man for Ethel Clayton. At the present he is working in a new World Picture tentatively titled "The Cabaret."

Paralta Solves Daylight Problem

To get the greatest possible length of sunlight in the working day the Paralta Studios in Hollywood, California, changed their working hours at the time the daylight saving law was inaugurated on April 1. Henceforth the workers will report at nine o'clock in the morning, and leave at five thirty in the afternoon, which will make their time by the sun exactly the same as before the new schedule came into effect. These hours had previously been determined as the most favorable in the day for picture making in that locality.

Another Unusual Cast

What is said to be one of the most noteworthy casts ever assembled to interpret a screen drama is now working in Metro's picturization of "The House of Mirth," Edith Wharton's novel, which is being directed by Albert Capellani.

In the cast are Katharine Harris Barrymore, Henry Kolker, Christine Mayo, Joseph Kilgour, Lottie Briscoe, Edward Abeles, Pauline Welch, Maggie Weston, William A. Sullivan and Morgan Jones.

Charles Ray Trying Out As a Nymph In the Ince-Paramount Feature, "Playing the Game"

Chandlee Adopts Dixon's Story for Paralta

Thomas Dixon, Jr., the author, arrived at the Paralta Studios in Hollywood, Cal., last week to consult personally as to the adaptation of his widely read story, "The One Woman," for the screen. Several well-known continuity writers had attempted the task of adapting "The One Woman," but none succeeded in meeting the requirements of Mr. Dixon until the version which has just been completed by Harry Chandlee was handed to him. This was the first work assigned to Mr. Chandlee following his transfer from the eastern to the western division of the Paralta scenario department.

A comprehensive outline of the continuity has been prepared by Mr. Chandlee, and from this E. Richard Schayer has completed the detailed continuity for the production, the filming of which will be started at once.

Mutuals in 58 Houses in Minneapolis in Week

Out of a total of sixty-two theatres in Minneapolis, fifty-eight played Mutual pictures during the first week of April. Mary Miles Minter, in "Powers that Prey," was booked for two days, first run, at the New Calhoun. Edna Goodrich was shown at the New National, William Russell at the Third Ward, Margarita Fisher, New Park and Glenwood Palace, Ann Murdock at the East Lake, while Billie Rhodes played no less than nineteen theatres during the week.

Early forthcoming productions of Mutual are Mary Miles Minter in "The Greater Call," Margarita Fisher in "The Square Deal" and William Russell in "Hearts or Diamonds."

Essanay Would Have the President in Picture

Essanay is negotiating with George Creel to have President Wilson appear in the patriotic picture "Young America," the next George K. Spoor feature. It is the aim to have the President pose for a short strip at his desk or on the Capitol grounds.

John W. Noble Directed "My Own United States," Distributed By Metro

Metro Transplants Directors

Spring Finds Those in East Going West and Ones on Coast Coming East—Better Results Expected

METRO'S staff of directors is undergoing a sort of spring transplanting, calling for a general change of program. Eastern directors are going West, and Western directors are being transferred to the Eastern studio. Directors who have long been identified with one star are being transferred to the company of another, all in the general policy of loosening up the roots and allowing a new crop of ideas to sprout.

John H. Collins, one of Metro's representative directors, has returned from the West after a seven-months' sojourn in California; William S. Davis has gone West, after directing several pictures in the New York studio; Charles J. Brabin has changed his directing base from California to New York, and George D. Baker, long a star director in the East, has gone West to become production manager of the Hollywood, Cal., studio. Edwin Carewe has returned from the West, after directing Bert Lytell in his initial Metro picture, and George Irving has been transferred from the Metro-Yorke branch of the corporation to the parent stock.

Fred J. Balshofer, president of the Yorke Film Corporation, who has been in the East for several months with Harold Lockwood, has gone West with that star to direct his pictures personally. Albert Capellani and Harry Franklin will remain for the present in the Metro studio in New York, and Frank Reicher in the firm's Hollywood, Cal., studio.

Incidental to the shifting of directors will be a corresponding change in assistant directors. Albert H. Kelly, who has been assisting John H. Collins for the past year, will assist George Irving in his patriotic picture, then returning to Mr. Collins. P. Thad, Volkman has returned to Metro after a leave of absence, and is aiding Harry Franklin in May Allison's production. George McGuire has been transferred from the cutting-room to the studio floor, and will be assistant director for Charles J. Brabin. J. J. Dunne, who has been associated with William S. Davis, is at present assisting Albert Capellani in "The House of Mirth." Finis Fox continues as assistant to his brother, Edwin Carewe. Al Rayback will be second assistant to George Irving. He was formerly employed at the Metro studio as assistant to S. Rankin Drew, now an aviator in France. Metro's East and West coast studios are humming with activity.

Cast Is Chosen for "Patience Sparhawk"

BECAUSE the story "Patience Sparhawk and Her Times," by Gertrude Atherton, is full of tense dramatic situations which call for considerable stage technique Madame Petrova has selected most of the members of her company for the production of "Patience Sparhawk" from the players of the legitimate stage.

In the role of Beverly Peele, a good-looking cad and who is Patience's husband, Vernon Steele will be seen. Mr. Steele, who has made a name for himself in a number of Goldwyn productions, is a recruit from the legitimate drama, and it is interesting to recall the fact that he was a member of Madame Petrova's company a few years ago when she appeared in the Shubert production of "Panthea."

As Garan Bourke, a young Irish lawyer, Rockliffe Fellowes appears as Madame Petrova's leading man. He, too, has played many important roles on the Broadway stage, some of his most recent appearances being with Grace George in "Eve's Daughter," with Mrs. Fiske in "Erstwhile Susan," with Helen Ware in "Within the Law," and with Lucille Watson, who in private life is Mrs. Rockliffe Fellowes, in "Under Cover," where he followed William Courtenay in the leading role. In the film field Mr. Fellowes has had an equally successful career in many Fox, Brady and World productions. He has lately been supporting Ethel Clayton in a number of pictures.

Frederick Truesdale, remembered for his appearances with Mrs. Sol Smith Russell, De Wolf Hopper and E. H. Sothern, and in more recent years with Ethel Barrymore, Emmy Wehlen and Emily Stevens, will have the part of Beverly's father. Matilda Barring will play the part of Patience's mother, and Violet Reed, who has appeared in many previous Petrova offerings, will have the interesting role of Honora Mairs, the poor relation in the Peele family.

Other members of the cast are Gene Burrell, Herbert Patee, Margaret Seddon, Norma Seifert, James Ferry and Captain Harry Lambert.

Paralta Builds Permanent Eastern Street Set

At its Western studio, Paralta is building a permanent set representing an Eastern street. The new street covers about an acre in area and is built in such a way as to lend itself readily to any change needed. The present arrangement of the street, which consists of two groceries, a blacksmith shop, a postoffice, a town hall or courthouse, a church, and some residences, was built for J. Warren Kerrigan's next production at Paralta.

They Like Pathe Serial

The success of Pathe's serial, "The House of Hate," starring Pearl White, is said to be assuming nationwide proportions. What various papers in all parts of the country say about it is cited as a very good indication of what may be expected of the picture.

Rex Beach Picture Is Praised

Expressions of Approval Following Advance Showings of "Heart of the Sunset" Forecast Success for Goldwyn-Rex Beach Offering

As a result of the special pre-release showing of Rex Beach's "Heart of the Sunset," arranged by the Goldwyn branches throughout North America, exhibitors everywhere are said to be enthusiastic over the so-called screen classic of the great Southwest.

At a special invitation showing at the Fenway theatre in Boston, on April 2, many of the most prominent exhibitors in the New England territory were present, including representatives of Nathan Gordon's offices and the Keith interests, with Jacob Lourie of the Modern and Beacon theatres in Boston, and Victor Morris representing Marcus Loew. The Castle Square theatre management also was represented as were the Allston theatre, and the Fox theatre of Springfield. Mrs. Ayer of the Exeter Street theatre also witnessed the play, with exhibitors from Haverhill, Salem and many other wideawake motion picture centers in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. The consensus of opinion in that territory is that Goldwyn, in "Heart of the Sunset," is offering an even greater attraction than the last Rex Beach box-office magnet, "The Auction Block."

Similar showings have been held in Minneapolis, reflecting the opinion of the Northwest; in Atlanta, the center of Southern showmanship, and in Dallas, the heart of the Southwest, the locale of "Heart of the Sunset." From the last named territory came praise even warmer than from New England.

"Without doubt, 'Heart of the Sunset' is the strongest, most artistic production ever made of a Rex Beach novel," said a well-known Texas exhibitor. "It is true to life as we see it and has more punch than any of the other Rex Beach productions. We predict that it will coin money wherever it is shown."

Which makes it almost unanimous, says Goldwyn.

"Son of Democracy" Exceeds Expectations

The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation announces that all expectations have been surpassed in the matter of bookings on the Paramount series of ten two-reel pictures, "The Son of Democracy," depicting episodes in the life of Abraham Lincoln and in which Benjamin Chapin is featured.

General Manager Al Lichtman, Department of Distribution, in commenting on the success of this series, says: "It would naturally be supposed that the bookings of 'The Son of Democracy' would be a good gauge of the feeling of patriotism in different sections of the country, for it is unquestionably a subject to stir the patriotism of any loyal American. The returns would indicate that the entire country is backing up the administration and is heart and soul in the war, for in no locality has an office fallen below the estimated bookings, which in practically every instance have been greatly exceeded.

"Another exceptional fact is that theatres which are just beginning to run the first releases are playing to turnaway business, which shows the benefits of cumulative advertising and is the strongest kind of an argument for longer runs.

"All the salesmen of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation are engaged in friendly rivalry to see who will secure the largest bookings, and the leaders in this contest have shifted continually."

At present the standing of the offices is in the following order: Philadelphia, Salt Lake, Denver, Kansas City, Cleveland, Pittsburg, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Chicago, Detroit, Boston, Washington, Cincinnati, Minneapolis, Portland, Seattle, New York, Dallas and Atlanta.

A short time ago Cleveland was in ninth place, and has jumped to the fourth, and San Francisco and Los Angeles have changed places frequently. Philadelphia, thickly settled with people of German parentage, leads the list, a good sign that the Kaiser's propaganda has fallen on deaf ears in the vicinity of the Quaker City.

Southern Exhibitor Likes Pathe Policy

Following the announcement of Pathe's Selective Feature Service, through which Pathe Plays are to be booked on individual merit, the following excerpts from a letter written to Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, by Ernst Boehringer, the Southern exhibitor of the Liberty theatre, New Orleans, was given out:

"We are unalterably opposed to the old program booking plans which confine a theatre making two changes a week to the product of one producer. Each of the programs we were formerly in released two features a week, thus we had no open time for any other film without laying on the shelf a picture paid for, and were obliged to show their pictures whether in our opinion they were good, bad or indifferent.

"We have a six month contract for Pathe Plays starring Ward, Keenan, Love and Washburn. Our contract does not include other film such as 'The Naulahka,' but it is agreed and understood that such specials are to be offered us.

William Desmond, In a More Dignified Moment of "Society for Sale," a Triangle Play

Vitagraph's Third Serial Is Released

The chief news from the Vitagraph office for the present week is the release of the third great serial to be produced by the company, "The Woman in the Web," which Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the Vitagraph distributing organization, announced some time ago would be ready for exhibitors on April 8, immediately following the final episode of the serial, "Vengeance and the Woman." This serial, Mr. Irwin states, has on its release date surpassed in an extraordinary degree the total bookings of both its serial predecessors. A large force of Vitagraph West Coast attaches has been concentrated upon the production of this melodrama since the first of the year when Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, turned over to his brother, Director David Smith, the completed script of the play, which is the joint work of President Smith and Cyrus Townsend Brady, authors of "Vengeance and the Woman." While the story of "The Woman in the Web," is of an entirely different nature than its two serial predecessors and not a "western" story, the sensational stunts that appeal so strongly have been developed with a greater degree of originality, it is said.

Mr. Smith declares that in Hedda Nova and J. Frank Glendon he has discovered two serial stars who will establish new records for the physical courage and dramatic ability required for this form of photoplay entertainment.

Emmy Wehlen, Metro Star, Is Helping the Third Liberty Loan Along

Kitty Gordon in Apfel's First World Picture

Oscar Apfel, who under the banner of William Fox, directed William Farnum in some of his most important productions, has completed his first World picture with Kitty Gordon as star. It is titled "The Interloper."

The story is said to be highly dramatic and of intense appeal. It was written by Clara Beranger and follows the theme of a second wife who resents the claim of the first. That she accomplishes her purpose of creating a new vision of the wife in her husband's mind, after she knows the woman's true position in his home, makes a drama with surprising finale. Apfel is said to have brought to this production some of the lighting effects for which he became so well known on the coast, and which received praise from reviewers of his Kerrigan-Paralata production, "A Man's Man," filmed from the Peter B. Kyne story of the same title. Apfel came East a short time ago and immediately began work with Miss Gordon in the World West Fort Lee Studio. Irving Cummings, Frank Mayo, Isabelle Berwin, George MacQuarrie, Anthony Byrd, L. Quong, June Blackman and Tom Cameron make up the cast in "The Interloper."

Duncan Calls New Serial "Regular He-Man Play"

Following the announcement that William Duncan had started work on another Vitagraph serial, advance bookings have been pouring into the company's office in greater volume than ever attended another serial, according to a statement by Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the Vitagraph distributing organization. The serial, the title of which has not been announced, is not to be released until July.

The story of this new serial, which was written by Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, and Cyrus Townsend Brady, has been pronounced by Duncan "a regular 'he-man' play."

Pathe Offers Red Cross Drama

Baby Marie Osborn in What Is Said to Be Her Best Picture—Other Features on the Program

BABY MARIE OSBORN in a Red Cross drama, "Dolly Does Her Bit," the eighth episode of "The House of Hate," and Lloyd and Toto Comedies are headliners of Pathe's program for April 28.

"Dolly Does Her Bit" is said to be one of the most charming pictures in which Baby Marie Osborn, the child star, has ever appeared. It is a story of patriotism, thrills and light comedy woven about the adventures of Dolly and a Red Cross doll, the complications following upon the little girl's amusing attempt to impersonate the doll when her companions have unintentionally broken it and the comedy arising from the antics of Dolly and little Sambo.

The eighth episode of "The House of Hate" is said to be replete with thrills, mystery and romance. This episode finds Pearl in the grip of the Hooded Terror at the hovel of the dying Malay on the river front.

Harold Lloyd's comedy offering is "Hey There," produced by Rolin for Pathe. It deals with Lloyd's adventures in a studio where most of the actors are crazy and the others are nutty.

The Toto Comedy, "His Busy Day," shows the comedian as a cameraman for the news weekly. He attends a big downtown fire, an outdoor dance and a circus.

The program also includes "Picturesque Wales—Llangollen" and "Picture Spots in England," beautiful Pathe colored travel scenics. Hearst-Pathe News No. 36 and No. 37 are released on this program.

Much Activity at Lasky Western Studios

DESPITE the departure of Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford on their transcontinental tour in behalf of the third Liberty Loan, and the consequent absence of a good many people from the studio, there is a great deal of activity apparent at the Hollywood plant of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

"Old Wives for New," adapted by Jeanie MacPherson from the novel by David Graham Phillips, is coming along splendidly under the direction of Cecil B. De Mille. The company recently were on location at Kernville, Cal. Included in the cast are Elliott Dexter, Florence Vidor, Maym Kelso, Gustaf Seyffertitz and others.

Commodore Blackthorn took his "Missing" company—or parts of it—on location last week also, to get some scenes representing rural England. This filmization of Mrs. Humphry Ward's well-known novel is now rapidly drawing to a completion. James Young is directing, with the Commodore on the side lines. Sylvia Breamer, Thomas Meighan, Robert Gordon, Ola Humphreys and others are playing the leading roles.

Donald Crisp has started work on "The Firefly of France," with Wallace Reid, supported by Ann Little. This new picture, which follows "Believe Me, Xantippe," just completed for Paramount, is from the story by Maria Angellotti, which appeared serially in the Saturday Evening Post and is a tale of the war. Wallace Reid is well ahead of his schedule, having "The House of Silence," soon to be released, and "Believe Me, Xantippe," to follow, before "The Firefly of France" is given to the public.

George Melford, having just completed a Sessue Hayakawa picture for Paramount which will shortly be announced, has already begun work on a new one which will present the Japanese star as a Chinaman of the new school. The story, temporarily called "The City of Dim Faces," is by Francis Marion.

At Morosco studio Vivian Martin is at work on "Viviette," which promises to be the sprightliest little comedy this Paramount star has ever appeared in. It is from the story by Wm. J. Locke and Walter Edwards is the director.

Femininity Is Rampant In Current Universal and Bluebird Productions. "The Scarlet Drop," a Special, and "A Rich Man's Darling," With Louise Lovely, Are Two of Them

Select Announces New Features

Clara Kimball Young and Alice Brady Presented in "The Reason Why" and "At the Mercy of Men," Respectively

STAR SERIES productions for early release by Select Picture Corporation will include Alice Brady's latest picture, "At the Mercy of Men," and Clara Kimball Young's production of Elinor Glyn's story, "The Reason Why," as well as the previously announced picture starring Constance Talmadge, "Up the Road With Sallie," which follows her preceding release, "The Shuttle."

"At the Mercy of Men," which follows the Brady production of the Eugene Walter drama, "The Knife," is said to be one of the most ambitious bits of work which Miss Brady has yet done for the screen. The play is a love story of modern Russia. Alice Brady has a huge role in this photoplay, and one which is said to give her ample scope for a great variety of work. "At the Mercy of Men" was directed by Charles Miller from the scenario of Paul West. Frank Morgan is again seen as Miss Brady's leading man.

That the author of "Three Weeks" is the author of "The Reason Why" is considered by Select a guaranty of the heart interest in this latest Clara Kimball Young's Select productions. Miss Young, it is said, has given the Glyn masterpiece a notable production. Lady Duff Gordon, known as Lucile in the world of fashion, designed Miss Young's gowns for the entire production.

Milton Sills is Miss Young's leading man in this production, and Robert G. Vignola directed the making of the picture.

Seven Companies Active at Culver City

A CROOK story, with J. Barney Sherry in the leading role as a modern Raffles, has been put into production during the past week at Culver City. Director Conway is directing this Triangle drama, "High Stakes," which was written by Andrew Soutar. Jane Miller will make her initial appearance as a Triangle player as Sherry's leading woman. The supporting cast also includes Harvey Clark, Myrtle Rishell, Ben Lewis and J. P. Wild.

The second feature production commenced during the week is "Old Hartwell's Cub." Thomas N. Heffron, who directed Desmond in "The Sudden Gentleman" and "The Sea Panther," is handling the megaphone. Desmond has the title role. Mary Warren has the leading feminine part.

Director Harry Edwards has started on the third new picture of the week, a two-reel comedy which is yet untitled. Other Triangle directors are working on their respective productions, and two directors are awaiting stories.

Cliff Smith is putting the finishing touches to the Triangle western, "Wolves of the Border," Roy Stewart's latest vehicle. This story was formerly titled "A Man Worth While." Josie Sedgwick has the leading feminine role.

Director Frank Borzage is finishing exteriors on "The Loyalty of Taro San," a picture in which the mysticism of old Japan is vividly set forth. This is a screen adaptation of the story by the same name by E. Magnus Ingleton, author of "Her American Husband." Preparations are being made for the exteriors, the Japanese angle of which will probably be done at the Triangle Ranch studio.

During the week just past three feature pictures have been sent to the film editors. "Mlle. Paulette," a comedy drama, was directed by Raymond Wells. Wallace MacDonald and Claire Anderson have the featured roles. Gloria Swanson and J. Barney Sherry have the leading parts in "Her Decision," completed under the direction of Jack Conway. A John A. Moroso story, "The Lonely Woman," is the third picture finished during the week.

Spoor Reports Success for "Ruggles"

THE George K. Spoor feature, "Ruggles of Red Gap," featuring Taylor Holmes, has been having an unprecedented run, according to the reports of the George Kleine exchanges. It has been shown now in the first run houses in practically all the large cities of the country, and bookings are said to be pouring in.

This picture, taken from the story by Harry Leon Wilson, has come in for an unusual share of commendation by the exhibitors showing it. Scores have written telling of their satisfaction in the picture and of the big business done. One letter which is typical was written to Mr. Holmes by S. L. Rothapfel, who ran it for a week in the Rialto theatre, New York. Mr. Holmes appeared at the theatre in person during the entire week's showing. Mr. Rothapfel writes:

"I have just finished showing 'Ruggles of Red Gap' at the Rialto theatre and, to say the least, it was a perfect delight. Not alone is it one of the most amusing but, in my opinion, it strikes a new note in the production of motion pictures. To me it proves without question that the most subtle humor can be portrayed upon the screen if done intelligently and with artistry of which 'Ruggles of Red Gap' is a perfect example.

"Not alone did my business jump up in leaps and bounds from the first showing but I have received hundreds of commendatory letters and any number of personal compliments on its showing. Clean, wholesome and in good taste, this picture so ably presented by yourself will do more to uplift and bring the motion picture into good repute than any film I have seen in the

Beach Supervised Making "Heart of the Sunset"

To select location and to collaborate on the scenario for "Heart of the Sunset," which Goldwyn is distributing, Rex Beach went back to the Southwest, where he gained the inspiration for writing the novel four years ago. In a little ranch house near San Antonio the author and Frank Powell, who directed the production, wrote the scenario. There, too, Beach wrote the titles, assisted the director in picking extras and in preparing for many of the scenes, and even secured some U. S. cavalrymen for some riding stunts. Then, after he had already chosen a star for the picture, he happened into a motion picture theatre and saw Anna Q. Nilsson in "Infidelity," and then and there decided to feature her in "Heart of the Sunset."

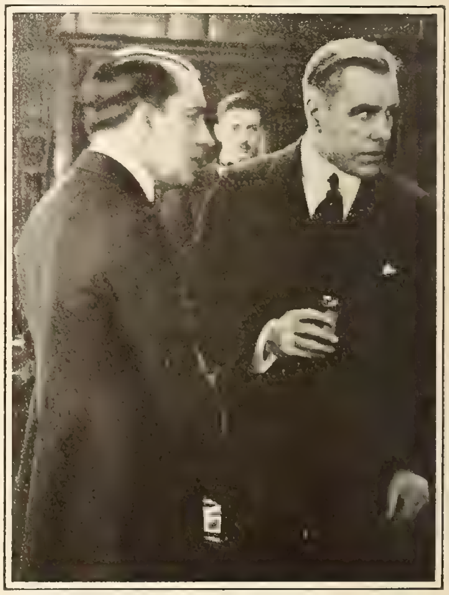
New Release Arrangement for Christie Films

C. H. Christie, business manager of the Christie Film Company, is said to have completed arrangements during the past week with one of the largest distributing firms of the East for the release of Christie Comedies in New York and New Jersey. The agreement is said to be binding for a period of two years. Only the new Christie Comedies, yet to be issued, will be handled under the terms of the contract.

The Christie Company has made many improvements in its plant lately and rumors still persist that the company is preparing to develop production along more extensive lines.

Paralta Builds Gardens

In accordance with the plans of the Paralta Productions, Inc., for a "studio beautiful" at their Melrose Avenue film plant in Hollywood, California, five gardens, each representing a different type of the landscape artist's art, are being constructed.



Harry Morey, Vitagraph Sterling Actor, Is Featured In "A Bachelor's Children"

Mutt and Jeff Begin Big Drive

The three releases which have been made by William Fox of Bud Fisher's Mutt and Jeff animated cartoons have been so enthusiastically received, according to the Fox management, that the sales organization has been concentrating on a one-week drive during which these productions have had the principal selling attention. The results are reported to have been highly satisfactory.

There has never previously been any attempt made to put over subjects as short as the Mutt and Jeff animated cartoons on so pretentious a scale as that adopted by the Fox organization. The aim has been, according to Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of the company, to book practically every theatre in the country.

The three subjects thus far released have been "The Decoy," "Back to the Balkans" and "The Freight Investigation." For April 14 "The Leak" was scheduled and the other animated cartoons to follow during the month are "On Ice," a skating picture, and "Helping McAdoo."

Former Stage Players in World Picture

Two well-known members of the stage profession are included in the cast of "The Judge," a forthcoming World picture starring June Elvidge. They are Albert Hart and Dore Davidson. Hart, a former comic opera basso and comedian, commenced his career with Augustin Daly and has been seen in scores of the greatest comic opera and musical comedy successes. He has been playing character parts in World Pictures for some time, appearing as a German general in "The Cross Bearer." Mr. Davidson not only has appeared in a number of Broadway plays, but is the author of numerous successful plays and sketches.

Marguerite Clark Seen in Dramatic Role

As Betty Wynne in "Rich Man, Poor Man," the stellar role in the Paramount picture which is released on April 22, Marguerite Clark portrays one of the most dramatic characters in which she has been seen for some time. The play carries a message of cheer, but before attaining ultimate happiness Betty Wynne passes through some trying situations

J. Searle Dawley directed the production, which was adapted principally from the stage version by George Broadhurst, though many details of the novel by Maximilian Foster which were not shown on the stage are presented in the picture.

Keenan in "The Bells"

"The Bells," made famous by Sir Henry Irving, the celebrated English actor, has been produced for the screen by Frank Keenan and will be released by the Pathe Exchange, Inc., as a Pathe Play on the selective feature booking service. The part of Mathias is said to afford Mr. Keenan a great opportunity.

COMING PROGRAM OFFERINGS

Goldwyn Boosts War Pictures

Points to Success of Previous Releases as Precedents for "Joan of Plattsburg"—Says Public Likes War Element

GOLDWYN officials are awaiting with confidence the release on May 5 of "Joan of Plattsburg." The Porter Emerson Browne play, in which Mabel Normand is starred, is claimed to be unique in many respects. While it is distinctly patriotic in tone, yet it is in no sense a war drama. It has a background of martial manœuvres and all the day's reminders of America's part in the great conflict, possessing timeliness—that element so desired by exhibitors and public.

Wiseacres who at the time of America's entry into the war predicted dismal failure for motion picture productions which touched on the conflict abroad have been thoroughly disillusioned. A number of so-called war pictures have been frowned upon by film devotees, but mediocrity in either story or production was alone responsible. In the main well-produced pictures from worth-while stories dealing with incidents, real or imaginative, of the French battleground have "gone over."

Especially is this true, Goldwyn contends, of "Fields of Honor," "The Spreading Dawn" and "The Splendid Sinner," three Goldwyn productions which contain an element of war, and "For the Freedom of the World," the stirring war spectacle, distributed by Goldwyn. All four are claimed to be tremendous box-office winners and to have evoked unstinted praise of the press and public wherever played.

Goldwyn Is Preparing to Release "Joan of Plattsburg," In Which Mabel Normand Stars

Pleased with the response of exhibitors and their patrons to the appeal of "The Spreading Dawn," Goldwyn lost no time in producing another of its kind, and "Fields of Honor," starring Mae Marsh, came into being and is said to have exceeded all of Goldwyn's expectations.

According to a Goldwyn statement, "For the Freedom of the World" has enjoyed a tremendous popularity, and the same is said to be true of "The Splendid Sinner." Many critics, continues the statement, pronounce "The Splendid Sinner" an even greater production than "Thais," Mary Garden's first picture, because of its timeliness and the realism of some of its war scenes.

An Ella Hall Bluebird Heads "U" Program

"A MOTHER'S SECRET," a Bluebird picture featuring Ella Hall, heads the list of Universal releases obtainable at Universal exchanges for the week of April 29. The Hall feature is a five-reeler and tells the story of a society woman of social ambitions who apparently deserted her beautiful daughter but secretly loved the child.

Next in importance to the feature release is the third episode of the Boy Scout ten-reel serial, "Boy Scouts to the Rescue." The third episode is subtitled "The Great Mine Disaster."

Owing to the method of promotion, this Boy Scout serial looms large as a money-maker for the exhibitor. It is being actively promoted by Scout Masters all over the United States and Canada and to such an extent that schools and auditoriums are seeking to book the picture to the exclusion of theatres.

In the serial offerings "The Bull's Eye," featuring Eddie Polo, reaches the thirteenth episode, "Sold at Auction" being the title. "The Secret Document" is the fifth chapter of "The Lion's Claws," the new serial in which Marie Walcamp is starred.

Three comedies are included in the week's program. The L-Ko is "Fathers, Sons and Chorus Girls," a two-reeler. Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran will be seen in another one-reel Lyons-Moran Star Comedy titled "Mum's the Word," and the one-reeler Nestor, featuring Gale Henry and William Franey, in "It's a Cruel World."

In addition to the above are the regular Animated Weekly, Current Events and Screen Magazine.

A "Tank" in Action

"Our Fighting Ally—the Tank," a one-reel picture which will be released by Pathe May 5, shows in action at close range what has been termed the Allies' greatest help.

Ella Hall Is Featured In the Bluebird Production, "A Mother's Secret"

Carmel Myers Seeks French Atmosphere

Carmel Myers, last seen in "The Wine Girl," is spending her spare hours in the Franco-American quarter of Los Angeles picking up atmosphere with which to endow her stellar role in "My Parisian Sweetheart." This is Miss Myers' newest drama, which is being directed by Joseph De Grasse. Edwin August is seen in support, while Andre Robson, the French actor, has the principal character role.

Morey and Deshon on Vitagraph Program

The Vitagraph program of releases for the week beginning April 22nd, is announced by Albert E. Smith, president of the company, as follows:

Blue Ribbon feature, five parts, "A Bachelor's Children," featuring Harry Morey with Florence Deshon. Directed by Paul Scardon.

Serial, two parts, "The Speeding Doom," third episode of "The Woman in the Web," featuring Hedda Nova and J. Frank Glendon. Directed by David Smith.

Big V Comedy, one part, "Whistles and Windows," featuring Lawrence Semon. Written and directed by Lawrence Semon.

Vitagraph Comedy, one part, "Beautiful Thoughts," featuring Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew.

Edward Earle and Agnes Ayres in O. Henry's

Agnes Ayres and Edward Earle are the featured players in this week's O. Henry story, "The Rubaiyat of a Scotch Highball," released by General Film Company. This is Earle's first appearance in an O. Henry story, although Miss Ayres has been starred in a number of these Broadway Star Features. The next release will be "The Buyer from Cactus City," with William Dunn and Miriam Miles in the leading roles.

Glances at the Program

Dick Rosson has his first comedy role in "Mr. Miller's Economies," a two-reel Keystone, scheduled for release this month. Rosson is one of the Triangle feature players who have temporarily deserted the dramatic end.

Harry Morey, with Florence Deshon appearing opposite, heads the Vitagraph program for the week of April 22 in "A Bachelor's Children." Alice Terry, Denton Vane, William Shea and Jessie Stevens are in the cast.

"Tyrant Fear," Dorothy Dalton's new Ince-Paramount production, following "Love Me," is set for release April 29. In some of the scenes Miss Dalton wears a polar bear costume of jacket and cap.

Baby Marie Osborne, the child star, is said to be bewitching in her latest Pathe photoplay, "Dolly Does Her Bit," a Red Cross story, set for release April 21. Patriotism runs high in this.

Douglas Fairbanks bounced back onto the screen April 15 in "Mr. Fix-It," his newest Artcraft picture. Allan Dwan wrote the story from a suggestion by Ernest Butterworth.

"By Orange Aid," the picture on which the Christie Company spent several days in the San Bernardino orange belt, is the current Christie release. The Palace theatre secured it for Los Angeles.

William Fox makes the statement that no production in months which has dealt with the war has shown more clearly the spirit of America than "True Blue," a forthcoming William Farnum Standard picture.

Metro will flash the well-known Dolly Sisters across the screens of the country in "The Million Dollar Dollies," a Screen Classics romantic fantasy. Leonce Perret directed.

Within a few weeks the Universal program will present "Dodgers and Dodgers," a one-reel comedy, with Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran. There are no subtitles in this picture.

"Mountain Law," with Ned Finley and Marion Henry, is released this week by General Film. It is the second of the Blue Ridge dramas and "The Raiders of Sunset Gap" is set for the third.

A new production for the World Pictures program is "The Beloved Blackmailer," directed by Dell Henderson. In the cast are Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley.

Edith Storey's skill with firearms was said to have been the means of giving a touch of realism to a scene in "Treasure of the Sea," a Metro production starring Miss Storey, which will be released shortly.

A new serial looms big just beyond the picture horizon. Universal will release "The Brass Bullet," in eighteen episodes, with Jack Mulhall and Juanita Hansen as co-stars.

George Walsh pictures for William Fox are said to be a big hit in Rio de Janeiro. A South American newspaper recently published a very interesting cartoon on Walsh, considered valuable publicity.

Ebony Comedy Company has supplied General Film with a new comedy called "Spying the Spy," following which "The Porters" will arrive.

In the 115th release of the Paramount-Bray Pictograph, under the title of "Microscopic Revelations," Dr. Spaeth has made it possible to show the circulation of the blood. Hawaii is also on this reel.

How boxing aids the bayonet fighter is one of the features of Universal Current Events No. 48. Benny Leonard is the center of interest in this connection. Other scenes are also included.

Pathe's comedy release, "Fare, Please," created many laughs on the screens of New York and vicinity. This Toto picture appeared at the Rivoli and also at the Wm. Fox and Marcus Loew theatres.

"Rich Man, Poor Man," Paramount production, starring Marguerite Clark, is scheduled for release April 22. It was directed by J. Searle Dawley, who is said to have given it many surprising twists.

Universal Current Events No. 48 claims one of the most remarkable motion pictures ever made of Theodore Roosevelt in action. It is the first "shot" of the Colonel since his recent operation.

Constance Talmadge In One of the Tense Moments of "The Shuttle," Select Picture

General Plans "Triumph of Venus" Campaign

Arrangements for the distribution of "The Triumph of Venus," the Edwin Bower Hesser mythological spectacle dealing with the domestic complications of the Greek gods on Mt. Olympus, and their mundane excursions in quest of adventure, are being made by General Film Company. Preparatory to this the picture is being assembled into form to give the best effect to the various situations in the story and to emphasize the sylvan scenes and swimming stunts. The result of this will be that the spectacle will be available for use readily as a program length special feature.

There are four points of appeal taken into consideration in preparing "The Triumph of Venus" for exhibition. One is the novelty of applying human dramatic situations to the deities of ancient Greece; another is the featuring of Betty Lee, concert singer of note and southern belle, as the Goddess of Love; still another is the beauty of the natural scenery and photography, and finally the sensational swimming stunts by a score of graceful young women.

Underworld and Society Dramas on Triangle Card

"The Hand at the Window," an adaptation of John A. Moroso's Collier's Weekly story, "In the Spring," heads the Triangle April 21 program. It is the romance of a New York police inspector and a girl secret service agent whom he believes to be a reformed crook. Joe King and Margery are the featured players.

The second release for the week is "Society for Sale," which was scenarioized by Charles J. Wilson from the story by Ruby M. Ayres. It is the story of a fashion shop manikin who hires a bankrupt Englishman to open up society's gates. Gloria Swanson is featured in her first dramatic role and William Desmond is co-starred with her.

In the Independent Field

Carlyle Blackwell and June Elvidge Are Prominent in William A. Brady's "Stolen Orders."

"Eagle's Eye" Booked Solid in Cleveland

Bookings are coming in fast on the "Eagle's Eye," reports George W. Erdman, manager of the Foursquare office, through which the detective serial is being released. The Reel theatre, Cleveland, will show its first run in the city, beginning March 24th. Mr. Zoffer, the new owner of the Reel, will also run it two days every week at each of his other houses, the Alvin and the Corona, all situated in the central part of the business section. Other local houses that have booked the serial up to the present time are the U. S. theatre on Woodland ave., the Glenside, also on Woodland ave., the Majestic on West 25th street, and the Fulton, Lorain ave. The Dreamland has the "Eagle's Eye" booked first-run in Akron, Ohio, and the American in Alliance, all of them to begin the early part of April.

Girls Form Hayakawa Club

Twenty young girls, of London, England, have formed a Sessue Hayakawa Club, reports Haworth Pictures Corporation.

U. S. Exhibitors Get "Men"

Bacon-Backer's First Production Acquired by Frank G. Hall—Foursquare Pictures to Distribute "Men" Through Its Exchanges

CONTRACTS have been closed with the Bacon-Backer Film Corporation, Frank G. Hall, president of the U. S. Exhibitors Booking Corporation, party of the second part, whereby Bacon-Backer's first independent production, "Men," is acquired by Mr. Hall. "Men" was completed recently at Bacon-Backer's new studio on Thirty-eighth street, under the direction of Perry Vekroff. The picture will be distributed by Foursquare Pictures according to an agreement entered into between the two distributing organizations.

"I looked at forty-three pictures before selecting this particular one. 'Men' I consider one of the truly fine productions of the present season—or, for that matter, of any season.

"In 'Men' I feel that I have a photoplay having the quality necessary to be placed alongside 'The Zeppelin's Last Raid,' 'Those Who Pay,' 'The Belgian' and 'Just a Woman.'

"Everyone knows Edward Sheldon, the celebrated playwright, who wrote the play, 'Men,' upon which the photoplay is based."

George Backer, of the Bacon-Backer Corporation, said: "I am naturally pleased that Mr. Hall should have been sufficiently impressed with 'Men' to want to buy it." Gerald F. Bacon said: "Mr. Backer and I tried our best to make a good picture, and it would appear that we have done so."

"Men" is to be distributed by Foursquare Pictures. In the United States it will be booked through the various independently owned Foursquare exchanges and in Canada, through Superfeatures, Ltd., with which Foursquare Pictures has an arrangement virtually providing the same efficiency of service as obtained in its directly controlled United States exchanges.

"Foursquare is gratified at having the rights to distribute this new six-reel feature," said P. V. R. Key, of that company. "For it further strengthens the line of merchandise we have—and establishes still more firmly our determination to handle nothing which exhibitors will not recognize instantly as a picture of the first water.

The theme of "Men" is fundamentally big, and it is a typical Edward Sheldon creation. In this instance he has selected environment and adoption as two elements possible to be interwoven, and together to form a theme of intense value and interest.

Heredity, too, has a place in the scheme of things in this picture. Mr. Sheldon begins by taking two sisters, one several years older than the other, and by placing them in totally different environments permits them to work out their respective salvations.

In the cast are Anna Lehr, Charlotte Walker and Robert Cain appearing in three of the leading roles; with Perry Vekroff directing the photoplay and Alfred Moses serving as chief photographer. The settings were prepared under the supervision of George Backer.

Comedy Scripts Hard to Find, Says Steiner

WILLIAM STEINER, founder of Jester Comedies, complains that he has difficulty in securing the proper scripts for his comedy star, Twede-Dan. In discussing the situation, Mr. Steiner said:

"I'll wager that over five hundred scripts have been submitted in the last three months, and out of the whole lot, we found only twelve that were available. Somehow the writers do not seem to grasp the idea of material that we are after. The majority think that the throwing of a pie and a general rough-house constitutes comedy. I feel that those days have gone by, and that the public have had their fill of that class of film.

"I have made it plain what kind of scenarios I am after, and if the budding authors can catch the idea—why, I am in the market for all they can turn out, and I will say this for the benefit of the writers, that every script submitted is given every consideration. The decision is not left to one man as is usually the case. I have installed a regular system for the handling of scenarios, and have set aside two afternoons a week for readings, which is done by a committee of five, one acting as the reader. If, in their judgment, a script is acceptable, the story is immediately purchased.

"It seems strange that it is so hard to get the proper material one needs, when there are so many in the field of writers. What I am after are stories that possess 75 per cent comedy, divided between the semi-slapstick and fast action, and 25 per cent drama and farce drama, and above all, it must contain a story that means something. Authors can save their time, and mine, by refraining from submitting scripts that are only a jumble of events thrown together that mean nothing," concluded Mr. Steiner.

Contrasting Moments in "Conquered Hearts," a New Ivan Production, Show the Versatile Nature of the Story. Marguerite Marsh Is Featured

New Capital Film to Produce in Indiana

THE CAPITAL FILM COMPANY, newly organized under the laws of Indiana, incorporated in the Hoosier state and financed by Hoosier capital to the sum of $2,500,000, is establishing its branch offices in twenty-five leading cities in the United States, and, in addition, it will have more than thirty sub-offices in this country, writes an official of the company. Offices also are established in Canada.

The product of three studios in the East will be distributed by the company. The main studio and laboratories will be situated in Indianapolis. A site for the buildings will be selected by April 15.

Ike Schlank, president and general manager, a prominent factor in filmdom, is deferring final selection until real estate agents have reduced their various propositions to writing.

It is possible that the company will select the site situated on the White River.

"This new company," says Mr. Schlank, "has nothing to sell except pictures. Its stock has been bought and paid for and is owned by Indiana bankers and other investors. These gentlemen believe, as I believe, that Indianapolis, situated in the center of the country's population, within easy reach of exhibitors in all directions, with unexcelled railroad facilities, is an ideal place for the making of pictures. Moreover, since Indiana capital financed the company, the capital city of Indiana is entitled to the industry which Hoosier money has brought into being.

"There is no good reason why pictures cannot be made as well in Indiana as in New Jersey. There are, on the other hand, many reasons why they can be made here to excellent advantage. Production will be begun by the middle of May."

Executive offices are located in the Merchants' Bank Building, Indianapolis, and to these offices all applications for positions should be forwarded, and, in addition, all scenarios. Scenario writers are cautioned to bear in mind the fact that the company's output will be confined to one, two and three-reel subjects.

Cropper to Manage Sterling's Chicago Office

R. C. CROPPER has arranged with Arthur F. Beck, president of the Sterling Pictures Corporation, to have charge of the first branch office opened by Mr. Beck, in Chicago. These offices are at 220 South State street, and under the Sterling System, Mr. Cropper is to release immediately "The Hypocrites," by Sir Henry Arthur Jones, and directed by George Loane Tucker, and the France Films production, "The Natural Law."

Through manager of sales, Herbert R. Ebenstein, Mr. Beck has authorized the handling of the entire Western division of territory for Sterling Pictures Corporation by Mr. Cropper.

Mr. Ebenstein will remain with Mr. Cropper for about ten days in order to fully outline matters of policy of the Sterling System, which hereafter will be left under the supervision of the Chicago office.

From Chicago, Mr. Ebenstein will continue on to the Coast. It is his intention to install an office in San Francisco before commencing his return to New York City by way of the Southern exchange centers. For the present year no further offices will be opened.

Louis Mayer Buys Rights to Stage Hits

Louis B. Mayer, who has been identified with the picture industry and theatricals for years and who now is one of the most prominent factors in the independent field included in the New England territory, announces that he has purchased recently the rights to Oliver Morosco's successful stage production, "Peg o' My Heart," in which Lorette Taylor made her biggest hit. Mr. Mayer has purchased the right to adapt and reproduce for screen presentation this play. It is said that the highest price ever paid for the rights to a stage play for this purpose, passed from Mr. Mayer to Mr. Morosco.

The rights of two other plays, "The Brat," in which Maud Fulton originated the role when it was seen on the stage, and "Up Stairs and Down," the light comedy hit of the past season, have been secured also by Mr. Mayer from Mr. Morosco. The above plays are the first three of ten which Mr. Mayer intends reproducing for presentation on the screen.

Magnet Busy in New York Territory

Magnet Film Exchange report big business on their Hart features, "The Two-Gun Man," "The Bargain" and "The Bandit and the Preacher," which have been released in its territory.

A series of twenty-eight Mack Sennett Keystone Comedies are also being booked heavily throughout Greater New York.

Magnet Film is launching a campaign throughout northern New Jersey, and the outlook for satisfactory business on their product in this territory is very encouraging.

They are now also taking bookings on the first Bessie Barriscale feature, "Satan's Pawn," and predict this will be a popular feature subject with the exhibitors throughout the summer months.

Ed Warren Engaged on Third Independent Feature

Edward Warren, president of the Edward Warren Productions, is engaged in the production of his third independent feature. The title of the picture has not been announced. House Peters and Anna Lehr are co-starred and have in support, Wilfred Lytell, Corene Uzzell, Henry Sedley, Ned Burton and Ben Lewin. The screen version is from a play by H. S. Sheldon. Winifred Dunn made the adaptation. Mrs. Lillian A. Warren is art director. Edward Earle is the cameraman. Mr. Warren is directing.

"Moral Suicide" Produced by Graphic Film

Owing to a typographical error, it was announced in last week's issue of the NEWS that "Moral Suicide" was an Ivan Productions, Inc., production. "Moral Suicide" was produced by the Graphic Film Corporation under the direction of Ivan Abramson.

"His Daughter Pays," Filmed in Kalem Studio

The Kalem studio, which is one of the most modern and best equipped studios in the East, was sued by the Piedmont Pictures Corporation in the taking of the interior scenes for its late independent production, "His Daughter Pays."

No announcement has been made as to the method of release for this feature, but it is said that offers by state rights buyers are being considered, for the purchase, outright, of the negative. Announcement as to the releasing plans will be made shortly.

"His Daughter Pays" is a picture version of the stage play, "La Bacarrat" by Frederick H. James, which had successful engagements on the European stage. Gertrude McCoy has the leading role. Pauline Curley, Charles Graham, Henry Sedley and Barry Whitcomb are in support. The action is laid in Paris. The time, shortly before the outbreak of the World War, and deals with the efforts of a government secret agent to obtain plans of a new invention.

Northwest Territory Sold for "Zongar"

On Saturday, April 6th, a representative of the Physical Culture Photo Play Company, producers of "Zongar, the Dare-Devil of Romance," disposed of a large slice of territory in the northwest to the Elliott & Sherman Film Corporation, Minneapolis, Minn. This distributing corporation, one of the largest in that territory, handles pictures in Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota, Wisconsin and North and South Dakota. Many of the most pretentious films have been marketed through their string of exchanges. Bernarr McFadden's "Zongar" was selected because of its many thrilling feats performed by George Larkin, probably the most fearless of all screen actors.

THE INDEPENDENT FIELD TICKER

Territorial Sales Reported During the Past Week

Production	Buyer	Territory
"Klever Komedies" (Series), (Klever Pictures, Inc.)	African Film Trust, Ltd., South Africa	South Africa.
"Zongar, the Dare-Devil of Romance" (Physical Culture Photo Play Co.)	Elliott and Elliott Film Corporation, Minneapolis	Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota.
"Babbling Tongues," "One Law for Both," "Sins of Ambition," "Married in Name Only," "Life or Honor," "Human Clay," "Faded Flower," "City of Illusion" (Ivan Film Productions)	Sterling Film Exchange, Detroit	State of Michigan.
"Married in Name Only," "Sins of Ambition," "Human Clay," "Life or Honor" (Ivan Film Productions)	Piedmont Pictures Corp. (Agent for Firm of Foreign Distributors)	Porto Rico, San Domingo, Hayti, St. Thomas.
Katzenjammer Kids and Happy Hooligan Cartoons (Education Film Corporation of America)	Federal Feature Film Co., Boston	New England Territory.

Colonial Re-Opens with "Eagle's Eye," Featured

"The Eagle's Eye," has been chosen by Manager Horwitz, of the Colonial, in Toledo, Ohio, as the picture feature for the re-opening of the theatre. The serial will run a week at the Colonial on each episode.

Between the Husky, Yet Lovely, Maidens and the Point of the Other Fellow's Sword, Billy West Has a Busy Time in His Newest King Bee Comedy

"Ike and Mike's" First Comedy Ready

The first issue of the Rube Goldberg animated cartoons has been finished, cut and assembled. It is titled "The Artist's Model," and features the famous Goldberg twins, "Mike and Ike, They Look Alike." Harry Grossman, who will release the cartoons, announces that one reel a week will be available for exhibitors. In "The Artist's Model" "Mike" is hired by a sculptor to pose for the modeling of a statue. While posing in the nude a troublesome hornet appears and livens things up.

The cartoons will speak for themselves and will prove sure-fire laugh-getters. Mr. Grossman says that negotiations are now progressing rapidly as to the manner in which these cartoons will be released and that many orders for bookings have already been made.

New Company Operating in Michigan Territory

A new company has entered the independent distributing field — Victor Film Company, with office at 602 Mack Building, Detroit. Samuel Ludwig is manager. The Victor Company is operating in the territory of Michigan and is at present exploiting the Hart re-issues sold by the W. H. Productions, "The Bandit and the Preacher," "The Two-Gun Man" in "The Bargain" and "The Hell Hound of Alaska." Victor has also Selig's "Beware of Strangers" for this territory.

Flynn Serial Rouses Country

Exhibitors from All Parts Send Highest Praise—Los Angeles Paper Publishes Account

CHIEF FLYNN was quoted recently by California papers regarding a plot on the part of the Imperial German spies to buy all the munition factories in the United States and cancel orders with the Allies.

"How a gigantic plan to purchase certain munition plants in the United States was hatched by Germany," reads the account of the interview in the Los Angeles Morning Tribune, "and put into execution by von Bernstorff when he was the ambassador to the United States, but which was kept from materializing through the vigilance of the United States Secret Service, was quietly told last night at the Hotel Alexandria by William J. Flynn, former chief of the United States Secret Service."

Walter Jacobson, manager of Jake's theatre, which recently opened in Flint, Michigan, for a program of vaudeville and motion pictures, gives high praise to "The Eagle's Eye," the serial story by William J. Flynn, recently retired Chief of the United States Secret Service, which he chose for his opening program:

"'The Eagle's Eye" was selected because I believed in its drawing power and because I wanted a good strong picture which would create talk and help bring business to me," said Mr. Jacobson in a letter to The Whartons, producers of the serial. "I am highly pleased with the satisfaction the film has given during the showing of the first three episodes and I can only add the praises of numerous patrons who have commented to me about it. My own word is that it is one of the classiest serials I ever played in any theatre with which I have been connected."

William O'Hare, manager of Majestic theatre in Des Moines, Ia., took an original way of advertising "The Eagle's Eye."

He had a huge submarine fashioned over a motor truck. The model was 52 feet long and 15 feet wide. He procured a real torpedo and two sailors from the Des Moines Naval Recruiting Station and for three days prior to the showing of the first episode of "The Eagle's Eye" the submarine was driven about the business section of the city. The sailors explained the workings of the submarine, solicited enlistments and boosted the first episode, "The Hidden Death," which tells the facts of the Imperial German Government's complicity in the sinking of the Lusitania.

The rooms of the German Club, in New York, which were raided last week by agents of the Department of Justice, are shown in many of the episodes of this serial. In investigating the plots of the authorized representatives of the Kaiser, many trips to the German Club by operatives of the United States Secret Service were necessary, and detecto cameras were employed for the purpose of getting pictures of the interiors. The pictures were put at the disposal of The Whartons for use in reproducing the necessary scenes in the club to show the course taken by the Secret Service in frustrating the Teuton plots. The club is used continually throughout the picture under the name of the Hohenzollern Club.

Tourneur to Produce "Sporting Life"

MAURICE TOURNEUR who is responsible for Paramount-Artcraft screen version of Maurice Maeterlinck's, "The Blue Bird," has organized recently the Maurice Tourneur Productions Company. His first independent work will be the direction of the famous Drury Lane melodramatic success, "Sporting Life," a companion piece to "The Whip," which Mr. Tourneur produced for the Paragon Films, Inc.

Encouraged by the reception this picture has had in this country and throughout the world, he has decided that the demand for red-blooded, thrilling stories on the screen is one that must be heeded and after careful study and consideration of many melodramas, he decided that "Sporting Life" would make the most satisfying companion play to "The Whip." The success that "Sporting Life" had in London was equalled by the hearty reception it received in New York and in the major cities of this country where it was shown after the New York engagement.

It is more than likely that Mr. Tourneur will introduce in the cinema version of "Sporting Life" many thrills that were merely hinted at in the stage play. With his genius, imagination and experience in producing film masterpieces, lovers of the screen have a right to a very pleasant anticipation in the production which will be released in the open market in the very near future. The work of engaging the cast is going on rapidly and Mr. Tourneur expects to be taking scenes during the current week. The policy that Mr. Tourneur has followed very successfully in his casting "The Whip" and "The Blue Bird," namely, that of not depending upon stars, is to be followed in the casting of "Sporting Life."

"Sporting Life" is the joint work of Cecil Raleigh and Seymour Hicks. Cecil Raleigh is also responsible for the stage version of "The Whip."

Erdman Closes Important Deal with Hoffman

George W. Erdman announces that he has purchased the Cleveland office of the Hoffman-Foursquare Company. This includes all of northern Ohio, from Pennsylvania to the Indiana border, and as far south as Columbus, including Columbus. This deal was consummated last week when M. H. Hoffman was in Cleveland.

Here's "Mickey," Yes, Mabel Normand, Illustrating That Famous Quotation, "Water, Water, Everywhere and Not a Drop to Drink."

Public Read Trade Papers?

That the motion picture trade-papers are read by others than those engaged directly in the production and exhibition of photoplays is shown by the interest which the pretty girls throughout the United States are manifesting in the Gaumont Company's nation-wide beauty contest. Many of these girl readers have written the Flushing offices asking if they may submit their photographs to the company direct.

The beauty contest is being conducted by one newspaper in each state, and all girls who possess exceptional beauty which will screen to advantage should submit their photographs to the beauty contest editor of the local paper which runs the contest. A committee of judges appointed by the paper will select the most beautiful girls of each state, and test films of these girls will be made by the Gaumont Company in order to select those with sufficient screen personality to be featured in the big feature photo-dramas this company will produce for the independent market.

Baker in "Just a Woman"

Lee Baker, leading man for Mrs. Fiske in some of her biggest stage successes, has a prominent part in Julius Steger's production, "Just a Woman," featuring Charlotte Walker. The U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation have purchased the rights to this picture.

Look Out! You'll Drop That Furniture and Make Billy West Break a Perfectly Good Cane, and Maybe a Few Other Things. This Happens in a King-Bee Picture

Kroulik, Camel Film, to Produce in Chicago

F. J. Kroulik, director general of the Camel Film Company of Chicago, Illinois, has left New York for his home city, to start work on their Mode 'Art Comedies, the first subject to be released in May. Mr. Kroulik, who will supervise all productions, has taken with him four well-known players, versed in high class comedy work, also a number of stories that he purchased while in New York. All the Mode 'Art Comedies will be made in Chicago.

Mr. Kroulik said that his comedies would be released at the rate of two a month, in one and two reels. The length would be based on the qualities of the stories. They are to be high class in every respect, and no attempt will be made to incorporate any slapstick or rough work, he said. These comedies will be in a light vein with plenty of action, treated in a way that will appeal to both the young and old. Arrangements have been made for the distribution, the first release on May 15.

"Klever Comedies" Sold for South Africa

Klever Pictures, Inc., producers of "Klever Komedies," announces that it has disposed of the South African rights to this series of comedies, to the African Film Trust, Ltd. By the terms of the contract, this company will hold the right to "Klever Komedies" for this territory, for a number of years.

Reports received from the Scandinavian countries indicate that "Klever Komedies" are meeting with success in these countries.

Side-Lights on Miss Normand's Career

AN official of the Western Import Company turns the spotlight on Mabel Normand's characteristics: He said:

"Mabel Normand as herself is one of the most interesting characters on the screen. Altogether apart from the big feature play, 'Mickey,' she has already made herself famous. When you first meet her, if you are a human of the male sex, you are rather carried away by her petite and striking beauty. If you have known her a while you forget all about her beauty, you think only of her intellect. Miss Normand has a most keen and penetrating brain. She thinks in flashes. Book reviewers and proofreaders sometimes acquire the habit of reading words in blocks—Miss Normand seems to grab ideas that way—in flashes. She is always eager to acquire knowledge. One day they were producing a scene for 'Mickey' near a National Guard Artillery Barracks. Mabel went into the battery room to get a drink of water. For the next hour the old regular army sergeant in charge of the guns had the most exciting time of his life. He had to get down on the battery floor, with a piece of chalk, and explain the mysteries of indirect fire; how they sight guns without seeing the enemy by trigonometry. In another kind of girl, this would become affectation—she would be absolutely insufferable.

"Miss Normand is Celtic to her finger tips. One day she is in the seventh heaven—the next day, like most of her blood, she is———. Impulsive, tender-hearted, generous and high-spirited—it is either a handshake or (figuratively speaking) a punch in the eye.

"Her versatility has been remarkably vizualized in the production of 'Mickey.' Prominent exhibitors from various sections of the country are unanimous in their statement that the public today want photoplays that portray life, that they want entertainment above everything else, that there must be something in a story that has a thrill in it, and that the action must move swiftly—and above all, that people want to be amused this year. 'Mickey' has all of the elements that will appeal, interest, entertain and satisfy."

Frank Hall Speaks of "Construction"

"WE find that most of the pictures we see, fall just short of being 'extra attraction' material because of lack of perfect balance in the staging of the scenes with due regard for the importance of the different phases of the story and their proper relation to each other, and the building up of the main climax of the drama.

"It is safe to say most stories selected are strong enough, if properly handled. Our experience while viewing a new production is usually as follows: The drama starts out well and gives promise of being excellent but in most cases causes us to sit back in our chairs at frequent intervals by laying too much emphasis on situations which are incidental to the main thread of the story. In most cases this fault appears frequently enough to throw the whole photodrama off balance and seriously affect its value as a production. But it nevertheless holds the interest sufficiently to play powerfully upon the emotions.

"The reason for this fault is so well known that it is a constant source of wonder to me that directors do not overcome it; granted that they become so wrapped up in their work that each important scene they stage has an exaggerated value during its actual staging; granted that their work is stretched over a period of several weeks and that both they and their artists do not feel the same from day to day. There is still no good reason why they cannot spend the time and energy upon their scenario to work out the proper dramatic construction, setting down the approximate length of scenes and working up to their big climax to the best advantage. This done, there is no reason why they cannot force themselves to stick to their script, giving any comtemplated changes serious thought from the standpoint of the drama as a whole."

Hayakawa Gets Reports on Venture

FRANCIS J. HAWKINS, vice-president and general manager of the Haworth Pictures Corporation, which is to star Sessue Hayakawa as an independent star in his own feature productions, reported that he has received a large number of letters from exhibitors throughout the United States and Canada in which they express their pleasure at Hayakawa's venture.

"The exhibitors are unanimous in stating that the Japanese artist always has been a favorite at their houses," said Mr. Hawkins, "and assure me of their desire to co-operate in every possible way in helping to make Mr. Hayakawa's future productions successes."

Since the Japanese actor made the announcement a few weeks ago that he would have an independent film producing company of his own he has been receiving photoplay stories from playwrights in all parts of the country. During the past week no less than forty-six stories, all "written especially for Sessue Hayakawa," have reached the offices of the Haworth Pictures Corporation, it is said. He says he is always looking for new ideas for his pictures, but regrets that none of the stories thus far submitted have advanced anything along the lines of originality. The scenarios of the first three or four of the coming Hayakawa Productions will be written by himself.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Live Triangle Items

H. O. Davis, vice-president and general manager of the Triangle Film Corporation, was seen last week at the studio as a director. He and Arthur Hoyt, in charge of the employment department, have undertaken the production of a five to seven reel subject of a Raffles type of story, which is at present known as "High Stakes." It is a crook story with J. Barney Sherry in the part of a Raffles type, who eventually becomes the hero of the subject. Harvey Clark takes the role of a Scotland Yard detective. These are the only two important characters in the play. This is Mr. Davis' first work as a director.

Another new story which has been put in production is that starring William Desmond and at present known as "Old Hartwell's Cub." Thomas Heffron is the director in charge of this, and Mary Warren, who has appeared with Desmond as leading woman, takes the opposite role in this photoplay. Walt Whitman, the elderly character man of the Triangle stock company, has one of the most important parts. In this story Desmond will be seen in the make-up of the village blacksmith, which is the story of the rise of a young man from an unimportant place in the community to become the foremost citizen of the town, all of which was inspired by the love of a good woman.

The scenario department has completed a two-reel comedy which is now in the making with Billy Franey as the principal. No title has been selected.

Cliff Smith, director of the Roy Stewart Western photoplays, could not find a volunteer among his organization to do a hazardous stunt, and so he did it himself. Smith has three cracked ribs as the result and is going about in plaster of paris. The scene plot called for riding a horse off a cliff, and Smith put the stunt over while three cameras registered the action. Just as the horse left the cliff, Smith jumped from the saddle, and both he and the animal arrived at the bottom at the same time, but in different places.

Universal Newsettes

Several new plays were started last week by companies at Universal City. One is titled "The Shadow Man," from an original scenario by Elliot Clawson, and will be produced by Rupert Julian, who will have Ruth Clifford as his leading woman. Julian will have a role in this similar to that of Prentice Tiller. Another new story started is at present known as "The Three Bad Men," which will have Harry Carey as leading man and will be made under the direction of Jack Ford. Eugene B. Lewis wrote the continuity from a story by the star and director.

Harry Harvey was this week presented with a gold-mounted lion's claw by members of the serial company known as "The Lion's Claw." The present was given in appreciation of the very kindly manner in which Director Harvey has taken care of the players in the making of hazardous scenes. The claw is fully an inch and a half in length, and the mounting is very appropriately engraved.

Hal Cooley was this week the host of a number of aviation students who were in Los Angeles on their way from Texas to the aviation school at Berkeley, California. Cooley is taking the lead in "The Brass Bullet" serial, in which he appears as a daring aviator, and he was given a short course in aviation by the students while they were here.

The story featuring Priscilla Dean, originally titled "The White Cap," since being completed has been retitled "The Two-Souled Woman." This will shortly be released.

The eighteen-episode serial, "The Bull's-Eye," has been completed by Director James Horne and a company headed by Eddie Polo. One of the last scenes to be made was that in which Polo while tied on a railroad trestle jumps out of his shoes and turns a backward somersault into the water below, just in time to save himself being ground to pieces by a swiftly moving train.

The F.P.-Lasky Studio

The Famous Players-Lasky studio last week became the home of the Clara Kimball Young Select Pictures producing unit when work was begun there on the filming of the Cynthia Stockley novel "The Claw," in which Milton Sims will be Miss Young's leading man. This is a tale of South Africa, with the majority of the scenes being of an exterior nature. Most of these will be made in the foothills north of Hollywood.

The complete cast for the second C. B. De Mille's Artcraft Special, "Old Wives for New," an adaptation from the David Graham Phillips story by Jeanie MacPherson, was made known this week. This production will not have any particular star, but the cast is made up of members of the studio stock company and includes Elliot Dexter, Julia Faye, Theodore Roberts, little Edna Mae Cooper, Helen Eddy, Marcia Maynon and others. It will be about the same size as "The Whispering Chorus."

At the Ince Plant

The production department of the Thomas H. Ince studio last week selected names for a number of subjects finished and in production. The photoplay of the young Canadian who avenges the death of his father has been titled "A Son of the Snows," and the slacker story which is also completed has been named "The Hand of the Hun." This company is now working on a story at present known as "The Nine O'Clock Town," which, in addition to being directed by Victor Schertzinger, was also written by that director. It tells the story of a shrewd young fellow who, after an apprenticeship as clerk in a New York store, returns to his native village where his father owns the "emporium," and he becomes the Wanamaker of the village. Jane Novak, who played opposite Charles Ray in "The Hand of the Hun," will continue in that capacity in the new production, and Dorcus Matthews takes a part of equal importance. The subject will introduce a new type of vampire in the person of Beverly Travers, who, being a perfect thirty-six, vamps with her figure instead of her face.

R. Cecil Smith is author of two Ince photoplays now in production. One is a Southern story starring Dorothy Dalton which Roy Neill is directing. Douglas MacLean, a new leading man for pictures who has played juvenile leads in the Morosco stock company productions, and William Conklin as the heavy, are the principals in Miss Dalton's support. One of the features of this photoplay will be a colored camp meeting, and scenes for this were made at Norfolk this week when a trainload of colored men and women were taken from Los Angeles to that place and remained for several days. Miss Dalton took the role of a young married woman of a decidedly jealous disposition.

The Enid Bennett photoplay, directed by Jerry Storm and written by R. Cecil Smith, has been named "Desert Maiden." The plot pertains to a young New York maid, daughter of the former rich.

Fox Studio Doings

"Salome," the William Fox Theda Bara Super-Production (reads like an advertisement, doesn't it?) was completed last week insofar as actual filming is concerned. Director Edwards, the star and the director's aids are still at work on editing the picture, but plan to have it completed in every detail for shipment within the next five or six days, so that it will be possible for work to be started by the fifteenth on a play to be known as "Spanish Love." The supporting cast of Miss Bara, who takes the part of Salome, was made known this week. G. Raymond Nye appears as Herod; Albert Roscoe, John the Baptist; Bertram Grassby, Aristolulus; Genevieve Blinn, Herodias; Herbert Hays, Sohemus; Alfred Freeman, Gadias, and Vera Doria as Naomi. During the editing process the film has been viewed by several of the Fox studio executives, and all make the claim that it is a bigger and better dramatic subject than "Cleopatra," Director Edwards having greatly benefited his ability by his experiences in the making of the former spectacle, which show well in the coming film.

Hundreds of extras were used this week in the banquet and storm scenes, which is the climax to the one in which Miss Bara, as Salome, dances about the head of John the Baptist. These scenes were taken at night, and were the last to be filmed. Some wonderful night storm effects were secured. So great was the noise made by the cyclone machines that it caused a herd of camels used in the foreground of the exterior to stampede, and for a time a number of the players, including the star, were in danger.

In the coming production, "Spanish Love," Miss Bara will take the part of a sympathetic woman. This will be laid in the Philippines at the time the Americans occupied the island in 1898.

Lynn Reynolds has written a story suitable for Tom Mix, and the company, headed by Mix, has gone to Bear Lake Valley for the filming of exteriors. The story is spoken of as a Northwest Mounted Police tale. Kathleen Connors, who has been seen in several Fox productions, will be the leading woman for Mix in this picture play.

The only other company working at the Fox studio at the present time is that under the direction of Edward J. Le Saint who has Gladys Brockwell as star.

William Farnum is away on a Liberty Loan campaign and other companies are between pictures.

Henry Lehrman last week completed the boarding school story which has been titled "Watch Your Keyhole." This comedy is in two reels and has Winifred Westover, Billy Ritchie, Hugh Fay and Frank Schade as principals.

Vitagraph News Bits

Hedda Nova took three days to have grippe after her camping out in the Santa Cruz Islands for two weeks, the same two weeks being two of the coldest experienced during the season by native of the islands. Many of the stunts Miss Nova was called upon to perform for the camera during the company's sojourn at the islands led her into a very cold Pacific Ocean, sometimes from sixty-foot cliffs; other times out of boats, and once out of a bag. The inclement weather, and the sleeping in tents, combined with the hardest sort of work from early until late, as many scenes were photographed, and all more or less hazardous, brought on grippe, and a much needed rest, and now Miss Nova is again blooming at the head of her company, planning her aeroplane, planting her war garden, and arousing enthusiasm in the Liberty Loan during her spare moments.

William Duncan is serialing, and once more the early call is posted on his callboard. The change of time meant nothing to William Duncan—only that he was delighted that now "six o'clock made-up" really means five o'clock. Then when the end of a perfect day of photographing daring jumps and the stuff of which Duncan serials are made of, draws nigh, William Duncan placates himself by saying as he writes his story's work for the following day, "Well, it is really only eleven o'clock even if the clock does say twelve!" No day can be too long for a serial director—and for a director-star, no night too long to rest after a day of directing, acting for the camera, and attention to the troubles of a script, property and location man.

Here and There

Production work on the Diando serial, "The Wolf-Faced Man," being made for Pathe, was delayed this week because of injuries sustained by George Larkin, leading man, who was bitten by a scorpion while at the Diando's frontier house Sunday. He was rushed to a hospital and was there under treatment for several days before being thoroughly relieved from the poison of the bite. Work on the serial is progressing very satisfactorily at the Diando exterior studio especially built for the making of this serial.

Since Director Colin Campbell has been back from the East, he has produced another five-reel subject adapted from a James Whitcomb Riley poem. This play, which is known as "A Hoosier Romance," is now being given its final editing by the Selig director. Coleen Moore is the featured player of this, and the principals of the cast include Little Billy Jacobs, Harry McCoy, who will be remembered for his work in Sennett Keystone Comedies, Eugenie Besserer, Frank Hayes, Edward Jobson and others. This is the first subject filmed at the Selig plant during the present year.

The Astra Film Corporation will, within the next week, begin the production of a serial to be titled "Hands Up" for Pathe. Gilson Willets, who is writing the story for this, is now on the Coast, and Jack Cunningham is busy with the preparation of continuity. James Horne, who this week finished the filming of the eighteen-episode serial "The Bull's-Eye" for the Universal, will be the director. Business Manager Norman Manning advises the cast for this Astra serial will be made public within the next ten days.

The film, which will serve as the debut vehicle for Bert Lytell on the Metro program, "The Trail to Yesterday," has been completed by Director Edwin Carew, and is now being completely edited at the studio in Hollywood before it is sent East. Part of this film was made in the East before Lytell and company came West, but inasmuch as a portion of it is laid in California this part was filmed here. It pertains to a college man who, when he became disgraced by no fault of his own, decided to go West.

Hollywood Hookum

APRIL 27, 1918 NEWS MORE NEWS

Not a new.

Dirt is rather scarce.

Fair all week, but cloudy.

Harry Reischenbach's in town.

Pat Dowling is yoeing at San Pedro.

George Larkin has a red devil.

Thornton Edwards, Triangle actor, is now the father of a boy.

Ora Carew was seen driving a new automobile on our street this week.

Wally MacDonald is heralded as the champion prune eater of the Triangle lot.

Lee Hill stepped forth the other day with regular clothes on and his associates did not know him.

Stuart Paton, the serial director, is a graduate of medicine and chemistry of a Scottish university.

Bill Duncan did the impossible recently. He shot scenes that should have taken him a month in a week.

Mack Sennett recently won a pool of some two hundred bucks by not taking a drink for a month. And now the town is dry.

H. O. Davis—Director—how does that look? And to think he gave up the title of vice-president and general manager for that.

Since Hal Cooley has been flying in "The Brass Bullet" scenes he has a terrible time keeping the curl in his eye lashes.

Not another guess is to be made at the release date of Charley's first, First National release. Charley's now cutting it by wire.

Phil Hurn has a lot of trouble with his name. Mail comes addressed to him as Hisn, or Hern, or Hum, Hein, Ham, and almost everything but Hun.

Sam Rork is the only member of the Bill Hart staff that didn't get seasick on a recent voyage out of San Francisco Bay. Rork was not a member of the party.

Jack Conway has done something entirely new. He filmed a scene showing just how to do it in a California cafeteria. And no trays were spilled for comedy purposes.

Bill Hart has won a leather medal—all the twenty-two saloons in Truckee closed the other night so that everyone could see the Western bad man at a personal appearance.

Harold Lloyd ran about a park the other day just for exercise, and was picked up by the police as a purse snatcher. His identity was proven before he was landed behind the bars.

The editorial staff of HOOKUM apologizes. It made a grievious mistake by guessing the other week when it referred to new arrivals in the Tom Gibson family as being triplets. They were twins.

Harry Deep, the impersonator of feminine character roles, is trying to live up to the expression "as funny as a crutch," for he permitted a Ford to run over him the other day and now hobbles.

Charley Murray is at it again. Seventeen jobs as Master of Ceremonies at benefit functions and luncheons in a little more than a week is his latest record. And he didn't tell the same story twice.

Frank Shade is the name now. It used to be Fritz Schade, but Father, under pressure of the Third Liberty Loan drive, decided on two things—one to buy a lot of bonds for the baby, and the other to change his name.

Eddie Lyons, now a married man, has settled down in Hollywood, where he has builded himself a Jazz bungalow. Eddie has lemons, oranges and grapefruit in his own yard, but admits his hobby is "that onion patch."

The old meeting place is no more, and there is weeping and wailing in the film set. The temperance element outnumbered the mahogany polishers in a recent election, and now Los Angeles is in the semi-dry list. 'Tis true the cafes can help a little by serving beers and light wines between the hours of 11 a. m. and 9 p. m. with meals, but for the more substantial aids to brighten the monotony of every day life, an auto trip to Vernon or a rattler ride to the beach is necessary. Private bars are reported in many a household, and the Alex bar is to be cut up into tables to make room for an English coffee shop. All visitors are therefore notified to bring their own refreshments.

After such a GOLDEN LETTER

as this, on "The KAISER —th Bea o Berl

what more can we ad

①

②

③

④

⑤

Do what the Manager of this big 1600 seat House says:
"Grab "The Kaiser"
the Beast of Berlin.-Quick!"

JEWEL
PRODUCTIONS Inc.
1600 Broadway N.Y.

ALWAYS WORTH WHILE

AMERICA THEATER
ALVAH G. TALBOT, Manager

THE BISHOP-CASS INVESTMENT COMPANY, Owner
DENVER, COLO.

SEE
"AMERICA" FIRST

April 1st,1918.

JEWEL PRODUCTIONS,Inc.

Denver,
Colorado.

Gentlemen;

We opened the picture,"The KAISER,the Beast of Berlin" at the America Theatre yesterday,and I must say it exceeded all previous pictures in every way,and I would say to my fellow showmen;-

Grab "The KAISER,the Beast of Berlin" QUICK!

If you run this picture you will do the following things;-

First. Please your patrons. They will cheer, whistle,clap and weep. What more do they want?

Second. You are making better American citizens and that is patriotism

Third. With the large business you will do, your war tax will naturally increase. That is helping DO YOURBIT.

Fourth. Make money for yourself.

The America Theatre broke the attendance record for Sundays and all other days. The seating capacity is 1600. All seats were sold and crowds waiting for hours, compelling us to run one extra show after 10.20 p.m.

Yours truly,
AMERICA THEATRE
BY A G Talbot
MANAGER

NEWSY ITEMS FROM THE STUDIOS

[Realizing that the voluminous press agent material filling an exhibitor's mail often fails to provide the breezy little items so badly needed for program fillers and your newspaper photoplay editors, MOTION PICTURE NEWS has created this department. It will be conducted by Miss Dorothy Tarbell, and the gossip personalities presented here will be gathered at first hand in the studios and from the players themselves. Not only the stars but the lesser known players whose good work has often gained them popularity in different localities, will be treated in human, intimate fashion in this department.

In connection with this "clip-sheet" service for programs and newspapers, this department also offers all the facilities of the Motion Picture Studio Directory to exhibitors and players in forwarding mail, locating players, furnishing information regarding pictures in which different players have appeared, and so on.]

Fay Tincher has just returned to the coast after a flying trip East. The main thing which she accomplished was a contract with the World Film Co. to release her pictures from now on. Miss Tincher writes her own stories (in self defence, as she puts it), chooses her own casts and directs her own pictures. Moreover, she refuses to be press-agented as a daughter of the idle rich who works for the love of it; but insists that she works to support herself at the thing she knows how to do best.

Dora Mills Adams, one of the most charming "grandee dames" of the screen, is cast for the role of Mrs. Gardner in "When Man Betrays," Ivan Abramson's new picture. Her work in "The Square Deceiver" and "Married in Name Only" was particularly noteworthy.

Edward Abeles, who will play the part of Simon Rosedale in the new Metro picture "The House of Mirth," was a well known lawyer and newspaper man before he became an actor. Perhaps it is just this training that leads to his portrayal of such parts a most convincing note.

In connection with the screen revival of "The Blue Bird," it is interesting to recall that Gladys Hulette, whose latest release is "Mrs. Slacker," was in the original stage version of this Maeterlink play.

Octave Dua is another well known operatic star to become interested in the "movies." He has just finished a brilliant season with Mme. Galli Curci, but is already making plans for a summer in pictures.

A little girl visiting the World studio was very much interested in Kitty Gordon. She admired a pearl ring which Miss Gordon was wearing, but smiling up at her in a worldly wise manner said, "That's a fake ring, isn't it? No one ever wears real jewelry in the movies, do they?" Miss Gordon replied that this particular ring happened to be a real one. But the little girl refused to believe her. As it happened the platinum setting held a real pearl a half inch in diameter. Strangely enough, the name of the picture Miss Gordon was doing is "Tinsel."

Director John G. Adolfi Telling Irving Cummings and Barbara Castleton How the Love Scene Should Be "Put Over" In "The Heart of a Girl," World Pictures Production

---

Many far away fans will no doubt be delighted to see the New York Strand exactly as it is inside and out. They will have this chance in the new Ivan picture, "Conquered Hearts," in which Marguerite Marsh actually appears on the Strand stage and is presented to the audience by Manager Edel himself.

Director John Adolfi was in an automobile smash-up on his way from the station the day he arrived in Washington to take a few scenes for "The Heart of a Girl." As he was badly shaken up he felt the need of refreshment. After trying in vain at all the customary places he found a kind friend who promised to lead him to one. It was at an undertaker's establishment. His next quest was for a racer to use in his picture. He tried various garages without luck. Again a kind friend volunteered to help him out. He was escorted to another undertaker's shop and found what he wanted. By this time he had begun to believe that fate had willed him to be taken to an undertaker in one way or another. We will bet that he was glad it was "or another."

Irving Cumming's idea of an interview is to talk about the delightful atmosphere of the World Studio, about the pleasure of appearing opposite Barbara Castleton, the new World star, about the skill of his director, John Adolfi, etc., etc. The fan's idea is to hear about his lovely young wife and their very new baby.

Dean Raymond, that distinguished white haired actor, gives to the president of the Chalmers Picture Co. in Ivan's latest picture, "Conquered Hearts," all the dignity and assurance of the ideal film magnate. Mr. Raymond is soon to be seen in the second May Allison picture, and in Julius Steger's "Cecilia of the Pink Roses."

The idea of Frank Crane directing Madge Evans in "Clarissa," a new World picture, is decidedly appealing. Mr. Crane is one of the oldest and most experienced directors, while Miss Evans is one of the youngest and most capable stars.

Tony Merlo expected to be a comedian when he began pictures. He and his mother used to entertain their friends with stunts, jokes, dialogues, etc., until they had the reputation of being the official funmakers of their crowd. But such is luck; when the directors saw Tony's black eyes, black hair, and little black moustache he was cast for a heavy, and heavy he has been ever since. Despite his short career in pictures his characterizations stand out distinctly, particularly in "The Maid of Belgium," "The Cross-Bearer," and "A Daughter of France."

FOR YOUR PROGRAM AND NEWSPAPERS

While they were filming "When Carey Came to Town" the musicians failed to appear during a scene in which Mae Marsh had to weep bitterly. Irene Blackwell, one of the members of the cast, came to the rescue and played "sob stuff" on the piano with such effect that Miss Marsh outdid all her previous efforts in the tear shedding line.

Muriel Ostriche might be called the "perfect ingenue." She is quite as youthfully captivating off the screen as on, whether she is talking about how she adores her best friend Mollie King or how she adores swimming. The latter she will have a chance to show us soon, as scenes in her newest picture, "Tinsel," are to be taken in the George Gould indoor swimming pool at Lakewood.

Bradley Barker indulged in pneumonia between the finish of the "Million Dollar Dollies" and the beginning of "Men," a picture soon to be released, in which Charlotte Walker and Gertrude McCoy appear. To add insult to injury, his first scene in the latter was a fistic encounter.

According to Marie Pagano, "doubling" is a thrilling though unappreciated part of the movies. In it one has all the excitement of being the centre of interest though none of the credit. She has done some very successful work in this line, but hopes soon to reach the stage where she can do her stunts under her own name. At present she is playing the heavy opposite June Elvidge in "The Judge."

When June Elvidge and her company went South to take scenes for "The Oldest Law" they left on the 13th, the director's chair was No. 13, and there were thirteen members in the company. Two other World stars went South that same week with their companies, but Miss Elvidge was the only one to come back safe and sound, the other two, Montagu Love and Carlyle Blackwell, were both taken ill and had to remain to recuperate.

The doctor who attended Marguerite Clarke during her recent attack of mumps did not recognize her and reported the case as that of a child suffering from a contagious disease, as required by law. The result was that Miss Clarke's mother was deluged with orders from the Department of Health about keeping her little girl out of school and away from all other children.

Elsie Ferguson In "The Lie," An Artcraft Feature, Amuses the Baby Via the Teddy Bear

The first anniversary of the Billy West-King Bee comedies is going to be celebrated on May first in Hollywood. All sorts of plans are being made, including the christening of Billy as the "Screen's Scream."

George Le Guere, one of the reasons for the success of "Business Before Pleasure" on the speaking stage, is going to appear in "Cecilia of the Pink Roses," the new Julius Steger production. His last screen work is in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," with Forbes-Robertson.

You can kill two birds with one stone by sending for an autographed picture of Madge Evans. On each she is pasting a war saving stamp, which will encourage you to start buying them, if you have not already done so.

Theda Bara's former chauffeur told his present employer that he had to leave Miss Bara because he couldn't stand the strain of carrying around each day several hundred dollars in bills so that whenever Miss Bara wanted to stop and make a few little purchases she would have enough money.

Hugh Jeffrey has played in three successive pictures with Bushman and Bayne. "Under Suspicion," "The Brass Check," and "With Neatness and Dispatch." In the last mentioned he plays the part of Inspector Corcoran, a police official, in a most convincing manner.

It is said that a song called "258" was inspired by the Metro pictures "Draft 258." It is a song of patriotism about the lucky first number in the draft for the National Army, and was written by A. B. Hill of Bradford, Pa.

Danny Hogan, now supporting Bert Lytell in "The Trail to Yesterday," was born in Italy, despite his name. He will be remembered as "One Round Hogan" of the days of Joe Gans and other famous lightweights. From all reports he can still "step some."

Betty Blythe's career is an excellent proof that it pays to work. She started out with very small parts in Vitagraph stock. Little by little her parts became bigger, until in "The Business of Life" she played second support to Alice Joyce. Then came the Empey picture. In it she played the role of Madame Arnot so splendidly that even the critics singled out her work. Now she has been made a real leading lady and will play opposite Harry Morey in "Playing with Fate."

George MacQuarrie has deserted Madge Evans again, for in the "Judge" he is playing with June Elvidge and John Bowers, while Madge is starting "Clarissa" with Johnny Hines. By the way, Mr. MacQuarrie's real wife is the charming leading lady in "The Tailor-Made Man," one of the most successful Broadway farces of the season.

In "The Interloper," Oscar Apfel's first picture for World, he has introduced some of the lighting stunts for which he became so well known on the Coast. His striking scenic effects in the Kerrigan-Paralta picture, "A Man's Man," are particularly remembered.

Hugo Ballin, art director for Goldwyn, is the creator of a distinct novelty in "The Face in the Dark." It is a centre fireplace, set in a stone box about four feet square, above which is a massive metal dome placed to catch the intense heat radiating from the open top of the grate. The glowing coals are visible from any of the four sides. It will be particularly interesting to those fans who appreciate new ideas of interior decorating on the screen.

Veta Searl, in Select's Patriotic Photodrama, "Over There"

Short Subjects in Review

By Clara DeLissa Berg

Cartoon Keeps Pace with Film Progress

ARE you giving your patrons a form of entertainment that even those people who "almost never go to the movies" receive with enthusiasm?

We refer to cartoons, once a mere postscript added to a news reel or similar subject; now fast approaching the dignity of a special. As readers of our pages know, three firms are announcing the acquisition of distributing rights to some of the most famous of cartoons and are giving them all the publicity accorded regular one-reel comedies.

It doesn't take a long memory to recall the early days of the cartoon comic on the screen. First to emerge as a cartoon character with a real personality was the dauntless "Colonel Heeza Liar," offspring of the artistic brain and hand of J. R. Bray, of the Bray Studios. His adventures in the first months of the war, dodging—and riding—cannon balls figured very successfully in the Pathe split-reel releases. It is to be regretted that government work is keeping Mr. Bray so busy that he can devote none of his time to the making of cartoons. However, he has found worthy associates in Earl Hurd, creator of the delightful "Bobby Bumps"; in Wallace Carson, responsible for the adventures of "Goodrich Dirt"; in Leighton Budd and L. M. Glackens, whose political cartoons are both interesting and markedly artistic. Deserving of special mention is J. F. Leventhal for his remarkably clever demonstrations by animated drawings of scientific problems. All of these cartoons appear as part of the Bray Pictograph, the "magazine on the screen."

Of vital importance in these war times are the political cartoonists, whose work is seen in connection with the various news weeklies. Their few feet of film bear the message or drive home the lesson of the day with a power of conviction impossible to any other form of expression.

Ranking now as comedies in their own right are the cartoon series made famous through the various newspapers in which they daily appear. "Mutt and Jeff," the "Katzenjammer Kids," and "Happy Hooligan" have literally millions of friends outside of the theatre. They are as widely known and perhaps much more deeply loved than many personages high in the affairs of the nation. So highly developed is the technique that animates these little figures that it is indeed an "art that conceals art" and the figures become veritable actors, portraying the emotions and enjoying all the adventures of genuine comedy.

In one form or another every exhibitor should be able to offer his patrons this form of entertainment. None will be received with more nearly unanimous approval and be more sure of a hearty and lasting welcome.

THE KATZENJAMMERS, ALSO THE KAT—TO SAY NOTHING OF THE DOG

What with the laughter and plaudits of the audience, the music, the other orchestral—and vocal—accompaniments, and the thrilling events upon the screen, the ten minutes during which "Mamma" and "The Captain" suffered through the unholy ingenuity of the "Kids" were about the liveliest portion of a two-hour performance "somewhere-in-Times-Square."

"Vanity and Vengeance," as the present tragedy in low life is called, is the first of the Katzenjammer cartoons to appear under the auspices of the Educational Films Corporation. Two dignified titles giving due credit to producers, distributors, and to Mr. Gregory La Cava, the director of the little comedies, introduce the picture. Thereafter, incident piles on incident to a whirlwind finish.

"VANITY AND VENGEANCE" (Katzenjammer Cartoon).
EDUCATIONAL FILMS CORP.: April 15.

A PACEMAKER FOR HADES

Perhaps the "Quickern'll" lived up to her name (she was a Fordcar) on asphalt and macadam, but when Robert C. Bruce found his motor trip around Chelan interrupted by floods hub-high, through which he had to be ignominiously tugged by horses, he and the Great Dane, his faithful climbing pardner, struck out on foot over the high hills. Here also was water, but it came in the shape of exquisite falls and whirling rapids that well repaid the hard climb.

As the camera closes on them, they are, indeed, as the title man has it, "up a tree," but in such picturesque surroundings and becoming attitudes that we are sure neither was in a hurry to descend to earth. The picture is short in length, but exceedingly pleasing.

"THE CRUISE OF THE 'QUICKERN'LL.'"
EDUCATIONAL FILMS CORP.: April 15.

BEAUTY IN THE BRITISH ISLES

Notable for the skill and artistic feeling with which it has been colored is the current split-reel scenic released by Pathe. Comparisons with similar reels occasionally produced by other makers only confirm one in the belief that in this field at least the craftsmen employed by the French house are masters.

Wales and the country about Worcester, England, furnish charming subjects for the pictures. The River Dee, where the miller of the nursery song lived, is spanned by a graceful fourteenth century bridge, as it flows past the old town of Llangollen, picturesquely located at the foot of high hills. The town itself is interesting for its quaint timbered houses and the old dress still worn by the natives. Winding streams, canals, and towpaths add to the attractiveness of the reel. The grim rock wall that is still England's defense against the sea is impressively pictured as the reel closes.

PICTURESQUE WALES: LLANGOLLEN and PICTURE SPOTS IN ENGLAND.
PATHE EXCHANGE: APRIL 28.

HOW THE HEART BEATS

The disclosures made by the microscope are often so startling as to be properly described as dramatic. Such is the case with a series of pictures made by R. A. Spaeth, of Yale University, for the current number of the Bray Pictograph, which show the action of the heart and the circulation of the blood in living organisms. The persistence of the heart beat after death is illustrated by hearts from a fish and a frog which are seen beating in a salt solution weeks after being removed from the body. Blood is shown coursing through veins in the living flesh, and in other pictures is so highly magnified that the separate corpuscles can be clearly seen. The subject is admirably treated and intensely interesting.

CURRENT EVENTS CELEBRATES FIRST ANNIVERSARY

With the arrival of the first anniversary in the life of the Universal Current Events, Jack Cohn, the enterprising editor-in-chief of the Events, as well as of the Animated Weekly and Screen Magazine, is looking forward to another year of effort along lines of work even more far-seeing and constructive than those of the past.

As dean of news, cameraman, and as president of the News Weeklies Association, composed of the Pathe, Mutual and Universal weeklies, Mr. Cohn has wide experience and a vision of things possible not always shared by his confreres. Perhaps that is because he is a genuine believer in the work he is doing and the possibilities it holds of educating and helping the vast public that stands ready to respond to its message. Furthermore, "Jack," as he is always and affectionately called, is an essentially human and likeable person, quick to see and feel the pulse of life in even the trivial happenings of the day and to convey this in his screen productions. "Send the people out of the theatre remembering what they have seen," says Mr. Cohn. "Appeal to every side of their nature. Why not dispense with the mad hunt after the obviously striking and unusual by discovering and presenting the striking and unusual in the apparently commonplace?"

BUILDING OUR AIR FLEET

Aeroplanes, and still more aeroplanes, and always more men to make them, is the cry arising from our present need. So doubly interesting and timely is the Universal Screen Magazine of the week, with a large section devoted to the making of our air fleet. The Screen Magazine is always successful in presenting such subjects in a concise but clear fashion that makes them readily understandable.

Very clever and admirable are the Japanese acrobats who perform for the camera. There is nothing quite so grand as going to the circus, but when you can't the screen offers you a very good substitute. One can almost smell the sawdust in these lively pictures.

The first of the "Animated Interviews," noticed in these pages some little while ago, appears in this number and pictures Miss Ida Tarbell, the noted writer, presenting her view as to the relative happiness of the man's life and the woman's. The facts as she sees them are enacted in a little drama, which will come home to every married couple. The problem is of universal interest, and Miss Tarbell's wise words upon it will cause both discussion and reflection.

Hair Dressing Hints from South America are interesting and laughable.

UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE NO 67.
UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO., APRIL 19.

PARAMOUNT ASKS FOR COOPERATION

So successful have been the matinees for children held at the Loew theatres at which pictures chosen by the National Juvenile Motion Picture League were shown in conjunction with the "Son of Democracy," Paramount's wonderful Lincoln series, that the league has been requested by the Paramount Pictures Corporation to take charge of similar matinees in all houses showing this feature.

The league, of which Mrs. Adele F. Woodard is president, not only selects pictures suitable for children and provides the necessary chaperones for the matinees, but gives these latter wide publicity through the public schools, guaranteeing the exhibitor ample attendance.

Screen Examinations

"A Dog's Life"

(Chaplin-First National—Three Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

THERE are several things that go to make "A Dog's Life" the greatest comedy Charles Chaplin ever produced. First and foremost after the inimitable comedian himself comes his method of production. Chaplin realizes what many other comedy producers do not—that a piece of funny business is heightened in effect providing it follow after a stretch of action in which planting and serious business hold the main positions. He does not strive for "a laugh in every scene"—this is a snappy catch-line, but a poor aim. If there are laughs in every scene they grow less riotous with every scene. Chaplin, as capable a producer as he is a comedian, knows the value of his highlights and bridges from one to another with the skill of a dramatist.

Neither does Chaplin ever stoop to the obvious; or if he so performs he follows it up with something totally unexpected. In "A Dog's Life" there are many surprising turns. And, of course, one can laugh with more abandon when surprised than one can when everything is anticipated. This skill of Chaplin's is in evidence right up to the last, when he is seen happily married, safe on his farm, gazing down into a cradle, his arm about his wife. A close-up of a baby is anticipated; those accustomed to the Chaplin type of comedy perhaps expected triplets. But it is neither one nor three. The dog who has been Charlie's companion throughout the three reels occupies the cradle with her litter of puppies.

Chaplin's gags include some of the most original comedy tricks ever perpetrated on the screen. His first bit of nonsense, dodging the cop by rolling back and forth underneath a fence, introduces a new style of chase that caused a riot of laughter in the projecting room. But the laughs were loudest when he walked into a cafe where no dogs were allowed with the pet canine secreted in his trousers. The secret, however, was not kept by the dog. Her tail found a hole in Charlie's trousers. The spectacle of the comedian strolling across the floor with the little white tail wagging for dear life was sidesplitting. Again, when Charlie knocks one of his enemies out and then performs on him in the manner of the manipulator of marionettes, has Chaplin introduced something new in his line of comedy?

It is these things which go to make "A Dog's Life" the best comedy ever made; yes, even on second thought, the best comedy ever made. These and the elimination of all waste footage, the accuracy with which Chaplin has gaged the value of each trick and each bit of business, and the extra-clever little dog. And Chaplin realizes that to strike the human note every once in a while, even in his comedies, is to make them more appealing. Edna Purviance does a clever piece of work as the heroine—for there is a heroine, and Charlie is the hero, and there is a plot with a happy ending, as all good plots have.

"Up the Road with Sallie"

(Select—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

"UP THE ROAD WITH SALLIE" adapted by Julia Crawford Ivers from a novel by Francis Sterrett and featuring that ravishing comedienne, Constance Talmadge, makes a farce comedy, the sum and light fluffy substance of which is excellent. Its complications contain an abundant supply of humor and the author has shown a keen knowledge of human nature in his four principal characterizations that makes them beings of flesh and blood instead of rather impossible puppets; often the incumberances of a farce. The romance of Sallie and Cabot is fetching and pretty but the various love passages between Aunt Martha and Henderson with their petty jealousies and awkward protestations of affection are a rare combination of the human and the humorous. This mixture, not the least of the picture's many merits and which is apparent throughout the story, brings "Up the Road with Sallie" to the top-notch of picture comedy.

The plot centers about the various misconceptions of the four principals. Sallie and her Aunt Martha motoring in search of adventure take refuge in an empty but warmly furnished house during a rain storm. Other guests desiring shelter are Cabot and Henderson and circumstances and fragments of conversations supplemented by vivid imaginations result in each pair believing the other robbers. The rain goes on for four days and the romances start. An admirable supply of appropriate subtitles and funny twists galore keep the flow of comedy steady during this long episode, the main one of the picture. It has been treated expertly both by adaptor and Director William D. Taylor. Mr. Taylor, whose forte seems to lie in the production of the comedy picture has carefully restrained his subject from stepping on the offensive side of the line. Even when Sallie discovers she has climbed back into the wrong bed and that Cabot is also wound up in the covers, the effect is genuinely funny and so realistic is the surprise expressed by each of them that response to it will be multiplied. The rainstorm is excellent and the photographic effects achieved by Frank E. Garbutt are to be commended.

Miss Talmadge, pretty, fresh and sincere at all times is ideally suited to enact the role of Sallie. Her stardom is indeed her own sweet right. Norman Kerry is a gentlemanly Cabot. Kate Toncray and Thomas H. Persse are admirable as the older couple.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Sallie Waters (Constance Talmadge) kidnaps her Aunt Martha (Kate Toncray) for the purpose of showing her a little real adventure. While motoring a storm comes up and they are forced to take refuge in a nearby house. Here also come two strangers, Joshua Cabot (Norman Kerry) and John Henderson (Thomas H. Persse). Sallie sees in a paper that her aunt's home has been robbed. Noticing a ring bearing the family crest on Cabot's finger, she concludes that he and his friend are the guilty parties. Cabot comes to the same conclusion with respect to the ladies when Sallie speaks of her "arrest.". She does not finish, else Cabot would understand. She had been caught speeding. However, two romances bud despite all suspicions, and suffice it to say that all ends happily, Cabot's possession of the ring being by right of his relationship with Aunt Martha's family.

"The Woman in the Web"

(Second and Third Episodes—Vitagraph Serial)

Reviewed by Joseph L. Kelley

THE second and third chapters of the Vitagraph's new serial "The Woman in the Web," compares favorably with the first chapter which is all that could be desired in the way of action, thrills and daring stunts before the camera.

"The Open Switch," the second episode, is all that the title implies. It closes in a climax that can be safely referred to as "hair-raising." A fully equipped railroad engine running at top speed with three coaches trailing, runs into an open switch at the side of an embankment and plunges over the side. And there wasn't a trick camera man on the job. The man at the crank registered the real thing. The action of this episode from the beginning works up to this thrilling climax in a logical manner and when the crash comes an audience is "all set" for thrill of thrills.

The third episode, "The Spreading Doom," the thrills registered are toned down a bit as compared to the train wreck of the preceding chapter but, thrills they are, and one in particular executed by Hedda Nova, the heroine of the serial, hits the high spot of thrilling sensation. Miss Nova, as the heroine and J. Frank Glendon, as the hero, are pursued by the Russian spies and in order to reach safety Miss Nova is obliged to jump from a high pier into a swiftly moving motor boat. The motor boat shown in this scene, is a speed artist, of the first water.

The two late chapters of this serial afford entertainment of the best, as applied to serials. The photography is clear, the shots registered are shown in perfect perspective and the settings have been chosen with an eye for atmosphere.

"An Alien Enemy"

(Paralta—Seven Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

PARALTA'S contribution to the list of war pictures is represented in "An Alien Enemy," in which Louise Glaum is starred. It is notable, inasmuch as it gets away from the beaten path that war pictures usually take. Its enemy spies have a certain amount of common sense and its hero doesn't capture an entire German salient. In fact, the hero is very inconspicuous. It is the Alien Enemy, Louise Glaum, that does the lion's share of the heroics. She is of German birth, but her father's years in the United States have in some way given her an idea of what freedom is. German brutality, the spirit of America, the Marsellaise and other influences, including her love for her husband, finally cause her to break with the autocracy that she has been taught to serve since childhood. Miss Glaum gives a realistic performance in this role. It is not of the type with which one usually associates her, and her success with it so seems the more praiseworthy.

Suffice it above all things that "An Alien Enemy" is an excellent hurrah picture. There are any number of fine spirited subtitles, calculated to win applause and cheers, and the now familiar close-up of President Wilson and glimpses of our troops add not a little to the picture's patriotic appeal. Monte Katterjohn, its author, has not made the mistake of the majority of scenario writers who deal with the war. They usually endeavor to dramatize the whole of it. Katterjohn contents himself with dealing with his own created characters. This he does consistently and precisely. His is a melodrama, convincingly constructed and benefitted by the sympathetic and interesting character study rendered by Miss Glaum. He has, perhaps, neglected the love interest to an extent somewhat disconcerting at the outset and his continuity is not always the compact and solid piece of work that were those he prepared under the Ince management. But the high lights in this story are too many and too strong to admit of the slight outside interference present. Wallace Worsley's direction is creditable. L. Guy Wilky photographed.

Thurston Hall as Hale, Arthur Allardt and Charles Hammond as German propagandists, and Jay Morley as Major Putnam constitute the principal supporting cast and render effective performances.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Louis Meyer (Roy Laidlaw), an innkeeper in a German village, who has lived in the United States, while protecting his wife (Louise Glaum) against insulting young Prussian officers is shot and killed by one of them, Emil Koenig (Arthur Allardt). His wife is also killed. Koenig is banished to the United States to live "as a gentleman." The Meyer child (Mary Jane Irving) is brought up by the German Government.

Fifteen years later, with the war in Europe at its height, Neysa Von Igel (Louise Glaum), Meyer's child, is found serving the interests of Germany in the United States, together with Koenig and Schmidt (Charles Hammond), her guardian. Neysa is busily engaged in winning the affections of Major Putnam (Jay Morley), about to sail for France, but she only succeeds in blundering and making herself so conspicuous that he suspects her. Her growing love for Hale (Thurston Hall), a true American, leads her to desert her confederates and marry him. Shortly afterwards he is sent to France as a member of a war board. Here Neysa accompanies him. She again meets the Major, who airs his suspicions of her. A spy stationed in her home by Koenig requests information from her daily. Supposedly stealing this from her husband, she supplies him with false accounts. Later her husband's suspicions are confirmed and he leaves her. In America Schmidt in an attempt to escape from an internment camp is shot and mortally wounded.. On his death-bed he confesses Neysa's identity and tells of the murder of her mother and father. Neysa hears of this. Going to meet Koenig she tells him she has been supplying him with false statements and then kills him for the irreparable wrong he committed in his youth. Hale overhears all this and welcomes his wife back to him.

Joseph J. Dowling and Clifford Alexander complete the cast.

"A Waiter's Wasted Life"

(Fox-Lehrman—Two Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

MR. LEHRMAN has taken a jail and a quick lunch room and placed them side by side in "A Waiter's Wasted Life." The humorous complications that result are numerous and well up to, if not beyond, the Lehrman standard of comedy. The opening reel starts off excellently, there are plenty of gags and a large supply of foolishness that makes one laugh if he will or no. The last reel has to do with a hanging. The prisoner escapes and Ham (Lloyd V. Hamilton) is rushed in to take his place. He escapes in time to start a general mix-up. The director has a good sense of burlesque in everything he undertakes. He introduces the warden of the jail playing with a miniature man dangling on the end of a rope. Such touches, though not of the highest type of comedy, are plentiful in the two reels.

"The Boss of Lazy Y"

(Triangle—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Joseph L. Kelley

TRIANGLE presents Roy Stewart in his latest Western drama, "The Boss of Lazy Y," a corking good drama of the Stewart brand, supported by a good story, capable acting and striking Western locations. The screen version is an adaptation of Alden Seltzer's novel, of the same title, and it was produced under the direction of Cliff Smith.

A feud between two Western families is the basis of the story and the events which marked the settling of old scores between the feudists are related on the screen in a most entertaining way. Action is the predominating element. The photography is of the best and can be classed with the usual good standard set by Triangle in this branch of screen creations.

Cliff Smith was "on the job" with the megaphone. He evidences a strong trend toward all that is Western in the selection of locations and the cameraman, name not mentioned on the program, has backed him up with a keen eye for distance and perspective with the result that he has registered some good shots.

Mr. Stewart is supported in this production by a most capable cast of Western character portrayers. Graham Pette, Frank McQuartie, Aaron Edwards (particularly good), Walt Whitman, Frankie Lee (a youngster who does commendable work), William Ellingford and Bill Patton. Josie Sedgwick is mentioned last because she is the lone feminine principal in the cast. She is last but not least. Her work is done with appreciation and registers in every scene.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Cal Marston's (Roy Stewart) father is shot and killed by Tom Taggart (Frank McQuarrie) as the result of a feud which had existed between the two families for years. Shortly after the shooting, and before Marston dies, Betty Clayton (Josie Sedgwick) with her father arrives at the ranch, seeking a new homestead. Betty cares for Marston, and before he dies he leaves the ranch in her and her father's charge, until his wayward son, Cal, returns. Cal had been absent for years, having left home because he did not like his father's attitude toward him.

Cal returns and Betty turns over the letter which his father had left for him. When he learns that his father had placed him under the supervision of a mere woman he rebels, but something about Betty holds him in check.

Cal reforms, repairs the ranch and puts it on a paying basis. He then sets out to avenge his father's death, and when he is attacked by Taggart and his son, Neal (Aaron Edwards), he succeeds in turning the table. Taggart kills his own son, thinking that he has killed Cal. The feud ends and Cal and Betty settle down to happiness on the ranch.

"Rip Roaring Rivals" and "The Wooing of Coffee Cake Kate"

(Clover-General—One Reel Each)

Reviewed by F. G. Spencer

BUD DUNCAN makes his first appearance in this slapstick comedy since the "Ham and Bud" series of last year. He is the same old "Bud," and while there are really some amusing situations in this single-reeler, still there's not much to commend it. The film is there because the proprietor of the Lame Cow Saloon is at his wits' end on account of the depredations of Three-Gun Perkins (Bud Duncan), a gun fighter, and Cold Steel Steve ("Kewpie" Morgan), a knife fighter. He hoped to get them together in a fight that would dispose of at least one of them, but things are at a deadlock because neither will use the other's weapons. However, a brilliant idea strikes him and he sends for Nifty Nell (Dot Farley), "the vampiest Vamp that ever vamped," and she is told to either tame the two tough birds or get them to kill each other. After making each of the bad men believe that her affections belong to him, she brings them together in mortal combat, the winner to have her. But a surprise occurs in the shape of a boy who tells the woman to come home, her children are hungry. The dazed fighters follow, and, learning that they have not only been fighting for Nifty Nell, but for her four children, they forget their differences and walk back to the waiting undertaker and, paying him his fee in advance, prepare to take their places among the rest of the "dead ones."

"THE WOOING OF COFFEE CAKE KATE" is built on much the same lines and features the same artists, but Dot Farley instead of being cast as a vampire is the owner of the Palace of Food at Gimpy Gulch. Her strong arm methods of conducting same earn for her the respect and fear of the wild element of the Gulch. It remains, however, for Bill (Bud Duncan) to win her respect and he claims her as his blushing bride.

"Yes, I shot him! Pick up the dirty dog and make him tell you why I did it!"

"The DOCTOR AND THE WOMAN"

The New LOIS WEBER PRODUCTION featuring MILDRED HARRIS

An Intimate Disclosure of Life as We Live It.

Taken from Mary Roberts Rinehart's "K"—The Story that had Two Million Readers - - - - - - Publishers, Houghton, Mifflin Co.

Book thru any Jewel Exchange or Jewel Productions Inc. 1600 Broadway, New York

"The DOCTOR and

TRY to think of a more alluring title for an intimate disclosure of life than "The DOCTOR and the WOMAN." Try to think of a Producer with a bigger money-record than Lois Weber—or equal artistry. Try to think of a personality more appealing than Mildred Harris, the "Linnie" of that amazing box-office success, "The PRICE of a GOOD TIME."

Try to think of any photoplay that gives you these three guarantees of public satisfaction—then do what every shrewd showman will do when he's offered the highest grade of popular, proven goods and book this newest Lois Weber Production, "The DOCTOR and the WOMAN." See it at any Jewel Exchange—the sooner the better.

JEWEL
Productions INC
1600 Broadway, New York City

the WOMAN"

MILDRED HARRIS, who made such a smashing hit in "The PRICE of a GOOD TIME," and who now comes to your audiences again in "The DOCTOR and the WOMAN," has become a Star in the one and only way real stars are made—not thru printer's ink but by the more lasting, more popular and considerably more genuine means of her own consummate art.

Mildred Harris touched your audiences' hearts as "Linnie"—she'll go even deeper into their affections as innocent little Sidney. Watch her work in "The DOCTOR and the WOMAN" at your nearest Jewel Exchange and you'll book this sensationally intimate Lois Weber drama without one moment's hesitation. Do this for yourself today.

JEWEL
Productions INC
1600 Broadway, New York City

"He's hiding out there in the hall, I tell you
I saw him, myself!"

"The DOCTOR AND THE WOMAN"

The New
LOIS WEBER PRODUCTION featuring MILDRED HARRIS

An Intimate Disclosure of Life as We Live It.

Taken from Mary Roberts Rinehart's "K" The Story that had Two Million Readers ------ Publishers, Houghton, Mifflin Co.

Book thru any Jewel Exchange or Jewel Productions Inc. 1600 Broadway, New York

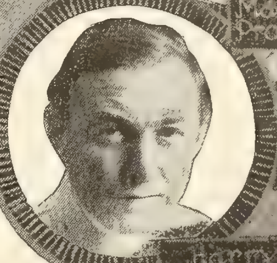
Dorothy Phillips Productions

Priscilla Dean Productions

Herbert Rawlinson Productions

Mae Murray Productions

Mary MacLaren Productions



Harry Carey Productions

Universal Special Productions

EVERY Universal Special Production is an individual Box Office Attraction of the highest type. No feature productions, irrespective of who produces them or how widely they are advertised, surpass these Special Attractions in any detail. The class and high character of these Productions stamp them as first choice for first-run houses. Each is a SPECIAL, offered and sold entirely on its merits. Your nearest Universal Exchange will arrange private trade showings. Arrange to see them all.

Dorothy Phillips PRODUCTION

"THE RISKY ROAD," released April 8th, is one of the biggest Box-Office Attractions of the season. The story and action is as powerful as the title, which is a money-getter par excellence. Watch for the coming DOROTHY PHILLIPS PRODUCTIONS.

Priscilla Dean PRODUCTION

"THE TWO-SOUL WOMAN" is a feature extraordinary. One that will be worth more to you in results than any price your Exchange may ask of you. Pay whatever they ask. Boost this to the very limit. It will play capacity, especially on repeat performances. Released May 6th.

Herbert Rawlinson PRODUCTION

"SMASHING THROUGH" promises as big returns to Exhibitors as that sensational financial success—"COME THROUGH"—in which Rawlinson took the country by storm. It is a big feature to be booked for longer than one day for the big money. Release date to be announced later.

Mae Murray PRODUCTION

"THE BRIDE'S AWAKENING," released on May 20th, promises a sensational treat for millions and big results for Exhibitors. Its title is exceptionally strong, and the production backs up the title to the letter. Play this one for more than one day.

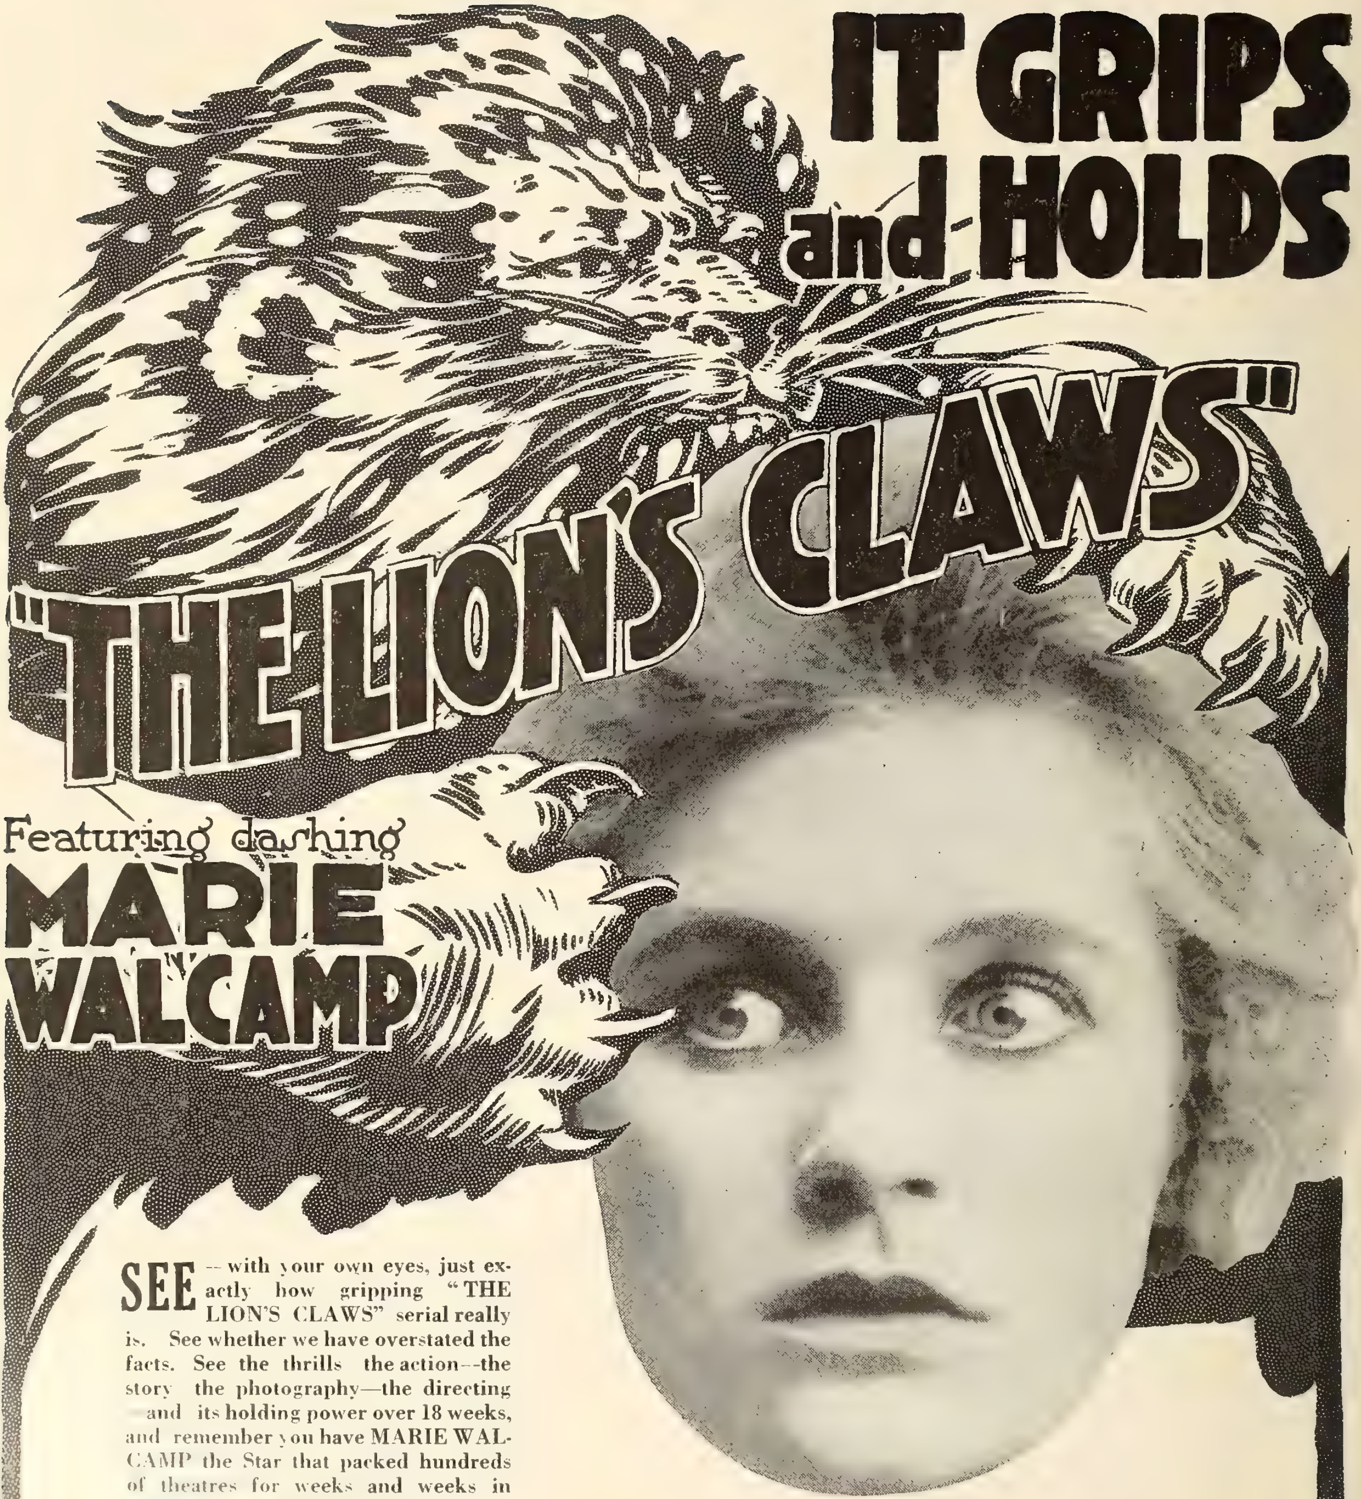
Mary MacLaren PRODUCTION

(Title and release date to be announced later) will be a great "come back" with this splendid star to Universal Productions. Thousands remember Mary MacLaren in Lois Weber's great sensation, "SHOES." Watch for this new one in June.

Harry Carey PRODUCTION

"THE SCARLET DROP" is a companion piece in wonderful character acting to Harry Carey's "PHANTOM RIDERS" and "STRAIGHT SHOOTING," which was received with unbounded enthusiasm by hundreds of shrewd Exhibitors. No competition in the wide world can outdraw this feature. Released April 22nd.

UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY
"Largest Film Manufacturing Concern in the Universe"
Carl Laemmle, President
1600 Broadway, New York



SEE—with your own eyes, just exactly how gripping "THE LION'S CLAWS" serial really is. See whether we have overstated the facts. See the thrills the action—the story the photography—the directing—and its holding power over 18 weeks, and remember you have MARIE WALCAMP the Star that packed hundreds of theatres for weeks and weeks in "THE RED ACE" and in "LIBERTY."

Ask to see the photographic scene album—the advertising—publicity and poster campaign book—see the tremendous helps we have provided to make it easy for you to put over "THE LION'S CLAWS" in big style. It has opened up BIG everywhere. It will GROW BIGGER as it proceeds. Book NOW.

Book thru your nearest Universal Exchange or communicate with the UNIVERSAL FILM MN'FG. CO., Largest Film Mn'fg. Co. in the Universe.
Carl Laemmle, President, 1600 Broadway, New York.

"The Bandit and the Preacher"

(W. H. Productions Hart Re-Issue—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Joseph L. Kelley

THE second Hart feature shown for review by W. H. Productions, "The Bandit and the Preacher," is a re-edited issue of "The Night Stage," featuring William S. Hart and an all-star cast including Robert Edeson, Rhea Mitchell and Herchel Mayall. And it sure is a rapid-fire Westerner of the first water. The picture is characterized by one of the most realistic and thrilling fight scenes ever witnessed by the reviewer. Approximately 500 feet of film is devoted to this scene and fifty or more take part in its enactment. It presents a real, live fight with William Hart and Robert Edeson opposing a gang of bar-room hangers-on. The set shown in the presentation of this scene is of the true-to-the-actuality type invariably created by Thomas H. Ince, who is responsible for the direction of this feature.

C. Gardner Sullivan originated the story and did the continuity and it is characteristic of the Sullivan style—lots of action, plenty of "pep" (which means more action), a cleverly constructed plot and a ripping climax. The human element is there in a good measure, the Western locations are typical and the photography is of the best.

The King of Western character actors goes through with his part in "The Bandit and the Preacher" with all the confidence and the iron nerve supposed to have been possessed by the character he impersonates. Audiences who see this Hart picture will note a change in the star. He looks younger and displays a certain amount of so-called "pep" which predominates the picture's attractiveness.

Robert Edeson gives a fine characterization of the "Sky Pilot" and is prominent throughout the run of the picture. Rhea Mitchell in the principal feminine role, is seen as a dance hall queen and adds not a little to the entertaining value of this excellent Hart feature.

The story tells of a Western bandit, presented by Mr. Hart, "made into a man" by a Sky Pilot who invades the Western town. The Sky Pilot wins the affections of the dance-hall queen, thereby arousing the enmity of the bandit. But the Sky Pilot turns a trick which places him in the right light before the bandit and the bandit takes his hat off to "the man."

"Conquered Hearts"

(Ivan Film Productions—Seven Reels)

Reviewed by Joseph L. Kelley

MARGUERITE MARSH registers on the camera lens a picture that has the same subtle attraction that a Fisher or Gibson head has when seen illustrating one of the late Richard Harding Davis' short masterpieces of contemporary fiction. Whether in the commonplace clothes of the tenement girl, or attired in the fetching gowns of the artist model, she holds a certain appeal which goes a good long ways toward making her success in Ivan's late production, "Conquered Hearts," a hit. She has the advantage of having to interpret the principal role of a carefully woven story and having as a director, Francis J. Grandon. The story is not perfect, nor is the production, but its value as entertainment for the screen is far above that of the proceeding Ivan productions—so far above its predecessors that it cannot be placed in the same rank and file of the drama.

"Conquered Hearts," as shown for review at the Strand theatre last week, could be improved by cutting—improved a big percentage. The action in the initial reels—the picture is in seven—runs at low ebb because of superfluous footage, and there have been incidents introduced in the plot as revealed in the later reels which leave the impression that the director was working for reelage, not definite form of action. These faults may be found in majority of pictures, running more than six reels in length. They are noticeable in Ivan's late production in a mild form, only.

The scene in the second reel showing the daughter stabbing her father could be eliminated altogether with better and more favorable results. The incident is not improbable, but it is one of those that the public does not like to have presented in animated form.

But the good qualities of this feature so far outweigh the questionable ones, that they can be overlooked, and no doubt will be by a good many. The discriminating will not be deceived. The author has appreciated what the human, heart-interest element means toward heightening the entertaining value of a screen drama, and has seen to it that a firm foundation of this material has been supplied. Director Grandon has created the incidents so related in the script, with all faithfulness and with a true regard for their significance. And back of all this there stands Marguerite Marsh and her support, vitalizing in a most capable manner, with one or two exceptions, the intentions of the author and director.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Nora Carrigan (Marguerite Marsh) lives in the tenement district of a large city with her father (Frank Evans), her mother (Eileen Walker), and her little brother (Sheridan Tansey). Dan Murdock (Richard Turner) is a rising young politician, who is slowly winning the patronage of his district from the old boss, Devlin (Barney Gilmore). Nora's father is an habitual drinker, and Nora's wages support the entire family. She returns one night with a pair of new shoes she has purchased with part of her week's salary, and her father, who is in a drunken stupor, attacks her because she has spent money which he thinks she should have given to him Nora in defense, stabs her father. She then tells her mother that she and Dan have been married for some weeks, and that she is going to live with him to escape the brutality of her father, whose wound is found to be only slight.

Soon after Nora and Dan have settled as man and wife, the political boss, Devlin, gives a dance in anticipation of the votes he will get in the coming election. Dan's popularity as a political leader is strengthened, and much of his time is taken with political duties. While at the dance she is called home to attend her baby, taken seriously ill. The baby dies, and Nora decides to leave her husband and seek her fortune elsewhere. She goes to another part of the city, and meets a young artist (Harry Myers), who engages her as a model. Finding that his intention are not of the best she leaves the artist's employ. She meets the Earl of Barchester (R. Paton Gibbs), who proposes to her.

In the meantime, Dan has been chosen political boss of his district, studies law, and is admitted to the bar. He has learned of Nora's whereabouts, but refrains from seeing her because he wishes to let her work out her own destination. Nora is given the opportunity to appear in picture and becomes a big star. Her picture is shown at the Strand theatre, and Dan attends the showing, afterward sending his card in to Nora, who has made a personal appearance. Nora refuses to see him. She is notified that she is to go to California to work in a new studio, and decides to visit the place where she had lived with Dan. She meets Dan, and they are reconciled.

Two British-Made Productions

(American Rights by J. Frank Brockliss)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

J. FRANK BROCKLISS has for release two feature productions made in England by Broadwest Films. The first of these, "A Gamble for Love," a race track melodrama in five reels, is a feature well worth considering for all varieties of theatres. English writers love to write of the race track and the most of them write of it in thoroughly interesting style. And be it said right at the start that the Broadwest director who staged "A Gamble for Love" never failed on realism. The race itself, which forms the climax of the story, is exceptionally done. All the excitement of the actual event has been communicated to the film. There is thrill upon thrill as the horses dash neck and neck around the track. The horses used in the picture are thoroughbreds. The stables suggest the atmosphere of rural England as nothing else could.

But "A Gamble for Love" has a sustaining plot and a very pretty love story besides. It tells of the love of a titled English gentleman for a rich widow. Their rivalry on the track makes room for the introduction of the heavies, and there is the usual attempt to put the best horse out of the running. Coupled with this plot there is the story of the widow's father, from whom she had been kidnapped when a child. The old man, blind, is sheltered by the hero until a blow restores his sight. He is then able to trace his daughter and the story ends happily for all concerned.

The suspense is admirably well maintained throughout the picture. The two leads are exceedingly pleasing and the character actor who plays the father is skilful. The exterior settings were selected with taste. It is a substantial, wholesome and entertaining story, capably enacted and prettily set.

"HONOUR IN PAWN," a four-reeler, does not measure up to "A Gamble for Love." The plot is rather obvious and there is a considerable amount of superfluous footage. It tells of a penniless girl, Nancy, who falls in the power of Mrs. Fortescue and her brother, Harvey, persons who gain a living by manufacturing imitations of great antiques. It is Nancy's task to procure a famous silver plate from one Sir Roger, and when love enters her predicament becomes serious. Suffice it, however, that all comes out happily after Nancy has been severely harassed by her own conscience and the police. Harvey saves her from a prison term by confessing the whole story of Nancy's mix-up with himself and his sister, and Sir Roger finally welcomes her as his wife.

The story, adapted from a novel by H. Maxwell and produced under the direction of Harold Weston, is not altogether devoid of interest, though it certainly could be improved by editing out certain portions of rather tiresome footage. Manora Thew, who essays the role of Nancy, seems to be an emotional actress of ability, but she overacts considerably in a sincere attempt to depict Nancy's perturbed state of mind. Julian Royce is a pleasing Sir Roger, while Helen Haye, George Bellamy, Hetta Bartlett, Marjorie Compton and Ivan Berlyn complete the cast. The exteriors are pretty; the interiors sometimes show poor taste.

" The Blindness of Divorce "

(Fox Standard—Six Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

FRANK LLOYD'S picture dealing with divorce is a better melodrama than it is a preachment, and, while this may not have been his aim, it is better than if the order had been reversed. He cannot preach against divorce when his original couple in this picture separate over a misunderstanding and when the woman becomes a notorious keeper of a gambling house with numerous side shows. Husband and wife are divorced on better grounds than circumstantial evidence, and we have several grass widows in mind who live decent lives. They have no gambling house over which to act as proprietress. So whenever "The Blindness of Divorce" takes a preachy turn it is inclined to be ineffective. But, while it progresses on its own particular melodramatic way, it is inclined to be entertaining. It has all the ear-marks of the sensational melodrama and deals with divorce in much the same manner as "Cheating the Public" dealt with the food question.

Mr. Lloyd, who both wrote and directed, has not fared as well as he did with "Les Miserables" and "A Tale of Two Cities," for instances. On the surface it appears as if he dealt more capably with the costume play than he did with the modern melodrama. But it is the opinion of the writer that Mr. Lloyd knew whereof he wrote in producing "The Blindness of Divorce." He has molded a picture to the popular liking, even though the highbrows, and we must confess of placing ourselves in this class for the moment, will more than likely turn elsewhere for their entertainment. The Fox press sheet says that it has "the heart interest and appeal, developed to the nth degree." This it has in the same manner as any old fashioned melodrama has.

The subtitles are in tune with the action throughout. The father is fond of saying "my little girl," and if the action were on the stage the expression could be counted upon to be spoken with tears and sobs in the voice. The cast, which includes Rhea Mitchell, Charles Clary, Bertha Mann, Fred Church, Bertram Grassby and Marc Robbins, is competent.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Merrill (Bertram Grassby) compromises Mrs. Langdon (Bertha Mann) before her husband, John Langdon (Charles Clary), and though she be innocent he refuses to believe her so. Divorce proceedings are begun and husband and wife are separated, the child (Nancy Caswell) going to ths husband.

Fifteen years later Langdon lives with his daughter, Florence (Rhea Mitchell), in another city. She is engaged to Livingston (Fred Church), the District Attorney, who is campaigning for a second term. Unknown to Langdon, his wife, now known as "Claire," conducts a notorious resort in the same city. Hopkins (Marc Robbins), the lawyer who handled Mrs. Langdon's case, now disgraced and broken, is a hanger-on of the political machine opposing Livingston. He gradually learns the relationship of Claire and Langdon, and after an attempt to blackmail Florence, now Livingston's wife, sends her to Claire to learn the facts herself. Claire denies that she is Florence's mother, although her heart breaks. That night the house is raided. Florence is found there, and, as she has no explanation to offer, Livingston takes action for a divorce. But at the trial Claire appears and tells her whole pitiful story and, incidentally, roundly accuses "man-made" laws. Florence and Livingston are reunited.

" Hey, There "

(Rolin-Pathe—One Reel)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

LIFE in a motion picture studio has often been burlesqued in pictures, but Harold Lloyd in his "Hey There" is by no means conventional or tiresome in his version of it. The reel is crowded with laughs, and includes a number of original gags, so neatly executed that they are uproarious in effect. Lloyd is the admirer of the ingenue (Bebe Daniels), and follows her into the studio, subsequently getting himself into all sorts of messes and upsetting the studio routine completely. Snubs Pollard as a director, with broad-brimmed hat, short puttees and overalls, is a ridiculously funny sight as usual.

" A Romance of the Underworld "

(Frank A. Keeney—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

A FAITHFUL presentation of the underworld of New York City is given in this feature which marks Frank A. Keeney's debut into the ranks of producers. The atmosphere of the seamy side of the city's life has been realistically communicated to the screen forming the perfect background for the story. Many of the shots were taken in the streets of the lower east side; portions of Chinatown and a view of the Tombs Prison with its Bridge of Sighs have been caught by the camera. The interior settings were constructed with care. Dance hall scenes, the dreaded parlors of opium dens, are presented in detail.

Catherine Calvert, Mr. Keeney's star, plays the role of the girl fresh from the convent who is plunged into the ruthless life of the underworld. Miss Calvert plays with a fine show of feeling and with her loveliness of face and her natural presence creates a strong feeling of sympathy for the character. Her support includes a number of big names and correspondingly worthy performances. David Powell as Richard Elliott, the heroine's brother, presents a fine characterization of the heroine's weak brother. Sybil Carmen, from Mr. Ziegfeld's roof, is an attractive figure as the girl of the slums who is forced to pay the price of her misplaced confidence. Cecil Chichester is a terribly realistic Dopey Benny. Eugene O'Brien, cast as hero, was quite neglected by scenario writer and director. He has little to do in the working out of the plot and while he is the hero, inasmuch as he marries the heroine, the love interest is poorly developed.

The development of "The Romance of the Underworld" as a plot is only fair. There seems to be too much detail in a number of places, a number of scenes might be cut down, particularly some closeups of Miss Calvert, while the closeup in other respects has not been used judiciously. The camera work is not up to standard. The placement of the machine is often bad and the photography does not possess good definition.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Doris Elliott (Catherine Calvert), fresh from her studies in a convent, joins her brother, Richard (David Powell), an habitue of the underworld. He is the tool of Michael O'Leary (Edwin Forsberg) trafficker in drugs. Doris is only acquainted with her brother's trade when a young reform lawyer, Thomas McDonald (Eugene O'Brien), starts an investigation. Mamie Bronson (Sybil Carmen) is lured to an opium den by O'Leary and shortly afterwards no more is heard of her. The villain then turns his attentions towards Doris, and breaks into her room. Richard, warned of the plan by Dopey Benny (Cecil Chichester), who loved Mamie, hastens to his home. In the dark a fight takes place, a shot is fired and when the scene is revealed O'Leary lies dead. Doris, believing her brother committed the murder, takes the blame. In court she is defended by McDonald. The case looks black against her until at the eleventh hour Dopey Benny enters and confesses that he fired the shot that killed O'Leary from an areaway. Shortly afterwards he dies. McDonald then takes Doris from the awful underworld and makes her his wife.

" Lost on Dress Parade "

(O. Henry-General—Two Reels)

Reviewed by F. G. Spencer

THIS Broadway Star feature, in which Patsy De Forrest and Evart Overton are cast in the principal roles—Marion and Towers Chandler, respectively—is a neat reflection of one of the best of O. Henry's short stories, in which all the charm and all the grace are not only retained, but somewhat amplified.

The rich girl, posing as a person in rather mean circumstances, and the bombastic, underpaid clerk, bragging of his yachts and polo ponies and other luxuries, viewing engravings, of which has been the extent of his association therewith, are delightfully portrayed, the earnestness and sweetness of Patsy's demeanor under the somewhat trying circumstances being most convincing.

The sites selected for the display of this double-reel comedy drama are good and the photography is all that could be desired.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Towers Chandler, employed in an architect's office, saved from his meagre salary the munificent sum of one dollar weekly, and once in every ten weeks he dons his glad rags and does Broadway. On one of these occasions he encounters a girl, apparently a respectable shop girl, who has just had a fall. He helps her up and invites her to dinner, during which he talks of his yachts, polo ponies, etc., but she gently chides him for not having a worthy purpose in life. Miss Marion, as he is instructed to address her, is in reality the daughter of wealthy parents residing on Fifth avenue, and her escapade of "doing the town" alone garbed in her maid's dresses is overlooked. Her father, however, is having a country mansion erected, and our hero's firm has the preparation of the plans in hand. When Towers Chandler, therefore, appears at the Fifth avenue house with the plans and meets the girl he encountered a few evenings before he is dumfounded. Marion, however, realizes that he has a purpose in life, and overlooks his romancing over the dinner table.

This is scheduled for release April 6.

"Ruler of the Road"

(Pathe Play—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

"RULER OF THE ROAD" is Frank Keenan's own picture—his character study. There are mighty few actors on the screen able to hold five reels of characterization with little action and no love interest to speak of. Mr. Keenan is one of the few. His portrayal of Simeon Tetlow, railroad president, driver of men, who finally breaks down under the strain of his exorbitant supply of energy is a powerful and effective piece of acting from first to last. In this characterization is the drama of "Ruler of the Road." There is small amount in the action surrounding it. Lesser actors would have suffered sadly as a result. Mr. Keenan's personality, his wonderful power of facial expression prevents any disaster to either himself or the production. It holds the attention steadfast throughout its entire length.

The picture is an adaptation from a novel by Jeanette Lee, entitled "Simeon Tetlow's Shadow." It is purely and simply the story of a driver of men, relentless and heartless who after a physical and mental breakdown, learns that other men have hearts and that he still has a piece of one fully capable of expanding under proper treatment. The strength of Mr. Keenan's study was relied upon by the producers to bring out the full significance of the moral. Explanations would have been superfluous. The performance speaks for itself.

Gilson Willetts made the adaptation and Ernest C. Warde directed. The work of each deserves nothing but hearty commendation. Frank Sheridan gives a very good performance as the old engineer while Kathryn Lean, Thomas Jackson, Ned Burton and John Charles complete the cast.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Simeon Tetlow (Frank Keenan), president of the Stillwater Railroad, drives his men unmercifully. Tomlinson (Frank Sheridan), an old engineer, making an extra run, sleeps at the throttle and a slight collision results. He is discharged. When he threatens to call a strike, Tetlow tells the men that Tomlinson has violated the first law of the engineer—sleeping on duty. The old man is thus put in disgrace with his fellow men. He curses Tetlow. Unable to find work, things begin to go hard for him, his wife and granddaughter. Tetlow begins to feel the results of his too strenuous labors. He provides Tomlinson with a home free, keeping the engineer from learning the identity of the donor. Shortly afterwards he breaks down. Nixon (Ned Burton), president of a rival railroad, makes capital of Tetlow's illness to pound the Stillwater stock down. When Tetlow hears of it he realizes the only way to save the day for his company and the stockholders is to appear in public that very night. This he does, though terribly weak and hardly able to stand the strain. Afterwards Tetlow retires to regain his health on his farm, adjoining the home he has given Tomlinson.. The little granddaughter is responsible for bringing the two men together again and in awakening in Tetlow a realization of the human qualities in his fellow men.

"The Business of Life"

(Vitagraph—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Joseph L. Kelley

ROBERT W. CHAMBERS comes to the front once more with one of his characteristic settings for the silent drama, "The Business of Life," produced by Vitagraph under the direction of Tom Terriss, with Alice Joyce in the featured role. Mr. Terriss has presented Mr. Chambers' ideas in a most able manner. The photography is clear and the lighting given by the technical man reflects credit on his ability to handle the Cooper-Hewitts. The supporting cast working with Miss Joyce renders capable assistance. The plot reveals clean, entertaining fiction and runs true to Chambers' style in exposing romantic fiction. "The Business of Life" holds pretty closely to the natural order of things and contains less of the fictional imagination of this writer. This fact assists greatly the value of the story as a subject for adaptation to the screen.

Miss Joyce makes an ideal heroine for this work of Chambers'. The story gives her every opportunity to appear at her best, and she takes advantage of every situation offered. Director Terriss has presented her in a number of close-ups, and this is to be commended when Miss Joyce is the subject, for she is most susceptible to this emphatic way of the camera in registering for the screen.

The suspense has been kept in just the right degree throughout the exposition, and the incident which shows Miss Joyce concealed in the suit of armor gives a good sound tinge of heightened interest in following the plot of the story. Mr. Terriss has followed the author's suggestions for settings and backgrounds faithfully. In presenting the scene showing the collection of antiques, and especially the historic suit of armor, Director Terriss has left no stone unturned in visualizing Mr. Chambers' idea of the mental picture. Throughout the run is seen the work of careful, painstaking direction, for which Mr. Terriss and his assistants are to be complimented.

"The Business of Life" is a good picture, but not a world-beater. It affords sound entertainment without having left the impression that something is lacking to make the exposition of an idea or group of ideas complete.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Jacqueline Nevers (Alice Joyce) carries on the business of her deceased father, who was an antique dealer. James Desboro (Walter McGrail), man about town and who dabbles in antiques, calls to see Miss Nevers concerning the disposition of his collection of ancient armor suits. Jacqueline goes daily to the Desboro home to catalog the collection, and after frequent meetings with Desboro the two become close friends. Elena Clydesdale (Betty Blythe), wife of Harry Clydesdale (Percy Standing), is in love with Desboro She hears of Desboro's acquaintance with Jacqueline and determines that he shall never marry her.

Desboro gives a house party, to which Jacqueline is invited. Elena is present and during the evening it is suggested that the party draw lots, one girl being chosen who shall conceal herself and the one who finds her shall marry her. Jacqueline draws the number and she conceals herself in one of the ancient armor suits. She signals Desboro where she is and he finds her. Elena is enraged and threatens to tell Jacqueline that Desboro has had an affair with her, Elena. Jacqueline and Desboro are married, and Elena visits him the first night. Jacqueline surprises her husband and Elena together. Elena repents and confesses to Jacqueline that she was prompted to her action by jealousy. Elena is reconciled with her husband and Jacqueline and Desboro come to a better understanding.

"The Tiger Man"

(Artcraft—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

"THE TIGER MAN," William S. Hart's latest starring vehicle, was prepared for him by J. G. Hawks. This author has constructed a fine story for the foremost portrayer of Western roles. He is always skillful in the building of strong and dramatic situations. "The Tiger Man" has a number of them. Notably, the scene in which Hawk Parsons (Mr. Hart) promises to save the settlers from the Indians only on condition that the wife of their minister ride away with him. Mr. Hart by reason of his own ability makes significant the turning point in Hawk's career, when he comes to a realization of his own unworth as compared with the goodness of the woman he had thought to make his own. Such a situation has a prominent place in the majority of the Hart pictures. Its fine effect here is due both author and actor. The climax is well builded to and is deeply stirring. But Mr. Hawk's work as author and scenario writer is apparent in every little plot twist. His plot is smoothly jointed and possesses true polish.

Mr. Hart has shown intelligence and taste in the directing of "The Tiger Man." The desert scenes are well chosen and include some unusual shots of rock and crag that throw out the action in an almost bold relief. His acting is up to the highest standard he has ever set for himself. Jane Novak is this time the opposite lead. She makes an appealing figure of the woman who changes the tiger to a lamb and is always able to bring out the spiritual quality of the role. Robert Lawrence, Milton Ross and Charles F. French head the supporting cast.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Escaping from the sheriff's posse, Hawk Parsons (William S. Hart), encounters a band of settlers, lost and without water on the vast desert. The animal instinct in him is aroused by Ruth Ingram (Jane Novak), wife of a parson (Robert Lawrence), who lies unconscious, stricken with heat and fever. He volunteers to lead them from the desert. On the edge the little band is attacked by Indians. When all hope seems lost a band of cavalrymen and the sheriff's posse is sighted. Hawk agrees to allow the people to light a smudge to signal for help providing Ruth leaves with him. To save her friends she consents, and with her Hawk escapes to his lair. But there the virtue of Ruth soon becomes apparent, and Hawk is strangely moved. He seeks her husband, swears to him that he has not harmed the girl. Sunday night, when gamblers have planned to shoot up the Parson's church, Hawk promises to give himself up if the sheriff (Charles K. French) will protect the minister and his wife and lend them his patronage. And with the knowledge that the woman he loves will be cared for he goes behind the bars.

"Saucy Madeline"

(Paramount-Mack Sennett—Two Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

THERE is not the continuity of action in "Saucy Madeline" that one expects from even the knockabout comedy these days, but Ben Turpin and some typical Sennett gags make it well worth while. A bowling alley is utilized for the comedy stage, a man is frozen in a cake of ice and thawed out by fire, and there is an amateur theatrical performance, always the delight of the comedy producer. Turpin is supported by Polly Moran and Charles Lynn, while Richard Jones directed in collaboration with Hampton Del Ruth.

ASK ANY EXHIBITOR WHO HAS PLAYED
JESTER
(SUPER)
COMEDIES
(The Kind the Public Likes)
FEATURING
TWEDE-DAN
The International Mirth Maker

and if he does not say that they are the best ever—then we have missed our guess.

ALL TWO PARTS—RELEASED MONTHLY

"The Recruit" "All 'Fur' Her"
"His Golden Romance" "The Wrong Flat"

Booked on the "SHOW YOU" policy through the following Exchanges:

For State of New York and Northern New Jersey—Photo Drama Co. (Ben Title, rep.), 220 West 42d St., New York City, N. Y.
For Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey—Masterpiece Film Attractions, 1225 Vine St., Philadelphia, Pa.
For Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia—United Business Association of Pennsylvania, Inc., 224 Columbia Bldg., Cleveland, O.
For State of Michigan—State Film Co., 59 East Elizabeth St., Detroit, Michigan.
For Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin—Unity Photoplays Co., 207 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.
For Minneapolis, Minn.—Standard Film Exchange.
For Omaha, Neb.—Standard Film Ex.
For St. Louis, Mo.—Standard Film Ex.
For Kansas City, Mo.—Standard Film Ex.
For Colorado, New Mexico, Wyoming, Utah and Southern Idaho—Swanson & Nolan Supply Co., Denver, Colo.
For California, Nevada, Arizona and Hawaiian Islands—Western F. F. Co., 180 Golden Gate Ave., San Francisco, Cal.
For South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, and Tennessee—R. M. Savini, 63 Walton St., Atlanta, Ga.
For North Carolina, Eltabran Film Co. Charlotte, North Carolina.
For Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas—Foursquare Pictures, Inc., 1911½ Commerce St., Dallas, Tex.
For Louisiana and Mississippi—Foursquare Pictures, Inc., New Orleans, La.
For the New England States—R. D Marson Attraction Co., 26 Piedmont St., Boston, Mass.

Foreign Rep's: ARROW FILM CORP., Times Bldg., New York

A few territories still open. Call or write for terms.

JESTER COMEDY CO.
220 W. 42nd Street, New York
Telephone Bryant 7691

"Playing the Game"

(Paramount-Ince—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

"PLAYING THE GAME" presents Charles Ray as the prodigal son who reforms. He heads for his Western ranch, arrives there incognito and works from the bottom up in company with his valet. After due developments, including the love interest, the villain interest, etc., he is revealed as his true self. It was written for Mr. Ray by Julien Josephson, and makes a picture of good entertainment value, nothing extraordinary, but a picture from which no one is likely to go away disappointed. The comedy vein is well developed, with Billy Elmer the main foil. There are some fine Western shots, and the thrills include Ray's riding a bucking broncho and his rescue of the heroine from a bold highwayman who gallops away with her.

Victor Schertzinger has given the picture a fine production. The scenes of the high life in the city are lavishly put on and the Western stuff is typical. Chester Lyons photographed. Doris Lee is again Mr. Ray's leading lady. "Cute" is just the word for her. Harry Rattenberry, Robert McKim, Charles Perley and a lady by the name of Lillian Lorraine complete the cast.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Larry Prentiss (Charles Ray) gets in a fight with Trent (Charles Perley), a cabaret dancer, and believes he has killed him. With his valet, Hodges (Billy Elmer), he sets out for his ranch in Arizona. At the station he receives a wire from his uncle that the dancer was only stunned. But he decides to explore a little of the West. The two set out for the Prentiss ranch, but are robbed and left stranded by Mexicans half way to their destination. Looking like hoboes, they arrive at the ranch and are given the choice of going to work or being sent back to town on foot. Hodges attempts to acquaint the ranch boss (Harry Rattenberry) of Larry's identity, but his master silences him. So Larry becomes a cowboy, and after a month's time wins the admiration and love of Moya Shannon (Doris Lee), the boss's daughter. "Flash" Purdy (Robert McKim), ranch foreman, conspires with Mexicans to rob the payroll. The Mexicans attack Shannon, Moya and Larry as they are driving home from the village with it. Larry proves the hero and saves the money. Back at the ranch Purdy tries to incriminate Larry, and the two men fight. As the encounter wages Shannon receives word from the East that his cub cowboy is none other than his employer, and when Larry comes out victor in the fight there is a happy ending.

"The Purple Lily"

(World Film—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

KITTY GORDON'S latest feature, "The Purple Lily," is an obvious example of the film editor's power to make or break. Here he has broken. Whatever merits Archer McMackin's original story possessed, whatever the skill of the director of his players, are quantities absolutely indefinable now. A glance at the synopsis in the press sheet indicates a plot in some respects totally different from that presented in the picture. In the synopsis Marie, the Purple Lily, lives with her "loving husband" in the far North, in the picture by grace of the editor the same man is designated as the father. So scenes enacted as loves scenes are passed off for shows of paternal and daughterly affection by the subtitles. It can easily be surmised that acting, be it ever so cold, can never stand such liberties. And when it is considered that this is only the beginning, only one of many like changes, it can be seen that "The Purple Lily" merits no serious comment.

George Kelson, who directed, took his company to the Adirondacks, and there secured some pretty snow scenes. An attempt to introduce the atmosphere of the wilderness of the Canadian North has, however, failed. Playful huskies are poor substitutes for wolves. Miss Gordon appears under difficulties, as do the supporting players. There are two good performances rendered by Frank Mayo and Clay Clement that are wasted. Muriel Ostriche, mentioned on the billing next Miss Gordon, has only two or three scenes. Charles Welsley's good presence is made mysterious by the subtitles which contradict his actions. Lewis Ostland and Lucian Tainguy were the photographers.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Marie Burguet (Kitty Gordon), known as the wife of Farnsworth (Clay Clement), is a woman who lives by her wits. James Caldwell (Frank Mayo), a young girl and ambitious surveyor, is sent to northern Canada to make a survey of the land for a large traction company. A rival company headed by Bradley (Charles Welsley) commissions Marie to follow him and steal the survey after it is completed. This she accomplishes, later turning the plan over to Farnsworth, who receives a substantial check from Bradley. He double crosses Marie, however, and gives her none of the money. Caldwell's failure has led him to drink. He encounters Marie and Farnsworth in a cheap cafe, and fights the man. In the midst of it the president of the traction company employing Caldwell enters and announces to him that Bradley has been arrested and the survey returned.

(Continued on page 2583)

Releases in the Independent Field

For Manufacturers' Addresses, Names and Addresses of Buyers handling films in any territory, or any other additional information write—State Rights Department, Motion Picture News

Arrow Film Corporation

The Deemster.
Eyes of the World.
Ramona.
Weavers of Life.
Souls Redeemed.
Persuasive Peggy.
Today.
The Mad Lover.
The Woman's Law.
Right Off the Bat.
The Struggle Everlasting.

Big Productions Film Corp.

VICTORIA FEATURE FILMS

The Sunset Princess (Marjorie Daw).

Bluebird Extraordinary

The Eagle's Wings (Herbert Rawlinson).
Hell Morgan's Girl (Dorothy Phillips).
Mother o' Mine (Rupert Julian, Ruth Clifford, Ruby La Fayette).

Jules Burnstein

Shame	7 parts

Century Comedies

(FEATURING ALICE HOWELL)

Balloonatics	2 reels
Automaniacs	2 reels
Neptune's Naughty Daughter	2 reels

Christie Film Company

One Reel Comedy Issued Weekly

Love and Locksmiths.
Hearts and Clubs.
Almost a Bigamist.
More Haste Less Speed.
Betty Wakes Up.
Stepping Out.
Almost Divorced.
Help! Help! Police!
Their Seaside Tangle.
One Good Turn.
Thirty Days.
Nearly a Papa.
Cupid's Camouflage.
Five to Five.
Many a Slip.
The Night of His Life.
Mum's the Word.
Circumstantial Evidence.
In the Dark.
Whose Wife?
The House that Jack Built.

Cinema Distributing Corp.

The 13th Labor of Hercules.

Clune Productions

Ramona	8 reels
Eyes of the World	9 reels

Commonwealth Pictures Corp.

Charlotte, in The Frozen Warning.

Coronet Film Corporation

LIVING STUDIES IN NATURAL HISTORY

Animal World, No. 1 Issue.
Animal World, No. 2 Issue
Birdland Studies.
Horticultural Phenomena.

Cosmofotofilm Company

Incomparable Mistress Bellairs	4 reels
Liberty Hall	4 reels
The Black Spot	4 reels
Victoria Cross	4 reels
His Vindication	5 reels
I Believe	7 reels

Doll Van Film Corp. (Chicago)

The Cold Deck.
To-Day.
The Mad Lover.
Public Defender.
Carmen of the Klondike.

M. S. Epstin

Raymond L. Ditmars' "The Depths of the Sea," in a series of four parts.

Export and Import Film Co.

Feb. 18. Birth of Democracy.
Mar. 4. Why the Bolsheviki?

The Fordart Films, Inc.

(Francis Ford Productions Co.)

Berlin via America.

Foursquare Pictures

The Sin Woman (Irene Fenwick, Clifford Bruce, Reine Davies).
The Bar Sinister (Edgar Lewis's production).
Her Fighting Chance (Jane Grey).
Madame Sherry (Gertrude McCoy).
The Silent Witness (Gertrude McCoy).
The Great White Trail (Doris Kenyon).
One Hour (Zena Keefe and Alan Hale).
A Trip Through China.
The Fringe of Society (Milton Sills, Ruth Roland).
The Eagle's Eye (Serial) (Marguerite Snow and King Baggot).
The Cast-Off (Bessie Barriscale).

Fort Pitt Corporation

The Italian Battlefront.

Frohman Amusement Corp.

The Witching Hour (C. Aubrey Smith, Jack Sherrill, Helen Arnold, Marie Shotwell and Robert Conness	6 reels
Conquest of Canaan	5 reels
God's Man	9 reels
My Own United States.

General Enterprises, Inc.

Mother (Elizabeth Risdon, McClure)	6 parts
The Warrior (Maciste) (McClure)	7 parts
The Liar (Jane Gail, Stanley Walpole)	6 parts

Golden Features

A Bit of Life	1 reel

Jesse J. Goldburg

"Outing-Chester Pictures"
(To be issued one a week)

Apr. 22. Kaieteur, the Perfect Cataract.
Apr. 29. An Ex-Cannibal Carnival.
May 6. A Mountaineering Memory.
May 13. A Coorial on the Orinoco.
May 20. Pines Up and Palms Down.
May 27. A Jungle Joy Ride.
June 3. Zuni Kicking Race.
June 10. Two Dutch Islets of the West.
June 17. Pin Feather Pickaninnies.
June 24. A Tropic Melting Pot.

SCRANTONIA PHOTOPLAY CORP.

Apr. 22. The Chinese Musketeer.
Apr. 29. Feet and Defeat.
May 6. Cheerful Liars.
May 13. Fate and Fortune.
May 20. Parson Pepp.
May 27. The Ring and the Ringer.

RIALTO FILM CORPORATION

Apr. 15. My Husband's Friend.

Graphic Features

Apr. 1. Moral Suicide.

D. W. Griffith

Intolerance	9 reels

Hiller & Wilk, Inc.

The Battle of Gettysburg	— reels
The Wrath of the Gods (Sessue Hayakawa)	5 reels

Historic Features

Christus	8 reels

M. H. Hoffman, Inc.

One Hour (Zeena Keefe and Alan Hale)	6 reels
The Silent Witness (Gertrude McCoy)	6 reels
A Trip Through China (Brodsky's Art Pictures)	8 reels
Her Fighting Chance (Jane Grey)	6 reels
Should She Obey? (Alice Wilson, Gene Genung and Norbert Myles)	6 reels
Whither Thou Goest (Rhea Mitchell and Orrin Johnson)	5 reels
The Great White Trail (Doris Kenyon)	6 reels

Ivan Feature Productions

One Law for Both (Rita Jolivet, Vincent Serrano, Leah Baird, Pedro De Cordoba, James Morrison)	7 reels
Babbling Tongues (Grace Valentine, James Morrison, Arthur Donaldson)	7 reels
Married in Name Only (Gretchen Hartman, Milton Sills, Marie Shotwell)	6 reels
Sins of Ambition (Barbara Castleton, Wilfred Lucas, Leah Baird, James Morrison)	7 reels
Human Clay (Mollie King)	5 reels
Life or Honor (Leah Baird, James Morrison, Violet Palmer, Edward Mackey)	6,500 ft.

Jester Comedies

Feb. —. The Recruit (Twede Dan)	2 parts
Mar. —. His Golden Romance (Twede Dan)	2 parts
April —. All "Fur" Her (Twede Dan)	2 parts
May —. The Wrong Flat (Twede Dan)	2 parts

Marine Film Co.

Lorelei of the Sea	— reels

Masterpiece Drama Productions

Who's Your Neighbor?	—

Popular Picture Corporation

Corruption	6 reels

Renowned Pictures Corporation

The Public Defender	6 reels
Naked Hands	5 reels
Mother Love and the Law	7 reels
In Treason's Grasp	5 reels
Should She Obey?	7 reels

Frank J. Seng

Parentage	7 reels

State Rights Distributors, Inc.

Carmen of the Klondyke (Clara Williams).

Sterling Pictures Corporation

The Mystic Hour (Alma Hanlon feature)	6 parts
When You and I Were Young (Alma Hanlon feature)	5 parts
The Golden God (Alma Hanlon feature)	5 parts
She Was a Dangerous Girl (Cartoon comedy)	500 ft.
Zippy the Fireman (Cartoon comedy)	500 ft.
Zippy in a Sanatorium (Cartoon comedy)	500 ft.
Zippy Buys a Pet Pup (Cartoon comedy)	500 ft.
Slick and Tricky (Cartoon comedy)	500 ft.
Doctor Bunny's Zoo (Cartoon comedy)	500 ft.
The Old Forty-Niner (Cartoon comedy)	500 ft.
Mr. Coon (Cartoon comedy)	500 ft.
Mose Is Cured (Cartoon comedy)	500 ft.
Zippy's Insurance (Cartoon comedy)	500 ft.
Zippy's Pets (Cartoon comedy)	500 ft.
The Unknown (Cartoon comedy)	500 ft.

Moe Streimer

A Daughter of the Don	10 reels

Submarine Film Corporation

The Submarine Eye	7 reels

U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corp.

Just a Woman (Charlotte Walker).

W. H. Productions Co.

William S. Hart as Two Gun Man in "The Bargain"	6 reels
William S. Hart in "The Bandit and the Preacher"	5 reels
William S. Hart in "The Hell Hound of Alaska"	5 reels

Also Series of two-reel W. H. Hart productions.
Satan's Pawn (Bessie Barriscale).

Western Import Co.

Mickey (Mabel Normand).

Wholesome Films Corporation

The Penny Philanthropist (Peggy O'Neil and Ralph Morgan), D.	5
Cinderella and the Magic Slipper (Special Children's Cast), Juv.	4

His Awful Downfall (Rex Adams), 1,000 feet, C.
Little Red Riding Hood (Juvenile), 4,000 feet.

World Pictures

Over Here	5 reels

Features---Current and Coming

Bluebird Photoplays

Mar. 25.	The Wine Girl (Carmel Myers)	5
Apr. 1.	Fast Company (Franklin Farnum)	5
Apr. 8.	The Red, Red Heart (Monroe Salisbury)	5
Apr. 15.	A Rich Man's Darling (Louise Lovely)	5
Apr. 22.	The Marriage Lie (Carmel Myers)	5
Apr. 29.	A Mother's Secret (Ella/ Hall)	5
May 6.	Danger Within (Little Zoe Rae)	5
May 13.	Title not decided	5

Universal Productions

Apr. 1.	The Magic Eye (Little Zoe Rae)	5
Apr 8	Her Fling (Special Attraction) (Dorothy Phillips)	5
Apr. 15.	No Release
Apr. 22.	The Scarlet Drop (Special Attraction) (Harry Carey, Mollie Malone)	5
Apr. 29.	No Release
May 6.	The Two-Soul Woman (Special Attraction) (Priscilla Dean)	5

Famous Players-Lasky Corp.

(Successors to Paramount Pictures Corp.)

PARAMOUNT PICTURES

Mar. 25.	LaTosca (Pauline Frederick)	5
Mar. 25.	"Naughty, Naughty!" (Enid Bennett)	5
Apr. 1.	Honor of His House (Sessue Hayakawa)
Apr. 8.	His Majesty, Bunker Bean (Jack Pickford)
Apr. 8.	The House of Silence (Wallace Reid)
Apr. 15.	Rich Man, Poor Man (Marguerite Clark)
Apr. 15.	Unclaimed Goods (Vivian Martin)
Apr. 22.	Playing the Game (Charles Ray)
Apr. 29.	Let's Get a Divorce (Billie Burke)
Apr. 29.	Tyrant Fear (Dorothy Dalton)

ARTCRAFT PICTURES

Mar. 11.	Amarilly of Clothes-Line Alley (Mary Pickford)
Mar. 25.	De Mille's "The Whispering Chorus"
Mar. 31.	Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird"
Apr. 1.	The Tiger Man (Wm. S. Hart)
Apr. 8.	The Lie (Elsie Ferguson)
Apr. 22.	Mr. Fix-It (Doug Fairbanks)

First National Exhibitors' Circuit, Inc.

	On Trial.
	Charles Chaplin.
	Daughter of Destiny (Mme. Petrova).
	Herbert Brenon's "Empty Pockets."
	The Sign Invisible (Big Mitch Lewis).
	The Fall of the Romanoffs.
	Tarzan of the Apes.
Dec. 23.	The Daughter of Destiny (Mme. Petrova)	7
Feb. 1.	The Light Within (Mme. Petrova)	7
Mar. 18.	The Life Mask (Mme. Petrova)	7
Apr. —.	Tempered Steel (Mme. Petrova)	7

Fox Film Corporation

(Special Features)

Mar. 24.	A Daughter of France (Virginia Pearson)	5
Mar. 31.	A Camouflage Kiss (June Caprice)	5
Apr. 7.	The Bride of Fear (Jewel Carmen)	5
Apr. 14.	Western Blood (Tom Mix)	5
Apr. 21.	American Buds (Jane and Katherine Lee)	5
Apr. 28.	Her One Mistake (Gladys Brockwell)	5

Fox Standard Pictures

Feb. 3.	The Forbidden Path (Theda Bara)	6
Feb. 10.	Les Miserables (Wm. Farnum)	9
Mar. 17.	Woman and the Law	7
Mar. 24.	Rough and Ready (Wm. Farnum)	6
Apr. 7.	The Blindness of Divorce	7

Goldwyn Features Corp.

Feb. 10.	Our Little Wife (Madge Kennedy)	6
Feb. 24.	The Beloved Traitor (Mae Marsh)	6
Mar. 10.	The Floor Below (Mabel Normand)	6
Mar. 24.	The Splendid Sinner (Mary Garden)	6
Apr. 7.	The Danger Game (Madge Kennedy)	6
Apr. 21.	The Face in the Dark (Mae Marsh)	6
May 5.	Joan of Plattsburg (Mabel Normand)	6

GOLDWYN SPECIALS

The Manx-Man	7
For the Freedom of the World	7

W. W. Hodkinson Corporation

(Paralta Plays)

Dec. 1.	"A Man's Man" (J. Warren Kerrigan)	7
Dec. 15.	"Madam Who" (Bessie Barriscale)	7
Jan. 15.	"His Robe of Honor" (Henry B. Walthall)	7
Feb. 15.	"The Turn of a Card" (J. Warren Kerrigan)	7
Mar. 1.	"Within the Cup" (Bessie Barriscale)	7
Mar. 15.	"Humdrum Brown" (Henry B. Walthall)	5
Apr. 1.	"An Alien Enemy" (Louise Glaum) Substituted for Kerrigan release)	5
Apr. 15.	"Blindfolded" (Bessie Barriscale)	5
Apr. 29.	"With Hoops of Steel" (Henry B. Walthall)	—
May 13.	"The Snapdragon" (Louise Glaum)	—
May 27.	"Rose O' Paradise" (Bessie Barriscale)	—

Jewel Productions, Inc.

Sept. —	Come Through (Drama)	—
Sept. —	Pay Me (Drama)	—
Sept. —	Sirens of the Sea (Drama)	—
Oct. —	Man Without a Country (Patriotic).	—
Oct. —	The Corespondent (Drama)	—
Nov. —	The Price of a Good Time (Drama)	—
Dec. —	The Grand Passion (Drama)	—
Dec. —	K (Drama).	—

Perfection Pictures

(GEORGE KLEINE SYSTEM)

Feb. 25.	Ruggles of Red Gap (Essanay)	—
Feb. 11.	The Unbeliever (Edison)
Apr. 7.	A Pair of Sixes (Essanay)	—
	Curse of Iku (Essanay)	—

Metro Pictures Corporation

Mar. 4.	The Shell Game (Emmy Wehlen) Metro	5
Mar. 11.	The Brass Check (Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne)	5
Mar. 18.	The Claim (Edith Storey) Metro Rolfe	5
Mar. 25.	Breakers Ahead (Viola Dana), Metro-Rolfe	5
Apr. 1.	The Landloper (Harold Lockwood) Metro-Yorke	5
Apr. 8.	Social Hypocrites (May Allison)	5
Apr. 15.	With Neatness and Dispatch (Bushman and Bayne)	5
Apr. 22.	Treasure of the Sea (Edith Storey).	5
Apr. 29.	The Trail to Yesterday (Bert Lytell)	5

(METRO SPECIALS)

Blue Jeans (Voila Dana), Metro-Rolfe	7
The Legion of Death (Edith Storey), Metro-Rolfe	7
Revelation (Nazimova), Metro	7
The Slacker (Emily Stevens)	7
Draft 258 (Mabel Taliaferro)	7

Mutual Film Corporation

Mar. 4.	Powers That Prey (Mary Miles Minter) American	5
Mar. 11.	Ann's Finish (Margarita Fischer) American	5
Mar. 18.	The Girl and the Judge (Olive Tell), Frohman	5
Mar. 25.	No Release
Apr. 1.	A Bit of Jade (Mary Miles Minter) American	5
Apr. 8.	The Richest Girl (Ann Murdock) Frohman	5
Apr. 15.	The Primitive Woman (Margarita Fischer) American	5
Apr. 22.	(Title to be announced later), Mutual-Star Production	5
Apr. 29.	Hearts or Diamonds (Wm. Russell).	5

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Apr. 7.	Twenty-One (Bryant Washburn) Pathe	5
Apr. 14.	The Busy Inn (N. I. Panoff, Mme. Nadya Lesienko Mme. Orlova, N. A. Backsheef) Russian Art	5
Apr. 21.	Ruler of the Road (Frank Keenan, Kathryn Lean, Ned Burton, John Charles) Pathe	5
Apr. 28.	Dolly Does Her Bit (Baby Marie Osborne, Alice Saunders, Louis Hahn, Georgia Woodthorpe).

Select Pictures

Dec. —	Shirley Kake (Clara Kimball Young).	5
Dec. —	The Honeymoon (Constance Talmadge).	5
Jan. —	Woman and Wife (Alice Brady)	5
Jan. —	Ghosts of Yesterday (Norma Talmadge)	6
Jan. —	The Marionettes (Clara Kimball Young)	5
Jan. —	The Studio Girl (Constance Talmadge)	5
Mar. —.	By Right of Purchase (Norma Talmadge)	6
Mar. —.	The Shuttle (Constance Talmadge).	5
Mar. —.	The House of Glass (Clara Kimball Young)	5
Mar. —.	The Knife (Alice Brady)	5

SPECIAL RELEASES

Over There (Chas. Richman, Anna Q. Nilsson)	6
The Lone Wolf (Bert Lytell, Hazel Dawn)	5
The Barrier (Rex Beach Production)	7
The Wild Girl (Eva Tanguay)	5

Triangle Distributing Corporation

Mar. 24.	Nancy Comes Home (Myrtle Lind).	5
Mar. 24.	Innocent's Progress (Pauline Starke)	5
Mar. 31.	Unfaithful (D. Dalton) 2 reels, and The Marriage Bubble (Wm. Desmond), (Split Feature)	3
Mar. 31.	The Love Brokers (Alma Rubens)	5
Apr. 7.	The Vortex (Mary Warren)	5
Apr. 7.	The Boss of the Lazy "Y" (Roy Stewart)	5
Apr. 14.	The Law of the Great Northwest (Margery Wilson)	5
Apr. 14.	Who Killed Walton? (J. Barney Sherry)	5
Apr. 21.	The Hand at the Window (Margery Wilson)	5
Apr. 21.	Society For Sale (Wm. Desmond)	5

Vitagraph V-L-S-E.

Mar. 18.	An American Live Wire (Earle Williams, Grace Darmond)	5
Mar. 25	The Home Trail (Nell Shipman, Alfred Whitman)	5
Apr. 1.	Little Miss No-Account (Gladys Leslie	5
Apr. 8.	The Business of Life (Alice Joyce)	5
Apr. 15.	The Girl from Beyond (Nell Shipman, Alfred Whitman)	5
Apr. 22.	A Bachelor's Children (Harry Morey, Florence Deshon)	5
Apr. 29.	The Seal of Silence (Earle Williams, Grace Darmond)	5

World Pictures

Apr. 1.	The Cross Bearer (Montagu Love)	7
Apr. 8.	The Witch Woman (Ethel Clayton).	5
Apr. 15.	The Trap (Alice Brady)	5
Apr. 22.	The Purple Lily (Kitty Gordon)	5
Apr. 29.	Leap to Fame (Carlyle Blackwell, Evelyn Greeley)	5
May 6.	Masks and Faces (Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson)	6

Short Subjects Current and Coming

Educational Film Corp. of Amer.

SCENICS—EDUCATIONAL

Jan. 2. A World of Dreams.......... 800 ft.
Jan. 9. A Trip Through Japan, No. 3.. 900 ft.
Jan. 16. The Hound of the Hills....... 700 ft.
Jan. 23. Making of an American Officer.1,000 ft.
Jan. 30. Just for Joy.................. 900 ft.
Feb. 6. The Trail to the Sky........... 700 ft.
Feb. 13. The Ridge Roamers........... 800 ft.
Feb. 20. A Mountain Observatory......1,000 ft.
Feb. 27. The Forbidden Isle........... 900 ft.
Mar. 6. From Here to Summerland.... 800 ft.
Mar. 13. Strange Fishermen of Russia.. 900 ft.
Mar. 20. Our Hawaiian Army..........1,000 ft.
Mar. 27. The Making of the Plotless Picture .... 700 ft.
Apr. 3. The Making of Russian Caviar. 850 ft.
Apr. 10. White Water and Windy Willie —Where the Clouds Come From ....1,000 ft.

DITMARS "LIVING BOOK OF NATURE"

Jan. 14. The Animals in Midsummer....500 ft.
Jan. 28. Life in the Insect World........500 ft.
Feb. 11. Turtles of All Lands............500 ft.
Feb. 25. Evolution ....500 ft.
Mar. 11. Animal Traits.....................500 ft.
Mar. 25. Adaptation ....500 ft.
Apr. 8. Night Animals ....500 ft.

CARTOONS

Apr. 22. Vanity and Vengeance (Katzenjammer Kids).................500 ft.
Apr. 29. Doing His Bit (Happy Hooligan) ....500 ft.
May 6. Der Two Twins (Katzenjammer Kids) ....500 ft.

BENJAMIN CHAPIN'S PARAMOUNT SERIES

The Son of Democracy.

Famous Players-Lasky Corp.

PARAMOUNT BRAY PICTOGRAPHS

Mar. 4. In the Moonshine Country; Stage Women's War Relief; Magic for Home Use; Cartoon: Pinkerton Pup's Portrait.
Mar. 11. War and the Motorcycle; Hawaii and Her Natives; Cartoon by Wallace Karlson.
Mar. 18. Rose Culture; Uncle Sam's Coin Factory; Physical Culture Terpsychore; Cartoon: Hornets of the Sea, by J. F. Leventhal.
Mar. 25. Lumbering for Wartime; Hawaiians and Their Strange Customs; Women in the World of Work (Interior Decorating); Cartoon: Bobby Bumps, by Earl Hurd.
Apr. 1. Training Women Sharpshooters; Our Bone Relations; A New Use for a Houseboat; Cartoon by — "Me and Gott" — Bray Studios.
Apr. 8. Grizzly Bear Pets; Uncle Sam's Stamp Factory; Cartoon by Wallace Karlson.
Apr. 15. Women in the World of Work; Hawaii, The Beautiful; Cartoon by Earl Hurd.
Apr. 22. Microscopic Revelations; Horse Training by Experts; Scientific Rose Culture; Cartoon by Bray Studios.
Apr. 29. Titles Unavailable.

PARAMOUNT BURTON HOLMES TRAVELOGUES

Mar. 4. On the Way to the Front with the Chinese Labor Corps.
Mar. 11. The Alaska Cruise.
Mar. 18. A Summer Day in Skaguay.
Mar. 25. Over the White Pass.
Apr. 1. Down the Yukon.
Apr. 8. In Happy Honolulu.
Apr. 15. Peerless Pineapples of the Pacific.
Apr. 22. High Spots of Hawaii.
Apr. 29. Our Filipino Fighting Force.

PARAMOUNT ARBUCKLE COMEDIES

Mar. 18. The Bell Boy.
Apr. —. No April Release Reported.

PARAMOUNT MACK SENNETT COMEDIES

Mar. 11. Sheriff Nell's Tussle.
Mar. 25. Those Athletic Girls.
Apr. 8. Friend Husband.
Apr. 22. Saucy Madeline.

PARAMOUNT FEATURE—"THE SON OF DEMOCRACY"

Mar. 4. My First Jury.
Mar. 11. Tender Memories.
Mar. 18. A President's Answer.
Mar. 25. Native State.
Apr. 1. Down the River.
Apr. 8. The Slave Auction.
Apr. 15. Under the Stars.

Fox Sunshine Comedies

Feb. 3. Hungry Lions in a Hospital........2 C
Feb. 17. Are Married Policemen Safe?......2 C
Mar. 3. Her Husband's Wife..............2 C
Mar. 17. A Selfmade Lady.................2 C
Apr. 7. A Waiter's Wasted Life...........2 C

MUTT AND JEFF ANIMATED CARTOONS

Mar. 24. The Decoy............................½ reel
Mar. 31. Back to the Balkans...............½ reel
Apr. 7. The Freight Investigation........½ reel
Apr. 14. The Leak.............................½ reel
Apr. 21. On Ice ....½ reel
Apr. 28. Helping McAdoo ....½ reel

General Film Company

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES
(O. HENRY STORIES)

Lost on Dress Parade (Patsy De Forrest, Evart Overton)..........................2 D
Nemesis and the Candy Man (Wm. Dunn, Miriam Miles)...........................2 D
The Rubaiyat of a Scotch Highball (Agnes Ayres, Edward Earle)................2 D
The Buyer from Cactus City (William Dunn, Miriam Miles) ....2 D

ESSANAY
GEORGE ADE FABLES
ESSANAY COMEDIES (1 reel)

The Soup and the Fish Ball................1 C
A Tough Knight...............................1 C
Our Little Nell.................................1 C
Check Your Hat, Sir.........................1 C
Wild Algy of Piccadilly......................1 C
All Stuck Up....................................1 C
The Lie That Failed...........................1 C
The Jazbo Sheriff..............................1 C

SNAKEVILLE COMEDIES
(One reel each)

Slippery Sam and the Green-Eyed Monster.
When Macbeth Came to Snakeville.
Slippery Slim and His Tombstone.
Slippery Slim and the Impersonator.
When Slippery Slim Met the Champion.
Snakeville's New Waitress.
Slippery Slim's Dilemma.

ESSANAY SCENICS

Water Powers of Western Canada.........1 Sc.
Through Canada from Coast to Coast......1 Sc.
How Canada and the Farmer Co-operate in Grain Raising ....1 Sc.
Agricultural Opportunities in Western Canada ....1 Sc.
Water Powers of Eastern Canada..........1 Sc.
A Romance of Rails and Power.............1 Sc.
Grand Canyon of Arizona and Canyon de Chelley ....1 Sc.

CHAPLIN COMEDIES

By the Sea.....................................1 C
In the Park.....................................1 C
Work ....2 C
A Woman ....2 C
The Tramp ....2 C
His New Job...................................2 C
A Night Off.....................................2 C

JAXON FILM CORP.
"A DAUGHTER OF UNCLE SAM" SERIAL (Jane Vance, Wm. Sorelle) 12 Episodes ....1 D

JAXON COMEDIES

The Unofficial Maneuver.....................1 C
What Occurred on the Beach................1 C
An All-Fools' Day Affair......................1 C
Beating Him to It...............................1 C
Forced Into Matrimony........................1 C

JUDGE BROWN STORIES

Thief or Angel................................2 C-D
The Accusing Toe.............................2 C-D
The Rebellion..................................2 C-D
A Boy Built City...............................2 C-D
I'm a Man.......................................2 C-D

SPARKLE COMEDIES

On the Love Line...............................1 C
The Detective ....1 C
Smashing the Plot..............................1 C
After the Matinee...............................1 C
Double Cross ....1 C
The Best of a Bad Bargain....................1 C

THREE C COMEDIES

Stealing a Sweetheart (Lou Marks, Pearl Shepard, Oom Paul)....................1 C
A Hash House Romance (Lou Marks, Pearl Shepard, Oom Paul)....................1 C
The Hod Carrier's Million (Claude Cooper, Virginia Tracy Clark, Kenneth Clarendon) ....1 C

HANOVER FILM COMPANY

Camille (Helen Hesperia)....................6 D
The Marvelous Maciste........................6 D

PHYSICAL CULTURE PHOTO PLAYS CO.

Physical Culture Magazine (Issued Monthly) ....1 Edc.

PIEDMONT PICTURES CORPORATION
(SELBURN COMEDIES)

Hubby's Holiday.............................2 C
Too Much Elephant..........................1 C
Wedding Bells and Lunatics...............1 C
His College Proxy...........................1 C

BLUE RIDGE DRAMAS
(Ned Finley)

The Return of O'Garry......................2 D
Mountain Law..................................2 D
The Raiders of Sunset Gap.................2 D

CLOVER COMEDIES

The Wooing of Coffee Cake Kate...........1 C
Rip Roaring Rivals............................1 C
He Couldn't Fool His Wife...................1 C
By Heck, I'll Save Her........................1 C
The Paper Hanger's Revenge...............1 C

EBONY COMEDIES

A Black Sherlock Holmes....................1 C
Spying the Spy.................................1 C
The Porters......................................1 C
A Milk Fed Hero................................1 C
Busted Romance................................1 C
Spooks ....1 C

EXPORT AND IMPORT FILM CO. (Inc.)

Why—The Bolsheviki.........................5 D

NOVELTY FILMS
(Cartoons, Novelties, Scenics)

ME, der Kaiser; Our Heroes; Strange Sights in the Pacific Islands.................. 1
Power, Pro and Con; England's Leaders on Land and Sea; Scenic.................. 1
The Girth of a Nation; 4 Famous Battles of the Civil War; Scenic.................. 1

DUPLEX FILMS, INC.

Shame (Zena Keefe)..........................7 D

Goldwyn Pictures Corp.
RANCHO SERIES

In the Shadow of the Rockies.............2 D

CAPITOL COMEDIES

Bill's Baby ....2 reels
Bill's Predicament ....2 reels

King Bee Comedies

Mar. 1. The Rogue........................2 reels
Mar. 15. The Orderly......................2 reels
Apr. 1. The Scholar........................2 reels
Apr. 15. The Messenger...................2 reels
May 1. The Handy Man....................2 reels

George Kleine System

MONTGOMERY FLAGG'S COMEDIES
"GIRLS YOU KNOW"

Jan. 2. Screen Fan.......................Edison
Jan. 16. The Bride........................Edison
Jan. 30. The Superstitious Girl..........Edison
Feb. 13. The Matinee Girl................Edison
Feb. 27. The Artist's Model..............Edison
Mar. 13. The Man Eater..................Edison
Mar. 27. The Stenog......................Edison
Apr. 10. The Art Bug......................Edison
Apr. 24. A Good Sport....................Edison

ESSANAY

Mar. 1. Broncho Billy's Leap.
Mar. 8. Broncho Billy and the Rattler.
Mar. 15. Broncho Billy's Close Call.
Mar. 22. Broncho Billy and the Settler's Daughter.
Mar. 29. Broncho Billy's Indian Romance.
Apr. 5. Broncho Billy, A Friend in Need.
Apr. 12. Broncho Billy's Wild Ride.
Apr. 19. Broncho Billy's First Arrest.
Apr. 26. Broncho Billy and the Rustler's Child.
May 3. Broncho Billy's Last Deed.

LINCOLN-PARKER WORLD TRAVELOGUE

Feb. 1. Panama Canal, Part 1.
Feb. 8. Panama Canal, Part 2.
Feb. 15. Colombia, Part 1.
Feb. 22. Colombia, Part 2.
Mar. 1. Peru, The Land of Incas, No. 1.
Mar. 8. Peru, The Land of Incas, No. 2.
Mar. 15. Peru, The Land of Incas, No. 3.
Mar. 22. Peru, The Land of Incas, No. 4.
Apr. 29. Puno and Scenes Around Lake Titicaca, Bolivia.

Metro Pictures Corporation

METRO-DREW COMEDIES

Mar. 18. Special Today.......................1 C
Mar. 25. When a Man's Married............1 C
Apr. 1. Gas Logic..............................1 C
Apr. 8. A Youthful Affair....................1 C

Mutual Film Corporation

STRAND (BILLIE RHODES)

Mar. 19. His Quaker Girl.................1 reel
Mar. 26. Up She Goes......................1 reel
Apr. 2. She Couldn't Grow Up..........1 reel
Apr. 9. For Art's Sake......................1 C
Apr. 16. Her Helping Hand..................1 C
Apr. 23. Mary's Frame-Up....................1 C
Apr. 30. Spotted ....1 C

SCREEN TELEGRAM

Issued Sunday and Wednesday of Each Weed

MUTUAL-CHAPLINS

Oct. 29. The Adventurer......................2 C

(Continued on next page)

Studios For Rent

Most conveniently located Studio in New York City—

318-320-322 East 48th Street.
Floor space—80 x 100.

Room for six good sized sets.

Carpenter shops equipped with latest machinery.

2000 Amperes gives any kind of light effects.

Will contract to furnish you your sets on a 10% basis, saving you your rent in lumber alone.

People can reach your Studio in four or five minutes. Props, on a minute's notice. No waits on account of location of Studio. A big money saver.

Rent by the week or month, also yearly leases.

Address ROLAND WEST
318 East 48th Street New York City

Unexcelled Film Laboratories and Studios

HIGH CLASS PRINTING, DEVELOPING TINTING AND TONING

STUDIOS For Rent by Week, Month or Yearly Leases

124 School Street Yonkers, N. Y.
Telephone: 4600 Yonkers

PHOTOPLAYLETS
MAKE YOUR LOCAL MERCHANTS GLAD TO USE
SCREEN ADVERTISING
Exclusive Territory—Wonderful Sample Outfits—Helpful Cooperation—Investigate
ROTHACKER FILM MFG. CO. 1339-51 Diversey Pkwy. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

GET YOUR RELEASE DATES IN EARLY

(Continued from preceding page)

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Sunday, April 28, 1918

Hey, There! (Harold Lloyd, Bebe Daniels Harry Pollard) Rolin....................1 C
His Busy Day (Toto, Clarine Seymour, Margaret Joslyn, Bud Jamison) Rolin.......2 C
Picturesque Wales—Llangollen and Picture Spots in England (Col. Travel)....Split reel

Wednesday, May 1, 1918

Hearst-Pathe News, No. 36...............1 top

Saturday, May 4, 1918

Hearst-Pathe News, No. 37...............1 top

SERIALS

"The House of Hate" (Astra)
Two reels each
(Pearl White, Antonio Moreno, Paul Clerget, John Webb Dillion, Peggy Shaner)

Apr. 7. Fifth Episode, Spies Within.
Apr. 14. Sixth Episode, A Living Target.
Apr. 21. Seventh Episode, The Germ Menace.
Apr. 28 Eighth Episode, The World Secret.

Triangle Distributing Corp.

TRIANGLE COMEDIES

Mar. 3. A Discord in A Flat...............1 C
Mar. 3. His Hidden Shame...............1 C
Mar. 10. Wives and Worries...............1 C
Mar. 10. She Didn't Do It...............1 C

KEYSTONE RELEASES

Apr. 7. First Aid (Maud Wayne).........2 C
Apr. 14. Mr. Briggs Closes the House (Edward Brady) ....2 C
Apr. 21. Their Neighbor's Baby (Fritzie Ridgeway) ....2 C
Apr. 28. Mr. Miller's Economies (Edward Brady, Chas. Dorian)..................2 C

Universal Film Company

Monday, April 29, 1918

NESTOR—It's a Cruel World (Gale Henry, Wm. Franey) ....1 C

Wednesday, May 1, 1918

L-KO—Father's Sons and Chorus Girls (Dave Morris, Frenchy Bianchi.........2 C

Monday, May 6, 1918

NESTOR—A Kitchen Hero (Eileen Sedgwick) ....1 C

Wednesday, May 8, 1918

L-KO—Her Movie Madness (Gale Henry, Hughie Mack) ....2 C

UNIVERSAL ANIMATED WEEKLY

Apr. 3. Number 18.
Apr. 10. Number 19.
Apr. 17. Number 20.
Apr. 24. Number 21.
May 1. Number 22.
May 8. Number 23.

UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE

Apr. 6. Issue Number 65.
Apr. 13. Issue Number 66.
Apr. 20. Issue Number 67.
Apr. 27. Issue Number 68.
May 3. Issue Number 69.
May 10. Issue Number 70.

UNIVERSAL CURRENT EVENTS

Apr. 6. Issue Number 47.
Apr. 13. Issue Number 48.
Apr. 20. Issue Number 49.
Apr. 27. Isue Number 50.
May 3. Issue Number 51.
May 10. Issue Number 52.

LYONS-MORAN STAR COMEDIES

Apr. 8. A Pigskin Hero.................1 reel
Apr. 15. The Tail of a Cat.............1 reel
Apr. 22. ....1 reel
Apr. 29. Mum's the Word................1 reel
May 6. Whose Baby Are You?..........1 reel

SERIALS

"THE BULL'S EYE
Two Reels Each
(Eddie Polo)

Apr. 1. Ninth Episode, Dynamite.
Apr. 8. Tenth Episode, Coyotes of the Desert.
Apr. 15. Eleventh Episode, Fired.
Apr. 22. Twelfth Episode, Burning Lands.
Apr. 29. Thirteenth Episode, Sold at Auction.
May 6. Fourteenth Episode, The Firing Squad.

"THE LION'S CLAWS
Two Reels Each
(Marie Walcamp)

Apr. 1. First Episode, A Woman's Honor.
Apr. 8. Second Episode, Beasts of the Jungle.
Apr. 15. Third Episode, The Net of Terror.
Apr. 22. Fourth Episode, A Woman's Scream.
Apr. 29. Fifth Episode, The Secret Document.

BOY SCOUTS TO THE RESCUE
Universal Special

Apr. 15. Aides of a Nation, No. 1........2 reels
Apr. 22. On the Trail, No. 2............2 reels
Apr. 29. The Great Mine Disaster, No. 3.2 reels
May 6. The Spies, No. 4..............2 reels
May 6 Sixth Episode, The Dungeon of Terror.

FINLEY NATURE STUDIES
Split Reel

Apr. 1. Number 12, "A Day at Yellowstone Park" and "Beautiful Devon—the Land of Romance, England."
Apr. 8. Number 13, "Sea Birds and Animals" and "The Land of Long Ago."
Apr. 15. Number 14, "Wild Animals at Yellowstone" and "Atop the Alps" (Scenic) Split reel.
Apr. 22. Number 15, Wild Bird Pets" and "In and Around Key West, Fla." (Scenic) Split reel.

Vitagraph

BIG V COMEDIES

Mar. 18. Tramps and Traitors.
Mar. 25. Stripes and Stumbles.
Apr. 1. Sleuths and Slackers.
Apr. 8. Rummies and Razors.
Apr. 15. Counts and No Counts.
Apr. 22. Whistles and Windows.
Apr. 29. Flirts and Fakirs.

VITAGRAPH COMEDIES

Feb. 4. Surprising Husband.
Feb. 11. Coals for the Fire.
Feb. 18. Sweets to the Sour.
Feb. 25. Their Godson.

VENGEANCE AND THE WOMAN (Serial)

Mar. 11. The Desperate Chance (Twelfth Episode).
Mar. 18. Sands of Doom (Thirteenth Episode).
Mar. 25. The Hand of Fate (Fourteenth Episode).
Apr. 1. The Reckoning (Fifteenth Episode).

THE WOMAN IN THE WEB (Serial)
(Hedda Nova, J. Frank Glendon)

Apr. 8. Caught in the Web (First Episode).
Apr. 15. The Open Switch (Second Episode).
Apr. 22. The Speeding Doom (Third Episode)
Apr. 29. The Clutch of Terror (Fourth Episode).

DREW COMEDIES
(Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew)

Mar. 11. Their First Quarrel.
Mar. 18. Telegraphic Tangle.
Mar. 25. His Wife Knew About It.
Apr. 1. Following the Scent.
Apr. 8. The Home Cure.
Apr. 15. The Deceivers.
Apr. 22. Beautiful Thoughts.
Apr. 29. All for the Love of a Girl.

FAVORITE FILM FEATURES

Mar. 4. An Officer and a Gentleman.......2 D
Mar. 4. Unlucky Louis ....1 C

DREW COMEDIES

Apr. 1. Following the Scent.............1 reel
Apr. 8. The Home Cure....................1 C
Apr. 15. The Deceivers.
Apr. 22. Beautiful Thoughts ....1 C
Apr. 29. All for the Love of a Girl..........1 C

Accessory News

— SECTION OF MOTION PICTURE NEWS —

THE MUSIC PIT

Are You Taking Care of that 40%

Added Patronage Which Should be Yours?

When you consider installing musical equipment—ORGAN or ONE MAN INSTRUMENTS consult us, we are in a position to give you valuable advice.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT.
Motion Picture News.

SILVERTIP

THE STANDARD NEGATIVE PROJECTOR CARBON

The exhibitor using direct current for projection will find in the National-Silvertip combination a source of light which answers every requirement in the projection field. The Silvertip was designed to meet all conditions and has proven so successful that it is now the standard negative carbon.

The brilliancy of the light given by this carbon permits of maximum definition and shows the pictures with such reality and clearness as to meet the full approval of the audience.

The light given by Silvertips is a pure white light, flickerless and free from negative shadows. The Silvertip is a heavily plated carbon which makes it capable of carrying the heaviest current without harmful heating. It is of small diameter, thereby eliminating the flicker due to the traveling of the arc.

NOTE—Silvertips Are for Direct Current Only

FOR ALTERNATING CURRENT PROJECTION

The White A. C. Special carbons were designed for alternating current projection. These carbons give an absolutely noiseless, pure white light. The use of these carbons calls for absolutely no investment in the form of extra equipment.

WRITE TODAY FOR OUR FOLDERS

NATIONAL CARBON COMPANY, Inc.

CLEVELAND, OHIO

If Your Ceiling is unsightly Cover it with

"BERGER'S Classik" STEEL CEILINGS

"Classik" Steel Ceilings are exact reproductions of beautiful molded plaster with the economy, fire resistance and safety of steel.

You can have them applied right over unsightly or unsafe plaster. They'll give you

Beauty and Permanence

For Ceilings, Sidewalks or Proscenium arch, "Classik" designs offer many big advantages.

Write for our Catalog D-45

The Berger Mfg. Co., Canton, Ohio

BRANCHES: Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis, San Francisco.

Export Department

Berger Building, New York City, U. S. A.

B BERGER

Accessory News

SECTION OF MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Devoted to the technical branches of the motion picture industry, containing records of the latest accomplishments in the mechanical and scientific field; projection helps, inventions and suggestions; camera devices analyzed and commented upon; musical cue sheets for important feature pictures; improvements and innovations in the building and furnishing field.

No charge is made in these departments for answering questions of any nature. Correspondence is invited.

E. Kendall Gillett ....Editor

Alfred S. Cory ....Technical Editor

Motion Picture Engineers Meet at Rochester

An epoch in the annals of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers is signalized by the meeting of that organization which took place at Rochester, New York, Monday and Tuesday, April 8th and 9th. The selection of Rochester as the meeting place proved a popular choice, due to its important industries, which are closely related to motion picture production, and the meetings of the Engineers, at the Hotel Seneca, were attended by a representative gathering comprised of:

R. P. Barrows, National Lamp Works; A. R. Dennington, Westinghouse Lamp Works; J. C. Moulton, General Electric Co.; W. M. States, Edison Lamp Works; Max Mayer, M. J. Wohl & Co.; L. C. Porter, Edison Lamp Works; W. V. D. Kelley, Prizma, Inc.; J. W. Allison, Allison & Hadaway Corp.; W. C. Kunzmann, National Carbon Co.; F. H. Richardson, M. P. World; E. B. Kinsila, M. P. World; A. C. Roebuck, Enterprise Optical Co.; W. C. Smith, Nicholas Power Co.; H. A. Campe, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co.; C. F. Jenkins, Graphoscope Co.; H. M. Wible, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co.; E. K. Gillett, News; A. S. Cory, News; Dr. H. Kellner, Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.; G. A. Blair, Eastman Kodak Co.; E. F. Murphy, Universal Film Manufacturing Co.; A. F. Victor, Victor Animatograph Co.; and Messrs. Turner and Glover of the Grandlach Manhattan Optical Co.

At the adjournment of the Monday session the Society was tendered a dinner by the Bausch & Lomb Optical Company, the affair being held at the Rochester Club, with Dr. Hermann Kellner acting as host on behalf of his company.

Through efficient handling by the President and Chairman, Mr. C. Francis Jenkins, the business before the meeting was disposed of at the Monday session, so that the following day could be entirely devoted to the reading and discussion of an ambitious program of papers which had been prepared by various members of the Society. First on the list was "The Portable Machine," by A. F. Victor, which brought about the adoption by the Society of a new standard covering a non-inflammable cine strip of reduced size for use on portable projectors. The President, C. Francis Jenkins, described a new "Condenser System for Motion Picture Machines," while "Artificial Light in the Motion Picture Studio" received exhaustive treatment at the hands of Max Mayer. Following this, John W. Allison emphasized the importance of "Standardization in the Studio," and insisted that standardization should commence with the taking of the negative, after which F. H. Richardson drew the distinction between "Theoretical—Practical as Applied to Standardization." The progress of the incandescent projection lamp manufacturers was demonstrated by A. R. Dennington in a paper on "Incandescent Lamps for Motion Picture Service," a subject which was further enlarged upon by L. C. Porter, who advanced "Some Considerations in the Application of Incandescent Lamps to Projectors." A. S. Cory of the News drew attention to "The Optical Requirements of Motion Picture Projection Objectives," and the list of papers was concluded by E. B. Kinsila's monograph on "Daylight Studio Construction."

The session of Tuesday, April 9th, was punctuated at midday by a trip to Kodak Park, where the Society were the guests at luncheon of the Eastman Kodak Co.

The objects of the meeting having been fulfilled, its adjournment was announced on Tuesday evening, April 9th, whereupon a large percentage of those in attendance hurried back to their business interests in other cities. Those who remained in Rochester were rewarded on Wednesday, however, by the opportunity of visiting the Research Laboratory of the Eastman Kodak Co. at Kodak Park, which is one of Rochester's show places and at present the site of the U. S. Army's training school for aerial photographers. In spite of his extensive duties as chief instructor at the army photographic school, Dr. C. E. Kenneth Mees, the Director of the Eastman Research Laboratory, proved a charming and interesting guide, and exhibited in detail the many departments of his exquisitely equipped laboratory. All who were fortunate in seeing the Research Laboratory voted Dr. Mees their sincerest thanks for his patience and kindness in answering countless questions.

Although the large optical factories at Rochester were not open to those who attended the Engineers' meeting, Dr. Kellner of Bausch & Lomb and Mr. George A. Blair of Kodak strove assiduously and successfully to keep all visitors entertained during their stay, with the result that all members of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers will cherish lifelong memories of the Rochester meeting.

Mazda Lamps for Motion Picture Projectors

By L. C. Porter, Edison Lamp Works, Harrison, N. J.

[Reprinted, by permission, from the General Electric Review]

THE inherent advantages of the incandescent lamp, such as simplicity, steadiness of light, cleanliness, good color value, and lower fire risk, as well as ease of control, have made this type of lamp a most desirable light source. These advantages are obtained where Mazda lamps are used for projection purposes as well as for general lighting service.

For a long time it was thought impractical to apply Mazda lamps to large motion picture projectors. There were three reasons for this belief:

(1) The crater of the arc in common use as a light source for motion picture projectors operates at about 130 candle power per square millimeter, whereas the tungsten filament of a Mazda lamp at the melting point emits only 79 candle power per square millimeter, and at practical operating temperatures about 34 candle power per square millimeter.

(2) The condensers in common use utilized a solid angle of light of about 32 degrees. This angle picked up a high percentage of the light flux from an arc due to the light distribution characteristic of the arc, whereas with the nearly spherical light distribution of the Mazda lamp this became a very small proportion of the available light flux.

(3) The crater of the arc is a relatively solid homogeneous light source and an image thereof projected onto the screen resulted in very even illumination, whereas with the filament of the Mazda lamp in back of the plano-condensers an enlarged image thereof was projected, resulting in a very streaked screen.

Great though these obstacles seem to be, they have been overcome. The enormous difference in brilliancy of the two sources was lessened by developing a new type of Mazda lamp and a new lens system. Probably the condenser plays the greatest part in solving the problem, therefore it will be described first.

Obviously, it was highly desirable to utilize a much greater solid-angle of light than was intercepted by the plano-condensers commonly used. It was found impractical to make a plano-condenser of sufficiently short focus, as the thickness of the glass would be great and the curvature excessive, resulting in much spherical aberration. The difficulty was overcome by the design of a condenser somewhat similar to a semaphore lens, i. e., it was a one-piece condenser made in steps, or corrugations. With this condenser a solid angle of 75 degrees was intercepted, which immediately resulted in a very large increase in the amount of light flux available.

The condenser is of 4 7-16 inch diameter and is of 2½—6½ inch conjugate foci, meaning that the light source should be located 2½ inches back of the edge of the convex face of the condenser and the film 6½ inches ahead of the corrugated side. (The former distance must be closely adhered to for best results, but the latter may be increased an inch or so without materially affecting the resultant illumination.

A further gain in illumination was obtained by the use of a spherical mirror placed in back of the light source. This arrangement practically doubled the available useful angle, making a net increase of from 32 degrees with the old plano-condensers to 150 degrees by use of the new condenser and mirror. The corrugations on the condenser also performed the further function of breaking up the filament image, resulting in a smooth and even screen illumination. The great increase in light flux thus obtained went a long way toward offsetting the difference in operating efficiencies of the arc and the Mazda lamp. To further decrease this difference the lamps were operated very close to the melting point, resulting in high brilliancy and an average life of approximately 100 hours.

Many types of lamps were tried, and the one finally chosen has a filament arrangement somewhat different from those in common use. The filament consists of four helices of tungsten arranged in one plane. This construction has a double advantage. First, it brings more of the filament close to the focus of the condenser, and, second, it enables the spherical mirror, when properly adjusted to throw images of these filament coils back between the coils themselves, thus resulting in an effectually solid light source. It can be seen that careful setting of the lamp, mirror and condenser are necessary to obtain maximum results.

The capacity of the lamp finally chosen was 750 watts operating at 30 amperes. The determining factor was that the condenser should pick up light from a 0.4 inch square, hence the filament was designed which would place the greatest possible amount of light in that area. Low voltage (25) and high amperage are used because these call for heavier wire, and the greater the diameter of the wire the higher the temperature, hence the greater the candle power (within certain limits) that can be obtained therefrom.

Using a 25-volt lamp, some economical means of reducing the line voltage of 110 or 120 to that of the lamp became desirable. For this purpose special compensators have been designed for use on alternating current circuits.* These control equipments consist of a compensator with either a rheostat or a reactance control in the primary, by means of which the secondary current can be regulated very closely, and exactly 30 amperes delivered to the lamp regardless of whether the primary voltage happens to be 105, 125, or any value between. An accurate ammeter on which to read the secondary current forms part of the equipment. This accurate control is of great importance. With the lamp operating at so high an efficiency as to give an average of but 100 hours' life, a very small amount of over-current will reduce this life materially. As the lamps are fairly expensive, it is evident that the saving in lamp renewals will soon more than offset the additional cost of accurate control equipment.

TABLE I

LUMENS

Objective Focal Length in Inches	4½	5	5½	6	6½	7	7½	8
Objective Aperture
1½	325	261	216
1¾	440	355	294	247
2	577	464	384	323	275
2¼	727	588	487	409	349	300	262
2½	900	727	600	505	430	370	323	284
2¾		880	727	611	521	448	392	345
3			863	727	620	532	466	410
3¼				855	727	625	550	480
3½					845	727	635	557
3¾						833	727	640
4							830	727

A 600-watt lamp operating at 30 volts and 20 amperes has also been developed and may be used with the gasolene generator sets which are being marketed throughout the country for motion picture work. This lamp is made in a somewhat smaller bulb than the 30-ampere lamp, thus allowing the use of a smaller condenser and a smaller mirror. This is of advantage in machines for home use, portable machines, etc., where compactness and light weight is of value. As the lamp does not exceed the underwriters' limit of 660 watts, it may also be used on house lighting circuits, in schools, churches, etc., without special wiring. The "Compensarc" will control either the 750 or the 600-watt lamp.

---

* Motor generators are used for direct-current service.

After the application of Mazda lamps to motion picture projectors had become possible, the various manufacturers of motion picture machines developed new housings, containing the new lamp, condenser and mirror, with proper means for adjustment. One of these furnishes two lamps in the housing. Each is carefully focussed before the picture is started, and then in case one burns out the other can be quickly substituted, with practically no interruption to the picture. These housings are interchangeable with the old arc-lamp housings previously used. Another type of housing is being built which fastens onto the front of the arc-lamp housing.

Not satisfied with the good projection obtained by the means which has been described, investigation was carried further. It was found that by increasing the diameter of the objective lens a still greater increase in the illumination resulted, approximately as given in Table 1, which is based on an arbitrary standard of 600 lumens for the 5½ inch objective of 2½ inch aperture.

Objective lenses in common use with arc lamps are 1½ inches and 1¾ inches in diameter. There are available standard lenses of 2½ inch diameter. These latter lenses will transmit exactly double the illumination of a 1½ inch lens, and it is highly desirable to use the larger lens when changing from an arc to a Mazda lamp in large motion picture projectors.

A Real Live Promoter of Improved Film Conditions

IT gives us great pleasure to print the following letter and collection of correspondence from exchanges which has been submitted by Mr. L. W. McClung of St. Petersburg, Fla., a recently enrolled member of the National Anti-Misframe League, who, it will be recalled, is also aided in carrying out the policies of the League by his wife, Mrs. Lottie McClung, who has the distinction of being the first lady member of that progressive organization.

Here we have an example of an operator who has grasped the full significance of the League's ideals, and who realizes that a little conscientious, unselfish effort on the part of operators now, will result, ultimately, in untold good to the entire exhibiting branch of the industry. As the subsequent correspondence will show, Mr. McClung has been earnestly putting into practice the requirements of the League pledge, but he has gone much further; in addition he is endeavoring to spread the League's message of improved conditions for the operator, and also to secure recognition and co-operation from the exchanges. It will be noted that Mr. McClung has given considerable thought to the matter, as is evident from the effective letter which he encloses with his outgoing films, and his method of utilizing the leaders of the films to convey his messages to other operators.

Most gratifying of all, however, is the evidence supplied by the letters from exchanges, which fully confirm our oft-repeated claims that the film exchanges are willing to co-operate with the operator who respects the films entrusted to his care, and who approaches the exchange officials and employes with the dignity and courtesy which are necessary to secure the respect of any business man. We could say more on this topic, but at present we will no longer interpose between the readers and Mr. McClung's interesting communication.

Mr. McCung says:

"I am enclosing herewith a letter from Mutual Film Corporation and one from S. A. Lynch Enterprises, Atlanta, Ga., which I received in answer to letters written them in regard to the condition of some films I had received. If you have the space to spare I wish you would put these letters in our columns; it will show the boys that the distributor does appreciate letters in regard to his films.

"Also, I have a few words which I would like to give to members of the League, as follows:

"To the Members of N. A. M. L.

"Boys, we are on the right road to better films. Let's keep the good work going. Write your distributor when you receive a film in bad condition; send your clippings in with it and ask him to co-operate with the N. A. M. L. by using his efforts to locate the operator who has abused the film and enlighten him on how to care for films. Let the distributor know that you are a member of the N. A. M. L. and will give his films the very best care possible. Ask him to favor you with his best prints. This is what I have been doing the past few weeks, and you cannot imagine the improvement in the condition of my films. I have never yet failed to get a prompt answer to a letter I sent.

"Now a word about boosting the N. A. M. L. Here is my way. When shipping films to another exhibitor, I always write a personal letter, put it in an envelope and address it to the operator, then I put this in the first reel where he will surely find it before starting his show. The letter usually reads as follows:

> Operator, Casino theatre.
> Dear Sir:
>
> You will find these films to be in good condition having been cleaned, inspected and repaired by me, Member No. 805, N. A. M. L. Will you be so kind as to endeavor to forward them in a little better condition than that in which you received them.
>
> Thanking you for your kindness, I am,
>
> Yours for better films,
> L. W. McClung.
>
> P. S. Are you a member of the N. A. M. L.? If not, write at once to E. K. Gillett, care of Motion Picture News, New York, for particulars.

"Another method I use is as follows: With a clean cloth and alcohol remove all oil and dirt from the white leaders on your films, then with a pen and some slide ink write, such as "Don't punch mark films"; "Join the N. A. M. L."; "Our slogan, Better films through co-operation"; "Always scrape your patches"; "Write E. K. Gillett, care of Motion Picture News, New York, for membership card and button"; "Always return films in better condition than you receive them." Sign your name and number below.

The letters received by Mr. McClung from two of the exchanges which serve him with films are ample testimony that his work is appreciated, and we reproduce them in order that operators may realize the advantages incident to League membership and the faithful carrying out of the membership requirements. Mr. McClung received the following from the Mutual exchange at Atlanta, Ga.:

> "We extend to you our thanks for your letter of the 20th instant in reference to the condition of several films being received by you, and want to congratulate you upon the great interest taken in films received at your theatre.
>
> If we could only line up all the operators in this territory and get them to be as careful and competent as you have been, there would be no complaints. We are making every effort to eliminate the conditions as explained in your letter, and trust that you will keep up the good work and have all the operators in your State line up with the National Anti-Misframe League."

The Atlanta Exchange of the S. A. Lynch Enterprises, who distribute Paramount pictures, proved willing, also, to co-operate in every way with our correspondent as is evidenced by the following:

> "This is to acknowledge receipt of your communication of March 18th enclosing us cutting from one of our productions, 'A Modern Musketeer,' and we wish to thank you for your interest in our behalf. We will take this matter up with the parties all along the line that have used this picture, in order to determine who mis-used same."

On a later occasion they wrote:

> "This is to acknowledge receipt of your letter in regard to the condition of 'The Hired Man' when received by you. We will look into this matter and see where the fault lies and assure you you will not be annoyed in this manner again."

It is doubtless gratifying to Mr. McClung to have his efforts appreciated in this manner, and all other operators can secure exchange co-operation of a similar order. A little praise from those higher up often goes a long way toward making a man take increased interest in his work, and every League member who follows Mr. McClung's procedure, and shows the exchange that he is working to better the condition of films, can soon be in possession of just such testimony that his efforts are appreciated as has been received by our present correspondent.

You Make or Mar the Picture

—by projecting it through efficient or inefficient lenses. And yet the best lenses cost but little more, and pay for themselves by pleasing your patrons.

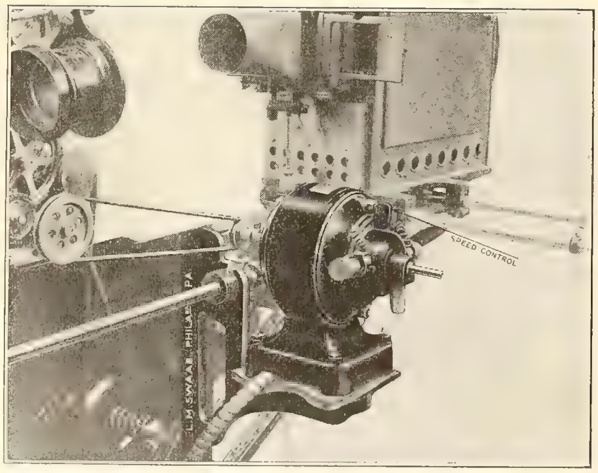
Bausch and Lomb Projection Lenses bring out every detail of the film, clear and sharp to the very edge of the screen. An essential in every first-class house, yet moderate in cost.

Write for your copy of special Projection Lens booklet—free to owners and operators.

Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.
569 ST. PAUL STREET ROCHESTER, N.Y.
New York Washington Chicago San Francisco

Leading American Makers of Photographic and Ophthalmic Lenses, Microscopes, Projection Lanterns (Balopticons) and Other High-Grade Optical Products.



SWAAB'S MOTOR DRIVE EQUIPMENT
FOR POWER No. 6A, COMPLETE
110 or 220 volts, A. C. or D. C. $30.00, Net
$35.00 after May 1st
Positively no discount to anyone
The most simple, compact, cheap and efficient speed control on the market
Information supplied to EXHIBITORS and OPERATORS immediately on application
Write To-day
LEWIS M. SWAAB, 1327 Vine St., Philadelphia
SIMPLEX Distributors

League Slides

REFERRING to the design for a display slide for members of the National Anti-Misframe League, which we published in the Projection Department, issue of March 16, one of our readers, Alfred B. Werhan, of Wadsworth, Ohio, writes:

"Would you kindly notify the readers of the Projection Department that I will supply members of the League with slides [similar to the design referred to] at 20 cents each—postage extra. The slides will be perfect as I have three perfect negatives. Members should not forget to give their membership number."

Comment: Mr. Werhan has enclosed a contact print on glossy paper from one of the negatives which he had made of the published design for the League slide.

Unless Mr. Werhan has produced a considerably better negative in the meantime than the one from which his sample print was made, we could not recommend that any League members purchase slides, however.

In the first place Mr. Werhan's negative is decidedly unsharp, a defect which would become even more apparent when magnified to the size of the customary projected stereopticon image. The matter of securing a critically sharp negative can be easily accomplished by Mr. Werhan, but another defect of his negative requires to be pointed out.

Readers will recall that the design which we published was a straight black and white design with no half-tones or intermediate tints. It follows at once that this will be photographically reproduced to best advantage on a contrasty emulsion, and must be photographed upon a slow, contrasty emulsion if the negative is to be absolutely clear and transparent in the sections corresponding to the black background of the printed reproduction.

Mr. Werhan has apparently made his negative on a regular negative plate or film of the rapid variety, with the result that he has secured a certain degree of light action in the parts of his negative which should have received no exposure. This is due to the light reflected from even the black portions of the diagram on the printed page, and as the negative emulsion used by Mr. Werhan has, of course, a comparatively long scale of gradation, the grain or pores of the paper are also recorded in his negative (and in the positives printed therefrom).

There is, however, an easy way of securing a clean-cut negative of satisfactory contrast from the published design, and that is to make the negative on a lantern-slide plate (positive emulsion) of the same sort as the positive lantern-slides are printed on. The lantern plate is of course much slower than a rapid negative plate or film, and will consequently require longer exposure in the camera. The first attempt may yield an over-exposed negative, showing most of the defects of Mr. Werhan's previous attempts with negative plates, because the rapidity of the lantern emulsion will probably be underrated at first and too long an exposure given. A few trials will indicate the proper exposure to be given, and will also show that a lantern emulsion is rather faster than would have been imagined, but with exposure once mastered it should be easy to produce a good negative of the design in question, if the copy is properly lighted when making the photograph.

Operators' Inquiries

W. C. GILES, BROWNSVILLE, PA., "I have a magazine rewinder and the rollers on the valves make a terrible noise. Please tell me how to stop this."

REPLY: The cause of the noise might be found to be lack of lubrication, but it is probable that the correspondent has already tried oiling the bearings in which the rollers revolve. It is furthermore not very advisable to use oil on the valve rollers of the film magazines, either in the case of rewinders or projecting machines, because the oil very readily gets on the film, which is an undesirable condition of course.

Most likely the noise of which the correspondent complains is due to one or more of the rollers not running true caused by lack of alignment, such, for instance, as would result from a worn bearing. In such an event the roller could hardly be expected to operate noiselessly, and the bearing should be rebushed, or an entire new valve substituted if conditions seem to warrant this.

F. C. SHIVERS, LEXINGTON, NEB., "I have been operating a 1917 Motiograph for 14 months, and have had a great lot of trouble with the star-shaft and bearings wearing out. I use the best make of oil and make adjustments for a little play."

REPLY: As the manufacturers of the Motiograph use good materials in the construction of their machine, the only causes for the rapid wear which we could advance without examining the parts in question are (1) grit in the bearings, (2) the use of a grade of oil which carbonizes and forms a deposit.

If excessive tension is carried on the tension-shoes attached to the gate this would also cause rapid wearing of the intermittent, but in this case the strain would be more or less distributed over the entire movement, causing it to wear at all places.

Apparently, the only remedy in the present instance is the installation of new parts, as a good performance cannot be expected from a badly worn intermittent.

J. E. BARNETT, CUMBERLAND, MD., "What effect has the accumulation from smoke on the properties of a projection screen, and how may this smoke be removed?"

REPLY: The effect of smoke on a projection screen is a discoloration of the screen surface, in time, which will, of course, reduce the reflecting properties of the screen surface and thus reduce the apparent brightness of the projected picture.

The exact effect of the smoke on the screen surface will differ with different types of screens, as might be inferred. Metallic surface screens will be darkened in a manner similar to tarnishing, while a white plaster or cloth screen will have its reflecting properties reduced in much the same manner as by the accumulation of dust. To restore the normal reflecting power of a metallic screen, the surface may be washed (most of the reflecting screens are said, by their makers, to be washable), while a white plaster screen will require to be recoated with whatever preparation is usually applied, and a cloth screen may of course be laundered.

National Anti-Misframe League
Pledge

As a motion picture operator who has the interest of his profession at heart and is willing to assist in eliminating some of the evils practised in the operating-room, I promise that I will to the best of my ability return films to the exchange in first-class condition. Furthermore, I will when it becomes necessary remedy all misframes, bad patches, etc., that may be in the film which I receive and in this way co-operate with my brother operators and give greater pleasure to those who make up the motion picture audience by showing films that are free from such defects. I also promise that I will not make punch marks in film, and when film is received by me, with punch holes, I will notify the exchange to that effect so that they may use their efforts to correct this evil.

Roll of Honor

Lyle Wilcox	Hastings, Mich.
Kenneth Hardin	Wadsworth, Ohio
H. H. Hoskins	Paragould, Ark.
Tod A. Kelty	Youngstown, Ohio
R. Douglas Harrison	Lansing, Mich.
Walter F. Burgiss	Elkin, N. C.
Frederick Bennett	Sharon, Pa.
W. A. Uthmeier	Marshfield, Wis.
E. W. Fries	Brookville, Ind.
J. C. Tunstill	Van Alstyne, Texas
Harry Phaneuf	So. Manchester, Conn.

Members previously recorded	819
Members recorded this week	11
Total membership to date	830

Notice! Anti-Misframe League Members

Membership cards are now ready and are being sent out as fast as possible. There are a number of operators, however, who have neglected to send in the desired information. If you will fill out the blank and mail to this office, button and membership card will be forwarded.

Member's name..

Home address..

Name of theatre where employed..............................

Address of theatre and name of manager......................

This notice does not apply to those who have already sent in this information, but it is for those who have neglected doing so, many having merely given their names and name of city, without any street address, making it impossible for the pose office to deliver the letters addressed to them.

Can I Display a Better Picture?

This is a question exhibitors are asking everywhere, for they realize it is the quality of picture displayed that holds their customers' patronage.

Why not give your patrons the best, keep them coming and do it at a big saving?

THE BRECO CONVERTER

THE MODERN METHOD OF
CHANGING A. C. TO D. C.

Was designed for your particular benefit. It enables the operator to display a clear, sharp, brilliant picture, free from eye strain or flicker.

HIGHLY EFFICIENT, ECONOMICAL, VERY EASY TO OPERATE

Will operate one or two arcs at a big saving in current. Very easy to install. Takes up little space and can be operated without special instructions.

LOW IN PRICE UPKEEP MINIMUM

Get particulars of this modern necessity

THE BRECO ELECTRIC CO. Sole Licensees 206 Huron St., Toledo, Ohio, U.S.A.

Write us today for descriptive literature

The Essential Requirements
for

Improved Projection
are
SPEER CARBONS

SPEER Alterno Combinations
for A.C. Work
and
SPEER Hold-Ark Combinations
for D.C. Work
Produce Incomparable Results

Write today for descriptive folders. Read the unbiased opinions of operators

Place an order now with your Supply House

"The Carbons with a Guarantee"

Manufactured by
SPEER CARBON COMPANY
ST. MARYS, PA.

ARE YOU PROGRESSIVE?
We have a number of Rebuilt Machines as good as new, in fact could be sold as new, but we would rather sell them for what they are.
We guarantee them to be in A1 Adjustment; all worn parts have been replaced by new parts.
Send for List Today
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY
Largest Exclusive Dealers to the Moving Picture Trade
300-302 Mallers Building 5 S. Wabash Avenue
Chicago, Illinois
Dealers in Motiograph, Standard and Simplex Moving Picture Machines, National Carbons, Minusa Screens and Everything for the Theatre
WE SELL ON THE INSTALMENT PLAN

PHOTOGRAPHERS and LABORATORY MEN,
Submit your questions to the
CAMERA DEPARTMENT.

Automaticket System Popular with Large Theatre Circuits

EVERY new revolutionizing industry requires years of organization and development to enable it to take its place as an essential and integral part of the world's industrial activities.

The accessories to such an industry play an important part in its development, organizing it and systematizing it. The great motion picture industry has also developed the accessories necessary to make it a practical and profitable business enterprise, and an important factor in systematizing the motion picture theatre business and putting it in on a business basis is the Automaticket System used by small and large exhibitors throughout the country. This sure and rapid fire means of distributing tickets has enabled exhibitors to "cash in" to the full extent on the popularity of motion pictures, and enabled them to keep a systematic record of all tickets sold without red tape bookkeeping.

The newest model Automaticket machine is almost human in its versatility, but is something more than human in the fact that it is infallible.

The extensive popularity of the Automaticket System is indicated by the following big circuits who are a few among the thousands with whom this equipment is in successful operation:

Marcus Loew Circuit, New York and Canada; Strand Theatres Circuit, New York, etc.; Saenger Amusement Co., New Orleans; Lytle & Epstein, Houston, Texas; Rivoli and Rialto theatres, New York; Jones, Linick & Schaeffer, Chicago; Asher Bros., Chicago; Lubliner & Trinz, Chicago; Davis and Harris theatres, Pittsburgh; International Amusement Co., Denver; Miles theatres, Cleveland and Detroit; Rialto theatre, San Francisco; S. A. Lynch Enterprises, Jacksonville, Fla.; Circle theatre, Indianapolis; Rubens & Finkelstein, Minneapolis; Maine theatres, Inc., New England.

Cameraman Williams Invents Devices of Value to Producers

WE were recently favored with a visit from Mr. Frank D. Williams, well known on the West Coast for his work on Keystone comedy productions and as the first cameraman to work with the now famous Charles Chaplin.

During the past few years Mr. Williams has brought to considerable perfection a glass tank and a method of lighting for use in the photography of under-water effects. A tank constructed according to Mr. Williams' specifications was recently used with signal success, under the supervision of the inventor, in a Fox picture featuring Annette Kellermann, and a readily apparent advantage of Mr. Williams' system of lighting the underwater scenes is the clearness and detail with which characters are depicted when separated from the camera by as much as fifteen or twenty feet of water.

Mr. Williams advises us that patents have been granted on his method of under-water photography and will shortly be taken out, after which a thorough description of his methods will be possible. An important feature of Mr. Williams' method, which he advises us is covered by the patents, is his system of lighting, which may be briefly stated to depend primarily upon side-lighting instead of top-lighting, such as has been principally employed in previous under-water cinematography.

In addition to his work on the above proposition, Mr. Williams has recently evolved a method of photographing and printing motion pictures which permits the recording of the action at one time and the introduction of the background by a subsequent operation; an artifice which might open up new possibilities in certain lines of production work. This method of Mr. Williams' does not depend upon projected backgrounds, which are being somewhat experimented with at present in various studios, but is achieved by exposure in the camera in conjunction with certain laboratory processes.

"WE NEVER DISAPPOINT" TELEPHONE BRYANT 5576
CROMLOW FILM LABORATORIES
INCORPORATED
220 WEST 42ND STREET
NEW YORK
ALLAN A. LOWNES
GEN. MGR.

The Camera

Camera Speed

Mr. Wm. Nash, Portland, Oregon, inquires: "Please state how many pictures are taken per second with the ultra-speed camera, and how many pictures per second are taken for the color pictures, where they use color-filters on the camera. Please also state which of the different cameras are used most and considered best in motion picture production. Are the Prestwich and Williamson considered as good as the Urban camera? Please advise if the K——— camera, made by the K——— Optical Company, New York City, is a good camera."

In Reply: Several types of ultra-speed methods of making motion pictures have been devised in recent years by Messrs. Marey, Bull, and other French experimenters, and various taking speeds have been employed, in accordance with the requirements of the subject being photographed. In photographing the flight of a bullet, for instance, as high as 12,000 pictures may be recorded in one second, while rapid movements of athletes may be recorded in their minutest details at a speed of from 100 to 200 pictures per second. For the latter class of work a camera of conventional type may be used provided it is of exceptionally rugged construction and provided with special tension devices, but for extremely high speed cinematography the camera is of totally different type than those used in everyday film production. The ultra-speed camera has no shutter, but the subject is intermittently illuminated by an electric spark discharge of high frequency, and, instead of film magazines, the film strip is stretched around the circumference of a rotating drum, which brings fresh sections of the negative film behind the lens at the proper intervals. Cameras of such type are frequently operated in a dark room (to avoid fogging the negative strip), but when suitably encased may be used in daylight in the usual manner.

With all successive color processes, where the color-sensation images alternate upon the film strip (as in the Kinemacolor process), a taking speed of at least 32 pictures per second is required in order to secure results which are in any way satisfactory. Some color picture makers have claimed a lower taking rate than 32 per second for their successive processes, and we believe that some have even practiced a lower taking rate, but the results in such cases are very disillusioning, as most color workers discover in due course.

It is hardly the province of the Camera Department to discuss the relative merits of various makes of cameras, but we might point out that the three cameras first mentioned by the correspondent are very much out of date compared with the present-day types of professional cine cameras, and are scarcely used at all by the established film producers. The favored cameras in present-day production work, such as the Bell-Howell, Pathe, De Brie, etc., are much more perfect specimens of mechanical design and construction than those mentioned by the correspondent, and are possessed of many important attachments which are not to be found on the instruments he names.

As regards the K——— camera, we can neither recommend the camera nor the firm which advertises it.

Chromium Intensification

[Editor's Note—The following valuable information on the chemistry and characteristics of intensification with Chromium formed part of the twentieth Traill-Taylor Memorial Lecture delivered before the Royal Photographic Society, London, by C. H. Bothamley, M. Sc., F. I. C. Mr. Bothamley, as is generally known, is a veteran worker in photographic chemistry.]

In this process, which was worked out in detail, though not actually invented, by C. Welborne Piper and the late D. J. Carnegie ("Amat. Phot.," 1904, pp. 336 and 397, and 1905, pp. 453, 473), the negative is treated with a solution of potassium bichromate acidified with hydrochloric acid, and the bleached image, after washing, is treated with an ordinary developer. According to Piper and Carnegie, the bleached image contains a chromium compound, which they suggest may be the so-called chromium dioxide, CrO_2, generally regarded as chromic chromate, Cr_3O_6. They established the presence of chromium, but not the precise nature of the chromium compound.

I made experiments in order to get some information as to the exact mode of action of this intensifier. A solution of pure chromic acid alone, 2 parts in 100, acts readily on negative and positive images, and in time will completely remove the silver from even a dense negative if a sufficient volume of the solution is used.

A solution containing only 5 parts of chromic acid in 1,000 parts of water also has a distinct, though slow, reducing action. The silver is dissolved as silver chromate whilst part of the chromic acid is reduced to the condition of a chromic salt; the image that remains consists of unaltered silver.

A 5 per cent solution of very carefully purified potassium bichromate, free from chlorides and free from chromic acid, has no action, even after 48 hours' immersion, on a negative which has been washed free from chlorides. Similar results were obtained with lantern slides, notwithstanding the finer grain of the silver.

Further, a solution containing pure potassium bichromate (5 in 100) and pure salt, but no free chromic acid, also has no recognizable action on the silver image.

It follows that the bleaching effect is due to the simultaneous action of chromic acid and potassium chloride, formed by the action of the hydrochloric acid on the potassium bichromate.

I find, in fact, that a solution containing pure chromic acid and pure salt readily bleaches silver images, with results not distinguishable from those obtained with a solution of bichromate mixed with hydrochloric acid.

I also made some experiments concerning the composition of the bleached image. It clearly does not consist of pure silver chloride, because it has a pronounced brown color, much more distinct with formula A than with formula C (see below). There is, in fact, no difficulty in detecting the presence of chromium, by the ordinary tests, in both the bleached and the redeveloped image, though the proportion seems to be smaller in the latter.

Further, if the bleached and thoroughly washed image is carefully treated with a dilute solution of caustic potash, potassium chromate passes into the liquid and gives it a yellow color. If now the negative is again well washed, the image is still found to contain chromium, but only in the basic chromic condition. It follows that the brown constituent of the bleached image is a chromic chromate. When the bleached image is treated with a developer this chromic chromate is reduced, and part, at least, of the chromium remains in the chromic condition in the image, mixed with metallic silver. The amount of chromium so left is very small when the C formula is used.

The three working formulas recommended by Piper and Carnegie are:

	A	B	C
Potassium bichromate...	5 grains	10 grains	10 grains
Hydrochloric acid (sp. gr. 1.160)	1 minim	5 minims	20 minims
Water	1 oz.	1 oz.	1 oz.
or approximately—
Potassium bichromate.	10 parts	20 parts	20 parts
Hydrochloric acid (sp. gr. 1.160)...........	2 parts	10 parts	40 parts
Water to.............	1,000 parts	1,000 parts	1,000 parts

They stated that formula A gives a high degree of intensification, and formula C a low degree, whilst formula B gives an intermediate result. H. and D. strip negatives confirm these statements. The degree of intensification obtained with B is nearer to that obtained with A than to that obtained with C. The result is determined by the relative proportions of acid and bichromate and the proportion of acid is the dominant factor. In order to Six New Features For Sure Results!

Faster, finer and CERTAIN results now are gained with the new improved Universal Motion Picture Camera—the camera that keeps abreast of the science of motion picture photography.

The New Advantages of UNIVERSAL
MOTION PICTURE CAMERA

New framing adjustment—Better film transmission—Advanced film channel—New focusing tube — New Footage indicator — New "static" prevention. New automatic dissolve now ready. 200 feet magazine capacity—more speed—better results.

At Less Than Half the Price of other similar cameras

Send Postal Today

for complete description of the world's greatest value in motion picture cameras.

BURKE & JAMES, INC.
Sole Wholesale Agents
240 East Ontario Street, Chicago
Eastern Branch: 225 Fifth Avenue, New York City

DISPEL ALL DOUBTS

There is no question as to the superiority of our DEVELOPING and PRINTING.
There is none as to our responsibility or whether or not you will get your work when desired.
WHY NOT LET US SERVE YOU?

EVANS FILM MFG. CO.
416-24 West 216th Street, New York City
Telephone, St. Nicholas 3443

Laboratory Work

High Class Developing Printing, Tinting and Toning at Lowest Prices

GIVE US A TRIAL

MT. VERNON MOTION PICTURE CO.
1457 BROADWAY (Cor. 42d St.), NEW YORK, N. Y.
Telephone Bryant 1058

obtain concordant results with certainty, it is of great importance to make up the formula with more than usual care and accuracy. It is unfortunate, therefore, that the formulae as commonly published specify the use of concentrated hydrochloric acid, which is not easily measured accurately with the means usually at a photographer's disposal, especially when quite a small quantity is required, as with formula A. It is a much better plan to dilute the strong acid by adding 9 equal parts of water and then measure out ten times the volume of dilute acid, so that the formulae would read:

	A	B	C
Potassium bichromate	10 parts	20 parts	20 parts
Hydrochloric acid, dilute (1 in 10)......	20 parts	100 parts	400 parts
Water to............	1,000 parts	1,000 parts	1,000 parts

Piper and Carnegie recommended amidol as the developer to be used after bleaching with the bichromate and washing. In my experiments, when formula A is used, the degree of intensification is the same, whether re-development is effected with amidol or diamidophenol, or with metol-hydroquinone, but with formula C the results indicate a slightly lower degree of intensification when metol-hydroquinone is used.

With formula A the intensification is due in a substantial degree to the chromium compound which has been added to the image; with formula C the intensification is mainly due to an increase in the size and light-stopping power of the silver granules, due to their conversion into chloride and subsequent re-development (see W. T. P. Cunningham in "Phot. Journ.," 1906, p. 2).

Experiments were made with mixtures of chromic acid and purified common salt, the bleached image being afterwards re-developed with diamidophenol and sulphite. The chromic acid and salt are easily weighed out accurately, and separate stock solutions, 1 in 10, can be kept unchanged for any length of time. If the image is bleached with—

Chromic acid..................................	4 parts
Salt (sodium chloride)......................	4 parts
Water to.....................................	1,000 parts and re-developed, the result is practically identical with that given by Piper and Carnegie's formula A.

Some experiments were tried as to the influence of the relative proportions of acid and salt:

	D	E	F
Chromic acid.........................	2½	5	2½
Salt (sodium chloride)...............	2½	2½	5
Water to...........................	1,000	1,000	1,000

The intensification with D and F is identical, and is a little higher than the stronger solutions given above, but the intensification obtained with E is distinctly lower than with D and F. Sections of the same strip negative were treated with the different solutions, and the measurements were made with a Sanger Shepherd densitometer.

DENSITIES

D	4.7	7.0	9.0	12.5	15.3	17.3
E	4.0	6.0	7.7	10.5	13.5	15.7
F	4.5	7.0	9.0	12.5	15.5	17.5

The chromium process is of great practical value, as many have already recognized; it is easy to work, and if care is taken in making up the bichromate and acid solution it gives concordant results. Moreover, it is applicable to negatives, lantern slides, and bromide or gaslight prints. Formula C not only gives that slight degree of intensification which a print often needs, but may also greatly improve the color of the image. With a still larger proportion of acid there is still less intensification, but at the same time a distinct improvement of color, if, for example, the original image has had the well-known olive-green tint.

Music and the Picture

Musical Review of "Latest Compositions"

1—The following hits from "Oh Look," the famous musical comedy success by Carroll and McCarthy, are now published and obtainable from McCarthy & Fischer, Inc., 148 W. Forty-fifth street, New York City:

1—"I'm Always Chasing Rainbows," fox-trot.
2—"Typical, Topical Tunes," fox-trot.
3—"A Kiss for Cinderella," fox-trot.

2—"My Belgian Rose," a beautiful and tuneful waltz published by Leo Feist.

3—"I'm Sorry I Made You Cry," a famous melody by N. J. Clesi, published by Leo Feist. Waltz and fox-trot. The fox-trot is a corking jazz arrangement.

4—"Liberty Bell, It's Time to Ring Again," by Halsey K. Mohr, the biggest song hit of the season. Shapiro-Bernstein edition.

5—John Philip Sousa's latest patriotic march, "Solid Men to the Front," is published by G. Schirmer.

6—The following extracts from "Sinbad," the Winter Garden's latest extravaganza, are now ready for orchestra and published by G. Schirmer:

1—Fox-trot, introducing "The Rag-Lad of Bagdad and Bagdad."
2—Fox-trot, introducing "Badalumbo" and "A Thousand and One Arabian Nights."
3—One-step, introducing "I Hail from Cairo" and "Our Ancestors."
4—Selection.

7—"Our Starry Flag," a fine military march, composed by Schofield, and published by Carl Fischer.

8—"Texas Fox-Trot," by Guoin, the latest Witmark hit.

9—"At Twilight," theme and romance by Ernest S. Golden. A delightful concert number with a theme accompanied by chimes. This number is indispensable when playing to pictures.

10—"Dramatic Recitative," by Sol P. Levy. The Cinema Music Co., which is publishing this number, offers it at a special price of thiry cents for orchestra, and will refund the money if not satisfactory. (Cinema Music Co., Columbia Theatre Building, New York City.)

The Third Liberty Loan as Affecting Music and Our Soldiers

(Reproduced from THE METRONOME)

A BAR of any martial music will inspire a soldier to do his duty in the trenches, or elsewhere. It should inspire the non-combatant to do his bit by the soldier, who needs the stimulating influence of music as much as he needs equipment. The Government can, and will, provide music with some of the money which will be at its disposal from the sale of the Third issue of Liberty Loan bonds which begins April 6, the first anniversary of the entrance of the United States into the war.

The "boys over there" need melody to cheer the loneliness of the trenches. In fact they are so much in need of music and musical instruments that they resort to all sorts of devices to fill the want they feel. Tin whistles are contrived out of all kinds of piping, snare drums are made out of petrol cans, fiddles are fashioned out of cigar boxes and even harps have been contrived out of hoops and piano wire taken from instruments demolished by the enemy in some of the homes they have destroyed.

The soul of a regiment has been declared by Kipling to be in its songs, and when one hums over a few bars of some military air, it is realized at once what a stimulant music is to a soldier. The sale of one Liberty Loan bond will help the Government to keep up the morale of the men who are doing their "bit," to let the spirit of song once more prevail in devastated France and Belgium.

In all such national airs as "The Star Spangled Banner," "The Marseillaise," or "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," we meet with unconcealed truthfulness. French martial airs are particularly sparkling and naive; Italian, suave and graceful; the Polish, mournful and affecting; the Spanish, poignant and gay; Russian, unsympathetic but attractive; Scandinavian, keen and cutting; American, concordant; English, bracing and convincing, and the Irish, melancholy.

The music of the soil grows of itself, especially the national music which in any country has no fixed composer and cannot be accounted for by the earliest inhabitants. In fact the question who invented music has been asked by people of many ages and an answer is still wanting. In the trenches, the sighing of the wind through the death-laden barb-wire entanglements of "No Man's Land" carries along freakish waves of sound that strike the ears of the soldiers like the wail of a banshee. Aviators, who have traversed heights above the clouds will imagine strange tunes that come from the wires of the plane, the tune taking almost any mournful sound that the mood of the aviator conjures.

Music comes from natural causes. The elements of all music exist around us in the sighing of the leaves, the trill of the birds, the gentle monotone of bees, in the swell of the seas and the peal of thunder. Alone in the trenches, the whistling of bullets overhead, the swish of "starlight" shells, the long wail of mighty shrapnel driving through the air, makes music, though the controlling of such raw sounds calls upon all the resources of the fertile imagination of the soldier dreamer, who will be better satisfied with the music that the sale of Liberty Bonds will provide.

A spell in the trenches gives a man ample opportunity to reflect upon many things, and while the war has been productive of poets and some wonderful verse, notably that of Rupert Brooke, who died off Gallipoli; John Masefield, whose "August 1914" is generally regarded as the most remarkable poem yet produced as a result of the war, and Rudyard Kipling, whose poem, "When the English Begin to Hate," is one of the most virile things he has produced, it has not given the world anything wonderful in the way of music. Music will come when the war is over and some of the poetic masterpieces of the war poets will be set to harmonies that will live eternally. Trench reflection takes the soldier back through youth and school days, and when a reverie is induced by the sounds evoked from the makeshift fiddle, or tin whistle, the student will recall the "shell" story. According to the Hymn to Hermes—at one time attributed to Homer—the god, soon after his birth, found a mountain tortoise grazing near his grotto on Mount Kyllene. He disemboweled it, took its shell, and out of the back of the shell he formed the lyre. He took two stalks of equal length, and, boring the shell, he employed them as arms or sides of the lyre. He stretched the skin of the ox over the shell, to cover the open part, tied cross-bars of reed to the arms, and attached seven strings of sheep gut to the cross-bars. This is the first suggestion of a stringed instrument from which was patterned the harp, dulcimer, lute, harpsichord and piano. Probably the first ironsmith was the unconscious originator of percussion instruments.

However the origin of music may do for reflection; what is needed is more bands, more music for the boys at the front to enliven the tedium of trench warfare which has long intervals between "drives," and which will be well provided for through the success of the Third Liberty Loan drive in which every non-combatant musician will be glad to participate.

"MISSOURI-WALTZ"

The World's Greatest
and
Most Popular Waltz

* * *

For Piano - - - 30c Per Copy
For Orchestra - 11 and Piano 25c
For Orchestra - Full and Piano 35c

Forster Music Publisher, Inc.
736 South Michigan Avenue
CHICAGO, ILL.

CAMERAMEN LABORATORY-MEN,
PRODUCERS, and EXPERIMENTERS

Let the Camera Department

of

Motion Picture News

Solve Your Problems
Submit your questions to the

EDITOR OF THE CAMERA DEPT.

" WILL YOU MARRY ME? "

(Selected and Compiled by M. Winkler)

Theme: "Love Theme (4/4 Andante Sentimento) by Abbott Lee

Opening—" Pearl Fisher " (Selection), by Bizet (3 minutes and 45 seconds); 1st Movement, " Allegro non Troppo "; 2nd Movement, " Andante non Troppo."

T: " His Name was Ned Chapman "—Intermezzo (Allegretto), by Pierne (2 minutes).

T: " She had never seen much."

T: "Ruth loved fishing "—" Gavotte and Musette " (Allegro), by Miles (2 minutes and 45 seconds).

T: " You've come just in time."

T: " Each day he continued."

T: " The tempest smiled "—Storm Furioso to action (3 minutes and 40 seconds).

T: " Just as we were married."

T: " You are beautiful tonight."

T: " I love you, Ruth "—Theme (1 minute and 30 seconds).

T: " Of course you're going, etc."

T: " Ruth "—Continue ff (50 seconds).

S: The fight—" Dramatic Agitato," by Hough (2 minutes).

T: " Fearing the outcome."

T: " Where have you been? "—" Dramatic Recitative," by Levy (4 minutes and 10 seconds).

T: " I searched all over."

T: " But Ned has promised."

T: " If you ever need help."

T: " Chapman, realizing, etc."—" Sorrow Theme," by Roberts (1 minute and 20 seconds).

T: " Come with me to the city."

T: " Doctor Benjamin Conner "—" Melody " (Mod.), by Huerter (2 minutes and 45 seconds).

T: " Ned, haven't you forgotten? "

T: " Wearying of Ruth "—Theme (3 minutes and 40 seconds).

T: " A lady called."

..T: " As the truth dawned "—" Heart Wounds " (Dramatic), by Grieg (3 minutes and 30 seconds).

T: " I am sorry I cannot help."

T: " Will you marry me? "—Theme (2 minutes).

T: " But your promise."

S: Interior of Hotel—" Romance " (Andante Sostenuto), by Karganoff (5 minutes and 20 seconds).

T: " You must go in alone."

T: " I am going to bring Ruth."

T: " Mystery in girl's death "—Theme (1 minute and 40 seconds).

T: " You have been a brave girl."

T: " The medical society, etc."—" Tragic Theme," by Paul Vely (4 minutes and 35 seconds).

T: " I'll phone for Doctor Norton."

T: " My dear child, you must tell me, etc."

T: " This is a case like, etc."—" Love Song " (Dramatic), by Flegier (3 minutes and 40 seconds).

T: " Ruth, I've come to take you."

T: " You must tell us."

T: " I am interested in this lady "—" Dramatic Tension," by Levy (4 minutes).

T: " This is David."

T: " It is my duty."

T: " There is the scoundrel."

T: " The next day "—" Sweet Reverie " (Melodious), by Tshaikowsky (2 minutes).

T: " A little rest and, etc."

T: " Ruth has consented "—" L'Adieu " (Dramatic), by Karganoff (2 minutes and 30 seconds).

T: " Doctor Connor, I have."

S: Ruth getting out of bed—Theme (2 minutes and 30 seconds).

T: " The following morning."

T: " Brought to trial "—" Dramatic Andante," by Borch (1 minute).

T: " Turning her back upon, etc."—" Yester Love " (Intermezzo Andantino), by Borch (4 minutes).

T: " There is nothing to forgive."

S: Arriving train—" Pastel Menuet " (Allegro Giocoso), by Paradis (2 minutes and 20 seconds), until * * * * * END.

" UNFAITHFUL "

(Triangle Production)

Theme: " Love Theme " by Albert Lee

1—" Serenade " (Dramatic Mod.), by Widor (2 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: " I want to share your trials."

2—Theme (2 minutes and 20 seconds), until—T: " Morning, the dawn of a desperate plan."

3—" Dramatic Narrative," by P. Pement (1 minute and 40 seconds), until—T: " Luncheon with Dick."

4—Continue to action (40 seconds), until—T: " Later."

5—Theme (3 minutes and 30 seconds), until—T: " Take down every word."

6—" The Vampire " (Dramatic Theme), by Levy (5 minutes), until—T: " The unexpected—— "

7—" L'Adieu " (Dramatic), by Karganoff (3 minutes), until—T: " Meet me at the Hotel Savery."

Note—Watch Telephone Bell.

8—Theme (1 minute and 10 seconds), until—T: " At the Hotel Savery."

9—Continue pp (1 minute and 35 seconds), until—T: " The end of the chapter."

10—" After Sunset " (Dramatic Moderato), by A. Pryor (4 minutes), until—T: " It isn't funny."

11—Heavy Mysterioso to action (2 minutes and 50 seconds), until—T: " The shot, it frightened me."

Note—Watch Shot.

12—Theme (1 minute and 40 seconds), until * * * * * END.

Screen Examinations

(Continued from page 2566)

" The Marriage Lie "

(Universal—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

UNIVERSAL seems to have a penchant for selecting heroines unable to realize what it means when their gentlemen friends pay for their living without much serious talk of marriage. "The Marriage Lie" has Eileen Orton as the female of this particular species. For quite a while the audience is not permitted to know whether Eileen is married or not, but as she doesn't seem to know either it's unanimous. It has a rather impossible foundation, this story of "The Marriage Lie." It is a little too unreal for the serious entertainment it is meant to be, and the leads interpret their roles so sincerely that the effect produced is some times humorous. A magazine once contained it, under another title and bearing the authorship of Blair Hall.

All things considered, it may be put down as in the same class with "The Risky Road." From title to trailer it holds forth similar entertainment. The author created an unreal situation and then sought to build a convincing story atop it. Partial success is the result. It either entertains or accidentally amuses. Carmel Myers in the role of Eileen is attractive, but why wish a name like Eileen on Miss Myers? Kenneth Harlan is a gentlemanly and likable hero. Harry Carter is another unreal role and has rather a hard time of it. Joseph Girard and William Quinn have parts in the introduction of the story proper. Stuart Paton directed.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Eileen Orton (Carmel Myers) learns after the death of her father (Joseph Girard), a gambler, that she is penniless. Unable to find work, she becomes despondent. One night, returning from the wedding party of her only friend, she collides with Seward (Kenneth Harlan) as he comes from his club. It so happens that Seward has had an offer to journey to South America on an engineering project, providing he can show his prospective employer a wife. The prospective employer, Craver (Harry Carter), is by no means a woman-hater. So it develops that Eileen gets the job of posing as Seward's wife. Seward finds after a while that he loves her, and there isn't any doubt but what Eileen loves him. But on his departure for South America he leaves her, unmarried, in his apartment. Craver persists in his attentions while Seward is away and eventually learns that the two are not really married. Seward falls down on his job in the South and takes to drink, after the fever has ravished him. He is ever jealous over the thought that Eileen is entertaining other of her friends while he is away. He returns home in time enough to drive Craver from his home and discover Eileen's trust and love for him.

" Her Helping Hand "

(Mutual-Strand—One Reel)

Reviewed by F. G. Spencer

THIS single-reel comedy featuring Billie Rhodes, and which is scheduled for release Tuesday, April 26, is not up to Strand standard, although it carries a vein of humor so characteristic of the irrepressible Mary (Billie Rhodes). The theme is based on the rivalry of two suitors for Mary's hand, and one of these suitors resorts to the despicable means of "faking" Jack's (Cullen Landis) personal diary, and thus making sure that Mary is apprised of the alleged fact that Jack has bet $100 that he will become engaged to her within a week. Mary, true to form, decides to give Jack the lesson of his life—so becomes engaged to him and at a party permits the engagement to be announced. It is. And straightaway Mary forbids Jack to smoke, drink, play cards or dance with any other girl. Poor Jack realizes the shackles thus imposed and seeks to relieve himself of the engagement pack, when he learns that his rival, Jim, has inscribed the memo in his (Jack's) diary and there's a wild battle, after which Mary acknowledges her deception in engaging herself to Jack, and they both decide to bury the hatchet and really become engaged.

" The Girl from Beyond "

(Vitagraph—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Joseph L. Kelley

CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY missed fire on his latest contribution to the list of Vitagraph dramas, "The Girl From Beyond." From the standpoint of story, it is poor, and in its creation for screen presentation Director William Wolbert has done no better. Story, direction and acting are at low tide, no one of the three elements rising above the mediocre. Convenient coincidents supply the connecting links holding together the flimsy plot material, which breaks down under the stress of padding, recuperates for one hundred or more feet and then falls, to limp along to the end.

Everything is confusion from start to finish. Characters are thrown into the fray with the same recklessness that Von Hindenburg is said to throw his troops against the lines of the Allies.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Geoffrey Hampden (Alfred Whitman), a young Texan, owns large oil interests in his native state. He lives in New York with his sister, who kills herself because she has been betrayed by a man. She leaves a note, giving the name of her betrayer. Hampden hurries to Philip Armond's (Ed. Alexander), the man's, apartment and arrives in time to save one of his victims from the same fate as his sister met. The police interfere, but Hampden refuses to betray his sister's request that he mention the fact to no one.

Years later Hampden, now known as George Hammond (also Alfred Whitman), lives in a cabin on his oil fields with his partner, Dick Stewart (Bob Burns)). Cynthia, his sister (Nell Shipman), comes to the oil fields to visit her brother and is seized by enemies of Dick. Hammond rescues her and takes her to his cabin. Stewart is mortally wounded in revenging the attack on his sister. He is taken to Hammond's cabin, where he finds his sister with Hammond. Before his death he asks Hammond to marry his sister to avoid scandal. Hammond complies with his wishes and the ceremony is performed, after which he makes an agreement with Cynthia, giving her an allowance and telling her that she can go her way and he will go his.

Cynthia goes to New York and there meets Armond, who had betrayed Hammond's sister. She becomes engaged to him and takes him to Texas to present him to Hammond. Hammond has told her that she is at liberty to marry another if she likes, that he will permit her to divorce him.

When Armond arrives Hammond recognizes him and he is given a revolver and told to defend himself. He is killed, and Hammond and Cynthia are united.

(Additional Reviews on page 2385)

General Comments

Leo Feist's attorney has received word from the Department of Justice that the song, "There'll Be A Hot Time For the Old Men While the Young Men Are Away," will not be interfered with in any manner.

E. T. Paull, the well-known instrumental composer and publisher, is breaking into the limelight again with a new number called "Hurrah! For the Liberty Boys, Hurrah!" Mr. Paull always had a knack for writing tuneful melodies, and experienced musicians are sufficiently familiar with his work not to ask for additional recommendation.

"What'll We Do With Him, Boys," is a new one by Andrew B. Sterling, and published by Joe Morris Music Company. It must be a hummer, otherwise Sailor Reilly would not be featuring it in the big time show houses.

Burkhardt-Horwitz is the name of a new firm at 145 West Forty-fifth street, New York City. Both men have had long experience in the music game, and should make a success of their venture into the ranks of publishers.

Just at present Fred Haviland is beginning to stir things in his Forty-eighth street office. Two new numbers he intends to issue shortly, appear to have all the earmarks of hits.

"France, We Have Not Forgotten You," is the latest to be issued by Leo Feist. The fact that the firm is going to put its entire force behind the song is proof that it is out of the ordinary as a song hit.

"You've Been Your Mother's Baby Long Enough" and "I'm the Brother of Lily of the Valley," by Gilbert & Friedland, are becoming big favorites with singers and musicians.

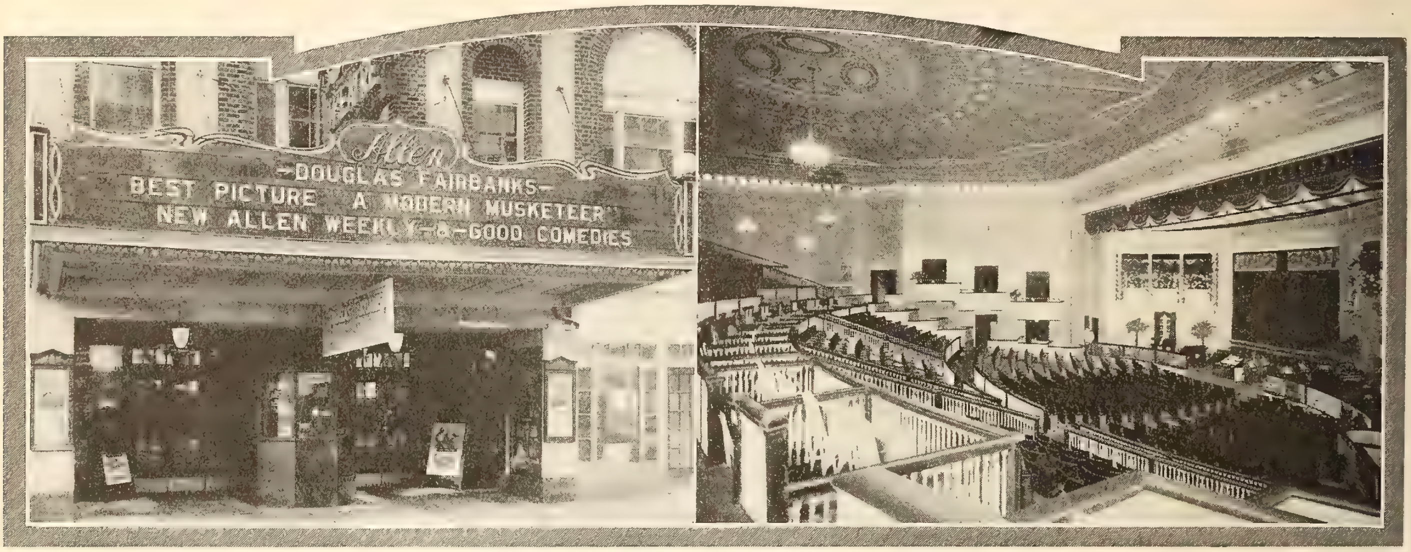
THE BARTOLA

Our aim has been to build the best musical instrument. We have more than exceeded our expectations.

Write for particulars.

CHAS. C. PYLE, General Sales Agent, 707-712 Mallers Bldg., Chicago, Ill. Factory, Oshkosh, Wis.

Theatres Worth While



Allen
DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS
BEST PICTURE A MODERN MUSKETEER
NEW ALLEN WEEKLY & GOOD COMEDIES

View of Front of Allen Theatre, Toronto, and Auditorium

Allen Theatre, Toronto, Big Success

WITHIN the six months that it has been appealing to the public of Toronto, the handsome Allen theatre has made one of the best records among motion picture houses anywhere. The theatre was opened November 12, 1917. It is owned by the Temple Theatre Corporation and is located at Richmond and Victoria streets, in the downtown business section of the city.

Jule and J. J. Allen, the principal owners are two of the most successful theatre proprietors in Canada and they brought to the new house their broad knowledge and experience which put behind the construction the plans and ideas which made the Allen the finest and most modern house in the whole Dominion.

Foyer, Allen Theatre, Toronto

The seating plans of the house, which cares for 1,900, is unique in that it is built on the style of the old Roman amphitheatres, all the seats being on the same floor. The seats rise in tiers so that everyone is assured of an unobstructed view of the screen and stage.

The building is modern fireproof in construction and there are numerous entrances and exits that eliminates all crowding and assures the safety of the patrons. The auditorium is of an architectural style that possesses great beauty without the fault of being too ornate. Admirable taste has been shown in selection of the curtains, draperies and rugs to be in harmony with the dominant color scheme of old rose, gold and gray.

Two Powers 6-B machines are used in the projection room, these having a throw of 140 feet to an Acme Gold Fibre screen.

The lobby is 30 by 35 and equipped with frames for the photographs which are used. An automatic ticket seller and Barret change maker are used there while a Dictaphone is part of the equipment so that any complaints, reports of lost articles, etc. can be recorded at once.

Music is one of the big features of the theatre. In the first place there is an orchestra of fifteen and this is supplemented by a grand pipe organ and a Steinway grand piano. The only portion of the organ that can be seen by the patrons is the console, or keyboard, the pipes being concealed. The organ has a combination that will produce practically every effect desired.

Paramount, Artcraft and Select pictures are used regularly at the Allen. In addition to these the performance includes an overture, the Allen "Library of Knowledge and Current Events," a comedy and a final march. Admission is 15 and 25 cents for the matinees and 25 and 50 cents in the evening.

J. B. Cronk is manager of the Allen, coming to that theatre from the Allen, Calgary, which was under his direction for several years, previous to his motion picture experience of ten years. His selection as director of the finest theatre in Canada is recognition of the position in which he is held.

Ten years ago Jule and Jay J. Allen, in conjunction with their father, B. Allen, opened their first moving picture theatre in Brantford, at a time when such a thing was a distinct novelty outside of the larger cities. The venture met with great success, which led them to open theatres in adjacent towns. A few years later they sold their interests in Ontario and departed for larger conquests in the West.

The first theatre erected by them in the West was The Monarch, at Calgary. Control was also gained of the Allen theatres in Calgary and Moose Jaw. The Rex theatre of Regina was built by the Messrs. Allen in 1912, and since then they erected The Allen at Moose Jaw, which is considered the most modern moving picture theatre in Western Canada. The Allen of Brandon and Rex theatre of Winnipeg are included in their Western chain.

Lobby, Allen Theatre, Toronto

While in the West Messrs. Allen became extensively interested in the distribution of films, and opened branches in Calgary, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Toronto, Montreal and St. John. Two years ago they moved to Toronto and made their headquarters there. Today they have the exclusive distribution in Canada of all Artcraft, Paramount and Select pictures.

Screen Examinations

(Continued from page 2583)

" The Scarlet Drop "

(Universal-Harry Carey Special—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Samuel D. Palmer

UNIVERSAL has joined the army of film producers who have dug up that old, old story of the fugitive's presence being betrayed by a drop of blood leaking through the ceiling from the room above, and dusted off the cobweb. And as if this were not enough the producer in the present instance has emphasized the incident by selecting "The Scarlet Drop" as the title of its new Harry Carey Special Attraction.

As screen entertainment, "The Scarlet Drop" hardly warrants the dignity of characterization which the term "Special Attraction" implies. With its story laid in the days of the Civil War, it is essentially a costume play—rather it should be. But, after all, evidently reasons Jack Ford, author-director, what matters if the trousers are of the cut of 1910 so long as the coats are faithful reproductions of the frocks of 1860? And if Harry Carey as the Kentucky hillbilly is to be garbed in the same habiliments which he has worn as the bandit in many a Western drama of a much later period, why not let him roll his own cigarettes? Harry Carey wouldn't be Harry Carey without his "makin's."

In the role of "Kaintuck" Ridge, Carey plays the outlaw convincingly and acceptably as ever. Molly Malone in the leading feminine role continues to be sweetly appealing, while Betty Schade with little to do does it well. Vester Pegg, in a part somewhat different from his usual role, nevertheless maintains his high standard of villainy.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

The announcement that Fort Sumter has been fired upon greets the ears of "Kaintuck" Ridge (Harry Carey), when, with his mother, he attends church in the Kentucky village for the first time in some years. He offers his services for the defense of the Union to serve under Captain Marley Calvert (Vester Pegg), who spurns the offer and insults him as "white trash." Only Molly Calvert (Molly Malone) has a kind word for him. With bitterness in his heart he vows revenge on the Calverts. He joins Quantrell's raiders, becoming nothing more than an ordinary outlaw. Later the Calverts and Graham Lyons (M. K. Wilson) enter the mining business. Molly, on her way to visit her brother, is made captive by "Kaintuck," and in the few hours they are together, love is awakened. "Kaintuck" takes the girl to the mining camp, and waits around long enough to be of service in saving Molly from Lyons, who has found out that Molly's father had a daughter by a negro housekeeper. He has taken it for granted that Molly is the child, and has blackmailed Marley into turning her over to him. In the fight "Kaintuck" is shot, and, when Marley learns the truth, he hides the outlaw in the attic. When the officers arrive for the fugitive his presence is betrayed by a drop of blood which leaks through the ceiling. However, he escapes from the officers, eventually to lead a better life and to return to Molly.

" The Law of the Great Northwest "

(Triangle—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Joseph L. Kelley

MARGERY WILSON and Eugene Corey, in the leading straight roles, and William Dyer in a character role, put their shoulders behind this late Triangle offering and place it well up in the front rank of those screen dramas revealing life's tragedies enacted in the lives of the Northwest dwellers.

Raymond Wells presided at the megaphone and his ability as a director, keeping one eye for atmosphere, the other for reality in exposition, and both concentrated on the heart-interest touches, is revealed in every scene of this forcible melodramatic story of life in the Canadian Northwest.

Ralph R. Westfall wrote the story and it was prepared for reproduction on the screen by Charles Mortimer Peck whose skill at doing continuity is evidenced in the smoothness with which the plot is unfolded on the screen. Gilbert Warrenton, behind the camera, has registered some pretty shots, and his idea of perspective and points of vantage from which to shoot to kill, is based on good practical experience, we should judge.

The author, or was it the scenario writer, has made his rescuing hero, arrive at the right time in the right place and accomplish the right thing, without first laying a firm foundation or attributing a reason for his being there in time to do the rescuing act. Perhaps the limitation placed on the reelage prevented this.

William Dyer's portrayal of Sinclair, the French Canadian, is highly commendable. His work is one of the shining lights in the production. Mr. Dyer could have toned down a bit his make-up—too many whiskers. His portrayal of this heavy is a convincing piece of dramatic work. Louis Durham in a similar role, although not as much in evidence, is also good. William V. Mong does his usual good work in an old man's part. J. P. Wild is a striking type of priest.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Hal Sinclair (William Dyer) has a monopoly on the fur trading business at Fort Roscher. His dealings with the traders is unscrupulous and he rules with an iron hand. Independent traders open a store near Sinclair's place and he sets about to ruin them, lest he lose his flourishing business. He enlists the aid of Mont Brennan (Louis Durham), who shoots up the place. The Royal Mounted Police are informed of the tragedy and Jamison (Will Jeffries), one of the number, is assigned to investigate the matter. At the same time as he arrives at Fort Roscher, Morin (Eugene Corey), son of a rich banker who loves life in the open and adventure, arrives. Monest (William V. Mong) and his daughter Marie (Margery Wilson) are new arrivals, also. Monest is in need of money and when Sinclair sees his daughter he decides to get something on Monest in order that he may compel him to give his daughter in marriage. Monest is given credit and all the drinks he wants, without money. Marie falls in love with Morin. While at the store she overhears a plot to kill Morin, arranged by Brennan and Sinclair. She goes back to the store and as Brennan is about to kill Morin she fires a shot which kills Moran. Jamison ends the reign of terror and Marie and Morin are happily united.

For Better Music
The Fotoplayer
62 West 45th Street AMERICAN PHOTO PLAYER CO. New York City

The film that first made motion pictures practical is easily identifiable by the words

"EASTMAN"

AND

"KODAK"

on the film margin.

EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

"NEWMAN" BRASS FRAMES AND RAILS

STRAND
PARAMOUNT PICTURES
10
TODAY
GEORGE BEBAN
THE

Corner Unit Hinged Frames

Accompanying cut shows our new style unit frame for corners of theatre lobbies. Especially designed to fit irregular shaped columns and sloping entrances. Neat, attractive and complete, it enables the passer-by to see at a glance the entire program.

Send sketch for prices and ask for new 1918 catalog.

The Newman Mfg. Co.
Established 1882

Write for our Latest Catalogue

717-19 Sycamore Street, Cincinnati, Ohio
68 W. Washington Street, Chicago, Illinois
Canadian Representative—J. T. Malone Films,
Rialto Theatre Bldg., Montreal, Canada
Pacific Coast—G. A. Metcalfe,
San Francisco, Cal.

Frames, Easels, Rails, Grilles, Signs, Choppers, Kick Plates, Door Bars

Get Your Release Dates in by Saturday at Latest

"Unclaimed Goods"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

PARAMOUNT chose wisely when "Unclaimed Goods," a story by Johnston McCulley, was selected for Vivian Martin. This is a pleasing comedy-drama that has a sustaining touch of melodrama forming a strong climax. One can even overlook the fact that the Wells Fargo Express Company is the leading man. It is referred to in the subtitles as a fine institution and its familiar sign is often in evidence. The hero exclaims: "Wells Fargo will not stand for this," and the villain laughs. But "Unclaimed Goods" is rich in comedy touches and the suspense of the melodramatic vein can not be denied. Little Betsy's journey from her father to the lawless mining town via Wells Fargo is full of amusing incidents. The expressman tags her, covers her shoes with stickers and feeds and waters her with the rest of the "live stock."

Miss Martin as Betsy is a delightful little heroine. Harrison Ford is a suitable hero though not the typical one. Casson Ferguson as the boy who thinks himself a bad man and who ultimately saves Betsy from the villain gives a capable performance. George McDaniel runs true to type as the heavy while Dick La Reno, George Kunkel and Carmen Phillips appear in supporting roles. Gardner Hunting prepared the scenario and Rollin S. Sturgeon directed.

The majority of Miss Martin's pictures are wholesomely amusing whether or not they possess real sustaining interest. "Unclaimed Goods" has the added attraction of this latter element. But the producers do not seem to be able to instill that which is described as "heart interest" into her pictures. When they can do this the Vivian Martin five-reelers will be practically perfect.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Betsy Burke (Vivian Martin) is sent to Gold Center by her father (Dick La Reno). He is obliged to send her as an express package as the train is crowded with rough miners bound for the same destination, a big gold strike having been reported there. Burke, as a joke, sends her to her uncle (George Kunkel) C. O. D. But during Betsy's journey "Gentleman Joe" Slade and his crowd of highwaymen and gamblers have taken possession of the town, forcing all the honest men to gamble with them and giving them small chance to win. Uncle Murphy is penniless and helpless when Betsy arrives. She is consigned to the care of the express agent, Danny (Harrison Ford). Joe demands that she be sold at public auction at the end of a certain period, such a proceeding being legal with respect to unclaimed goods. Attempts to escape result in failure. All seems black until the "Cocopah Kid" (Casson Ferguson), a would-be bad man and admirer of Betsy, arrives in the village. Betsy prevails upon him to sneak out for assistance. He manages to do so and in the meantime telegraphs for Burke. But the time for the sale draws near. At length Betsy is placed up at auction in the bar-room. Danny's attempts to protect her from this insult are futile. The Kid with a show of daring inspired by his love for the girl, enters the bar and holds up the entire proceedings. His triumph is short-lived, however, as Joe and his men soon get the upper hand. Burke then arrives with a posse and finally saves the day. The Kid is mortally wounded in the fray but before he dies he joins the hands of Betsy and Danny.

"The Busy Inn"

(Pathe-Russian Art—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

"THE BUSY INN," latest in Pathe's series of Russian art films, is based on a drama by Alexander Ostrovsky and has as its principals an inn-keeper and his wife, who make a better living by rifling the pockets of their sleeping and drunken guests than they do in their legitimate trade. Added to this there is the love affair of a visiting Prince and the sister of the inn-keeper's wife, an innocent girl who is compromised again and again before the Prince by the schemes of her sister before the story closes.

This story does not register as well as have some of the preceding productions of the Russian Art company. As pictured, some of the situations intended as dramatic fall quite short of their purpose; in fact, often getting a laugh instead of creating suspense or a thrill. There is some good intentional comedy in the opening reel, but the latter part contains so much plotting, counter-plotting and cross purposes that the story becomes muddled.

The picture is realistically staged and the performances of Nadya Lesienko, N. I. Panoff, Madame Orlova and N. A. Backsheef are worthy of note.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Bessnye (N. I. Panoff) conducts a disreputable inn with his wife, Eugenia (Nadya Lesienko). They conspire to rob their guests and swindle

Business Offerings

Music Rolls for sale for 65 note electric pianos. All in good condition. 75 cents per roll. Address Lyric Theatre, Salem, Ill.

FOR SALE Cheap — A Complete Studio Outfit. Mutual Film Corporation, 1600 Broadway, N. Y. C.

IMSCO PLAN

Makes it possible for us to serve wants at lowest prices. Courtesy with Service. Once a customer, always one.

INDEPENDENT MOVIE SUPPLY CO.
Room 603
729 Seventh Avenue, New York

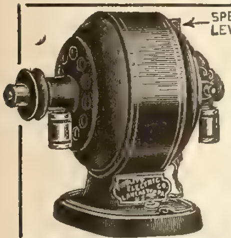
OPEN FOR POSITION

I am just through with Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. I can fulfill position as laboratory superintendent or negative developer. Address B. J. M., care of Motion Picture News, 729 Seventh Avenue, New York.

TransVerteR

Automatically supplies only such voltage as arc requires. No waste of current in ballast.

HERTNER ELECTRIC & MFG. CO.
W. 114th St., Cleveland, Ohio, US.A



MOVING PICTURE MACHINE MOTOR

$18.00

Alternating or Direct Current Complete with variable speed lever. Immediate delivery.

Fidelity Electric Co.
Lancaster, Pa.

Theatre and Exchange Mailing List Service

We rent lists of or address contemplated or existing theatres, exchanges, state rights owners, publicity mediums and producers, selected as to territory, class, etc. Twenty thousand changes were recorded in our list last year. Its use means a saving to you of from 30 to 50% in postage, etc.

MOTION PICTURE DIRECTORY CO.
80 Fifth Avenue, New York
Phone, 3227 Chelsea
425 Ashland Block, Chicago
Phone, 2003 Randolph

Addressing Multigraphing
Printing N 160 Typewriting

them in divers' ways. Eugenia's younger sister, Anna (Madame Orlova), loves Prince Myloff (N. A. Backsheef), a frequent visitor at the inn. Eugenia lies to the Prince about her sister, telling him that she flirts with every visitor. She makes the Prince promise to visit her that evening, when her husband is out on the road attending to a robbery. The Prince readily accepts Eugenia's invitation, and Anna is disheartened with she sees him enter her sister's room. Taking what she believes to be poison, she writes a note to the Prince, confessing her great love for him. Bessnye returns earlier than Eugenia expected and discovers the Prince in his inn. Realizing the manner in which his wife had been entertaining him, he does nothing, because afraid. The Prince reads the note and is in great sorrow until it is discovered that Anna only took a sleeping potion. She awakes to find the Prince begging her forgiveness. Eugene and Bessnye continue their practice of robbing unsuspecting travelers.

"Who Killed Walton?"

(Triangle—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Joseph L. Kelley

THE mystery element revealed in "Who Killed Walton?" a Triangle presentation, produced under the direction of Thomas N. Heffron, will put this over. Great effort was made by the author, Norman Sherbrooks and the continuity writer, Frank Condon, to keep the suspense sustained to the last reel. This they have done with so much obvious exertion in weaving the plot, that it becomes a matter of mechanical solution rather than a free and natural trend. As a mystery drama, this one ranks with the below-the-average. This brand of the drama is well received as a rule, for the reason that there is mystery contained. The fault with this one is in the story. It has little in the way of a firm foundation and the plot is strained to the breaking point at times. The photography stands out with the clearness of a blue sky and Jacob Kull is due a lot of credit for his work behind the camera.

J. Barney Sherry and Mary Mersch are in the principal roles, Mr. Sherry given the featured part. His work is done with appreciation. Miss Mersch is a newcomer in Triangle leading roles. She gives an average performance. Doro Rodgers and Frank Bonn with Edwin Brady, leading, give good support.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Walton (Frank Bonn), an artist and man-about-town, meets Marian Emlen (Mary Mersch), a novelist. Walton has been asked to illustrate her late book. Elsa Armytage (Doro Rodgers), his former sweetheart, objects to his paying attention to Marian. George Hamilton (J. Barney Sherry), an influential politician, admires Marian. Austin Booth (Edwin Brady), a reformer, is Marian's fiance. Walton, that he might discuss with Marian the illustrations which he contemplates for her book, invites her to dinner at the Schloss, a restaurant and cabaret located in the apartment-house building in which he lives. While they are there he attempts to force his affections on Marian and she leaves him. Elsa sees him and they quarrel. Marian starts to leave the building but faints in the corridor. Elsa discovers her and has her taken to Walton's apartment after she has stabbed him to death because he spurned her. She casts the blame for his murder on Marian. Hamilton clears up the mystery and he and Marian come to a better understanding. Booth, who criticized Marian for being in the company with Walton, believes that she is the guilty party.

"The House of Hate"

(Pathe—Eighth Epiosde)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

PEARL WHITE performs a big thriller in this number, entitled "The Untold Secret." In her endeavor to locate a lawyer who claims to know the secret of the Hooded Terror, she and Gresham are trapped in an office by henchmen of Ezra Waldon. They break the window, and Pearl climbs out on a rope extending to the next building, balancing herself by another rope which runs overhead.

Reputation and Art Laboratories

Reputation is a structure that is never complete.

We are building ours—the work we do for you is its foundation. Therefore, every job is made perfect in order that our Reputation will stand firm.

ART LABORATORIES

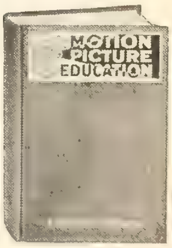
Developing — Titles — Printing

316 East 48th Street

Murray Hill 6973 Edmond Kuhn, Supt.

Office

Bryant 8324 1476 Broadway



Something new, important and practical

What are the uses of motion pictures? How can I employ them in my work? What will it cost? All these questions—and many more—fully covered in this new book by Ernest A. Dench.

Cloth—12mo. Price, postpaid, $2.00

The Standard Publishing Company
Desk 22, Cincinnati, O.

Unless You Have The
Automaticket System
You Are Losing Money
1733 Broadway, New York

REMBUSCH SCREEN Co

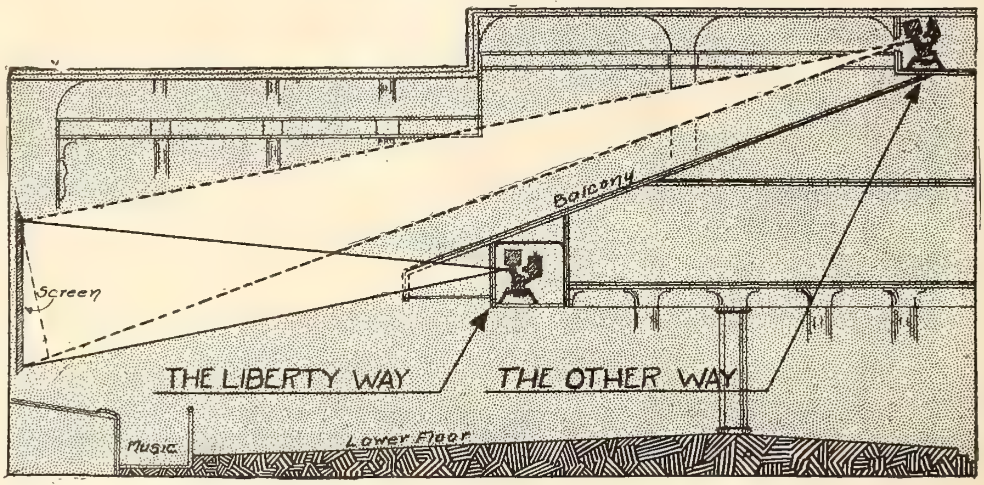
ALL KINDS OF MOTION PICTURE SCREENS
EST. 1903

SHELBYVILLE, INDIANA.

TYPHOON COOLING SYSTEM

TYPHOON FAN COMPANY 1544 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

Brains Built This Theatre



(Projection Plan Liberty Theatre New Orleans)

BRAINS—up-to-date brains—are evident in all its appointments.

BRAINS conceived the idea of straight throw projection, thus reproducing a picture in perfect proportion.

BRAINS knew that perfect projection demands a perfect projector.

Therefore:

Brains Selected
The Projector

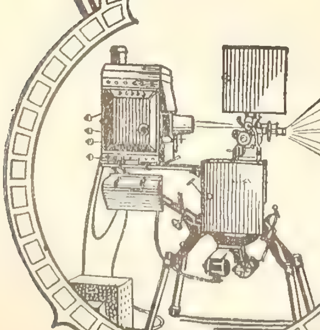
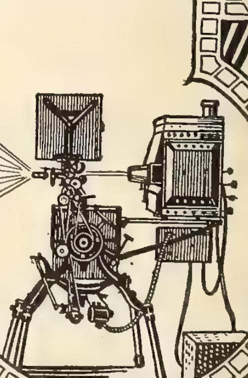
Power's Cameragraph No. 6 B



NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY
INCORPORATED
PIONEERS OF PROJECTION
90 GOLD ST. NEW YORK



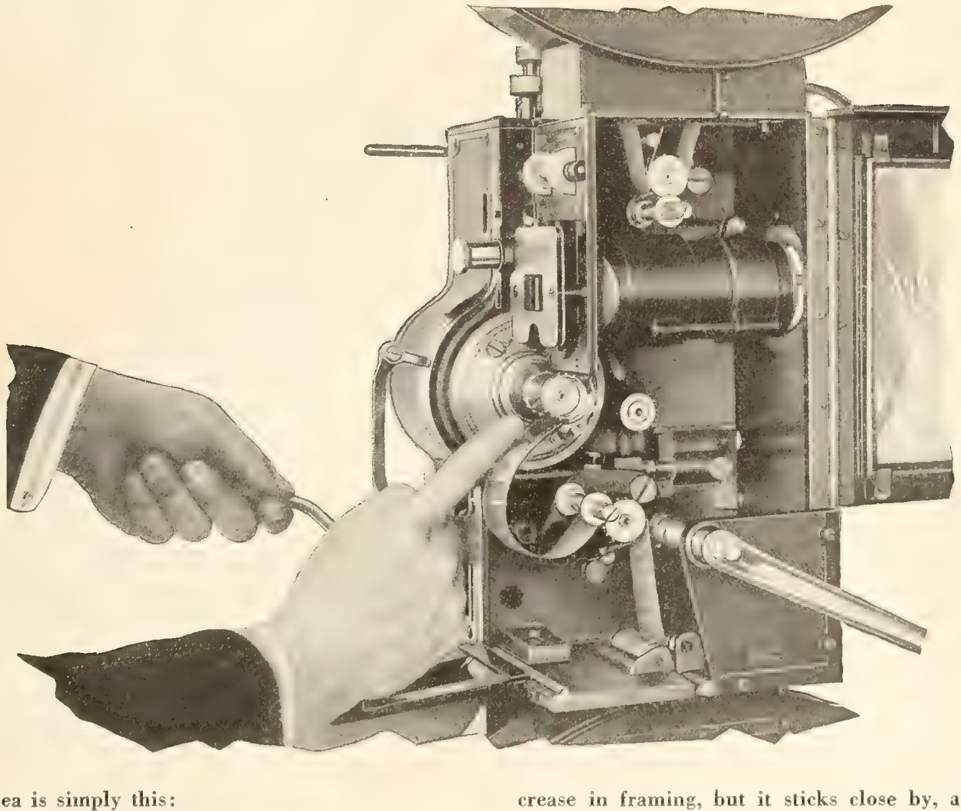
THE WILLIAMS PRINTING COMPANY, NEW YORK

Simplex

You can't put it on

When you hear others tell of the steady picture the Simplex projects, don't imagine that this is a quality we've put onto the Machine, and that it will wear off.

No. Steadiness of picture is designed and built right into the Simplex. It's a quality that stays in; and that's why it is the Machine with Permanently Perfect Projection.



The idea is simply this:

The Intermittent Sprocket is very close to the Aperture—and it stays there.

This is so very important because the film is not made of a perfect material; it shrinks and undergoes changes that introduce inaccuracies. And the greater the distance between the Sprocket and the Aperture, the greater is the effect of these inaccuracies upon the position of each picture in the Aperture—upon the steadiness of the picture on the Screen.

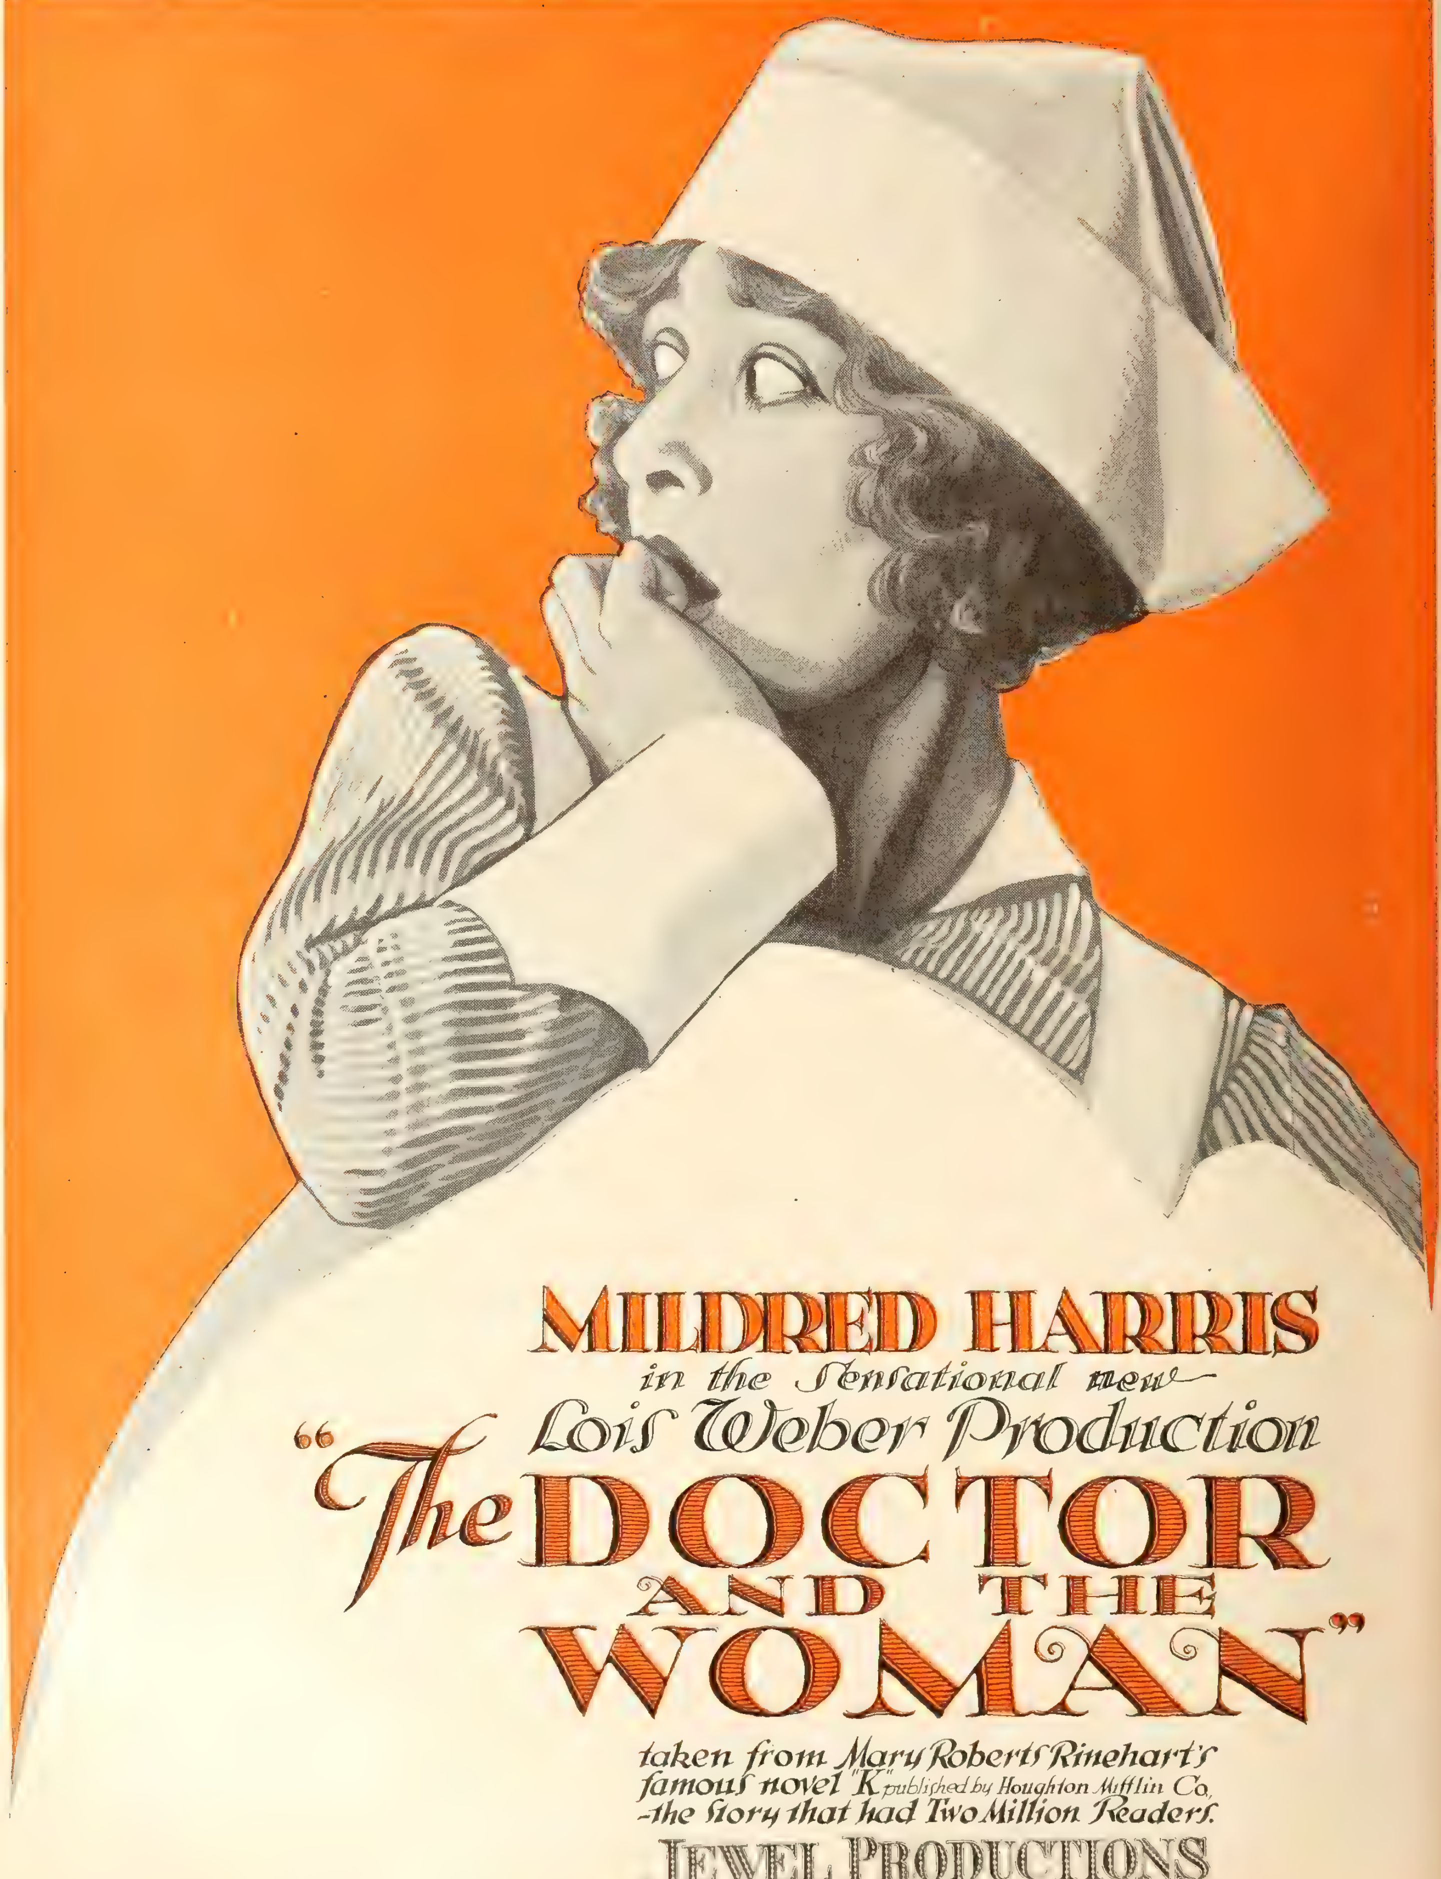
And the Simplex is the only Projector (a patented feature) in which framing is accomplished by revolving the Intermittent Sprocket around its own center. Its distance from the Aperture does not increase in framing, but it sticks close by, and errors in the film are thereby kept off the Screen.

That isn't all. We frame the picture by turning the entire Intermittent Sprocket Oil Chamber; and your mechanical sense will tell you that such a round bearing can be made to move freely without the slightest perceptible looseness, whereas any movement in a straight line must be produced by mounting the parts loosely on rods or guides, without the possibility of a really close, shakeless fit.

There's no room here for other, less important reasons. What we have shown you will help you understand the sound mechanical reasons for the Simplex's unequaled steadiness of picture.

Designed-and-built-in qualities beat so-called "talking-points" all hollow

THE PRECISION MACHINE CO. INC.
317 East 34th: St— New York



MILDRED HARRIS

in the Sensational new

Lois Weber Production

"The DOCTOR AND THE WOMAN"

taken from Mary Roberts Rinehart's famous novel "K" published by Houghton Mifflin Co.
—the Story that had Two Million Readers.

JEWEL PRODUCTIONS
INCORPORATED
Executive Offices, 1600 Broadway; New York City

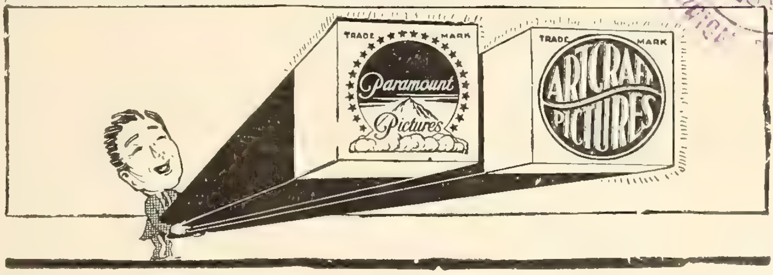
MAY 4, 1918

Motion Picture News

Reg. in U. S. Patent Office

DOMINATES THE FIELD

DIVISION



WHAT KIND OF A MAGNET HAVE YOU?

The exhibitor who holds the greatest pulling power is the one who books all the

Paramount and Artcraft Pictures

(Nationally Advertised)

He advertises. He shows the trademarks, and his profits are increasing steadily every day

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY CORPORATION
ADOLPH ZUKOR Pres. JESSE L. LASKY Vice Pres. CECIL B. DE MILLE Director General
NEW YORK

VOL. XVII-NO. 18 Entered as Second Class Matter, October 13, 1913, at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3rd, 1879 PRICE 10 CENTS

MONROE SALISBURY

WITH

RUTH CLIFFORD

IN "The Guilt of Silence"

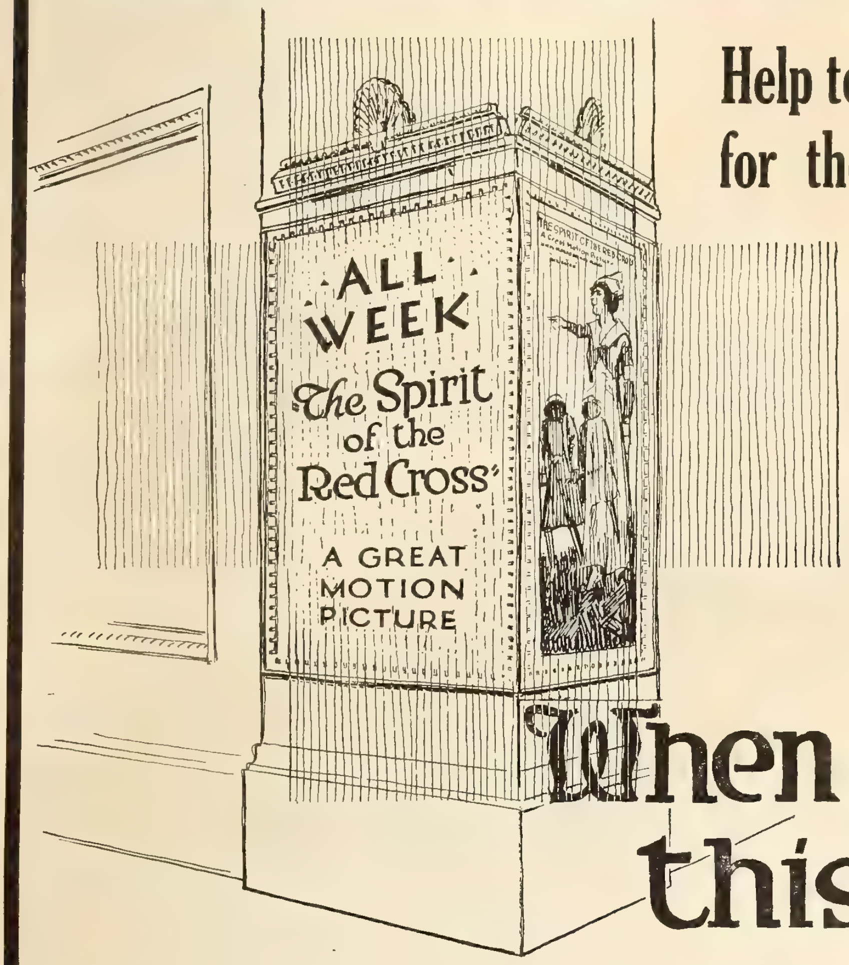
A THROBBING ALASKAN DRAMA WITH THE MOST EXQUISITE PHOTOGRAPHIC EFFECTS EVER SEEN ON THE SCREEN

BOOK THRU YOUR LOCAL EXCHANGE OR

BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS INC.

1600 BROADWAY NEW YORK



Help to raise millions of dollars for the American Red Cross

Book NOW

A STIRRING two-reel drama of definite box-office appeal furnished at no cost to you, by the American Red Cross. This photoplay will be a powerful aid in the new Red Cross campaign for funds.

Released April 28th

When you show this picture you save men's lives.

BOOKING NOW AT THE FOLLOWING EXCHANGES:

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation
Fox Film Corporation
Goldwyn Distributing Corporation
Metro Pictures Corporation
Pathe Exchange, Inc.
Select Pictures Corporation
Universal Film Corporation
Vitagraph
World Film Corporation

"The Spirit of the Red Cross"

a motion picture by

James Montgomery Flagg

Produced by Jack Eaton and E. F. Warner for The American Red Cross

The early exhibitor gets the choice dates
Book it today and be the first to show it

This advertising space contributed by Motion Picture News and is acknowledged by Jesse L. Lasky, Chairman, Red Cross Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

Paramount Pictures

There's No Finer Slogan Than This!

SOME exhibitors designate their houses as "The Place Where the Best Pictures Are Shown." Some advertise "We Always Have a Good Show." Others announce, "The Greatest Stars in the Greatest Pictures."

But those are colorless lines, indefinite, comparatively weak in selling value.

The 100% exhibitor is the man with the slogan that tells something, that guides the crowds to the pictures they want to see. He advertises

"I Show ALL the Paramount Pictures"

No wonder his profits are steadily increasing.

Paramount Pictures

for
MAY
In order of release

PAULINE FREDERICK in "Resurrection"

ENID BENNETT
in "The Biggest Show on Earth"

SESSUE HAYAKAWA
in "The White Man's Law"

JACK PICKFORD
in "Mile-A-Minute Kendall"

DOROTHY DALTON
in "The Mating of Marcella"

MARGUERITE CLARK
in "Prunella"

CHARLES RAY
in "His Own Home Town"

WALLACE REID
in "Believe Me Xantippe"

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY CORPORATION
ADOLPH ZUKOR Pres. JESSE L. LASKY Vice Pres. CECIL B. DE MILLE Director General
NEW YORK

WORLD-PICTURES

WORLD-PICTURES present

Kitty GORDON

in

"The Purple Lily"

CAST INCLUDING
MURIEL OSTRICHE
Directed by GEORGE KELSON

ALBERT E·SMITH

presents

EARLE WILLIAMS

Supported by

Grace Darmond

in

"The Seal of Silence"

by William Addison Lathrop

Directed by Tom Mills

Love interest plus—a throbbing, passionate story of a woman's silent devotion to a man already wedded—joined to a woman of cruel tigress beauty—a mate, or mis-mate, with no love for little children—selfish, cold, an inveterate gambler—yet one whom the foul breath of scandal had never touched. By clinging to the path of chastity, she held in bondage a man whose soul shrieked for freedom, for love, for little children to inherit his wealth and perpetuate his honored name.

And yet, "The Seal of Silence," is so handled that at no time does this master photo-drama touch any side or angle of the well-worn fictional triangle.

Earle Williams, now more than ever before in the very forefront of box-office stars, has never appeared to greater advantage than as Dr. Hugh Loring, a successful young physician. And the capable members of his supporting cast are headed by Grace Darmond, one of the most beautiful leading women of the screen.

A FIVE PART
BLUE RIBBON FEATURE

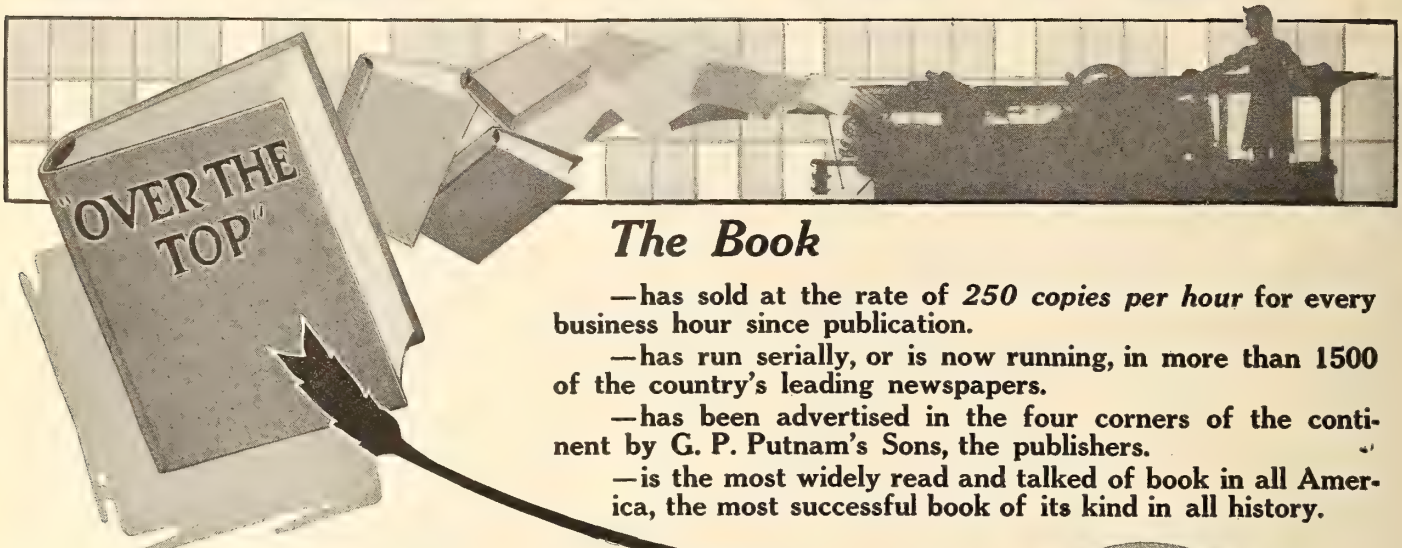
VITAGRAPH

"OVER THE TOP"



The Book

—has sold at the rate of 250 copies per hour for every business hour since publication.

—has run serially, or is now running, in more than 1500 of the country's leading newspapers.

—has been advertised in the four corners of the continent by G. P. Putnam's Sons, the publishers.

—is the most widely read and talked of book in all America, the most successful book of its kind in all history.

Empey

—has been heard by hundreds of thousands of eager admirers who have packed the largest auditoriums of the country time and again.

—has sold more than $1,000,000 worth of bonds of the Second Liberty Loan, and is out to beat this record on the present Liberty Loan.

—has raised over $100,000 for Smoke Funds, Red Cross Benefits and similar patriotic causes.

—has published his special articles in many hundreds of papers throughout the land.

—has received more newspaper and word-of-mouth publicity than any other American, with the possible exception of President Wilson.

The Picture

—is still packing the Lyric Theatre, New York, twice daily with enthusiastic, cheering thousands.

—tells the world-famous story of "Over the Top" as it deserves to be told.

—was directed by Wilfrid North and personally supervised during all phases of its production by Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company.

—has received an avalanche of praise from all trade paper and newspaper critics.

—has been nationally advertised by a chain of billboards that girdle the continent.

—is BOOKING NOW at all VITAGRAPH EXCHANGES.

The record breaking success of the book, the unprecedented nation-wide popularity of Empey and the overwhelming appeal of the picture make "Over the Top" the biggest box office feature in the history of motion pictures!

VITAGRAPH ALBERT E. SMITH PRESIDENT

Wherein King Solomon Setteth An Exhibitor Right

NAY, my Zuleika, I have high hopes for the Movies. Yea, the Movies be here to stay and bring happy days.

Knockers there be who exclaim, " What careth Solomon for the Little Guy? He hath a thousand wives who fill his picture show every day."

Yea, my wives do attend the Solomon Theatre with great regularity. But woe is me for the bill at the end of the moon; 'tis a sorrow to the King.

But yesternoon did come to my palace the Son of Beelzebub, who is the Son of Hardluck, the Son of Folly, who is the Son of Highprices.

And lo, he did prostrate himself and cry aloud, " Woe is me, O King, I am afflicted with a great sorrow and do seek thy counsel. The people no longer come to my Movie Show. I show good pictures and have a goodly theatre. Yet is mine business sorely depressed, and the cashier doth put sack-cloth and ashes on his head and his groans do keep the wife awake nights cussing a blue streak."

" Now, O thou Son of Folly, hast thou looked into thine business? Dost thou pay the reel tax? "

" Yea," moaned the afflicted one.

" And, O Son of Balaam's Ass, dost thou pay high prices for pictures because they have stars? "

" Yea," moaned the asinine one.

" And dost thou bid against thine neighbor for the open booking picture which the wise promoter doth boost in price? "

" Yea," moaned the witless one.

" And dost thou deal with those who know not the fair and square, open and above-board policy? "

" Yea," moaned the fallacious one.

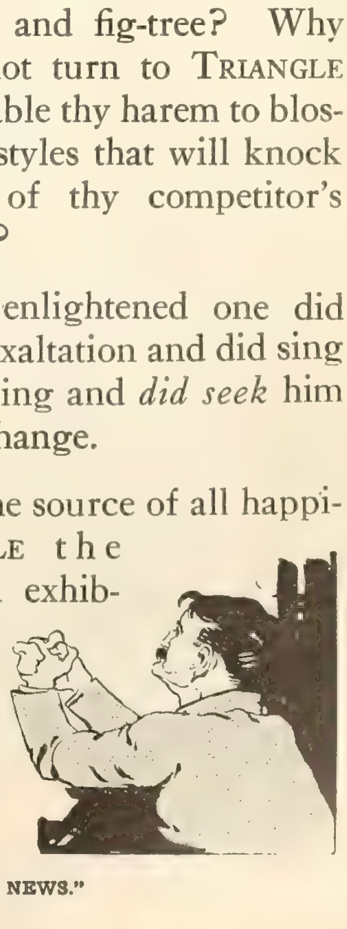
" Now, wherefore, O Son of Folly, dost thou not mend thy ways and look to thy vine and fig-tree? Why dost thou not turn to TRIANGLE and thus enable thy harem to blossom out in styles that will knock the dames of thy competitor's harem dead?

Whereupon the enlightened one did make a glad cry of exaltation and did sing the praises of the King and did seek him out a TRIANGLE Exchange.

Yea, Wisdom is the source of all happiness, and TRIANGLE the source of many an exhibitor's success.

SELAH!



TRIANGLE DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION
1457 Broadway, New York

SELECT PICTURES

LEWIS J. SELZNICK presents

CONSTANCE TALMADGE

in "UP THE ROAD WITH SALLIE"

Here are youth and beauty and romance and adventure combined with consummate art in one of the most pleasing comedy-dramas ever presented, in which the charming figure of Constance Talmadge entices you on and on! A sure winner!

From the novel by Frances Starrett
Scenario by Julia Crawford Ivers

Directed by WILLIAM D. TAYLOR

DISTRIBUTED BY
SELECT PICTURES CORPORATION
729 Seventh Avenue, New York City

SELECT SP PICTURES

ALICE BRADY

in

"AT THE MERCY OF MEN"

Magnificent acting by Alice Brady marks this stirring love drama of Russia, a play in which red blood and strong passions sway the hearts of men and women.

Scenario by Paul West

Directed by CHARLES MILLER

DISTRIBUTED BY
SELECT PICTURES CORPORATION
729 Seventh Avenue, New York City

Goldwyn Pictures

A Gray Thread And A Bit of Ash From A Cigar—

ON these two clues hung the fate of the one she loved best in all the world—her own father.

Meanwhile the web was woven to enmesh not only her father but the boy who loved her dearly.

You can realize from these hints the emotional and melodramatic strength of

Mae Marsh in

THE FACE in the DARK

by Irvin S. Cobb Directed by Hobart Henley

With each new Goldwyn Picture Mae Marsh gains in world-wide popularity and strength. In Goldwyn Pictures she is an even more superb artist than ever before in her career. Her charm is greater; her skill is greater. She has added new millions to her following. "The Face in the Dark" is released April 21.

GOLDWYN PICTURES CORPORATION
SAMUEL GOLDFISH, President EDGAR SELWYN, Vice President
16 East 42nd Street New York City

REX BEACH PICTURES

The Most Profitable Name in the World for Motion Picture Exhibitors

IS the name REX BEACH. It is the name of the most powerful and popular author of the present generation.

It is the name that builds a half-million or million circulation for great magazines.

It is the name behind "The Spoilers," "The Ne'er-Do-Well," "The Barrier" and "The Auction Block"—tremendously successful productions that live up to Rex Beach's enormous box-office drawing power.

All of his prestige and drawing power as the most virile author of our times are once more at the command of all exhibitors when

Goldwyn offers:

REX BEACH'S

Screen Classic of the Great Southwest

Heart of the Sunset

Directed by Frank Powell

Now opening to capacity business in the great American cities and pronounced by the public—your patrons—to be "Rex Beach's biggest picture." Write our nearest branch office at once for prices and booking dates.

GOLDWYN DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION
16 East 42nd Street New York City

CAPITOL COMEDIES

Bill's
"Billy's Predicament"
"Birds of a Feather"

"Smiling Bill" Parsons a new National Apostle of Good Cheer.

OF the New York Strand's pre-release of the first "Smiling Bill" Parsons comedy, "Bill's Baby," The Motion Picture News says:

"Smiling Bill" Parsons is the sure-fire brand of comedian—without slapstick . . . Goldwyn has found a winner and there was not a moment when the audience was not laughing.

The Moving Picture World says: Capitol Comedies will be enjoyed by the nation . . . They are clean, full of laughs and "Bill Parsons is a joy.

And The Exhibitors' Trade Review says: Here is a brand new and sure-to-be-popular comedian . . . Right from the start he is a laugh-getter.

This joyous personality is the star of the two-reel

CAPITOL COMEDIES

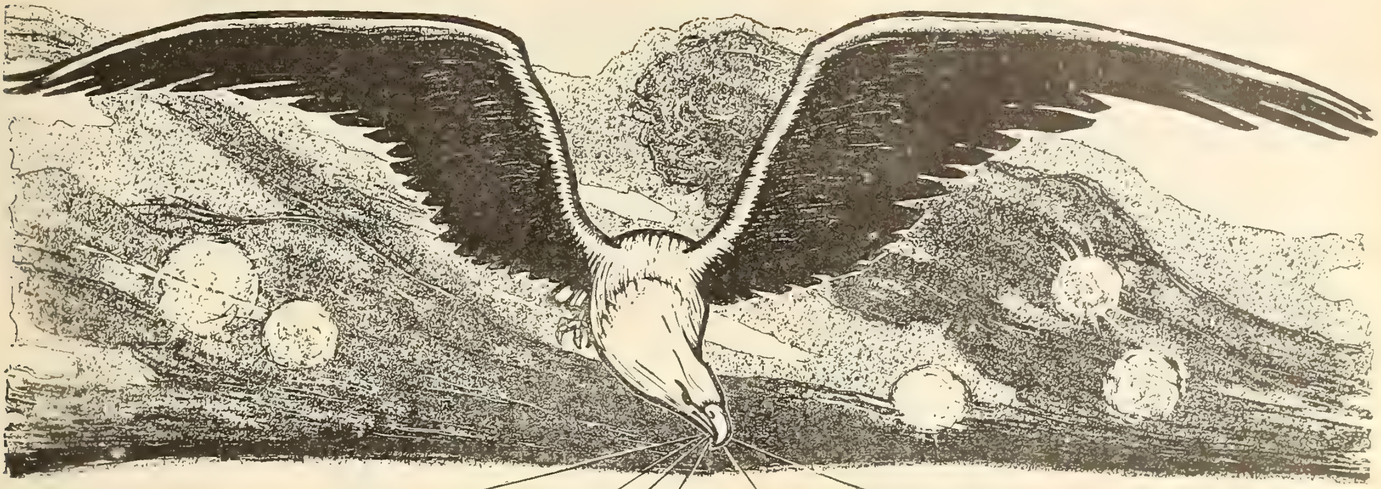
26 a year. Every Second Monday.

Produced by the National Film Corporation of America for exclusive release through Goldwyn. The first three successful releases are:

May 6: "BILL'S BABY"
May 20: "BILL'S PREDICAMENT"
June 3: "BIRDS OF A FEATHER"

Wire or write at once to your nearest Goldwyn office for prices and playing dates.

GOLDWYN DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION
16 East 42nd Street New York City



FOR THE FREEDOM OF THE WORLD

by

Capt. Edwin Bower Hesser

NOW–

—While the nation's pulse beats fast

—While the Allies are marshalling every resource to rout the invading enemy

—While the great $3,000,000,000 Liberty Loan campaign is at its height

GOLDWYN ADVISES

Every exhibitor to reap the huge patronage that Ira M. Lowry's great patriotic spectacle draws into the theatre.

Every exhibitor who has played "For the Freedom of the World" to re-book it at once for an immediate repeat date.

Every exhibitor who has not played it to write or telegraph at once for the first open date.

This Remarkable Production Is the Screen's Most Thrilling Patriotic Drama

It is a capacity business attraction. More than three thousand theatres have broken their best previous attendance records with it and every exhibitor who has played it has urged other exhibitors to book it and reap a sure profit.

"For the Freedom of the World" can be booked only through the twenty-five North American offices of

GOLDWYN DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION

16 East 42nd Street New York City

Honor's Cross

"Social Ambition"

IF I WERE AN EXHIBITOR—

AND my own personal experience had taught me that my audiences always enthused and cheered big emotional dramas—

And I knew that productions with backbone and heart-interest always packed my house to capacity—

I would at once book through the nearest Goldwyn office the big Selexart trio of special productions:

HOWARD HICKMAN in "BLUE BLOOD"

By J. Grubb Alexander Directed by Elliott Howe

RHEA MITCHELL in "HONOR'S CROSS"

By H. B. Daniel Directed by Wallace Worsley

RHEA MITCHELL and HOWARD HICKMAN in "SOCIAL AMBITION"

By W. E. Wing Directed by Wallace Worsley

—Because they each contain the tremendous dramatic interest and power that I know my audiences like and demand.

These three Selexart productions are available for immediate showing, are sold under a single contract at fair prices and can be booked only through the offices of

GOLDWYN DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION
16 East 42nd Street New York City

WILLIAM L. SHERRILL'S

MY OWN UNITED STATES

A SCREEN CLASSICS INC box office triumph made by Frohman Amusement Corporation

with Mr. ARNOLD DALY

After a record run at the Rivoli Theatre, New York is sweeping the country on a tide of patriotism.

Every Exhibitor owes it as a duty to his patrons to show this greatest of all patriotic attractions.

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION
Distributors

Seven Vital Questions Answered for Exhibitors by Exhibitors

Q. 1—IS HODKINSON-PARALTA SERVICE PROFITABLE?

Answered by Charles C. Perry, Strand Theatre, Milwaukee:

"We did capacity business at every performance during the entire three days of 'A Man's Man.' They came so strong on the third night that it was necessary to run an extra show, and even then we turned people away from the box office."

Q. 2—IS THE QUALITY CONSISTENT?

Answered by Oliver Whaley, Grand Theatre, Bemidji, Minn.:

"All the subjects are good. In our experience we cannot recall receiving, so generally, favorable comment from so large a percentage of patrons as we had from those seeing 'A Man's Man,' 'Madam Who' and 'A Turn of the Card.'"

Q. 3—IS IT WORTHY OF LONGER THAN USUAL RUNS?

Answered by O. Ginns, Queen Theatre, Wilmington, Del.:

"These are pictures that measure up to the finest masterpieces, and it is a pleasure to commend their productions worthy of a long run."

Q. 4—WILL IT SATISFY PEOPLE WHO ARE LOOKING FOR THE BEST IN PICTURES?

Answered by W. H. Clune, Auditorium, Los Angeles:

"Criticisms in the six daily newspapers of Los Angeles actually graded 'A Man's Man' 100%. Unanimously they complimented everything connected with the picture; especially the fine, clean work of Mr. Kerrigan, Miss Loise Wilson and Miss Ida Lewis; the devotion to details in the settings, the practically faultless direction, superb photography, and the excellence of Mr. Kyne's story as adapted for the picture. At Clune's Auditorium this seven-reel production pleased all who attended. Praise was unstinted. I consider 'A Man's Man' exceptionally acceptable to the public."

Q. 5—HOW DOES HODKINSON-PARALTA SERVICE COMPARE WITH OTHER HIGH CLASS PRODUCT?

Answered by John F. Cooney, Union Square, Pittsfield, Mass.:

"As I am running only high-class features, namely, Select, Greater Vitagraph, Art-craft and Paramount, you can readily see that Paralta, to score in this company, must be in Class 1-A, which it certainly is."

Q. 6—ARE THE STORIES CLEAN? IS THE ACTION PADDED TO MAKE SEVEN REELS?

Answered by H. Bluechel, Lyric Theatre, Norfolk, Neb.:

"One thing in particular that appealed to me in 'A Man's Man' was the elimination of all padding, making the story move along so that there was something doing all the time. And it is clean all the way through, which is a big factor in causing favorable comment from a certain class of patrons."

Q. 7—CAN I GET HODKINSON-PARALTA SERVICE AT A REASONABLE PRICE?

Answered by Alton Crosby, Opera House, Willmar, Minn.:

"If you keep future issues up to the grade established and continue to give exhibitors the fair deal inaugurated (as indicated by my contract with you) every exhibitor ought to be for you."

W. W. HODKINSON CORP.

527 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY

Hodkinson Service at All General Film Exchanges

PARALTA PLAYS
PICK OF THE PICTURES

Distributed through
"HODKINSON SERVICE"

Sincerely
Bessie Barriscale

COMPLETED
"MADAM WHO?"—By Harold MacGrath
'WITHIN THE CUP"—By Monte M. Katterjohn
"BLINDFOLDED"—By E. Richard Schayer
THE WAVE"—By J. Grubb Alexander and Fred Myton

BESSIE BARRISCALE FEATURES CORPORATION

LOUISE GLAUM

PARALTA PLAYS

PICK OF THE PICTURES

BESSIE BARRISCALE

CURRENT ISSUE

BESSIE BARRISCALE

IN

"Blindfolded"

By E. Richard Schayer

Directed by

RAYMOND B. WEST

Robert Brunton, Manager of Productions

The story of Peggy Muldoon, who is born a crook;
but re-molds her life
into a thing of beauty!

FORTHCOMING

HENRY B. WALTHALL

IN

Directed by Eliot Howe

"With Hoops of Steel"

Written by Florence Finch Kelly

> "The friends thou hast; and their adoption tried, > grapple them to thy soul
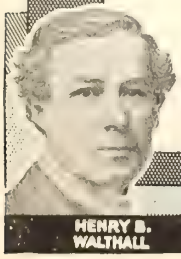
> with hoops of steel."
>
> Shakespeare

PARALTA PLAYS, Incorporated
Eight West Forty-eighth Street New York City



DISTRIBUTED THROUGH
"HODKINSON SERVICE"
AT ALL GENERAL FILM EXCHANGES

J. WARREN KERRIGAN

GENERAL FILM COMPANY

Boy Stuff of Proven Merit!

Doug Lansing, Martin Pendleton and Robert Planett in "The Rebellion"

The Judge Brown Stories

Two-Part features of a refreshing, original quality that already have become famous.

The true American or Tom Sawyer kind of boy visualized for the screen and played by that kind of boy plucked unspoiled from real life. Visualized in clever stories under singularly competent direction. Humorous, delightful, wholesome, distinctly brilliant entertainment.

The Sort of Pictures Our Exhibitors Praise Without Stint

"Bud's Recruit"
"Chocolate of the Gang"
"The Lost Lie"
"Tad's Swimming Hole"
"Marrying Off Dad"
"The Preacher's Son"
"The Accusing Toe"
"Thief or Angel"
"I'm a Man"
"Love of Bob"

Produced by BOY CITY FILM CORPORATION, Culver City, Cal.

Distributed by General Film Company, New York
Thirty Exchanges

How can an advertiser continue advertising? By giving YOU value.

GENERAL FILM COMPANY

BLUE RIDGE DRAMAS

Ned Finley and Marion Henry in "Mountain Law"

Ned Finley

and

Marion Henry

in

"MOUNTAIN LAW"

by L. Case Russell

Also Ready:

"The Return of O'Garry"
"The Raiders of Sunset Gap"

Here is another powerful short length feature for the program that needs a "punch." "Mountain Law" is a worthy successor to "The Return of O'Garry." Ned Finley, blessed with a dynamic screen individuality, featured for years in some of the best of big productions, is back in his own specially constructed type of virile woods-life romance. Marion Henry, one of the most winning personalities ever filmed, plays opposite him. Pick this popular pair and pull a packed house

BLUE RIDGE DRAMAS

Produced by NED FINLEY FILMS, Inc., New York

Distributed by General Film Company, New York
Thirty Exchanges

GENERAL FILM COMPANY

THE THRILL SERIAL FOR PATRIOTIC AUDIENCES

A DAUGHTER of UNCLE SAM

with
Jane Vance
and
William Sorelle

The Stirring Story of Enemy Spy Plots in America

JAXON FILM CORPORATION
New York City

Distributed by General Film Company
Thirty Exchanges

BUY LIBERTY BONDS

GENERAL FILM COMPANY

Full of Sympathy and the Essence of Life

O. HENRY'S "The Buyer from Cactus City"

Miriam Miles and Wm. Dunn in "The Buyer from Cactus City"

The cordial aspect of human nature whimsically portrayed sparkles from every O. Henry story—it sparkles doubly as interpreted in this wonderful series of short length popular classics of the screen. "The Buyer from Cactus City" is an intensely appealing story of shop girl life in New York, refreshed with a western breeze of true romance.

OTHER CURRENT O. HENRY PICTURES:

THE SONG AND THE SERGEANT
A Comedy-Drama of theatrical life.

LOST ON DRESS PARADE
A humorous contrast of real and make-believe swelldom with a wistful note besides.

NEMESIS AND THE CANDY MAN
A tangled love plot of New York's streets and parlors.

THE RUBAIYAT OF A SCOTCH HIGHBALL
The regeneration of a young couple astray in a false Bohemia.

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES

Distributed by General Film Company, New York
Thirty Exchanges

GENERAL FILM COMPANY

Daddy! Take Me to See CHARLIE CHAPLIN!

And Daddy will do it, too, because he wants to see him just as much as the kiddies. Grasp this opportunity to fill your house and please your patrons by booking the Essanay-Chaplin comedies.

"A NIGHT OUT"
"HIS NEW JOB"
"THE TRAMP"
"IN THE PARK"
"A WOMAN"
"BY THE SEA"
"THE CHAMPION"
"A JITNEY ELOPEMENT"
"WORK"

* * *

PUT A LAUGH IN YOUR PROGRAM BY BOOKING SNAKEVILLE COMEDIES

Fifteen Minutes of Hilarious Entertainment

"THE SNAKEVILLE FIRE BRIGADE"
"THE SNAKEVILLE SLEUTH"
"SLIPPERY SLIM AND THE FORTUNE TELLER"
"WHEN MACBETH CAME TO SNAKEVILLE"
"SLIPPERY SLIM AND THE GREEN EYED MONSTER"
"SLIPPERY SLIM AND HIS TOMBSTONE"
"SLIPPERY SLIM AND THE IMPERSONATOR"
"WHEN SLIPPERY SLIM MET THE CHAMPION"
"SNAKEVILLE'S NEW WAITRESS"
"SLIPPERY SLIM'S DILEMMA"

Essanay

Distributed by General Film Company, New York
Thirty Exchanges

The more YOU read these advertisements the more useful to YOU we can make the "NEWS."

POWER! PUNCH!

William Fox presents

WILLIAM

FARNUM

in the William Farnum de luxe production

TRUE BLUE

Written and staged by Frank Lloyd

A smashing, fighting tale of the Rocky Mountains!
An all-wool and world-wide American cowboy king throws away a coronet to rule an Arizona ranch!

BOOK IT NOW profit by FARNUM popularity!

STANDARD PICTURES FOX FILM CORPORATION

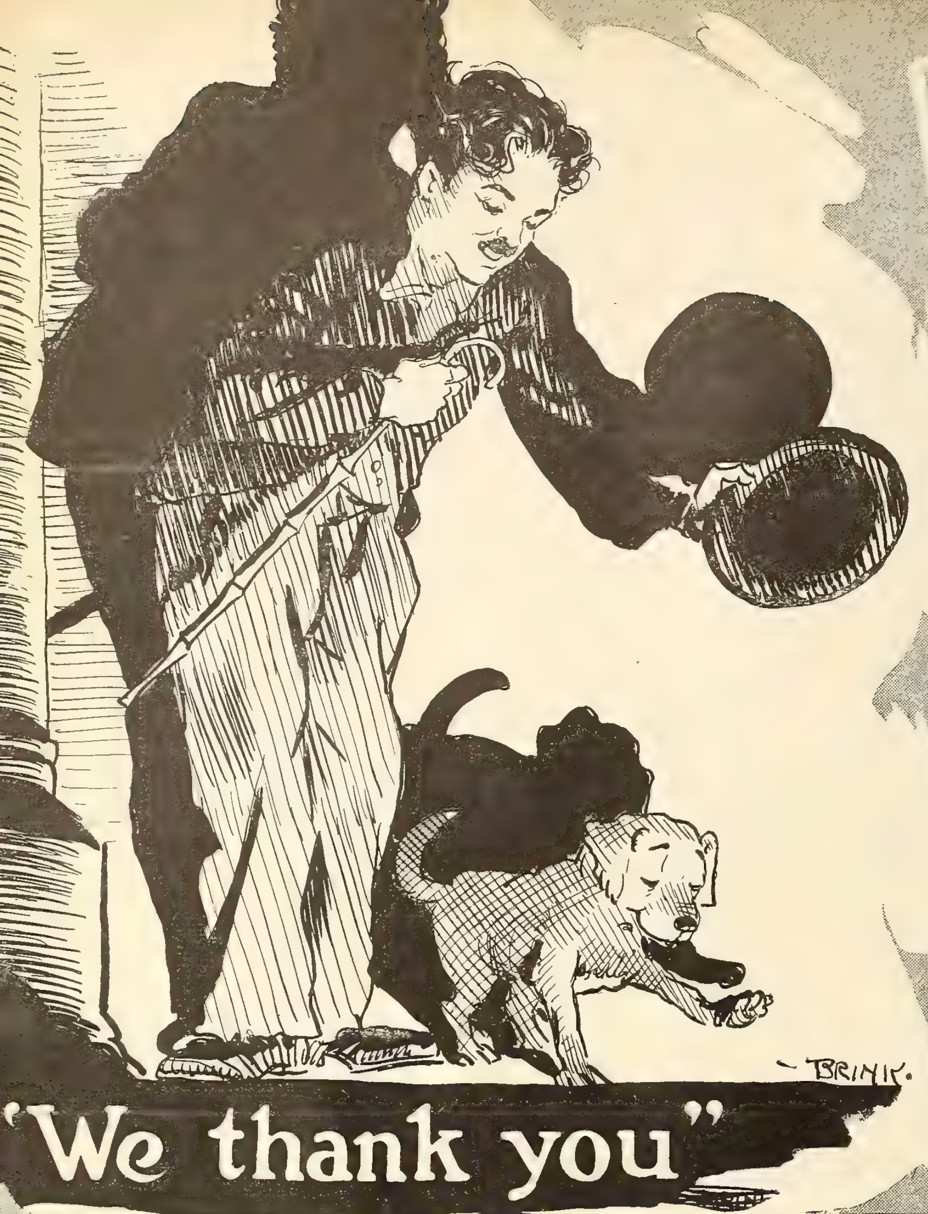
PATRIOTISM!

WILLIAM FOX
Presents
WILLIAM FARNUM
in the William Farnum de luxe production
TRUE BLUE
Directed by Frank Lloyd
FOX
FILM CORPORATION



EVE. MAIL

CHAPLIN AT STRAND.

Screen Comedian Rolls Up Huge Laugh Record in His Latest Comedy, "A Dog's Life."

By T. E. OLIPHANT.

THAT comic gentleman of the screen,
Mr. Charles Chaplin, carried off first applause honors yesterday at the Standard Theatre, where his latest, picture, "A Dog's Life," had its initial New York showing.
The picture is the first of a "million dollar comedy series," so the screen informs. The spectator is not told just what the million dollars represent, but no one who sees "A Dog's Life" will doubt that it worth more than that in laughs. It is the best picture Chaplin has done.
The amazing thing about this comedy genius is the simplicity with which he produces his funniest scenes. A vacant stare, the twist of a coat tail, of such trifles are the biggest laughs made. It is not the Chaplin personality alone that does this, though the mediocrity of his scores of imitators places the true valuation on his personality; it is the artistry he brings to everything he does that makes him the idol of the film fans.
Chaplin never burlesqued anything that does not come within the range of possible human experience. There is a scene in "A Dog's Life" in which a woman drops a huge wad of chewing gum on the floor of a dance hall. Chaplin, one of the dancers, steps on the gum and is rooted to the spot, while his energetic partner.
ignorant of the reason for his inability to proceed, continues her stepping the while she clutches frantically at his neck.
This incident, greeted with shrieks of laughter, is funny because it is not burlesqued to the point of the improbable.
The merest thread of a story strings together the scenes of "A Dog's Life."
The plot, which gets under way when the picture is about half shown, revolves around the theft of a wallet full of greenbacks. The wallet comes into Chaplin's possession, and, of course, he must lose it and recover it many times before the final fade-out. How this is done cannot be told in print; it takes
Chaplin to make it screamingly funny.
Edna Purviance is a dance hall singer who marries Chaplin in the film, thereby causing the men in the audience to envy him. The final scene shows the newly married couple as amateur farmers. Incidentally, it affords Chaplin opportunity to score one of his biggest laughs.

MORN. SUN

CHAPLIN RETURNS ON SCREEN HERE

"A Dog's Life" at the Strand Shows Comedian at His Best.

After a year of no production, Charlie Chaplin shuffled onto the screen at the Strand Theatre yesterday in a comedy called "A Dog's Life," so called because throughout the picture play he has a small bull pup with him which snows remarkable intelligence and sense of humor. It is a well constructed comedy in which the comedian lives up to his reputation. He has left out much of the usual slap stick work and most of the time displays the vivid, suggestible imagination that has made him the chief laugh provoker of the screen. Mac

N.Y. GLOBE

Round the Town

With S. JAY KAUFMAN.

Could anything save a Chaplin picture have taken the place of an afternoon in the sun? It could not. Yesterday to the Strand came "A Dog's Life." It uses up all synomyms of howl. And it uses up all of one's vitality, so continuous is the laughter.
Fancy a picture that is too short!
That is the only fault "A Dog's Life" has. Louphiladelphia Golder, who was with us, said: "I wish that dog was a cat. A cat has nine lives."
All the "hokum" imaginable is in this film, but it makes no pretense of being anything else. Doesn't that imply that there may be art in "hokum"? Chaplin is an artist, and the only artist who (let it be fervently hoped) gets no ideas of playing serious parts. Laughter is too rare.

Where George Cohan Is Audience.—

N.Y. WORLD

BROADWAY FANS HOWL OVER CHARLIE CHAPLIN.

Movie Star Is Seen in "A Dog's Life" at the Strand—Other New Photoplays.

The Charlie Chaplin "fans" on Broadway are happy again. For many long months now a Chaplin comic has not been shown on the screen of a New York moving picture palace, perhaps because Mr. Chaplin's managers think that absence will make the heart grow fonder of custard pies also. At any rate, the Strand was crowded yesterday afternoon at the first showing of "A Dog's Life," which is the leading photoplay of the programme for the week. Charlie was as funny and energetic as ever, and the crowd howled with glee. Other numbers on the bill were

EVE. SUN

By all odds the most amusing farce film that has been shown on Broadway in months is Charlie Chaplin's new picture, "A Dog's Life," in which "Scraps, the thoroughbred mongrel" shares
some of the acting honors with Chaplin. The people who crowded into the Strand yesterday roared with delight.
Of course the rest of the anniversary programme is also entertaining and includes Mae Marsh in the Goldwyn photo drama, "The Girl in the Dark," by Irvin S. Cobb, and the Topical Review, in which were some war scenes. As the orchestral overture, George Enesu's "Rumanian Poem" was played

N.Y. HERALD

CHARLIE CHAPLIN'S ANTICS INTEREST SPECTATORS

Charlie Chaplin's position in motion pictures as an eccentric and highly original comedian was demonstrated yesterday in the Strand Theatre, when "A Dog's Life" was shown. It is the first of a series of photoplays which bear the comedian's own signature on the screen. The theatre was packed, and when the film was on, if a man rose to take off his overcoat fifty other persons instantly stood up behind him so they would not miss a single move of the comedian or a wag of his dog's tail.

A small pack of dogs worked in the photoplay, and the performances of the leading dog, which accompanied the dilapidated hero in most of his adventures, were nothing short of phenomenal.

EVE. TELEGRAM

Mr. Charlie Chaplin's return to Broadway in a new screen picture caused a veritable sensation yesterday at the Strand. The auditorium was crowded to capacity throughout the entire day and shouts of delighted laughter showed that the popular screen comedian has even gained in popularity.

Mr. Chaplin's new comedy is called "A Dog's Life," and the comic experiences of Mr. Chaplin and the excellent acting of a little fox terrier are revealed in the best comedy screen that Mr. Chaplin has ever had.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

"A Dog's Life"

(Chaplin-First National—Three Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

THERE are several things that go to make "A Dog's Life" the greatest comedy Charles Chaplin ever produced. First and foremost after the inimitable comedian himself comes his method of production. Chaplin realizes what many other comedy producers do not—that a piece of funny business is heightened in effect providing it follow after a stretch of action in which planting and serious business hold the main positions.

Chaplin's gags include some of the most original comedy tricks ever perpetrated on the screen.

It is these things which go to make "A Dog's Life" the best comedy ever made: yes, even on second thought, the best comedy ever made.

TRADE REVIEW

"A Dog's Life," First of New Chaplin Comedies, a Scream from Start to Finish

First of the New Million Dollar Chaplin Comedies. In Two Reels. Released Through the First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

IT'S a laugh from start to finish. Decidedly one of the very best laugh provoking films that the popular Charlie has ever turned out. He has done nothing better and although the film has been delayed in reaching the public it is something well worth waiting for. In "A Dog's Life," Charlie Chaplin is seen to the best possible advantage, and that the picture will be hailed as his best effort to date seems a foregone conclusion.

N.Y. TELEGRAPH

STRAND THEATRE HAS ANNIVERSARY

Charlie Chaplin Heads Unusual Bill in New Comedy Series Entitled "A Dog's Life."

The Strand Theatre is celebrating its fourth anniversary this week, and Manager Edel is presenting a program the like of which has seldom been seen in a motion picture theatre. Charlie Chaplin heads the bill in the first of his new comedy series, entitled "A Dog's Life." It is by far the best screen play in which this comedian has been seen. Mr. Chaplin's experiences and antics in the dance hall, the back yard, evading the policemen, the lunch wagon and in the street are irresistibly funny. "A Dog's Life" is being shown at the Strand exclusively this week

MOTION PICTURE WORLD

World Crew Sees "A Dog's Life"

Takes an Hour Off and Goes Over to Joe Miles' to See Chaplin in His First Initial National.

THE writing end of the Moving Picture World office was vacant between 2 and 3 o'clock on the afternoon of April 12. The whole "push" had declared a vacation for an hour while it adjourned to the projection room of Joe Miles to be present at a trade showing of Chaplin's "A Dog's Life," the initial subject to be released by the comedian through the First National Exhibitors' Circuit. There would seem to be a remarkable unanimity of opinion as to the merits of the picture. Here are the views:

While the writer confesses not to have seen all of the productions made by Charlie Chaplin and is not, by reason of that remissness, able to judge by comparison as to the relative merits of that clever comedian's latest production "A Dog's Life," yet, and for all that, it is his pleasure to say that, ~~thee~~ Charles Chaplin is, in his own right, the most original and able character actor appearing upon the motion picture screen today.—J. L. H.

In "A Dog's Life" we see not a new Chaplin. We see one ripened and broadened. His long holiday has brightened a wit always on keen edge, as illustrated by the new-fangled chase around and under the fence. The picture will rank with Chaplin's best, with "The Bank," for one example. There is only one Chaplin.—G. B.

There are as many laughs in "A Dog's Life" a the opening and the finish are uniquely funny, and the three reels are filled with irresistible invitations to pack all your troubles in your old kit bag and smile, then laugh, then roar. The comic genius of Charles Chaplin is at its best in "A Dog's Life."—E. W.

Chaplin has had no better vehicle in a long time than "A Dog's Life," in three reels. In many of its most comic situations there is a touch of sympathy under the laughter, and the picture aims at this note rather than the broader appeal given by street chase and general scramble.—H. C. J.

The two points in "A Dog's Life" which most appealed to me were the practical possibilities established by Chaplin for getting past a subway guard with livestock and his prompt and efficacious method of obtaining a family by proxy, without interfering with the Red Cross work of his better half.—E. T. K.

Charlie Chaplin's latest, "A Dog's Life," is without a doubt one of his best efforts. "A Dog's Life," summed up in a few words, is original, artistic, funny, and a box-office winner.—M. I. MacD.

Admirers of Charlie Chaplin will find in "A Dog's Life," the first of his million-dollar series of comedies, a wealth of entertainment. The initial subject is three reels in length, and ranks as his best work. "A Dog's Life" will go well all over, and will fill the house at every show.—J. A. A.

You see, it is this way, we all went over to see Mr. Chaplin in "A Dog's Life." We expected him to be funny, and he was funny. But he was funny in the most unexpected ways. Consequently, it was not long until everybody began looking for the unusual—in other words, expecting the unexpected, and we were getting it, too, in good measure. It gives you the funny side of the seamy side, and is altogether Mr. Chaplin at his best.—R. C. McE.

The Office Boy's Observations.

Champlin has sum dawg. He's tale trained and evrythin'. You bet I'll git all the kids to see the dawg and then we'll all go to the Bijoe again and see Champlin. No feller can see 'em both to oncet.—W. K. H.

N.Y. GLOBE

A special gala programme of extraordinary attractions is being given by Manager Edel at the Strand Theatre this week to commemorate the fourth anniversary of the Strand Theatre. It is headed by the inimitable Charlie Chaplin in his latest comedy, exclusively shown at the Strand. The always attractive Mae Marsh, principal star of the Goldwyn Company, is also appearing in a photodrama entitled "The Face in the Dark." In Mr. Chaplin's latest super-comedy, "A Dog's Life," the world-famous little photodrama comedian is said to be doing the greatest and funniest piece of comedy work in which he has ever appeared. Mr. Chaplin returned to the screen after a prolonged absence, and his much imitated outfit of battered derby, tightly buttoned cutaway coat, billowy trousers, spread-eagle sabots, and jaunty sport stick, all of which make-u[illegible]as made this popular favorite of t[illegible] screen the most conspicuous moving [illegible]cture artist from Yokohama Bay to [illegible]va Scotia.

N.Y. TRIBUNE

Charlie Chaplin's picture is called "A Dog's Life." It is the first of his Million Dollar Comedy series. This picture proves that you may imitate Charlie's clothes and his walk, if you will, but you cannot imitate Charlie.

Those who complained that Charlie was becoming refined in his comedy must not miss this one. We are quite sure that if any one else hid a dog in his trousers to smuggle him in a restaurant and then had a hole in the seat of said trousers so that the dog's tail hung out, and every one in the restaurant exclaimed at the phenomenon, we should have hated him. But no one hated Charlie. The situation was vulgar, but Charlie wasn't, because he was quite innocent in the matter. He didn't know it was happening. You could tell that to look at his face.

Beautiful Edna Purviance was a girl who sang in this same restaurant, and she won the heart of our hero when she sang "You made me what I am to-day; I hope you're satisfied." But he wasn't. He wanted her to preside over his bungalow and sing lullabies; so he stole $1,000 and married Edna, and the final scene shows her singing a lullaby over a wicker cradle.

FIRST NATIONAL EXHIBITORS CIRCUIT

A "FIRST NATIONAL" ATTRACTION

FOREIGN RIGHTS CONTROLLED
BY WM VOGEL PRODUCTION, INC.

TARZAN

Outranks any feature ever made regardless of any star or combination of stars as an absolute box-office attraction.

It pulls the people in and send them away talking in enthusiastic manner.

It causes more comment than any picture ever produced.

It means that every seat in your theatre will be sold every show. You need have no fear of the weather.

During sleet storms it packed the Stillman Cleveland.

It jammed the Broadway Theatre while the temperature was seven degrees below zero.

Minneapolis Strand was crammed full during an entire week of rather inclement weather.

In plain simple word. There is nothing you can do to keep the people away from your theatre during the run of TARZAN OF THE APES.

BECAUSE

forty million people have read the story. Six thousand newspapers have published it. Four thousand newspapers are now printing it. Once you read the story you must see the picture.

AND

it is the only picture in many years to play on Broadway to profitable business.

IT HAS REVIVED THE PUBLIC'S INTEREST IN FILM PLAYS.

FIRST NATIONAL EXHIBITORS CIRCUIT

OF THE APES

It not only broke the week's record at the Stillman Theatre, Cleveland, but broke the record every day in the week.—Marcus Loew

It attracted such masses of people that we have had to keep it another week at our Paterson Theatre.—
Jacob Fabian

We are keeping TARZAN OF THE APES for one more week at our Tivoli Theatre.—Turner and Dahnken

It broke the record every day and played to more business at the Minneapolis Strand than any picture in the history of the house.—Thomas Saxe

We are playing TARZAN for another week and look for another absolute capacity week in Newark.—
Goodwin Theatre

We had to close the box-office before the first show started, and then apologize to our patrons because they could not get into the Salt Lake American Theatre.—
Swanson and Nolan

NO PICTURE ON EARTH, NO FILM PRODUCTION EVER CONCEIVED, NO SCREEN PLAY NO MATTER WHO THE STAR, COMPARES WITH

TARZAN OF THE APES

As a Business Pulling, Satisfaction Giving, Price Raising Picture,

TARZAN Has No Competitor.

HAND COLORED PRINTS TECHNICALLY PERFECT FROM ROTHACKER

TARZAN

WAS

Held over for second week at the Tivoli Theatre, San Francisco.
Held over for second week at Goodwin Theatre, Newark.
Held over for second week at Fabian's Theatre, Paterson, N.J.
Held over for second week at Victoria Theatre, Philadelphia.
Broke the daily and week's record at Strand Theatre, Minneapolis.
Broke the House record at the Isis Theatre, Denver, Colo.
Played to every man, woman and child in the city of Laramie, Wyo., in one day.
Played to the greatest business in the history of Stiliman Theatre, Cleveland.
Lined people for five blocks at Victoria Theatre, Philadelphia.
Police reserves required to control crowds at American Theatre, Salt Lake.
Held over for four weeks at Globe Theatre, Boston, Mass.
Opened against "Hearts of the Word" and other pictures at Boston, to absolute capacity.
Played to the absolute capacity of all Marcus Loew Theatres in New York.
Jammed every William Fox Theatre in New York, to the doors.
Twenty-two prints required in New York City to accommodate first runs.
Held over in Detroit for three weeks.
Booked at Los Angeles by Kinema for two weeks.
Booked indefinitely by Marcus Loew for Boston.
Nat Ascher making it a special feature on Ascher Bros. Circuit.

NOT IN THE WILDEST DREAMS OF THE MOST OPTIMISTIC EXHIBITOR HAS ANY THEATRE OWNER HAD THE SURE FIRE POSITIVE BOX OFFICE WINNER TARZAN OF THE APES HAS PROVEN ITSELF TO BE.

TARZAN OF THE APES

IS THE REALIZATION OF EVERY EXHIBITOR'S DREAM

OF THE APES

Will be Booked with You on a Percentage or Rental Basis.

ONE HUNDRED PRINTS ARE NOW AVAILABLE AT EXCHANGES OF

First National Exhibitor's Circuit, Inc.

OR YOU CAN ADDRESS

National Film Corporation of America

1604 Broadway, New York City

IF YOUR OPPOSITION PLAYS TARZAN OF THE APES, IT MEANS THAT YOU LOSE THE GREATEST OPPORTUNITY EVER OFFERED, AN AMUSEMENT PURVEYER TO SURPRISE, PLEASE, AND DEVELOPE HIS CLIENTELE.

AND IN ADDITION

$216,478.00

Will be spent during the next four weeks in nation-wide advertising and bill posting campaigns, which simply mean that you get the most far reaching co-operation ever extended by a distributing or producing organization.

You must play it, so make it

FIRST RUN

FIRST NATIONAL EXHIBITORS CIRCUIT

HERE ARE TWO
U. S. EXHIBITORS' EXTRA

THE MAGNIFICENT BACON-BACKER PRODUCTION OF

HARRY S. SHELDON'S
POWERFUL MODERN DRAMA OF NEW YORK LIFE

MEN

STAGED BY PERRY VEKROFF

TO MEET THE DEMAND
WITH EXCEPTIONAL
AND TREMENDOUS

ARRANGE DATES

U.S. EXHIBITORS' BOOKING CORPORATION

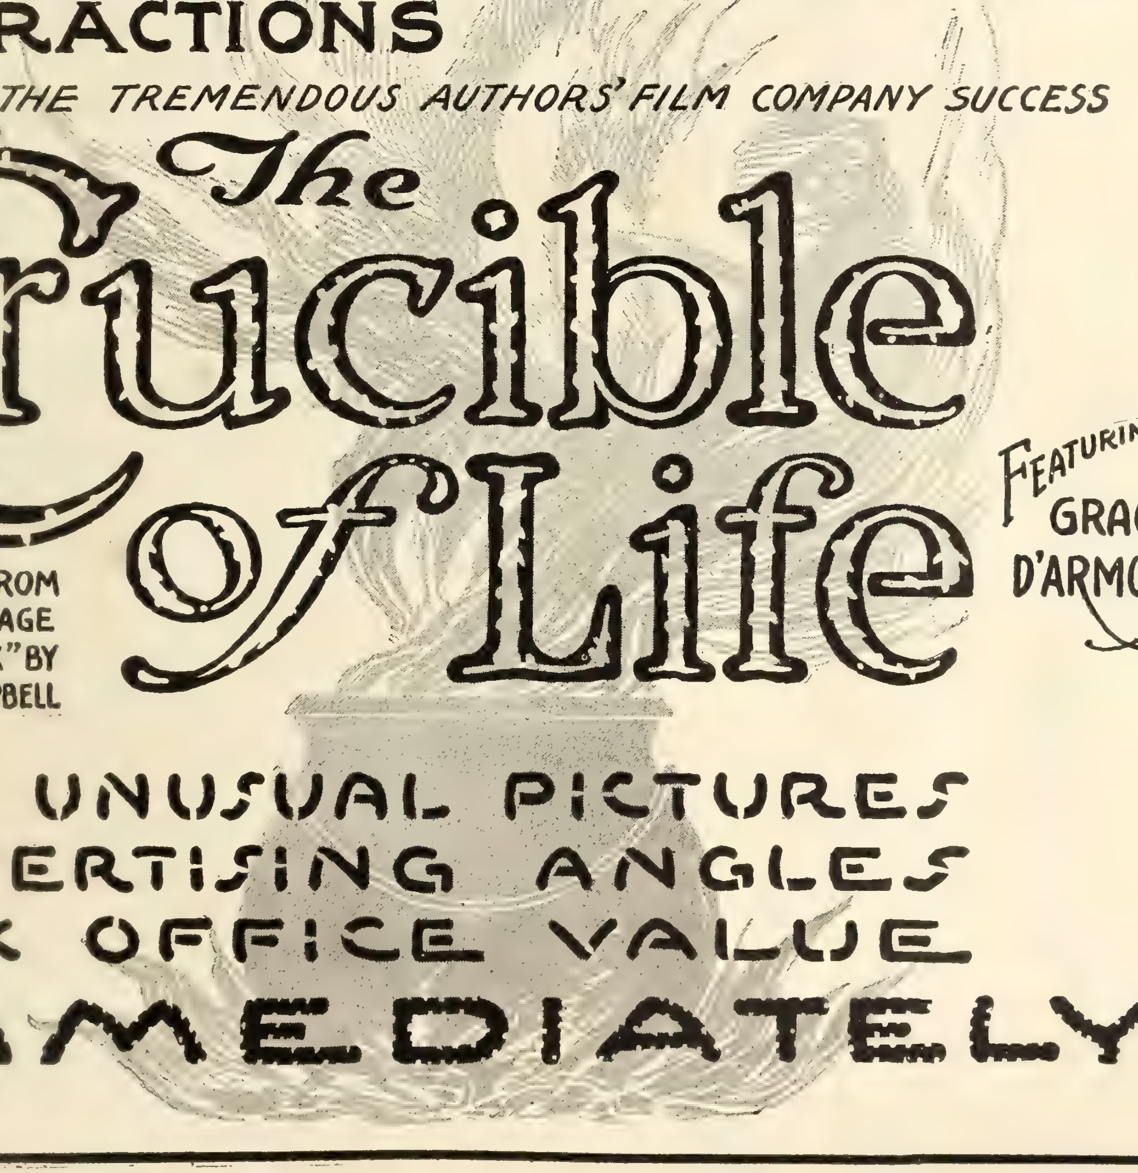
FRANK G. HALL, President
TOP O' THE TIMES BUILDING — NEW YORK

BOOK THRU FOUR-SQUARE EXCHANGES

EXHIBITORS' U.S. BOOKING CORPORATION

MORE BIG SPECIAL BOOKING CORPORATION ATTRACTIONS

THE TREMENDOUS AUTHORS' FILM COMPANY SUCCESS



The Crucible of Life

FEATURING GRACE D'ARMOND

ADAPTED FROM THE GREAT STAGE HIT "FAIRFAX" BY BARTLEY CAMPBELL

FOR UNUSUAL PICTURES ADVERTISING ANGLES BOX OFFICE VALUE

IMMEDIATELY

BOOK THRU

FOURSQUARE:
NEW YORK (729 7th Ave.)
BUFFALO (47 W. Swan St.)
DETROIT (304 Jos. Mack Bldg.)
CHICAGO (207 So. Wabash Ave.)
DENVER (1735 Welton St.)
SEATTLE (2014 Third Ave.)
PITTSBURGH (127 Fourth Ave.)
LOS ANGELES (514 W. 8th St.)
PHILADELPHIA (1325 Vine St.)
CINCINNATI (301 Strand Th. Bldg.)
ST. LOUIS (301 Empress Th. Bldg.)
CLEVELAND (310 Sloan Bldg.)
KANSAS CITY (1120 Walnut St.)
SAN FRANCISCO (191 Golden Gate Ave.)
MINNEAPOLIS (206 Film Exchange Bldg.)

SOUTHERN STATES FILM CO.
ATLANTA (114 Walton St.)
DALLAS (1900 Commerce St.)
GLOBE FEATURE FILM CO.
NEW ENGLAND (20 Winchester St., Boston)
FRANK GERSTEN, INC.
NEW JERSEY (220 W. 42d St., New York)
SUPER-FEATURE FILM CO.
CANADA (59 Victoria St., Toronto)

Foreign Rights to all "U. S." Productions Controlled Exclusively by ROBERTSON-COLE COMPANY, Times Bldg., New York

THE LEADING DAILY NEWSPAPER
IN EACH STATE
ONE CENT
VOL. LXVII...NO 2191
WORLD'S GREATEST BEAUTY CONTEST
Bewitching Maidens for Gaumont Photo-Dramas
The leading newspaper in each state is cooperating with the Gaumont Company in the selection of beautiful damsels
NEWS AND GRAPHIC
WORLD'S BEAUTIES

Leading newspapers are now selecting the most beautiful girls for

BIG PHOTO FEATURES

-to be produced for independent buyers

Gaumont Co.

LONDON FLUSHING.N.Y. PARIS

Theaters which have booked The GAUMONT NEWS & GRAPHIC showing these beauties should double their seating capacity to accommodate the girls and their friends

MR. WILLIAM RUSSELL

THE FIRST PICTURE FROM THE STUDIOS
OF WILLIAM RUSSELL PRODUCTIONS, INC.

"HEARTS OR DIAMONDS?"

By WILLIAM HAMILTON OSBORNE

Available April 29 at Exchanges of the
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION

♥ ◆ ♥ ◆ ♥ ◆ ♥ ◆ ♥ ◆

WILLIAM RUSSELL
PRODUCTIONS
6411 Hollywood Blvd Los Angeles California

CHAPLIN--

NOW is the time to play and repeat on the master comedies of the world's greatest artist—the comedies made with unlimited facilities, unlimited purse and no padding—two full reels of box office value.

"THE FLOORWALKER"
"THE FIREMAN"
"THE VAGABOND"
"ONE A. M."
"THE COUNT"
"THE PAWNSHOP"
"BEHIND THE SCREEN"
"THE RINK"
"EASY STREET"
"THE CURE"
"THE IMMIGRANT"
"THE ADVENTURER"

A special proposition for
Your Theater NOW
At the MUTUAL EXCHANGES

MUTUAL CHAPLIN

Pathé

For the first time in its history Keeney's Theatre in Newark plays a serial. It had a good reason to change its policy –

PEARL WHITE
AND ANTONIO MORENO
in the sensational serial

THE HOUSE OF HATE

Produced by ASTRA
Directed by Geo. B. Seitz

Written by Chas. A. Logue and Arthur B. Reeve
Scenarios by B. Millhauser

Pathé

Bonnie, sweet

Bessie Love
in
How Could You, Caroline?

From the story by Izola Forester and Mann Page
Scenario by Agnes C. Johnston

In this picture Miss Love shines in a whimsical, hoydenish character of the kind in which she has no superior

A Pathé Play

Baby Marie Osborne
in
Dolly Does Her Bit

Produced by Diando
Directed by Wm. Bertram

This is a timely, patriotic subject that you can show with great success in conjunction with your local branch of the Red Cross.

"I have nothing on my program that is the card that your Baby pictures are. I want all that I can get of them."
Geo. J. Dingwall,
Crystal Theatre, Carrizozo, N.M.

Pathé

Bryant Washburn

is presented in his first Pathé Play, George Randolph Chester's

Twenty One

Produced by the Anderson-Brunton Co.

In "Twenty One" Mr. Washburn shows that a man may be two men, both likeable, the one of them a "sissy," the other a two-handed fighter who is a king among the rough-necks.

Frank Keenan

the masterful actor, is announced in the colorful Pathé Play of railroad life –

Ruler of the Road

Produced by Ernest C. Warde
Adapted from the story by Jeanette Lee

In this fine feature Mr. Keenan worthily upholds his reputation of having no superior in forceful characterizations.

TOTO plays

The Rialto (New York)
The Entire Loew Circuit
The Keith Circuit in Greater New York and the Fox Circuit

Why say more?

One Comedy
Every Other Week

Produced by Rolin

Pathé

HAROLD LLOYD

is shown in 18
theatres in Omaha

Mr. Shirley of the Muse and Mr. Monahan of the Apollo both say that "Beat It" is the best one-reel comedy they ever ran.

Positively The Best Single Reel Comedies Made. See them and be convinced.
One a Week

Produced by Rolin

MILLIONS are singing the praises of / are anxiously waiting for / will insist upon seeing / will be delighted by "MICKEY"

WORDS BY HARRY WILLIAMS

"MICKEY"
CHORUS

MUSIC BY NEIL MORET

Mick ey, pret - ty Mick ey With your hair of ra ven hues In your smil ing so be guil ing There's a bit of Kil lar ney, bit of the Blar ney, too Child-hood in the wild-wood, Like a moun tain flow'r you grew, Pret ty Mick ey, pret ty
Mick ey, Can you blame an y one for fall ing in love with you you

The catchiest melody of the year
THE MOST FACINATING PHOTO-PLAY OF THE CENTURY!

Exhibitors:–
"MICKEY"
Will be sung by Everybody
Will be seen by Everybody

IT MUST BE SEEN
BEFORE BEING BOOKED

"The Little girl you will never forget"

WORLD RIGHTS CONTROLLED BY WESTERN IMPORT CO.
1010 BROKAW BLDG. NEW YORK.

W I CO

Important
ANNOUNCEMENT to Exhibitors of

GREATER NEW YORK
NEW YORK STATE and NORTHERN NEW JERSEY

all future

CHRISTIE COMEDIES

will be distributed in above territory by the

FIRST NATIONAL EXHIBITORS EXCHANGE
509 Fifth Ave. New York City

Secure Your Bookings Now
For these NEW COMEDIES

"RED CROSSED"
RELEASED APRIL 15th
"HERE COMES THE GROOM"
RELEASED APRIL 22ND
"SOMEBODY'S BABY"
RELEASED APRIL 29th

CHRISTIE FILM CO inc
LOS ANGELES

LAUGHS—LAUGHS—LAUGHS

These Repetitions of the Same Word Sum Up the Opinions of the Critics on the New Process Issues of

KATZENJAMMER KIDS
AND
HAPPY HOOLIGAN

These Pictures, Made by a Process So Far Superior to the Ordinary Animated Cartoon as the Masterpicture is to the First of the Split Reelers, Are Backed by the Most Intimate and Genuine Sort of Publicity—These Cartoons Are Read Every Week by 25,000,000 People.

HAPPY HOOLIGAN in "DOING HIS BIT"

Was Featured by Mr. S. L. Rothapfel

AT THE RIALTO INSTEAD OF THE USUAL COMEDY

The MOTION PICTURE NEWS said of the Katzenjammer Kids in "Vanity and Vengeance"—

> "Now the patriotic punch has been put over, and as comedy is the dominant feature of the bill the Animated is made to end with a series of roars induced by the first of the new International-Educational Films animated cartoons, the Katzenjammer Kids in 'Vanity and Vengeance,' the funniest thing of the kind that we have ever seen."

BOOK THESE NOW. THEY ARE WAR'S BEST ANTIDOTE

They Reach the Same Quality Pinnacle As	Bruce's "Scenics Beautiful" Ditmars' Living Book of Nature The Newman Travels

BUY BONDS AND LAUGH

EDUCATIONAL FILMS CORPORATION OF AMERICA
729 7th AVENUE NEW YORK, N.Y.

THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY
$1,000,000

RANDOLPH FILM CORPORATION announces

THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY

Now Offered as

A State Rights Feature in Six Reels

The records prove that "The Million Dollar Mystery" was the most successful serial film ever released. Exhibitors everywhere coined money with it. The public raved over it. Its success has never been duplicated.

Re-titled, re-edited, a thousand times more snappy and entertaining than when first issued, "The Million Dollar Mystery" is now ready for showing as a six-reel feature production. Once more it will reap a golden harvest for every theatre showing it.

47,000 Feet of Thrills Crammed Into 6,000

All the thrills, sensations, "stunts" and action of the original picture are retained. The best only from the 47,000 feet of the former serial are presented as a 6,000 foot feature crammed with action—thrills—SURPRISES!

Never before in the history of the film industry was there a feature on which so much time, effort and money was expended. All the marvels of stage-craft created to keep the public coming for 23 weeks can now be seen in one evening.

FEATURING

Marguerite Snow
Sidney Bracy
James Cruze
Frank Farrington
Florence LaBadie
Irving Cummings

In the leading roles of "The Million Dollar Mystery" will be found an array of players, each of whom enjoys a personal following of millions. Fans the world over know and admire stars like James Cruze, Marguerite Snow, Florence LaBadie, Sidney Bracy, Frank Farrington and Irving Cummings. In this picture they did the best work of their entire screen careers.

Remembering the phenomenal profits, every exhibitor who originally ran the serial will jump at the chance to show it again as a feature. The mere announcement that you own rights for your state on this feature will flood your office with bookings. Here is the greatest opportunity ever offered the state right buyer. A demonstrated success—a "sure-fire hit"—47,000 feet of thrills crammed into 6,000.

For Territory: DON'T WAIT!—WRITE!—WIRE!

ARROW FILM CORPORATION
SALES AGENTS
Times Building New York City

FIFTEEN MILLION READING CIRCULATION A MONTH

For the Story of "THE EAGLE'S EYE"

The novelized story of "The Eagle's Eye" in 20 chapters, one to an episode, is being published serially one chapter a week in each of the following papers. They are among the biggest and best in the country. Others are being added daily.

In addition, the story is being published serially in Photoplay Magazine with 350,000 circulation a month, and in The Gentlewoman Magazine, with 1,500,000 circulation monthly.

Newspaper	Circulation
New York American	705,224
Albany (N. Y.), Telegram	25,913
Troy (N. Y.), Observer	10,500
Atlanta (Ga.), Constitution	106,116
Charlotte (N. C.), News	16,508
Macon (Ga.), News	15,590
Boston (Mass.), American	380,281
Bridgeport (Conn.), Herald	24,476
Buffalo (N. Y.), Express	39,923
Rochester (N. Y.), Herald	27,233
Chicago (Ill.), Examiner	519,854
Louisville (Ky.), Courier-Journal	49,418
Springfield (O.), News	18,435
Canton (O.), Repository	14,975
Houston (Tex.), Post	39,117
El Paso (Tex.), Times	18,000
Austin (Tex.), American	16,196
Denver (Colo.), News	47,000
Colorado Springs (Colo.), Eve. Telegraph	4,403
Salt Lake City (Utah), Tribune	45,947
Lansing (Mich.), State Journal	19,139
Lincoln (Nebr.), State Journal	35,331
Los Angeles (Calif.), Examiner	143,433
Minneapolis (Minn.), Tribune	178,486
Sioux Falls (S. D.), Press	9,000
Fargo (N. D.), Forum	12,418
Philadelphia Eve. Public Ledger	110,672
Washington (D. C.), Times	43,000
Erie (Pa.), Times	27,398
Wilmington (Del.), Star	9,000
Pittsburgh (Pa.), Press	108,674
Wheeling (W. Va.), News	18,934
San Francisco Examiner	230,198
Boise (Idaho), Capital News	10,593
Montreal (Que.), Standard	61,514
Winnipeg (Man.), Free Press	80,000
Hamilton (Ont.), Spectator	27,000
Calgary (Alta.), News Telegram	16,500
Quebec (Que.), Telegraph	11,067
Phoenix (Ariz.) Gazette	6,046

NO OTHER SERIAL OR PRODUCTION OF ANY CHARACTER GIVES THE EXHIBITOR SUCH UNPRECEDENTED ASSISTANCE IN SELLING HIS PATRONS BY DIRECT LEGITIMATE PUBLICITY IN SUCH TREMENDOUS VOLUME AS

"THE EAGLE'S EYE"

By

WILLIAM J. FLYNN

(RECENTLY RETIRED)

CHIEF OF THE U.S. SECRET SERVICE

PRODUCED BY THE WHARTONS

WITH THE POPULAR SCREEN STARS

KING BAGGOT and MARGUERITE SNOW

FOR FOREIGN RIGHTS APPLY TO ARROW FILM CORP. TIMES B'LD'G N.Y.

DISTRIBUTED BY FOURSQUARE EXCHANGES

THE BEST

STATE RIGHTS

PROPOSITION OF THE YEAR

STAR OF "THE BAR SINISTER" "THE BARRIER" AND "THE SIGN INVISIBLE"
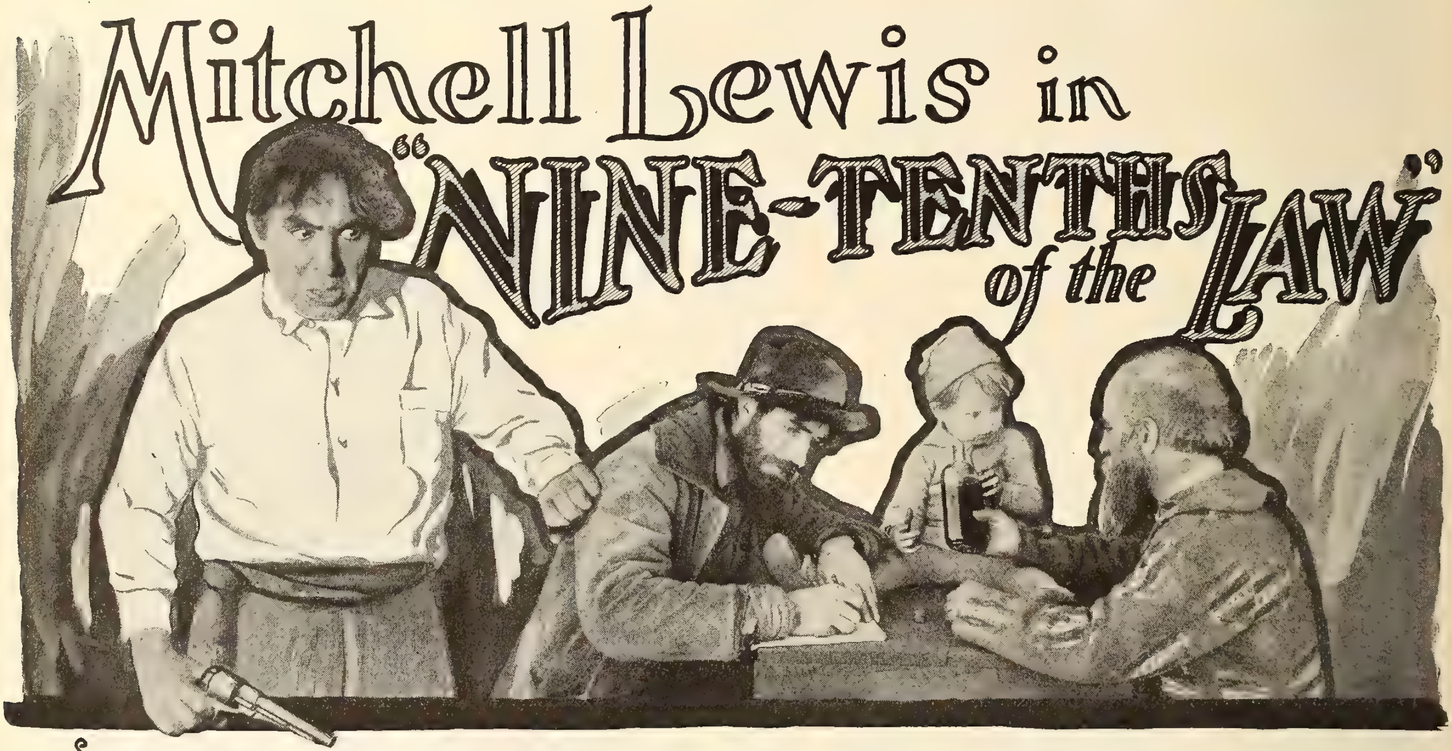
IN
THE GREATEST HIT OF HIS REMARKABLE CAREER



THE MOST POWERFUL HEART INTEREST DRAMA EVER SEEN ON THE SCREEN

ALL TERRITORIES FOR THIS

SMASHING BIG SPECIAL PRODUCTION

TO BE SOLD IMMEDIATELY BY

GEORGE A. ENRIGHT

- ATLANTIC DISTRIBUTING COMPANY -

TIMES BLDG. NEW YORK

FOREIGN RIGHTS CONTROLLED BY ROBERTSON—COLE CO.
TIMES BLDG. NEW YORK

FLORIDA FILM CORPORATION
KLUTHO STUDIOS, JACKSONVILLE, FLA.

MR. STATE-RIGHT BUYER

DONT MISS

JOSH BINNEY

FATTY FILBERT

A
Josh Binney
COMEDY

FOR YOUR NEXT RUN—IT'LL BE A WINNER

1/3 STORY 1/3 PLOT 1/3 SLAPSTICK

NEW SCENERY, NEW PEOPLE, NEW IDEAS

GET THE FIRST RELEASE

FUNNY FATTY FILBERT

IN

FABULOUS FORTUNE FUMBLERS

(ALSO READY)

FRED'S FICTITIOUS FOUNDLING
FREDA'S FIGHTING FATHER

ONE A MONTH TO FOLLOW

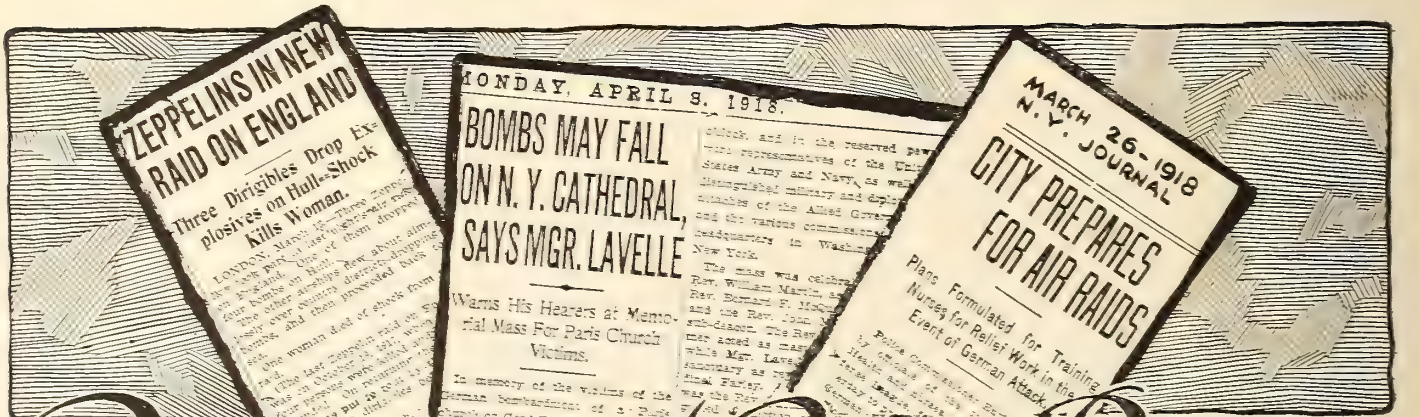
ERNEST SHIPMAN
17. W. 44 ST. N.Y.
REPRESENTATIVE

"The LAST RAID of ZEPPELIN L-21"

TWO REELS OF STARTLING REVELATIONS-VISUALIZING and DEPICTING for the FIRST TIME ON ANY SCREEN The DREADED MENACE of the HUN AIR-RAIDERS, THE ZEPPELIN

Secretary of War Baker Says:—

"It vividly visualized my first experience of the actualities of war and a revelation of the methods inaugurated by an enemy who wages the same war against women and children as against soldiers. Aerial raids on towns are counterpart of the pitiless submarine war and the attacks against American rights. The very reason why America entered the war. We are sending our soldiers to Europe to fight until the world is delivered from these horrors."



ZEPPELINS IN NEW RAID ON ENGLAND

Three Dirigibles Drop Explosives on Hull—Shock Kills Woman.

MONDAY, APRIL 8, 1918.

BOMBS MAY FALL ON N. Y. CATHEDRAL, SAYS MGR. LAVELLE

Warns His Hearers at Memorial Mass For Paris Church Victims.

MARCH 26-1918 N.Y. JOURNAL

CITY PREPARES FOR AIR RAIDS

Plans Formulated for Training Nurses for Relief Work in the Event of German Attack.

Divert this National Publicity to your THEATRE

NOT A THOMAS H. INCE PRODUCTION BUT THE ACTUAL PICTURIZATION OF THE L-21 RAIDING LONDON AND ITS DESTRUCTION

COMMUNICATE NOW WITH THE INTERSTATE FILM COMPANY
KNICKERBOCKER THEATRE BUILDING
1402 BROADWAY – NEW YORK CITY

Motion Picture News

Vol. 17 No. 18. May 4, 1918

The Week in the Film World at a Glance

FEATURES

LOOKING UNDER THE SURFACE (WM. A. JOHNSTON) 2643
SPEAKING EDITORIALY 2644
SERVING IT WITH SPEED AND GINGER 2645
"ANARCHIST" IS IN AGAIN 2646
WHAT KIND OF A FELLOW IS—CROMELIN? 2655
THE INDEPENDENT FIELD TICKER 2697

OF SERVICE TO EXHIBITORS

Near a Settlement in Chicago 2651
Live News from the Producers 2678
In and Out of West Coast Studios 2714
In the Independent Field 2725
Coming Program Offerings 2692
Exhibitor to Exhibitor Service Bureau 2696
Glances at the Programs 2693
News Notes from Canada 2724
Reviews 2662

NEWS OF THE WEEK

Exhibitors' Service Bureau 2664
Rothapfel's Answers to Exhibitors 2670
Ready-Made Ad-Talks 2676
Newsy Items from the Studios 2716
Short Subjects in Review 2703
Releases—Current and Coming 2725-26-27-28
Projection Department 2732
Music and the Picture 2739
Theatres Worth While 2744

SCREEN EXAMINATIONS

"At the Mercy of Men" (Select) 2721
"Black Sherlock Holmes, A" (General-Ebony) 2722
"Blue Bird" (Selexart-Goldwyn) 2718
"Danger Within" (Bluebird) 2721
"Doctor and the Woman, The" (Jewel Prod.) 2719
"Dolly Does Her Bit" (Diando-Pathe) 2722
"Face in the Dark, The" (Goldwyn) 2723
"Freight Investigation, The" (Mutt and Jeff-Fox) 2718
"Hand at the Window, The" (Triangle) 2720
"His Busy Day" (Pathe-Rolin) 2721
"Kicked Out" (Pathe-Rolin) 2721
"Leap to Fame" (World Film) 2722
"Let's Get a Divorce" (Paramount) 2721
"Mother's Secret, A" (Blue Bird) 2720
"Nine Tenths of the Law" (Atlantic Distributing Corp.) .. 2720
"Society for Sale" (Triangle) 2721
"Tyrant Fear" (Paramount-Ince) 2719
"White Man's Law, The" (Lasky-Paramount) 2720

Newsy Announcements of the Week Found in the Ad-Pages

Why "The Spirit of the Red Cross" Should Be Booked .. 2593
Paramount Pictures in Their Order for the Month of May 2594-95
Kitty Gordon Is Presented on the World Program in "The Purple Lily" 2596
"The Seal of Silence" Stars Grace Darmond and Earle Williams 2597
"Over the Top" 2598
King Solomon Interviewed on Pictures by Triangle 2599
"Up the Road with Sallie," Constance Talmadge's Best 2600
Alice Brady in "At the Mercy of Men" 2601
Goldwyn's Prize Mystery Play, "The Face in the Dark" .. 2602
Goldwyn's "Heart of the Sunset" 2603
Bill Parson's Comedies 2604
"For the Freedom of the World" Grows More Valuable With Each Day 2605
The Selexart-Goldwyn Pictures All Powerful Emotional Dramas 2606
Prize Patriotic Play, "My Own United States" 2607
Exhibitors Answer Seven Vital Questions Anent Hodkinson Service 2608
Paralta Pictures 2609-10
Judge Brown Pictures of Proven Merit 2611
Ned Finley's Blue Ridge Dramas on General Program 2612
"Daughter of Uncle Sam" Visualizes Happenings of the Day 2613
One of O. Henry's Best Ready in General Exchanges 2614
The Chaplin Reissues 2615
"True Blue" Is William Farnum's Latest "Strong Man" Melodrama 2616-17
The Best Chaplin Comedy of All Time—"A Dog's Life," 2618-19
A First National Box-Office Sensation—"Tarzan of the Apes" 2620-21
The Advertising Campaign "Tarzan" Will Receive 2622-23
"Men" and "Crucible of Life," U. S. Exhibitors' Attractions 2624-25
Gaumont's Beauty Contest 2626
Russell's Next Picture and Chaplin Reissues from Mutual 2627-28
Keeney's Newark Plays Its First Serial Pathe's "House of Hate" 2629
Bessie Love and Baby Marie Osborne in Current Pathe Features 2630
Washburn and Keenan in Big Money Getters from Pathe Exchange 2631
Toto and Lonesome Luke Pathe's Chief Fun Makers 2632
There is a Song About 'Mickey' Now 2633
First National Exhibitors' Exchange of New York Takes Christie Comedies 2634
Educational Presents Happy Hooligan and the Katzenjammers 2635
"The Million Dollar Mystery" Now Offered as Six-Reel Feature 2636
"The Eagle's Eye" 2637
Mitchell Lewis in "Nine Tenths of the Law" 2638
Josh Binney's Comedies 2639
"The Last Raid of Zeppelin L-21" 2640
The George K. Spoor Ultra-Features Through Perfection Exchanges 2642
Just One Instance of the Box-Office Power of "The Kaiser" 2694-95
"The Brass Bullet" is Universal's Latest Serial 2704-05
The Pulling Power of the Universal News Weeklies 2706
Mae Murray Presented in Universal Special Production, "The Bride's Awakening" 2707-08-09-10
Jewel Productions 2711
Universal Has "Boy Scouts to the Rescue" 2712-13

WM. A. JOHNSTON, Pres. and Editor. HENRY F. SEWALL, Vice-Pres. E. KENDALL GILLETT, Sec. and Treas.

Published on Tuesday every week by MOTION PICTURE NEWS, Inc., 729 Seventh Ave., New York, N. Y. 'Phone 9360 Bryant. Chicago Offices, Mgr. Wm. J. McGrath, 110 So. Dearborn St.; 'Phone 755 Randolph. Los Angeles Offices, Mgr. J. C. Jessen, 429 South Figueroa St.; 'Phones 780 Pico, F-4661. Subscription $2 a year, postpaid, in United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands. Canada, $3. N. B.—No agent is authorized to take subscriptions for Motion Picture News at less than these rates. Have the agent who takes your subscription show his credentials and coupon book.

Copyright, 1918, by Motion Picture News, Inc.

The George K. Spoor ultra-features are in a distinctive class by themselves. The exceptional photography, unique plots and artistic settings have opened up a new era in the photoplay field. ¶ "A Pair of Sixes," "Ruggles of Red Gap," "Uneasy Money," comedy-dramas featuring Taylor Holmes, are clean, wholesome entertainment, enjoyed by every member of the family. ¶ "Men Who Have Made Love to Me," featuring I, Mary MacLane, is a triumph in artistry, revealing the life of one of the strangest geniuses of the literary world. ¶ These plays have proved their worth by breaking attendance records everywhere. Grasp the opportunity now of giving your patrons something different.

Essanay
"FIRST TO STANDARDIZE PHOTOPLAYS"

George Kleine System
Distributors

Perfection Pictures
The Highest Standard in Motion Pictures

APR 24 1918
©Cl.B412560

"When you see it in 'The News' It's News"

Motion Picture News

"The Exhibitors' Medium of Communication"

HAS THE QUALITY CIRCULATION OF THE TRADE

Volume 17. No. 18 May 4, 1918

Looking Under the Surface

LAST week we called attention (a) to the present marked tendency on all sides toward "special" production; (b) to the rapid rise in average picture length from 1.65 reels per picture in 1915 to a probable average of more than 4 in 1918.

And from these facts we drew the deduction of much importance if true—that picture making has entirely cast off its old policies and was well into a brand new era.

An era in which not merely a few, but nearly all the makers—of both long and short pictures—are making fewer pictures and far better pictures.

And, this being true, the industry has at last arrived at its logical and inevitable development, the making of pictures good enough to be advertised, and therefore, in turn, capable of the longer runs which advertising, in order to make good, positively demands.

* * *

IN the same issue Ernst Boehringer, a veteran showman, warns against the trend toward longer pictures, as involving a grave danger.

"Prefixing 'super' to 'feature' and adding 2,000 or 3,000 feet is a move in the wrong direction," he says.

And again he states: "The producer obviously cannot make pictures for a few ultra theatres running pretentious programs which consume two hours or more."

All of which is very true and very important—so much so that we reopen the subject in order to air fully the danger involved and to reiterate that the matter of length did not enter into our calculations whatsoever.

We spoke only of an era of production in which manufacturers were "specializing" in better pictures—whether long or short.

Footage does not enter the question.

Footage has no more to do with superior pictures, specials, if you like, than has white paper to do with best-seller books.

* * *

IT would be better if we could kill the word "super-feature" right now.

It is going to be abused; just as its predecessor "feature" has been saddled with all the crimes of the picture-making calendar.

There are substitute makers and fakers in the van of every industry; and length being the only thing they can imitate, they will palm off their "just as good" stuff because it is just as long.

These are the people most facile at coining words; they are the upholders of "super-features" and the like.

"FEATURES," "Super-Features," and other such words have nothing to do with the present situation.

Intrinsically, it is an era of fewer and better pictures—just that and nothing else.

But "just that" means a great deal. It means the biggest step forward this industry has ever taken.

It means:

(a) The recognition of the greater motion picture public—which, when brought regularly into picture theatres, will double and treble the present attendance and therefore the present cash receipts of the industry.

(b) The further recognition of the fact that it is better business to minister to the quality tastes of this greater public than to pander to the quantity requirements of a minor and mistaught public through the whirligig production of several thousand subjects a year.

(c) The realization that such quantity production not only forbids quality production, but that it also stands flatly in the way of successful exploitation, because—

(d) One reason "special" productions succeed is that the maker has time to prepare a complete selling campaign. The picture is sold intensively plus service to the exhibitor, who in turn is induced—and enabled, through the advertising service offered—to sell it intensively to the public, giving it a run which will allow a maximum public to read of it, hear of it, and come to see it.

In other words, here is the introduction of merchandizing methods—the regulation of the machinery of production and exhibition so that the merchandizing of pictures is a possible thing.

That is what the present era means.

It is an advance in art.

It is an advance in commerce.

Better goods—better selling methods—all achieved through specialization in production and concentration in selling effort.

Compared with the past era of production—the one signalized by the length of 1.65 reels per picture, an era of pictures abnormal in quantity, subnormal in quality—the present era is one of sanity and force; it is the clearing up of a great commercial fog, the change from aimlessness to effectiveness, from waste to economy, from a minor public to a major one.

W A Johnston

Speaking Editorially:

Classify the Theatres

A LEADING topic discussed very seriously by the prominent exhibitors assembled in New York last week is that of a new and sharp classification of theatres and new booking policies based upon such classifications.

Said one: "I could give good pictures longer runs—much longer—if I had longer protection.

"I want to be able to say to the public: 'This picture will not be seen again in this city for such and such a length of time.'

"As it stands now, a small house around the corner gets my first runs within a few weeks."

A very logical development it would seem; and, seemingly, one that is bound to come about.

If first runs could be made longer runs at higher prices—surely, then, more money would be taken in by both producer and exhibitor from these houses, which, in turn, ought to get the good pictures to the smaller houses at prices they could better afford to pay.

* * * *

A Production Recipe

MANAGER H. M. THOMAS of the Strand theatre, Omaha, gives a good recipe for picture production.

On a basis of eight pictures a month he would divide them as follows:

For light comedy dramas on the order of those in which these stars have recently appeared with such success: J. Pickford, Ray, Taylor Holmes, Ann Pennington, George Walsh, Vivian Martin, etc.

One highly emotional drama—like the best vehicles of Ferguson and Fredericks.

One melodrama—western occasionally.

One society drama—introducing handsome sets, gowns and beautiful women.

Anybody got a better recipe?

* * * *

Let's "Show 'Em"

PRESIDENT BRADY of the National Association and ex-officio chairman of the war co-operation committee of the industry has asked the state chairman of the committee to compile accounts of Liberty Loan subscriptions taken by individuals and companies of the trade and those secured through the picture theatres.

The screen has played a large part in the big drive. Let the records be gathered and the facts made known, so that we may speak in figures hereafter of the power of the screen and the patriotism of the picture industry.

* * * *

Going the Week Run One Better

THE Circle theatre, Indianapolis, announces a two weeks' run in "My Four Years in Germany"—a radical step for a theatre established on a policy of a week-run limit.

We predict that many week-run policies will be broken this year.

War News and the Screen

NATURALLY much interest is felt among picture men in the activities of the Government through the Film Division of the Committee on Public Information.

Chairman Hart seems to have made a good start by gathering around him a staff of assistants with real and practical experience in the business of film making and distributing.

We feel certain that he will strengthen a good start by continuing to work in a spirit of co-operation with the industry which has shown in the past year a consistent desire to go more than half-way in aiding the Government in carrying its messages to the people at home.

Naturally, in the desire for 100 per cent. results for the Government, the temptation will be present to adopt drastic methods at variance with the basic principles of film practice. But, just as naturally, we believe it will be realized that in the end better results will be secured by using methods and organizations already tested and proven.

* * * *

Make a Note for November

THE charge is made, very pointedly, that the Governor of the Empire State has played politics with the Motion Picture Option bill—rather obvious, old-time ward politics.

The Assembly passed the bill, the Mayors' Conference wanted it, the best newspapers were for it, it was perfectly clear to any observer that the purpose of the bill met the wishes of the great majority of the people of New York State.

But the bill didn't mix with Albany politics. It was, obviously—and clumsily, it seems to us—ordered killed.

The inside facts are pretty well known to the exhibitors of the state. And we have little doubt that they will act accordingly. The power of the screen is great; and here seems a great opportunity to prove it.

* * * *

A Business Meeting!

IN these days of co-operative movements within the industry much interest will centre in the convention called for Chicago some time in June by the American Exhibitors' Association.

It will be a business meeting.

No carnivals, costly exhibits, or joy parties; and above all, no politics.

Just a meeting—open to all branches and all associations of the industry; an opportunity for business men to get together and put sanity, force and mutuality into the operations of an industry great thus far in spite of itself.

* * * *

Over the Top

"OVER THE TOP" has gone over the top with a successful run at the Lyric (New York) theatre, now entering upon its fourth week.

Another star in the galaxy of fewer pictures, better pictures, longer runs.

Serving It with Speed and Ginger

LAST week in New York could have been given two names with equal rights to either. It could have been called "First National Exhibitors' Week," and anyone who got one glance at the Hotel Astor lobby during the week will admit that the name belongs.

Or it could have been called "Liberty Loan Week," and one look at gathering of film men at the New York theatre pledging their thousands would carry the case for that name.

Not to speak of the meetings in all parts of the city—and outside of it—where picture stars in abundance did their share and more to further the Third Liberty drive.

We wish we could find the space to give you all the reports of film activities in every section of the country on behalf of the Kaiser Killer, but it would take every inch of this issue and then some. Condensed more than we like to do it, the high lights of the week's work will be found on Page 2649

* * * *

BUT for out and out film interest alone the First National part of the week naturally gains the verdict.

Every time you turned around in the Astor lobby you ran into some other big exhibitor. If you turned around often enough you were apt to get the idea that the whole motion picture business had moved into Mrs. Astor's tavern.

And if we may do it in passing without treading on some one's corns let us say something in passing:

A half hour at a producers' gathering of any sort gives you the impression that the far-famed motion picture business has gone to the dogs and the dogs are not treating it any too kindly. "Everybody is losing money, you hear."

"I know how I hold on, but how are the others lasting? When are they going to blow?"

A week at an exhibitor convention, M. P. E. L. or A. E. A., gives you the impression that all exhibitors are starving to death with danger of the ration being cut still further. "The producers and stars are driving us out of existence," is what you hear there.

But a week hovering around the Hotel Astor during a First National meeting convinces you that most of the big exhibitors of the country are making money, and lots of it—and if the others in the business are not doing so it's their own fault.

These are the psychological impressions. And they come of the fact that the First National crowd is a crowd of clean-cut "smilers."

* * * *

AND by the way, while speaking of the Astor let's go back a week to the gathering of exhibitors who discussed co-operative movements there before the First National came to town.

Though no definite announcements have yet been made, we have it on pretty good authority that the next few weeks will find ten exhibitor circuits, backed by outside capital, ready to talk business on current productions and to launch a strong drive at nationalization.

It isn't going to be an easy proposition to put over this co-operative plan on a national scale, but the backers of the new one have the money and the faith—and they don't want any of the exhibitors' money to play with.

* * * *

THE ready-letter-writer "Anarchist" comes across this week with a wail that we expect and hope to see answered. "Anarchist" wants to know "Why is a house organ?"

Of course, he puts his case in his usual interesting way. But we won't attempt to say how much we agree or disagree with him. This much we do know—in some of the house organs coming to our desk recently there has been so much that is good and so much that shows real progress that we are certain "Anarchist" is going to get a strong come-back.

But perhaps he won't be answered. For example, too much of what he says could, with the simple substitution of the phrase "trade paper for house organ" be applied to cover the entire trade paper field.

But we have stifled our temptation to answer him because we know that while his criticisms may apply to others, they couldn't possibly fit us. You know—"everybody else, else; me—no!"

Maybe the house-organ sponsors will reason the same way.

* * * *

SPEAKING of letter writers, New York film men should get quite a few chuckles out of the letter written by Rupert Julian to R. H. Cochrane, which will be found on page 2654.

Julian, producer of "The Kaiser," confesses that he came to New York with the usual Hollywood viewpoint that New York is only the place where films are ruined forever and ever more.

Then Julian got a week's close-up on what is done in New York when the prints arrive from the studio—and he went back to Hollywood with the material for a most interesting letter.

Be sure to read it.

* * * *

EVERY now and then some producer does get time to read a trade paper.

And whenever this happens, a producer says to us, "Say, those Box Office Reports you fellows run are a great thing. Did you just start this department? Why it saves me money on my productions and more on taking conceit out of grasping stars."

Or, he says. "This new Exhibitors' Service Bureau you just started is a great idea, isn't it?"

Or else, "I used to believe that only the little exhibitors read trade papers that the big fellows didn't get the time. But when you can get as representative a group of theatre men on an Advisory Board as you have there then I'm convinced that they read the NEWS anyway."

"Anarchist" Is In Again!

This Time He Has Fault to Find with the Ton of Printed Matter That Fills His Mail Every Day

"Read a house organ over once maybe twice and you will feel as carefree and light in the head as a backwoods bridegroom trailing up to the altar with his boyhood sweetheart."

ON your head be it. You have asked me for a series of yelps, I herewith append, "Yelp three." You ask me to take the responsibility and I agree heartily. I don't know what that means exactly, but I am rather of the impression that you are afraid that I will say many things which do not jibe with your editorial opinion. I expect I will, and I believe your disclaiming any responsibility for my outcries is both prudent and wise. But in all that I say, please understand that I understand a good deal about the other side of the question, although I shall firmly avoid mentioning that other side. Let some of those big, husky pen-pushers in the home offices get busy and storm MY trenches; I'm ready for 'em. And they have some darned good arguments if they care to trot them out. Well—we're off!

I have been fairly itching to take a wallop at one of our most sacred institutions, and I don't suppose I will ever have another such golden opportunity. I want to ask the "why" of something on which producers and distributors expend a king's ransom (whatever that is) yearly, and which, of course, the exhibitor eventually pays for. I want to know "Wyinell is the house organ?"

I have just returned to the sticks after an hilarious week in the big town during which time I heard my letter discussed several times. I sure got an earful. This is to advise you that you have a treat in store for you. One irate exchange manager has promised to write an anonymous answer to "Anarchist," and if he can write as graphically as he talks it ought to be worth reading. Deleting the profanity from a half-hour tirade, he expresses himself on the topic of "the average exhibitor" about thusly: "He is a billy-be-damned, four-ply, double-distilled, pale gray ass, and resembles that animal in every detail but one; he has a tail at EACH end and a head at neither." Be sure and publish that letter.

During my absence my mail accumulated, and I want to assure you that the average exhibitor's mail is a weird and wonderful thing. Some day I am going to write you an article, entitled "Oh, see what the postman brought!" I have a baling machine which yawns hungrily, and not in van, for most of this stuff, but for once I painstakingly shucked the wrappers from my collection of house organs and READ 'EM (yes I did, honest), from kiver to kiver. I wanted to feel certain that the things I intended to incorporate in this letter were true. They ARE. But it was an awful price to pay for an easy conscience; five hours' reading house organs! I emerged from my task tottering mentally and gibbering like an idiot. If you have ever tried to read the published accounts of the activities of our lawmakers at Albany you know just what I mean.

I studied them carefully, almost religiously, in an honest attempt to discover some note of interest, some germ of a new idea, some excuse for being, only to finish with the hope that some time in the very near future I would hear the last house organ play its last tune, a sort of editorial Swan Song. I don't HAVE to read 'em, I know, but in these days of conservation I hate to see such a woeful waste of words, paper, ink and postage. I move that for the period of the war we Hooverize on house organs; let's have Houseorganless days seven days a week.

I finally bunched them all together, struck an average and dissected the result. I found them to be composed of the following departments, wards, institutions, or whatever you want to call them:

An editorial page; Descriptions of current releases; Articles by, letters from, stories of and photos of, Prominent Exhibitors; Publicity pills and press piffle, of the sort which has sent many of our bravest and best editors to the nut foundries; Exhibitor Service; Studio gossip; the roe from which much of the before-mentioned publicity is hatched; Favorable comments by reviewers and aforesaid Prominent Exhibitors; Specimen advertisements; Music cues. And steen hundred editions of the above are mailed out to the poor, long-suffering exhibitors by producers and distributors. But we forgive them for they know not what they do.

Of the house organ editorial, let us, in a spirit of sweet charity, say as little as possible. They have all the snap and fire of a report from the Bureau of Vital Statistics, and all the absorbing interest to be found in the minutes of an agricultural meeting. But they cover the film business from soup to nuts spilling pearls of wisdom en route. They must be read with great zest by every man who writes them.

THE editors desire to express thanks for the stills used to illustrate this article to the following producers:

To Select Pictures Corporation for the illustration at the bottom of the next column, which is a moment in the Constance Talmadge production, "The Honeymoon."

To Triangle for the illustration on the opposite page. This is from a scene in "The Hand at the Window."

And then we have those descriptions of current releases. It takes you back to those halcyon days when the patent medicine circulars were enjoying their heyday, but they lack the essential charm of the old medicine advertisements, because we all of us used to experience an exquisite pleasure in discovering in ourselves each succeeding symptom as it was described. The resemblance I am referring to lies in the fact that they all follow certain prescribed forms. The medicine guys used to decide on what form best suited their needs, and then simply insert the name of the remedy. The film gent decides upon the form which suits him best, and inserts the name of the production, the name of the stars and supporting cast, the director and possibly the author (?), and there you have a description all made to order. Oh, yes, they make thrilling reading!

"Heart interest," "Human appeal," "Soul-stirring," "Forceful," "Gripping," "Beautiful," "Masterpiece," etc. Why, they might ALL well be the product of some ONE talented pen. The recipe is invariably the same: to one tedious synopsis add the names of the star, cast, production and director; stir in a little bunk about the high production cost, expensive sets, or the deadly dangers and hazards in filming; season with a few cute little advertising suggestions and "Stunts"; shake well before using, and serve with several grains of salt and much aqua pura.

Now, let's gaze admiringly upon that supreme achievement of the house organ, the "Exhibitor Service." Here exhibitors are told told how to do it, usually by men who never ran a theatre in their lives or else ran them so badly that they quit or were forced out. How do they do it? Simple enough. You know how Ez Skinner and Ike Harris sit on the sugar bar'ls down in Si Hoskin's store, and tell President Wilson how to run the nation, don't you? Well, that's it. Of course, the President don't, but for that matter the exhibitors don't either, so it's six of one and a half a dozen of the other.

One of the chief functions of this department is to describe the various exhibitor "aids" which the loving producer offers to his dear exhibitors at a very modest profit. For a time I was puzzled as to the origin of that word "aids," but after I had purchased a few and examined many more it was all made clear to me. It is the concluding syllable of a longer word and should never have been wholly divorced from its parent, simply hyphenated, thusly LEMON-AIDS, and LEMON-aids they usually are. In this department also are suggested "stunts" for feeble-minded exhibitors. Many of them would require a corps of busy assistants and set the exhibitor back about double his average gross; others would land him in the incurable ward in the dippy-house and give passers-by the impression that his lobby was a second-hand store. But they fill space and READ like a million dollars.

And then we have the specimen ads. Oi, yoi. In one column we see a specimen advertisement which would have brought tears of appreciation to the eyes of the late P. T. Barnum, and in an adjoining column we are treated to a friendly criticism of an advertisement submitted in a rash moment by some exhibitor who had a fool idea that HE knew something about writing ads. I'll admit that the average exhibitor is a rotten ad-writer, but he would do well to turn this portion of his work over to the local plumber and keep off those specimens ads.

'Nd then we have talks with, letters from, articles by and pictures of—that much-mentioned-seldom-met "Live Wire Exhibitor." Let us pause right here and give three rousing cheers for the handsome gentleman whose daguerreotype is so frequently seen ornamenting the pages of our house organs. Meet Prominent Exhibitor, folks. And let's give three cheers more for his intensely thrilling and entertaining account of how he cleaned up in Keokuk and Kankakee with Hookum's Pictures.

He wrote that letter some time back, hoping that there might be a comeback in the shape of a request for his photo and mebbe a picture of his house. With that idea in mind he laid it on good and thick, knowing that "only the strong deserve the air." His soul yearned for the spotlight, and he went after it the only way he knew. We ALL know that the only possible way to get our names inscribed upon the scroll of "PROMINENT EXHIBITORS" in the Filmortal Hall of Fame is to write a good strong one to the editor, shooting the bull along regularly prescribed lines. I know because I have done it in times gone past. I got in, too. I am one of those things you DON'T read about. I fell for it the same as the rest of 'em.

These pictures are inspected, and the articles or letters read with great relish by the gentlemen whom they most closely concern AND BY NO ONE ELSE. You can form a very accurate estimate of the numbers of readers of this section of the house organ by counting the number of articles and letters and allowing one reader for each item, the P. E. himselluf. Whootheaitch cares to read what the other fellow has to say about himself, anyway? I don't. Do you?

We will now turn to page four, and read the "Studio Gossip." No house organ is complete without this chatty little column of anecdotes, near-wit and pathos. How some of those long ago press agents must thrash about in their graves when the average house organ rolls merrily off the presses. These snappy little stories about celebrities have been handed along, with little or no change, from generation to generation. They read about the same now as they did in the days when Adam and Eve played the leads and His Satanic Majesty did the heavy in a serpentine make-up.

(Continued on page 2663)

"Don't ask me whyinhell is a house organ? Look at this one and see if you can figure it out. That's why I keep the flowers on the table—they counterbalance the press agents' delirium masterpieces."

Liberty Meeting at Playhouse

Everyone in Picture Industry Has Been Invited to Attend to Give Third Loan Most Vigorous Boost It Has Yet Experienced

THE motion picture industry is not yet satisfied with its splendid showing in behalf of the third Liberty Loan, to which it has added thousands of dollars.

This became plainly evident when it was made known Monday, April 22, that partly through the efforts of William B. Brady, aided and abetted by various other prime movers in the industry, a meeting is planned for Sunday, April 28, at the Playhouse, to give the loan a final boost. This event is expected to send the amount credited to the motion picture over the top in fine shape, leaving no doubt as to where the "movie" and its stars, exhibitors, distributors and producers stand in the matter of patriotism.

For the Playhouse meeting, purposely set on Sunday to allow no one an excuse for being absent, Marcus Loew is arranging a suitable program, including music and other features that will make the affair one of variety as well as one at which money will be the chief topic of conversation.

In the meantime the industry is not idle, and is showing at every turn that it is in the drive to the finish. On another page of this issue is an account of the chief happenings of the past week, but these by no means cover all the activities.

When the Adolph Zukor Day efforts were summed up April 22, after a thrilling and strenuous time in front of the New York Public Library, it was found that over $300,000 in bonds had been subscribed. Jesse Lasky, Arthur S. Friend and Emil Shauer, in the absence of Mr. Zukor, who was called out of the city, subscribed $100,000 of this amount. About $25,000 worth was taken by the office and studio force of Famous Players. William A. Brady was present and addressed the throng, which crowded Fifth avenue for several blocks. It was estimated over 20,000 persons were in the crowd, which listened to talks from the stars named in another article in MOTION PICTURE NEWS. Miss Elsie Ferguson was one of the most popular with the huge audience. She was followed in her address by Governor Whitman.

A letter which reached MOTION PICTURE NEWS this week from Chicago, and which was originally sent to S. S. Hutchinson, of the American Film Company, indicated that the opening of the drive in Santa Barbara, Cal., was given a rousing, send-off by the American employees. It was also said much of the success of the opening there was due to the efforts put forward by the American Film Company. The Chamber of Commerce of Santa Barbara has sent a letter to Mr. Hutchinson, in which are many words of appreciation.

When seen April 22 William A. Brady said he expected a very large attendance at the Playhouse meeting Sunday, and that a new record will probably be hung up to accompany the last lap of the drive to ultimate success.

"Tarzan" Still Lining Up the Crowds

"Tarzan of the Apes" is said to be piling up a country-wide S. R. O. record surpassing any previously held by a screen adventure story. Throughout the metropolitan district of the East, both the William Fox and the Marcus Loew interests have been showing "Tarzan" simultaneously in their theatres to capacity audiences. During the current week a statement has also reached First National headquarters from far away Laramie, Wyoming, to the effect that "Tarzan" played to receipts of about $700 during a single day in that town of less than 5,000 inhabitants. This percentage of box-office returns to population is said to eclipse all previously recorded figures, so far as they are known.

General Moves Exchange

Of interest to New York exhibitors of motion pictures is the announced removal of General Film Company's big city sales office from its downtown location to an uptown suite in the heart of the metropolitan film district. The new quarters of the New York exchange, J. A. Hammell, manager, will be in the Godfrey Building, 729 Seventh Avenue. The removal was begun April 20, and from now on business will be done with exhibitors in the New York district at the new address.

Barrows Going Overseas

Oswald Barrows, formerly a salesman in the New York territory for Arecraft pictures, has enlisted in the Quartermaster Corps of the Army, and has been ordered overseas.

Cole Takes a Hand

Henry Cole, prominent Bronx exhibitor and organizer for the M. P. E. L. of A., is now actively engaged in placing the Jester Comedies with exhibitors in Northern New Jersey.

Stars Earle Williams

An Earle Williams Blue Ribbon Feature, "The Seal of Silence," is announced for release the week of April 29 by Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company. Grace Darmond is featured in support of Mr. Williams.

New Uplift Society

The Louisiana Moral Photoplay Association has been organized in New Orleans, and the activities of the body already indicate that it will have a very potent influence upon the character of pictures that are to be shown in the city in the future.

Much unfavorable discussion regarding the nature of pictures shown there has been heard recently, and the intention is to bring the standard up a notch or two.

Correction in Klutho Studio's Advertisement

By a typographical error omitting two words there is a slight lack of clarity in the advertisement of the Klutho Studio, Jacksonville, Fla., appearing on page 2723 of this issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

The advertisement tells of the unusually interesting offer made by the Klutho organization for the summer season, by which $60 a week will rent stage space and complete facilities. The error lies in the omission of the words "a week."

New York producers are showing an interest in the attractions offered by the Klutho Studio, one of the most completely equipped plants in the country and unusually handy to New York for the transportation of producing companies.

Grauman Gives Opinion of Exchangeman

Jack Grauman, manager of the Metro Picture Service, 403-409 Toy Building, Milwaukee, is one of the few exchange managers in that city who previous to going into the exchange end was an exhibitor. Mr. Grauman owned and operated for a number of years in Milwaukee four outskirt theatres.

"I am of the opinion," said Mr. Grauman, "that the most successful exchangemen are those who have graduated from the ranks of exhibitors, bringing with them an understanding that tends to make a better feeling between these two great branches of the motion picture industry. An exchangeman who is able to accept the broader views of the business relations between the exhibitor and exchange, and who handles a program with the full knowledge that he is selling something worth while cannot fail to attain success."

National Board Comments on Rapf's Production

The National Board of Review of Motion Pictures has rendered the following report on Harry Rapf's production, "The Struggle Everlasting," featuring Florence Reed: Entertainment value, Good; Educational value, Good; Artistic value, Dramatic interest, Gripping; Coherence of narrative, Clear; Acting, Good; Technical handling, Good; Moral effect, Excellent. General Comment: The play teaches the lesson without being preachy, and, as a story, it is gripping and virile.

Stork Scores Again

Harry H. Buxbaum, of Pathe, announces that an important addition to his sales force was made on April 14. It is a baby boy, and Mr. and Mrs. Buxbaum are receiving congratulations of their many friends on the event.

Steiner Plans Third Trip

William Steiner, founder of the Jester Comedy Company, is preparing for another tour throughout the country on behalf of Jester Comedies.

Liberty Loan Holds the Limelight

Just as All Roads Led to Rome, All Eyes in the Industry Are Turned to Road That Leads to Victory and Democracy

THE Third Liberty Loan, now entering upon the final lap of its thus far successful race against "kultur" that doesn't "culture" anything, still occupies the feature position on the program of the motion picture industry in fact as well as in theory.

The drive has gone forward within the motion picture business with a vigor that has been noted throughout the country as wholly characteristic of the industry and the men and women who compose it. Not a slacker has been discovered within the ranks, but it is difficult to keep track of the numerous stars and others who have jumped in with both feet to "dig for democracy."

MOTION PICTURE NEWS has tried, from week to week, to publish the entire list of activities of producers, exhibitors, distributors and stars, but the one-half has never been told. A complete book would be required for that.

Brady Wants Amount Totaled

One of the latest developments in the drive is the request from William A. Brady, chairman ex-officio of the War Co-operation Committee of the Motion Picture Industry, that the amount of subscriptions which have been made to the loan by individuals and companies of the trade, be totaled. This notice was sent to the forty-eight state chairmen, requesting them to secure the total amount of subscriptions which have been received through the use of the motion picture theatres and by personal solicitation. Reports from the state chairmen are to be telegraphed to the headquarters of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, Times Building, New York, at the close of the campaign, Saturday, May 4.

It is confidently expected that the total of all subscriptions in the United States from the motion picture interests and others received through the motion picture theatres will approximate seventy-five to one hundred million dollars.

Right Over the Top

The loan got a big boost last week from the motion picture industry when a drive for subscriptions was launched at a meeting held at Loew's New York Roof, attended by several hundred representative men and women identified with the film business.

The meeting was presided over by Marcus Loew, representing the motion picture Liberty Loan Committee, of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. Sydney S. Cohen, president of the New York State Exhibitors' League, acted as secretary of the meeting.

Subscriptions totaling three quarters of a million dollars were received from those present and this is only a starter. Beginning April 22 meetings have been held daily at the New York Roof and a program is being arranged whereby prominent motion picture stars will appear and speak. Many of the film celebrities are now actively engaged in the drive to secure subscriptions throughout the country as is well known through the newspaper reports and all of the photoplayers who are available in this locality will be called upon to assist in the campaign.

Paramount Stars Out

On April 20 at the Liberty theatre in front of the Public Library, 42d street and Fifth avenue, one of the greatest gatherings of screen stars yet presented at one time in this city during the Liberty Loan drive, appeared. It was Adolph Zukor Motion Picture Day at the Liberty theatre, which meant that many idols of the screen appeared in person to sell bonds to their admirers. Some of those were Elsie Ferguson, Billie Burke, Pauline Frederick, Lina Cavalieri, Marguerite Clark, Jack Pickford, Alice Brady, George M. Cohan, Mildred Manning, Marshall Neilan, Crauford Kent, Anita Loos, Edward Jose, Courtenay Foote, Thomas Meighan and Gertrude McCoy. To further induce their hearers to buy bonds, personally autographed photographs of these stars will be given to purchasers and many lucky fans will be able to shake hands with their favorite.

Another event for Adolph Zukor Motion Picture Day was the appearance of Nahan Franko, music composer and director, who conducted his orchestra as well as rendered a number of solos.

THAT NEW COIN

Bill Is At Last Introduced in Washington

PRODUCERS and exhibitors, particularly the latter, who have had their minds set on a fifteen-cent coin for some time past, are very likely to get action on their idea before long.

A bill was introduced in Washington on April 11 by Representative O'Shaughnessy of Rhode Island which proposes the coinage of fifteen-cent pieces. Several exhibitors are of the opinion that the new coin would facilitate the handling of crowds at the box-offices, as it would probably subtract at least one detail from the payment of war tax on admissions. Again, there are others who insist the new coin will bring no advantages, as it will not eliminate the use of pennies in several theatres where the admission charge does not include the tax.

Those "on the fence" are not committing themselves, as they apparently feel the new coin would do them no good nor no harm.

John R. Freuler, of Mutual, was among the first, if not the first, to advocate the coinage of a fifteen-cent piece. Others soon saw the good points of the idea, with the result that recently a brief was presented to the Director of the Mint in favor of the coin.

Universal Gets Big Slice

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company, its executives and employes will subscribe to something in excess of $500,000 of the third Liberty Bond issue when final returns have been received.

The total subscriptions of the home office in New York amounted to $195,000 on Friday, April 19, with every indication that this will increase. All of the employes throughout the country have been urged by President Laemmle to strain every effort to take as many bonds as possible. In his telegrams urging the employes to get solidly behind the government he also assures them that Universal will assist them in every possible way in carrying the bonds until paid in full.

Through the generosity of President Laemmle every employe may subscribe for as many bonds as the employe is financially able to carry and pay for them at the rate of one dollar a week for every fifty dollar bond taken.

Miss Talmadge Plunges

Norma Talmadge, the Select star, has done her bit by subscribing $200,000 to the Third Liberty Loan. Her subscription, which is one of the largest individual purchases in the New York district, was made through the Harriman National bank on Fifth avenue, where Miss Talmadge keeps her account. The officials of the bank have confirmed the reports of this sale.

The bank's representative secured Miss Talmadge's signature to her subscription blank by calling in person at her studio in East 48th street, where she is at work on "De Luxe Annie," which she is making to follow "By Right of Purchase" in her Select Star series. The banker volunteered to wait until the scene was finished, since he realized the cost of keeping the entire company waiting while the star affixed her "John Hancock" to help lick the Kaiser but she would have none of it. "The Liberty Loan comes first," said she.

ADDING UP THEIR EFFORTS

World Pictures last week said that for every hour Marie Dressler has been campaigning she has secured subscriptions at the rate of $20,000 an hour. Her total number of hours was not announced.

Marguerite Clark brought to a close in Kansas City her Liberty Loan tour. She was credited with almost $4,000,000 in the Kansas town. The star took $10,000 worth there herself, to prove she is no slacker.

Douglas Fairbanks has been very successful in his drive, according to latest reports.

Committee Places Sunday Blame

Credits Failure of Option Bill to Pass to Influence of Executive Chamber—Distributes Reports on Measure

THE Allied Motion Picture Committee of the State of New York, through Secretary Frederick H. Elliott, last week sent out printed reports on the Motion Picture Option Bill, which was buried in the legislative cemetery of general orders recently, and news of which was carried in last week's MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

The committee, as a prelude to the report, called attention to the failure of the passage of the bill and credited the shelving to the influence of the executive chamber.

The reports covers a period of time beginning with March 21, when the Option Bill was introduced by Senators Thompson and Welsh, and reaching up to the present day. It cites the reason for the measure, as well as the reason for Sunday motion picture, and concludes with the following:

"From the statements set forth, it must be evident that the motion picture interests in the Empire State must perfect a statewide organization. The time spent and the efforts employed during the recent campaign were not in vain—there are no regrets. The formation of a permanent body representing every branch of the industry, including the 1,200 exhibitors whose influence and power is far-reaching, is now a possibility. These important interests should be co-ordinated in an effective manner within the near future so as to be ready for action before the primaries in the fall, when a complete state ticket is to be elected. With this in view, it is proposed to call a meeting of all concerned to be held at a point centrally located and at an appropriate time.

"In the meantime, a captain will be designated for every Senatorial district with an assistant in each Assembly district; these representatives to comprise the State Committee and to be properly organized to assist carrying on the work so well begun by the Allied Motion Picture Committee.

"Dated, April 18, 1918."

"Approved by William A. Brady, President National Association of the Motion Industry; Sydney S. Cohen, President N. Y. State Exhibitors' League.

"Respectfully submitted,

"JOHN MANHEIMER, Chairman.
"MAX SPIEGEL, Treasurer.
"FREDERICK H. ELLIOTT, Secretary."

Sunday Lid Screwed Down in Tiffin, O.

Motion picture theatres will not be allowed to run on Sunday in Tiffin, Ohio, any more. The ministers of Tiffin have been agitating the Sunday closing policy for some time, but it was not until last week, that they succeeded in getting Mayor Eidt to issue an order preventing any house from showing pictures on that day.

The Mayor, however, went the ministers one better, by announcing that he was contemplating the closing of all Sunday activities in Tiffin whatsoever.

Vitagraph Company Sues Mayer

Demands $250,000 Damages for Alleged Conspiracy to Induce Anita Stewart to Break Contract

THE Vitagraph Company of America last week filed suit in the Superior Court at Boston for $250,000, naming Louis B. Mayer, Colman Levin and J. Robert Ruben as defendants. Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company, has engaged Daniel H. Coakley, attorney of Boston, to handle the case, which is said to be an outgrowth of the litigation started by Mr. Smith to prevent Anita Stewart from leaving Vitagraph and entering the employ of Mayer. The complaint of Vitagraph charges Mayer and his co-defendants with conspiracy in attempting to entice Miss Stewart away from the company with which she began her motion picture career.

After making a direct statement of the producer's rights to a star's services and the responsibility of the producer to the exhibitors, the Vitagraph complaint recites briefly the history of Miss Stewart's connection with the company. In this section it is stated that Miss Stewart came to the company in 1912, when she was about seventeen years old, and worked as sive services as a motion picture actress."
an "extra" for twenty-five dollars a week. She was unknown, says the complaint, to the motion picture industry and to the theatre-going public.

The complaint further recites that Miss Stewart was given opportunity to portray leading roles in costly photoplays, and again taking up the cause of the manufacturer, says that Vitagraph "expended several hundreds of thousands of dollars in advertising and publicly exploiting the merits of said productions and particularly the merits of the said Anita Stewart in connection therewith, and in causing her to become well and favorably known to the motion picture exhibitors of the country and to the motion picture theatre-going public, not only throughout the United States but throughout the civilized world where motion pictures are exhibited.

"By reason of her extraordinary and unique ability, her personal charm and popularity as a motion picture actress," the complaint continues, "and by reason of the plaintiff's said advertising and exploiting of her and her said pictures, the plaintiff built up and established an extensive good will and value for all of the motion pictures in which the said Anita Stewart might thereafter appear and by so doing greatly enhanced the value of the right to engage and control her exclusive services as a motion picture actress."

In and Out of Town

B. A. Rolfe, who recently discontinued his producing activities in connection with the Metro organization, arrived in New York from the Coast last week. Mr. Rolfe expects to be in the city for some time arranging details for the launching of his new producing company.

H. A. Spanuth, Commonwealth Pictures Corporation, Chicago, is in New York stopping at Hotel Astor.

Harry Reichenbach, National Film Corporation, returned to New York from Los Angeles last week. Mr. Reichenbach went West to confer with William Parson of the National.

Harris P. Wolfburg, Harris P. Wolfburg Attractions, Pittsburgh, arrived in New York last week on business in the interest of his independent organization. He reports business good.

Arthur F. Beck, Sterling Pictures Corporation, left New York Saturday for Chicago in the interest of the company.

W. J. Swanson, Swanson and Nolan, Denver, is in New York for a few days. He is stopping at Hotel Astor.

J. J. Goldstein, Keystone Distributing Company, Philadelphia, was in New York last week looking at the current releases offered on the independent market.

Maurice Barr, manager Strand theatre, New Orleans, is in New York in the interest of his theatre.

Joseph Grossman, manager of the Sandard theatre, Cleveland, returned to that city last week after several days spent in New York.

E. V. Richards, Saenger Amusement Company, New Orleans, was seen in the Astor last week. Mr. Richards dropped in on New Yorkers to see what was going on in the picture field.

Frederick V. Fisher, member of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit with the Seattle franchise and member of the Greater Theatres Company, operating the Coliseum, Liberty, Strand and Mission theatres, Seattle, Oregon, is in New York.

Gutilla Expands Theatre Holdings

Daniel Gutilla will, effective July 1, control all places of amusement in Bellefontaine, Ohio. He has closed a lease on the Opera House in that city. Mr. Gutilla owns two of the motion picture theatres in Bellefontaine, and has a lease on the third house. New seats and general remodeling of the Opera House are on the program of improvements. Motion picture features will be shown at the Opera House, but Mr. Gutilla will book vaudeville and road shows in connection with the picture shows.

Universal Produces Red Cross First Aid Film

In co-operation with the American Red Cross the Universal Film Manufacturing Company has produced a special film on the subject of military first aid and life saving.

Commodore W. E. Longfellow, head of the Life Saving Corps of the Red Cross, personally directed and acted in the film, which was produced by the Industrial Department of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company. Commodore Longfellow is recognized as the leading authority of the subjects shown in this film, which is being shown serially in the Universal Screen Magazine.

This is but one of the many educational motion pictures on the subject of Safety First that is being produced by the Universal's Industrial Department.

Quimby Opens Red Cross Campaign

F. C. Quimby, sales manager of Pathe Exchange, has started an active campaign of cooperation with the American Red Cross on its picture, "The Spirit of the Red Cross," after receiving a request for such cooperation from Jesse L. Lasky, who as chairman of the Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, has seen the picture and reports that it is of unusual quality, the propaganda in it being almost entirely submerged in the splendid production and probably the best battle and war trench pictures that have been photographed to date.

Lieut. Tootle, Formerly with Gaumont, Weds

Lieutenant Harry King Tootle, 351st Field Artillery, was married to Miss Jessica Campbell Nave, in Wheeling, W. Va., on Thursday, April 4. Lieutenant Tootle is well known in the motion picture industry as former publicity representative of the Gaumont Company. He won his commission at Plattsburg last fall.

Ouida Bergere Plans Coast Trip

Ouida Bergere of 516 Fifth Avenue, New York, announced last week that she intends to make a trip to the Coast within the near future to open a branch office of her "personal representation" headquarters there. While away Miss Bergere will leave the New York office in charge of H. R. Sanger.

Julius Timer Over There

A card received from Julius Timer states that he has arrived safely overseas. He is a military cinematographer with the Photographic Division of the Signal Corps.

You are not going to war. The men who are need all the comforts you can give them. Help them get cigarettes. That is your patriotic duty. If you aren't helping in the "smokes" campaign, get busy—now. Don't be a slacker!

Near a Settlement in Chicago

Serious Trouble Between Operators' Union and Exhibitors and Exchanges Believed Averted—Both Sides Have Appointed Committees

THE situation in Chicago between the operators and the film men last week was one of marking time. According to the information received from both sides indications point toward an amicable settlement of what threatened to be a serious problem between Operators' Union Local No. 110 and the combined forces of Chicago exhibitors, exchanges and supply dealers. The operators, it is said, have quietly backed down on most of the demands they made and which caused the uprising and protest among the exhibitors and exchanges.

The temporary injunction against the operators is still in force, and committees have been appointed on both sides to get together and arbitrate. The Allied Amusement Association, the organization which the exhibitors, exchanges and supply men have formed to combat the union demands, have notified the operators that their arbitration committee is ready at any time to meet the committee delegation. The meeting, it is expected, will be held this week. The Allied committee consists of twenty representatives chosen from among exhibitors, exchangemen and equipment dealers in Chicago. The Operators' Union have acknowledged the request for arbitration.

Among some of the questions that are expected to come up for discussion and settlement at the meeting of the committees are the problem concerning the employment of operators direct; the question of substitutes; the proposal to unionize cashiers, janitors, ushers, door men, film inspectors, shipping clerks, delivery clerks and pick-up men. All other grievances from either side will also be presented.

The last ten days brought a number of legitimate theatres and vaudeville representatives of Chicago into the ranks of the Allied Amusement Association. The Kansas City Exhibitors' League wrote offering advice and assistance concerning employment. The amount of money thus far gathered into the defense fund of the Allied Amusement Association is said to be $20,000, mainly made up from exhibitor contributions.

On Saturday, April 13, the arbitration committee held a meeting to go over their plans for the meeting with the operators.

Liberty Loan Drive Is On Throughout Industry

(Continued from page 2650)

The cities have turned out in force to meet him, and then turned out their pocketbooks for Uncle Sam.

William S. Hart, before beginning his tour for the Loan on the Coast, subscribed for bonds amounting to $105,000, bringing his total holdings up to nearly a half million dollars for the three issues.

Emmy Wehlen's whirlwind tour of the Eastern cities is meeting with big success, it is said. Up to April 19 she had sold two million dollars worth of bonds, $40,000 of which she took herself.

Rita Jolivet is said to have secured subscriptions amounting to $250,000 in one afternoon at Poli's Strand theatre in Waterbury, Conn. She also visited the Regent in Toronto and other theatres, with equal success.

Others who are doing excellent work are Madge Kennedy, Marion Davies, J. Warren Kerrigan, Peggy Shanor, Sessue Hayakawa, Mary Pickford, Arnold Daly, Charlie Chaplin and a host of others.

Additional news of the Liberty Loan drive will be found on another page of this issue.

Iowans Prying Up Sunday Lid

Several Exhibitors, Heartened by Test Cases, Are Taking a Chance on Opening—Opposition So Far Not Alarmingly Strong

WITH several test cases settled in favor of the theatre men, several wide-awake Iowa exhibitors have taken a chance and opened their houses on Sunday in towns where such a proceeding is looked upon as unholy. R. C. Ericson of the Empress theatre, in Cedar Falls, has, perhaps, the greatest opposition of any, since Cedar Falls is one of the biggest church towns in the State. He has no competitor, but for the last three weeks he has been defying the church people and running carefully picked pictures on Sunday. No action has been taken as yet.

Mrs. B. L. Francis of the Princess theatre, in Spirit Lake, took up the battle all by herself against a big burly marshal who ordered her house closed. She has been running on Sunday for a couple of weeks and is still keeping her patrons through the week.

F. H. Graaf, manager of the Grand theatre, in Estherville, is running on Sunday and has been for the last three weeks. Mrs. Frank King, who is managing the King theatre in that town, is holding back until she sees what Mr. Graaf gets handed to him for his bravery. Mrs. King operates the King house in Estherville, while her husband manages the King theatre, in Ida Grove, just down the line.

A. J. Bonney of the Electric theatre, in Greenfield, has made all arrangements to break in his town to Sunday shows, starting the 28th of April with "The Life of Our Savior."

Manager Lindsey of the Idle Hour, in Leon, started the Sunday opening and after a legal fight got away with it.

Lichtman Celebrates Birthday

Associates in Famous Players-Lasky Corporation Office Celebrate the Anniversary in His Honor at Keen's Chop House

THE thirtieth birthday of Al. Lichtman was celebrated on Tuesday evening of last week by the office associates of the General Manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Distributing Department, at Keen's Chop House. The affair was a complete surprise to Mr. Lichtman, who was coaxed over to Keen's private dining room by Fred Gage, and where his friends greeted him.

A number of telegrams were received by Mr. Lichtman, many of which came from John C. Flinn, who at the time was making a Liberty Loan tour with Marguerite Clark. That Mr. Flinn was with the party in spirit was evidenced by the fact that he sent a telegram from every stopping point along the route on the evening the party was in progress. A floral plant was received from V. P. Whittaker of Washington.

After the usual family group photograph was taken the party became a scene of great animation with the arrival of the initial portion of the sumptuous repast. With the appearance of the cordial the wits of the gathering were called upon by Toastmaster Pete Schmid to give their best offerings. Three particularly appropriate prizes were awarded to those who told the worst stories, these awards being received with hearty acclaim by J. K. Burger, Julian M. Solomon, Jr., and Charles E. Moyer.

Upon being called for a speech, Al. Lichtman expressed with deep feeling his appreciation of the honors bestowed upon him, after which he told of several humorous incidents in connection with his advancement in life, to the great delight of all present. One of the best renditions of the evening was offered by Alfred M. Botsford, whose facts and figures appertaining to the rubber boot industry drew forth many laughs. The preparation of the menu souvenir card was entrusted to Jerome Beatty, who did himself proud in his usual style.

Many words of praise were bestowed upon the guest by those present and everyone felt in accord with the sentiment expressed by the toastmaster when he said that "the party was not held because Al. Lichtman was their immediate boss, nor because he was the person who O. K.d their raises in salary, but because he was a regular fellow." After several hours at Keen's, the party adjourned to the Friars Club, where it continued to the wee sma' hours. Those present besides the guests were W. E. Greene, Jerome Beatty, A. L. Botsford, J. K. Burger, Charles C. Burr, A. O. Dillenbeck, Frederic Gage, L. F. Guimond, Patrick Kearney, Charles E. Moyer, Morrie Ryskind, Pete Schmid, W. L. Sherry, J. M. Solomon, Jr., J. Albert Thorn, Vincent Trotta, Charles Kenmore Ulrich, Norris Wilcox and Eugene J. Zukor.

Coast Buys Heavily of Bonds

Members of Los Angeles Film Colony, Including Actors, Directors and Executives, Expected to Take Million and Half

MEMBERS of the motion picture industry located permanently in Los Angeles and vicinity, will purchase in the neighborhood of a million and a half dollars' worth of the Third Liberty Loan bonds, according to estimates made by members of the Los Angeles sub-committee for the motion picture industry of which Charles Christie, of the Christie Film Company, is chairman.

The first three days of the Los Angeles drive this sub-committee led all other subcommittees in the amount of money subscribed, and also with respect to the amounts per capita of people engaged in the industry. The reports for the first week are as yet incomplete, but the aggregate will run more than a half million, with a large number of the most influential ones of the film colony yet to be heard from.

The subscriptions reported to date include William S. Hart, $105,000; Mary Pickford, $100,000; William Farnum, $60,000; Charles Chaplin, $50,000; Mae Murray, $30,000; William Parsons, $25,000; Lois Weber, Polly Moran, Rupert Julian and several others, $10,000 each.

The sub-committee has as its members the head of every studio in the Los Angeles district with directors and actors in every plant working as members of the studio committee.

In addition to this work many of the players and directors are actively engaged in the drive aiding the other sub-committees when away from the studios. Theda Bara is to make several speeches in Los Angeles, and a number of men and women are serving as four-minute orators at theatres and other gatherings.

Banker Elected President of National

H. M. Rubey, Missouri banker, was elected president of the National Film Corporation of America last week in Los Angeles. William Parsons was chosen treasurer.

The National Corporation, it has been announced, is entering upon actual work of filming "The Return of Tarzan," a sequel to "Tarzan of the Apes," which was made by this company.

Pictures Replace "Legit."

The Detroit Opera House, leading legitimate theatre in the Michigan metropolis, is winding up its present season preparatory to a summer run of motion pictures.

The new policy goes into effect May 12, it is understood.

Arrange for More Pictures for Navy

Through the efforts of the War Camp Motion Picture Committee, the various ships of the Navy on which there is motion picture equipment, will be enabled to obtain supplies of recent pictures for their use while at sea. The Bureau of Navigation of the Navy Department has asked the committee for several hundred complete schedules of exchanges for distribution through the Navy Department, and they have been forwarded. Price lists with special rates for entertainments while the boats are in port, are also being furnished together with detailed information as to methods of securing motion picture programs to take to sea. The War Camp Motion Picture Committee has requested the Army and Navy Commissions on Training Camp Activities to furnish the Navy Department with the bulletin lists of pictures selected by the National Board of Review for the commissions. This will make it practicable for the chaplains on board more than two hundred ships to visit the exchanges nearest the ports of landing of their vessel and obtain such pictures as they desire.

Essanay Volunteers Sworn Into Training Corps

On the anniversary of the United States entering the war, the Essanay volunteer company, which has been drilling in the Essanay studio in Chicago for several months, was mustered into the service of the state as Unit 380, Illinois Volunteer Training Corps.

Major Lathrop Collins, commanding the Cook County District, I. V. T. C., administered the oath of allegiance to Captain Richard N. Woodman, First Lieutenant F. Lee Powers and Second Lieutenant Lee Metford and swore in the seventy-seven enlisted men in a body. President George K. Spoor has turned one of the Essanay studios over to the company for drilling purposes.

Broadway's Girl Ushers Organize

A new Liberty Loan exploitation organization was formed Sunday, April 7, by girl ushers at the Broadway theatre, New York, their patriotism being awakened during the engagement of "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," the attraction at that house for five weeks. The Girl Ushers' Association was the result, and the Broadway theatre girls have invited the ushers of all theatres to join with them in a national mutual benefit association. The girls have decided to "do their bit" for the present Liberty Loan drive, before devoting time to their own interests and the improvement of conditions under which they work.

Mason Shows Progress

A. J. Mason, late of the Imperial, St. John, N. B., but now of Wolfville, has made great strides since he became a manager lessee. Mr. Mason now owns the theatre in Middleton, N. S.

New Corporations

THE following new corporations within the industry were included in the records of the Corporation Trust Company, of Jersey City, for the week ending April 20:

NEW YORK

PEEKSKILL THEATRE CORPORATION, Manhattan. Moving pictures and operate theatres. Capital $500. Incorporators: Samuel H. Meinhold, Leopold Friedman Mattie Hammerstein.

INTERSTATE FILMS, INC., Manhattan. Incorporators: Milton L. Cohen, Louis Vineberg, Joseph J. Fiske.

DAYLIGHT FILM CORPORATION, Manhattan. General photographic business and motion pictures. Capital $192,000. Incorporators: Addison I. Gardner, Warren S. Orton, David Asch.

ACTORS' AND AUTHORS' THEATRE, INC., Manhattan. Theatrical and motion pictures. Capital $50,000. Incorporators: Alice P. Hemmick, Hilda Spong, Gertrude W. Wise.

Alleging Libel, United Sues M. P. World

United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., filed suit on April 16 in the Supreme Court for libel against the Chalmers Publishing Co. in the sum of $250,000 damages. The action was started by Milton M. Goldsmith, General Counsel, after a unanimous vote of the Board of Directors so authorizing. The alleged grounds of the libel are several articles in the Moving Picture World which is published by the Chalmers Publishing Co. at 516 Fifth avenue, New York.

Among the alleged libelous statements of the World is one that is said to speak of "the non-existence of the trust fund alleged to have been established by the United Picture Theatres of America, Inc." The World is also quoted regarding the fund as saying: "It was not established and as far as we can discover no attempt was made to establish it." Both these statements are denied by United Picture Theatres. The officers of the picture corporation claim that no attempt was made by the World to discover or ascertain the facts.

Motion Picture News on Tuesday, April 16, received through United Picture Theatres a statement from Quinn, Berran & Co., public accountants with offices in the Woolworth Building, to the effect that they had verified the existence of this fund and that the 90 per cent of the stock subscriptions of the membership is intact. In addition, the Commercial Trust Company of New York, it is declared, has agreed to act as depository of the fund.

Jackson Gets Fremont, O., Opera House

Hon. A. H. Jackson, owner of the Strand, Fremont, Ohio, celebrated the third anniversary of the opening of that handsome theatre on Monday, April 8, by announcing the contemplated enlargement and further beautification of the Strand as well as his purchase of the controlling stock of the Fremont Opera House. Carl F. Miller, of the Strand, will manager both houses.

First National In Session

Robert Lieber Elected President at Big Meeting at Hotel Astor—Members Entertained by Jacob Fabian at Paterson

THE first annual session of the stockholders of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit was held at the Hotel Astor from April 15 to 17.

Robert Lieber, of Indianapolis, was elected president and T. L. Tally, of Los Angeles, and Harry O. Schwalbe, of Philadelphia, were re-elected vice-president and secretary-treasurer, respectively.

Two changes were made in the board of directors, Walter Hays, of Buffalo, being elected the New York representative, while J. Von Herberg was the new man chosen from the Pacific Coast, succeeding Fred Dahnken, of San Francisco. The five directors re-elected for the coming year are Aaron Jones, of Chicago; E. H. Hulsey, of Dallas; Robert Lieber, of Indianapolis; T. L. Tally, of Los Angeles, and Harry O. Schwalbe, of Philadelphia.

A general feeling of gratification was expressed by the entire membership in the achievements of the organization since its inception a year ago. From every section of the continent exhibitors brought news of the big returns that are being realized on productions already released by the circuit, and it was the unanimous opinion of the membership that with three attractions of the calibre of "Tarzan of the Apes," "My Four Years in Germany" and Charlie Chaplin in "A Dog's Life," to begin the second year with, the future of the organization should be one of assured prosperity.

As the financial executive of the organization, Harry O. Schwalbe came in for sincerely expressed praise. In this same connection, J. D. Williams was also complimented.

Robert Lieber, the new president of the First National, is one of the veteran film distributors of America. Twelve years ago he was a controlling factor in this branch of the business in Indianapolis, but did not enter the exhibiting field until eighteen months ago, when he organized the company that built the Circle theatre in his home city, which is generally acknowledged to be one of the three premier motion picture houses of this country. In addition to his motion picture interests he operates one of the big manufacturing plants of Indianapolis.

A complete list of the stockholders who attended the session follows: Robert Lieber, Indianapolis; T. L. Tally, Los Angeles; Aaron Jones and Nathan Ascher, Chicago; H. O. Schwalbe, Philadelphia; E. H. Hulsey and S. T. McDonald, Dallas; Frank Ferrandini, Richmond; Lieut. J. P. Anderson, Atlanta; J. H. Kunsky and G. W. Trendle, Detroit; C. S. Jensen and F. V. Fisher, Seattle; H. T. Nolan and W. H. Swenson, Denver; W. P. Dewees, Vancouver; E. V. Richards, Jr., New Orleans; Thomas Saxe, Milwaukee; Jacob Fabian, New Jersey; E. Mandelbaum, Cleveland; N. H. Gordon, Boston; E. R. Pearson, Minneapolis; A. H. Blank, Des Moines; Col. Fred Levy and L. L. Goldberg, Louisville; E. I. Church, New Jersey; William Sievers, St. Louis; Winthrop Allen and N. J. Flynn, Kansas City; H. Brouse and B. F. Stapleton, Ottawa; J. B. Clark, Pittsburgh; J. D. Williams, New York.

Following the closing of the three-day session the stockholders were guests of Jacob Fabian, owner of the Regent and Garden theatres of Paterson, N. J., and president of the First National Exchange of New Jersey, at a dinner given at Crawford's restaurant in Paterson on Wednesday evening. A whole fleet of automobiles had been provided by Mr. Fabian to convey his guests from New York, and the party arrived in Paterson about seven o'clock after a cross-country spin. A. M. Fabian, manager of the New Jersey exchange, acted as master of ceremonies.

Among those who attended the dinner were: Robert Lieber, Harry Schwalbe, E. Mandelbaum, E. V. Richards, Jr., Frank Ferrandini, J. D. Williams, W. P. Dewees, William Sievers, Nathan H. Gordon, Maurice F. Barr, Thomas Saxe, Nugent J. Flynn, Lieut. Jim P. Anderson, H. H. Bru, Winthrop Allen, Seymour Talley, E. R. Pearson, Jacob Fabian, Mrs. Jacob Fabian, A. M. Fabian, S. H. Fabian, Philip Diamond, Hon. Thomas F. McCran, Charles L. Dooley, Simon H. Glass, John J. Fitzgerald, Edward J. Church, R. H. Clark, G. R. Grant, Mrs. G. R. Grant, May Allison, Joseph P. Reddy, Albert H. Cormier, Peter Milne, C. S. Sewell and C. W. Barrell.

Strict Censorship Ordered for Export Films

With the two-fold purpose of halting the propaganda of discontent and thwarting the use of motion pictures by German spies to convey secret messages from this country, the Government has put into immediate effect a war censorship of all films manufactured in Southern California for export except to England, France, Italy and Japan. Instructions to that effect were received last week by John B. Elliott, collector of customs at Los Angeles. Data of a startling nature is said to have been obtained by the Government before issuing the order.

The new order will affect practically every producing organization in Los Angeles.

Jaccard off for France

Jacques Jaccard, who has been a Universal director for several years, and who produced the serials, "Liberty" and "The Red Ace," in both of which Marie Walcamp was starred, recently bade goodbye to his friends and former co-workers at Universal City preparatory to his departure for France. Jaccard enlisted in the artillery several months ago.

More Meehan Money

John J. Meehan of the Orpheum theatre, Muncie, Ind., has sent another remittance—this time $8.06—for Our Boys in France Tobacco Fund. This makes the total forwarded through MOTION PICTURE NEWS $1,606.22.

Julian Sets a Rare Precedent

In Unique Letter to R. H. Cochrane, Director Expresses His Appreciation of "Mutilation" of His Feature, "The Kaiser"

IT seems to be the universal opinion among motion picture producers and distributors that "there ain't no such animal" as a director who will admit that he is ever wrong or that the home office, if it cuts or changes his finished production, is ever right. However, Jewel Productions, Inc., distributor of "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," asserts that it has found the exception. Rupert Julian, director and co-author with Elliott J. Clawson of "The Kaiser," is the rare bird. In a letter to R. H. Cochrane Mr. Julian upsets all precedents by expressing the earnest appreciation, on the part of himself and Mr. Clawson, of the manner in which their "baby" was "mutilated" at the home office and the speed in which the remarkable exploitation campaign was put under way. The letter in full follows:

Universal City, April 11, 1918.

Mr. R. H. Cochrane
Jewel Productions, Inc.,
1600 Broadway, New York.

Dear Mr. Cochrane:

Since returning from New York I have been on the point, on more than one occasion, of writing you and setting down my most recent impressions on the subject of director and producer—producer in the sense of those who present the picture—but each time I have been overtaken with a certain measure of shame. I feel like the country boy in one of George Ade's fables who went to the city to reform it, but returned home with much sad but useful information.

Had my illusions on the subject of the producer been peculiar to myself I would be cautious about confessing to them. But, as they are quite general with us out here, I feel something in the nature of a discoverer. My own illusions on the subject were something like the following:

The director has produced a masterpiece (a director's last picture is always a masterpiece). Under his direction the picture has been completed, save a few inconsequential mechanical details, such as lettered sub-titles, toning and chemical fades, which are to be added in the Eastern factory. His perfect child goes forth to New York to be hopelessly, carelessly mutilated, soiled, wrecked. His picture needs but to be placed before the public to make a quarter of a million for the company.

After I had made "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin" Mr. Clawson and myself got on the train for New York with the positive print. During the next four days we spent considerable time in planning what we were going to do—to the New York office. We were going to handle the situation without gloves and those in the New York office were going to blush with a sense of deserved humiliation.

We arrived strong and determined in our good intentions and the stroke we were going to make for the picture-making end of the business. I showed the picture at 1600 Broadway, and all of you agreed that there was something there to start with. That was rather discouraging, when the picture was complete, save a little mechanical work. The idea in your office was, not "How much are we going to make from the picture?" but, rather, "How much are we going to make the picture?" Of course, that was most trying and likewise dismal.

The next morning there was a meeting of your staff in your office. I listened to a few suggestions, and one thing after another began to happen in rapid succession. There were other companies with pictures of a kindred theme which had been advertised for release, and "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," must beat these pictures to the public, not only in this country, but in every market between Shanghai and Christiania. It suddenly impressed itself upon me that there were such things as lithographs of every description, from twenty-four sheets to half-sheets, by the hundreds and thousands, advertising, advertising stunts and thousands of colored slides and enlargements. Then your staff started to come in with long typewritten lists of catch words, advertising phrases, which would hold the eye. Then the designs for the lithographs started to flow in, all in concrete form. Then came detailed campaigns for advertising and publicity stunts. I began to see that all this took a little thought, experience and organization.

When we arrived you and your staff were practically the only persons who knew of the existence of a picture called "The Kaiser." In four days everybody in New York knew about it, and at the end of five days it opened at the Broadway theatre, and sixty finished prints, accompanied by advertising matter, lithographs, colored slides and enlarged and colored stills, were on their way not only to all parts of this country, but to all foreign markets as well.

After that meeting in your office Mr. Clawson and myself went to my room at the Astor and sat down for a while without saying anything. Presently he sighed. We were very much depressed. There was a long silence. Then I said to him:

"Let's have a drink of whiskey." So we had a drink of whiskey.

"Do you know," he said, "New York is a hell of a place at this season. I'd like to be back in California, wouldn't you?" And I told him that I thought home was a pretty good place for us after all. And that was the end of the campaign we had planned to strike a blow at those who wrecked our good pictures.

It may have been that when David stood before Goliath the stone with which he intended to slay the giant was a perfectly good and faultless stone. Maybe it was the best little stone for its size in the world. But it took a good eye and a strong right arm to make that little stone bring down the giant. By which I mean that you put over "The Kaiser" with a wallop. Likewise, that the putting over of a picture properly is of equal importance with its making. As a matter of fact, most of the Goliaths have been put out of business with stones that were not exactly faultless.

I think that most of us in the West are either unacquainted or give the fact very little thought that fully half of our success is due to the ingenuity and experience with which our work is placed before the public. Perhaps we do not like the thought that much of our success lies in other hands than our own. Nevertheless many poor pictures like many poor plays, have gone over to big success on account of the use of good judgment and sound experience in presenting them to the public.

Anyway, it was my intention to make this a letter of appreciation to you and to your staff for the expert way in which, on the shortest notice, you put "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," over to finished and complete success.

Mr. Clawson and myself wish to be remembered kindly to the boys, and, outside of the mental anguish you caused me by wrecking my plans, I'm your friend, (Signed) RUPERT JULIAN.

W. T. Rock Left a Large Estate

The appraisal of the estate of William T. Rock, one of the founders and former president of the Vitagraph Company of America, has been filed in the Surrogate's office in Brooklyn. The estate, which consists of stock in the Vitagraph Company of America, realty and stocks and bonds of railroad companies, nets $1,436,677. Under the will the bulk of the estate goes to the testator's son, John B. Rock. His former housekeeper receives $50,000, and a like amount goes to Louise Willat, a daughter. The latter's husband, Carl A. Willat, receives $25,000.

Max Fischer Goes to War

Max Fischer, protege of Cecil B. De Mille and Jesse L. Lasky and well known as a musician to all studio folk in Southern California, has gone to war. With his fiddle quite near him the clever young musician left Los Angeles with his company last week for the training camp at Camp Lewis, American Lake, Washington. Max is hoping to become attached to a regimental band soon in the capacity of bandmaster.

Famous-Lasky Has A New Advertising Wrinkle

The value of motion picture theatres as a medium of publicity for the government in the present war has led the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to inaugurate a novel method of advertising, whereby the theatres can induce the public to appreciate the benefits of motion pictures through the utilization of a little lobby space, and at little or no expense.

A one-sheet broadside has been prepared, illustrated with a picture of soldiers "going over the top" while one of their number mans a machine gun, balanced by a moving picture operator using a projecting machine. The caption in heavy type reads: "The Army Is No Stronger Than the Hearts at Home." After more punch lines comes: "The motion picture exhibitor must do his part. It is just as important to project the right sort of pictures as to fire the right sort of cartridges. The right sort of pictures means Paramount and Artcraft Pictures (Nationally Advertised.)"

Mark Will Admitted to Probate

The will of the late Mitchel H. Mark, well-known theatre owner and motion picture magnate, and former president of the Strand Theatre Company, New York, who died March 20, was admitted to probate in Buffalo last week by Surrogate Louis B. Hart. The exact value of the estate is problematical, it was stated in the Surrogate's office, as the bulk of the property is in stocks, bonds, theatrical ventures and investments.

The petition for probate placed the nominal value of the estate as upwards of $10,000, including real, personal and mixed, but it is estimated that Mr. Mark left approximately $2,000,000. A bequest of $2,000 was made to the Federated Jewish Charities and the remainder of the estate was left to the widow, Mrs. Estelle B. Mark.

Triangle's Prospective Draftees Drilling

Many of the young men at the Triangle Culver City studios who have not yet been called to the colors are drilling daily so that when they are called by Uncle Sam they will at least know the manual of arms and have a flying start on the other draft boys who are called at the same time. H. D'Elba, a Danish Count who is in charge of the Triangle research department and who has an honorable discharge from the Danish army with the rank of artillery captain, is acting as drill master and handles a squad of enthusiasts daily at the noon hour.

A Simplex Was Used

A Simplex machine was used for the screening of "My Four Years in Germany," at the annual conference of the Methodist Church in Grace Church, Newburgh, N. Y., on Friday, April 5. Five hundred ministers were present at the showing, following a banquet in the church.

What Kind of a Fellow Is—Cromelin?

Being a Glance at the Real Human Side of the Big Men of the Picture Game Caught in Action

By William A. Johnston

THEY don't know Paul Cromelin half as well fifty miles west of New York as they should—or at least half as well as we wish they did.

Our desire for a wider knowledge of Paul Cromelin is prompted by two reasons.

First, as a measure of justice to the man and the work he has done, unheralded, for the picture and the picture industry.

Second, for the sake of film men themselves—for knowing Paul Cromelin is to give new vigor to your faith and love for the picture industry.

Perhaps you get our drift. If we are speaking in a measured manner unwonted in this series, then place the blame on Mr. Cromelin. It's difficult to get either flippant, facetious or "fresh" about Paul Cromelin.

He's too much the staid and serious business man type—not a gentleman, but a GENTLEMAN.

We would say that he is the picture of a prosperous and conservative banker—only that would be going to the extreme of cold austerity. Perhaps we can strike the proper and happy medium by saying that he is the picture of the same banker after you have just paid off your notes.

Now you know what we mean.

Film Square first knew Paul Cromelin some four years ago when through Cosmofotofilm he showed it some excellent British-made productions.

Film Square knows him now principally as the active head of the largest buyer of film for the foreign market, though his interest is by no means small in domestic film matters.

And for the years in between Film Square has a lot of good things to say.

One man, for example, told us the other day, "If it hadn't been for the untiring efforts of Paul Cromelin I don't believe we'd have a National Association today. He was one of the hardest workers of the little group that worked so hard to bring the Association into being out of the wreckage of the Board of Trade."

We know of but one black spot on Paul Cromelin's name.

We wouldn't be so cruel as to mention it here—only that we promised at the outset to tell you the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth about these supposedly inpeccable film men.

We have spared no one—even to Jesse Lasky's cornet playing.

But all this is as nothing when compared to the dread secret of Paul Cromelin's life that we must bare.

Here it is:

He lives in Hackensack!

Just think of it. Albert E. Smith has his Flatbush, Hiram Abrams his Portland, Ad Kessel his Keysville, but—

Hackensack!

Once more—if the strain is not too great—think of it!

Not satisfied with confessing to an expert knowledge of the film desires of the United Kingdom and Ireland, Tasmania, Straits Settlements, Golden Gulch and the beach at Waikiki—

Paul Cromelin lives in Hackensack.

And we'll bet that Hackensack, in all its Jersey bliss, doesn't know that it harbors in its midst the most accomplished wearer of dress clothes in the great and glorious Fifth—otherwise Motion Picture—Industry.

We know it—if Hackensack doesn't.

The fact first came to our knowledge three years ago at the testimonial dinner given to Samuel Rothapfel in the Hotel Astor.

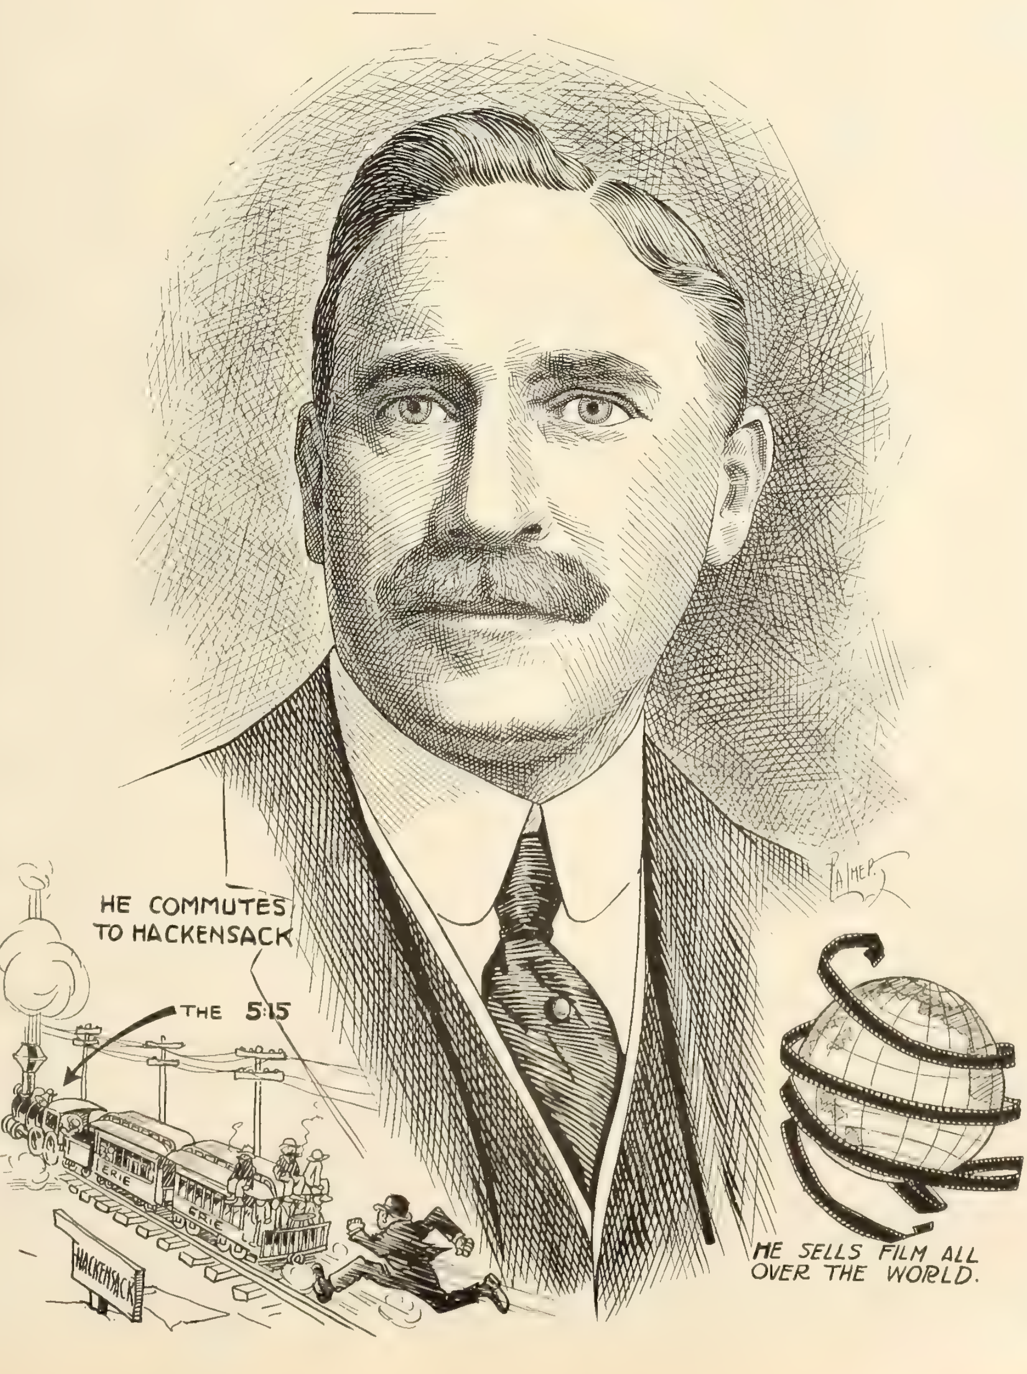
We said then that he would never have a rival in the art of gracefully dignifying an after-dinner period.

And he hasn't.

Despite the "fillum" game.

Despite, even—

The pernicious influence of Hackensack.



The Reader Has His Say

Newark Exhibitor Follows Barnum's Idea in Giving "Triple Attraction"

MOTION PICTURE NEWS: Relative to an article appearing in the NEWS of March 30 issue in which the "triple attraction" program of the Strand theatre, Newark, was criticized.

We know nothing about the "ten-hour show for ten cents" matter in Rochester, but we do know the situation here in our own town, and for the edification of your "Veteran Reviewer" who is appalled by the idea of sitting through three features at one performance, we beg to present the following facts:

In the first place we inaugurated the "triple feature" policy here because the industry was sick; "double features" and fillers in the shape of topicals, educationals, cartoons, and, in some cases, "shine singers," all of which went to make up a two and a half hour show without a semblance of "punch," was not the exception but the rule. We put in three features, and features they are, in fact, as well as name, and boosted our business from one thousand to twenty-five hundred dollars per week, which statement we are prepared to verify to any "Missouri" citizens. The public evidently are not bored to death with a triple feature bill your V. R. at his New York mahogany, notwithstanding, and we are running this theatre for their benefit, and the proof of the pudding lies in the fact that they will stand after purchasing tickets in the lobby of this spacious house for an hour or more at a time before gaining admittance.

P. T. Barnum, the greatest showman the world ever produced, inaugurated the three-ring circus, which was an unheard of thing in circus history, and the carping critics at that time predicted all kinds of dire disaster, their chief complaint being that the public would be satiated with three performances going on before their eyes. But it turned out to be the biggest success in circus history. We have very much the same idea, and have gotten away from the "bunk" fallacy of the majority of present-day exhibitors, who with their pencils and pads figure that they can play "capacity" at each and every performance, and therefore crowd as many daily shows as possible on the screen. With a population of nearly three-quarters of a million to draw on and a two-thousand-seat house, two "capacities" a day is giving us a bank-roll where there wasn't any before, and while we are spreading consternation among the ranks of what your V. E. might call regular exhibitors, our clientele is constantly enlarging, and we are firmly entrenched in the idea that the public will never suffer with what you call "moving picture dyspepsia" from the length of our programs, but on the contrary are appreciating, and will continue to do so, the efforts of a playhouse which gives so much variety for so little money.

Hoping that you will in justice to the situation find room for this communication in the columns of your valued medium, we beg to remain,

Very truly yours,
Strand Theatre, Newark, N. J.
CHAS. H. WUERZ,
Manager.

Jensen Defends "Stella Maris" and Fires a Hefty Broudside "to Boot"

MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Dear Sirs:—In an article in the last issue of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS, under the caption "What Do Today's Pictures Need?" a Butte theatre manager takes a slap at Mary Pickford in "Stella Maris." It is needless to state that this Pickford film, in fact, no Pickford films, are shown at his theatre.

"Stella Maris" was shown at the Rialto for four days and the result was highly satisfactory to us, but, as usual the opposition seems to know more about our business than our own cashier knows. We never have the slightest difficulty in "putting over" any Pickford picture, and big at that, solely on the strength of the star's name. The title, no matter what it may be, is given second place. A twenty-dollar gold piece is a twenty-dollar gold piece no matter what you call it—a "double-eagle," "red money," or what not—everybody knows its value.

Anent stars and titles, the above mentioned manager preaches one thing in New York and practises another thing in Butte, Montana. He has been running Hart reissues, with changed titles, and his publicity fairly groans under the weight of "BIG BILL HART." This is what he probably meant when he said, in his article, that the public refused to be "bunked." These Hart re-issues are the bunk—W. S. Hart says so himself. We would not touch them with a pair of tongs.

It is not our practice to enter into any controversies and we do not locally, but we feel that we have been misrepresented in your valued publication, without your knowledge, and believe that the matter should be brought to your attention.

C. S. JENSEN,
Manager Rialto Theatre.
Butte, Montana.

War Tax Heavy Burden on Montana Houses

The war tax is playing havoc with most Montana houses, according to managers of leading theatres in that state. The ten per cent gross tax is in many instances wiping out all the profit, and some nights the entire tax comes out of a dead-loss house. Nearly all of the theatres have increased the admission prices hoping to offset the tax drain, but the managers find that the total amusement money in any community is limited and that higher admission prices mean fewer individual sales at the box-office. There seems to be just so much theatre money in any town, and when that is spent the theatregoer waits on his purse to catch up. So the tax comes out of the pocket of the owner, and means less profit, if not actual loss at times.

Washington C. of C. Sees Gerard Film

Under the auspices of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, a private showing to the press and officials was given of the screen production of Ambassador James W. Gerard's, "My Four Years in Germany." This was arranged by the Film Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, of which Sydney B. Lust, manager of the Super Film Production Exchange, is chairman, as a fitting climax to the opening day of the Liberty Loan drive.

Gets More Money for Big Pictures

Charles Robinson of the Home theatre, Blair, Neb., was in Omaha recently to sign for the new star series of the Select Feature Film Co. "Business is exceptionally good," said he. "My house is the only one in our thriving little city. It seats 400. I charge 10-15 cents as a regular thing, but frequently charge 25 cents for a big picture. I always get it, too, and my patronage does not dwindle at the higher price."

Navy Convalescents Send Thanks to Metro

Metro Pictures Corporation is in receipt of a letter of thanks from George Lung, in command of the United States Naval Hospital in Brooklyn, for the feature photodramas and one-reel comedies Metro has sent to cheer the convalescent sailors. Soon after war was declared, the film company began sending its best feature productions to the "Jackies," and ever since then has continued to send them a weekly program. Up to the present time no announcement of this has been sent out, and the motion picture firm has gone quietly about this patriotic service without even allowing the fact to become public. However, the hospital authorities themselves have acknowledged their gratitude, Dr. Lung having written June Mathis of Metro's scenario department to that effect. It was Miss Mathis who secured the personal interest of Richard A. Rowland, Metro's president, in the project.

Kerrison Has Plan on Advertising

Davenport Kerrison, of the Klutho Studios in Jacksonville, Fla., has written MOTION PICTURE NEWS as follows in regard to exhibitors' retention of advertising matter furnished by the producers: "Referring to Mr. Laemmle's complaint regarding careless retention of advertising matter, loaned to exhibitors, causing great loss directly and indirectly. I would suggest the following, as a remedy. Require that each exhibitor supplied with advertising matter, sign a contract binding him to return the same, in good condition. And to see that this is carried out, an agent might be appointed, to whom a duplicate list of such matter might be mailed. The producing companies interested might pool expense and still save themselves many times the cost of maintaining the agent."

Moral Association Formed in South

Believing that the moral standard of motion pictures presented in motion picture theatres of New Orleans has been far below what it should be, the Louisiana Moral Photoplay Association has been formed in that city to take a hand in the matter and begin a cleaning-up process.

Various civic and semi-religious organizations are connected with the movement, it is said.

An official announcement reads: "The association has been formed to correct the abuses of the photoplay. Its object is to use its influence to correct the evil at its fountainhead, the studio."

Winstock Writes Liberty Loan Song

Melvin G. Winstock, of the L. J. Schlaifer Attractions, motion picture company of Seattle, Wash., has written the words of a new song dedicated to the Third Liberty Loan which is making a great hit in the West. The song is called "The Men Behind the Men Across the Sea." It will be copyrighted and published.

Wells Lets Contract for Richmond House

After a delay of many months, due to war conditions, Jake Wells announced in Richmond last week that he had let the contract for razing the Colonial theatre, long one of Richmond's leading picture houses, together with the adjoining confectionery and barber shop, and for the erection on the enlarged space of a fine new motion picture theatre with a seating capacity of 1,500. Although the original plans, described in MOTION PICTURE NEWS several months ago, have been changed considerably, it is probable that Mr. Wells will have one of the finest playhouses in the South.

The work of dismantling the Colonial will be started about May 15, and the new building will be built as speedily as possible. The new theatre will have its main entrance at the corner of Eighth and Broad streets. While the work is in progress the Colonial pictures will be shown at the Victor.

It is also rumored that outside capital has been looking over the field in Richmond in search of a suitable location for another motion picture theatre.

Manager of Fox's Star Theatre Enlists

Louis Williams, manager of William Fox's Star theatre, at 107th street and Lexington avenue, enlisted last week in the United States Army. He is now stationed with the 321st Signal Corps, at Camp Upton, as a telegrapher. Mr. Williams became twenty-one since the passage of the draft law and was probably one of the youngest theatrical managers in the metropolis, if not in the entire country. He was assistant manager of the Star for two years, and had been in charge a little more than a year. The employees of the theatre presented him with a wrist watch before his departure. Mr. Williams was a native of Fort Edward, N. Y.

Strand to Run "Spirit of the Red Cross"

One of the first of the prominent exhibitors of the country to announce his intention of running the official Red Cross picture, "The Spirit of the Red Cross," produced by Jack Eaton, is Harold Edel, managing director of the Strand theatre, New York. "'The Spirit of the Red Cross,'" said Mr. Edel, "is one of the most remarkable two-reelers I have ever seen."

Watson in Los Angeles

Charles P. Watson, formerly president of the North American Export Company, and now manager of the distribution of films under the Committee on Public Information, arrived in Los Angeles recently. He was assured of active co-operation by Henry McRae, manager of production at University City, and other officials. Mr. Watson left Washington last December and has visited many States.

Rosenbluh Applauds Editorial

Insists "W. A. J." Remarks About Saleable Pictures Hit Nail on the Head—Cites "Les Miserables" as Example

IN a letter under date of April 18 to MOTION PICTURE NEWS Louis Rosenbluh, Standard executive of the William Fox New York exchange, declared that William A. Johnston in his chief editorial in the issue of April 27 hit the nail squarely on the head. Mr. Rosenbluh even goes further and states that he finds these articles in MOTION PICTURE NEWS express the right idea for both the producer and the exihibitor.

Commenting on the April 27 editorial, "Pictures that Can Be Sold," Mr. Rosenbluh said:

"I have been following your articles some time and will say you are one of the men in this industry that in my opinion has the right idea, for both the producer and the exhibitor.

"We have recently produced for the exhibitor one of the best productions of the last two years, William Farnum in 'Les Miserables.' The phenomenal success that my office has obtained in this production is due solely to the intensified selling of this production to the exhibitor, not only by myself, but by my entire organization. I have spent months in drilling into my sales organization the real value of this production. I was fortunate in instilling in my men the enthusiasm that I myself had in this production, with the result that all my representatives went out with that enthusiasm and in turn imparted it to the exhibitor, who in turn, in every instance up to date, has passed along that enthusiasm to the motion picture fans in his zone, with the result that we have had an exceptional business on 'Les Miserables,' and the exhibitors of the country will bear me out in this statement. By exceptional business I mean that in every instance the exhibitor has made money far beyond his own expectations.

"The exhibitor has had the opportunity with this production in particular, to try and put into execution my plan of advertising a production to the motion picture patrons. It has been heartbreaking to see so-called high-class exhibitors book a production that cost big money to produce into their theatre and have the nerve to purchase two one-sheets and one three-sheet poster as the extent of their advertising campaign. For that reason I have insisted on a certain amount of advertising material being purchased with every booking of 'Les Miserables.' This brought forth a lot of yells from the exhibitors, but it has proven your own statement, that it is absolutely necessary to advertise a production. The result for the exhibitor has been that he has brought out and created new motion picture fans in his neighborhood; his advertising has promised to show them something unusual if they come to his theatre, and he has made good to his patrons, with the result that he has added thousands of friends to his theatre as well as establishing his theatre as a local institution.

"The New Kingston theatre, Brooklyn, managed by Lou Smith, played 'Les Miserables' three days at increased prices. He packed them in, both matinee and night, and the crowd brought out by a big advertising campaign packed two other houses in his neighborhood.

"Our first great trouble with 'Les Miserables' was to convince the exhibitor that we had a production worthy of the price that we asked. I found it necessary in a great many cases not only to convince the exhibitor, but to show him. I felt that our production of 'Les Miserables' was worth not less than $200 a day, and I insisted upon getting it, as well as doubling his usual runs.

"I have met with the usual opposition, that with the price they charged for admission and the seating capacity in a great many instances, it was impossible for them to take in that amount of money. To overcome this I placed 'Les Miserables' in the best theatres in this territory on a percentage basis. I insisted as a part of the contract that their price of admission be raised, regardless of previous prices of admission. I insisted upon a minimum admission of 25 cents. In addition to that, I insisted that my publicity and advertising department, which I recently established in my exchange, take charge of the exploitation of this picture in the different houses, with the result that in every instance where we have played 'Les Miserables' along these lines our share of the gross has been far in excess of the amount that I demanded as a rental. With the result that I have convinced a great number of exhibitors in New York, Jersey and Connecticut that it is possible for them to pay a reasonable price for the better productions. It is possible for them to charge the public a reasonable price for these better productions, and it is possible for them as exhibitors to interest every human being in their theatre and in these bigger productions—but they must advertise.

Louis Rosenbluh, Standard Executive, Fox Film Corporation

"Two experiences I will cite here as being the usual occurrences: A well known head of a big organization called to see me recently to put three of my pictures in his theatre in New England. These pictures were: 'Daughter of the Gods,' 'Les Miserables' and 'Cleopatra.' I insisted on $200 a day on each picture. This, in his estimation, was impossible. After considerable discussion, we agreed on the following plan, that he was to guarantee me $800 a week and I had the privilege of taking a certain per cent of the gross receipts until the amount equaled $200 a day, or $1,200 for each picture. My advertising and publicity department personally took charge of this engagement for three weeks, with the result that I got the price I asked for, as well as making a considerable amount of money for this man in a theatre that had not made a profit in nine months.

"Another instance was on 'Les Miserables' at Hempstead, Long Island. With three days of the most severe weather, storm, rain and snow, our intensified selling and advertising campaign brought out a class of people that had never entered this theatre, and with the bad weather we got our price for the picture and made money for the theatre-owner as well.

"In the next sixty days we are covering a group of the best theatres on Long Island and in New York State with our big production. I will be happy to advise you from time to time the results of our campaign, with the intensive selling and advertising campaign to motion picture patrons.

"I feel certain that I can prove to the exhibitor that he can pay a fair rental for the better attraction, and, by the proper local exploitation, he can make a larger profit by running these attractions, as well as establishing his theatre as a high-class, permanent institution of amusement, and that the public, who pays the bills, will always pay the price if the productions warrant it."

To Handle Gerard Sales

Hiller and Wilk, Inc., has been appointed exclusive selling agents for foreign territory on "My Four Years in Germany." This company reports that Great Britain, South Africa, Australia and Brazil have been disposed of, to date.

Interstate Finishes New Film

"Last Raid of Zeppelin L-21" to Be Released in Two Reels—European Scene of the Action

THE Interstate Film Company, through its advertising and publicity representatives, the Press Service Bureau, announced this week the completion of a production called "The Last Raid of Zeppelin L-21." The film is said to have been carefully edited and will be issued as a two-reeler.

The Press Service Bureau, in announcing the production, declares that John A. Libston, the English cameraman, and Sam Siegel, formerly manager for William Fox in New Jersey, both of whom are members of the Interstate Film Company, sailed for England in the summer of 1915 to photograph scenes of the war for the American market. In deciding on a subject that would insure the fullest educational and commercial value they selected the Zeppelin and its activities.

Two years, it is said, have elapsed since the filming of the spectacle was commenced. It is claimed that difficulties and obstacles arising from unexpected sources and without warning resulted in the spoiling of thousands of feet of film. It is said that on occasion after locating and trailing the Zeppelin for seven hours, with twenty-eight hundred feet of film to the good, Mr. Libston was plugged by a shot from an English anti-aircraft gun while passing over the city of Croyden, England. Mr. Libston succeeded in regaining control of his plane and landing safely, although his camera and film may still be drifting about in the North Sea.

The Press Service Bureau said further: "An innovation in novel titling for the film adds much to its effectiveness. This result was secured through the co-operation of the laboratory of Ernest Stern, who succeeded in arranging a moving title with a surprisingly startling effect of the powerful searchlights over London spotting the L-21 as a background."

Outing-Chesters Meet with Exhibitors Approval

Jesse J. Goldburg, special sales representative and exploitation manager, who is handling the distribution and sales of the new Outing-Chester Travel Scenics, released once a week, reports that he is receiving encouraging letters from exhibitors throughout the country complimenting him on the value of these scenics as entertaining short subjects.

"I have received one hundred and seven letters and fourteen telegrams covering every State of the Union in regard, to these subjects," said Mr. Goldburg, "and the insistent demand for these single-reel travel scenics is accounted for by the unusual character of the releases and the unanimous verdict of the trade critics as to the entertaining and instructive character of these releases. Unusual expressions of endorsement from exhibitors are contained in most of the communications."

Mr. Goldburg in all contracts specifies as a condition that the "Outing-Chester" series must be featured as an independent attraction, and not used merely to consume twelve to fifteen minutes of the time of an exhibitor's program.

The first of the series of the Outing-Chester Travel Scenics will be shown at the Strand theatre, New York, the week of April 21.

Bond Slogans on National Film Posters

President O. D. Woodward of The National Film Corporation, has ordered forthcoming posters used in advertising its Clover Comedies and the Rancho dramas to bear Liberty Bond slogans. This plan has been put into effect in connection with the posters for the current release in the Clover Comedy series, "By Heck, I'll Save Her." It will be continued until further notice.

Symphony Theatre to Open Early in May

Kennedy Theatres, Inc., formally announces that its new Symphony theatre at Broadway and 95th street will open its doors to the public early in May. Prerelease photoplays will be presented, with news, educational, travel and novelty films. An orchestra of fifty pieces from the Metropolitan Opera House, under the direction of Signor Carlo Ronchi, will be featured and the theatre will take its place among the finest photoplay houses of the city.

In line with the policy of the management to provide the best of entertainment a contract has been signed with William Fox for the showing of Mutt and Jeff Animated Cartoons at the Symphony daily. The contract covers one subject a week for one year.

How He Beats the Others to the Good Ones

A. Woodward, proprietor of the Electric theatre, Port Talbot, New South Wales, Australia, writes to MOTION PICTURE NEWS: "I have had the above theatre for twenty-six months and have added more than 100 per cent since taking it over. I have used quite a lot of your hints in my advertising matter, have accepted your reviews in my selection and booking of films and have been able to get ahead of the other fellow every time through booking before trade showings."

Mme. Petrova, Hostess

On the evening of April 16 Madame Olga Petrova acted as hostess at a banquet tendered by her at the Hotel Astor to the members of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, who were in New York attending the first annual meeting of the organization.

Chaplin Shatters Records of Many Box Offices

The showing of "A Dog's Life," first of Charlie Chaplin's $1,000,000 comedies in all houses operating under First National franchises during the week of April 14, resulted in business of unprecedented proportions, according to reports received at circuit headquarters in New York. All established attendance records have been broken in many of the largest theatres of America, and so overwhelmingly favorable has been the reception accorded Charlie's long-awaited return to the screen, that it is stated that it would not be surprising if the First National stockholders got back most of the money they have invested in the entire series on this single release.

At the Strand in New York, 16,141 people paid $5,610.00 into the box-office the first day of the run. This smashed all attendance records at the Strand for a single day. Throughout the entire week audiences of the same approximate size continued to fill the theatre and it was estimated that the week's business would top $27,000.00. In this connection it is stated that the Strand management—which played the Chaplin picture on a percentage basis, believing the flat rental price asked by J. D. Williams was too high—will pay the First National Exhibitors' Circuit three times as much money as the original booking contract called for.

The First National states that similar business is being reported from other sections of the country, the Alhambra in Milwaukee and McVickers and the Rialto in Chicago being especially mentioned.

Breaking a hitherto iron-clad rule against booking any picture on which they are not guaranteed first-run privilege, the officials of the United Booking Offices have booked "A Dog's Life" over the entire Keith circuit for an extended run.

Investigator Looks Into New Orleans Conditions

George McCorkle, special investigator for the Federal Trades Commission, recently completed an exhaustive inquiry relative to practices in vogue in the film business in the New Orleans territory. While there he interviewed a large number of exhibitors, exchange managers and other persons who have various connections with the business. He departed with a voluminous quantity of typewritten material, and reports on Exchange Row are that the belief exists that rather astonishing developments may be expected from his visit.

Two More Americans!

The American Film Company has contributed two more of its studio staff to the service of Uncle Sam in the persons of Sheridan Hall and Frederick Smith. Mr. Hall had recently been promoted to assistant to Director Edward Sloman, while Mr. Smith is a juvenile heavy. Mr. Hall has been assigned to the Aviation Division, at Kelly Field, San Antonio, Texas, while Mr. Smith joins the 309th Engineers, at Camp Fremont, California.

Exhibitors Box Office Reports

LAST MINUTE REPORTS

These Reports Came "Under the Wire" as Motion Picture News Went to Press

"Mr. Fix-It" (Fairbanks-Artcraft)—"A very pleasing picture. Close to big all week."

"The Honor of His House" (Hayakawa-Paramount)—"Big for the week, but the end of this picture did not please any too well." "One of his best. Big business."

"Woman and the Law" (Fox Special)—"Fine picture, big business." "Splendid picture. One week to big business."

"The Kaiser" (Jewel)—"Greatest picture we have shown. Did good business under adverse conditions."

"The Whispering Chorus" (DeMille-Artcraft)—"Not quite average for the week."

"The Forbidden Path" (Bara-Fox)—"Big business. Pleased the Bara fans." "Bara in a very pleasing role. One week to big business."

"The Danger Game" (Kennedy-Goldwyn)—"Better than average business." "Picture better than this star's others."

"The Lie" (Ferguson-Artcraft)—"This is a dandy picture, because it has heart appeal." "Very good. Pleased all." "Arbuckle with this brought record business. Best thing Ferguson has done yet. But public likes to see virtue rewarded and treachery confounded in the last reel."

"The Cross Bearer" (World)—"Booked for week, closed on Thursday. Poor business. Given much publicity."

Editor's Note: The Box Office Report chart includes all pictures released within the previous eight weeks on which a sufficient number of exhibitor reports have been received to base a verdict. In the column "Average of Exhibitors' Reports" the term "Extra Big" indicates a picture which far surpassed expectations; "Big" means a picture doing better than the usual business for that day under average conditions; "Average" is the grading given the production on which business held up to normal; "Poor" indicates the picture falling below normal in box office and entertainment value.

TITLE, STAR, AND BRAND	AVERAGE OF EXHIBITORS' REPORTS	EXHIBITORS' OWN COMMENTS
AMARILLY OF CLOTHESLINE ALLEY (Mary Pickford—Artcraft)	Extra Big	"Excellent and well liked by all." "Pleasing picture, plenty of good laughs and satisfactory box office attraction." "Keep Mary in this class of stuff and everyone will be happy." "Good picture." "Please immensely. Neilan a great director. Good cast and some human characters."
AMERICAN LIVE WIRE, AN (Williams—Vitagraph)	Average	"It will satisfy at any rate." "Nothing extra, but fair card." "Earle popular here." "Very poor. Lacks story interest."
ANSWER, THE (Rubens—Triangle)	Average	"Very artistic; somewhat padded."
ANN'S FINISH (Fischer—Mutual)	Average	"Fair program offering." "Held well for three days." "Very good entertainment."
BELL BOY, THE (Arbuckle—Paramount)	Extra Big	"Thanks to Roscoe, Keating and St. John am drawing them in despite Holy Week." "Great Stuff!" "Extra good." "Fatty's best yet. Did record biz." "His best."
BELOVED TRAITOR, THE (Marsh—Goldwyn)	Average	"Did not draw." "Fair picture." "Conventional subject." "Good story, but star not popular here."
BIT OF JADE (Minter—Mutual)	Average	"Minter is well liked."
BLUEBIRD, THE (Artcraft)	Average	"Big for ladies and children." "Wonderful." "Splendid picture but our patrons don't take to this kind." "Disappointment from every angle." "They do not want fairy tales."
BLUE BLAZES RAWDEN (Hart—Artcraft)	Average	"Well liked." "Hart reissues are hurting his new pictures." "Big." "His worst picture." "Two days to capacity." "Pretty good." "Very good."
BRACE UP (Rawlinson—Bluebird)	Average	"Better than average."
BRASS CHECK, THE (Bushman-Bayne—Metro)	Average	"Big. Bushman coming back strong." "Good Bushman but stars are not liked here." "Few more like this and Bushman will class 1A." "Not as good as usual for Bushman.' "Very good." "Star does not have his old drawing power. Good picture."
BREAKERS AHEAD (Dana—Metro)	Average	"Fine picture." "Good."
BROADWAY BILL (Lockwood—Metro)	Average	"Lockwood good; story poor." "They all like Lockwood." "Excellent picture but Lockwood is not a pugilist." "Very good." "Star well liked. Good picture."
BY RIGHT OF PURCHASE (Norma Talmadge—Select)	Big	"Splendid." "With 'The Bell Boy' a 100% show."
CAPTAIN OF HIS SOUL, THE (Desmond—Triangle)	Average	"Desmond has done better."
CLEOPATRA (Bara—Fox)	Extra Big	"Will play a return date on this sure." "Good picture, business rotten (maybe Holy Week?)." "Great show." "Excellent."
CLAIM, THE (Story—Metro)	Average	"Good business." "Exceptionally strong Western, Story at her best." "Story has no drawing power here." "Star is popular." "Best picture we have had with Story." "Pictures like this will put Story a story higher."
CROSS BEARER, THE	Average	No comments received.
DEVIL'S WHEEL, THE (Brockwell—Fox)	Big	"Great picture." "Some title for my class." "Big. William Scott deserves equal credit with star." "Dandy show; patrons liked it." "Star better than in others." "Average picture."
DEBT OF HONOR, THE (Hyland—Fox)	Average	"Fair picture." "Not much." "Pleasing picture." "Good picture; star not known yet. "Very good." "Good show."
DESIRED WOMAN, THE (Harry Morey—Vitagraph)	Average	"Only a fair picture." "Good picture."
FAITH ENDURIN' (Stewart—Triangle)	Big	"This star drawing better every time." "Fine value." "Good picture. Well received. One of Stewart's best."
EAGLE'S EYE, THE (Wharton Serial)	Big	"Continues pleasing." "First episode went over big." "Drew fair business in poor serial town." "Second episode slow."
FAMILY SKELETON, THE (Ray—Paramount)	Average	"Sermon has no place on the screen. Keep Ray in Rube roles." "Very disappointing." "Ray drew them but it didn't please." "Ray draws very well" "Poorest Ray in long time." "Not up to standard." "Nothing to picture."
FIGHTIN' GRIN, THE (Farnum—Bluebird)	Average	"Not up to Farnum's standard." "Poor picture for Bluebird." "Farnum popular here."

TITLE, STAR, AND BRAND	AVERAGE OF EXHIBITORS' REPORTS	EXHIBITORS' OWN COMMENTS
FLOOR BELOW, THE (Normand—Goldwyn).........	Big	"Very good. Best yet from Normand." "Nice picture, fully up to Goldwyn standard." "Mabel big favorite." "Picture good though drew poor. Six reels too long for small house." "Very good, but did not draw." "Pleasing."
FLARE-UP SAL (Dalton—Paramount)................	Big	"While good it didn't go over." "Pleased everybody." "As good as Dalton has done." "Big." "Ince Standard. Standard at her best in this type of play"
FLASH OF FATE (Rawlinson—Universal)............	Big	"They want good melodrama." "Pleasing." "Picture mediocre."
FORBIDDEN PATH, THE (Bara—Fox).............	Big	"Bara in a very pleasing role."
GIRL AND THE JUDGE, THE (Tell—Mutual)......	Average	"Very nice picture."
IRL IN THE DARK, THE (Myers—Bluebird)......	Average	No comments received with reports.
GIRL WITH CHAMPAGNE EYES, THE (Carmen—Fox)...	Average	"A good picture." "Went big for me." "Average value." "Star not popular." "Very good picture." "Below Fox standard." "Fair program picture."
GHOSTS OF YESTERDAY (Talmadge—Select).......	Extra Big	"Best Talmadge to date." "Star becoming more popular with each picture." "A good bet." "Great with the women." "Conceded one of Talmadge's best." "Beautiful production star popular. Good business." "Best Talmadge to date. She is growing popular." "Fine picture. Star well liked."
HARD ROCK BREED (Wilson—Triangle)............	Big	"Went very well." "Good title; sounds picturesque." "Great picture, strong cast."
HANDS DOWN (Salisbury—Bluebird)................	Big	"Not Salisbury's best by any means." "If anybody but Bluebird had this they'd ask $150 for it."
HEADIN' SOUTH—Artcraft).........................	Extra Big	"This star made our Holy Week business best we ever had. Will play return on this." "Not as good as others. Stealing Hart's stuff won't do." "Great medicine for the box office."
HEIRESS FOR A DAY (Thomas—Triangle)..........	Average	"Pleased audience extremely well." "Clean comedy drama." "Fine picture."
HIDDEN PEARLS (Hayakawa—Paramount)..........	Average	"Good picture." "Drew well; star popular here." "Story has objectionable episode."
HIRED MAN, THE (Ray—Paramount)..............	Big	"Three days; great." "Star becoming great favorite; show well done." "Ray a coming big star." "Star very pleasing." "Good."
HIS ROBE OF HONOR (Walthall—Paralta)..........	Poor	"Fair picture but star does not draw." "Title bad." "Little too long." "Too heavy and slow."
HOPPER, THE (Mong—Triangle)....................	Average	"Good picture."
HOUSE OF GLASS, THE (Young—Select)...........	Big	"Up to standard." "This kind will bring Clara back." "Good picture."
HOUSE OF HATE, THE (Pathe Serial)..............	Big	"Sustains interest."
HUCK AND TOM (Jack Pickford—Paramount).......	Extra Big	"Fine for family trade." "Good clean stuff that brings business." "Dandy picture." "Becoming very popular." "Excellent." "Positively nothing to surpass this release. A clean-up anywhere."
INNOCENT (Ward—Pathe)...........................	Big	"Pleased most of my patrons and drew well." "Good picture; fair drawing card." "Didn't take as well as it ought." "It's a shame to make Fanny act so young." "Very good. This star is sure to please." "Good feature."
JACK SPURLOCK, PRODIGAL (Walsh—Fox).........	Poor	"Did not please." "Star draws them big, but story is off." "Walsh pulls well." "Not up to his standard." "Poor picture for George Walsh."
KAISER, THE (Jewel)...............................	Extra Big	"Biggest since 'Birth of a Nation'! Broke all house records.
KEYS OF THE RIGHTEOUS (Bennet—Paramount)..	Average	"Title against picture; story did not go." "Just fair." "Not a drawing card." "Extra good." "Good picture."
KNIFE, THE (Brady—Select).........................	Average	"Poorest Select picture. Not fault of star; uninteresting story."
LA TOSCA (Fredericks—Paramount)..................	Average	"Good production, well staged, but not generally liked." "This type of picture does not draw well." "People do not care for this kind of play. Anything with costume is dead." "Very good picture." "Failed to please and failed to produce the cash. Too gruesome. Heard many complaints. Not a laugh in picture."
LAND OF PROMISE, THE (Burke—Paramount)......	Average	"Star was killed by serial, 'Gloria's Romance'!"
LES MISERABLES (Farnum—Fox)..................	Extra Big	"Capacity, great feature." "Return engagement, business held up all week." "Great story; great production." "Very fine production." "Farnum does his best work." "Patrons satisfied, but too long for my house." (900 seats in high rent section.)
LIGHT WITHIN, THE (Petrova—First National).....	Average	"Nothing big." "Just a fair feature." "Good picture."
LIMOUSINE LIFE (Thomas—Triangle)...............	Average	"Appeals to the ladies, but not the men."
LOVE ME (Dalton—Paramount)......................	Average	"Star well liked. This is a dandy picture." "Big business for me." "Fair drawing power but watch this star." "One of the best we have had."
LOADED DICE (Keenan—Pathe)....................	Big	"Remarkable. Great production." "Good picture." "No drawing power." "Ought to have done better; comments good." "Morbid story. Lots of crime. Very dramatic." "Good story but this star gets no dough." "Splendid picture, though story is morbid. Star fine.'
MADAME JEALOUSY (Fredericks—Paramount)......	Poor	"Star not popular in this picture." "Not suited for pictures, too deep. Waste of time to produce such stuff." "Nix." "Patrons don't like this style." "Poor Pauline doesn't get a chance." "Ordinary." "Very bad story."
MENACE, THE (Vitagraph)..........................	Average	"Good picture, both are going to make stars." "Fair production." "Excellent picture but no pull." "Poor picture."
MIDNIGHT TRAIL, THE (Russell—Mutual)..........	Average	"Our patrons said this was Russell's best." "Good." "Not up to Russell's standard.' "Fair."
MOTHER'S SIN, A (Williams—Vitagraph)...........	Average	"Not up to standard but star got it over." "Below average." "Just a piccure.'
MORAL LAW, THE (Brockwell—Fox)................	Average	"Poor photography, subject will not please." "Story good." "Photography punk, picture the same." "Good picture."
NANCY COMES HOME (Triangle)....................	Average	"Story pleased." "Fair picture."
NAUGHTY, NAUGHTY (Bennett—Paramount).......	Big	"Extra good. This is a dandy comedy."
NEW LOVE FOR OLD (Hall—Universal)............	Average	No comments received with reports.
NEARLY MARRIED (Kennedy—Goldwyn)..........	Average	"Public divided on this star, she don't draw here."
NOBODY'S WIFE (Lovely—Universal)..............	Average	No comments received with reports.
OTHER MAN, THE (Morey—Vitagraph).............	Average	"Good picture, Morey popular." "Perfect—100." "Liked." "Star and Grace Dormond well liked."
OTHER WOMAN, THE (Hyland—Pathe)............	Average	"They liked this." "Excellent picture, attractive star."
ONE MORE AMERICAN (Beban—Paramount).......	Average	"Good picture and pleased public." "Beban doesn't draw." "Good, pleasing picture." "One of the most interesting pictures in a long time." "Very good." "He is an artist."
OUR LITTLE WIFE (Kennedy—Goldwyn)...........	Poor	"Poor story, star pleasing." "Only a fair picture." "Nothing to title or picture." "Not equal to her other two." "Pleasing star but nothing wonderful as drawing card."
PAINTED LIPS (Lovely-Universal)...................	Average	No comments received with reports.
PETTICOAT PILOT, A (Martin—Paramount)........	Big	"Immense."
REVELATION (Nazimova—Screen Classics, Inc.)....	Big	"Liked by everybody." "One of the best I have ever seen. Nazimova wonderful." "Business held steady for four days. Picture gave wonderful satisfaction."
REVENGE (Storey—Metro)..........................	Average	"Not satisfactory to our patrons." "Back to the nicolet with this sort."
RUGGLES OF RED GAP (Holmes—Essanay).........	Big	"Everybody enjoyed and boosted this."
SIX SHOOTER ANDY (Mix—Fox)...................	Poor	"Good picture but not in it with Mix's first." "Title too melodramatic." "They didn't come." "Fair Western; pleased." "Poor picture. Poor photography." "Not as good as 'Cupid's Round-Up.' "
SON OF DEMOCRACY (Chapin—Paramount)........	Big	"Exceptionally good attraction." "Fair but did not hold up with first week." "Good family card." " Keeping them away." "Fine stuff." "Ninth of series. Still going strong. Brought many new faces to theatre." "Best series ever produced." "Big drawing card." "Great pictures."
SONG OF SONGS (Ferguson—Paramount)............	Average	"Fine picture. Ferguson will prove drawing card soon." "Very fine." "Star very good, but one of those pictures that goes with half and other half doesn't like it."

TITLE, STAR, AND BRAND	AVERAGE OF EXHIBITORS' REPORTS	EXHIBITORS' OWN COMMENTS
SPLENDID SINNER, THE (Garden—Goldwyn)	Average	"Fine production." "Great." "Well produced but six reels too long for small house." "Very bad ending." "Very good picture." "Very good, but nothing to make them talk or send others." "Magnificent production, but ending very bad."
STELLA MARIS (Pickford—Artcraft)	Big	"Great. We cut to 5879 feet." "One of her best." "Business held up on second day to first." "Made big hit." "Repeated to good business."
SHELL GAME (WEHLEN—Metro)	Average	"Very pleasing picture." "Excellent production." "Well liked by all."
SHOES THAT DANCED (Starke—Triangle)	Average	"Pleased."
SILENT SACRIFICE (Brady—Select)	Average	"Fair picture, but no knockout."
STRONG WAY, THE (Elvidge—World)	Average	No comments received with reports.
SUNSHINE NAN (Pennington—Paramount)	Average	"Poor offering." "Star's last production well liked and patrons expected better picture.'
THING WE LOVE (Reid—Paramount)	Poor	"Poor picture."
TIGER MAN, THE (Hart—Artcraft)	Big	"Good picture, but locally all exhibitors are killing Hart with reissues." "Hart not drawing as well as when first with Artcraft." "Some kind soul should steal Hart's wardrobe and guns. Then maybe we'd get a change."
TURN OF A CARD, THE (Kerrigan—Paralta)	Big	"Broke all house records. Four days." "Better than his first." "This company has them all beaten."
UNFAITHFUL and MARRIAGE BUBBLE (Combination Bill—Triangle)	Average	"Seemed good to get away from the long features. Public enjoyed the change."
UNDER SUSPICION (Bushman-Bayne—Metro)	Average	"Everyone seemed to like this." "Best Bushman in months." "Well Liked."
WEAVER OF DREAMS (Dana—Metro)	Average	"Dana holds up fairly well. Picture no good." "Poor attraction."
WHIMS OF SOCIETY (Clayton—World)	Average	No comments received with reports.
WHISPERING CHORUS, THE (DeMille—Artcraft)	Average	"Acting excellent. Story too morbid." "Very gruesome."
WIDOW'S MIGHT, THE (Eltinge—Paramount)	Average	"Very good picture." "Clean, excellent novelty." "Fine, one of his best." "Eltinge best in this so far." "Better business than last one, Eltinge improving as draw." "Stories of this star too much alike." "Eltinge pleases."
WIFE HE BOUGHT, THE (Myers—Bluebird)	Big	"Excellent attraction."
WILD STRAIN, THE (Vitagraph)	Average	No comments received.
WITHIN THE CUP (Barriscale—Paralta)	Big	"Not as good as her first one. An entertaining picture but too long." "Good story, well acted, but too long."
WASP, THE (Gordon—World)	Average	No comments received.
WOOING OF PRINCESS PAT, THE (Vitagraph)	Poor	"No room for this type."
WILD WOMEN (Carey—Universal)	Big	"Good stuff." "Pretty good picture. Better than average business for two days."

FLASHBACKS

Individual Reports Received on Reissues and Pictures Released Previous to February

Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp (Fox)—" Just for juveniles. Poor at my house for three days."

Amarilly of Clothesline Alley (Artcraft)—" Dandy picture. Extra good on first day, but dropped for rest of run."

Brown of Harvard (Spoor)—" Packed them in. Make more pictures like this."

Baby Mine (Goldwyn)—" Played this extra big for two days."

Betrayed (Fox)—" Just fair picture. Average week-end business."

Cupid's Round-up (Fox)—" Fair picture, but no drawing card."

Cheating the Public (Fox)—" Good melodrama, did an average business here."

Daughter of the Gods (Fox)—" Big business first day, but dropped the second."

Dodging a Million (Goldwyn)—" Fair drawing power, and a very satisfactory production. Only fair. Average one day and poor the next."

Down to Earth (Artcraft)—" Pleased all. Fine picture, but did not draw as it should."

Eternal Temptress, The (Paramount)—" Fine. Business big."

Freedom of the World (Goldwyn)—" A repeater. Better than first run."

Foolish Virgin (Select)—" Good picture, and made good here."

Girl With the Champagne Eyes (Fox)—" Fair program picture."

Heart of a Lion (Fox)—" Great. Fine business getter. Did better on second day. Book version helped put it over."

Hired Man, The (Paramount)—" Good picture. Did average business."

Honeymoon, The (Select)—" Good comedy."

Hidden Hand (Pathe)—" Did an average business here."

In Bad (Mutual)—" Dandy picture. Went big in my theatre."

Idle Wives (Jewel)—" Business big for my run—two days."

Jules of the Strong Heart (Paramount)—" Good picture. Star great, but gets no money."

Learnin' of Jim Benton (Triangle)—" Did big business two days."

Lone Wolf, The (Selznick)—" Not worth the advanced price. Business only average."

Man from Painted Post (Artcraft)—" Average."

Melting Millions (Fox)—" Played this back to big business."

Mark of Cain (Pathe)—" Very ordinary, business average."

Marked Man (Universal)—" A fair Western."

Narrow Trail (Artcraft)—" Average."

One-Shot Ross (Triangle)—" Roy Stewart is an old-time 'meller-drama.' Got by with big Sunday audiences."

Rise of Jennie Cushing (Artcraft)—" Splendid, but did only average."

Sylvia of the Secret Service (Pathe)—" Went Extra big."

Ship of Doom, The (Triangle)—" Average."

Seven Swans (Paramount)—" Kid patronage drawn by such subjects. They do not pay. Poor Judgment to use such a star in this style play."

Scandal (Select)—" Very fine. Business big. Patronage big and star and picture highly praised. We think it fine."

Spy, The (Fox)—" Return engagement, went over big."

Son of His Father, The (Paramount)—" Pleased every one. Average business."

Scarlet Car, The (Bluebird)—" Pleased patrons, big business for two days."

Soul of Satan (Fox)—" This star gets the money."

Shirley Kaye (Select)—" C. K. Y. is a dead card in this town. Very poor for my three days. Very good picture.

Son of Democracy, The (Paramount)—" Fine series."

Unmarried Wife (Blue Bird)—" Star not known. Picture pleased. Results satisfactory."

When a Man Sees Red (Fox)—" Great picture."

Woman and Wife (Select)—" Good picture, but business was poor."

Wild Girl, The (Select)—" Tanguay did average business for me in this production."

EXHIBITOR TO EXHIBITOR REVIEW SERVICE

[These reviews, by P. S. Harrison, are based solely on the entertaining qualities of the picture. All other factors are considered of secondary importance.]

"Let Us Get a Divorce"

Billie Burke Gets a Real Chance and Scores Charmingly

(Paramount—April 29)

YOU will like this picture, and what is more, your patrons, especially women folks, will like it too. They will like it because it is novel, because it is a clean romantic drama with plenty of high class comedy in it and because John Emerson and Anita Loos, a combination that has hardly an equal, adapted it to the screen. You can't help but recognize the master hand of Miss Loos in the subtitles.

The story is based upon "Divorçons," by Victorien Sardou, and depicts a young girl with a romantic nature who lives in a convent and who secretly indulges in harmless flirtations. She weds the brother of her girl chum later, and when he lapses into the humdrum existence of the ordinary husband, her romantic disposition finds relief in a flirtation with another man. She asks him for a divorce in no different manner than she would ask him to buy her a hat. At the suggestion of his sister he pretends he will give her the divorce. Now the roles of the two men are reversed, the husband becoming the romantic lover, and when the lover shows all the disposition of becoming a good husband, a change of sentiment again takes place in her and she decides that her first love, after all, was the best.

Miss Burke is very charming, the story affording her the opportunity of displaying her charms to best advantage. The supporting cast works with unusual skill. The direction is exceptionally good, and photography, very good.

This picture ought to please any audience.

"At the Mercy of Men"

An Off-Color Story of Russia—With Alice Brady

(Select—April 20)

THE basic idea of this offering is a rape and this fact is presented in such a vivid manner that it makes the picture hardly fit to show in any theatre—not to say the ones catering to family patronage.

The story depicts the conduct of some of the officers in Russia during the prerevolutionary period, and in order to give you an exact conception as to what the story is, we will ask you to read carefully, the following synopsis, the first half of which is a reprint, word for word, from the press book furnished with the picture: "Vera Souroff is seized in the street by three carousing officers of the Czar's Imperial Guard, and despite a terrible struggle in the dark, is ruined by one of them. Before the police can break into the house, the officers escape. Vera also gets away, still ignorant of the identity of the chief malefactor.

"Vera's friends appeal to the Czar who orders the arrest of the officers. They swore upon their honor as officers not to reveal any details of the incident. The Czar compels one of them to marry Vera. After the marriage he tells her, although compelled to marry her, she will never have the satisfaction of knowing whether she married the right one or not."

The showing of such a scene, as the one in the room where the orgy took place, will hardly prove an entertainment for families.

"Society for Sale"

William Desmond in a Clear and Entertaining Drama

(Triangle—April 21)

"SOCIETY FOR SALE" is a very well produced photodrama which will offer your patrons a wholesome entertainment.

The story, written by Charles J. Wilson, is out of the ordinary. It is based on the desire of a girl to find out whether her father was morally as bad as gossip would have it, and she adopted a novel method to get her information.

The action in this picture moves along in a swift, systematic, business way, without wasting any time. Mr. Desmond makes a regular "Are you there, old chappie?" type of an Englishman, with monocle and the balance of the trimmings, and at no time does he overdo it.

The ending, in which the fact is disclosed that the heroine is the daughter of the Lord, is very surprising. You never dream it will end that way.

As a whole, this is a clean and very interesting picture that will appeal to any audience.

"Tyrant Fear"

Dorothy Dalton, a Winner in an Ince Role of the North

(Ince-Paramount—April 29)

HERE is a real production that makes you feel that the author knew what he was writing about and that the director was thoroughly familiar with northern life. Due to this fine combination, we have been favored with a photoplay which possesses fine continuity and has been worked out in a sensible manner.

It is a picture of the Canadian woods in which a girl, obsessed by fear of men and things, regains her soul, becomes a courageous woman, wins a fierce battle and saves a man from moral degeneration in the end, to find happiness in his love.

There are some unusually beautiful snow scenes shown in this picture which was taken in the Big Bear Valley in the San Bernardino Mountains in California. The cameraman has taken full advantage of opportunities. This enhances the value of the photoplay which is entertaining throughout.

The selection of the title I consider unfortunate, as I am sure a better one was befitting it. It does not offer the exhibitor a good foundation on which to base his advertising campaign.

"Treasure of the Sea"

Edith Storey in a Story of Average Merit

(Metro—April 22)

THIS is an average offering that will just help to make up the week's program. Story written around a scheming lawyer who, in order to remove the money barrier between himself and the girl he loved, misused the power of attorney given him by another party to ruin her father.

The interpolation of the treasure ship incident weakens rather than adds strength to the story, as it places it in the class of fables our grandmothers used to tell us by the fireside. Most of the situations lack dramatic force, and the insertion of liquor and fights do not add the strength aimed at. The scenes where liquor is dispensed are unnecessarily too many and exhibitors catering to high class patronage are bound to object.

The beautiful camera shots taken from the boat as well as from the shore, will help the picture a little.

"The White Man's Law"

"Hayakawa's Best," Says the Reviewer of This Paramount

(Paramount—May 6)

I HAVE seen every Hayakawa picture released on the Paramount program, but I honestly believe that this one is about the best. With a good story and an excellent cast at his disposal and backed up by his own good judgment, Director James Young set out to make a picture which will rank as the best work of his career.

The story, written by Marion Fairfax and John Brown, is based on an unwritten gentlemen's law among the whites in South Africa called "the white man's law," which obligates them to protect the honor of a good woman, its violation being considered the worst of crimes.

The action throughout is steady and very dramatic and is calculated to hold the interest well. Mr. Hayakawa's acting is convincing and attracts the sympathy, but Florence Vidor carries the biggest part of the honors away by portraying her role creditably and intelligently. Jack Holt, in the unsympathetic role of the one who erred, also deserves special mention.

Although the plot is to a certain extent sensational, as it relates the breaking of "the white man's law," nevertheless, the picture is free from any trace of vulgarity, as it has been handled very delicately.

This production is artistic to the extreme, the photography exquisite and the development of the story logical.

"The Hand at the Window"

A Corking Detective Story Comes from Triangle Plant

(Triangle—April 21)

IT should be a real pleasure for you to show this picture to your patrons, which is, without doubt, one of the most interesting detective stories I have ever seen screened. All factors combined to make it a good one, John A. Moroso furnishing a consistent scenario taken from his magazine story, "In the Spring," Director Raymond Wells handling it in a masterly manner, with Joe King looking and acting the part very naturally. Mr. King gives you the impression that he knows something about detectives. As to Margery Wilson, she deserves her share of the credit for her able acting. She is given a part in the picture that keeps you guessing until the end.

There are too many close-ups in the first reel, and it would help a great deal to have most of them eliminated. Also the close-up scene in the fourth reel, showing the blood on the head of Joe King, is unnecessary, and could be eliminated to good advantage.

"The Mortgaged Wife"

Dorothy Phillips in An Entertaining Drama Close to the Line

(Jewel—June 17)

THIS feature ought to please the biggest majority of those who will see it as it is original, interesting and has been produced very artistically. Nobody will accept the story as a fact, however, as you can't mortgage a wife nowadays. Besides, the author tries to make us believe that you can put powder close to fire and not burn. It can't be "did." However, the man who wrote the story says it can, and so long as nothing happens in it to make us blush, we must take it for granted that it can. Nevertheless, you can't get away from the fact that it comes dangerously near the "danger line," and if you happen to be catering to a very particular element they might blush a little.

The story, written by Frank Howard Clark, deals with a young man, who, while working as bank teller, embezzled fifty thousand dollars.

The president of the bank agrees to stop prosecution provided he signs a note that he will refund the money, offering his wife as security. This is the main idea. Of course, there are German spies and submarines and torpedoing of ships in it, but they are all worked out very nicely making the picture entertaining.

The acting of Miss Philips is excellent, as is that of Wm. Stowell. The photography is up to the Blue Bird standard.

If you have played "The Risky Road" you certainly can play this feature, as what was said of that picture in issue of April 20 holds true of this one also. It is a good all around picture that will fit especially in downtown first run houses.

CAST

Gloria Carter	Dorothy Phillips
Ralph Carter	Albert Roscoe
Jerome Harris	Wm. Stowell
Meyer	Sam De Grasse
Darrel Courtney	Edwin August
Director	Allan Holubar

Ralph Carter, teller in a bank, has embezzled fifty thousand dollars. Jerome Harris, president of the bank, agrees to refund the money and will accept a note on the security of his wife Gloria, until the money is paid back. To save Carter from the penitentiary she accepts. Jerome furnishes her with gorgeous clothes and a fine home and tries to force his attentions on her, but she repulses him.

While out to dinner with Darrell Courtney, her brother, who had just returned from Argentina, sees her husband in the company of some chorus girls. Later Carter calls on Gloria and demands some money. She indignantly refuses him. He starts to attack her just as Jerome enters the room. He angrily tells him he must sail to Europe in the Adritania at once. Darrell Courtney was sailing that afternoon to straighten out some business matters in Europe. While out at sea the ship is torpedoed by a German submarine from the information furnished by Meyer, Jerome's private secretary, and a spy.

Courtney and Carter save themselves in a raft. The latter explains to the former the whole mortgage transaction, and Courtney vows vengeance.

Almost bankrupt from losing all the ships he owned, and as a last resort Jerome plays the C. M. I. stock for all it is worth. Gloria, thinking Jerome deliberately sent her husband and brother to death plans to destroy him. She, therefore, fights him on the Stock Exchange and wins the battle. He is crushed. Gloria goes to him, but does not speak as she pities him. As she starts to leave she sees a note on the floor, which explain Meyer's guilt. She denounces Meyer as the spy, they struggle as Courtney and Carter enter the room. The former threatens to kill Jerome, but Gloria intervenes and explains. As Meyer is led away a gun is discharged and Carter is killed. Jerome and Gloria finally realize their mutual love.

"Anarchist" Is in Again

(Continued from page 2647)

Cleopatra had a darned good press agent, and King Solomon employed a complete publicity staff. In those days we read with interest about Cleo's trained asp, where to-day we get the story about Pretty Polly Pussikin's Pet Pomeranian. Where once they spoke at length about King Solomon's six hundred and seventeenth wife, we now learn that Tessie Titetoes has just secured (or been handed) her seventh divorce. In the olden days we heard about some worthy hero's wonderful skill in throwing the discus, where now we simply replace the discus with the bull. Our present-day screen hero is an astonishing athlete, or our dearest lady-star a marvelous musician. The guy who said, "There's nothing new under the sun" had certainly just finished reading one of those house organs.

Just one word more about those "Comments of Reviewers and Prominent Exhibitors." Probably you have never read them, but I have (in the interests of science). I wouldn't recommend them for a regular diet, but you can stand a few of them, if you get outside of a big hooker of hooch before and after reading. As you probably know when any exhibitor is really interested in knowing what the reviewers have to say about productions. He looks up the reviews knowing that those excerpts shown under the "Comments" caption represent an emasculated version, displaying the saccharine and omitting all else. Nuf ced. And we ALL know that 9,999 commendatory letters out of every possible 10,000 were written by exhibitors with the idea of busting into type. Nuf ced, again.

Now honest; just how interested is the average exhibitor in the fact, that Dick Roe, of Skibouch, Wis., uses Starrem's Pictures, and loves 'em most to death? Does it give you a single thrill to read that Jack Doe, of Crystal Run, Idaho, ran "Wedded and Parted" for two days, and "Turned 'em Away"? Old Granpaw Noah, at the time he gave his first big circus in the Ark, coined three phrases, which have been worked to a frazzle ever since; "Turned 'em Away," "Played to Capacity Business" and "Broke All Box Office Records." They look as familiar on a telegraph blank as "Western Union" and "Postal."

Let's sum up and leave it in the hands of the jury. The average house organ supplies us with soporific editorials and banal bunk; Exhibitor Service which is a travesty on the word "service"; Studio sillicisms which are a mixture of linguial lunacies and adjectival avalanches; tedious descriptions of current releases; tales of what the other guy is doing with Shootem's Pictures about which you don't care a tinker's damn; publicity piffle; favorable comments. And the cost of printing and disseminating these entertaining little pamphlets forms one of the expenses of distribution for which, of course, the exhibitors pay. Are they getting their money's worth? If not, "WYINELL IS THE HOUSE ORGAN?"

"ANARCHIST."

Exhibitor Service Bureau

Milwaukee Papers " News-less"

With the Exception of a Single Column in One Paper They Ignore All Happenings of the Field

MILWAUKEE presents a rather strange situation in the way of co-operation between the newspapers and the motion picture theatres, but the one big thing that stands out is that the newspapers are not co-operating with the larger theatres which are showing a disposition to use big space regularly and that there is probably less co-operation on Sunday than during the week. This is an unusual state of affairs.

In the first place the chief thing that is the matter with Milwaukee is that there are too many newspapers there. Counting the morning and afternoon editions of the Sentinel as two papers, there are seven English dailies there, in addition to a German daily, another German Sunday paper and a Polish daily. Milwaukee has a census population of 417,000. Therefore one expects that the circulation of the papers would be affected according to the number of them and necessarily split up.

The fact that the Socialist party splits influence with the Democrats and Republicans and the racial elements is largely responsible for this number of papers. But we want to say that considering the number of papers that they have to use to reach the entire public that the leading Milwaukee theatres show a most unusual desire to spend money for publicity and at the same time that they lack a great deal of being met anything like half way.

Of course, it must be taken into consideration that the number of papers makes it hard for the smaller houses to advertise, because they cannot use the whole list and therefore we are surprised that some one paper has not gone in to specialize on this. We are told that one of the newspapers does mean to do this and if it will follow the "chart" system that we have often described and fix a rate that the neighborhood houses can pay we feel sure that it will make a big success from an advertising point of view and that it will add a circulation feature worth thousands of dollars a year. Information that this paper is about to take a step forward comes to us in a letter from the advertising manager and we do not feel at liberty to announce the name of the paper until its arrangements are completed.

We have purposely heretofore avoided the discussion of circulation of newspapers, but in this case, where so much of the whole situation does depend on the circulation question that is necessary. We have taken the figures given in the current issue of the Lord and Thomas Newspaper Directory. Here are the English newspapers, with the circulation figures added:

Free Press, morning, 37,235; Sunday, 21,627.
Journal, evening, 103,918; Sunday, 88,677.
Leader, evening, 36,575.
News, evening, 29,317.
Sentinel, morning and evening, 42,176, and Sunday, 52,242.
Wisconsin, evening, 35,909.

One unusual thing that appears from the examination of these figures is that two of the papers which publish daily and Sunday editions show a falling off in the Sunday issue, a very peculiar state of affairs.

There are sixty-three motion picture houses in Milwaukee. The first run houses are the Alhambra, with a seating capacity of 2,700; the Merrill, 1,400; Butterfly, 1,100; Strand, 1,400; Princess, 1,100, and Whitehouse, 1,500. The Toy is also downtown and has a seating capacity of only 450, but it is a liberal advertiser. The Theatorium seats 350; it does no advertising.

Now, even if we forget for the present about the daily papers there are only three English dailies that have Sunday issues, and these have a combined circulation over 150,000. Let's see what they are doing and what the theatres are doing for them.

On the opposite page we show four pages of the Sunday Journal. On one of these pages we have indicated the ads of thirty-three neighborhood houses, each occupying an inch of space. Seventeen of these merely give the name and address of the house, not mentioning a single bill. This is a pure waste of money and we cannot see any occasion for it. No newspaper should ever permit a theatre to spend its money in this way. Its photoplay editor should make it a point to get the bills for these houses and to see that they appear correctly and that this advertising is grouped near the other motion picture display matter.

The second page reproduced is practically a solid page of theatre advertising. Here the Butterfly uses 4½ inches seven columns wide; the Toy 15 inches two columns wide, and the Strand 10 inches four columns. The remainder is vaudeville or legitimate. On the third page the Alhambra has 7 inches six columns wide, the Merrill 12 inches by two columns, the White House 5 inches by five columns, and the Downer 2 inches single column. Figuring at the rate of 21 inches to the column, this gives us a total of more than ten and a half columns of paid matter that the Journal carries.

Then we want to see what the Sunday issue is doing for the motion picture houses and we look at the fourth page and find slightly less than a column of matter, and all of this pure reading notices about the current attractions. There is not a picture, not a news item, not a thing of any interest to the average reader. We don't blame any Milwaukee exhibitor from getting sore when any one talks to him about "newspaper co-operation."

With the exception of most of the neighborhood houses the Sunday Sentinel carries practically the same advertising as the Journal, one page of advertising not being reproduced. Butterfly uses slightly less space, and it carries a 2-inch ad for the Lincoln and 1 inch each for the Jackson and Lyric. But turning to the next page the Sentinel does much more than the Journal in giving a layout to the principal theatres and a column at the left to news of the industry, and then reading notices to the larger theatres. But at that it is little enough.

We haven't taken the trouble to print the page of the Free Press. Its only mention of motion pictures is a 1-inch reading notice for the Alhambra, and the one advertisement that it carries is 1 inch of display from that house. We don't blame the other theatres from staying out. The Alhambra also used 1 inch in the German Sunday paper, Sontagspost, which also practically ignores pictures. In fact, with the exception of one of the daily issues of the Evening Sentinel we have ignored reproduction of the pages from other papers because the motion picture representation is so small that it would not be visible.

On Monday and during the week the Daily News carries 1-inch advertisements for the Princess and Alhambra, and gives each a brief reading notice. Other theatres advertise irregularly here. The Saturday issue that we have before us carries only the same two, 2 inches from the Alhambra and 4 from the Princess. It gives each a short reading notice, but no picture, practically the whole page going to the legitimate and vaudeville.

The Leader starts the week off with 1-inch ads from the Princess and Alhambra and a 6-inch one from the Toy. No news is given. Its alleged amusement page on Saturday is headed "The Theatre and Woman's Page." Brief reading notices are given two theatres and one gets a small picture.

The Wisconsin on Monday has 1 inch each from the Strand, Alhambra, Princess and Downer. Two get a brief notice, each under the heading, "For the Playgoer." Saturday afternoon it devotes five columns to the whole amusement field, prints reading notices for the Strand, Downer, Toy, Princess and Alhambra, and a cut for the Toy and the Strand. Both these theatres use 5 inches double column, the Princess 3 inches double and the Alhambra two single, the Downer two double, and the State, Regent, Murray and Astor 2 inches single each. Here is 40 inches of ad-

(Continued on page 2674)

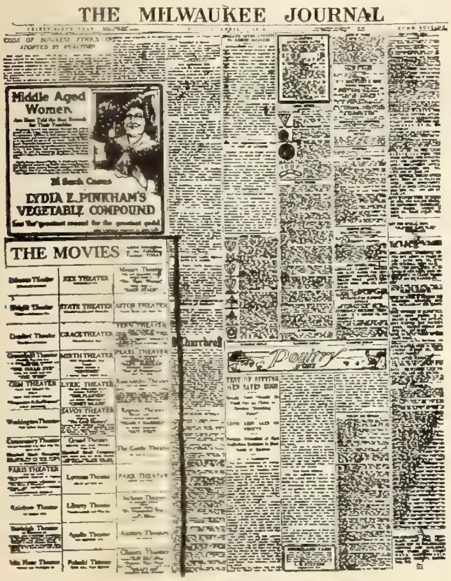
What Milwaukee Theatres Do and the Best the papers Give Them

Top row and the first page at the right of the middle row shows the motion picture representation in the Sunday Journal. Only the third column in the page on the middle row gives any reading matter about pictures. Monday and Thursday pages showing the daily advertising with the reading notices indicated within the black lines are then shown. At the bottom are two pages from the Sunday Sentinel and one from the Monday Evening Sentinel with the reading notices marked. See opposite page.

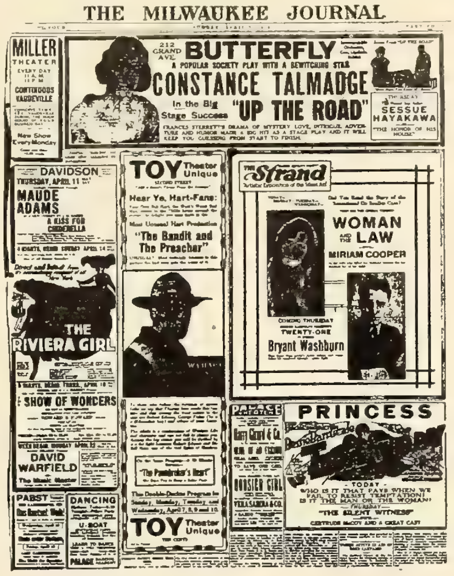


THE MILWAUKEE JOURNAL

Middle Aged Women

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

THE MOVIES



THE MILWAUKEE JOURNAL

MILLER THEATER

BUTTERFLY

CONSTANCE TALMADGE

"UP THE ROAD"

SESSUE HAYAKAWA

DAVIDSON

MAUDE ADAMS

TOY Theater Unique

"The Bandit and The Preacher"

Strand

WOMAN AND THE LAW

MIRIAM COOPER

Bryant Washburn

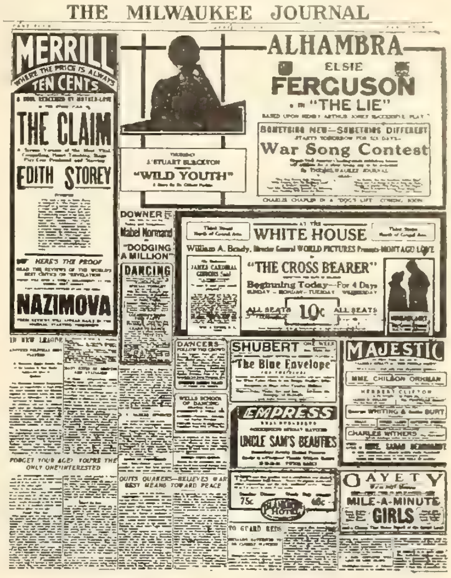
THE RIVIERA GIRL

SHOW OF WONDERS

DAVID WARFIELD

PRINCESS

"THE SILENT WITNESS"



THE MILWAUKEE JOURNAL

MERRILL TEN CENTS

THE CLAIM

EDITH STOREY

ALHAMBRA

ELSIE FERGUSON

"THE LIE"

War Song Contest

"WILD YOUTH"

NAZIMOVA

WHITE HOUSE

"THE CROSS BEARER"

10c

SHUBERT

"The Blue Envelope"

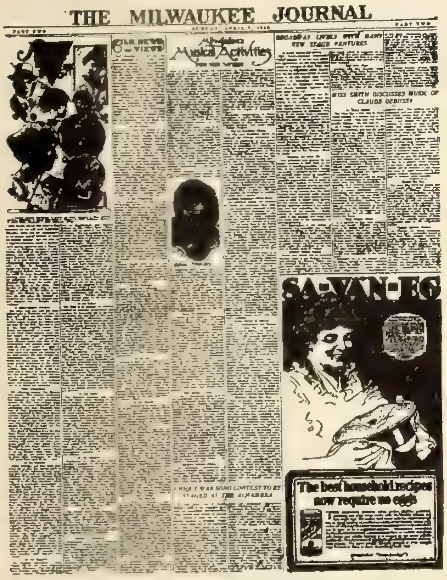
MAJESTIC

EMPRESS

UNCLE SAM'S BEAUTIES

GAYETY

MILE-A-MINUTE GIRLS

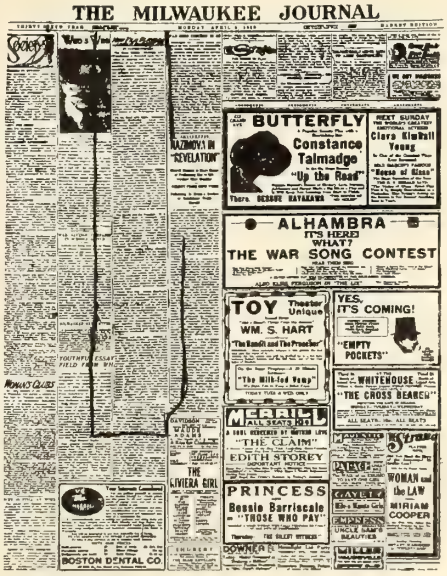


THE MILWAUKEE JOURNAL

Musical Activities

SA-VAN-EG

The best household recipes now require no eggs



THE MILWAUKEE JOURNAL

NAZIMOVA IN "REVELATION"

BUTTERFLY

Constance Talmadge

"Up the Road"

Clara Kimball Young

"House of Glass"

ALHAMBRA

IT'S HERE! WHAT? THE WAR SONG CONTEST

TOY Theater Unique

WM. S. HART

"The Bandit and The Preacher"

YES, IT'S COMING! "EMPTY POCKETS"

"The Milk-fed Vamp"

WHITEHOUSE

"THE CROSS BEARER"

MERRILL

"THE CLAIM"

EDITH STOREY

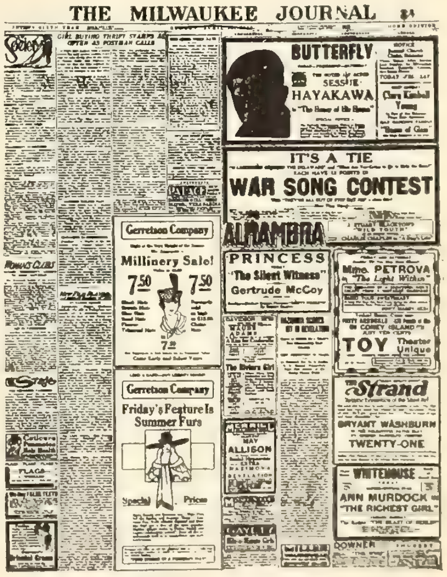
PRINCESS

Bessie Barriscale "THOSE WHO PAY"

WOMAN and the LAW MIRIAM COOPER

THE RIVIERA GIRL

BOSTON DENTAL CO.



THE MILWAUKEE JOURNAL

BUTTERFLY

SESSUE HAYAKAWA

"The Honor of His House"

Clara Kimball Young

IT'S A TIE

WAR SONG CONTEST

ALHAMBRA

Gerretson Company

Millinery Sale!

7.50

PRINCESS

"The Silent Witness"

Gertrude McCoy

Mme. PETROVA

TOY Theater Unique

Friday's Feature Is Summer Furs

Strand

BRYANT WASHBURN

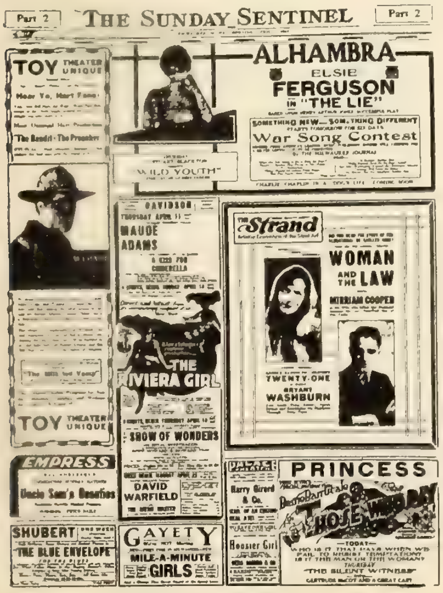
TWENTY-ONE

MAY ALLISON

WHITEHOUSE

ANN MURDOCK

"THE RICHEST GIRL"



Part 2 THE SUNDAY SENTINEL Part 2

TOY THEATER UNIQUE

ALHAMBRA

ELSIE FERGUSON IN "THE LIE"

War Song Contest

"WILD YOUTH"

DAVIDSON

MAUDE ADAMS

Strand

WOMAN AND THE LAW

MIRIAM COOPER

TWENTY-ONE

BRYANT WASHBURN

RIVIERA GIRL

SHOW OF WONDERS

EMPRESS

Uncle Sam's Beauties

DAVID WARFIELD

PRINCESS

"THOSE WHO PAY"

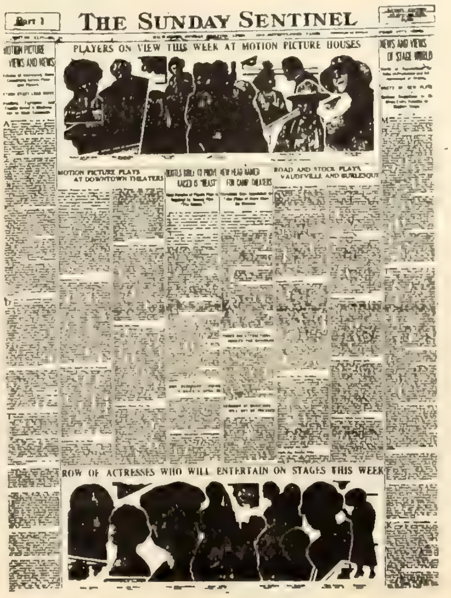
"THE SILENT WITNESS"

SHUBERT

"THE BLUE ENVELOPE"

GAYETY

MILE-A-MINUTE GIRLS



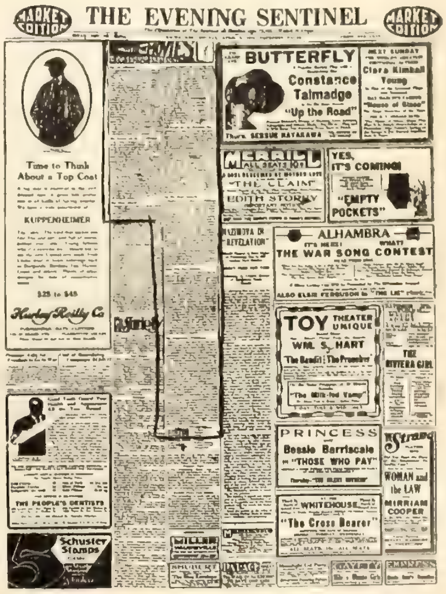
Part 1 THE SUNDAY SENTINEL

PLAYERS ON VIEW THIS WEEK AT MOTION PICTURE HOUSES

MOTION PICTURE PLAYS AT DOWNTOWN THEATERS

ROAD AND STOCK PLAYS, VAUDEVILLE AND BURLESQUE

ROW OF ACTRESSES WHO WILL ENTERTAIN ON STAGES THIS WEEK



MARKET EDITION THE EVENING SENTINEL MARKET EDITION

Time to Think About a Top Coat

KUPPENHEIMER

Hurley Reilly Co

BUTTERFLY

Constance Talmadge

"Up the Road"

Clara Kimball Young

"House of Glass"

MERRILL

"THE CLAIM"

EDITH STOREY

YES, IT'S COMING! "EMPTY POCKETS"

NAZIMOVA IN "REVELATION"

ALHAMBRA

THE WAR SONG CONTEST

TOY THEATER UNIQUE

WM. S. HART

"The Milk-fed Vamp"

PRINCESS

Bessie Barriscale

"THOSE WHO PAY"

Strand

WOMAN and the LAW

MIRIAM COOPER

WHITEHOUSE

"The Cross Bearer"

Schuster Stands

Ruffner Urges Ideas In Exploitation

TWO exhibitors from the Pacific Coast and one from the Atlantic add their answers this week, to the question: "What is the matter with pictures?"

It is important to note that the one theme that goes through all of these expressions is that humanness is demanded. Exhibitors want pictures deal with probabilities of real life, they declare, and not with what might happen under greatly strained circumstances.

Ralph Ruffner, one of the best known exploiters of pictures, wants the main offices to put ideas in their advertising suggestions. J. A. Partington finds most of the features satisfactory, but he wants the length cut down. Thomas D. Soriero contributes his second article, a most comprehensive survey of the entire question.

Read every line of these and then let us have your own views.

RALPH RUFFNER, manager of the Columbia, Portland, Ore., pleads for the open market which he believes will bring better pictures and incidentally he takes a rap at the advertising departments of the film companies when he declares that he has seen many a five-reeler made out of an idea but that he doesn't recall ever seeing any part of the idea get into the advertising matter.

I humbly beg your pardon for delay in filing my mite of opinion on the subject "How pictures of the present day can be improved." Every time I attempt to corral my thoughts, I find I could do better if I were to hire a hall, and start after 'em with the lights out, but you want something you can publish.

"How can the pictures of the present day be improved?"

If I were competent to answer that is it should be, I wouldn't be here tonight typewriting a few very definite thoughts to soak up space in your good book. A picture which makes CLEAN money for an exhibitor doesn't need improving. The exhibitor is satisfied, and that means the public, for if it is good they GO; if it is not, they DON'T, and if they DON'T go, then it's too late to do any improving that will benefit the poor guy who foots the bills ALWAYS.

Every human connected with the game today—those who are not in it to see how much bunk they can put over—knows and prayers for the time when he or she can deliver the very best there is in them and be privileged to do it unhandicapped by program or affiliated demands.

Pictures of the present day can be immediately improved by the immediate arrival of the Genuine Open Market, when goods will be sold absolutely on their own merits; when the exhibitor can step out with his CASH and buy what he likes, as much as he likes, or as little as he likes and DO IT WITHOUT leaving his weather-beaten initials in somebody's safe.

In seeking to improve present-day pictures you are seeking the improvement of the heart-action of the industry, and the doctor who can stimulate that is not going to be found on the Sucker End.

If the producer or distributing executive who reads this does not find any angle of thought which will work into his scheme of things, let me ask him if he is doing everything he possibly can in the way of detailed attention to the advertising needs of the exhibition end. Are those in charge of the selection of advertising material to accompany each release people of experience—former theatre employes who have mixed with and know what the sharpshooters look for—people who know the value of a good still, of good, usable copy—people who know and are quick to detect that something which lurks in so many pictures which would be worth real, hard, Liberty Loan money to the man who foots the bills for all lobby and newspaper work? If I were only privileged to name some of the "corporations" whose outside representatives have been cursed and their organizations damned through the shameful, continued retention of incompetent images by New York executives in "advertising departments" so called. I've seen them make a five-reeler out of an idea, but I don't recall ever having seen any part of the idea get into the advertising matter.

J. A. PARTINGTON, manager of the Imperial theatre, San Francisco, finds that the great majority of the pictures that he has been showing recently have been satisfactory. He points out that more attention should be given to the titles and that patronage on many a good production has been ruined because the name did not appeal to the public. He also wants features kept within five reels.

Answering your request for my opinion as to how pictures of the present day can be improved, I wish to state that most of the productions that I have used lately have been all that I could wish for.

I think, however, that more attention should be given to the choosing of titles. Many a good picture is ruined as a box-office attraction in a first run theatre by an unattractive title. I think the subtitles also should be edited more carefully. In many pictures the big scene is "put over," by a subtitle. The wording of a title in a big situation can make or break a picture, and it is therefore false economy to allow this work to be done by any person other than one with literary talent, who is thoroughly conversant with the art of expression.

I, also, think for the average theatre a picture should not exceed five thousand feet in length. In my case I find that pictures of six, seven, or eight reels usually cost considerably more than a five-reel picture, but if they do have an added box-office value their extra length makes it almost impossible to handle sufficient people to make it a desirable investment. Our records show that pictures of less than five thousand feet in length hold all the profit records for this house.

ADVISORY BOARD, EXHIBITORS SERVICE BUREAU

Samuel L. Rothapfel, Rialto and Rivoli theatres, New York.
Thomas D. Soriero, Park theatre, Boston, and Strand theatre, Lowell.
Harold B. Franklin, Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo.
Edw. L. Hyman, Victoria theatre, Buffalo.
E. Mandlebaum, Loew's Stillman theatre, Cleveland, Ohio.
Mrs. Joseph Grossman, Standard theatre, Cleveland, Ohio.
S. Barret McCormick, Circle theatre, Indianapolis.
Theo. L. Hays, New Garrick theatre, St. Paul.
M. W. McGee, Majestic theatre, Detroit.
Chas. G. Branham, Strand theatre, Minneapolis, Minn.
E. V. Richards, Jr., General Manager, Saenger Amusement Co., New Orleans.
Ernst Boehringer, Liberty theatre, New Orleans.
F. L. Newman, Royal and Regent theatres, Kansas City, Mo.
H. M. Thomas, Strand theatre, Omaha.
P. E. Noble, American theatre, Butte, Montana.
George E. Carpenter, Paramount-Empress theatre, Salt Lake.
Sam W. B. Cohn, Liberty theatre, Spokane, Wash.
G. F. Fullerton, Advertising Manager, Greater Theatres Co., Seattle, Wash.
E. J. Myrick, Liberty theatre, Portland, Ore.
Ralph Ruffner, Columbia theatre, Portland, Ore.
Eugene H. Roth, California theatre, San Francisco.
J. A. Partington, Imperial theatre, San Francisco.
Sidney Grauman, Grauman's theatre, Los Angeles.

Soriero Demands Natural Emotions

THOMAS D. SORIERO, managing director of the Park theatre, Boston, and the Strand theatre, Lowell, who was one of the earlier contributors to the question as to what is the matter with pictures, elaborates on his first reply in a most interesting article in which he urges the elimination of the unessential and amusement-barren from future productions:

After a conscientious and analytical study of what is wrong with the present day motion pictures, and what is needed to enhance their general qualities, I suggest the following:

Perhaps the initial criticism one lays against photoplays as they are now set forth by the manufacturers is the inconsistent and wholly artificial padding that so clutters them, not only hampering the continuity of the story, but ultimately reducing the commercial value of the picture, thus defeating the purpose of the maker of the picture.

Padding is like hearing an off brass note in a delicately woven symphony, like an interruption to a good story. It detracts the mind, and it is a psychological fact that once the mind is removed from a specific subject it requires doubly concentrated effort to regain the original interest, and by thus detracting the mind from the plot or story of a picture, it robs it of its attractiveness, and the patron goes away but mildly or perhaps disagreeably impressed by the play. This happens often, and is a thing that should be seriously considered, although many of my brother managers may perhaps smile at my introduction of psychology in the study of my goods.

My patrons are the most cosmopolitan in New England, and they demand a cultured sensitiveness in the selection of pictures as well as a more elementally emotional frame of mind, yet there is a general insistence that my pictures do not transcend the realm of reason. It is superfluous picture making to show a scene where a doctor is called to a wealthy house, by showing the physician proceeding from his door to his waiting automobile, and his subsequent drive to the home of the patient. Once the auditor saw the physician called and saw him prepare to answer that call, it is fair to assume that the average intelligence would believe, on seeing him enter that room of the patient that he had answered the call, and had not been waiting in the next room, as it were, for his "cue" to appear. The average motion picture auditor, at least in my theatres, and mine are representative in the East, can easily supply the movements of the physician from the time he leaves his home until his arrival at the home of the patient, since this would be merely an instinctive operation of the mind. I am going into detail in this case to show how easily it is applicable to a great many more instances extant in picture manufacture.

Upon reading this, several of the larger manufacturers will promptly rise up and shout, "We have removed this superfluous element from our pictures long ago." But have they done so completely and effectively? I think not. If I dilate too long on padding as one of the glaring faults of pictures, it is because I have long thought that about it, and have voiced my private opinion to manufacturers who, although they admitted I was right to a large extent, failed to take sufficient measure of interest in my suggestion to eliminate the objectionable element.

Unless a picture has a conspicuous feature, either in the nature of a star or story, there is little excuse to prolong it over a few reels. However, too much money has been lost by manufacturers on such unhappy ventures to sound a warning in this direction. This does not mean, however, that since a picture is endowed with a star, or one of the many "near-stars" that so befoodle many present-day pictures, it should be lengthened by extraneous presentation of beauteous gowns when these gowns have no legitimate right in the picture.

Perhaps exhibitors will say women like this sort of thing. They do. But imaginative women, and no one denies that woman has a greater and more acute imagination than man, would stand for an aimless showing-off of clothes when this interruption robs her of seeing what happened to the principal characters of the story. This is consistent and not at all counter to good common motion picture sense.

And while on the subject of women it might be propitious to mention that every exhibitor and manufacturer study woman's likes almost to the point of excluding a consideration of mere man; since they compose the greater part of the moton picture audience, their influence on their escorts is tremendous. In most instances, anything a woman likes their escort invariably likes also. He may wonder why he does after he gets away from the theatre, yet he does.

It does not follow that pictures need be effeminate or overclouded with a saccharine optimism in order to please women. Most of them appreciate rugged pictures, plays that deal with the open and breathe the air of excusable lawlessness. Let us have optimism, sweetness and the boundless energy of youth in our plays, but avoid the simpering and cloying droll that disgusts. Some manufacturers proceed on the theory that, since two lumps of sugar make a cup of coffee palatable, five will double this effect. The result, of course, is inverted and the effect desired spoiled, driving away many from the motion picture theatre in quest of red-blooded amusement in the legitimate drama.

I am one of those restless managers that are so bound up in the interest of motion pictures and their future that I know a revolution must occur if they are to retain their influence on the public. Already much of the public's credulity has been strained, and there is a skepticism in connection with photoplays interpreting life that is the natural result of the artificial qualities in many pictures.

It is my purpose not to merely cater to the public taste in a submissive sense, but to give my patrons pictures, by careful selection, that will gently and without offense cultivate their tastes toward a higher and sounder standard of excellence in picture plays as they relate to life. This is what plays like Mr. Galsworthy of England and Edward Sheldon of America are doing on the legitimate stage, escaping as they do the stigma of highbrowism.

When I say that a revolution is necessary in motion pictures I mean that they must approximate an art basis if they are to retain their coveted place in the sun. And by art I do not mean that sort of estheticism that is incompatible with commercialism, since there can be a legitimate fusion of the two with excellent results. It is by giving your patrons good pictures, dealing with natural emotions, and the realities of life aside from its abnormal aspects, that you can educate its taste to the point where it will accept nothing but plays of substance and technique. This idea can be worked out with every kind of picture, from the society plays to the light comedy. The slapstick pictures, of course, live in a world of their own, and fill it very well.

Can we not have art in our pictures without having highbrow hurled at us? I think so, and I will tell you why. If there is an energetic and co-operative effort on the part of exhibitors and manufacturers toward this end, favorable results will manifest themselves before the movement has proceeded very far. Try it. It will entail, neither a greater financial consideration nor a loss of patronage.

And finally I would suggest to the manufacturer that he pay greater attention to detail in setting forth a story. He should never allow a director to present a story until that director is familiar with every phase of the story he is to picture. An audience is made up of every type of person. If a physician is in an audience and in witnessing a scene in an operating room, wherein the surgeons, their heads wrapped in gauze to prevent the spread of germs, uses the operating instruments like butcher knives and display in their general conduct, an illuminating ignorance of even elementary hygiene, he is going to leave that theatre disgusted with the picture. And so with newspaper editorial rooms. Ask any newspaper man if he ever saw an accurate presentation of an editorial room on the screen and he will tell you that he has not. I do not believe that any evil can be cured by a generalization of that fault. It requires an analytical example to remedy it, and I have tried to give a few without attempting to depreciate the wonderful industry that the motion picture now is.

Co-operation between all the various elements that constitute the business, energetically and intelligently focused toward the elimination of the unessential and amusement-barren qualities of modern motion pictures, will effect the greatest and most lasting good in a common cause.

Your Idea---and Ours

DOES unusual advertising pay?

Certainly it does, where it is done in good taste and where it is not followed to getting the public to expect something freakish every day. We know of one large string of theatres where the advertising writer is supposed to be quite clever. We have often heard the general manager declare the public came to look for these ads because of their originality of expression. As a matter of fact they were all of the same general style and we doubt very much if about half of the original readers of them didn't get tired after a few weeks and stop all attention to them.

S

Far from Broadway—away down in southern Mexico, where rubber trees grow thick and boa constrictors lie coiled in the shades of the jungle, hundreds of thousands of men and women live and die whose fate receives less attention than does the death of a sparrow in a city street.

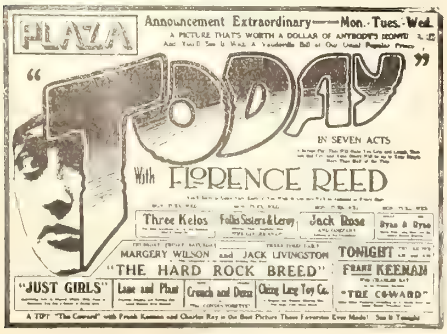
Along the Gila River, where stockade villages are, beautiful Mestizo girls flit here and there among reed- thatched huts in a sort of life that few people are aware exists on the continent.

It is a life of hard philosophies and queer morals, of quaint beauty and hideous injustice. And in this scene has been placed a story of which there is not one more picturesque and romantic extant. "The Planter" is the title of the piece and as a photodrama extraordinary it will convey to Strand patrons tomorrow a story of old Mexico, that, for sheer spectacular and dramatic interest ,combined with pathos and romance alike, will take its place among the great picturizations of the day.

Here is a most unusual advertisement and a good one. The manager has not even used the name of his theatre in big type, merely the initial, and then he has gone on to tell the story of "The Planter." We believe that this pulled business. It did it once, but like all of this unusual advertising we wouldn't advise to do the same thing oftener than about once a year.

Hard sense simply resists softer, weaker things, but obstinacy cannot be moved to anything.

PLAZA THEATRE, Bridgeport, Conn., started out with the right idea with this display which appeared in the Sunday paper and occupied a space 11½ inches deep across the top of the page. The man who wrote this advertisement knew that he had an unusual picture and that the title and the picture of the star should be played up. He did fairly well in this, though we never like any lettering where one is forced to stop to figure out what the letters are.



PLAZA

Announcement Extraordinary——Mon.-Tues.-Wed.

A PICTURE THAT'S WORTH A DOLLAR OF ANYBODY'S MONEY

"TODAY"

IN SEVEN ACTS

With FLORENCE REED

Three Kelos | Follis Sisters & Leroy | Jack Rose AND COMPANY | Ryan & Ryan

MARGERY WILSON and JACK LIVINGSTON

"THE HARD ROCK BREED"

"JUST GIRLS" | Lane and Plant | Crouch and Dunn | Ching Ling Toy Co.

TONIGHT

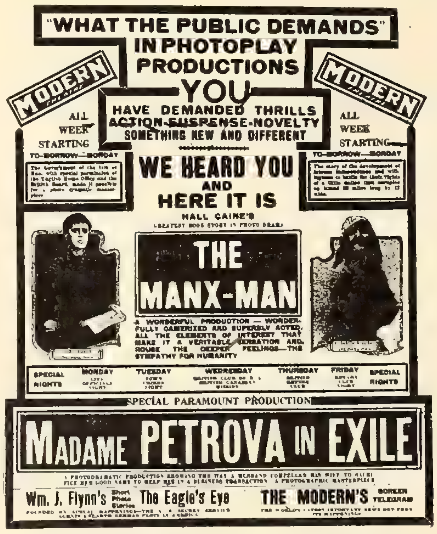
FRANK KEENAN

"THE COWARD"

But after getting the title of the picture in big letters, the writer goes to the other extreme and fills up the rest of the space with junk. Why he should feel called upon to box off each of the vaudeville acts and caption each one "Mon., Tues., Wed." we don't know. And then he goes and does the same thing with the vaudeville for the latter half of the week—inexcusable. We would have devoted the left hand six columns of this display largely to the "Today" picture, with the name of Florence Reed much larger. Then at the right we would have devoted a column to the accompanying vaudeville acts. At the bottom we would have had a rule cut off and have advertised the Sunday show, giving only a small line at the bottom to the bill for the latter half of the week.

If every one had left "well enough alone" we would have still been traveling on horseback and in stage coaches.

THIS takes the week's first prize for all that a display should not be. The Modern theatre, Providence, R. I., started off with the right idea of using large space, buying eleven inches across four columns, but there the good part stopped. And we must say that the display looks better here than it did in the paper where it was surrounded with other advertising. The succession of heavy rule effects is not only confusing, but it distinctly hurts one's eye. There is a perfect mess of Gothic type with practically the whole of the display in capital letters.



"WHAT THE PUBLIC DEMANDS"

IN PHOTOPLAY PRODUCTIONS

MODERN THEATRE

YOU

HAVE DEMANDED THRILLS ACTION-SUSPENSE-NOVELTY SOMETHING NEW AND DIFFERENT

ALL WEEK STARTING TO-MORROW—MONDAY

WE HEARD YOU AND HERE IT IS

HALL CAINE'S

GREATEST BOOK STORY IN PHOTO DRAMA

THE MANX-MAN

A WONDERFUL PRODUCTION — WONDERFULLY CAMERIZED AND SUPERBLY ACTED. ALL THE ELEMENTS OF INTEREST THAT MAKE IT A VERITABLE SENSATION AND ROUSE THE DEEPER FEELINGS—THE SYMPATHY FOR HUMANITY

SPECIAL NIGHTS | MONDAY | TUESDAY | WEDNESDAY | THURSDAY | FRIDAY | SPECIAL NIGHTS

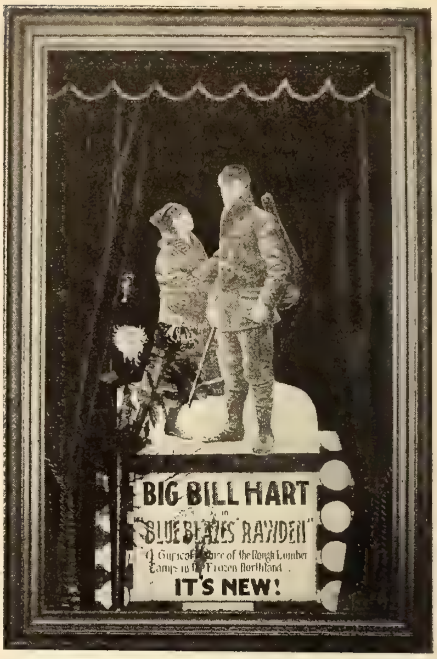
SPECIAL PARAMOUNT PRODUCTION

MADAME PETROVA IN EXILE

Wm. J. Flynn's Short Photo Stories The Eagle's Eye

THE MODERN'S SCREEN TELEGRAM

The man who designed this display wasn't going to take any chance of using all of the space that he bought. He even resorts to 8 point type in the boxes.



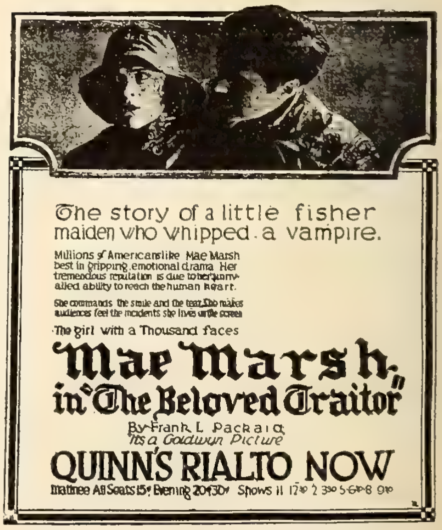
BIG BILL HART
in
"BLUE BLAZES RAWDEN"
A Gripping Drama of the Rough Lumber Camps in the Frozen Northland
IT'S NEW!

HERE is something new and interesting in the way of lobby displays. You are all familiar with the use of "shadow boxes" on the stage to get clearer pictures and to allow nothing to interfere with the concentration of attention on the screen. They have the effect of "framing" the pictures and making them stand out.

E. J. Myrick, managing director of the Liberty theatre, Portland, Ore., has adopted the same effect for use in the lobby and he gets a very striking result with the use of a frame and curtains on either side of the display itself. The reproduction fails, of course, to show the lighting effect which makes these displays stand out all the more. These "shadow boxes" for the foyer are easily made from posters, a limited amount of "props" and a few electric light bulbs.

Many exhibitors haven't got beyond the "Perils of Pauline" stage. They are still shuddering with her.

GETTING a catch line is an important thing in writing advertising. Here, in this case of Quinn's Rialto, Los



The story of a little fisher maiden who whipped a vampire.

Millions of Americans like Mae Marsh best in gripping, emotional drama. Her tremendous reputation is due to her unrivalled ability to reach the human heart.

She commands the smile and the tear. She makes audiences feel the incidents she lives on the screen

The girl with a Thousand faces

Mae Marsh, in "The Beloved Traitor"

By Frank L. Packard

It's a Goldwyn Picture

QUINN'S RIALTO NOW

Matinee All Seats 15¢ Evening 20 & 30¢ Shows 11 12:30 2 3:30 5 6:30 8 9:30

What Live Wires Are Doing

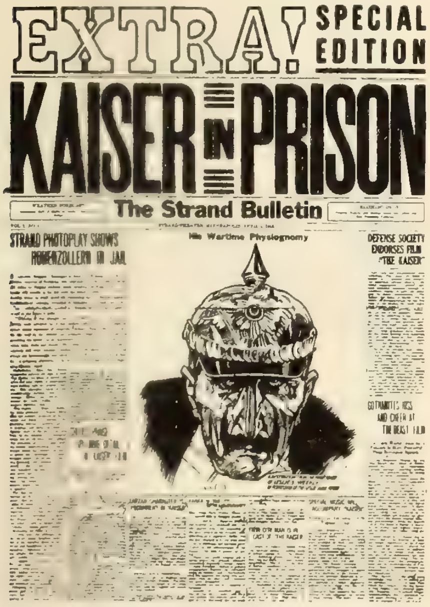
Angeles, the writer has succeeded admirably.

"The story of a little fisher maiden who whipped a vampire"—that means something immediately to everyone who reads it. There are other lines bevoted to Mae Marsh, but that one line is the only thing about the picture itself besides the title.

It is at once a descriptive title and one that arouses the curiosity of the patrons and makes them want to go to the Rialto to see how the little girl won her victory over the woman of the world. There is quite a difference in being able to get a phrase that will make everyone want to come to the theatre and get its full meaning and quite another to using an expression that means nothing. And it is worse, still, to use one that is misleading and which is probably as puzzling to the patron after he has seen the picture as it was before.

The manager who argues with his patrons is wrong no matter how right he may have started out to be.

STRAND THEATRE, Minneapolis, has been setting the pace for advertising in that city recently, and when it started the run of "The Kaiser" it took up some of the more sensational form of advertising with the issuance of a "fake" extra with huge headlines announcing "Kaiser in Prison." It was distributed through the city by newsboys and created a big sensation. It was published on pink paper and in similar style to the sporting extras and at first glance might have passed for one of these.



EXTRA! SPECIAL EDITION

KAISER IN PRISON

The Strand Bulletin

STRAND PHOTOPLAY SHOWS HOHENZOLLERN IN JAIL

His Wartime Physiognomy

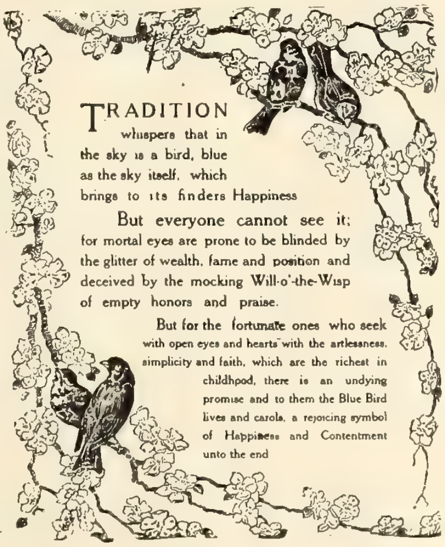
DEFENSE SOCIETY ENDORSES FILM "THE KAISER"

We believe in this sensational class of exploitation once in a while. It is a good thing to put a bomb under the public now and then and when you have a picture that will lend itself to this class of exploitation you are likely to make a big hit with it. But you have to have the goods, something with a real punch in it and the moment that you try this on an ordinary picture you are going to lose rather than make patronage.

Quite some feat when the cow jumped over the moon, but what good did it do her? It's a good plan for all of us to keep close to the ground.

ARTHUR G. STOLTE, manager of the Strand theatre, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, believes in doing things for himself rather than depending on the producing companies. Therefore we made a mistake recently in commending his advertisement of "The Sign Invisible" when we said that he had used a cut sent out by the First National. As a matter of fact the cut was his own design.

Now when he came to show "The Blue Bird" he did the same thing and prepared his own matter, an attractive four-page booklet for which he used a specially designed cover, giving the legend of the blue bird and the search for happiness. It is unusual that the cover page did not mention the name of the theatre. The interior two pages are devoted to the author, the production and the manner in which is was made, a box effect in the center of the page giving the name of the theatre and the dates of showing. The last page was devoted to further editorial matter about the picture. It was certainly good constructive work of the sort that will always get unusual attention.



TRADITION whispers that in the sky is a bird, blue as the sky itself, which brings to its finders Happiness

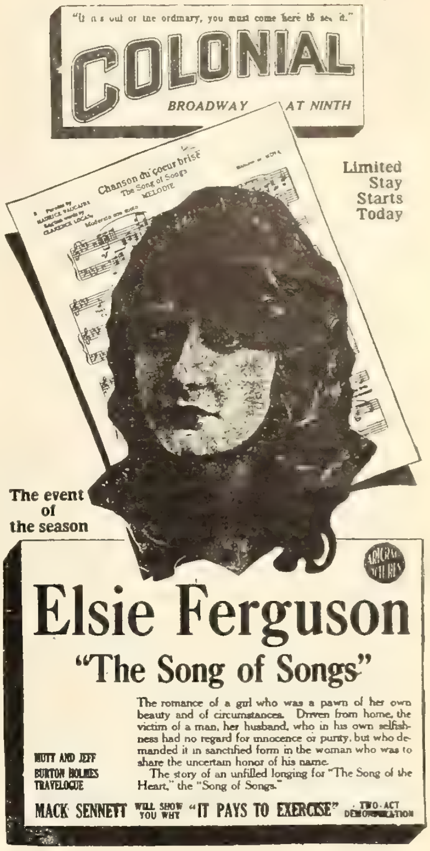
But everyone cannot see it; for mortal eyes are prone to be blinded by the glitter of wealth, fame and position and deceived by the mocking Will-o'-the-Wisp of empty honors and praise.

But for the fortunate ones who seek with open eyes and hearts with the artlessness, simplicity and faith, which are the richest in childhood, there is an undying promise and to them the Blue Bird lives and carols, a rejoicing symbol of Happiness and Contentment unto the end

---

The fellow who keeps telling you that the motion picture is "still in its infancy" is in the same class with the man who wants to keep his son in short trousers to save money.

"THE SONG OF SONGS" is a picture that lends itself especially well to exploitation and it is interesting to see how a number of theatres have treated it. This display of the Colonial, Tacoma, Wash., is the simplest and probably the most effective of any. The designer had superimposed a cut of the star on a sheet of music and with the use of a minimum of descriptive matter has made a most effective effort. Of course one of the principal things that makes this display so striking is that the theatre has used a space eighteen inches deep and four columns wide. This has given a chance to use a very large cut and the designer has also left plenty of white space.



"If it's out of the ordinary, you must come here to see it."

COLONIAL

BROADWAY AT NINTH

Chanson du coeur brisé
The Song of Songs
MELODIE

Limited Stay Starts Today

The event of the season

Elsie Ferguson

"The Song of Songs"

The romance of a girl who was a pawn of her own beauty and of circumstances. Driven from home, the victim of a man, her husband, who in his own selfishness had no regard for innocence or purity, but who demanded it in sanctified form in the woman who was to share the uncertain honor of his name.

The story of an unfilled longing for "The Song of the Heart," the "Song of Songs."

MUTT AND JEFF

BURTON HOLMES TRAVELOGUE

MACK SENNETT WILL SHOW YOU WHY "IT PAYS TO EXERCISE" TWO-ACT DEMONSTRATION

In his advertisement for the Liberty theatre, Seattle, G. F. Fullerton has used an open sheet of the music together with some of the figures from the play. In another and later ad for the Strand theatre in the same city he has employed a large scene cut alone without the music.

The man who advertises but once a week is like the fellow who takes one cast at a trout and expects to land a whole dishful of fish.

MANAGER ROBERT FERGUSON, of the Dorothy theatre, Toronto, reports that he was able to put "The Bull's Eye," the Universal serial, over with a flying start as the result of an expedient that he was compelled to close his theatre on Monday on account of the fuel order. In an effort to make up on this he determined on something drastic and gave a special children's matinee on Tuesday, when the first episode of the serial was shown and an admission of only one cent was charged. According to reports this resulted in the biggest business on the following episodes that the theatre has ever had.

Rothapfel's Answers to Exhibitors

Mr. Rothapfel Will Answer Here any Questions Regarding Problems in Exhibition. The Only Conditions Are That the Questions Must Not Bear on the Merits of Particular Pictures or Services and That They Must Come Through the NEWS. Address Your Inquiries "ROTHAPFEL ADVICE, EXHIBITORS' SERVICE BUREAU, MOTION PICTURE NEWS."

LXXV—Being about to erect a building for motion pictures on a plot 100 by 40 feet, I am desirous of getting some ideas about lighting effects for the purpose ot more realistic production of the picture. I am using a Gold Fibre screen, and I am pleased to say that I have yet to see any better projection than mine, but I am anxious to throw a little realism into the surroundings.

What price and style of organ would you put into a building of this size? Cost, of course, must be taken into consideration, as I am neither a millionaire or a philanthropist, but am putting up this building to make a living out of it. It is a good community district and I want to show some improvement on my last five years in a successful little house that the landlord would not renew the lease on after paying him $20,000 rent.

I have not had the pleasure of seeing the Rivoli or the Rialto, but I hope to in the near future. I have heard many favorable comments from those who have been more fortunate, and would like to adopt some of the lighting devices on a smaller scale and at a reasonable figure that would show my patrons that I am serious.—MANITOBA.

THE architect who designed the Rialto and Rivoli theatres is Mr. Thomas W. Lamb, 644 Eighth avenue, New York City. I would suggest that you get in touch with him. I cannot, of course, go into detail and give you such information as you desire. As to the style and price of the organ, that is another thing that I cannot advise you on. It would seem to me that a good organ of a moderate size and price will answer your needs very nicely.

Naturally, of course, when you put up a building you do it to make a living out of it, as you state, and if you have been successful for the past five years in a smaller house there isn't any question in my mind of your being comparatively just as successful in a larger theatre, if you will apply the same principles, and it will give you a greater scope.

I would advise you to come to New York or any other first class city that has theatres of a pretentious size and conduct and study them carefully. A trip of this kind will be a good investment for you and you should bring back with you some good ideas.

LXXVI—Will you give me some enlightenment on what you think that I should do relative to music, which is at present my biggest worry and thought. My house is located only seven blocks from the two biggest downtown houses and, while mine is a neighborhood house, it is also in one sense a neighborhood house, located within walking distance. So far I have "got by" and am doing a fairly good business with only a piano, but I am a peculiar sort of a "beast," and ot the firm belief that I can do more, that I am not quite getting my share. But, as I only seat 350, I am in doubt as to what I should do and stay within my means. You can easily understand that I cannot afford a large orchestra nor a pipe organ, and I do not know about the mechanical instruments.—J. M. M.

MY advice to you is this: Don't increase your music at all, but rather make your pianist better and give him or her much finer surroundings. For instance, get a nice grand piano, put the cover up, place a few palms about the pianist and a few blue lights at the base of this pedestal so that they will reflect upwards. If the pianist is a lady have her dressed in white, and if a gentleman he should wear evening clothes. A grand piano is very effective accompaniment for any picture and I think that you will notice a very great improvement.

I happen to know your theatre very well. I remember it from my early days, and I see no reason why you should not make a great success out of it with the little hints I am giving you.

It isn't always the theatre with a large seating capacity that makes a success. If your theatre is located within walking distance of the neighborhood the people, while taking a walk, will stop there for a rest if you will make it nice and comfy, and it will become a general habit with them. Good projection, aided by a cleverly handled piano will help to patronize your theatre and make it known as a haven of rest. It is much easier to run a house like yours than a big house, and I know you will be successful if you will do as I tell you.

LXXVII—I have read a great deal about creating atmosphere about the theatre. I think that I understand what it means, but I must admit that I do not know to create an atmosphere around my house. I am located in a Southern city of 10,000. One-third of these are negroes, and, as they are not admitted to my house, they may be ignored. Of the rest ninety per cent are working people or members of their families. Most of them get good wages and can afford to patronize my theatre.

While I have a modern house, seating 600, I realize that I am doing little more than to show the pictures as they come to me. I have a piano and I think that the player goes ahead with whatever occurs to him. I am not getting the amount of patronage that I ought to get, and it occurs to me that there should be something done to appeal more to these people, but I don't know what it is. I realize that this is a very hazy question.

I am now running only a feature and a comedy and a serial once a week. At one time I found that the people wanted all sort sof action, but now I find that they appreciate the better class of pictures, and that gives me all the more reason to think that "atmosphere" is what I need.—J. J. L.

WELL, you are perfectly frank, anyway, in telling me exactly what your condition is. That is greatly in your favor. Now, my friend, I want to tell you something. If you don't know how to create atmosphere get some one in your employ who does. It isn't necessary to spend a lot of money to create atmosphere in a theatre.

I still maintain that the most ordinary barn with four plain walls could have more refinement and atmosphere than the most scrupulous theatre if you know how to do it. The very fact that you have a good pianist and you let him do as he pleases is a good starting point for you.

Go away and sit down by yourself in a quiet corner of the theatre, look around and study it and see if you cannot improve it in some way—probably change the lights; get a better pianist if this one is not good enough; watch your projection and your screen; change the decorations (they must not be elaborate), and arrange it as nice and comfortable as you would your home, and above all things have the place perfectly clean.

Get to know the people by their names and that alone will make them feel at home. For instance, how would you feel when you come into a restaurant and the waiter greets you and says, "How do you do, Mr. So and So?" gives you a nice smile and places a napkin before you? You would feel comfrotable and at home, wouldn't you? Well, apply these same methods in your theatre and I am sure you will be surprised at the results.

Judging from the last part of your question it seems that your audience is advancing more rapidly than you, and they are now clamoring for something better which you will have to give them or else lose them altogether. This is a strange thing, but they are tired of the so-called "punch," and what they want is pictures with good taste, refinement, and, above all things, comedy. The call for comedy in the market to-day is deplorable. You will note that the class of films most exhibitors book are those that they have been booking for years, never realizing that there might be changes.

It came to my notice that a great many exhibitors throughout the country have turned down the Artcraft picture, "Blue Bird." (The reason I put this in parenthesis is because I want to make a point of it.) In my opinion, any motion picture exhibitor who turns down "The Blue Bird" without giving it a chance in his theatre is a fit subject for examination.

If the exhibitor should even lose money on this picture it would pay him more profit in the good will of his community, and he will have done his share for the motion picture industry that will be of greater benefit than the amount of dollars taken in at his boxowcee, and, above all things, he will be surprised at the results if he handles this picture properly. It will increase his receipts many times. I want to go on record as having said that (even in New York with our iron-clad policy of not presenting the same pictures more than once), I am going to run 'The Blue Bird" next year, and I am going to do better business than I did this year. It is the most artistic picture ever produced since the inception of the industry, and one that will "get" every one.

I again implore you to take inventory of yourself and go to it. If, as you say, you do not know how, get some one in your employ who does. It will be a great investment for you.

Goldwyn Official Points to Splendid Advertising Work by Western Exhibitors

By F. B. Warren

Vice-President Goldwyn Distributing Corporation

(Mr. Warren has just returned from a trip to the West where he found that motion pictures are prospering because of the growth of those sections, largely due to war activities and the excellent methods of exploitation being used. His estimates of advertising work are interesting.)

I FOUND, of course, that exhibitors from Omaha westward had escaped the rigors of our eastern fuel situation during the early months of the present year. They had escaped our severe winter weather and the ice and snow. They did not suffer as the East did, and now that spring has opened up business is at flood tide.

In Los Angeles J. A. Quinn, Grauman's, Mr. Kehrlein's Kinema, Tally's Broadway, the two Clune houses and Miller's two theatres are all doing record business and already there is in contemplation by outside interests another big first run house as pretentious and splendid as the Grauman. Miller is building another theatre that will be ready in the summer months and J. A. Quinn has taken under long time lease the theatre adjoining his successful Rialto, where he will open another house. Work on this is already under way. Los Angeles exhibitors have risen to the realization of the growing importance of music in the presentation of pictures, and much of the drawing power of their houses is attributable to their excellent orchestras.

It is my belief that the tremendous and well-conceived motion picture advertising employed by Los Angeles exhibitors is the vital element that keeps the population of that city so well keyed up to attendance at the theatres. The newspaper exploitation is tremendous, and the major portion of it is conceived and prepared by a special local organization, which shows great originality and sales power in its retailing of pictures to the public. There are at least eight large users of newspaper advertising space, and the copy published is extremely effective.

Personally, I should rate Seattle exhibitor advertising as being the most effective sales copy in the United States. It has an atmosphere and value all its own and it fits its community like a glove. Los Angeles I should rate as second in advertising efficiency in America, with Cleveland third and Toledo fourth. Exhibitor advertising in most of the larger cities of the East lacks distinction, individuality and selling power, and I believe that an improvement in Eastern exhibitor advertising would increase patronage twenty per cent, at least.

For The "Movie" Fans

—Pictures Showing Tonight—

GEM
PICTURES CHANGED DAILY
8th and Washington

SEQUOIA
GOOD ONES TONIGHT
25th and Telegraph

NEW PIEDMONT
"WHEN A MAN SEES RED"
Linda and Piedmont Ave.

GLOBE
PICTURES
CHANGED DAILY
23rd Ave. and E. 14th St.

CROWN
GOOD ONES
Broadway at Seventh

IMPERIAL "ALWAYS GOOD"
Tenth St. and Broadway

CIRCLE
"SOME GOOD ONES"
35th Ave. and E. 14th St.

FRUITVALE
SOME GOOD PICTURES
Fruitvale Ave. and E. 14th St.

You'll Enjoy These Pictures—See Them Tonight!

Waste advertising—directory from Oakland, Cal., Inquirer in which only one theatre gives the bill

In San Francisco, Turner & Dahnken's Tivoli is enjoying its usual tremendous patronage and Eugene Roth's California, a wonderful new house, has been tremendously successful from its opening day, without in any way lessening the popularity of his long-established Portola, next door to the new million dollar house. Messrs. Sheehan and Lourie are doing splendidly with their Rialto and Mr. Sheehan's flair for excellent promotion and advertising has given him a distinctive place in San Francisco.

Baxter Watches Audiences

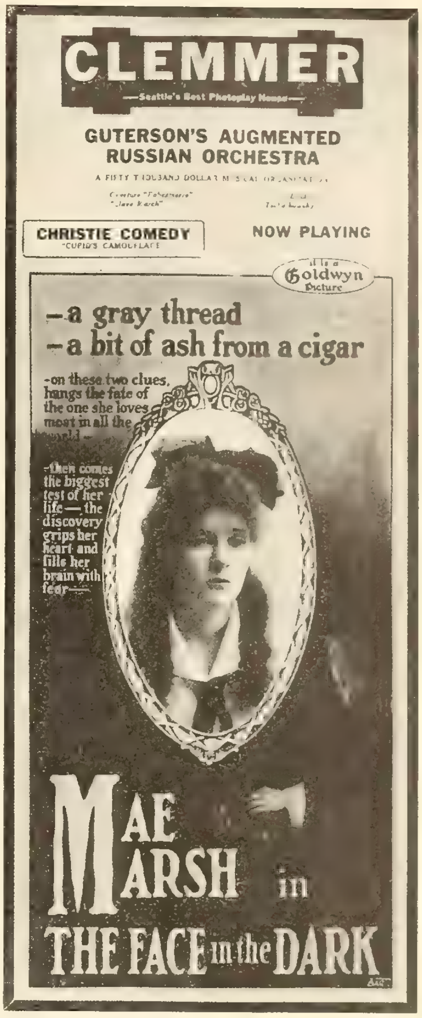
In Denver, Samuel L. Baxter, of the Isis, one of the pioneer Colorado exhibitors, has had a remarkable winter for patronage and his spring business is now at flood tide. Mr. Baxter is one of the outstanding figures of his region, a splendid showman who never deserts his house from its morning opening until its midnight closing. He watches his audiences more closely than any exhibitor I have ever seen, and in this lies the secret of his success. Mr. Ellison of the Rialto and Princess theatres feels that patronage was never better assured in Denver than at the present time and Mr. Talbot, of the America, the other big, new house of the town, says his patronage is at its high water mark at this moment.

It will be good news to his many friends among both exhibitors and producers in the East that Jim Clemmer, owner of the Clemmer theatre, Seattle, has come back on the high tide of success. His musical program, which is inseparably linked with his picture showmanship, was the finest thing I heard west of Chicago. Guterson's remarkable orchestra is the best musical organization of Seattle, and Guterson, who used to be at Rector's (now the Claridge) New York, is merely Guterson in Seattle, as you would speak of Caruso or Melba. To him Mr. Clemmer attributes much of the credit for the present splendid success of the Clemmer theatre. Messrs. Jensen and Von Herberg, with houses in both Butte and Portland, have four excellent theatres in Seattle, all of them with big seating capacity, and are playing to enormous patronage.

Cooperation in Seattle

A remarkable example of newspaper cooperation is furnished by the Seattle Times, through its owner, Joseph and Clarence Blethen, and their able picture editor, George H. Bellman. I believe that the Seattle Times gives the exhibitor better co-operation than any other newspaper in the United States. Next to it I would rank the Los Angeles Evening Herald under the direction of Guy Price.

Some day the rank and file of exhibitors will learn that inefficient local newspaper exploitation is the weakest spot in the amusement mechanism, and by correcting this will enlarge their gross patronage anywhere from fifteen to thirty per cent.



CLEMMER
—Seattle's Best Photoplay House—

GUTERSON'S AUGMENTED RUSSIAN ORCHESTRA

A FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLAR MUSICAL ORGANIZATION

CHRISTIE COMEDY
"CUPID'S CAMOUFLAGE"

NOW PLAYING

It's a Goldwyn Picture

—a gray thread
—a bit of ash from a cigar

—on these two clues, hangs the fate of the one she loves most in all the world—

—then comes the biggest test of her life—the discovery grips her heart and fills her brain with fear—

MAE MARSH in THE FACE in the DARK

Four column advertisement, of Clemmer theatre, Seattle, and one of the sort that Mr. Warren commends

Beyond question at this moment the country from Omaha west is on the boom. In the latter city A. H. Blank is about to open his big new Sixteenth Street theatre of great seating capacity. Much to my surprise, war conditions are not holding up the construction of new theatres.

Universal Prepares Special Advertising Service

Hereafter all Universal Special Features and Bluebird releases are to have special advertising prepared for them, according to announcement just made by President Carl Laemmle, of Universal. Several display advertisements, in one and two-column widths, will be designed for each picture, with space left for the insertion of the name of the theatre, prices and other matter desired by the local manager.

President Laemmle believes that this service will result in increased receipts in getting good advertising instead of mediocre. He also wants to cure the habit of a small minority of exhibitors in picking out the salacious in every picture for the publicity appeal. At first the service will be in mat form, but if the demand from smaller towns is sufficient an electro service will be added.

Seeing the Rialto and the Rivoli with Rothapfel

RIALTO is this week celebrating its second anniversary—but it is a whole lot more than that—it is the triumph of Samuel L. Rothapfel, and his contention of years that the motion picture can be put on the same plane with the legitimate, the opera or any form of amusement. New York has accepted the Rothapfel presentation as real art, and in these days no one has to seek the all-star cast of the Broadway production, the Shakespearean revival or the horseshoe at the Metropolitan to find the brains and ability of New York out for amusement. You will find more of them at the Rialto, and its sister, the Rivoli, than you will by combing the rest of Broadway.

In some theatres anniversaries stand out as great celebrations because the presentation has so many added features. Though a splendid show, the bill at the Rialto is no better than others have been for Rothapfel does not believe in waiting for special occasion to show his best. He puts forward his best with every week, and that is the reason that the public goes in thousands to these two houses, not attracted so much by any special feature or for any special occasion, but because they know that they will always be pleased at these two houses. And proof that nothing has been "saved" to make the anniversary bill stand out, the show at the Rivoli this week is equally as good, though not quite so elaborate.

The lesson to this is one that we have pointed out here time after time—that Rothapfel never quits working. He never puts into being one idea and then is content to sit back and glory in what he has done, but he is always thinking, working ahead with the next idea. And with the task of carrying two presentations each week with all of their detail, and keeping them different and still always up to the standard, there isn't much time to be spent in self-congratulation and in listening to the plaudits of the crowd.

"Aida" is the overture at the Rialto, and it is probably the greatest thing of its kind that has ever been presented on any stage; and we say that will be the full weighing of words. We believe, after all that the only fair basis of criticism is the effect upon the audience. If there were any long-haired men and short-haired women of the soft that cry "brava" from the galleries at the opera they were in the minority of human beings, but still the tide of applause that swept the throng could not be checked until the number was over, but time after time broke into the music.

First, are the opening selections played by the orchestra alone, with the whole house bathed in red, and then the curtains of the stage and the display panels at the side part revealing in the center dome, and the interior of a cathedral with the huge lights hanging from the ceiling, and in this setting appeared a sextette composed of leading singers who appear as soloists at the two theatres. On either side in the display panels was carried out the portico effect leading from the building, these being softly lighted in red with bluish tinge. Here the full chorus of the theatre was arranged. Dr. Reisenfeld was never abler in his conducting than when we saw the show and the deafening, continuous, persistent applause is a tribute to his work, and the settings that are given him to make the effect possible.

The anniversary flavor is given the bill at the opening with a Gaumont picture showing a birthday cake with two candles, and then a picture of a little girl also two years old. This is shown to the Rialto march which continues through Universal pictures of the Twenty-seventh Division at Spartanburg, reproducing many scenes in actual warfare. When pictures of the officers are shown the music changes to "Give My Regards to Broadway," and with further scenes the music became "Yankee Doodle," which continues through Universal pictures of John Purroy Mitchel speaking for the Liberty Loan in California. Pictures of blessing the colors at Camp Upton has "Daughter of the American Revolution" counterpointed with the national anthem, the organ being used for some of the effects.

Educational then supplies some of the most wonderful pictures ever seen in the new Italian hydroplane, and its races through the water in which it literally rises into the air in its mad flight. They bring repeated applause from the audience. A galop, together with the effect of the running motor, is the music employed. Universal follows with pictures of acrobats of the army at Camp Logan, shown to "Million Heroes" march, and then come Gaumont pictures of the new tank, "America," with "Master Builders" march. From the same source come pictures of the British tank at Washington and its inspection by the President, for which "Diplomats March" is used as third selection from the same weekly, are most realistic pictures of Lieut. Flacharie flying at the capital.

Now comes the big punch of the weekly. Gaumont shows for a moment a picture of Uncle Sam pointing at the audience with the command, "You Buy Bonds," and then Hearst-Pathe shows Secretary of War Baker on his return from France, and there follows a Universal cartoon showing Liberty Bonds bridging the way to Europe and victory. Through these numbers the inspiring notes of "The Battle Cry of Freedom" add to the effect and keep the audience in one tumult of applause.

Using the same central setting as in the overture number, Miss Jeanne Gordon sings "A Memory" most effectively, all the lighting being in red and giving the soft effect of the past.

Educational supplies a splendid double scenic in "Logging in Italy" and "Here and There in Venice." The logging shots are really wonderful, and show some thrilling escapes, while the Venetian pictures are unusually beautiful, starting out with the Rialto bridge, which is so well known from its use in the theatre's advertising. The scene at the end of the Venice picture, showing night over the waters, with their wonderful colors, simply amaze the audiences with their beauty.

Carlos Mejia and Riccardo Bonnelli then sing the dit from "The Pearl Fishers," and then follows the feature, William S. Hart in "The Tiger Man," a tensely interesting picture.

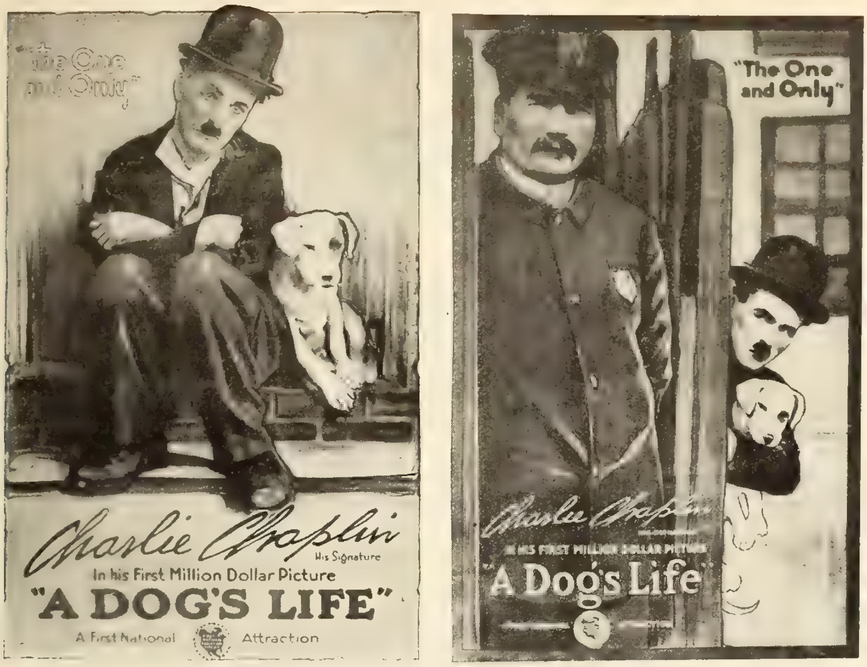
The fourth musical number is supplied with "Traumerei" which is sung by the Rialto chorus seated on the steps. "Saucy Madeline" is the very funny Mack Sennett comedy, and the catchy music with it puts a big broad smile on the face of all as they walk out.

"Phedre" is the overture at the Rivoli this week. All the lighting is red except the inner dome, which is in gold, and immediately following this comes the Rivoli Animated, which is rather short because of the length of the rest of the bill, but at the same time one of the "punchiest." It opens with beautiful Pathe pictures of "Bursting Buds," a triumph in color photography, and this is shown with "Language of the Flowers." Educational then supplies pictures of the Carrara marble quarries, for which "Cleopatra" is used, and then from the same source there follows one of the most beautiful pictures that has ever been shown, of the Milan Cathedral. The audience applauds scene after scene. The music is Kameno Ostro.

Gaumont presents some unusually fine shots of marching sailors in pictures of Secretary Daniels' visit to the Great Lakes naval station, "Jack Tar" march is used and then come Universal pictures of training horses at Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg. The appeal of these pictures is shown in the fact that so prosaic a thing as a supply train gets a big hand. A one step is used. The punch comes at the very end with the pictures of Secretary Baker and then a Pathe cartoon on the Liberty Loan. Just as Baker appears there are bugle and drum calls and then the music turns into "Over There" and continues to the end.

It is rarely that Rothapfel repeats anything, but there has been such a demand to hear Miss Gladys Rice sing "I Hear You Calling Me" that the number is included in the bill this week, but it is put on so differently that it is novel. The curtain parts showing the young woman in a robe of white seated on a marble bench at the left of the stage. There is a special stage setting of what might be called the art noveau, tall trees in green with the red of the sunlights breaking through the center. All the rest of the lighting of the house is in blue. As is always the case at the Rivoli the soloists begin singing as the curtains part and she remains seated until almost the very end

(Continued on page 2673)



Two of the artistic and striking one sheets issued on "A Dog's Life"

Striking Advertising Aids Are Supplied on the First Chaplin Picture

FIRST National Exhibitors' Circuit has set a new mark for the exploitation in the paper, service matter and publicity suggestions prepared on the first of the million dollar Chaplin pictures, "A Dog's Life." It was anticipated that this comedy would be featured above the five-reeler on most programs and provisions have been made for ample material.

In the first place there has been issued a large four-page press sheet covering all sorts of notices on the picture and illustrating the advertising aids that are supplied. These include cuts from two column down to thumb nail sizes and two styles of borders for displays, one consisting of heads of the star and the other of running dogs of all sizes and descriptions.

In addition to this there is a four-page folder with space on the front cover for the imprint of the theatre. This folder is called "The Story of Chaplin's Life" and is made in cartoon form by R. M. Brinkerhoff, the well known cartoonist. It gives the essential facts in a way that brings a laugh with them.

However, it is the poster matter that attracts especial attention. We have reproduced two of the one sheets and in addition there is a six sheet showing Chaplin standing out in the cold with the dog curled up at his feet. In addition there is a twenty-four sheet, the first of its size to ever be issued on a Chaplin production at any stage in his career.

This Week at the Strand

STRAND THEATRE has no comedy this week for the feature itself, Madge Kennedy in "The Danger Game" is so screamingly funny that any other comedy could give but secondary laughs. Rarely have we seen an audience enjoy a feature more, for it was a succession of laughs when we witnessed it Sunday. In the place of the comedy there are the first of the splendid Outing-Chester travel pictures and "Whispering Wires of War."

Selections from "Faust" form the overture. These are played before the mountain and lake drop, and then comes the scenic, "Kaieteur, the Perfect Cataract." The audiences are thrilled with the perils that the explorer must undergo in getting to the scene and with magnificence at the views that are presented and which well pay for all the trouble that the photographer had in the pleasure that his work will give the public.

Strand Topical opens with Hearst-Pathe pictures of the opening ball games of the Yanks and the Giants, and then is knitted cleverly in with H-P pictures of bomb throwers in training at Spartanburg. The same source furnished pictures of blessing the flags at Camp Upton, Paramount-Bray supplies banking for the sailors, and then come Screen Telegram pictures of the visit of the Jap fleet to San Diego.

Educational-Ditmars pictures get a big laugh with scenes showing the savagery of the wild horse and his attacks on a dummy figure. The expressions on the animal's face are almost human, and his actions keep the audiences roaring. Hearst-Pathe then presents Secretary Baker on his return, and then come Screen Telegram pictures of soldiers at Delmar, Cal., marching, and then comes the big punch for the Liberty Loan. Hearst-Pathe shows the parade at Erie, Pa., the celebration on the Peary flagship, and the Seattle parade, and then Screen Telegram pictures of John Purroy Mitchell speaking in California are used. To the tunes of "Yankee Doodle" and "Dixie" there comes the final appeal with a Paramount-Bray cartoon showing the Kaiser and the German parrot, and then the eagle which kicks the parrot and puts the thing on the run.

Miss Helen Scholder, 'cellist, then plays "Polonaise de Concert" and the feature follows. The second musical number is "Duet Nile," from "Aida," sung by Roa Lind and Ralph Errolle, before the beautoful setting showing a desert scene with the pyramids and a caravan passing in the background.

"Whispering Wires of War" from Pathe forms the final number. This picture shows the uses of the telephone at the front and its actual employment during battle.

Rialto and Rivoli

(Continued from page 2672)

when she rises for the final bars. Organ and violins predominate in the music through it. It is a remarkably effective piece of work.

Italian official war pictures end with this week's instalment and these are probably the most wonderful of all, showing scenes in an actual battle from the very start to corrals of Austrian prisoners at the end. The special music score which Mr. Rothapfel provided adds much to the enjoyment and stirs still further the enthusiasm of the audience.

There is a second effective vocal number with Greek Evans and the Rivoli male chorus singing "Danny Deever." The setting shows the rampart of a fort at night and the singers are all in uniform. The lighting is all blue. Bugle calls from behind the stage add to the charm of the number.

Then comes the rollicking feature, Douglas Fairbanks in "Mr. Fix It." There is so much comedy in this that it would be folly to add another comedy at the end, and so, for one of the few times in the arrangements of presentations at the Rialto and the Rivoli the bill comes to an end there. It is a bill that might be called a thing of beauty throughout. One is not impressed by particular numbers but it left to feel that everything has been so good as to leave nothing more to be asked.

And so this week's Rothapfel record bill at the Rialto, in keeping with the wonderful two years that it has had, and another one at the Rivoli that is filled for that real "Triumph of the Motion Picture."

The bill at the Rialto this week is dedicated to Mr. Adolph Zukor, "in appreciation of the earnest efforts to advance the standard of motion pictures and the cordial co-operation he has given the institution during the past year."

Effective use of the Christy Liberty Loan posters as a stage setting at Shea's Hippodrome.

Milwaukee Papers Are "Newsless" So Far As Motion Pictures Are Concerned

(Continued from page 2664)

vertising, a start for a paper that wanted to do things. We all have to start at the co-operation game and the Wisconsin has a chance to get off if it will show its willingness to meet the theatres half way.

The Free Press carries a single inch advertisement of the Alhambra and no news matter, and then advertises itself as "Largest Morning Circulation in Milwaukee—and Growing." It would grow a lot faster if it would give the great motion picture public what it wants.

Now we come back to the week-day showing of the Journal and the Morning and Evening Sentinel.

Now here is a point that we want to impress upon you. The Milwaukee leading theatres show a willingness to advertise during the week and they get relatively more then than at any other time. The Morning and Evening Sentinel carry the same advertising and they start off the week with practically four full columns of advertising and devote about a column of space to reviews of the shows. We have reproduced the Monday page from the Evening Sentinel. The morning edition also carries a two-column heading for the motion picture matter, but this is not news, merely reading notices.

The Journal has practically the same advertising on Monday, and carries reviews of the productions under single-column heading with black face lines for the different theatres.

On Tuesdays the ads drop off about a column, all reducing in size, and then on Wednesday and Thursday they come back again. To show that the Milwaukee theatres are not afraid to spend money advertising the change in bill we print a Thursday page from the Journal. The two Sentinels carry the same, and in addition the Evening Sentinel gives a two-column layout on the stars in the pictures for the last half of the week. All three of these papers repeat their reading notices.

Friday the ads again drop off a column and they are low on Saturday. This is a good sign. The Milwaukee theatres are not following the "card" system, but are shifting their space to get the most good out of the changes in bills and the logical days.

With the exception of Mondays and Thursdays the Journal appears to give no reading notices during the week. The Morning and Evening Sentinel carry daily brief summaries of the attractions at the various houses.

Such is the rank situation in Milwaukee. Certainly the Butterfly, Alhambra, Princess, Toy, Merrill, Strand and Downer show their willingness to advertise. They spend twenty times the money than all the other amusements do and still get the short end of the game. It is decidedly discouraging to say the least.

With the exception of the column of news matter in the Sunday Sentinel that we have mentioned there is not really one line of motion picture NEWS printed in any Milwaukee paper so far as we have been able to see.

Certainly motion pictures are paying three of the papers well and we can very well believe, that even considering the overcrowded newspaper field that the others could get more if they would show a willingness to do more.

We haven't the slightest doubt that if either the Sentinel or the Journal hired a photoplay editor, devoted a couple of pages to motion picture NEWS and then went at the work systematically of getting advertising that it would have the greatest share of them. Certainly the fact that seventeen of the neighborhood houses practically use blank space in the Journal shows that they are at least aware of the theory of advertising even if they are getting nothing for their money.

Not a line of news as we have said. And we'll wager that the people of Milwaukee are just as anxious to read matter about motion picture stars, interesting stories, short paragraphs with plenty of pictures—as they are anywhere else. And without butting into Milwaukee newspaper competition we would be willing to guess that the paper that does start in and run a real photoplay department will find the opposition greatly lessened and sooner or later practically disappearing.

Heavings! What a chance for a paper to show what it can do.

Two Buffalo Exhibitors Show Splendid Ways to Aid in Liberty Loan

BUFFALO exhibitors are doing their part in aiding the Liberty Loan and the two members of the Advisory Board, Harold B. Franklin, manager of Shea's Hippodrome, and Edward L. Hyman, manager of the Victoria.

Mr. Franklin, who is noted for his splendid stage settings, used a particularly effective one. It is a reproduction of the Howard Chandler Christy poster which has been so familiar in the campaign, but it was set up in a number of pieces to give the proper effect and with the lighting employed it was very striking.

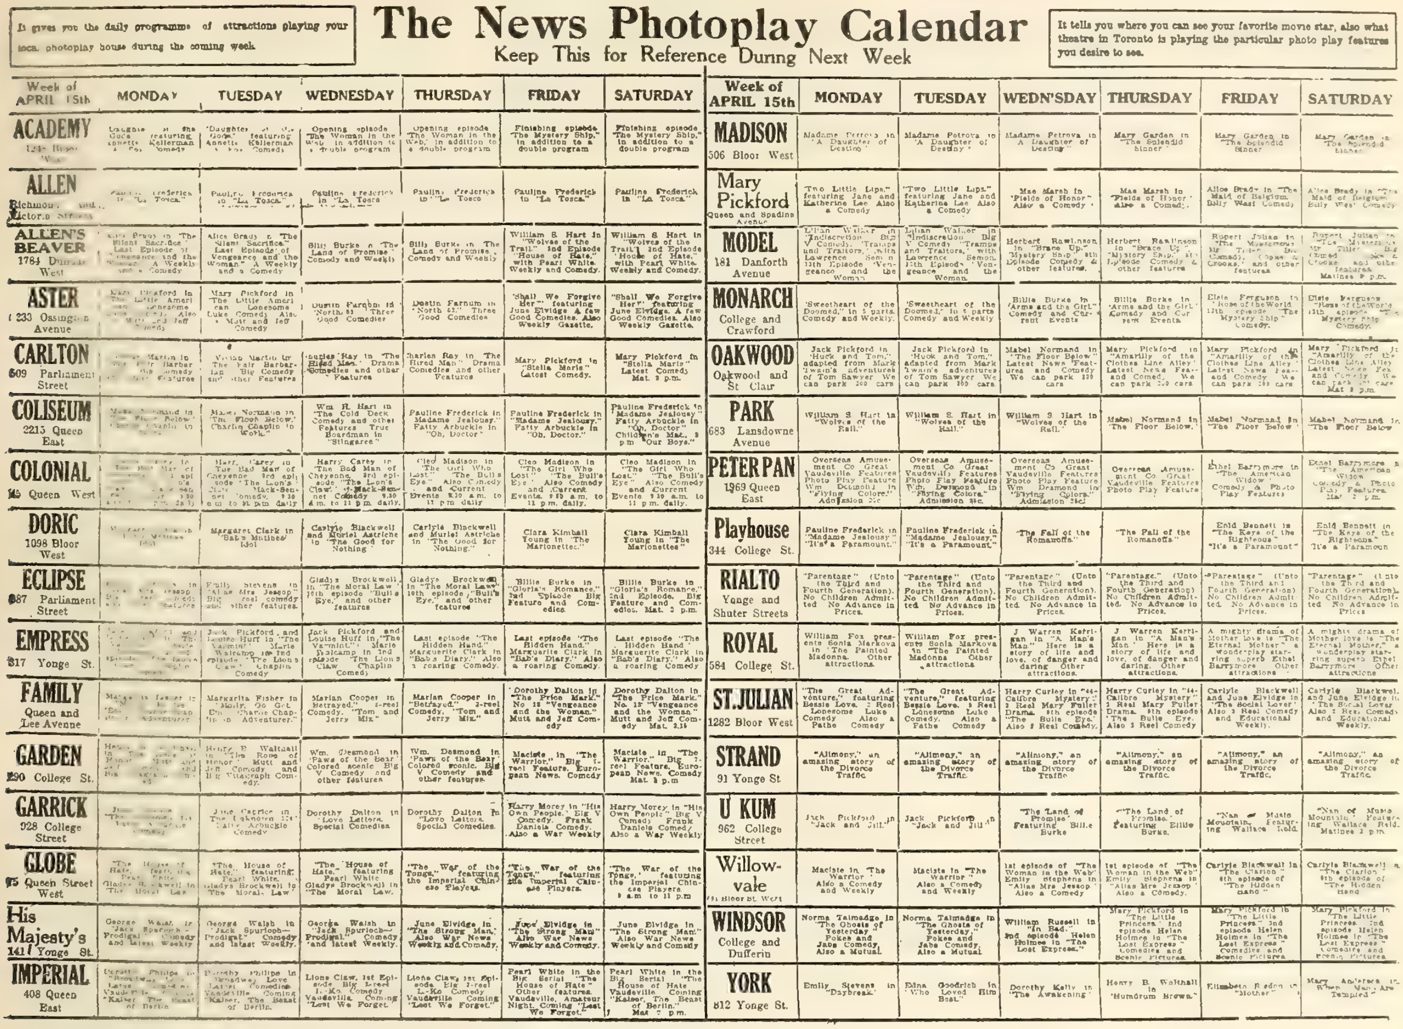
Mr. Hyman turned over his whole program to boosting the bonds. The first page, which is reproduced here, declared that the big drive was on, led by Mary Pickford, and the comment on each one of the inside pages made some reference to the Liberty Loan. For instance in the comment on "Madame Jealousy," the programs say: "The kaiser was insanely jealous" and then goes on to link the picture with the loan.

Here are two effective ways of helping the government. We would like to know what other exhibitors have done. There are probably other Liberty Loans still to come and exhibitors who have employed good ideas with success owe it not only to their fellow exhibitors, but to the nation as a whole to let others have the benefit of their experience.

Relics to Aid Exploits of War Pictures

Manager W. W. Kofeld of Pathe's Minneapolis exchange has prepared a novel aid for exhibitors use in putting over the Pathe war pictures in the shape of relics from the European battlefields.

The collection now includes: French helmets, German helmets, English gas mask containers, French gas masks and gas mask containers, k5 pieces of shrapnel shell, a Red Cross arm band, 75-centimeter shell, French mess kits, German hand grenades, German bayonets, French canteens (empty ones), German machine gun cartridges, French Alpine Chasseur's bonnet, German identification tag, and a piece of a German aeroplane.



It gives you the daily programme of attractions playing your local photoplay house during the coming week.

The News Photoplay Calendar

Keep This for Reference During Next Week

It tells you where you can see your favorite movie star, also what theatre in Toronto is playing the particular photo play features you desire to see.

Week of APRIL 15th	MONDAY	TUESDAY	WEDNESDAY	THURSDAY	FRIDAY	SATURDAY
ACADEMY [illegible] Bloor West	"Daughter of the Gods" featuring Annette Kellerman A Fox Comedy	"Daughter of the Gods" featuring Annette Kellerman A Fox Comedy	Opening episode "The Woman in the Web," in addition to a double program	Opening episode "The Woman in the Web," in addition to a double program	Finishing episode "The Mystery Ship," in addition to a double program	Finishing episode "The Mystery Ship," in addition to a double program
ALLEN Richmond and Victoria Streets	Pauline Frederick in "La Tosca."	Pauline Frederick in "La Tosca."	Pauline Frederick in "La Tosca"	Pauline Frederick in "La Tosca"	Pauline Frederick in "La Tosca."	Pauline Frederick in "La Tosca."
ALLEN'S BEAVER 1784 Dundas West	Alice Brady in "The Silent Sacrifice." Last Episode of Vengeance and the Woman. A Weekly and a Comedy	Alice Brady in "The Silent Sacrifice." Last Episode of Vengeance and the Woman." A Weekly and a Comedy	Billy Burke in "The Land of Promise." Comedy and Weekly	Billy Burke in "The Land of Promise." Comedy and Weekly	William S. Hart in "Wolves of the Trail." 2nd Episode "House of Hate," with Pearl White. Weekly and Comedy.	William S. Hart in "Wolves of the Trail." 2nd Episode "House of Hate," with Pearl White. Weekly and Comedy.
ASTER 233 Ossington Avenue	Mary Pickford in "The Little American" Lonesome Luke Comedy. Also a Mutt and Jeff Comedy	Mary Pickford in "The Little American" Lonesome Luke Comedy. Also a Mutt and Jeff Comedy	Dustin Farnum in "North 63." Three Good Comedies	Dustin Farnum in "North 63." Three Good Comedies	"Shall We Forgive Her?" featuring June Elvidge. A few Good Comedies. Also Weekly Gazette.	"Shall We Forgive Her?" featuring June Elvidge. A few Good Comedies. Also Weekly Gazette.
CARLTON 609 Parliament Street	Vivian Martin in "The Fair Barbarian" Big Comedy and other Features	Vivian Martin in "The Fair Barbarian" Big Comedy and other Features	Charles Ray in "The Hired Man." Drama Comedies and other Features	Charles Ray in "The Hired Man." Drama Comedies and other Features	Mary Pickford in "Stella Maris." Latest Comedy.	Mary Pickford in "Stella Maris." Latest Comedy. Mat. 2 p.m.
COLISEUM 2215 Queen East	Mabel Normand in "The Floor Below." Charlie Chaplin in "Work."	Mabel Normand in "The Floor Below." Charlie Chaplin in "Work."	Wm. S. Hart in "The Cold Deck" Comedy and other Features. True Boardman in "Stingaree"	Pauline Frederick in "Madame Jealousy." Fatty Arbuckle in "Oh, Doctor."	Pauline Frederick in "Madame Jealousy." Fatty Arbuckle in "Oh, Doctor."	Pauline Frederick in "Madame Jealousy." Fatty Arbuckle in "Oh, Doctor." Children's Mat. 2 p.m. "Our Boys."
COLONIAL 145 Queen West	Harry Carey in "The Bad Man of Cheyenne" 3rd episode "The Lion's Claw." Mack-Sennet Comedy. 9.30 a.m. to 11 p.m. daily	Harry Carey in "The Bad Man of Cheyenne" 3rd episode "The Lion's Claw." Mack-Sennet Comedy. 9.30 a.m. to 11 p.m. daily	Harry Carey in "The Bad Man of Cheyenne," 3rd episode "The Lion's Claw." Mack-Sennet Comedy. 9.30 a.m. to 11 p.m. daily.	Cleo Madison in "The Girl Who Lost." "The Bull's Eye." Also Comedy and Current Events. 9.30 a.m. to 11 p.m. daily	Cleo Madison in "The Girl Who Lost." "The Bull's Eye." Also Comedy and Current Events. 9.30 a.m. to 11 p.m. daily.	Cleo Madison in "The Girl Who Lost." "The Bull's Eye." Also Comedy and Current Events. 9.30 a.m. to 11 p.m. daily.
DORIC 1098 Bloor West	Margaret Clark in "Bab's Matinee Idol"	Margaret Clark in "Bab's Matinee Idol"	Carlyle Blackwell and Muriel Astriche in "The Good for Nothing."	Carlyle Blackwell and Muriel Astriche in "The Good for Nothing."	Clara Kimball Young in "The Marionettes."	Clara Kimball Young in "The Marionettes."
ECLIPSE 687 Parliament Street	Emily Stevens in "Alias Mrs. Jessop" Big reel comedy and other features	Emily Stevens in "Alias Mrs. Jessop" Big reel comedy and other features.	Gladys Brockwell in "The Moral Law." 10th episode "Bull's Eye," and other features	Gladys Brockwell in "The Moral Law." 10th episode "Bull's Eye," and other features	Billie Burke in "Gloria's Romance." 2nd Episode. Big Feature and Comedies.	Billie Burke in "Gloria's Romance." 2nd Episode. Big Feature and Comedies. Mat. 2 p.m.
EMPRESS 317 Yonge St.	Jack Pickford and Louise Huff in "The Varmint" Marie Walcamp in 3rd episode "The Lion's Claw" Chaplin Comedy	Jack Pickford and Louise Huff in "The Varmint." Marie Walcamp in 3nd episode "The Lion's Claw" Chaplin Comedy	Jack Pickford and Louise Huff in "The Varmint." Marie Walcamp in 3nd episode "The Lion's Claw" Chaplin Comedy	Last episode "The Hidden Hand." Marguerite Clark in "Bab's Diary." Also a roaring Comedy.	Last episode "The Hidden Hand." Marguerite Clark in "Bab's Diary." Also a roaring Comedy.	Last episode "The Hidden Hand." Marguerite Clark in "Bab's Diary." Also a roaring Comedy
FAMILY Queen and Lee Avenue	Margarita Fisher in "Molly, Go Get 'Em" Charlie Chaplin in "The Adventurer"	Margarita Fisher in "Molly, Go Get 'Em" Charlie Chaplin in "The Adventurer."	Marian Cooper in "Betrayed." 2-reel Comedy. "Tom and Jerry Mix."	Marian Cooper in "Betrayed." 2-reel Comedy. "Tom and Jerry Mix."	Dorothy Dalton in "The Price Mark." No. 12 "Vengeance and the Woman." Mutt and Jeff Comedy	Dorothy Dalton in "The Price Mark." No. 12 "Vengeance and the Woman." Mutt and Jeff Comedy. Mat. 2.15
GARDEN 290 College St.	Henry B. Walthall in "The Rose of Honor" Mutt and Jeff Comedy and Big Vitagraph Comedy	Henry B. Walthall in "The Rose of Honor." Mutt and Jeff Comedy and Big Vitagraph Comedy.	Wm. Desmond in "Paws of the Bear." Colored scenic. Big V Comedy and other features	Wm. Desmond in "Paws of the Bear." Colored scenic. Big V Comedy and other features.	Maciste in "The Warrior." Big 7-reel Feature. European News. Comedy	Maciste in "The Warrior." Big 7-reel Feature. European News. Comedy Mat. 2 p.m.
GARRICK 928 College Street	June Caprice in "The Unknown 274" Fatty Arbuckle Comedy	June Caprice in "The Unknown 274" Fatty Arbuckle Comedy	Dorothy Dalton in "Love Letters." Special Comedies	Dorothy Dalton in "Love Letters." Special Comedies.	Harry Morey in "His Own People." Big V Comedy. Frank Daniels Comedy. Also a War Weekly	Harry Morey in "His Own People." Big V Comedy. Frank Daniels Comedy. Also a War Weekly
GLOBE 75 Queen Street West	"The House of Hate," featuring Pearl White. Gladys Brockwell in "The Moral Law"	"The House of Hate," featuring Pearl White. Gladys Brockwell in "The Moral Law."	"The House of Hate," featuring Pearl White. Gladys Brockwell in "The Moral Law."	"The War of the Tongs," featuring the Imperial Chinese Players.	"The War of the Tongs," featuring the Imperial Chinese Players.	"The War of the Tongs," featuring the Imperial Chinese Players. 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.
His Majesty's 1411 Yonge St.	George Walsh in "Jack Spurlock—Prodigal" Comedy and latest Weekly	George Walsh in "Jack Spurlock—Prodigal" Comedy and latest Weekly.	George Walsh in "Jack Spurlock—Prodigal." Comedy and latest Weekly.	June Elvidge in "The Strong Man." Also War News Weekly and Comedy.	June Elvidge in "The Strong Man." Also War News Weekly and Comedy.	June Elvidge in "The Strong Man." Also War News Weekly and Comedy
IMPERIAL 408 Queen East	Dorothy Phillips in "Broadway Love" Latest Comedies Vaudeville. Coming "Kaiser, The Beast of Berlin."	Dorothy Phillips in "Broadway Love" Latest Comedies Vaudeville. Coming "Kaiser, The Beast of Berlin."	Lions Claw, 1st Episode. Big 2-reel L-Ko Comedy Vaudeville. Coming "Lest We Forget."	Lions Claw, 1st Episode. Big 2-reel L-Ko Comedy Vaudeville. Coming "Lest We Forget."	Pearl White in the Big Serial "The House of Hate." Other features. Vaudeville. Amateur Night. Coming "Lest We Forget."	Pearl White in the Big Serial "The House of Hate." Vaudeville. Coming "Kaiser, The Beast of Berlin." Mat. 2 p.m.

Week of APRIL 15th	MONDAY	TUESDAY	WEDN'SDAY	THURSDAY	FRIDAY	SATURDAY
MADISON 506 Bloor West	Madame Petrova in "A Daughter of Destiny."	Madame Petrova in "A Daughter of Destiny."	Madame Petrova in "A Daughter of Destiny."	Mary Garden in "The Splendid Sinner."	Mary Garden in "The Splendid Sinner."	Mary Garden in "The Splendid Sinner."
Mary Pickford Queen and Spadina Avenue	"Two Little Imps," featuring Jane and Katherine Lee. Also a Comedy	"Two Little Imps," featuring Jane and Katherine Lee. Also a Comedy	Mae Marsh in "Fields of Honor." Also a Comedy.	Mae Marsh in "Fields of Honor." Also a Comedy.	Alice Brady in "The Maid of Belgium." Billy West Comedy	Alice Brady in "The Maid of Belgium." Billy West Comedy
MODEL 181 Danforth Avenue	Lillian Walker in "Indiscretion." Big V Comedy, "Tramps and Traitors," with Lawrence Semon. 11th Episode "Vengeance and the Woman."	Lillian Walker in "Indiscretion." Big V Comedy "Tramps and Traitors," with Lawrence Semon. 11th Episode "Vengeance and the Woman."	Herbert Rawlinson in "Brace Up." "Mystery Ship" 8th Episode. Comedy & other features.	Herbert Rawlinson in "Brace Up." "Mystery Ship," 8th Episode. Comedy & other features	Rupert Julian in "The Mysterious Mr. Tiller." Big V Comedy, "Cops & Crooks," and other features	Rupert Julian in "The Mysterious Mr. Tiller." Big V Comedy, "Cops & Crooks," and other features. Matinee 2 p.m.
MONARCH College and Crawford	"Sweetheart of the Doomed," in 5 parts. Comedy and Weekly.	"Sweetheart of the Doomed," in 5 parts. Comedy and Weekly	Billie Burke in "Arms and the Girl." Comedy and Current Events	Billie Burke in "Arms and the Girl." Comedy and Current Events	Elsie Ferguson in "Rose of the World." 11th episode "The Mystery Ship." Comedy.	Elsie Ferguson in "Rose of the World." 11th episode "The Mystery Ship." Comedy.
OAKWOOD Oakwood and St. Clair	Jack Pickford in "Huck and Tom," adapted from Mark Twain's adventures of Tom Sawyer. We can park 200 cars	Jack Pickford in "Huck and Tom," adapted from Mark Twain's adventures of Tom Sawyer. We can park 300 cars.	Mabel Normand in "The Floor Below." Latest News Features and Comedy. We can park 300 cars	Mary Pickford in "Amarilly of the Clothes Line Alley." Latest News Features and Comedy. We can park 200 cars	Mary Pickford in "Amarilly of the Clothes Line Alley." Latest News Features and Comedy. We can park 200 cars.	Mary Pickford in "Amarilly of the Clothes Line Alley." Latest News Features and Comedy. We can park [illegible] cars. Mat. 2 p.m.
PARK 683 Lansdowne Avenue	William S. Hart in "Wolves of the Rail."	William S. Hart in "Wolves of the Rail."	William S. Hart in "Wolves of the Rail."	Mabel Normand in "The Floor Below."	Mabel Normand in "The Floor Below."	Mabel Normand in "The Floor Below."
PETER PAN 1969 Queen East	Overseas Amusement Co. Great Vaudeville Features. Photo Play Feature Wm. Desmond in "Flying Colors." Admission 25c	Overseas Amusement Co. Great Vaudeville Features. Photo Play Feature Wm. Desmond in "Flying Colors." Admission 25c.	Overseas Amusement Co. Great Vaudeville Features. Photo Play Feature Wm. Desmond in "Flying Colors." Admission 25c.	Overseas Amusement Co. Great Vaudeville Features. Photo Play Feature	Ethel Barrymore in "The American Widow." Comedy & Photo Play Features	Ethel Barrymore in "The American Widow." Comedy & Photo Play Features. Mat. 2 p.m.
Playhouse 344 College St.	Pauline Frederick in "Madame Jealousy." "It's a Paramount."	Pauline Frederick in "Madame Jealousy." "It's a Paramount."	"The Fall of the Romanoffs."	"The Fall of the Romanoffs."	Enid Bennett in "The Keys of the Righteous." "It's a Paramount."	Enid Bennett in "The Keys of the Righteous." "It's a Paramount."
RIALTO Yonge and Shuter Streets	"Parentage." (Unto the Third and Fourth Generation). No Children Admitted. No Advance in Prices.	"Parentage." (Unto the Third and Fourth Generation). No Children Admitted. No Advance in Prices.	"Parentage." (Unto the Third and Fourth Generation). No Children Admitted. No Advance in Prices.	"Parentage." (Unto the Third and Fourth Generation). No Children Admitted. No Advance in Prices.	"Parentage." (Unto the Third and Fourth Generation). No Children Admitted. No Advance in Prices.	"Parentage." (Unto the Third and Fourth Generation). No Children Admitted. No Advance in Prices.
ROYAL 584 College St.	William Fox presents Sonia Markova in "The Painted Madonna." Other attractions.	William Fox presents Sonia Markova in "The Painted Madonna." Other attractions.	J. Warren Kerrigan in "A Man's Man." Here is a story of life and love, of danger and daring. Other attractions.	J. Warren Kerrigan in "A Man's Man." Here is a story of life and love, of danger and daring. Other attractions.	A mighty drama of Mother love is "The Eternal Mother," a wonderplay starring superb Ethel Barrymore. Other attractions.	A mighty drama of Mother love is "The Eternal Mother," a wonderplay starring superb Ethel Barrymore. Other attractions.
ST. JULIAN 1282 Bloor West	"The Great Adventure," featuring Bessie Love. 2 Reel Lonesome Luke Comedy. Also a Pathe Comedy	"The Great Adventure," featuring Bessie Love. 2 Reel Lonesome Luke Comedy. Also a Pathe Comedy	Harry Carey in "44-Calibre Mystery." 2 Reel Mary Fuller Drama. 8th episode "The Bull's Eye." Also 2 Reel Comedy.	Harry Carey in "44-Calibre Mystery." 2 Reel Mary Fuller Drama. 8th episode "The Bull's Eye." Also 2 Reel Comedy	Carlyle Blackwell and June Elvidge in "The Social Lover." Also 2 Reel Comedy and Educational Weekly.	Carlyle Blackwell and June Elvidge in "The Social Lover." Also 2 Reel Comedy and Educational Weekly.
STRAND 91 Yonge St	"Alimony," an amazing story of the Divorce Traffic.	"Alimony," an amazing story of the Divorce Traffic.	"Alimony," an amazing story of the Divorce Traffic.	"Alimony," an amazing story of the Divorce Traffic.	"Alimony," an amazing story of the Divorce Traffic.	"Alimony," an amazing story of the Divorce Traffic.
U KUM 962 College Street	Jack Pickford in "Jack and Jill."	Jack Pickford in "Jack and Jill."	"The Land of Promise." Featuring Billie Burke	"The Land of Promise." Featuring Billie Burke.	"Nan of Music Mountain." Featuring Wallace Reid.	"Nan of Music Mountain." Featuring Wallace Reid. Matinee 2 p.m.
Willowvale [illegible] Bloor St. West	Maciste in "The Warrior." Also a Comedy and Weekly	Maciste in "The Warrior." Also a Comedy and Weekly	1st episode of "The Woman in the Web." Emily Stephens in "Alias Mrs. Jessop." Also a Comedy	1st episode of "The Woman in the Web." Emily Stephens in "Alias Mrs. Jessop." Also a Comedy.	Carlyle Blackwell in "The Clarion." 8th episode of "The Hidden Hand."	Carlyle Blackwell in "The Clarion." 8th episode of "The Hidden Hand."
WINDSOR College and Dufferin	Norma Talmadge in "The Ghosts of Yesterday." Pokes and Jabs Comedy. Also a Mutual.	Norma Talmadge in "The Ghosts of Yesterday." Pokes and Jabs Comedy. Also a Mutual.	William Russell in "In Bad." 2nd episode Helen Holmes in "The Lost Express."	Mary Pickford in "The Little Princess." 2nd episode Helen Holmes in "The Lost Express." Comedies and Scenic Pictures.	Mary Pickford in "The Little Princess." 2nd episode Helen Holmes in "The Lost Express." Comedies and Scenic Pictures.	Mary Pickford in "The Little Princess." 2nd episode Helen Holmes in "The Lost Express." Comedies and Scenic Pictures.
YORK 812 Yonge St.	Emily Stevens in "Daybreak."	Edna Goodrich in "Who Loved Him Best."	Dorothy Kelly in "The Awakening."	Henry B. Walthall in "Humdrum Brown."	Elizabeth Risdon in "Mother."	Mary Anderson in "When Men Are Tempted."

Photoplay calendar giving attractions for the week which is published every Saturday in the Toronto Daily News

Toronto Newspaper Uses "Calendar" to Give Bill for the Week at Theatres

AN adaptation of the "chart" idea of giving the motion picture attractions at the various local theatres has been adopted by the Toronto Daily News and this is being published in that paper each Saturday, there being no Sunday issue.

For some time several of the American papers, including the Philadelphia Public Ledger, the New Orleans Item and several of the Baltimore papers, have been publishing a "chart" weekly giving the attractions for the week, day by day, at each theatre that advertises. The Toronto paper varies from this plan by making a charge to each theatre for publishing its bill in this form. It is not only a revenue producer, but it ought to prove an excellent circulation stimulant.

Here is a plan that would help every neighborhood theatre and the smaller houses. Call this plan to the attention of your newspaper, for the newspapers won't see it unless you show it to them, and suggest that they can make a feature out of this. Of course it will help other houses as well as yours, but you will get your share out of it and if you have stirred your paper to do more for the industry you have accomplished a great deal.

It is the advertising problem of the smaller house that is the more important to be considered. The big house can afford to experiment and to spend money, but the little fellow has to make it pay. Here is a chance that will work in any city where there are as many as twenty theatres and it's worth while for you and the others to get your paper to try it.

Fox Fills Need with Artistic "Stills"

Fox Film Corporation is fulfilling a long felt need in the way of "still" photographs and portraits of the stars which are being furnished for newspaper reproduction. Many exhibitors have complained that most of these furnished by other companies lack action and that they fail to give any inkling of what the picture is about.

Alfred Cheney Johnson, who is now doing this work for Fox, is regarded as one of the foremost men in his profession, and it was at the suggestion of Charles Dana Gibson that he became a photographer. He holds that "simplicity, tone and composition" are the three requisites.

PRESERVE IT

Your Good Ideas Are Worth Recording for You and Your Fellows

WE feel sure that the photographs printed in these pages of lobby displays, stage settings and various accomplishments are of great interest to other exhibitors. When you do something original or unusual, why not record it not only for future satisfaction, but also for the benefit of other exhibitors? In other words, call in a photographer and get its picture taken. The expense will be small and it will be well worth the amount spent. Then send the picture and the story along to us and we will be very glad to print both of them.

Remember that when you do anything for the other exhibitors you are strengthening the industry and helping yourself.

Ready Made Ad-Talks

Ella Hall in Bluebird Production, "A Mother's Secret"—Timely Drama

(Bluebird Five-Reel Production)

Lois Zellner has written a story titled "A Mother's Secret." Doris Shroeder has made the adaptation for reproduction on the screen and Universal has produced it under the direction of Douglass Gerrard, with Ella Hall in the featured role of Angelea. In the supporting cast with Miss Hall are seen Mary Mersch, T. C. Crittenden, Mrs. L. C. Harris, Emory Johnson and Grace McLean. "A Mother's Secret" is a Bluebird, the latest in which Miss Hall is seen on the screen. Angelea is the daughter of Lady Eldone, wife of a captain in the British army. When war breaks out she enlists her services in the Red Cross. Angelea is seventeen years of age and has begun to wonder why her mother doesn't show concern about her every-day life. Captain Eldone is killed in battle and Lady Eldone decides that America is the proper place for a dashing young widow of her type. Before her husband was killed he had told her of a new type of siege gun. An orderly had heard the captain tell his wife of the plans. Lady Eldone goes to Newport without announcing her plans to her daughter. Angelea reads of her mother's departure for America and decides to give her a surprise. She goes to Newport and slips in during a reception at which her mother intended to captivate Howard Gray, considered a good catch, and Angelea nearly upsets her plans. Howard Gray is one of the two people who are seeking the plans for the siege guns. Captain Eldone, who had been reported dead, suddenly turns up and all of Lady Eldone's plans for social conquest are shattered. Angelea makes the catch of Gray.

Ella Hall in the Bluebird production, "A Mother's Secret," at the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week.

Baby Marie Osborne in "Dolly Does Her Bit"—Charming Vehicle for Child Actress

(Pathe Five-Reel Production)

Baby Marie Osborne's latest picture, "Dolly Does Her Bit," is a charming piece of dramatic work by the little star of the screen. The picture was produced by the Diando Film Corporation for release on the Pathe program, under the direction of William Bertram. Lucey Sarver wrote the story. Alice Saunders and Louis Hahn are in chief support of the child actress. This is one of the most delightful exhibitions ever given by this litle star before the camera. She has a story which gives her an opportunity to be her real self and at the same time to demonstrate that she is possessed of real dramatic ability. She has the role of Dolly, who lives with her aunt, a seamstress. A wealthy society woman brings a mechanical doll, as large as Dolly, to Dolly's mother, to be dressed appropriately for the Red Cross Bazaar. After the doll is dressed it is left in charge of Dolly. Her playmates come to see Dolly and kidnap the doll. While they are playing with the mechanical doll, a runaway horse dashes into their midst and breaks off the head of the doll. Dolly realizes that she must return the doll in some fashion and decides that the only way the trick can be turned is by her dressing in a similar fashion to the doll and present herself as Dolly, the mechanical doll. She is taken to the home of the wealthy woman, where she astonishes the woman's beautiful daughter by her lifelike actions. Dolly is finally bought by the society woman.. She is taken to the woman's home and that night surfinally bought by the society woman. She is taken to the robber's home, but escapes and notifies the police, who arrest the entire gang.

Baby Marie Osborne in the crowning achievement of her career before the camera, "Dolly Does Her Bit," at the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week.

"The Busy Inn," Russian Art Film Released by Pathe—Russian Drama

(Pathe Release—Five Reels)

"The Busy Inn" is the latest offering by Pathe of the Russian Art Pictures. Madame Nadya Lesienko, N. I. Panoff, Madame Orlova and N. A. Backsheff are seen in the principal roles. It is adapted from the stage play by Alexander Ostrovsky. It is one of the best subjects yet shown on these Russian Art Film subjects and presents the above-named Russian actors and actresses in strong dramatic roles. It tells a story of gripping intensity and gives an insight into the life of the Russian people before the Russian Revolution. Ostrovsky is considered by many the greatest of the Russian dramatists. The theme of this particular work of his is based on incidents and characteristics of the middle class of Russians. The author, as a lawyer, obtained first-hand information on the scheming of the middle class inn keepers to defraud their patrons. Bessnye, the proprietor of the inn referred to in the picture, is dissatisfied with the profits extorted from his numerous patrons and follows the craft of a professional highwayman at night. His wife Eugenia adds to the funds obtained in this unscrupulous way by ingratiating herself with the patrons. Eugenia persuades her husband to force Anna, his younger sister, to entertain the guests. Prince Myloff is among the guests who frequent Bessnye's place. Eugenia poisons the mind of the Prince with untrue stories about Anna. Anna cannot understand the sudden change in the manner of the Prince toward her. He admits his love for her is dead, but he will not assign a reason for his change of mind. But the truth will out and Anna has her turn at fortune. She wins the Prince.

See "The Busy Inn" at the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week.

READY-MADE AD-TALKS PUBLISHED IN LAST WEEK'S ISSUE

April 27, 1918.

FEATURES

TITLE OF PLAY	PRODUCER
"The Bride of Fear"	Fox	5 reels
"The Purple Lily"	World	5 reels
"Who Killed Walton?"	Triangle	5 reels
"Life or Honor"	Ivan	7 reels
"The Face in the Dark"	Goldwyn	6 reels
"Twenty-One"	Pathe	5 reels
"The Law of the Great Northwest"	Triangle	5 reels
"His Majesty, Burker Bean"	Paramount	5 reels
"Rich Man, Poor Man"	Paramount	5 reels
"Over the Top"	Vitagraph Special	9 reels
"The Rebellion"	General	2 reels
"Social Hypocrites"	Metro	5 reels
"The Rubaiyat of the Scotch Highball"	General (O. Henry)	2 reels
"Mountain Law"	General (Blue Ridge Drama)	2 reels

Alice Joyce in Screen Version of Chambers' "The Business of Life"—Best Yet

(Vitagraph Five-Reel Production)

Alice Joyce, assisted by a strong cast of Vitagraph players, gives to the screen version of Robert W. Chambers' story, "The Business of Life," a certain something that stands out with all the force of the resultant of the combination of powerful dramatic acting and Mr. Chambers' ideas of romantic creation. The picture was produced by Vitagraph under the direction of Tom Terriss. In the supporting cast with Miss Joyce are seen Betty Blythe, who has an important part in Vitagraph's special production "Over the Top," with Sergeant Guy Empy featured; Walter McGrail, Percy Standing, Mrs. Nellie Spaulding, Templar Saxe and Herbert Pattee. Miss Joyce has never been seen in a screen drama which shows to such good advantage her capabilities as a screen star. She is the shining light throughout the run of this picture and Mr. Chambers has furnished her with a story that fits her to a tee. She has the role of Jacqueline Nevers, daughter of a collector of antiques. Her father dies and she is left in charge of the business. James Desboro, a man about town, has a large collection of ancient armor which he asks Jacqueline to catalog. She spends several days at his palatial home doing the work and during the time she becomes attached to Desboro and he to her. Elena Clydesdale, wife of Desboro's friend, is infatuated with Desboro and she does everything in her power to discourage him from becoming too intimate with Jacqueline, but all to no avail. At a party given by Desboro, it is suggested that lots be drawn and the girl drawing the given number should conceal somewhere in the house and the man who finds her should become her husband. To Jacqueline falls the given number. She conceals herself in one of the ancient suits of armor and gives Desboro the secret of her hiding place. True to the bargain, they are married.

Alice Joyce in a screen version of a Chambers novel, "The Business of Life," at the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week.

Howard Hickman in "Blue Blood," Story of Sins of Heredity and Dissipation

(Goldwyn Release—Six Reels)

Howard Hickman, whose work before the camera has pleased millions, is the featured player in a Goldwyn late release, "Blue Blood," written by J. Grubb Alexander, one of the best writers for the screen. The production is in six reels and was produced by Selexart under the direction of Eliot Howe and photographed by Carl Widen. In the supporting cast with Mr. Hickman are seen George Fisher, Mary Mersch, Nona Thomas and Ida Lewis. The theme of "Blue Blood" deals with the sins of heredity, the crime of worshipping blue blood or the so-called aristocracy. Mr. Hickman has the role of Spencer Wellington, a "blue blood" who is afflicted with an incurable disease brought on by dissipation. His physician, Dr. Rand, discovers his ailment after an outburst at a dinner party. Grace Valiant, a girl of fortune, is advised by her aristocratic mother to marry Spencer. Dr. Rand is in love with Grace and tries to persuade her from marrying Spencer, knowing what such a match will mean. The girl follows the dictates of her mother and she and Spencer are married. Dr. Rand does not disclose the fact that Spencer is afflicted with an incurable disease because he is powerless to do so. Spencer threatens Dr. Rand with ruin if he violates professional confidence by informing Grace. A child is born of the marriage but dies shortly after birth. In order to keep the fact from the young wife a baby is secured and the young mother is led to believe that her baby is alive and well. The union proves disastrous as Dr. Rand prophesied. The husband neglects his young wife for pleasure. Grace is placed under the surveillance of a nurse. She eludes the nurse and in wandering over the grounds of the estate falls over an embankment. Her mind is restored. Spencer dies a victim of the dread disease. Grace and Dr. Rand are united.

At the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week, "Blue Blood," with Howard Hickman.

Bushman and Bayne in "Neatness and Dispatch"—Gentleman Crook on the Job

(Metro Five-Reel Production)

"With Neatness and Dispatch" is the latest Metro production presenting Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in the leading roles. The production is in five reels and was produced under the direction of William S. Davis, supervised by Maxwell Karger. The story was written by Kenneth S. Davis and adapted to the screen by June Mathis and Luther A. Reed. The story ran in the Saturday Evening Post. In the supporting cast are seen Frank Currier, Walter Miller, Hugh Jeffrey, Sylvia Arnold, Ricca Allen, Adella Barker, John Charles Charles, Arthur Housman and Sidney D'Albrook. Geraldine and Mary Ames live with their Aunt Letitia on her large estate, which she calls Eden because no man is allowed within its boundaries excepting the chauffeur and the man-of-all-work. These are the only two men on the estate and the only two allowed within its limits. On the quiet, Mary has been seeing a young civil engineer (Walter Miller) and everything runs smoothly until Aunt Letitia discovers a note sent by him to Mary asking her to elope with him to South America. The man and the man-of-all-work are discovered making love and the man is "fired." Geraldine (Beverly Bayne) is sent to the city to find a new man. She decides to make use of the opportunity to help her sister carry out the plans for her elopement with the civil engineer. She goes to her old friend the commissioner of police and tells him that she wants a reformed crook for a special job. Paul Donaldson, the commissioner's nephew, overhears the strange request and asks to be assigned to the job. He meets Geraldine and falls in love with her. He assumes the responsibilities of Aunt Letitia's man-of-all-work under the name of "Slim" Keegan, a notorious crook. How does Paul make possible the elopement of Mary?

See "With Neatness and Dispatch," with Bushman and Bayne, at the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week.

"The Blindness of Divorce"—Picturization of Problem Eternal, Divorce

(Fox Six-Reel Production)

Adapted from the celebrated stage success, "The Blindness of Divorce," which ran for 300 nights in New York, twelve months in London and one year in Paris, the screen version of this play is a picture that every patron of the ——— theatre should see when it comes to this theatre on ——— of ——— week. It is a William Fox production under the direction of Frank Lloyd and one of the Fox Standard variety. Mr. Lloyd made the adaptation and directed the production. You will remember Mr. Lloyd for his creation of the Fox productions "Les Miserables," with William Farnum; "The Tale of Two Cities" and "When a Man Sees Red." In the cast of players which presents this drama before the camera are seen Charles Clary, Rhea Mitchell, Nancy Caswell, Bertram Grassby, Marcus Robbins, Willard Louis, Fred Church and Al Fremont. The evils of the divorce question are laid bare by this powerful, appealing drama whose theme deals with a most timely subject. John Langdon neglects his wife and child for his club. A cynic at the club denounces this action as cruelty and Langdon goes home to find his wife in the arms of Stanley Merrill, an old suitor. Innocent of any wrong, the young wife has been found in a compromising situation and she is unable to explain to her husband that Merrill had attempted to persuade her to elope with him and that she had spurned him only to be caught in his arms just as her husband entered. In an effort to make Merrill explain his actions, the young wife goes to his apartment where she is followed by the husband. A divorce follows, the husband being granted the care of the only child. Years later the daughter marries the District Attorney, Bruce Livingston. His political opponent is one White, a politician of low order. White meets his henchmen in a low resort run by one Claire, who is recognized as Langdon's former wife.

You will have to see this drama enacted on the screen to get the full purport of its meaning. At the ——— on ——— of ——— week.

“The Primitive Woman” Stars Margarita Fisher—Unique Plot

(American-Mutual—Five-Reel Production)

Pretty and frolicsome Margarita Fisher, one of the cleverest of comedy-drama pictorial stars, has a fast action part in “The Primitive Woman,” which will be the attraction at the ——— theatre on ———. This new play shows Miss Fisher at her best, which is in the role of a spoiled child, though the young star invariably manages to convey the impression that she is not beyond saving. Lloyd Ingraham, who directed the play, considers it one of the best in which Miss Fisher has ever appeared. The story is based on the idea that even a young old fogy of a college professor has to give up when he endeavors to match his wits against that scintillating product of the American finishing school whose type is so cleverly portrayed by Miss Fisher. Henry Albert Phillips is the author of the story. The plot involves the adventures of Nan Graythorpe, with whom Edward Burnham, a close friend of the family, is in love. The young woman displays small interest in the masculine sex until she encounters Professor Stephen Graves, engaged in anthropological research, whose indifference to what he terms modernism piques her. She determines at all events to interest him. Her dancing of “The Eskimo Fling” confirms the professor's first impression of Nan and he retires to his bungalow in the Catskills to write a treatise on primitive woman. Nan, learning of the professor's presence there, dons the ragged garb of a mountain girl and virtually compels the professor to woe her. Nan is found in the mountains by her brother, who demands an explanation. The girl succeeds in making him understand her avowed determination to punish the professor for his indifference. The hotel gossips talk of the professor's new girl and Nan helps the scandal along. Finally she goes to the cabin, along with the professor's mother, and there she is recognized and amends are made.

“The Primitive Woman,” an unusually photoplay, starring Margarita Fisher, at the ——— on ——— of ———week.

“I'm a Man,” Another Boy Story by Judge Brown

(General Two-Reel Production)

Another of those delightful Judge Brown boy stories, “I'm a Man,” will be shown at the ——— theatre on ———. This series of kid characterizations, told by a man who knows kids as few have ever learned to know them, has brought joy to the hearts of picture patrons in hundreds of towns, and “I'm a Man” is no exception to the general rule in its trueness to life—the wholesome, natural boy life with its joys and tragedies. A company quite up to the standard set in former productions of the series interprets the different characters, most of them juvenile. Frank Eisel, son of German-born American parents, is a high school boy. His father is a banker, who is desirous of having his daughter, Ruth, marry a Frenchman named DeCourcy, a director of the bank and wealthy. But Ruth admires and is admired by David Smith, a young bookkeeper in the bank. One day Frank notices a poster which reads “Beware of Spies,” and promptly suspects the Frenchman of being a spy. Events prove he is right, but DeCourcy forces Frank's father to keep silent and to continue to receive him into his home. Here he learns of Frank's wireless outfit and proceeds to use it secretly. Frank discovers his operations and, intercepting a message concerning the burning of some oil wells, saves the wells at the risk of his life. Dave Smith, now the accepted suitor of Ruth, is revealed as a member of the Secret Service by a badge which he is wearing. Thus Frank, now out of danger, knows that his father is no longer under suspicion, and the banker is also overwhelmed with joy, realizing that Smith knows he is a true American.

“I'm a Man,” a Judge Brown boy story, at the ——— on ———.

KEEP AHEAD

Almost Any Fellow Can Be Familiar with the Past

It doesn't take a successful exhibitor to know the good and bad pictures that he has already shown; but that doesn't do him a great deal of good.

What you want to know is about the pictures that you are going to show. These Ad Talks will get you familiar with them and give you the advance knowledge that you must have.

But you must do more than this and talk to your patrons through your newspapers, your house organ and in your personal meetings about the pictures that you are going to show. Here is the material on which to build the talks.

Clip them and use them now, or if you are to show these pictures in the future file them or index them for ready reference. It's worth while.

“Leap to Fame” Is Exciting—Carlyle Blackwell as the Hero

World—Five-Reel Production)

Two popular stars of the screen, Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley, ate coming on ——— to the ——— theatre in a strikingly entertaining picture, “Leap to Fame.” Moreover, the cast also includes Muriel Ostriche, one of the most delightful of motion picture ingenues. The story is by Raymond Schreck and Mr. Blackwell himself directed the production. Alec B. Francis, Frank Beamish, Philip Van Loan, Lionel Bellmore, William Bailey and Benny Nedell are among the others who lend their artistry. “Leap to Fame” is characterized as a story of today. An incident of the world war is employed, but it does not form the main motive power for the plot. There is also a most fascinating mystery, the solution of which gives every spectator a decided surprise. The story runs swiftly to a logical, but amazing conclusion and from start to finish it constitutes the very highest sort of screen entertainment. The roles portrayed by Mr. Blackwell and Miss Greeley fit them perfectly. As Charles Trevor, Blackwell plays the part of a young man recently graduated from college. He is inclined to travel rather fast, so his father, thinking to save the boy from himself, deprives him of his bank account and insists that he get busy at his chosen profession, journalism. Charlie gets a trial as a reporter on The Clarion and his first assignment takes him to court to cover the case of an alleged German spy. The prisoner makes a dash for liberty and Charlie, taking up the chase, follows a big grey limousine in which the fugitive has taken refuge, to the door of a big stone house. The fugitive and his companion, hitherto unseen by Charlie, enter the hall and, peering through the curtains, see a young girl rifling a desk. In a moment the two men seize the girl and try to wrest from her grasp a packet of papers. Hurling himself into the room, Charlie siezes the man whom he has been pursuing and proceeds to escort him and the girl back to the court. But this is only the beginning of the fascinating story of “Leap to Fame.” Excitement fairly piles up for the hero and heroine before the tale is finished.

“Leap to Fame” will be seen at the ——— on ———

“Society for Sale”—Typical Story of English Society

(Triangle Five-Reel Production)

Triangle has been hitting upon a series of delightful character roles for that clever and original actor, William Desmond. In “Society for Sale,” which comes to the ——— theatre on ———, his many-sided genius shines in a new kind of role, that of a good-natured, thriftless English society man. As his leading woman Gloria Swanson will be seen for the first time in a dramatic role. Miss Swanson is a former well-known screen comedy queen, having appeared in Triangle Keystone comedies for some time. The manner in which she has adapted her talents to the dramatic style of acting is said to be a revelation even to those who felt fully confident of the success of the venture. Other well-known members of the cast are Lillian West, Lillian Langdon, Herbert Pryor and Charles Dorian. The story of “Society for Sale” is quite unique. Phyllis Clyne is a humble manikin in a modiste's shop. An inheritance is left her and she casts about for a means of entering England's exclusive social circles. Meeting the Honorable William X at a social function in London, she learns that he is in precarious pecuniary circumstances. She also learns that he is a scion of one of Brittain's most exclusive titled families. So she offers to give him a generous share of her inheritance if he will introduce her to society as his fiancee. Billy falls for the scheme and also falls in love with the girl. Then Phyllis meets Lord Sheldon, a dissolute, characterless, dangerous man of the world. Despite Billy's warnings she persists in meeting Sheldon and finally runs away with him. At length Sheldon is killed in a motor accident and Phyllis finds out who he was. That's the interesting point. Who was he? And how does all this strange story turn out?

“Society for Sale” is the attraction at the ——— theatre on ———.

Hayakawa Does Brilliant Work in “The White Man's Law”

(Paramount—Five-Reel Production)

When “The White Man's Law” is shown on the screen of the ——— theatre on ———, patrons of that popular theatre will have the opportunity of seeing in the leading role one of the most artistic actors in the silent drama. He is Sessue Hayakawa, famous Japanese star of Paramount pictures. Backed by a long record of brilliant achievements, this son of Nippon has a nation-wide following, won by artistic and painstaking endeavor. He is a deep student of art and literature and always acts with discrimination and good taste. In “The White Man's Law” he is provided with a splendid story, the work of Marion Fairfax and John Browne, the former having also prepared the scenario. James Young, one of the country's foremost directors, had charge of the filming of the production and the supporting cast contains several well-known screen players, among them Florence Vidor, Jack Holt, Herbert Standing, Maym Kelso, Forrest Seabury and Joseph Swickard. The scenes of “The White Man's Law” are laid in Sierra Leone, on the West Coast of Africa. The story has to do with Maida Verne, a young Soudanese girl, who is loved by John A. Ghengis, an Oxford graduate and the son of a curio dealer and ivory trader. Falling under the influence of Sir Harry Falkland, a disreputable Englishman, Maida narrowly escapes falling a victim to his wiles. Ghengis saves her, however, and brings Sir Harry to book for violating “the white man's law.” After a series of thrilling incidents the Englishman commits suicide just as his wife arrives from England, but through the generosity of Ghengis her husband's perfidy remains a secret and she is happy in the belief that he made good at last. In their mutual love Ghengis and Maida find happiness.

At the ——— theatre on ———, Sessue Hayakawa in “The White Man's Law.”

“Where the Sun Sets Red,” Two-Part Western Drama

(General ,Two-Reel Production)

Among the attractions at the ——— theatre on ——— is “Where the Sun Sets Red,” a short but exciting drama of Western life, with its cowboys, cattle rustlers and all the other necessary adjuncts. Eva Langford, a New York society girl, is in Paris at the outbreak of the war and becomes a Red Cross nurse. Young Jack Rand is one of the first to offer his services to his country. The first time he goes over the top he is wounded and taken to a base hospital, where Eva nurses him to convalescence. Without learning his nurse's name, Jack is honorably discharged and returns to America to recuperate. Being one of the most eligible bachelors in New York, he is much sought after and soon becomes engaged to Imogene Danforth, a young friend of his mother. Meanwhile Eva, who is seriously wounded by an explosion, while convalescing receives a letter from her friend, Imogene Danforth, to be a bridesmaid at her wedding, a photograph of Jack being enclosed. Eva returns to America, but decides to visit Kate Norton at her ranch in Colorado. Jack, tired of society, goes West to visit a college chum, who is foreman of the Norton ranch. There he meets Eva and is certain that she is his daily vision materialized. Imogene in the meantime realizes a mistake has been made and releases Jack from the engagement. One day Eva, while riding, loses her way and takes refuge in what proves to be a rendezvous of a band of cattle rustlers. The leader, Jim Dalton, discovers her. While Eva is fighting for her honor, Jack and his chum arrive with cowboys, and after a desperate battle rescues her. Jack is now free to tell Eva of his love and all ends happily.

At the ——— on ———, “Where the Sun Sets Red,” a drama of the West.

Live News from the Producers

Goldwyn Closes a British Deal

Oswald Stoll Gets Exclusive Rights to Company's Pictures in British Isles—Follows Closely Recent Australian Deal

THE biggest foreign alliance made by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation is announced to the effect that exclusive distribution of all Goldwyn productions for England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales will be under the name and direction of Oswald Stoll.

Negotiations with Mr. Stoll have been conducted by R. S. Edmonson, London representative of Goldwyn, and the arrival in Great Britain of the first eight Goldwyn productions is hailed by the British trade press and by the principal amusement journals of the empire as being an event of great significance.

The association of such an important name with the Goldwyn productions in the United Kingdom is cited by Goldwyn as another example of the world-wide confidence that has been established by Goldwyn through the medium of its quality productions. The Kinematograph, in telling of the arrival of these productions, says by way of editorial greeting: "These Goldwyn pictures are the most faultless and beautiful productions ever received in England."

In less than eight months from the date of its first American release Goldwyn has completed a world-wide organization, with representation in every part of the habitable globe with the exception of the Teutonic powers and their allies.

The British distribution will be made under the name of the Oswald Stoll Film Company, with offices throughout the United Kingdom. Film-renters have for months shown a remarkable interest in Goldwyn and the manner of its English distribution, and Mr. Edmondson reports that never during his long film experience abroad has he encountered so many inquiries.

In Australia Goldwyn Pictures are distributed by J. C. Williamson Films, Ltd.

F. W. Thring, Who Booked Goldwyn Films for Australia. Deals for England Were Closed Last Week

Fox Copies History in "Caillaux Case"

THE temporary withholding from release of William Fox's historical film-drama, "The Caillaux Case," to await publication of recent disclosures made by Bolo Pasha to the French Government, is announced as the most striking instances in screen history of a picture play following hard on the heels of current events.

The picture, apparently, was completed and was ready for the public. All the leading characters had been disposed of, not only in the play but in real life. Bolo Pasha had been condemned to death for treason. Joseph Caillaux, once Premier of France, had been imprisoned on a similar charge. Mme. Caillaux had been disgraced in the eyes of her countrymen. Every sensation in the principals' highly sensational careers had been recorded. It seemed that the whole story had been told. Then came Bolo's sudden revelations, which no promise to add new chapters, involve other prominent figures, and make the picture more far-reaching than was at first expected.

Commenting on the situation last week, Mr. Fox declared: "We have determined to give the story complete, not only as a bigger and better picture, but because we want it to be a patriotic warning to any who would put other interests before love of country. Fact is a hundred times more impressive than fiction, and here is a group of persons who astounded two continents with their attempts—and their tragic failure—to betray the Allies to the Germans."

Another Series of Broncho Billy Reissues

Essanay announces that it has met with such success in the first ten of its Broncho Billy reissues, released through the George Kleine System, that it has decided to follow them with another set of ten Broncho Billy pictures. The next series probably will start May 10, a week after the last release of the first ten.

Ovation for Wm. Farnum at Strand, Pasadena

What was to have been a privately managed theatrical scoop on the part of Jack Root, manager of the Strand theatre in Pasadena, Cal., last week, turned out to be a spontaneous public mass meeting in honor of William Farnum.

"Les Miserables" was the attraction at the house and Mr. Root had prevailed upon Farnum to come to the Strand where it was planned to present a large loving cup to the star. News of the presentation became noised about with the result that hundreds of Farnum admirers stormed the doors of the theatre in an effort to gain admission. Farnum made a speech—his first since going into pictures—and shook hands all around.

Timeliness of "The Tank" Increasing Daily

Pathe points out that the timeliness of its two-reel feature, "Our Fighting Ally—the Tank," is increasing daily with the arrival of late dispatches from the Western Front, especially now that word has come that American troops have been rushed to the support of the British forces in Flanders. Scenes in this feature show American troops undergoing training with the British tank, "Britannia," and learning how to take advantage of its tactical powers.

"M'liss" Evidences Mary Pickford's Versatility

When Mary Pickford's admirers see her in "M'liss," her newest Artcraft picture, they will recognize as never before, it is said, the versatility with which she is blessed. This quality was demonstrated to a degree in "Stella Maris" and "Amarilly of Clothes-Line Alley," but "M'liss" is pointed to as her crowning achievement. Bret Harte wrote the story, Frances Marion made it a picture and Marshall Neilan directed the production.

Yorke-Metro Cameraman Joins Colors

The Yorke-Metro Company, which produces the Harold Lockwood features for Metro, contributed another member of its staff to the service of Uncle Sam, when Benjamin Pietropaoli, assistant to Cameraman Antonio Gaudio, left Los Angeles, April 6, for a camp on Lake Ontario to join the Photographic Division of the Signal Corps.

Pietropaoli is the eleventh member of the Yorke-Metro Company to enter some branch of military service since the United States entered the war.

An Unusual Array of Talent Which Counts for Much In William Fox Productions. They Are Virginia Pearson, Whose Newest Feature Is "The Firebrand"; Frank Lloyd, Director; Peggy Hyland, In "Peg of the Pirates," and June Caprice, In "Blue-Eyed Mary"

Christie Forms Distribution Connection

Through the medium of a page advertisement in this issue of Motion Picture News, the Christie Film Company, of Los Angeles, announces that arrangements have been made with the First National Exhibitors' Exchange, of New York, 509 Fifth avenue, to distribute Christie Comedies in New York State and Northern New Jersey. It is understood prints have already been shipped to New York from the Coast, and that the new operations become effective at once.

Three of the pictures included in this releasing arrangement are "Red Crossed," released April 15; "Here Comes the Groom," April 22, and "Somebody's Baby," April 29.

Dolores Cassinelli Comes Back to Screen

Dolores Cassinelli returns to the screen in "The Million Dollar Dollies," a Screen Classics picture, released by Metro, in which the Dolly sisters are starred. The play is called a romantic phantasy and was written and directed by Leonce Perret. Miss Cassinelli has been off the screen for some time, having retired to take up concert work.

Bert Lytell Emphatically Objects When Harold Lockwood Tries to Carry Off Viola Dana. All are Metro Stars

Fox Secures Zane Grey Novels

Will Picturize "Riders of the Purple Sage" and "The Rainbow Trail"—William Farnum to Star in Both

WILLIAM FOX has purchased the photoplay rights of two of Zane Grey's stories of romance and adventure, "Riders of the Purple Sage" and "The Rainbow Trail."

The picturizations will be William Farnum de luxe productions, and work on the first has already commenced at the Fox studios in Hollywood, Cal. The announcement from the Fox offices says that they will be filmed, for the chief part, in the picturesque regions of Arizona.

"To insure so nearly as possible the attainment of success in bringing the spirit of the novels to the screen," the announcement reads, "arrangements have been made for Mr. Grey himself to watch the transfer from type to celluloid. Zane Grey is already on his way to Los Angeles and upon his arrival, the large company of photoplayers headed by Mr. Farnum will leave with the star and the author for Arizona.

"Mr. Farnum and Mr. Grey are strong personal friends and they have collaborated on much of the detail of the forthcoming productions. Frank Lloyd, who has done such excellent work in every play he has directed, will be in charge. Mr. Farnum and Mr. Lloyd form one of the closest cooperative "teams" in photodramas today, and this relationship added to that existing between Zane Grey and the star, should assuredly result in two of the finest pictorial achievements of the year.

"The supporting cast for each subject will, of course, be selected with the utmost care. Among the striking scenes will be many in the Grand Canyon of Arizona and on the great desert wastes.

"'Riders of the Purple Sage' and 'The Rainbow Trail' are known intimately to millions of readers through publication in the Green Book magazine and in a number of newspapers, and on account of the exceptional popularity they have enjoyed in book form.

"'Riders of the Purple Safe" was published in 1912, and is a splendid romance of the old Utah, forty years ago, when Mormon authority ruled unquestioned in the land."

Blanche Sweet in New Garson Production

HARRY I. GARSON, under whose management Clara Kimball Young is filming Cynthia Stockley's "The Claw" at the Lasky Studios in Hollywood, Cal., has another production under full swing at D. W. Griffith's studio in "The Hushed Hour," which will be completed about May 1.

"The Hushed Hour" is a short story by Gertrude Brooks Hamilton which appeared not long ago in The Red Book and is said to be one of the most novel and dramatic tales written in recent years. Mr. Garson has selected a remarkably strong cast, including Blanche Sweet in the principal role. Miss Sweet is surrounded with such sterling artists as Wilfred Lucas, Milton Sills, Mary Anderson, Rosemary Theby, Gloria Hope, Lydia Knott, Winter Hall, Harry Northrup, and L. T. Steers. The production is being made under the direction of Edward Mortimer, recently associated with Maurice Tourneur. Charles Maigne, who has done many big things, wrote the scenario.

Mr. Garson has not decided just how the picture is to be marketed and this decision will not be reached until the completion of the picture. Mr. Garson is still a believer in the state rights proposition, looking at it from the angle of the state rights buyer, as he has had wide experience in purchasing state rights productions for exhibition purposes, in which he has been very successful. With two big companies working, his various Detroit interests, and his almost constant trips back and forth from California to his New York office in Aeolian Hall, Mr. Garson today is one of the busiest men in the film business.

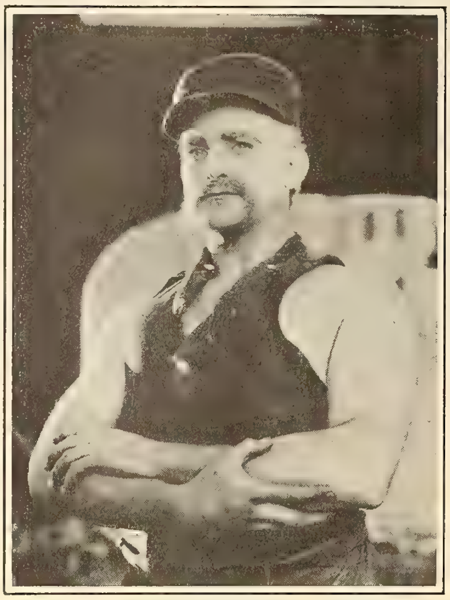
Novelization of "The Kaiser"

Marjorie Howard Completes 30,000-Word Story for Jewel Productions to Be Used as Publicity Accessory

TO the already long list of stunts, advertisements, posters, scarehead newspapers, heralds, lobby displays, etc., for "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," has been added a novelization in thirty thousand words, which probably makes it one of the most heavily munitioned features offered to the exhibitor in years. The advertising possibilities and angles of the Kaiser picture are said to be so many and varied, that the advertising and publicity departments of the Jewel, which purchased the Rupert Julian picture, had a wonderful opportunity. In the entire realm of photoplay possibilities there is no subject which is so notorious and so frequently on people's lips as that of the German Emperor—none about which there is such universal hatred and execration, and none about which curiosity can be more easily aroused.

It remained, however, for Georgia to ask for a thirty-thousand-word novel on "The Kaiser." In Georgia the American Defense Society and the Atlanta Constitution combined in sponsoring "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," in the belief that the patriotic spirit of the state would be deeply stirred by the presentation, spreading broadcast the message that the photoplay conveys.

This request came by telegraph, which stated that the Atlanta Constitution had agreed to run a four-page magazine supplement in the shape of a thirty-thousand word novelization of "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin." Jewel arranged with Miss Marjorie Howard, who with her sister, Kathleen Howard, and their mother, were in Belgium at the outbreak of the war, and who personally witnessed scenes similar to those which are pictured in the descent of the Hun hordes upon Louvain in Rupert Julian's masterpiece, to undertake this novelization.



Elmo Lincoln, the Brawny Blacksmith In Jewel's "The Kaiser"

Miss Howard had previously seen "The Kaiser," and had on her own volition sent a letter to Mr. Laemmle commending the accuracy and adequacy of all of the settings, costumes, court procedure and characterization of individuals in Berlin. It was, according to Jewel, with feelings of intense patriotism that she embarked upon the task of writing this novel even in the short space of a week. The enthusiasm with which the novel was received in Atlanta is the best evidence of the skill and dramatic intensity of Miss Howard's work.

Initial William Russell Production April 29

MUTUAL has changed the release date of "Hearts or Diamonds," the first picture made by William Russell for William Russell Productions, Inc., from April 22 to April 29. Both Mr. Russell and William Hamilton Osborne, the author, express themselves as highly pleased with the production.

The story of "Hearts or Diamonds" is said to be full of impetuous moments and spectacular scenes, with just enough of the comedy element to relieve the tension and give Russell an opportunity to display the comic touches which were evident in "The Midnight Trail" and "New York Luck."

"Hearts or Diamonds" was made under the direction of Henry King, who was responsible for the last Mary Miles Minter production for Mutual, "A Bit of Jade." Mr. King also directed Gail Kane in several Mutual pictures, notably "Souls in Pawn" and "A Game of Wits."

Charlotte Burton plays the leading feminine role in the new Russell production. Miss Burton was seen as the siren in "The Diamond from the Sky," the American-Mutual photonovel in thirty chapters, and subsequently appeared with Mr. Russell in Mutual star productions, "Soul Mates," "The Highest Bid," "The Strength of Donald McKenzie," "The Love Hermit" and "The Torch Bearer." Prior to her screen debut, Miss Burton had made a distinct stage success, having supported Nance O'Neil at the old Grand was later destroyed in the earthquake. She then toured the principal cities in the West, culminating in a successful run in Chicago.

"Pair of Sixes" Booked by Loew for 65 Days

The New York branch of the George Kleine System announces that a contract has been closed with Marcus Loew whereby "A Pair of Sixes," the Essanay production featuring Taylor Holmes, will be shown for sixty-five days in the Loew houses in Greater New York.

Petrova Makes a Personal Contract with Ince

Madame Olga Petrova has signed a personal contract with Ralph Ince whereby the latter will direct her in three more Petrova Pictures. Mr. Ince has already directed the Polish star in "Tempered Steel," by George Middleton, and is now engaged in producing "Patience Sparhawk," the Gertrude Atherton story which Madame Petrova purchased for her fifth picture. By this agreement Mr. Ince will have directed Madame Petrova in five of the eight pictures to be made under the contract existing between the star and Frederick L. Collins. Mr. Ince has obtained a release from the Advance Flm Corporation, since like the other three directors who have been associated with the Petrova Picture Company—George Irving, who directed "Daughter of Destiny," Larry Trimble, who acted in like capacity for "The Light Within," and Frank Crane, who was engaged for "The Life Mask"—he originally came to Petrova for only one picture, being already under contract to another concern.

Casson Ferguson in Viola Dana's Support

The cast of "The Only Road," Viola Dana's next picture to be produced at Metro's West Coast studios, Hollywood, has been completed. Casson Ferguson, who has just finished doing a juvenile lead for Mary Pickford, will play opposite Miss Dana in the leading male role of Bob Armstrong, "who became a Westerner because in the East he put a goat in his professor's bed." Monte Blue, who played Jed, "the killer," with Miss Dana in "Riders of the Night," is cast as Pedro Lupo, son of a high-caste Mexican lawyer, and is the young "heavy" in "The Only Road."

Others in the cast are: Paul Weigel, as Manuel Lopez; Marie Van Tassel, as Rosa Lopez, his wife; Edith Chapman, as Clara Hawkins, owner of the Buena Vista ranch, and C. E. Geldert, as Jeff Peters, ranch foreman. Frank Reicher will direct the production.

World Secures Rights to Hazeltine Story

World Pictures have secured the picture rights to Horace Hazeltine's story, "The Appearance of Evil," which attracted considerable attention when published recently. It is now being put into scenario form. Mr. Hazeltine's work has long had a popular appeal. His "My Lady of the Green Frock," "What May Happen," etc., have won him readers all over the world

"Unbeliever" Through Kleine

In the issue of April 27 of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, among the "Flashbacks" in the Exhibitors' Box Office Reports, "The Unbeliever" is credited to the First National. This is an error. "The Unbeliever" was produced by the Thomas A. Edison Company and is being distributed by George Kleine System.

"Tarzan" Breaks Records All Along Line

Reports to the First National Exhibitors' Circuit from every point where "Tarzan of the Apes" has played are said to indicate an extraordinary volume of business for the feature. Records were broken at the Strand, Minneapolis, Isis, Denver, and Hulsey's Hippodrome, Dallas. The Goodwin, Newark; Tivoli, San Francisco; Fabian's, Paterson, and Kinema, Los Angeles, were all compelled to lengthen their runs on account of the tremendous business, the last named paying the largest rental it has ever paid for a two weeks' engagement.

John H. Kunsky will run the picture four weeks at his big Detroit house and Thomas Saxe, of Milwaukee, will play it at a dollar at the Davidson. Aaron Jones and Nat Ascher will do the same at the Colonial in Chicago for an indefinite run. Marcus Loew, speaking of the engagement at the Stillman, Cleveland, said: "It not only broke the record of the house for the week but broke the records for receipts on each individual day.

Another Series of Judge Brown Stories

Another forthcoming group of Judge Brown Stories is promised to General Film Company, the distributors, by the Boy City Film Corporation. New subjects in the series are "Love of Bud," "Dog vs. Dog" and "A Boy-Built City," which are intended for release in April and May. These subjects are said to be even better than the first ten, already released, which have scored a tremendous commercial and artistic success.

One of the most popular of the Judge Brown Stories released to date is "I'm a Man," a juvenile patriotic story, in which a youngster finds a new way to aid his government. Initial bookings for this story are said to have more than equalled the record established by "Bud's Recruit," a patriotic juvenile subject, which was the first of the Judge Brown Stories.

An Exciting Moment In a New Rancho Drama, Distributed Through General Film

"Gismonda" to Be Spectacular

Thousands of People Will Be Seen in Paramount Subject Starring Lina Cavalieri—Other Activities at Lasky Eastern Studios

FROM the number of people assembled and the construction work which is going on in connection with the production of "Gismonda" for Paramount release, under the direction of Edouard Jose, the Fort Lee, N. J., studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation resembles a big military camp these days. This production, said to be the biggest and most spectacular ever attempted by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in the East, offers as its star Lina Cavalieri, internationally famous as grand opera singer as well as for her beauty.

"The plot is laid in the year 1500," says Mr. Jose, "and there is no architecture of that period in this country for the requirements of this story. We have therefore been compelled to build all settings, both exterior and interior, which are of exceptional grandeur and splendor as reproductions of the palaces of the Greek nobility in their days of wealth and extravagance. These settings are of necessity extraordinarily large, as thousands of people appear in the various scenes, and when the picture is finished between 10,000 and 15,000 persons will have taken part."

Madame Cavalieri is said to make an ideal Giamonda, who was the most attractive woman of her time. Craufurd Kent, who has had important parts in many Paramount and Artcraft pictures, plays the leading male role of Almerio.

At the Fifty-sixth street studio, Director Marshall Neilan is working night and day on George M. Cohan's new Artcraft picture, "Hit the Trail Holliday," and it is predicted that those who have seen the play will find many surprises in the picture, which has been brought right up to the minute.

Edward Jose Is Producing "Gismonda" for Paramount Release

Pauline Frederick is busy with her dressmakers getting her wardrobe together for her next picture to follow "Fedora," which is said to be another sensational subject in which she is to play an emotional part. The title has not yet been anonunced.

Elsie Ferguson has gone to Florida to take the exterior scenes of "The Danger Mark," under the direction of Hugh Ford, who has charge of this production.

As soon as Marguerite Clark is able to work again—she has not yet entirely recovered from the mumps, contracted as she was finishing "Rich Man, Poor Man"—she will begin the production of a picture adapted from a famous subject under the direction of J. Searle Dawley.

Paralta Proceeds with Work on Studios

IN accordance with the plans recently approved by the executives of Paralta Plays, Inc., it was announced this week that the vast expansion of the Paralta studios in Los Angeles is now well under way, and no time is being lost in the construction and completion of the new buildings.

Already some of the new dressing-rooms have been practically finished and one or two of the stars are awaiting final touches of paint before occupying them. The green-room, which will be an innovation to the motion picture studio, is still in the course of construction but will be completed before very long. The dressing rooms of the stars will consist of a suite elaborately furnished and will really contain "all the comforts of home."

The dressing-rooms, the green-room and the offices of the directors and the managers of some of the various departments will all be in one building, which, when finished, will occupy a space running the entire length of the Paralta lot. Miss Louise Glaum on Tuesday of last week planted a rosebush which is the first of a network of flowers that will cover the building.

On the opposite side of the studio grounds will be five formal gardens to be used as permanent sets. Some of these have already been finished and the others are now being made.

Plans for the construction of the remainder of the buildings and improvements which have been decided upon and which will make the Paralta studios among the best equipped in California, are now in the hands of the engineers.

New Story of Desert for Harry Carey

Harry Carey has commenced work under the direction of Jack Ford in a new story of the desert, which the author calls "The Three Bad Men." Eugene B. Lewis wrote the scenario from an original story told by Ford and Carey.

Madge Kennedy, Fetching Goldwyn Star, and Her Leading Man, Tom Moore, Are Great Favorites With the Public. Goldwyn Expects Them to Be Even More Popular Following the Release of "The Fair Pretender," Close-Ups of Which Herald It As a Winner

Hodkinson Offices Enlarged

Quarters Now Occupy Large Part of Third Floor Above Harriman Bank—Shurtleff, Back from Trip, Reports Progress Everywhere

THE past week has been a busy one at the home offices of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation at 527 Fifth avenue. With the increasing activity and expansion of business, it was found necessary to enlarge the offices to take over considerably more than three times the original space. The Hodkinson offices now occupy the entire front section of the third floor above the Harriman bank.

One thing that is very noticeable to anyone entering the offices is their quiet simplicity, which is quite according to the ideas of Mr. Hodkinson, who, it is claimed, is very much averse to spending money or increasing his expenses in unnecessary directions.

C. E. Shurtleff, General Sales Manager of the Hodkinson Corporation, returned during the week from his trip to the various exchange centres and reports very satisfactory progress being made everywhere in the field. Several changes were made in the management of the branch offices, all of which have been announced elsewhere by the General Film Company. Mr. Shurtleff further states that these changes are all for the purpose of strengthening the distribution system.

C. S. Nordlie, special representative of the corporation, left Saturday for an extended trip covering Buffalo, Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, Cincinnati, Louisville and a section of West Virginia, during which he will talk with the exhibitors in these territories upon the subject of the Hodkinson Co-partnership Plan, which is now developing in a manner most satisfactory to the home office.

Doings at Lasky's West Coast Studios

UNDER George Melford's direction, Sessue Hayakawa has been busily engaged at Hollywood upon his final Paramount picture. It is a Chinese story by Frances Marion, entitled "The City of Dim Faces." The star plays the role of a half-caste Chinese-American. Two well-known actresses of the screen also appear in the film, Marin Sais and Doris Pawn. James Cruze has an important Oriental role. Many of the settings represent underground Chinatown, San Francisco.

"The White Man's Law," in which Hayakawa will be seen prior to the release of the above mentioned picture, was recently shown for the first time at the Hollywood studios. James Young directed the picture. Florence Vidor and Jack Holt have important roles.

The C. B. deMille Artcraft special, "Old Wives for New," shows gowns, gowns and more gowns. They were designed by Alpharetta Hoffman, costume director. Jeanie MacPherson scenarioized the David Graham Phillips story and Elliott Dexter, Sylvia Ashton, Florence Vidor, Marcia Manon, Julia Faye, Helen Jerome Eddy and Gustav Seyffertitz are in the cast.

Donald Crisp took his "Firefly of France" company to San Diego last week to obtain outdoor scenes for the militant story of the present conflict. Wallace Reid stars in this Paramount picture with Ann Little and a strong cast. Margaret Turnbull wrote the scenario and the original Saturday Evening Post story was by Marion Polk Angellotti. Raymond Hatton plays the title role, which though not the lead, is highly important.

Commodore J. Stuart Blackton has finished the photography on "Missing," James Young having directed it, and is now cutting it.

Under Walter Edwards' direction, Vivian Martin is rapidly completing "Viviette," a William J. Locke story.

Handsome Gowns for Clara K. Young

In marked contrast to the severe settings and plain clothes of her recent Select Picture, "The House of Glass," Clara Kimball Young, in her latest production, "The Reason Why," released the last week in April, appears in one gorgeous gown after another, it is said. These gowns were specially designed by Lucille (Lady Duff Gordon). The play, by the way, is from the pen of Lady Gordon's sister, Elinor Glyn, author of "Three Weeks."

"The Reason Why" is the story of the struggle of a young wife to establish her position in the aristocratic family into which she has married shortly after her arrival in England from the Continent, where she has led a somewhat eventful existence. Milton Sills, as leading man, and Frank Losee, both seasoned actors from the speaking stage, are chief in Miss Young's support.

Mae Marsh Returns from Savannah

The return of Mae Marsh from Savannah, Ga., marks the completion of her newest Goldwyn picture, "The Glorious Adventure," based on a story by Edith Barnard Delano. The famous old Hermitage estate, just outside of Savannah, was the place chosen by Director Hobart Henley for the plantation scenes. Among the scores of negroes who still make their homes on the place Henley discovered a 114-year old negress and used her in an important scene with Miss Marsh.

How Kenneth Lost Out

Priscilla Dean, whose "The Two-Souled Woman" soon will be released by Universal, recently donated a cup for the winners of a dancing contest held at one of the prominent Southern California cafes. In the opinion of the judges Kenneth Harlan and Lottie Pickford were leading, but Miss Dean vetoed their decision because Mr. Harlan was a Universalite!

For Those Who Care for Figures

An efficiency expert at the World studio at Fort Lee has compiled figures of the amount of material required that go into the making of a year's program. Listen! "To those who are not familiar with studio activities it may be of interest to know that in the past year for the sets built for 52 pictures it was necessary to use 1,500,000 feet of lumber, 12,000,000 nails, 100,000 screws, 5,000 locks, hinges and door knobs, 75,000 feet of wall paper, 1,500 gallons of paint, over 100,000 pieces of furniture and 300,000 props. There was consumed in lighting these sets 1,000,000 amperes of current; also 1,500,000 feet of film and a countless number of horses, cows, sheep, goats, birds, goldfish, dogs and oxen were employed. As for bears, snakes, raccoons, lions and elephants, the number of these animals used would equip the Barnum and Bailey Circus several times over."

Billy Mason a Hit in Red Cross Cabaret

Billy Mason in a personal appearance at the Neptune theatre, Venice, California, one night recently, made so decided an impression with his rag-time song numbers, that the general committee of the Red Cross has petitioned the Christie comedian to repeat his entertainment for the Red Cross benefit at the Venice Auditorium. As no benefit in Southern California is complete without Charles Murray acting as ring-master, so also is Billy Mason with his cabaret ditties essential to the success of such programs.

Enid Bennett Appears in Circus Drama

The story of "The Biggest Show on Earth," the Paramount release, in which Enid Bennett, the Thomas H. Ince star, will appear shortly, embodies a tale of life under the "big top," with romance and mystery combined with many thrills. Florence Vincent wrote the story and Jerome Storm directed the picture under the supervision of Mr. Ince. Miss Bennett is said to be at her best as the little circus girl.

Dorothy Dalton, Ince-Paramount Star, Looks Like an Eskimo in "Tyrant Fear"

Vitagraph List for May Is Ready

Releases Include Four Blue Ribbon Features Starring Leslie-Earle, Alice Joyce, Morey-Deshon and Shipman-Whitman

PRESIDENT Albert E. Smith announces that Vitagraph's releases for the month of May, consisting of four units and sixteen subjects, are complete and ready for exhibitors. The list includes four Blue Ribbon features, four serial episodes, four Big V Comedies and four Vitagraph Drew Comedies. Following are the Blue Ribbon features:

Alfred Whitman Is Appearing In Vitagraph Productions

May 6, "The Little Runaway," starring Gladys Leslie with Edward Earle, under direction of William P. S. Earle. An Irish drama by Paul West which was adapted from an original story, entitled "Ann Acushla."

May 13, "The Strength of the Weak," starring Alice Joyce under direction of Tom Terriss. This is a drama by Edith Ellis, author of "Mary Jane's Pa" and other plays, and was adapted from the stage play, "My Man."

May 20, "The Golden Goal," starring Harry Morey with Florence Deshon, under direction of Paul Scardon. A drama in which Morey plays the role of a labor leader who rises to great power. It was written by Lawrence McCloskey.

May 27, "Barec, Son of Kazan," starring Nell Shipman and Alfred Whitman under direction of David Smith. An adaptation of James Oliver Curwood's story of the Canadian North Woods which ran in "The Red Book."

The fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth episodes of the Hedda Nova-J. Frank Glendon serial, "The Woman in the Web," released respectively on the above dates, are: "The Hand of Mystery," "Full Speed Ahead," "The Crater of Death" and "The Plunge of Horror." This serial is being directed by David Smith and Paul Hurst.

The Big V Comedies with their dates are:

May 6, "Laws and Outlaws," featuring Earle Montgomery and Joe Rock; J. A. Howe, director.

May 13, "Spies and Spills," featuring Lawrence Semon. Written and directed by Lawrence Semon.

May 20, "Love and Lavallieres," featuring Montgomery and Rock; J. A. Howe, director.

May 27, "Romans and Rascals," featuring Lawrence Semon. Written and directed by Lawrence Semon.

The Vitagraph Drew Comedies for the month are, in order of release, "The Story of the Glove," "Fox Trot Finesse," "The Mysterious Mr. Davey" and "Rooney's Sad Case."

These Drew comedies are selected subjects from the Vitagraph library and represent some of the best work that Mr. and Mrs. Drew have done since they began the making of comedies. They have re-edited and retitled and new prints sent out, and the reports from Vitagraph are to the effect that the one reelers are meeting with the same popularity which they enjoyed when first issued a few years ago.

Wilson Claims a Record for Gerard Film

ACCORDING to reports filed by Carey Wilson, sales manager of the First National Exchange, Inc., of New York, "My Four Years in Germany" shattered some records that were considered impregnable during the week of April 15.

To begin with, an arrangement concluded with Moe Marx, Max Spiegel and Harold Edel that sets a precedent in the American field of motion picture exhibition. This is the decision of the Strand executives to show "My Four Years in Germany" for the week of April 28, coincident with its run at the Knickerbocker theatre.

During the four years that it has been operated, the Strand has exhibited one feature picture each week, or a total of some two hundred and ten productions. Not one picture out of the entire number was ever before shown in another Broadway theatre before being booked at the Strand. Moe Mark, who was chiefly instrumental in arranging the deal with the sales-manager of the First National Exchange, when asked his motive for this unprecedented move, said:

"At this tremendous crisis, when civilization is threatened by the most arrogant and cruel military power the world has ever seen, I consider it nothing less than our duty as loyal Americans to show Ambassador Gerard's masterly expose of the Kaiser and his clique."

Pathe Scenics and Travel Pictures Bi-Weekly

Beginning May 12, the Pathe Colored Scenics and Travelogues will be released every other week instead of weekly as at present. The new plan starts the week of the first release of the "Britain's Bulwarks" series of twelve official pictures showing all phases of the great war, an episode of which will be shown each week.

Lytell Film Heads Metro List

"The Trail to Yesterday" Released on May 6, Followed by Drama with Bushman and Bayne—Other Stars

BERT LYTELL'S initial Metro picture heads the quartette of screen attractions which will be released under the parrot trademark in May. Both the Western and Eastern studios are represented on the release schedule. The first and last releases of the month were made at the California studio and those underlined for the middle date are New York productions. Following Lytell, the stars who will appear in May, are Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, May Allison, and Harold Lockwood.

"The Trail to Yesterday," which will be released on May 6 introduces Bert Lytell as a Metro star. This Western drama is an adaptation by June Mathis of Charles Alden Seltzer's popular novel of the same name. Edwin Carewe, assisted by his brother Finis Fox, directed the production.

"Cyclone Higgins, D.D." is the second May release, being scheduled for the 13th. Francis X. Bushman appears as Cyrus Higgins, D.D., the preacher who becomes known as "Cyclone," and Beverly Bayne plays Sally Phillips, the belle of Yellville.

May Allison makes her second appearance as a Metro star in "The Winning of Beatrice," an original story by May Tully, which will be released on May 20. Harry Franklin directed this picture, which was adapted for the screen by June Mathis and Katherine Kavanaugh.

Bert Lytell's First Feature For Metros Is "The Trail to Yesterday"

Harold Lockwood is the star of "Lend Me Your Name," the final May release which will be offered exhibitors on the 27th. "Lend Me Your Name" is a comedy-drama adapted from the novel of the same name by Francis Perry Elliott. The screen version was prepared by Fred J. Balshofer and John B. Clymer. Fred J. Balshofer, who supervises all Harold Lockwood's Metro pictures, directed.

"Over the Top" Is a Vitagraph Special

"OVER the Top," Vitagraph's super war picture with Sergeant Arthur Guy Empey in the star role, will not be leased on a state right or territorial basis under any circumstances, according to a statement issued by Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the Vitagraph distributing organization. Mr. Irwin declares that the feature will be marketed in the same manner as the other Vitagraph specials, that is, to first run exhibitors for special runs and then on the regular leasing basis.

Mr. Irwin states that since "Over the Top" was first shown at the Lyric theatre, New York, many exhibitors of the United States have made special trips to New York to see it and have already begun negotiations for it. In addition, he says he has had scores of inquiries from all parts of the country from showmen seeking state and territorial rights to the picture. One bid was made for the New England rights, another for the Southern States, one for the entire State of California and others for other sections of the country. To all of these offers Mr. Irwin sent a declination, stating that the picture will be distributed solely through the Vitagraph organization and that regular exhibitors will get the first chance to present it in their respective territories.

"Over the Top" entered its fourth week at the Lyric theatre last Sunday, April 21.

General to Market New Western Series

GENERAL FILM COMPANY announces a series of two-reel Western dramas to be known as the Rancho series. These subjects are being produced by the National Film Corporation of Denver, of which O. D. Woodward is president. This is the same company that makes the Clover Comedies with Bud Duncan, Dot Farley and Kewpie Morgan.

The Rancho dramas will be two-reel productions issued every other week and will contain all-Western atmosphere. Story value and thrills will be featured.

The first release in the series will be "In the Shadow of the Rockies," a gripping story of romance and action, in which Palmer Bowman and Dolly Dale are the principal players. The story deals with the adventures of a millionaire's son in the West in which he unwittingly plays the leading part in the unraveling of a drama of great mystery and awe inspiring suspense.

Succeeding stories are in preparation, written by Richard Goodall and directed by Otis B. Thayer.

Storey Figures Out Way to Beat Kaiser

A. D. V. Storey, juggler of the adjectives at the Broadway theatre in New York during the run of "The Kaiser," Jewel's production, struck upon a plan to "beat the Kaiser" which, if applied to that doomed monarch, would bring the end of the world much closer to him.

A bass drum was secured, and on one side was painted a likeness of the Kaiser above which were the words "I'm hammering hell out of the Kaiser, beast of Berlin." Then a willing hand got behind the drum stick and started in to do just what the sign said. All of this happened at various places along Broadway and in front of the theatre itself.

The stunt made a hit, according to reports.

Real Money Paid for "My Four Years"

Cary Wilson, of the First National Exchange of New York has closed two big contracts for "My Four Years in Germany" during the past few days. The first was with the management of the Crescent theatre, Brooklyn, for a two weeks' run at $4,500 for the initial seven days and $2,000 for the second week. Edward Fay, of Fay's theatre, Rochester, was the party of the second part in the other deal, paying $4,000 for a week's run of the picture at his house.

These figures, vouched for by the First National, are said to top any known previous records for film contracts in the respective cities.

Duncan Serial Filmed 'Mid Mountain Snows

Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, and Cyrus Townsend Brady, authors of the new Vitagraph serial in which William Duncan is starred and which will follow "The Woman in the Web," located the greater part of the play in the Western mountains during the winter months and then put it up to Duncan to find locations to fit the story. Accordingly, the director-star went on a scouting trip and found what he considered was the ideal place in the Big Bear Valley of California, north of San Bernardino. A temporary studio was constructed and some fine snow scenes are said to have been obtained.

Pauline Frederick in a Tolstoy Story

Pauline Frederick's next Paramount picture to follow "La Tosca" is "Resurrection," adapted for the screen by Charles E. Whittaker from Count Tolstoy's sensational novel exposing Russian conditions.

The role of Katusha, played by Miss Frederick, is an exceedingly emotional one, portraying a girl who becomes the victim of a nobleman's betrayal, and after experiencing hardship and injustice which deadens her better nature finds her soul reawakened through the teachings of a fellow exile to Siberia.

Bombing Aeroplane Feature of "U" Serial

One of the scenes in "The Brass Bullet," the new Universal serial being staged by Ben Wilson, star of "The Voice on the Wire" and "The Mystery Ship," shows an attack on a yacht by an aeroplane, the pilot of which drops a bomb on the vessel, destroying it and killing those of the passengers who have not already escaped.

The Universal publicity department vouches for a tale to the effect that Juanita Hansen, who is starred in the serial with Jack Mulhall, gave Director Wilson and his assistants the scare of their lives when she jumped into the waters of the Pacific Ocean where a number of sharks were swimming about. Contrary to orders, Juanita took a chance on the appetites of the man-eaters rather than waste the day. Whether or not Miss Hansen was properly punished for her indiscretion is not stated by the U. P. D.

"Blue Bird" Is Exceeding Expectations

According to Al Lichtman, General Manager of the Department of Distribution of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, "The Blue Bird," the Maeterlinck spectacle released under the Artcraft trademark, is exceeding the company's most optimistic expectations.

"Reports from all over the country show that this picture has taken the public by storm, and wherever the picture is shown the manager of the theatre receives unsolicited commendation from his patrons," says Mr. Lichtman. "From the Atlantic to the Pacific coast there has not been one single adverse criticism by either the press or the public."

Hagerstown Girls Form "Petrova Club"

Under the name of the "Petrova Club" a number of society girls of Hagerstown, Md., have formed an exclusive organization which will attend in a body all showings of Madame Petrova's special productions in Hagerstown. A theatre party has been planned in honor of her appearance in "The Life Mask," shortly to be released. Madame has already presented the club with an autographed picture of herself. It is planned to establish branches of the organization in all of the important cities of the United States.

Paralta Starts New Glaum Feature

Work was commenced last week on the filming of "Shackled," which will be the second Paralta Play to be made with Miss Louise Glaum as the star. It will follow the Glaum release, "An Alien Enemy," in which she made her debut not only as a Paralta star but really as a dramatic actress as well, for Miss Glaum before her connection with this organization appeared in no characterizations except those of a seductress.

"Shackled" was written by Lawrence McCloskey especially for Miss Glaum.

Triangle's May Program Varied

Society Dramas, Westerns, a Romance of the Adirondacks and Japanese-American Story Are Among the Month's Releases

MARGERY WILSON, William Desmond, Roy Stewart, Gloria Swanson and J. Barney Sherry are among the featured players on the Triangle program for the month of May. William Desmond heads the card in "An Honest Man," which is described as a psychological drama with a sidelight on the power of suggestion to mould character. A care-free, happy-go-lucky tramp with a lusty desire to roam and avoid work, suddenly finds himself entrusted with a fortune to be delivered to an unknown girl. The words "You're an honest man" ring in his ears, and he measures up to the opinion of the man who utters them. Mary Warren, who played with Desmond in "The Sea Panther," and with Joe King in "The Vortex," has the leading feminine part. Ann Kroman and Graham Pette have supporting roles. Henry P. Dowst wrote the story. Frank Borzage directed.

"Mlle. Paulette," scenarioized by Frank Condon from George Cowell's story, is the second release for the week of May 5. The Adirondack mountains and New York City provide the locale. Claire Anderson has the title role and Wallace MacDonald portrays the leading male character. Raymond Wells directed the picture and George Pearce, Walter Perry, Dot Hagar, Anna Dodge, George Hernandez and John Lince are in the East.

J. Barney Sherry and Gloria Swanson open the week of May 12 with "Her Decision." Jack Conway directed this drama, the story of which is based upon a girl's sacrifice to save her sister. Darrell Foss and Ann Kroman also have prominent parts.

Roy Stewart, with Josie Sedgwick as his leading woman, is featured in "Wolves of the Border," the second release of the week of the 12th. The story, which deals with life on the Mexican-U. S. frontier, showing the struggles of the cattle kings with the Mexican bandits and cattle rustlers, was written by Alvin J. Neitz. Cliff Smith directed, and included in the cast are Jack Curtis, Frank McQuarrie, William Jeffries and Louis Durham.

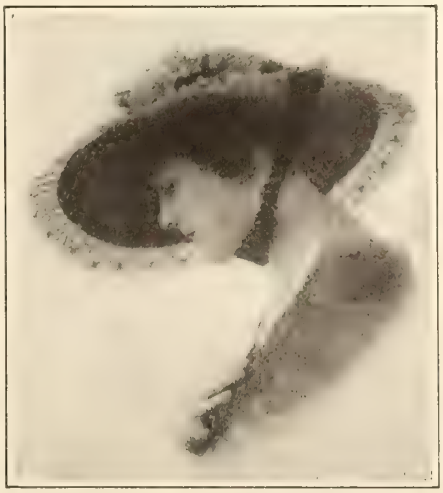
A Japanese-American drama by E. Magnus Ingleton, "The Loyalty of Taro Sam," heads the May 19 program. The action opens in the Land of Cherry Blossoms where Taro Sam, a rickshaw driver, attracts the attention of an American lawyer who becomes so interested in the smiling little Japanese that he takes him to America. There Taro Sam's loyalty is tested, and he saves his employer and benefactor from a life of sorrow and bitter regret. Jack Livingston, Jack Abbe, Mud Wayne, Lillian West and Lillian Langdon are in the cast.

"Old Hartwell's Cub," in which William Desmond is featured and Mary Warren has the leading feminine role, follows. It is a human interest story, showing the rise of a young blacksmith from sudden indifference to a place among the foremost citizens of the town, through the inspiration of a good woman.

"Old Loves for New," with Margery Wilson and Lee Hill, and "The Mossback" are scheduled for the week of May 26. With these the month's program is concluded.

Concerning Two New World Film Artistes

WORLD Pictures makes interesting announcements concerning two recent additions to its producing organization. The first tells of the acquisition by the World forces of Nancy Palmer, familiar to magazine readers as a model for Howard Chandler Christy, the illustrator. Mr. Christy's famous poster, "I Want You for the Navy," for which Miss Palmer posed, is said to have created more interest than any other recruiting poster by an American artist. She also posed for a Third Liberty Loan poster by Mr. Christy which is being displayed throughout the country. Miss Palmer's first appearance in World Pictures will be in "Merely Players," by Mrs. L. Case Russell.



Nancy Palmer Has Been Engaged to Appear In World Pictures

The other announcement concerns Fay Tincher, the comedienne, who recently signed a World contract. Miss Tincher has returned to Hollywood from New York to begin work at once, in the Willis-Inglis studio, on her first World-made picture. It is scheduled for release July 1, following the release on May 1 and June 1, respectively, of the first Fay Tincher-World features "Some Job" and "Main 1-2-3." These are said to set a new standard for comedy-drama.

En route West Miss Tincher stopped in Chicago, where she spoke in the interests of the Third Liberty Loan Drive. Continuing on her way to Hollywood, she wrote the script for her next production, as is her custom.

James J. Dowling, Wm. Worthington, Rhea Mitchell, Roy Laidlow, and Several Others Grouped About Bryant Washburn, Pathe Star, to Register Their Individual and Collective Countenances for Future Reference

Pathe Releases Big War Series May 12

GRAPHIC scenes picturing all phases of the World War are shown in the series of twelve official British pictures, set for exclusive release by Pathe at weekly intervals beginning May 12, under the main title, "Britain's Bulwarks."

The release of these official pictures is in line with the new policy of America and her Allies to take the people into the confidence of the governments and to let them see the heroic sacrifices and achievements of the soldiers, sailors and women of Great Britain. They lend themselves to booking as three-four reel features if exhibitors so desire.

The first picture of the series shows the women munitioners of Great Britain busily engaged in their work of making shells. In addition to this, British cavalry is shown at the front, the horses leaping trenches and the squadron occupying the smoking ruins of a village destroyed by the Huns.

The second picture shows Messines Ridge, which is now the center of the heaviest onslaughts of the German troops in their new drive, while in the third the scene shifts to Mesopotamia and pictures the hardships of the British army on its way to Bagdad.

How England treats her prisoners is vividly shown in the fourth chapter and in the fifth the mine layers and drifters are seen at their dangerous work in the U-boat zone, maintaining the safety of Allied and American merchant ships and transports. In the sixth picture are scenes taken actually under the first of the enemy guns at the U-boat base of Zeebrugge, on the Belgian coast.

Fighting the Hun at St. Quentin, where Sir Douglas Haig smashed his defense works and forced numerous retreats, and the destruction wrought by the vandals on the beautiful buildings, churches, and bridges in that vicinity, are shown in the seventh and eighth episodes of this intensely interesting series.

The ninth picture shows scenes from the visit of King George and Queen Mary to the battle front in France and the tenth shows the King paying a call upon the Grand Fleet, "somewhere in the North Sea."

The climax of the series comes in the eleventh and twelfth episodes showing the Canadians on the Western front and holding Vimy Ridge in the face of artillery and infantry attacks by the Huns.

Metro Stage Players Returning to Screen

ON account of contracts previously made calling for their presence at the Metro Studio, Metro's stars of the speaking stage are closing engagements and returning to their motion picture activities. It has been arranged for Mme. Nazimova, Ethel Barrymore, Emily Stevens, Emily Wehlen and others to vary their work by an exercise of their stage abilities during a part of each season, and agreements to that effect have been made with the Charles Frohman estate, Oliver Morosco, John D. Williams, Arthur Hopkins and other theatrical firms. In several instances the time is now up, and Metro players are coming back to fulfill their contracts for screen productions and preparing to add further successes to a list that includes "Revelation," "Daybreak," "The Outsider" and "An American Widow."

Emmy Wehlen is the first to return. This star has completed a tour of the Eastern cities in behalf of the third Liberty Loan.

Marie Doro Joins Ranks of Producers

Marie Doro is the latest star to form her own producing company. The star of stage and screen plans to produce several features a year but in what manner they will be released she is not at liberty to announce just as present.

Miss Doro will surround herself with a company of well known players and a leading man who has met with considerable success in photodramatic work. For stories a number of best sellers will be picturized and other original matter obtained from writers of note. A director who has had many years of experience with the large producing corporations will be in charge of production, it is said.

Daly at His Best in "My Own United States"

Arnold Daly is declared to have surpassed any of his previous work on the stage or screen in his characterization of Philip Nolan in Screen Classics' historical American drama "My Own United States," released by Metro. Critics who attended the Rivoli theatre, where this picture played a week on the occasion of the launching of the Liberty Loan drive, pronounced Daly's portrayal of Nolan, the dominating character around which the story centers, a masterpiece.

Universal Executives Help in Editing Films

Miss Eleanor Fried, film editor at the New York headquarters of the Universal Film Manufacturing company, has inaugurated a new system through which the members of the Universal executive staff view all pictures in the form in which they arrive from the Western studios. By this procedure Miss Fried gets the composite views of the executive, advertising and sales organizations, thus enabling her to edit along constructive lines.

Irene Vanbrugh Appears in "Masks and Faces," Released By World Film

Belle Bennett Is Featured In "The Lonely Woman," a New Triangle Production

Triangle Renames "The Finger Print"

The title of "The Finger Print," Triangle's April 21 release, has been changed to "The Hands at the Window." This is an adaptation of John A. Moroso's Collier's Weekly story, "In the Spring," and features Joe King and Margery Wilson.

"Hundredth Night," scheduled as the second release of the week of May 26, has been postponed and "The Mossback" substituted in its place.

"Over There" Goes Well Over Here

"Over There," Select's patriotic photodrama, in which the work of the Red Cross is featured, is said to be riding on a steadily increasing wave of popularity throughout the entire country. This fact is especially noteworthy in connection with the coming nation-wide "Second War Fund Drive of the American Red Cross" which is to be held May 20th-May 27th, and Select salesmen are therefore making a special drive on this picture to tie it up with the Red Cross campaign.

"Mile-a-Minute Kendall" Fits Jack Pickford

In selecting "Mile-a-Minute" Kendall as a Paramount subject for Jack Pickford and Louise Huff the producers are said to have exercised rare judgment. The play by Owen Davis seems almost to have been written expressly for these two young persons. Lottie Pickford also appears in the production and the balance of the cast has been carefully selected. Gardner Hunting adapted the play to the screen.

Metro Completes Lytell's First Picture

"The Trail to Yesterday," in which Bert Lytell makes his debut as a Metro star, has been completed at Metro's West Coast studios. Lytell has the role of Dakotah, a grim, silent ranchman, while Anna Q. Nilsson appears as his leading woman. Director Edwin Carewe is said to be highly pleased with the photographic results obtained while the company was located for two weeks at Arivaca, Arizona.

About New Productions

"Unclaimed Goods," in which Vivian Martin is presented by Paramount, was written by Johnston McCulley, a newspaper man of Los Angeles. The scenario is by Gardner Hunting.

Margarita Fisher, American Film star, has completed for release on the Mutual program "The Primitive Woman,' which is said to be a smashing production. Lloyd Ingraham directed it.

Harry Dunkinson, Universal actor, is prominently cast in the forthcoming production called "The Brass Bullet," an eighteen-episode serial starring Juanita Hansen. Ben Wilson is directing.

"My Own United States," starring Arnold Daly, which is distributed by Metro, has scored quite a success throughout the country. It was the feature at the Rivoli, New York, the week of April 7.

"The Tree of Life" is a new Triangle production, which has William Desmond in the featured role. He is presented as a blacksmith. Mary Warren is cast in the leading feminine role of the picture.

The news is being circulated about that "Carmen of the Klondike" is pictorial evidence that Monte Katterjohn, Paralta staff author, "went himself one better" in the way of a story.

Director John Adolfi last week had the World studio at Fort Lee all to himself—and company. He was putting the finishing touches on "The Heart of a Girl," with Irv. Cummings and Barbara Castleton.

Artcraft promises to give the nation a glimpse of New York's subway during the rush hour in "Hit the Trail Holliday," the George M. Cohan feature, now in course of production.

Pathe asserts that Bessie Love is more captivating than ever in the comedy "How Could You, Caroline?" which is on its way to early release. Drama is interwoven with comedy, it is said.

Noteworthy among the settings in the Theda Bara-Wm. Fox production of "Salome" is said to be an almost exact duplicate of the famous Jaffa gate, through which the British entered Jerusalem recently.

"Ghosts of Yesterday," Norma Talmadge's Select picture, which is bringing in good reports, was recently shown to the inmates of Sing Sing. They voted it an excellent picture.

Lawrence Semon, director of comedy for Vitagraph, is filming on the West Coast a burlesque on "Cleopatra." Marble halls were built for Cleo on the Hollywood lot.

Inside stuff: In her new Goldwyn picture (won't give the name) Mabel Normand wears a daring bathing suit. A mere whisper to that effect about town should fill the theatre to overflowing.

Petrova strove for realism in "Patience Sparhawk" and got an overdose of the elusive substance. Mrs. Paul Dasher, in a tense moment, was seriously injured and a doctor was called.

"An Honest Man," Triangle drama, in which William Desmond is to be presented, is described as a psychological photodrama. The star is cast as a happy-go-lucky tramp.

Doris Lee is leading woman for Charles Ray in the Ince-Paramount feature "Playing the Game." Director Schertzinger handled the megaphone under Mr. Ince's personal supervision.

In Madge Kennedy's newest Goldwyn picture, "The Danger Game," the apparently trifling matter of curls—or lack of curls—assumes vast importance. It is said one must see the feature to understand this.

Mary MacLaren's newest photodrama, "A Man's World," by Ida May Park, Universal woman director, is nearing completion and will be finished within a fortnight. Society life is the main point.

"The Naulahka," Pathe feature, in which Doraldina, the dancer, has a prominent role, scored a success in San Francisco. Doraldina appeared in person at the theatre during the run of the picture.

Some of the scenes for Metro's "The House of Mirth" were "shot" on Riverside Drive, New York. Katherine Harris Barrymore has the chief feminine role, under the direction of Albert Capellani.

Priscilla Dean in the Act of Trying to Win a Kiss in Her Universal Feature, "The Two-Soul Woman"

Universal Finishes "The Bull's Eye"

With the eighteenth episode, said to be jammed as full of thrills as any of its predecessors, "The Bull's Eye," the Universal serial of international complications, was brought to a conclusion last week at Universal City. Tied to a railroad track with a runaway engine approaching at terrific speed, Eddie Polo was supposed to drop into a culvert beneath the ties. Instead, when the steel monster was almost upon him, with a mighty jerk he pulled his feet out of his boots, did a backward somersault, wrenching loose the cords that held his hands, and leaped safely just as the iron claw of the locomotive ground his boots to atoms.

Predict Success for "Joan of Plattsburg"

"Joan of Plattsburg," with Mabel Normand as star, is said to be the most notable achievement of the Goldwyn organization to date. In fact, Goldwyn predicts that Miss Normand's popularity will rise by leaps and bounds after May 5, the release date of the patriotic comedy-drama. George Loane Tucker remade the play after some of the scenes in the original version by Porter Emerson Browne were disapproved by the Government.

Alice Joyce Engaged on O. Henry Feature

Alice Joyce, under the direction of Tom Terriss, is said to be making rapid progress in "Find the Woman," a Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature adapted from the O. Henry "Cherchez la Femme." With Miss Joyce in the company are Walter McGrail, Henry Houry, Arthur Donaldson, Jean Paige and Jessie Stevens.

"Fatty" Survived

After being marooned in the mountains for ten days by a storm and going through numerous thrilling adventures that weren't in the story, Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle and his company have returned to Hollywood from San Gabriel Canyon, Cal., with the completed film of "Moonshine," the latest Arbuckle comedy.

Bessie Love in New Feature

"How Could You, Caroline?" Heads Program for Week of May 5—"The Tank," War Thriller, Also Is Released

BESSIE LOVE, in a comedy-drama, "How Could You, Caroline?" the ninth episode of "The House of Hate," "Our Fighting Ally—The Tank," a war thriller, and another comedy, featuring Harold Lloyd, are the headliners of Pathe's program for May 5.

Bessie Love is said to be more captivating than ever in her latest comedy-drama, "How Could You, Caroline?" adapted from the story by Izola Forrester and Mann Page by Agnes C. Johnston. The story deals with the adventures of Caroline Rogers, an ultra-romantic school girl at the caramel and novel-devouring age. In an exclusive boarding school she becomes affected with "affinityitis" through reading a luridly romantic novel, and things happen, quick and fast. When Caroline returns to her home for the wedding of her sister she causes a series of exciting incidents that almost terminate disastrously. What occurs is said to be quite unexpected and makes up the climax of the story.

"Poisoned Darts" is the title of the ninth episode of the Pathe serial, "The House of Hate," featuring Pearl White and Antonio Moreno. In this episode the Hooded Terror resorts to the use of poisoned darts to kill the Waldon heiress, but is again thwarted in his attempts upon her life.

"Our Fighting Ally—The Tank" is a war special in line with the numerous other features of this character released by Pathe. The pictures were taken by the Official Government Pictures, Inc., and show the tank "Britannia" being used by the boys of our National Army in their intensive training.

The title of Harold Lloyd's one-reel comedy, produced for Pathe by Rolin, is "Kicked Out." In it the comedian performs a "Julian Eltinge," appearing as a buxom young woman.

Heart-Pathe News, Nos. 38 and 39 are released on this program.

What a Transformation! Yes, It is None Other Than Polly Moran, the Blunt But Efficient Fun Maker In Paramount-Sennett Comedies

Mutual Releases Russell Film

April 29 Brings "Hearts or Diamonds," with Star as Gem Collector—Screen Telegram and Comedy Follow

"HEARTS OR DIAMONDS," the first picture produced by William Russell Productions, is the feature of Mutual's schedule of releases for the week of April 29.

The play was selected by Mr. Russell himself as one offering opportunities for the characteristic Russell spectacular action. The scenario is by William Parker, from a story by William Hamilton Osborne.

Charlotte Burton makes her reappearance on the screen in the role of Adrienne. Miss Burton has played lead in other Russell pictures, notably "Soul Mates," "The Highest Bid" and "The Love Hermit."

Screen Telegram issues Nos. 18 and 19 are released May 1 and 5. American soldiers taking their places in the line to check the Hun offensive; Secretary McAdoo opening the Liberty Loan drive in Philadelphia; the visit of Marguerite Clark to Chicago to boost the sale of Liberty Bonds; baptizing of negroes in the chilly waters of the Mississippi at St. Louis; scenes from the training camps and up-to-the-minute war pictures, are some of the features of recent issues of Screen Telegram that make for popularity of the Mutual news-reel.

"Spotted," the Mutual-Strand comedy release of April 30, casts Billie Rhodes, the comedienne, in a double role. It is said to be built around a novel idea, prettily staged, and well directed.

World to Release Marie Dressler Comedies

Marie Dressler has signed a long-term contract to produce a series of two-reel comedies for World Pictures. The comedies will be produced by Miss Dressler's own company, the Marie Dressler Corporation having just been formed for this purpose. Release dates for the first comedies in the series will be announced by World within a short time. It will be recalled that one of Miss Dressler's recent comedies, "The Agonies of Agnes," was lately presented at the Strand theatre, New York, and exhibitors will be interested to know that this comedy is included in the series to be released by World. Titles of other comedies, both tentative, are "Fired" and "The Washwoman."

MacMahon on Educational Publicity

Henry MacMahon, it was announced last week, has been appointed general press representative of the Educational Film Corporation, the appointment to take effect on April 29. Mr. MacMahon is a pioneer in educational press work.

Announcement of important expansions of Education's activities are expected as soon as President E. W. Hammons has closed several deals now pending.

Rothschild with Corona

Estley Rothschild, who played with Raymond McKee in the Edison production, "The Unbeliever," and who has just returned from a trip through Cuba, Mexico and the Bahama Islands, has signed a contract with the Corona Film Corporation for the remainder of 1918.

Select Gets Bouquets for "Over There"

SELECT PICTURES CORPORATION reports that its patriotic production, "Over There," featuring the work of the Red Cross, is the subject of daily unsolicited testimonials. Patriotic societies as well as theatre owners are using it in connection with drives for the Liberty Loan and War Savings Stamps and the forthcoming Second War Drive of the American Red Cross.

The Chicago Select office reports that "Over There" was seen by Thomas H. Adams, who is the proprietor of The Daily Commercial of Vincennes, Indiana, and also the chairman of the State Council of Defence. Mr. Adams was so enthusiastic about "Over There" that he voluntarily advised theatre managers in his locality to book this picture, which they did to their own substantial pecuniary profit. Mr. Adams' reason for boosting "Over There" as the head of the State Council of Defence, is best expressed in his own words: "This picture will prove of more benefit than all the orators it is possible to secure."

Along this line, too, is the comment of James Schoonover, manager of the Mazda theatre at Aurora, Nebraska, who characterized "Over There" as "a story you will never forget and which will make you more proud of your soldier son, brother or sweetheart"; and who wrote, after showing it at a large profit, "the picture went over fine; it is one of the most pleasing attractions that has ever been shown on our screen. 'Long may you wave.'"

Barbara Castleton's First as World Star

"Vengeance," the World Picture to be released May 20, marks the initial appearance of Barbara Castleton as a World star. Miss Castleton has played in several State Rights productions, among them "On Trial" and "The Lone Wolf." The story of "Vengeance" is laid in England and India, the central figure being an Indian Mystic, played by Montagu Love. Travers Vale directed the picture and the supporting cast includes George McQuarrie, Madge Evans, Jack Drumier and Henry Warwick.

Theda Bara Reviews Her Regimental Godchild

At Camp Kearney, Cal., recently the 158th Infantry stood at "present arms" while its godmother, Theda Bara, passed through the ranks, which were stretched out for three-quarters of a mile. This is an honor ordinarily reserved for generals and presidents.

A military ball was held in the evening, and the great regimental band played the "Theda Bara March," composed in honor of the godmother. Governor Hunt and Miss Bara led the grand march.

New Constance Talmadge Well Received

Select says that Constance Talmadge has been hailed as irresistibly captivating in her April release for Select Pictures, "Up the Road With Sallie," in which she is presented by Lewis J. Selznick. The story is what is known on the stage as high comedy and is said to be ideally suited to set off Miss Talmadge's charms.

Bessie Barriscale's Third Paralta Play Is "Blindfolded"

Personal Tour by Mme. Petrova

Lubin and Ennis, Back from Long Trip, Announce Plans for Appearances of Star in War Savings Campaign

HERBERT LUBIN, personal representative of Madame Olga Petrova and a representative of the firm of General Enterprises, Inc., together with Bert Ennis Director of Publicity for the Petrova Picture Company, returned to New York on Monday of this week, following a flying trip which embraced the principal points of the United States.

Messrs. Lubin and Ennis paid a visit to each office of the First National Exhibitors Circuit, with organization is distributing the special star productions featuring Madame Olga Petrova and made under the auspices of her own personal production organization. During the tour of the Petrova representatives arrangements were completed, with each one of the exchanges throughout the country, whereby an entirely new scheme of exploitation is to be worked out commencing with the fourth special Petrova feature, "Patience Sparhawk." It is planned to apply a considerable amount of intensive publicity covering each Petrova picture from now on in the various localities embraced by the different exchanges.

Tentative plans were also laid with the representatives of the First National Exhibitors Circuit and the various leading newspapers throughout the United States looking toward a personal tour by Madame Olga Petrova to be made during the near future. It is believed that the famous Polish actress will appear in all of the leading photoplay houses of the country for the purpose of aiding the present drive now in effect for the sale of War Saving Stamps.

Thus far but three of the new special productions in which the emotional star has appeared have been released from coast to coast, and it is taken as a mark of distinctive success that "Daughter of Destiny," the initial release, has more than lived up to the expectations of the Petrova Picture Company and the various franchise holders of the circuit.

It is believed that the arrangements consummated by Madame Petrova's representatives during their recent tour will result in bringing the producer and exhibitor more closely together, as special pains were taken to ascertain the type of picture most in demand by the picture showmen, as well as the exact wants of the exhibitor relative to the proper exploitation materials needed to best advertise these Petrova productions.

Barriscale Production Halted

Illness of Star's Sister in New York Calls Paralta Player from California Studio—Other Artists Also Are Ill

BESSIE BARRISCALE left Hollywood recently for New York in answer to a summons to the bedside of her sister, who is dangerously ill in New York. Miss Barriscale had just completed the final scenes of her sixth Paralta production, "Patriotism," when she received word of her sister's illness and left for New York immediately.

Arrangements had been made for Miss Barriscale to start immediately upon her next Paralta play, "Maid o' the Storm," the sets of which have all been completed. While Miss Barriscale is much concerned over her sister's illness, she is still in hopes of returning in the near future to start work on her next production.

The day before Miss Barriscale received word of her sister's illness, Mary Charleson, who was appearing opposite Henry B. Walthall in "Springtime," which is now in the course of production, contracted a severe case of pneumonia and is confined to her home. A great number of the scenes of "Springtime" have already been made under the direction of Bertram Bracken, who decided that it was best to discontinue the filming of the remainder of the production until such time when Miss Charleson could return to the studios.

As J. Warren Kerrigan has not yet fully recovered from the broken leg which he received several months ago, this leaves but one Paralta star, Louise Glaum, working at the studios at the present time. This will not affect the releasing of Paralta Plays in any way whatsoever, owing to the fact that there are a number of productions already completed and ready for release. The Paralta studios were actively engaged in production a number of months before a definite arrangement of distribution had been arranged, and the company is now in a position whereby the absence of these stars from the studio at the present time will not in any way affect the releasing schedule of Paralta Plays.

Gerard Film in Larger Theatres

The First National Exhibitors' Circuit of Ohio is making extensive preparations for a prolonged Cleveland engagement of their newly acquired picture, "My Four Years in Germany."

"We will play the picture at the big legitimate theatres in the state, at the close of the regular theatrical season, before releasing it generally," said S. Mandelbaum, president of the First National in Ohio, "and our present plan is to charge one dollar top price."

Improves with Age

The Pathe serial "The House of Hate," unlike many chapter pictures, is said to be getting better and more exciting as each new episode is unfolded.

The Combination Hard to Beat. William S. Hart and His Demure Leading Woman. Their Newest Artcraft Feature Is "The Tiger Man," Made Under Ince's Supervision

Say "Blue Blood" Is Box Office Tonic

THE production chosen by Goldwyn for its first Selexart release is "Blue Blood," a drama starring Howard Hickman. As the initial play in a group of three, Goldwyn claims to offer it as the strongest feature to be had outside its own productions, and with confidence that "Blue Blood" is a play to galvanize box offices everywhere, embodying all that exhibitors and public want.

"Blue Blood" is supposed to prove that ownership of an old name does not necessarily imply that its possessors are either strong in character or of distinguished ancestry. That it is a fallacy to suppose that because a man's immediate forebears are well known he is himself worthy of respect is said to be graphically brought out in this play. The old conflict of money and love, of social ambition and genuine worth, becomes the pivotal struggle in the production Goldwyn is distributing under the Selexart trade-mark. The mother who forces her daughter into a supposedly advantageous marriage only to discover that the girl has been sold into slavery worse than death—this is a situation as old as civilization itself. Yet in "Blue Blood" it is claimed to be depicted with such relentless realism that the spectator forgets that it is a screen drama and believes that it is life itself unfolding before him.

Magnificent settings made to show the life of pirates as it was lived centuries ago when an ancestor of Spencer Wellington (Howard Hickman) pillaged and burned his way to wealth and a refuge in America. Equally startling are the scenes showing the depths of degradation to which the man descends in his mad revels. A gorgeous pleasure palace erected on the grounds of his estate conceals from the eyes of the world the limit of debauchery which this owner of blue blood calls entertainment and pleasure. Surrounded by a bevy of girls, he whiles away his nights, forgetful of duty to wife and child, until a terrible accident brings both to him at the moment when his fevered brain gives way and he falls to the floor dead.

Triangle Completes Two New Productions

A NEW "Western" with Roy Stewart in the title role has been finished during the week under the direction of Cliff Smith. This drama, "Wolves of the Border," was adapted from the story by Alvin J. Neitz, and deals with the life on the Mexican-U. S. frontier. Jorie Sedgwick has the leading feminine role. Jack Curtis, who was last seen in "The Hard Rock Breed," has a prominent part. The cast also includes Frank McQuarrie, Louis Durham and Curley Baldwin.

"The Loyalty of Taro Sam," directed by Frank Borzage, is the second picture which has reached completion during the week just passed. E. Magnus Ingleton, author of "Her American Husband," wrote this story which combines the mysticism of old Japan with modern American life. The exteriors of the picture were done at the Triangle Ranch studio, where the Oriental atmosphere was effectively reproduced. Jack Livingston heads the cast. Jack Abbe is Taro Sam. Maud Wayne has the chief feminine role. These dramas are now in the film editing department.

"High Stakes," the new crook play in which J. Barney Sherry has the leading part, is well under the direction of Jack Conway. Andrew Soutar wrote this play which relates the experiences of a modern Raffles. An actress new to Triangle, Jane Miller, has the leading feminine role. Director Rosson, Harvey Clark, Ben Lewis, J. P. Wild, and Myrtle Rishell are in the cast.

Fox Chooses Lloyd for New Features

With the statement from William Fox that his organization is to film two Zane Grey stories, "Riders of the Purple Sage" and "The Rainbow Trail," comes an announcement of Mr. Fox's decision to entrust Frank Lloyd with these productions.

"We all regard Mr. Lloyd as a director of real genius and distinction," said Mr. Fox, "and exhibitors may confidently expect exceptionally finished productions in both Zane Grey stories. Mr. Lloyd has a veritable passion for painstaking details, as he evidenced in "Les Miserables," and this will be very valuable in his present work."

Minter Releases Comes on May 6

The next production from the studios of the American Film Company, Inc., starring Mary Miles Minter, will be released as "Social Briars." It was produced under the working title of "The Greater Call." It is set for release on the Mutual schedule May 6.

Metro Promises Something

In an announcement this week Metro declares fans will see a new Francis X. Bushman in "Cyclone Higgins, D.D.," which will have an early release. The star does a character part in this production.

Jewel Has Apparently Scored a New Success With "The Doctor and the Woman," With Mildred Harris and True Boardman

Oscar Apfel, Director, Has Completed His First World Picture, With Kitty Gordon

Fox Names Special Features for May

William Fox's schedule of May releases in the Special Features is now made up, and Mr. Fox announces that the pictures will be these, issued in the order given: George Walsh in "Brave and Bold"; Peggy Hyland in "Peg of the Pirates"; Virginia Pearson in "The Firebrand," and June Caprice in "Blue-Eyed Mary." Henry Lehrman's first Sunshine Comedy production in May will be released under the title of "A Neighbor's Keyhole."

Conkwright Is in It

A. B. Conkwright, character actor, will be seen in dramatic episodes in "Brave and Bold," William Fox's forthcoming Special Feature starring George Walsh.

One of Mr. Conkwright's recent portrayals was that of the bloodthirsty Socialist in James W. Gerard's "My Four Years in Germany."

Pathe Speeds Up Some

Production of Pathe features, starring Frank Keenan, Fannie Ward, Bessie Love and Bryant Washburn, is going forward with high speed in West Coast studios together with Baby Marie Osborne photoplays, two new serials, and comedies featuring Harold Lloyd and Toto.

Glaum Company Hurries

The company of players which is now [illegible] at the Paralta studios in Los Angeles upon the second Paralta Play to feature Louise Glaum, is being worked to capacity every moment allowed by the sunlight. This is said to be due to Miss Glaum's success in "An Enemy Alien."

Twenty Episodes for Serial

"The House of Hate," Pathe's new serial, starring Pearl White, will be released in twenty episodes.

Vitagraph Starts Three More

Alice Joyce, Harry Morey and Gladys Leslie in New Productions—Betty Blythe to Be Morey's Leading Woman

ALBERT E. SMITH, president of the Vitagraph Company, last week started three Blue Ribbon companies to work on new dramas at the company's Brooklyn studio. Alice Joyce heads one company, Harry Morey another and Gladys Leslie the third.

Harry Morey, working under direction of Paul Scardon, has begun work on a new Blue Ribbon feature which will bear the title, "Playing with Fate." Betty Blythe, who was seen with Mr. Morey and Gladys Leslie in "His Own People," and more recently has scored in "Over the Top," as Madame Arnot, will be his leading woman. Others in the cast will be Percy Standing, Robert Gaillard and Stanley Walpole.

The play is from the pen of Tom Terriss, director of Alice Joyce in her last five features, and is declared to be a powerful drama with the peril of circumstantial evidence as its theme.

Miss Joyce, having finished "The Strength of the Weak" has started in the O. Henry story, "Find the Woman" (Cherchez la Femme), with Mr. Terriss as her director and leading man. Mr. Terriss is a member of one of the oldest theatrical families in England, and before his advent into motion pictures was a noted portrayer of Dickens characters and Shakespearean roles. This is the first acting he has done since joining Vitagraph last summer, and incidentally, it is the first O. Henry story in which Miss Joyce has worked. Three out of her last five features have been from the books of Robert W. Chambers.

Gladys Leslie has started work under direction of Martin Justice in "The Soap Girl," a quaint little drama by Lewis Allen Browne, author of "Little Miss George Washington," and other successful plays. This will mark the advent of Mr. Justice to the ranks of Vitagraph's Blue Ribbon feature directors. "The Soap Girl" will be Miss Leslie's fifth feature since she became a Vitagraph star.

Betty Blythe, who will be Harry Morey's leading woman in "Playing with Fate," is a niece of Samuel G. Blythe, the famous Saturday Evening Post writer, is regarded as one of the coming young women of the screen. She is a graduate of the University of southern California, and a talented musician, having received her musical education in Paris.

Goldwyn Announces Its New Productions

IN announcing two new productions, starring vehicles for Madge Kennedy and Mae Marsh, the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation is directing the attention of exhibitors to the box office strength and audience attraction power of its three latest pictures.

Following "The Face in the Dark," writen by Irvin S. Cobb and starring Mae Marsh, come the following: May 5, Mabel Normand in "Joan of Plattsburg," by Porter Emerson Browne; May 19, Madge Kennedy in "The Fair Pretender," by Florence C. Bolles; June 2, Mae Marsh in "The Glorious Adventure," by Edith Barnard Delano.

Goldwyn predicts that "Joan of Plattsburg," the screen's first comedy-drama, will sweep all before it. Never before, Goldwyn says, has there been a screen drama so skilfully blending a timely appeal to patriotism with a plot of lively and sustained interest which, while it has an at mosphere of thrilling martial display, is distinctly not a war story. There are in "Joan of Plattsburg" none of the doubtfully thrilling "battle" scenes popular in contemporary screen fare.

George Loane Tucker made over "Joan of Plattsburg," which was ready for release several months ago when the Government stepped in and asked that certain of the scenes showing details of the military training methods in vogue at the great Plattsburg training camp for officers be eliminated.

Edith Storey Enters New Field of Drama

"THE DEMON," Edith Storey's forthcoming feature picture in the Metro program, will mark a radical change in the character of that star's screen impersonations, 'tis said. It will signalize the departure of Miss Storey from dramas of Western life into the field of romantic comedy and light satire. The production is well under way at Metro's West Coast studios.

As Perdita in "The Demon" Miss Storey has a stellar role quite different from those in her recent pictures, "Treasure of the Sea," "The Claim" and "The Legion of Death." The characterization, that of an American girl sold in childhood in an Algerian slave market and reared in the bandit-ridden hills of Corsica, is said to run the range of emotions, and is just such a one as this gifted actress fairly revels in.

"The Demon" is a picturization of the novel by C. N. and A. M. Williamson. George D. Baker, manager of productions at Metro's western studios, made the adaptation for the screen. He also is directing Miss Storey. The forthcoming production is the occasion for the artistic reunion of the star and the director, as Mr. Baker guided the screen efforts of Miss Storey in her former days when associated with Vitagraph.

COMING PROGRAM OFFERINGS

"U" Presents Priscilla Dean

Her Special Production, "The Two-Soul Woman," Heads Program Week of May 6—A Mystery Story Based on Hypnotism

"THE Two-Soul Woman," a Priscilla Dean Special Production, heads the list of Universal releases for the week of May 6 which consists, according to Universal executives, of an extremely well balanced output capable of furnishing a complete program for any theatre in the country.

The Priscilla Dean production is a mystery story based upon hypnotism in which the star doubles in her role. In one part she is under hypnotic influence—a wayward, impossible woman, the lure for men with her thoughts continually seeking the bright lights. In the other portrayal she is her natural self, a clinging confiding, lovely girl. In "The Two-Soul Woman" Miss Dean has the support of Ashton Dearholt, Joseph Girard, Evelyn Selbie and others not quite as well known.

Three comedies, one of two reels and the others of one reel each, are also released during the week. The Lyons-Moran effort, a one-reeler titled "Whose Baby Are You?" is destined, according to Universal, to live and be shown after the ordinary comedies have outlived their drawing power.

The L-Ko Beauties have another opportunity to display their charm in a two-reel comedy "Her Movie Madness" with Gale Henry and Hughie Mack which is supposed to show to what lengths a girl who desires entry into pictures will go.

Carmel Myers' Next Bluebird Picture Is Called "The Marriage Lie"

Another comedy on the weekly release is the Nestor, entitled "A Kitchen Hero," featuring Eileen Sedgwick.

The fourth episode of the ten-reel Boy Scout serial, "Boy Scouts to the Rescue," will be presented in more than fourteen hundred theatres, Universal says. The title of the episode is "The Spies."

Of the two current serials "The Bull's Eye," with Eddie Polo, is in its fourteenth episode, the title being "The Firing Squad." The Marie Walcamp serial, "The Lion's Claw," is in its sixth episode, "The Dungeon Terror."

Universal Screen Magazine, Universal Current Events and Universal Animated Weekly complete the week's program of releases.

Triangle Leads Off with a Moroso Story

JOHN A. MOROSO, who wrote "The Shoes That Danced" and "The Hand at the Window," recent Triangle releases, has contributed another story to the Triangle program for the week of April 28, his "The Lonely Woman" being the opening release of the week. The understanding of human nature and dramatic values which characterized the two former Moroso plays is said to be apparent in "The Lonely Woman." It is a story of how a woman's unshaken belief in the character of the man loved, resulted in his acquittal and exoneration of a crime of which he had been wrongly accused. Belle Bennett is the featured player, and Lee Hill Percy Challenger, Anna Dodge, Blanche Grey, Alberta Lee and Walter Perkins are in the cast.

"Paying His Debt," the second release of the week, presents Roy Stewart in his first dual role with Triangle. The story is by Alvin J. Neitz, and Cliff Smith directed. In this story Steve Morton, "vanishing bandit," saves the life of "Frank Borden," a human derelict. The two bear an astonishing likeness to one another. When Borden recovers his health he pays his debt by playing "alibi man" to his benefactor, and very nearly pays the penalty of the other's guilt. Josie Sedgwick is leading woman. Harry Yammamoto, well-known Oriental actor, supplies a humorous touch as Ching, the Chinese cook. The cast includes Walter Perkins, William Ellingford, William Dyer and Arthur Millett.

A "darktown" ball is a feature of "Mr. Miller's Economies," the two-reel Keystone comedy release of the week. Mrs. Kate Corbaley, author of the $1,000 prize play, "Real Folks," wrote the story. William Beaudine directed.

Polly Moran in Sennett's "Saucy Madeline"

Polly Moran, the Mack Sennett comedienne, who is well known for her "Sheriff Nell" impersonations, is a woman who can double in tights and six-shooters. Polly handles a revolver as expertly as any Western sheriff's deputy, but in "Saucy Madeline," the Paramount-Mack Sennett release of April 22nd, she donned blue tights with stunning effect. As a matter of fact, it was her husband, played by Charles Lynn, who was stunned the most when he beheld the partner of his joys and sorrows —and mostly sorrows—thus attired. He soon came into action, however, and his pursuit of Ben Turpin, on whom the jealous husband sought to wreak his vengeance, and of Polly makes an exciting finish to the picture, it is said.

"Saucy Madeline" was directed by Richard Jones under Mack Sennett's personal supervision.

Boy Scouts Boost Universal Scout Film

"Boy Scouts to the Rescue" is the title of the five-chapter Boy Scout serial, the first episode of which was released April 15 by Universal. Big advance bookings are reported, the local Boy Scout organizations co-operating with Universal in exploiting the feature. The film was produced under the personal supervision of Sir Robert S. S. Baden-Powell, who appears in the picture. At the request of National Headquarters, Boy Scouts of America, Universal has established at 1600 Broadway a special publicity bureau in connection with the booking campaign.

Irene Van Brugh Has Part in "Masks and Faces"

When all the great theatrical stars in England volunteered to make "Masks and Faces" to raise funds for the orphans of actors who died fighting "out there," Irene Van Brugh, considered by many to be England's greatest actress, was given the leading role opposite Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson. "Masks and Faces," with its fifty stars, will be released in this country as a World Picture May 6.

"Patria" Principals in New Pathe Play

Irene Castle, Milton Sills and Warner Oland, who played the three big parts in the highly successful serial "Patria," again appear together in the new five-part Pathe Play "The Mysterious Client," coming on May 19.

Triangle Cancels One

The Triangle play, "Hundredth Night," which was scheduled as the second release of the week of May 26, has been taken off the schedule for the present, and "The Mossback," featuring William V. Mong and Pauline Starke, has been substituted in its place.

William Fox's "Queen of the Sea" Will Again Present Annette Kellermann to the Screen

Fox Promises Kellermann Film Shortly

Keeping pace with the warm weather calendar, William Fox is out with a promise of release very soon of a new surf spectacle with Annette Kellermann as the heroine. "Queen of the Sea" is the title of the new production, and extreme as were the wonders of "A Daughter of the Gods," the original Fox-Kellermann marine and submarine pageant-drama, they are said to be excelled immeasurably, at least in thrills, in the new venture.

Zoe Rae to Be Presented in a Bluebird

Little Zoe Rae in "Danger Within" is the Bluebird offering for May 6. It is a five-reel production which is said to give the child actress an opportunity to do some of her best work. In promoting the picture Universal officials are impressing upon exhibitors its desirability as a feature for children's matinees.

Another Essanay-Chaplin Released May 4

"A Night Out," the ninth of the Essanay-Chaplin new editions, is released May 4 by General Film Company. This story recounts Charlie's misadventures in high life and is said to be one of his best comedies. In its new form this subject is presented in snappy style and is expected to become a prime favorite with exhibitors.

"Yellow Ticket" on June 2

The release date of Pathe's screen version of the A. H. Woods' play, "The Yellow Ticket," produced by Astra under the direction of William Parke, has been decided upon for June 2, under Pathe's Selective Feature Service Plan.

Kerrigan Back Again

After an absence of eight months from the studio, J. Warren Kerrigan is completing arrangements to appear before the camera at the Paralta plant in Los Angeles within the next two weeks.

Glances at the Program

"The Buyer from Cactus City," a heart interest story with a characteristic last minute O. Henry surprise, is the current release in General Film's Broadway Star series.

Paramount expects wives who imagine themselves unhappy to find much interest and amusement in Billie Burke's next picture, released April 29. It is called "Let's Get a Divorce," a rather explicit title.

Universal Film Company within a few weeks expects to release a feature woven about Theodore Roosevelt's military preparedness doctrines. This will reach the screen through the medium of the Universal Screen Magazine.

In the opinion of Pathe, the American people will find a theme of unusual and timely interest in addition to a good dramatic story in "Ruler of the Road," a Frank Keenan feature, released April 21.

The Juvenile Court scenes in George K. Spoor's feature, "Young America," which is expected to reach the screen shortly, were prepared under the instruction of Judge Ben Lindsay, of Denver.

"The Triple Cross" is the title chosen for Dorothy Dalton's Paramount picture recently completed by Director Neill, under Ince's supervision, and which is scheduled for early release.

William Parsons, whose new comedies will appear on the Goldwyn program, believes there are a thousand and one ways to make the public chuckle, and he intends to master each of them.

Correspondence received from J. C. Williamson Films, Ltd., dated Sydney, March 13, tells of the gala Australian opening of Goldwyn pictures in the Commonwealth at the Theatre Royal.

"How Could You Caroline" will bring Bessie Love to the screen again on May 5, as a Pathe player. The story deals with the life of a girl at a fashionable finishing school and at her home.

During the weeks of April 14 to 20, Paramount and Artcraft pictures were the simultaneous attraction of the principal picture theatres of the city of Detroit, according to news from Pete Schmid.

"The Porters" is the third of the series of Ebony Comedies through General Film. The picture is a current release, in two reels. All the players in this series are colored people.

Universal plans to shortly release "His Parisian Sweetheart," produced under the direction of Joseph DeGrasse. Carmel Myers is the star in this, and Andrew Robson is in the cast.

Bert Lytell, Metro star, goes through one of his well known fights in "The Trail to Yesterday," in which Metro presents him for the first time under that banner. Edwin Carewe directed the picture.

"Over the Top" is still doing what its name implies, according to Vitagraph reports sent out daily from the vicinity of the box office. Sergeant Arthur Guy Empey is working for the Liberty Loan.

Norma Talmadge Is Select's De Luxe Annie In the Screen Version of That Play

A Glimpse of One of the Lovely Walks at the American Film Company's Studio at Santa Barbara

Williams and Darmond in Blue Ribbon

The Vitagraph schedule of releases for the week of April 29, announced by Albert E. Smith, president of the company, is as follows:

Blue Ribbon Feature, five parts, "The Seal of Silence," featuring Earle Williams with Grace Darmond. Directed by Tom Mills.

Serial, two parts, "The Speeding Doom," Episode 3 of "The Woman in the Web," featuring Hedda Nova and J. Frank Glendon. Directed by David Smith and Paul Hurst.

Big V Comedy, one part, "Flirts and Fakers," featuring Montgomery and Rock. Directed by J. A. Howe.

Vitagraph Drew Comedy, one part, "All for the Love of a Girl," featuring Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew.

Billie Burke in Sardou's Noted Story

"Let's Get a Divorce," the latest Paramount picture, starring Billie Burke, is scheduled for release April 29. It is based upon "Divorcons," the celebrated play by Victorien Sardou, and was adapted for the screen by Anita Loos and John Emerson. The settings, appointments and costumes are said to be elaborate, having been selected under Miss Burke's personal supervision. The exteriors were filmed in Florida.

"Fair Pretender" Is Madge Kennedy's Next

Following her success in Roy Sommerville's "The Danger Game," Goldwyn announces Madge Kennedy in "The Fair Pretender," by Florence C. Bolles, to be released May 19. The high praise from critics, exhibitors and public evoked by the former play is being banked upon by Goldwyn to play a prominent part in making "The Fair Pretender" a signal success. The play is said to be one of constant movement and the leading role of Sylvia Maynard distinctly an acting one.

TO EXHIBITORS V

READ THIS

50,000

PEOPLE SAW

"THE KAISER"

-The Beast of Berlin

IN KANSAS CITY

IN TWO DAYS

EXHIBITORS! Tear up all your old figures on box-office receipts. Throw away past S. R. O. records. Burn up all memos on "repeats" or "holdovers." Skid into the ash-can every dog-eared piece of paper bearing on past record-business. You won't need any of these things after today. "The KAISER" is here!

TODAY is the day of the new deal from a fresh pack and all off the top. The day of the most amazing money-getter that the country's ever seen. The day of the Exhibitor. The day of the biggest clean-up in history. The wonderful day of "The KAISER, the Beast of Berlin." Come a-running or you'll be too late. WIRE US NOW!

JEWEL PRODUCTIONS
INCORPORATED
Executive Offices, 1600 Broadway, New York City

HO ARE AFTER THE REAL MONEY

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAM

April 11 - 1918

"Showed to 20,000 yesterday and 30,000 to-day - Convention Hall. Turned away over 5,000 to-night. Police unable to handle crowds to-day. Will rope off three blocks to traffic to-morrow. "The KAISER" is knocking them dead!"

Signed
Milton J. H. Feld

"THE KAISER"
- The Beast of Berlin

In the Independent Field

Binney to Produce Comedies

Harold Binney, Better Known as "Josh" Organizes Florida Film Corporation — One Two Reeler a Month—Filbert Stars

H. J. BINNEY, better known as "Josh" Binney, screen comedian, director and producer, announces that he has organized his own producing company, The Florida Film Corporation. A two-reel "Josh" Binney comedy will be produced each month, according to the plans of the producer.

Mr. Binney first worked in screen comedies in co-operation with Mack Sennett as assistant director and comedian. He was next associated with the production of Vogue Comedies for the Mutual Program. Sunshine Comedies were next produced under the direction of Mr. Binney. "The Masterpieces" and Lion Comedies came next and in this connection Mr. Binney held the office of president and director-general.

Mr. Binney's reputation as a producer of successful comedies brought him many offers for affiliations including a proposition submitted by capitalists of Jacksonville, Fla. After investigation Mr. Binney was convinced that in these overtures were conditions and opportunities which would permit of his putting into operation certain ideas regarding photoplay production which had long been in his mind, inasmuch as he would have the hearty co-operation of H. J. Klutho, one of Jacksonville's most influential business men and owner of the Klutho Studios. The Florida Film Corporation was organized, and the policy of production being the monthly release of a two-reel comedy, and Mr. Binney claims that he now is equipped to produce the very best releases of his career as a director.

Funny Fatty Filbert, also known to hosts of audiences as Nathan Dewing, is to star in Mr. Binney's company. His reputation as a laugh getter has placed him in the very foremost ranks of the funny fat men of the screen.

Harold J. (Josh) Binney, of Florida Film Co.

Fatty Filbert will have the support of Fred Bosorril, comedian from South America; Vivian Dart, as leading lady; Glen Lambert, Rox Renfro, Florence McLaughlin, Gertie Fishback and Ira Wentley. A. A. Porchet is cameraman.

In presenting the "Josh" Binney comedies it is Mr. Binney's intent to carry out an entirely different thought in each and every release and incorporating in addition to its comedy possibilities stories of human interest.

Three of the new series are now completed and a most vigorous advertising campaign is now being outlined covering those as well as the releases to follow. Ernest Shipman will exploit the "Josh" Binney comedies, with headquarters at No. 17 West Forty-fourth street, New York city.

Magnet Announces First Chaplin Reissue

Magnet Film Exchange announces that May 1st, the first of the series of two-reel Chaplin re-issues, "The Hula-Hula Dance," adapted from "His Prehistoric Past," will be released for the Greater New York territory. The advance bookings on this first Chaplin are very encouraging, according to reports. The advertising matter on this comedy will be composed of lobby displays and one, three and six-sheet posters.

Variety of Advertising for "Satan's Pawn"

W. H. Productions Company is creating for the use of exchanges handling the first Bessie Barriscale feature, "Satan's Pawn," an elaborate variety of advertising matter, including posters, lobby displays, newspaper cuts and press stories. From advance reports from exchanges already booking this feature, many leading theatres in the country have contracted for same and many others are investigating.

"Independent Market in Healthy Condition"

"The state rights market from our standpoint is in a healthy condition," said an official of W. H. Productions, "and the demand for independent box office attractions is increasing. We find that a particular demand at this time is for good short subjects of one and two reel lengths, and due to the great increase in production cost of short subjects, it seems to be impossible for the majority of film producers to turn out the required subjects at a price that is within the means of the independent exchange man.

"W. H. Productions Company are exploiting Hart re-issues, re-issues of Keystone comedies, a series of two-reel Shorty Hamilton western comedy-dramas, and a series of twenty single and two-reel Chaplin re-issues, all of these being re-edited.

"W. H. also has a series of Bessie Barriscale feature re-issues, 'Satan's Pawn,' being the first release."

"Southwestern Section in Sound Condition"

Jerome Abrams, in charge of the southern division of Foursquare Pictures, left Dallas early this week for Atlanta. Mr. Abrams has been devoting a large part of his time during the past three months to developing the southwestern territory preparatory to effecting an agreement with the Southwestern Film Corporation to represent Foursquare in that part of the country.

"The southeastern part of the United States will now have my attention for the next few weeks," writes Mr. Abrams. "It is my belief that never in the history of the motion pictures was the time riper for the photoplay than now."

Large Shipments of Carbons to Foreign Lands

E. H. Kaufman, Inter-Ocean, manager of distribution for Speer Carbons in foreign territory, is in St. Marys, Pa., arranging for the shipment of a car-load of these carbons to foreign ports. The consignment includes, 77,000 for Spain; 26,000 for Argentine; 20,000 for China; 18,000 for Peru; 18,000 for the Dutch East Indies; 10,000 for Manila and 1,000 for Japan. He states that the sales in foreign countries of Speer Carbons, at the present time, double that of any German-made carbon during the period before the war.

West Writes Two Reeler

"The Vulcano King" is announced as a future release of the King-Bee Films Corporation. It was written by Billy West.

Doris Kenyon Completing First De Luxe

"The Street of Seven Stars," Doris Kenyon's first production under her own company, The De Luxe Pictures, Inc., is nearing completion under the direction of John B. OBrien. The interiors have been shot and Director O'Brien and Miss Kenyon and her company will leave this week for Virginia, where the exteriors will be taken. The picture will be in six reels. Following the completion of "The Street of Seven Stars," Miss Kenyon will commence work on her second production. The story selected for this second picture is from the pen of a prominent author, it is announced.

"The Street of Seven Stars" was written by Mary Roberts Rinehart, popular fiction writer. Mr. O'Brien who is directing Miss Kenyon will be remembered for his work in connection with the direction of Mary Pickford in "Hulda from Holland" and "The Foundling."

"The Belgian" Shown at 81st Street Theatre

"The Belgian," Sydney Olcott's special production, released by the U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation, of which Frank Hall is president, had its first public presentation in New York last week when it opened at the Eighty-first Street theatre. Valentine Grant and Walter Whiteside are featured in this picture. Miss Grant made a personal appearance at the opening last week. The presentation was given under the personal direction of A. L. Shakman, manager of the theatre. Members of the Belgian Consulate were present and the theatre was specially decorated for the occasion.

Francis Ford to Produce One and Two Reelers

In addition to the features which Francis Ford will produce for Fordart Films, work on which is to be commenced at the new studio in Los Angeles within a short time, he as director-general, has planned to make one and two reel subjects in series of six.

These short subjects, it is announced, are to be entirely different from the short reel pictures which have been produced in the past. Announcement will be made soon regarding the first series of six and the manner in which they will be released to the exhibitor.

Reichenbach Entertains First National Members

Harry Reichenbach, acting for the National Film Corporation, gave a dinner Thursday night in honor of the visiting members of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, who came to New York to attend the meeting of this organization. About seventy-five persons attended the dinner which was given at Arrowhead Inn. A nine-course dinner was served by Ben Riley, proprietor. During the evening, "Smiling" Bill Parsons' first Capitol Comedy, "Bill's Baby," was shown.

THE INDEPENDENT FIELD TICKER

Territorial Sales Reported During the Past Week

Production	Buyer	Territory
"One Law for Both" (Ivan Film Productions)	Foursquare Pictures, Atlanta, Ga., and Minneapolis, Minn.	North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Northern Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota.
"Married in Name Only," "One Law for Both," "Sins of Ambition" (Ivan Film Productions)	Superfeatures, Ltd., Toronto, Canada	Canada.
"The Garden of Allah" (Selig Special — Sidney Garrett, Foreign Agent)		Java.
"Lest We Forget," "Blue Jeans" (Metro Specials—J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., Foreign Agents)	North American Motion Pictures, Buenos Aires	Argentine.
"The Two-Gun Man" in "The Bargain," "The Bandit and the Preacher" and "The Hell Hound of Alaska" (W. H. Productions Hart Reissues)	Mammoth Pictures, Inc., New York	Northern New Jersey.
"Satan's Pawn" (Bessie Barriscale Reissue by W. H. Productions; 16 two-reel Shorty Hamilton Western Comedy-Dramas and series of 20 Chaplin one and two-reelers—W. H. Productions Reissues)	Globe Feature Film Corp., Boston	New England.
Series of 16 Shorty Hamilton Comedy-Dramas (W. H. Productions Reissues)	Standard Film Company, Cleveland	Ohio, Kentucky.

Tourneur Created Big Screen Productions

MAURICE TOURNEUR, who announced the organization of his own independent producing corporation last week, has established a good directorial record during his four years in America. His first independent production, "Sporting Life," based on Cecil Raleigh and Seymour Hicks' famous Drury Lane melodrama, will be his twenty-eighth American production.

Constance and Freddy Binney Are to Appear In Maurice Tourneur's Production, "Sporting Life"

Mr. Tourneur came to this country on May 1, 1914, after a distinguished career as a screen director in France with Eclair and other big Parisian organizations. He began producing late in May for World Film and has been steadily occupied with World Film and Paramount-Artcraft productions since. In his forty-six months in America, Mr. Tourneur has made twenty-seven production. This is an average of one production every six weeks since May, 1914, a record that few if any other producers have so far attained.

During his four years in America, Mr. Tourneur has been the creator of a number of noteworthy photodramas, including "The Whip," Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird," for Artcraft, Granville Barker's "Prunella," in which Marguerite Clark appears, "Barbary Sheep," "The Rise of Jenny Cushing," and "Rose of the World" with Elsie Ferguson.

He directed Mary Pickford in several of her biggest successes including "The Poor Little Rich Girl." He made Clara Kimball Young's famous adaptation of "Trilby."

"Perfection Not Yet Attained"

Western Import Company's Official Disagrees with "Consensus of Opinion"—"Mickey" Cited as Example

AN official of the Western Import Company in commenting upon conditions in the film industry concludes from the statements of others that there is a consensus of opinion holding that the industry has reached its maximum limitations. With this opinion the Western official does not agree and in the following interview tells why:

"Conclusions of thought are many times arrived at by comparative methods, and possibly the present day stride, which falls short in greatness of the strides of former days, has caused the minds of those holding this belief to become somewhat befogged, because the field for improvement has become more narrow.

"In former periods progress and improvement went by rapid jumps and bounds, in fact, so rapid that decision, in order to be opportune, necessitated snap and quick-fire judgment, because delay in consideration of propositions oftentimes proved fatal, in that during this period of deliberation new discoveries and developments surpassing them had taken birth.

"Instead of the industry reaching the 'bumper' end of the line of progress, it has reached in reality a junction of ingenuity. It is now in the state or era of finesse, from which point or period only the fittest survive.

"In the former days the field was large, and due to this many became successful and wealthy. The field for development and improvement has narrowed down to the small end, like the outlet pipe into which three or four streams from tangent pipes are feeding. To maintain a place at the outlet, only the strongest of the particles contained in the influx are able to reach.

"At different periods of the industry's life, different men, like Griffiths, Ince, Sennett, DeMille and others have been able, due to their wonderful ability, and their clear sense of apprehension, to bring forth some new phase, which has met with unanimous success. For a long time these men remained in obscurity and did not set forth their discoveries until the same had been perfected and finally were presented.

"This is the era of finesse. Evidence of this deep finesse, such as Griffith, Ince and the others have shown at times in the past, is again brought forth by Mack Sennett, in his comedy drama, "Mickey," which is controlled by the Western Import Company.

"This production displays Mr. Sennett's new form of comedy dramatic technique. In substance this new form of technique is that of the modern trend,—quick action filled with value and composed of all essentials from beginning to end.

"Mr. Sennett is considered the premier of comedy producers. After giving the story of 'Mickey' the most careful treatment that only a man of Sennett's type could possibly give it, his analysis convinced him that 'Mickey' was possessing of five important component parts, respectively, first, humor; second, pathos; third, thrills; fourth, adventure, and fifth, 'heart.'"

"Mickey" is announced for release, soon.

Southwestern Allies with Foursquare

WITH a view toward widening its scope of operations in the Southwest, Foursquare Pictures has contracted with the Southwestern Film Corporation, the latter to distribute all Foursquare product in the Southwestern States which this distributing organization covers.

"Our arrangement with Messrs. F. M. Sanford and L. C. McHenry," said Jacob Wildberg, treasurer of Foursquare, "is for the purpose of obtaining the utmost efficiency for our patrons. To secure such efficiency the element of distribution cost is an essential, and because of the strong organization the Southwestern Film Corporation maintains, it is possible to secure a higher degree of service for the exhibitor, and to provide him with photoplays on the commercial basis I regard as imperative for his needs.

"Operating cost is one of the fundamentals in the distribution of pictures which must have the closer attention, I believe, of those in the business who wish to see distribution placed upon a basis of lasting satisfaction. Therefore, whenever such an arrangement similar in advantage to that made with Southwestern can be made at few other points it will be brought about.

"Exhibitors in Texas, southern Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas all appreciate the progressiveness of the Southwestern Film Corporation. According to District Manager Jerome Abrams, in charge of the southern divisions of Foursquare Exchanges, the aims and purposes of the Southwestern concern fit in perfectly with those of Foursquare.

"Both Mr. Sanford and Mr. McHenry have demonstrated their capacities to secure and retain the patronage of the exhibitors in their territory. They both believe in getting quality pictures and in booking these pictures at prices the exhibitors can afford to pay."

Katzenjammer Kids' Latest

"Vengeance and Vanity," the late starring vehicle of the Katzenjammer Kids of comic supplement renown, started on its tour of the theatres, booking these short subjects in animated cartoon form, last week. It is said to be the best yet. The Educational Film Corporation of America is releasing these subjects, which have been produced by the International Film Service, New York.

Francis Ford Discusses a Script With the Author of "Berlin via America," His New Production

Ford's First To Be Handled by Shipman

"Berlin via America," the first Fordart Production, in which Francis Ford and Edna Emerson are starred, will be released on the state rights basis, it is announced. Ernest Shipman, 17 West 44th Street, will be sales agent. Mr. Shipman says that he has a number of buyers interested in "Berlin via America" and expects to close for a number of territories within the coming week. Mr. Ford is the producer.

Six Bret Comedies Ready for Release

The Tom Bret Enterprises, with offices at 616-18, 220 W. 42d street, announce the completion of a new series of comedies, written and titled by Tom Bret, who collaborated with Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew on the titles of the Metro Drew Comedies. The pictures were directed by Arthur Ellery, who put on the Falstaff and Princess Brand Comedies, for Thanhouser. James Aubrey, the former star of the Big "V" Comedies, is featured. Miss Virginia Clark, who has worked in Billy West Comedies, is in support.

The Bret Comedies are to be released through independent exchanges, three one-reelers and one two-reeler a month. The company has been working at the Victor Studios, New York, and during the past few weeks have finished six pictures, "His Vinegar Bath," "Twin Bedrooms," "Why Not Marry," "Fun With the Family," "Measles Maniac" and "A Nut Sunday."

Gail Kane Star in Graphic's "When Man Betrays"

Gail Kane has been engaged to portray the principal role in Graphic Film Corporation's next production, "When Man Betrays." Ivan Abramson will direct. Miss Kane has a large following and has been seen in innumerable successes in the past years. The theme of the story will be announced later.

Government Workers Free to See "Eagle's Eye"

The management of the Kempner theatre at Little Rock, Ark., adopted a unique way of attracting attention to the fact that he had booked "The Eagle's Eye," the twenty-episode serial by William J. Flynn, recently retired Chief of the United States Secret Service. On the day he ran the first episode which tells the plot which resulted in the sinking of the Lusitania he opened his theatre an hour and a half earlier than usual and advertised that all soldiers, sailors, Liberty Bond workers, Thrift Stamp sellers or other persons engaged in war service of any description would be admitted free.

The result was packed houses from the minute the doors were opened at 1 o'clock in the afternoon until nearly midnight. The management of the Kempner said that despite the large number of free admissions, his gross receipts were above the average.

Gillingham Gets Rights to "Over the Top"

A. S. Gillingham, of Detroit, announced last week that he has secured the rights to Vitagraph's "Over the Top" for a number of Michigan cities. These include Detroit, Grand Rapids, Ann Arbor, Jackson, Lansing, Flint, Kalamazoo, Bay City and Saginaw.

It is understood that the picture already has from 30 to 40 days' booking in that territory over the Butterfield and other circuits.

Seven Hundred and Fifty Thousand Copies of "Mickey"

Daniels & Wilson advise the Western Import Company that the Keith Circuit is programming in all of their theatres the song, "Mickey," during the intermission, as the musical selection, and that the largest piano roll companies have already made a player roll of the song. To date they have disposed of almost 750,000 copies of the new edition of "Mickey."

Inter-Ocean to Take Entire Office Building

Inter-Ocean Film Corporation contemplates taking over the entire building in the motion picture district of Manhattan, according to an announcement emanating from the present offices of Inter-Ocean, Candler Building, 32nd Street. Paul H. Cromlin, president of Inter-Ocean, said that further announcement concerning the contemplated move, would be made next week.

Late Jester Liked

"The Wrong Flat," the May release of the Jester Comedies, featuring Twede-Dan, was shown to a gathering of New York exhibitors last week. The consensus of opinion was that "The Wrong Flat" is the best yet.

Thanhouser to Start Producing

W. E. Shallenberger, President of Arrow Film and Vice-President of Thanhouser, Will Be Active Manager—Six a Year

THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION, under the active management of W. E. Shallenberger, will begin shortly the production of super-features at its studios in New Rochelle, according to an announcement made by the Arrow Film Corporation, through which distributing organization these productions will be released. It is the intention of the Thanhouser people to produce at least six features a year.

W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, who is also treasurer and active manager of the Thanhouser Film Corporation, when asked about Thanhouser's future plans, said that it was very probable that the company would soon resume making pictures, but said he could not announce any definite plans at the present time.

Thanhouser has been out of the production field for some time. For a number of years it was one of the best known producing organizations in the world and some of the most noteworthy pictures were filmed in its studios. In the old days Thanhouser set a pace for most of the other producers. On its payroll were some of the keenest and best equipped picture men of the industry, and many of the devices and inventions that have since facilitated and so greatly improved the making and showing of motion pictures were thought out and perfected in the New Rochelle studios.

Thanhouser temporarily discontinued producing with plenty of money in the bank and a high financial rating in Wall Street. The officials of the company determined to quit making pictures for awhile, and then enter the actual production game again with a lot of new, practical ideas.

The Thanhouser studios in New Rochelle are among the best equipped of their kind in the country. They have been leased, at various times, to different producers and only recently the Clara Kimball Young company completed its Eastern work there and left for California.

A few weeks ago the Thanhouser Company held its annual meeting and elected Crawford Livingston president; Wilbert Shallenberger, vice-president; A. E. Jones, secretary, and W. E. Shallenberger, vice-president. The following were elected directors: Felix Kahn, Crawford Livingston, Wilbert Shallenberger, A. E. Jones, Gerald Livingston, W. E. Shallenberger, and Jessie Bishop.

News from King-Bee Camp

Doings in the King-Bee Camp—New Bee-Hive Exchange in St. Louis—New Distributing Company for Kansas—Theatre Bookings

JOE LEVY, manager of the new Bee-Hive Exchange, with offices in St. Louis, has sold the state of Kansas and west Missouri on the Billy West King-Bee Comedies. Mr. Levy will now confine his activities to St. Louis and its surrounding territory, where he has been unusually successful in the past with this brand of two-reelers. The new concern that has purchased King-Bee's releases will be known as the Bee-Hive Company, with offices in the Ozark Building, Kansas City.

R. C. Cropper, manager of one of the new Bee-Hive Exchanges recently opened, with headquarters in Chicago, reports that the success of the Billy West King-Bee Comedies in his territory is the greatest ever attained by any concern with which he has been connected.

The state of Kansas and the western part of Missouri will have the Billy West King-Bee Comedies supplied them by a new company named the "Camp-Bell Company," who have asked permission to do business under the name of the Bee-Hive Exchange Company. Nat H. Spitzer, sales manager of the King-Bee Films Corp. has given them the right to use this name. The first comedy released by them is "His Day Out."

The Canadian Film Service, Limited, with offices at Vancouver, B. C., W. P. Nichols, manager, has secured the rights for the comedies for the following territories: Western Canada, Provinces of Yukon, British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, and that part of Ontario west of and including Port Arthur. The first King-Bee Comedy released by them is "The Slave."

Billy West Comedies have been signed by the management of the Empire theatre, Troy, Proctor's new Troy theatre, every Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday on schedule, Gardiner Hall every Monday and Tuesday on schedule. This includes all the first class houses in Troy.

The following Albany theatres are now playing Billy West King-Bee Comedies: "Proctor's Annex," "Delaware," "Hudson," "Arbor," "Pearl," "Broadway," "Parkway" and "Clinton Square" every Friday and Saturday on schedule. Other up-state bookings include the "Bright Spot" at Rensselaer and the "Playhouse" at Hudson, N. Y.

The New York houses running West Comedies are:

Fox's Bedford and Ridgewood theatres. New Loew bookings include the "American," "West End," "Royal" and "86th street" theatres. Proctor's Twenty-third street theatre is running "The Orderly" four days as a special attraction.

Late bookings are the Elkwood theatre in the Bronx; Greenwich theatre, New York; "Drury Lane," on Amsterdam avenue, and "The Concourse," up-town, New York.

The following theatres start Billy West on schedule: "Fifty-ninth street theatre" and "Belle Paree," Greenpoint Star theatre and the "Palace" in Brooklyn.

Fisher Sees "Silver Lining"

Frederick V. Fisher, Large Theatre Owner in Oregon, Washington and Montana Speaks of Conditions

FREDERICK V. FISHER, First National Exhibitors Circuit's franchise holder for the district included in the territory surrounded by Seattle, secretary of the Exhibitors' Film Exchange, Inc., secretary of the Greater Theatres Company, operating the Coliseum, Liberty, Strand and Mission theatres in Seattle, before leaving New York, where he attended the meeting of the First National Exhibitors Circuit's franchise holders at Hotel Astor, last week, gave out an interesting statement of conditions in and about Washington territory, to a representative of the NEWS.

Mr. Fisher opened the interview with the clear, optimistic statement: "Picture conditions on the coast were never better." Mr. Fisher is interested in seven of the leading theatres in the Washington, Oregon and Montana territory and knows whereof he speaks. "I have never seen the picture business, speaking from an exhibitor's standpoint, in a more healthy condition than now," he continued. "My theatres are getting the business and the other fellows' theatres are getting the business, but in all justice to myself, I shall state that I think I am getting the better deal. I am running all of the First National releases and to date these subjects have proven box-office winners.

"The war, in my opinion, has had a great deal to do with altering conditions from the exhibitor's standpoint, but so far as I can judge from my own experience, the people have not lost sight of 'movies,' as some would lead us to believe. The people realize that diversion in the form of amusement is as essential as co-operating in every way possible with the Government in winning the war. The theatre has not suffered.

"I open Saturday, at the Coliseum, with the First National's late release, 'Tarzan of the Apes' and I expect to do a record business. At another of my Seattle houses I will show Chaplin's latest, 'A Dog's Life,' and here, too, I expect to do 'some business.' 'Tarzan' will be followed by 'My Four Years in Germany.' I have no complaint, in any way, shape or manner."

Mr. Fisher, in addition to his theatres in Seattle, operates the Rialto in Butte, Montana, and the Liberty and Columbia in Portland, Oregon. He is one of the most prominent theatre owners in the Northwest.

Prisoners See "Romance of the Underworld"

FRANK A. KEENEY, Frank A. Keeney Pictures Corporation, took his first independent production, "A Romance of the Underworld," starring Catherine Calvert, to Sing Sing Prison, last week, and presented it before more than one thousand inmates. The showing was given on the request of the Mutual Welfare League and was held in the auditorium of the prison, and was roundly applauded.

The theme of "A Romance of the Underworld," written by the late Paul Armstrong, playwright and deceased husband of Miss Calvert, deals with the cocaine and opium traffic in New York's Chinatown and teaches a practical moral lesson. A review of the picture which appears in the official organ published by the league, the Star-Bulletin, says in part:

"The two greatest evils in the world today," says the review, "are Prussian 'kultur' and the 'dope' habit, and although the former sooner or later will surely be crushed, the latter will continue to wreck the minds and bodies of men and kill their souls just as long as drugs can be obtained in an unlawful manner. The theme of 'A Romance of the Underworld' deals with the drug traffic in and about the Chinatown slums, and portrays in a vivid manner the power of the ward 'Boss,' that makes possible the existence of this horrible menace, so deadly to the moral atmosphere of any community."

Of the star in the picture, Catherine Calvert, the review says: "Her charming personality, graceful movements and facial beauty place her in the class A of screen beauties."

"I shall value this review more than any other which could be written," says Frank A. Keeney, producer of the picture. "If such an audience can't size this picture up at its true worth, no audience can."

Rolfe Signs Star—To Produce Independently

B. A. ROLFE, who severed, recently, his relations with Metro as one of its producing units, arrived in New York last week from the Coast. He announced on his return East that he has organized a new company, and that plans were now formed for the production of eight feature pictures a year.

Mr. Rolfe announced also that he has signed as one of the several screen stars he expects to have under his management, Florence Reed, whose success on the speaking stage and screen has been decisive. Miss Reed is the first of the screen stars to sign with Mr. Rolfe. He expects to announce the names of others shortly.

The detailed plan to be followed by Mr. Rolfe in his new producing activities has not been announced. It was stated, however, that it was because he wished to enter the independent producing field that Mr. Rolfe withdrew his producing activities from the Metro organization. He retains still his financial interest in this organization. A more detailed announcement will be made next week.

Mabel Julienne Scott, Feminine Lead In Harry McRae Webster's "Reclaimed"

Current Gaumont News Weeklies Timely

THE semi-weekly news reels, the Gaumont News and the Gaumont Graphic, the only independent news reels released, are finding a hearty reception in the hands of the exhibitors who are now booking this product of the Gaumont Company. The News is shipped every Tuesday morning and the Gaumont Graphic every Friday morning. The exhibitor receives these reels as soon as they are shipped as there is no specified release date.

The greater part of each reel of the current issue is taken up with wartime subjects. In Gaumont News No. 4, shipped to exchanges on the morning of April 16, every subject relates to the war. There are shown in interesting detail the biggest rifle range in the world, fitted with the latest equipment, where Uncle Sam's soldiers are becoming the most expert marksmen; a big sham battle, where the marines are given hard practice in warfare; aerial photography, by which submarines may be detected beneath the surface of the ocean; the visit of the Secretary of the Navy to the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, where more than 10,000 men are in readiness; and, among other timely scenes are the death-defying aerial stunts performed by Lieutenant Flachaire, the famous French "Ace" who is aiding in the instruction of American aviators.

Hughes to Manage Foursquare Branches

M. C. Hughes, formerly with the Metro Film Service, Canada, has signed with Foursquare Pictures, to take complete charge of its Buffalo and Pittsburgh exchanges. Mr. Hughes is one of the youngest exchange managers in the industry.

Mrs. Robert Vernon to Enter Picture Business

Mrs. Robert Vernon, wife of the late "Pommery Bob" Vernon, announces that she will enter the theatrical and motion picture business under the name of the Mrs. Bob Vernon Enterprises. Detailed announcement will be given later.

Alice Mann Star Comedienne for Mode' Art

F. J. KROULIK, director general Camel Film Company, of Chicago, announces that he has signed Alice Mann, comedienne, to a long term contract, to appear in Mode Art Comedies, as leading comedienne. Camel Film will produce one and two reel comedy dramas.

Miss Mann's first engagement in pictures with with the Lubin Company. She was cast for the part of a mischievous girl in "Otto the Soldier." Her work in this production won her immediate recognition. Since then she has appeared in Pathe, Vitagraph, Universal, and Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle Paramount productions in leading roles and has just finished work in the Essanay production "A Pair of Sixes," in which she co-starred with Taylor Holmes.

In all pictures that Miss Mann has appeared in she is to be found as the merry little laugh-maker and under her new affiliations she will be seen in especially written stories of the lighter vein that will give her a greater opportunity to show her worth.

In the Mode' Art Comedies Miss Mann will be surrounded by capable support. All productions will be supervised by Mr. Kroulik.

Miss Mann is a native of Plainfield, New Jersey, and a graduate of the Boston Girls' Latin School. She is an accomplished horsewoman.

Sterling Film Opens Detroit Offices

The Sterling Film Exchange has opened offices in the New Film Building, Detroit, Mich.

The president of the company is H. Woodhead, well known in commercial circles of Detroit. The treasurer is E. W. Diehl.

The Sterling Film Exchange has purchased the exclusive distribution rights of "Babbling Tongues" and "One Law for Both," the two super-plays produced by the Ivan Film Company. Both of these pictures are 7,000 feet in length, and Messrs. Woodhead and Diehl are sanguine that presenting these two productions to the trade makes their big opening drive in Michigan territory an auspicious one.

Other well-known Ivan attractions will be released by the Sterling people in due course, it is said.

Liberty Army Calls Ted Karatz

Another of Select's best film salesmen has reported for duty in the National Army, Ted Karatz, who figured prominently in Branch Manager H. A. Rathner's successful drive in the Minneapolis territory, has been called in the selective draft listings, and has reported at camp. Karatz has the reputation of being one of the very best film salesmen in the Northwest. He and Manager Rathner have been associated in picture selling for many years, and the parting means a separation of old friends.

Garrett Champions Duped Film

Sidney Garrett, President, J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., Appeals for Privilege to Use Duped Prints Abroad

SIDNEY GARRETT, president of J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., in warning the manufacturers of the foreign market conditions says that in all probability a complete embargo will be placed on all exports of films for a few months at least. He says:

"I have been authorized by the Mundusfilm Company, of Paris, that owing to the conditions that are prevailing in France today, no more purchases can be made without the privilege of duping. Manufacturers can readily see that the foreign business must be carefully looked after. Their old idea that duping was a terrible thing must be entirely forgotten.

"The Mundusfilm, of Paris, writes me that they do not mind paying royalty for the particular subject that they purchase, but they desire with that, the privilege of having a black and white print and one full titled print-tinted. The reason for this is, that the shipping conditions are so bad that although film has been one of the best assets a shipping company could have, owing to the large rate imposed upon it, and one of its most valuable cargoes from a money point of view, the conditions today are entirely reversed. War shows no favors to any particular line. The Government is reserving very little space for film, hence the lessening of prints and the incoming request for duping privilege.

"You can readily see by considering a territory like France that can take from four to eight prints of a subject, that by duping privilege, this lessens the amount of film outgoing by steamer. So consequently it not only helps the steamship companies and the Government, but it also helps the exhibitors.

"France takes on a print basis about four copies and if you wish to arrive at the royalty basis when selling on a footage basis you can do so by the following method:

"Four copies of a subject with flash titles, a print of 5,000 feet would mean 20,000 feet. Suppose they paid nine cents a foot. The way to arrive at the royalty or the proportion of what the territory is worth would be to deduct four and one-half cents for printing cost and the four and one-half cents would be the royalty figures.

"Manufacturers must realize apart from the saving of importation tax going into France, there would be the saving of insurance, reservation for space on a boat. Not only does this condition exist in France, but is practically in vogue in England. Probably few of the manufacturers do not know that the majority of the theatres in England are closed at 9:30 in the evening, and when you realize that the people are working as many hours as they possibly can on war work, the closing of the theatres at this time does not allow the people to go to the theatres in the same way as here in America.

"Manufacturers must readily see that the exhibitors in the foreign countries who desire duping privileges do not want it for any vain reasons, but they desire it on account of the conditions that are prevailing at present. As anybody knows, when a print is duped, it does not come out with that sharpness and the picture is not so appealing as from the original negative, but if amusements are to be carried on, if they cannot get the best, they naturally take the shortest cut to supply the demands made upon them."

High Praise from Scotch Peer

Lord Aberdeen Says First National's "My Four Years in Germany" Is Bound to Arouse All Who See It

MARK M. DINTENFASS, who, with Warner Brothers organized the company which produced Ambassador James W. Gerard's "My Four Years in Germany," is in receipt of the following letter from Lord Aberdeen, who was the guest of Mr. Dintenfass at a performance of the Gerard film at the Knickerbocker theatre a few days ago:

Ritz-Carlton Hotel,
New York.

Dear Mr. Dintenfass:

I want to tell you about our impressions regarding "My Four Years in Germany."

It is a splendid production; or rather, it is a grand idea, admirably worked out. The technique seems to be perfect; while at the same time (to borrow another musical term) the motif is sustained from first to last, without a trace of monotony. Consequently, the attention of the spectator (and he is made to feel that he is more than a mere spectator) is absorbed and indeed fascinated.

I could allude to many features in detail; notably the extremely fine music, but enough has been said to indicate my opinion, which is heartily shared by Lady Aberdeen.

The main point is, of course, that this production seems bound to do good, in helping us all to realize what it behooves us to realize more and more; especially it should induce any who are still luke-warm to dismiss that most undesirable condition.

And so all patriotic American and British people can, with full cordiality, say to you and your colleagues. "Go on and prosper."

Yours faithfully,
ABERDEEN AND TEEMAIR.

Wide Publicity for Flynn Serial

Story of "Eagle's Eye" to Run in Every Important Newspaper—Twenty Consecutive Weeks—Circulation Four Million

A PUBLICITY campaign which includes, at the present time, a full page of reading matter and pictures weekly in sixty-seven newspapers having an aggregate circulation of nearly four million, in connection with "The Eagle's Eye," the serial story of the work of German spies and plots in America, by William J. Flynn, is announced by The Whartons, producers of the picture.

The campaign will consist of the publication of a novelization of the picture. The newspapers which have engaged the service bind themselves to publish five thousand words each week, each publication dealing only with one episode of the picture. The contracts also require the newspapers to print the novelization for twenty consecutive weeks in the order in which the episodes are released.

The newspapers which have already signed contracts are the New York American, Albany (N. Y.) Telegram, Troy Observer, Atlanta Constitution, Charlotte News, Macon News, Boston American, Bridgeport Herald, Buffalo Express, Rochester Herald, Chicago Examiner, Louisville Courier-Journal, Springfield News, Canton Repository, Houston Post, El Paso Times, Austin American, Denver News, Colorado Springs Evening Telegraph, Salt Lake City Tribune, Lansing State Journal, Lincoln State Journal, Los Angeles Examiner, Minneapolis Tribune, Sioux Falls Press, Fargo Forum, Philadelphia Public Ledger, Washington Times, Erie Times, Wilmington Star, Pittsburgh Press, Wheeling News, San Francisco Examiner, Boise Capital News, Montreal Standard, Winnipeg Free Press, Hamilton Spectator, Calgary News-Telegram and Quebec Telegraph.

"In arranging this campaign of publicity," says The Whartons, "the one slogan which guided all negotiations was the greatest good for the greatest number of exhibitors. Numerous requests for publication rights were received even before a release date on the first episode had been announced. Only one of these was considered before the first episode was released, and that was Photoplay Magazine. Photoplay made arrangements whereby there would be close co-operation between the newspapers handling the magazine and the exhibitor in the territory. In addition to this, Photoplay agreed to publish the novelization of the picture coincident, as near as possible for a monthly magazine to do, with the release of the episodes. The sole rights for publication were not given Photoplay.

"To complement this national publicity on the picture by reaching as many as possible of persons who are not regular patrons of motion picture theatres, publication rights for the same novelization as that carried by Photoplay have been given to The Gentlewoman, with a circulation of a million and a half mailed directly into that number of homes in the United States and Canada. The novelization will be carried in The Gentlewoman one month later than it appears in Photoplay.

"At the present time contracts with sixty-seven newspapers have been signed. Negotiations with fifty-three others in territories not entirely covered by these sixty-seven are still pending. Announcement will be made of the names of these as rapidly as negotiations are completed. In most cases the Sunday editions of newspapers have been chosen for the publication of the novelization.

"The first of the papers to begin the publication of the novelization will start during the last week in April. The other newspapers will begin the publication shortly after that. This means that in almost every territory in the country the exhibitor will be able to arrange his bookings for 'The Eagle's Eye' so that he can be absolutely certain of a full page of publicity within a few days before each episode is shown in his theatre. All instalments will be run under the general caption of "The Eagle's Eye" and each instalment will be published under the sub-title under which the episode is issued.

Hadley Originates "Cinema-Symphony"

HOPP HADLEY has conceived the idea of combining the descriptive power of music with the art of story telling, through the medium of the motion picture. This process he call "cinema-symphony." Mr. Hadley claims to be the originator of this idea and is now completing the first symphony for his first symphony picture.

The new idea picture is in five reels, and is, when seen upon the screen without the music, similar to any high class photodrama with novel artistic photographic effects. When seen with the orchestra playing the symphony, the novel photographic effects are said to take on a special significance, as they tell in pictures the part of the story which only a lover of music would be able to follow in the orchestration. The action of the story and the strains of music are found to bear a closer relation than in the ordinary picture with a regulation orchestra accompaniment. In announcing the details of his idea, Mr. Hadley said:

"I have been closely identified with the theatrical and motion picture business for many years, having been a theatrical manager before entering the motion picture business and scenario editor of the Majestic and Reliance Companies when single reels were features. I have always taken a keen interest in the development of a closer relation between pictures and music.

Pittsburg Books All Educational First Runs

AS evidence of the manner in which the pictures of the Educational Film Corporation is being received by the better theatres of the country, Vice-President and General Manager E. W. Hammons announced this week that he has been notified by J. S. Shirboll, manager of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit of Pittsburg, that he had booked the entire product in all the first run houses of the territory.

First run houses all over the country, including the very finest theatres in the National, are now showing these pictures and featuring them as a chief part of their programs. Increased demand is being shown for the Bruce Scenics Beautiful, Ditmar's "Living Book of Nature" and the Newman travel pictures, while the booking of the new process, International cartoons, has been one of the greatest successes in the history of short reel subjects.

Care is being taken that every one of these "Katzenjammer" and "Happy Hooligan" subjects be kept up to the high standard that was set by the first two issues, and just as much stress is being placed on that point as if they were super features. These subjects cost many times the price of the ordinary "animated cartoons," but that fact does not interfere with the rejection of any that are not up to the standard. These are being used regularly at the Rialto theatre, and one of the "Katzenjammers" is featured by Mr. Rothapfel as part of his anniversary bill this week.

Robert C. Bruce has work well under way on his super-scenics for this year. He will make only a very limited number and these will be given the greatest care. Mr. Bruce is actually writing scenarios for these subjects and will work them out carefully along that line. General Manager Hammons has just received a letter from Mr. Bruce stating that he has completed seventeen scenarios, though he will not make that many pictures this year, and that he has his locations all selected. He will visit each place with his cameramen with the intention of getting only specific pictures—in other words going right to the location for every shot that he requires. According to the plans that have been mapped out his itinerary includes only two points that have ever been visited by a cameraman so that there is every assurance that there will be novelty in the scenes themselves as well as in the construction of the entire pictures.

Garrett Receives Souvenir of "Zep"

Sidney Garrett, president of the J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., exporters, has just received from his London associates a paper cutter made from various parts of a "Hun Zeppelin" captured in a raid made on London last December.

You are not going to war. The men who are need all the comforts you can give them. Help them get cigarettes. That is your patriotic duty. If you aren't helping in the "smokes" campaign, get busy—now. Don't be a slacker!

Short Subjects in Review

By Clara DeLissa Berg

Jack Cohn, of Universal, Has Made a Three-Reel Picture of New York for James Yu Chung Tong, of Shanghai, Who Recently Visited This Country

"COST OF CARELESS FIRING" MADE BY UNIVERSAL

Without cost to themselves, exhibitors will have an opportunity of showing their patrons a film of importance and great interest in a two-reel subject just being completed for the National Fuel Administration by the Industrial Department of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

Mr. David Moffat Myers, Consulting Engineer to the Fuel Administration, under whose direction the film was made and who has just been requested by the government to conduct a nation-wide survey along the lines of fuel economy in industry, affirms that not less than 50,000,000 tons of coal a year could be saved with the exercise of ordinary care. The film itself shows in graphic and interesting fashion just how the tiny leaks that aggregate so enormously occur and how they can be avoided. The well-planned boiler room, with its careful engineer, is contrasted with the room where disorder, antiquated equipment, and a man who takes no pride in his work conduce to waste of time, labor, and fuel.

Mr. Harry Levy, Manager of the Industrial Department, and Mr. Carlyle Ellis, assisting him, have had numerous conferences with Mr. Myers and feel justly proud of the picture that has resulted from their joint efforts. Valuable assistance was given by Norman G. Reinacher, engineer of the Edison Company, who wrote the continuity.

Exhibitors can obtain "The Cost of Careless Firing" from any Universal exchange.

"HAPPY" MIXES IN

The famous English general who "bestrode the whirlwind and commanded the storm," or words to that effect, had nothing on Happy Hooligan—according to Happy. While doing his bit in his current adventure. Happy tames torpedoes and turns them against their makers, upsets the calculations and afternoon coffee of the enemy aerial navigators, and has the war just about coming to a polite and pleasing ending when—

But we will not divulge the cruel fate that overtook Happy out of the blue. The picture is the second of the cartoon releases to be made weekly by the Educational Films Corporation.

"HAPPY HOOLIGAN DOING HIS BIT."
EDUCATIONAL FILMS CORP.: APRIL 21.

PARMELEE MAKES SCIENTIFIC CARTOONS FOR BRAY STUDIOS

E. D. Parmelee of the Bray Studios, whose animated drawing of the action of the torpedo was markedly clever and interesting, is now engaged in illustrating the working of the depth bomb, an important instrument in the destruction of the U boat. The cartoon will appear in a forthcoming issue of the Paramount-Bray Pictograph.

Mr. Parmelee is carrying on the work initiated by J. F. Leventhal, famous for his animated illustrations of scientific problems. Mr. Leventhal, while still connected with the Bray Studios, is devoting all of his time to work directly under the government.

TO MEET MAY IRWIN AND MARION HARLAND

About the time that May Irwin was sampling her first bowl of oatmeal, Marion Harland published a cook book famous the country over. So many decades separate these two delightful women. Yet, if the Screen Magazine pictures truly, one is no younger or older than the other, as Miss Irwin is seen in her favorite off-the-stage role of cook, and Miss Harland, who at eighty-seven has just completed her fortieth book, proves in her own lovely personality how the harvest of a long and busy life may be happiness and undying youth. Miss Irwin has evolved her own particular recipe for war bread, which she makes before our eyes. The recipe is given in full for the benefit of those who would emulate the culinary skill of the famous actress.

Just as women have added to the making of war bread the making of guns and ammunition, so men, in this time of stress, have taken over many occupations of the other sex. Uncle Sam's "washlady" in chief to the army is a huge traveling laundry with a machine that supplies the propelling power, the steam and hot water that do the actual washing, and the electricity that turns the wheels.

"Training Wolf Hounds" affords splendid pictures of these aristocrats of the dog world. Their beauty an intelligence are amply illustrated, while the champion jumper goes "over the top" to a clear fifteen feet.

Willie Hopkins contributes "An Eyeful of Ears" as his current "Miracle."

UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE NO. 68.
UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO.: APRIL 26.

WITH SURE FEET AND A STEADY HEAD

You can take Robert C. Bruce's word for it that a "jaunt on a jaunting cayuse" is an experience out of the ordinary. A great many people, however, would prefer to take their jaunts vicariously and will thoroughly enjoy the screened version of Mr. Bruce's horseback trip, while themselves sitting comfortably in upholstered armchairs in the orchestra. The trail of the cayuse (vernacular of the northwest for "broncho," "mustang," or in other words, horse), leads through the magnificent country of Glacier Park. There are mountain peaks a-plenty, and rushing water that one can almost feel and hear. To use the slang of the cameraman, the "shots" are remarkably fine, though one feels that the dignified term employed by the artist, "composition" is more fitting for such scenic grandeur.

"FOLLOWING THE COURSE OF THE CAYUSE."
EDUCATIONAL FILMS CORP.: APRIL 21.

WHERE EAST MEETS WEST

We quote the film editor's apt adaptation of Kipling's line to describe a curious condition that exists in Trinidad, British West Indies, pictured in the current Pathe scenic release. Here, on an island in the Western hemisphere, a good-sized population of Asiatic origin lives a life that can be duplicated only in the Orient itself. Here are all the signs familiar to one who knows India—women gathered at the river edge to wash the family linen in the shade of the palm, fruit vendors with rings on their fingers and bells on their toes, the primitive agriculturist whose sole instrument is a hand sickle. Bamboo huts made of stalks, thatched with the leaves and plastered with mud, are seen in various stages of construction; two-wheeled carts drawn by donkeys along a road rich in tropical vegetation add a picturesque touch. Almost unbelievable is the sight of a real Mohammedan mosque and a wild-looking Mohammedan priest.

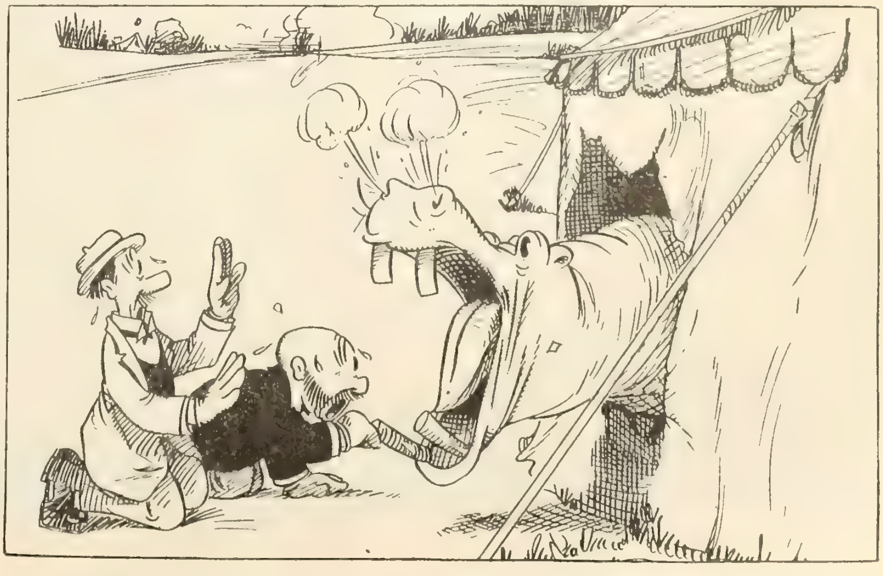
"TRINIDAD, BRITISH WEST INDIES."
PATHE EXCHANGE: APRIL 21.

'POSSUMS AND SLOTHS

You have sung of opossums and alluded to the sloth. But did you ever see either? In his latest picture, "Night Animals," Curator Ditmars of the New York "Zoo" affords you an opportunity from which you will derive considerable information and amusement.

The pigmy ant eater is a curious little creature that will delight children because he looks like a live teddy bear with a long tail. As for the sloth, words fail to convey his combination of disagreeableness and unconscious humor. At any rate, he is good for a buzz of amazement and a hearty laugh.

"NIGHT ANIMALS."
EDUCATIONAL FILMS CORP.: MAY.



No Man's Land Was Never Like This! Since Mutt and Jeff Went Over to Live With the William Fox Family, Their Adventures Have Been Precarious and Ludicrous

A SERIAL SURPRISE FOR UNIVERSAL SERIAL DE LUXE
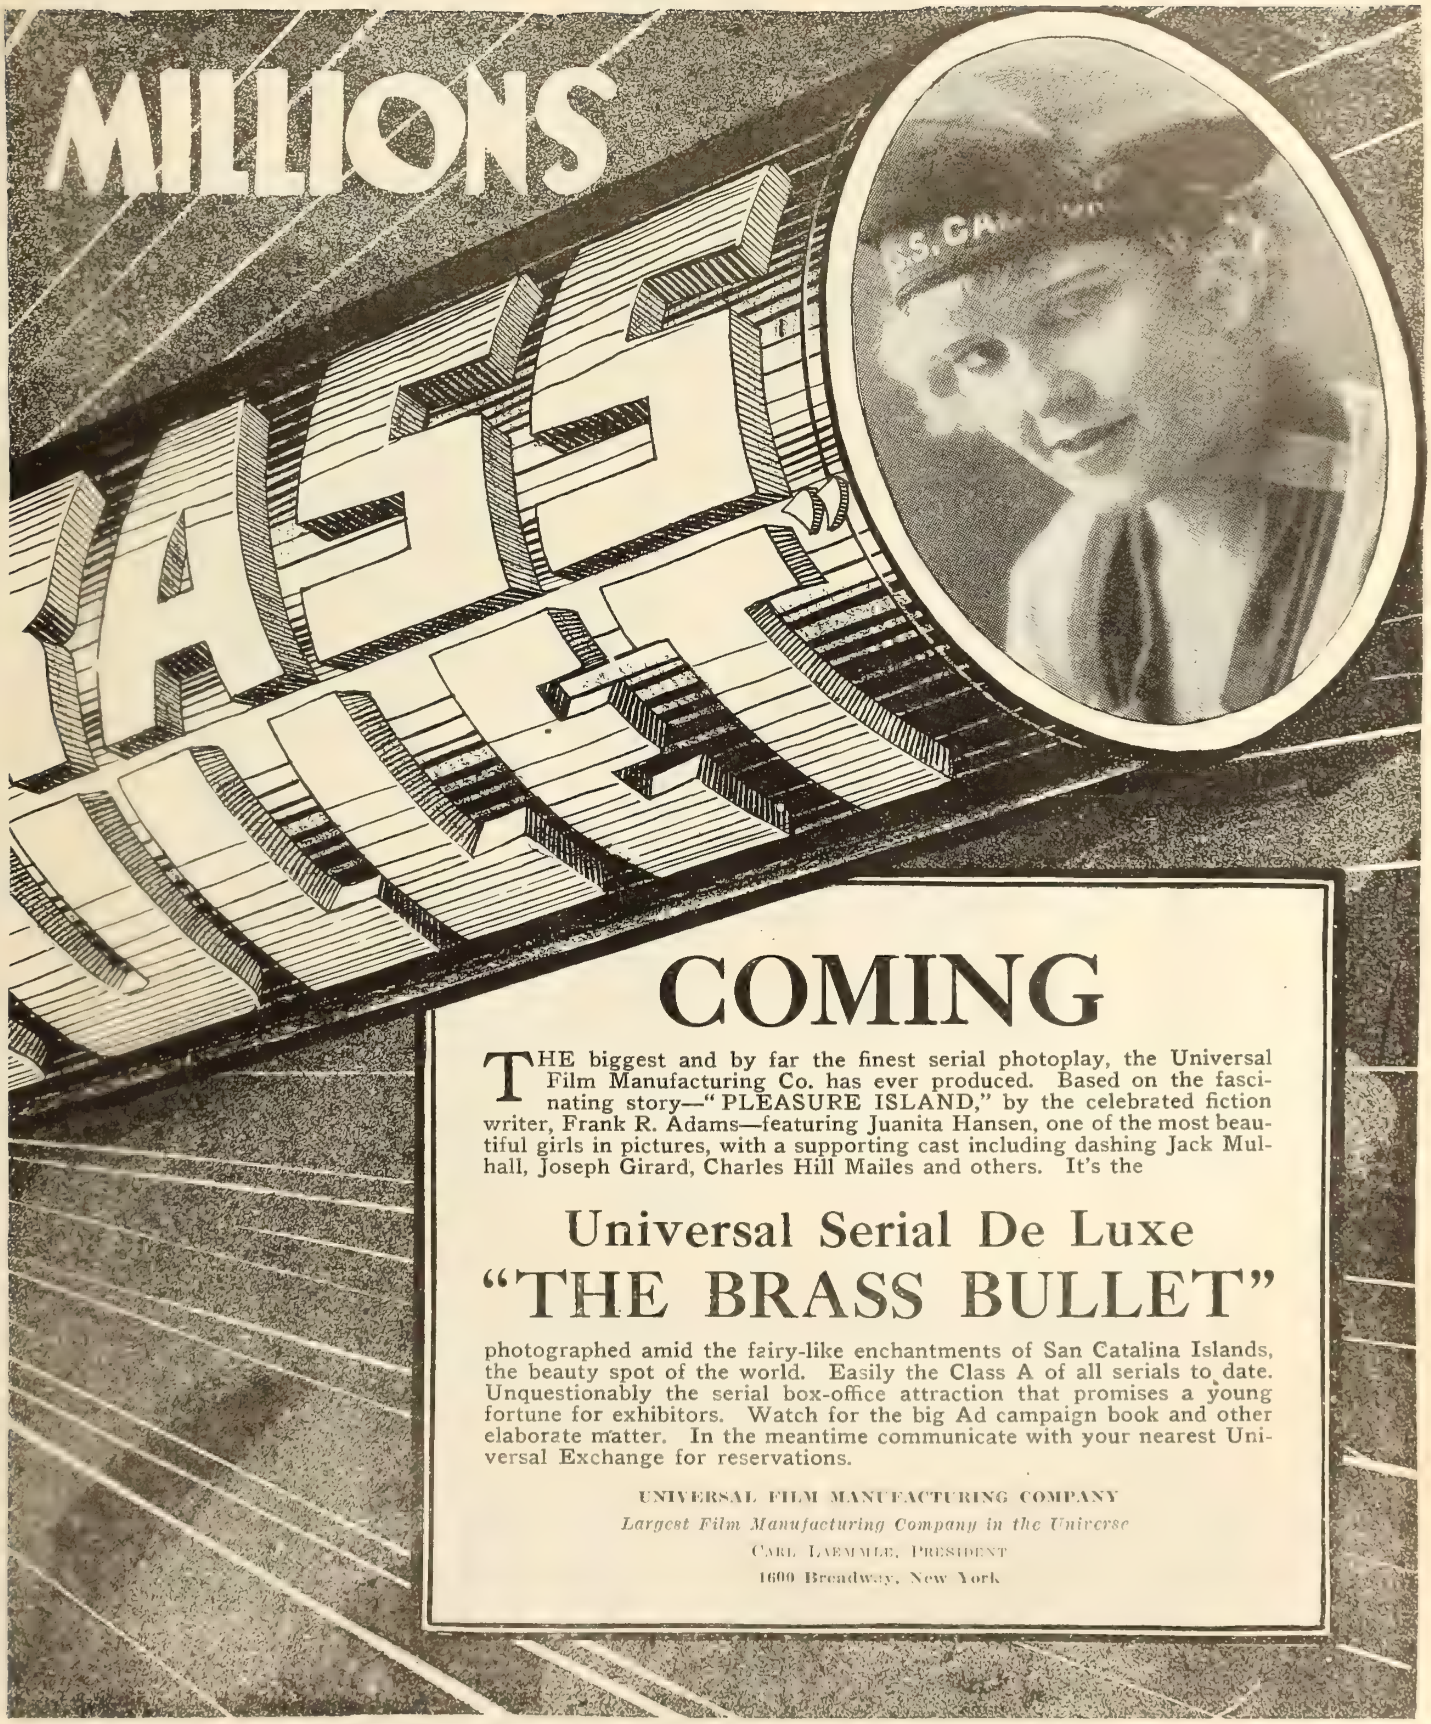
WITH JUANITA HANSEN
JACK MULHALL & PICKED CAST
THE
L.A. REISS



COMING

THE biggest and by far the finest serial photoplay, the Universal Film Manufacturing Co. has ever produced. Based on the fascinating story—"PLEASURE ISLAND," by the celebrated fiction writer, Frank R. Adams—featuring Juanita Hansen, one of the most beautiful girls in pictures, with a supporting cast including dashing Jack Mulhall, Joseph Girard, Charles Hill Mailes and others. It's the photographed amid the fairy-like enchantments of San Catalina Islands, the beauty spot of the world. Easily the Class A of all serials to date. Unquestionably the serial box-office attraction that promises a young fortune for exhibitors. Watch for the big Ad campaign book and other elaborate matter. In the meantime communicate with your nearest Universal Exchange for reservations.

Universal Serial De Luxe
"THE BRASS BULLET"

UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY
Largest Film Manufacturing Company in the Universe
CARL LAEMMLE, PRESIDENT
1600 Broadway, New York

Millions Of People actually prefer the UNIVERSAL NEWS WEEKLIES to Feature Pictures

Are you aware of the fact that millions of people actually prefer News Weeklies to feature pictures? Do you know that nine out of every ten people that enter your Theatre consider the pictures such as are shown every week in the Universal Animated Weekly—Universal Current Events—and—Universal Screen Magazine, a necessary part of the moving picture program? Have you ever tried to find out what proportion of YOUR patrons enjoy and want News Weekly pictures?

Go ahead and prove it to yourself—don't take our word for it. Make the test in your own house. Have small slips printed with the following wording:

"Do you enjoy News Weekly pictures of the world's doings? Would you be just as satisfied if we did not show them? If we could show all of the News Weeklies would you tire of them if we showed them every night?"

Pass these slips out for a week and ask that these slips be filled out and handed in as your patrons leave the theatre. Then count up and see the result.

You'll get the surprise of your life. You'll see that nine out of every ten people want News Weeklies; want them every night; never tire of them; with many actually preferring the News Weekly to the Feature. That's why we say to you—Book the Universal Animated Weekly—U Screen Magazine and U Current Events. You can get them all in combination or you can book either one. They are as big, oftener BIGGER, as a drawing card than your costly feature. Thousands of wise Exhibitors have proven this to themselves. HOW ABOUT YOU? Your nearest Universal Exchange will give you more facts and figures, prices, etc.

Book thru your nearest Universal Exchange or communicate with the UNIVERSAL FILM MN'FG. CO., Largest Film Mn'fg. Co. in the Universe,
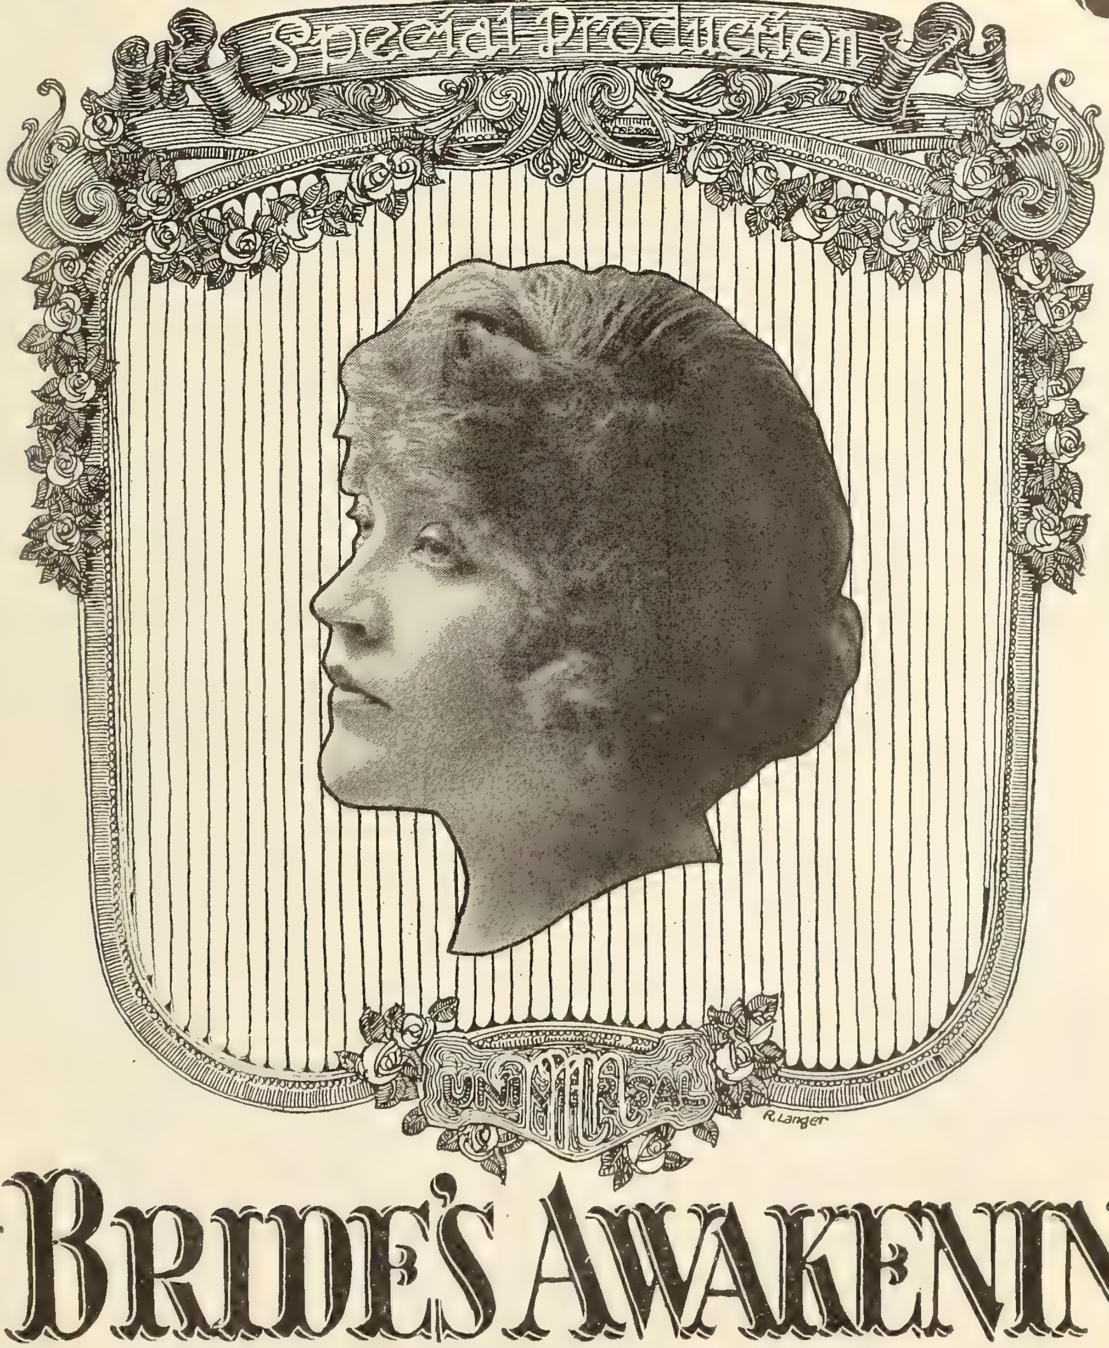
Carl Laemmle, President, 1600 Broadway, New York

Coming in Sumptuous Luxury

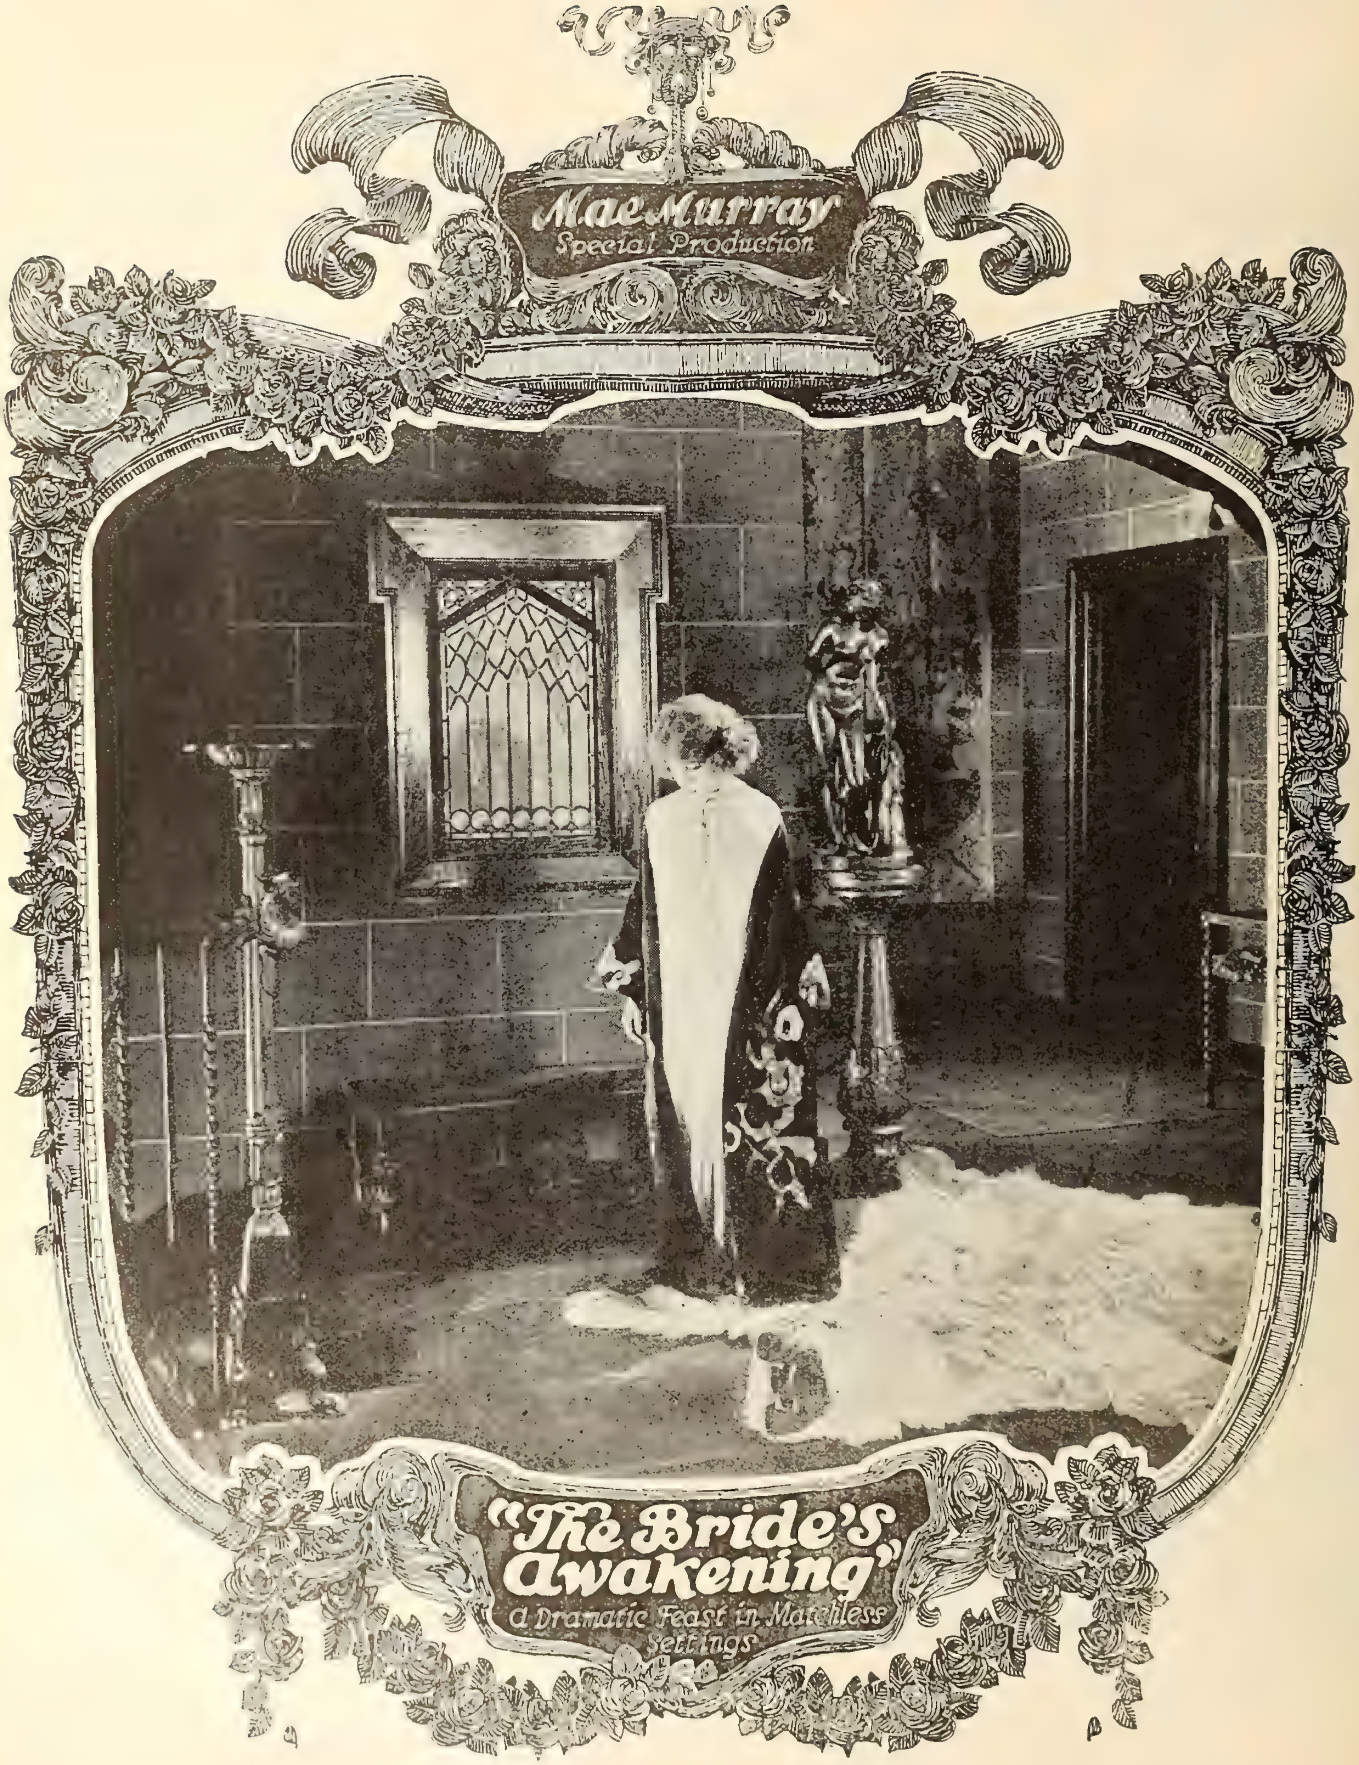
Mae Murray



Special Production
Universal
R. Langer

"The BRIDE'S AWAKENING"

A Dramatic Feast in Matchless Settings



Mae Murray
Special Production
"The Bride's Awakening"
A Dramatic Feast in Matchless Settings

Mae Murray
Special Production
"The Bride's Awakening"
a Dramatic Feast in Matchless Settings

Mae Murray
Special Production
"The Bride's Awakening"
A Dramatic Feast in Matchless Settings

Elaine
Hammerstein in

"The CO-RESPONDENT"

A picture of Love and Business at white heat, made by Ralph Ince from the famous stage play by Alice Leal Pollock & Rita Weiman.

Herbert
Rawlinson in

"COME THROUGH"

George Bronson Howard's best and a country-wide success. A "gentleman-crook" play that women go wild over.

Louise Lovely
Carmel Myers and Jack Mulhall
in

"SIRENS OF THE SEA"

The Beauty picture of the age. A seductive dream of fair women in marvelous settings by land and sea.

Mildred
Harris in

"The PRICE of a GOOD TIME"

The biggest drama success of 1918. Made by Lois Weber the Belasco of the Screen. Book this without fail.

"The MAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY"

The picturization of Edward Everett Hale's mighty classic that is making so much money that others are now trying to imitate it. Book only the original if you want the real money.

Dorothy
Phillips in

"PAY ME"

A cyclonic Western production by Jos. de Grasse wich nets a big profit every where without exception.

JEWEL
PRODUCTIONS INC
1600 BROADWAY NEW-YORK

A Flood of Bookings rec'd on the "BOY SCOUTS

THE PICTURE with that packed
New York's
STRAND
TICKETS
BOY SCOUTS
Will Pack
Your Theatre Too

Universal's Big 5 Episode Serial Special

"TO THE RESCUE"

a ready made Audience of over 14,000,000

The Entire Population of Your Town Will Cheer This Wonderful Serial

BOOK IT NOW!

HERE'S a bigger bunch of found money than you could bank with an ordinary serial in twice the time it will take to show this sure-fire Boy Scout Five-part Serial.

Here's a Self Guaranteed Five Weeks' Serial with more than 14,000,000 fathers, mothers, sisters, big brothers, and Boy Scouts old and new, squarely behind it—rooting for it, boosting it, wild to see it.

Here's exactly the serial you've been anxious to get—a Serial about boys and for boys—a Serial that every Boy Scout in your town will bring every other boy to see—will hustle to make a whale of a success. Read why in the next column.

THE whole great Boy Scout organization of the United States has pledged its complete, unfailing co-operation for securing the biggest possible audiences in your theatre for this Serial.

The Boy Scouts are on a great Nation-wide drive for more members and funds and they want this Serial shown so as to get more members.

Book this great Boy Scout Serial without a minute's hesitation and write or wire your nearest Universal Exchange for the big Boy Scout Folder that gives you full details of this golden opportunity.

Or address Boy Scout Serial Department

UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY
"The Largest Film Manufacturing Concern in the Universe"
CARL LAEMMLE, PRESIDENT
1600 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Universal Newsettes

J. P. McGowan, who for two months past has been supervising the production of his 3,000 acre ranch near Lund, Nevada, was called to Los Angeles last week by Production Manager Henry McRae of Universal City, and is now at work preparing script for a serial he will direct. Mr. McGowan has a number of episode film plays to his credit, which were made for Kalem, and later the Mutual when he organized his own company, the Signal. McGowan was the originator of the "Hazards of Helen," and in addition to producing, wrote practically all of the stories for that long series, and later was the author of film plays in which Helen Holmes was featured. The serial Mr. McGowan will produce for Universal pertains to circus life, and will have Eddie Polo as the featured player.

The first scenes for the next Mae Murray production being filmed by Director Robert Leonard, are being taken this week at San Francisco, the company having gone north for a few days. The photoplay is by Rebecca Cooper Eastman and is entitled "The Big Little Person." The scenes now being made constitute those in which Miss Murray is the only person appearing, and the cast will not be selected until the company's return from San Francisco.

Carmel Meyer is next to work under the direction of Elsie Jane Wilson, and the filming of "A Penny's Worth of Love" is to be started as soon as sets and properties are ready.

It is also announced Ida May Park will continue the direction of Mary MacLaren. Miss Park has just finished filming "A Man's World." Louis Persinger, concert master of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, was a guest at Universal City this week, and while there played Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata," while some very emotional scenes were being filmed by Miss Park.

Vitagraph News Bits

"The Woman in the Web" Vitagraph Company has departed for the Hawaiian Islands to take future episodes of the serial. Director Paul Hurst has completed the first nine episodes, the last scenes of which will show the Vitagraph Company leaving for the semi-Orient. These were taken at Los Angeles harbor during the week. All members of the company have recovered from the exposure to wintry weather and snow storms at Santa Cruz Islands recently where they went to secure summer scenes.

The William Duncan serial company has completed the first two episodes of the new serial in which Mary Alden takes a very prominent part, while Edith Johnson is the featured leading woman and the principal in the support of Mr. Duncan.

While making an automobile chase scene near the studio with two Fords, one car driven by Montgomery, skidded, causing a side-on collision in which Irving Ludwig sustained a fractured arm. On the day following, Montgomery, in coming down a drain pipe from the seventh story of an office building, was injured when the pipe broke as he was passing the second floor. The comedian was not injured to any extent, but sufficient to collect insurance.

Earle Williams has been named "Big Brother" of the 159th Infantry at Camp Kearny, and Friday evening went to the camp, near San Diego, with his automobile filled with smokes, and there gave a regimental smoker. Williams will next film an adaptation from the Harold McGrath story, "The Girl in His House."

Fox Studio Doings

The Fox studio was particularly quiet last week in all departments except the technical. Work there is progressing on the sets that will be needed for the Theda Bara production, "Spanish Love," which will be commenced next week by Director J. Gordon Edwards.

The only company working at the studio was that headed by Gladys Brockwell and directed by Edward J. LeSaint.

Lynn F. Reynolds and his company, which includes Tom Mix, are still in the wilds of the mountain country beyond Bear Lake Valley, working on the Canadian Northwest production which was written by Mr. Reynolds.

Louise Glaum Has Completed Her First Paralta Play, "An Alien Enemy"

The F. P.-Lasky Studio

"Old Wives for New" is all finished, and Director General Cecil B. deMille is hurrying preparations for the filming of his next story which up to this time is a secret to everyone except the director and scenario writer. The finished play, adapted from the David Graham Phillips novel, written about ten years ago, has proven a very good subject for the screen, and has permitted Mr. deMille to secure some very desirable effects and exceptional dramatic scenes. The story, as everyone remembers, pertains to the divorce problem. The only statement to be made concerning the next deMille subject is that it is an adaptation from one of the novels of today. No cast has been named.

Clara Kimball Young and Wallace Reid were given time off Wednesday of this week to preside at a Red Cross tea, where they auctioned flowers and photographs. The highest priced bid was fifty-five dollars for one of Miss Young's pictures.

As the result of a patriotic speech made by Cecli B. deMille to the assembled staff of the Famous Players-Lasky studio a few days ago, has brought about a great many enlistments in the Home Guard Company of the studio. This company has enlisted in the State Defense, and has been under orders of the Governor for the past six or eight months. Up until the first of the week the company members numbered about 100, but now there are more than 150. Cecil B. deMille is captain; Henry Woodward, first lieutenant; James Neill, second lieutenant; William C. deMille, Milton E. Hoffman, and six other sergeants. The company drills in squads one or two evenings each week.

William Beaudine, the comedy director, has begun filming a two-reel subject, at present titled "I Love Charles Albert." Fritzi Ridgeway, Ann Kroman, Diana Carillo, Edward Brady, Ray Griffith and Charles Dorian are the principals.

With Pathe Players

With the completion of "Caroline of the Corners," Bessie Love will complete her contract with Pathe. This film is now in production, under the direction of Robert Thornby, at the Paralta Studios, where the Keenan Company as well as the Bryant Washburn producing unit are engaged in filming the last subjects to be made for Pathe at this studio. No definite arrangement has been made for the Pathe organization according to announcements, but there are indications that the companies a real comedy strain is injected. Their latest picture, "With Neatness and Dispatch," has been dealt with accordingly and from all reports is a winner for this very reason. Mr. Bushman has often been quoted as saying that his aim is to play straight comedy parts some day.

FOR YOUR PROGRAM AND NEWSPAPERS

Baby Ivy Ward, the cunning little Belgian of "Draft 258," celebrated her fourth birthday last week with an elaborate tea-party for her young friends. She is now playing with Miss Allison in "The Candy Girl."

Belle Seacomb, who played the part of the Syrian woman in "Thais," was presented with an exquisite lace shawl by Mary Garden as a token of the star's appreciation of her work. Miss Seacomb is a most unusual type and is now appearing as the mother of Moses in "The Birth of a Race."

Sally Crute is the possessor of a most charming home in Fort Lee. It is set in a veritable thicket but from its verandas glimpses of the Hudson can be seen through openings in the trees. She is also the possessor of a husband of the stock broker variety, and attributes her happiness anr success in pictures to her happiness and success in home life.

Hamilton Revelle has just left for an indefinite stay in the South in order to rest, after his strenuous winter in pictures. His work in "The Splendid Sinner" and "Thais" makes us hope that he will not spend too long a time resting.

Everyone will be glad to hear that Gail Kane is coming back to the screen in the new Abramson picture, "When Man Betrays." We can only hope that she will devote all her attention to pictures and not resume the legitimate stage, as it is rumored.

Courtney Foote, who is appearing opposite Mme. Cavaliera in "Gismonda," has a penchant for dogs and parrots. He also has decided ideas about their education. One of his cardinal principles is to speak to them only in French.

Wilfrid Lytell, Bert's younger brother, who looks almost exactly like him, is cast in the new Edward Warren picture as Anna Lehr's younger brother. Miss Lehr plays the lead opposite House Peters.

Nadia Garry might be a six-year-old Mary Miles Minter judging by her golden curls, her blue eyes, and her winsome smile. In the "Fall of the Romanoffs" she was the six-year-old princess, while in "My Own United States" she is a little boy.

It is reported from the West Coast that J. Barney Sherry has become a "war daddy" by adopting a Belgian orphan whom he has imported to his own home, and whom he is going to call Barney Sherry, second.

Lottie Briscoe Is a Member of Metro's All-Star Cast In "The House of Mirth"

Donald Hall, often called the "fashion plate" of the screen, plays the part of the detective in the new Mae Marsh picture, "The Face in the Dark." Mr. Hall was born in India and educated in England. His early career was in musical comedy where his baritone voice gave him the lead in such hits as "Floradora" and "The Girl Behind the Counter."

Marcel Le Picard, the cameraman responsible for the clever photography in "Conquered Hearts," has changed from Ivan to Graphic and will do the "shooting" in "When Man Betrays." To get the best effects in photographing the exterior of the Strand theatre for the former picture he did it at five o'clock in the morning with paid extras for the crowds going in and out of the picture house.

Fate has decreed that Alice Mann remain a comedienne for some little time as she has signed a long-term contract with the Mode Art Comedies. A few years ago when Miss Mann was first contemplating a screen career she was quite sure that she was going to be a tragedienne, but her first appearance in "Otto the Soldier," in the part of a mischievous girl, sealed her fate.

A fair admirer of Sessue Hayakawa in Sidney, New South Wales, just sent him a photograph of a chimpanzee, in exchange for which she desired one of his own photographs. The question in his mind is, did she or did she not wish to compliment him?

One of the first things Director John Collins did when he arrived in New York was to invest in a new Packard. Then he turned his attention to working out the continuity for his wife's (Viola Dana) new picture in order to have it ready for her when she comes on from the coast next month.

Ricca Allen, as a militant suffragette in "The Heart of a Young Girl," the new Barbara Castleton picture, addressed a crowd of some four hundred extras supposedly assembled at a suffrage convention, the other day at the World studio. Her attire and speech called forth real applause.

Mae Marsh has a very feminine antipathy toward wearing man's attire. She considers it particularly awkward and uncomfortable, having had experience with it in "The Wharf Rat." One of the reasons why she likes "The Face in the Dark" so well is because in it she is a girl all the way through.

John Bowers celebrated a two years' renewal of his contract with World, by marrying a New York girl, Rita Heller, who claims no connection with screen or stage.

Again Alice Brady has proved herself a good sport. On one hour's notice she packed her bag and started for Boston to speak at the Liberty Loan Rally, thus saving the day for the harassed master of ceremonies who was informed at the last minute of Mary Pickford's inability to appear as scheduled.

A. B. Conkwright, now working with George Walsh in a new picture, and appearing on Broadway as the Socialist in "My Fours in Germany," is a well-known dancer. He recently wrote to Secretary Baker offering to teach soldiers how to dance as part of their course in physical training.

William Lampe, the Dr. George Daniels of Graphic's "Moral Suicide," has a stage experience of twenty-one years back of him, ranging from light comedy to tragedy.

Warner Oland, Pathe Player

Screen Examinations

"Let's Get a Divorce"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

BASED on Victorien Sardou's popular and recurrent play, "Divorcons," "Let's Get a Divorce" presents an exceptionally high type of comedy with Billie Burke in the stellar role. Once the first reel is passed by and the clever situations of the play come to the surface, the comedy is abundant, genuine and presented in excellent taste. The manner in which Henri proceeds to cure his pretty wife of a peculiarly school-girlish passion for romance and adventure by refusing to stand between her and the man she fancies herself in love with, is rich in humorous complications, each arising naturally. And like all good comedy, "Let's Get a Divorce" mixes humor with the commonest of human characteristics. Cyprienne's light-headed idea of real love is a state of mind that every being passes through some time or another in his life. Watching her education by the application of the little play conceived by Henri and his aides is as invigorating as it is amusing.

John Emerson and Anita Loos, whose work with Fairbanks is well known, prepared a scenario from the Sardou play. They have handled it in expert style. Reduced to its skeleton of plot and situations "Divorcons" needed the appreciation and appropriate treatment which the writers gave it to make it a success on the celluloid. The situations are subtle and are presented in the proper spirit. The space given each step in the plot is proportionate to its value. This accounts for the introduction of Cyprienne's story in the first reel, a story born of a weirdly romantic imagination. It is humorous unto itself, this initial reel, but is a rather unnecessary plant for Cyprienne's character. However, what follows is thus presented in its natural length.

Miss Burke has shed her posing and pouting and makes of Cyprienne a human and quite adorable girl. John Miltern does Henri with a thorough appreciation of the character's subtlety. Armand Kalise's Adhemar, the silly French gentleman who unconsciously furthers Henri's ends by acting as Cyprienne's lover, does a fine piece of character acting. Pinna Nesbit, Wilmuth Merkyl and Helen Tracey complete one of the finest casts ever seen in a feature. Director Charles Giblyn has presented the picture in excellent taste.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Cyprienne Marcey (Billie Burke), too romantic for her own good, meets Henri de Prunelles (John Miltern), brother of her best friend, Yvonne (Pinna Nesbit), on her vacation. They fall in love. When Henri proposes the conventional marriage ceremony while talking with Yvonne she refuses to permit it, knowing full well Cyprienne's love of romance. So they elope from the convent where Cyprienne has received her education and the next we see of them they are married. But Cyprienne's ideas of marital happiness exclude Henri's work. She becomes restless, and as a consequence when Adhemar (Armand Kalise), her husband's cousin, appears on the scene she welcomes his attentions. Eventually she confesses her love for him, or what she thinks her love, to her husband and calmly asks for a divorce. Henri, again taking the advice of Yvonne and her husband (Wilmuth Merkyl), agrees to her request and throws her as much as possible in the company of Adhemar. But close proximity and the elimination of clandestine meetings spoil it all for Cyprienne and she soon finds herself falling in love with her husband again. Henri, cruel brute, carries the game through until he is sure of Cyprienne's complete cure.

"Western Blood"

(Fox—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

A COMEDY-DRAMA that comes as a real treat is "Western Blood," featuring the spectacular and athletic Tom Mix. Mr. Mix cooked up the plot himself and Lynn Reynolds made the adaptation and directed. It doesn't take a long stretch of the memory to recall Reynolds comedy-dramas on the Bluebird schedule and some equally refreshing numbers he turned out for Triangle. His work as adaptor and director on "Western Blood" is of the same high type. Innumerable comedy touches arising from natural situations make the five reels of his present picture truly delightful and judging from his past work, it may be advisedly termed "his picture," when we read between the scenes. Mix is natural and with his fine riding and stunts is a valuable star, but the glow of comedy with which he is surrounded contributes largely to his success. The sight of the cowboys, clad in the uncomfortable "soup-and-fish," dutifully following every act of Tex's at the dinner table is only one of the many fine comedy situations of the picture. The subtitles are used frequently and often to humorous effect and sufficient cowboy lingo such as "pard" and "I'm a sayin'," serve to heighten the genuineness of the principal character.

Mix's stunts are judiciously sprinkled over the film and always create the desired thrill. Twice does he rescue Victoria Forde from her runaway broncho and a particularly fairbanksian stunt is seen when he swings from a tree over the wall of the Mexican outpost via his lasso. There is plenty of fine riding and deep shots of the western plains lend a realistic atmosphere. "Western Blood" is a tonic; in the ranks of comedy-drama it stands in the A-1 class.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Tex Wilson (Tom Mix), owner of a ranch along the Rio Grande, visits Los Angeles with a trainload of horses for the Government. At a reception given by his friend, Major Stevens (Frank Clark), he shows up in cowboy's togs and resents the insinuating remarks passed out by one, Wallace Payton (Barney Furey), purchasing agent for the Allied governments, who is attracted by Roberta Stephens (Victoria Forde), the Major's daughter. Tex also falls in love with Roberta, and some time later when she accompanies the Major and Payton on an inspection trip he welcomes her at his ranch. The cowboys, in gala clothes, welcome the visitors, and a dance is in progress when Payton decides to keep an appointment with Mexicans bent on selling him horses. The Mexicans, however, influenced by German gold, make Payton their captive, and carry Roberta off, too. Tex gives pursuit, and, after many narrow escapes, rescues the fair lady while his men put the Mexicans completely to rout.

"The Freight Investigation"

(Mutt and Jeff-Fox—Split Reel)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

IN this half reel Mutt and Jeff decide to help in the roundup of German spies. Mutt gets in a trunk which Jeff carts to the wharf. Here he is left to spy. There are two holes in the trunk to allow for air. But Mutt's lunch attracts all the rats on the wharf and they not only rob him of his food but take his clothes as well. The sight of the procession of rodents entering and coming from the trunk with pieces of Mutt's clothing is indeed ridiculously laughable. One of them happens to be a Jewish rat and objects to a ham sandwich. This is a good laugh throughout. Bud Fisher's ideas and his technique at picturing them on the film are growing better with each release.

"Blue Blood"

(Selexart-Goldwyn—Six Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

A HORRIBLE disease inherited, gives "Blue Blood" its drama. Spencer Wellington is afflicted with paresis. His doctor warns him against marriage, but Wellington, having spent his fortune as recklessly as his life, insists on taking a rich society girl for his wife. Their child is born a hopeless defective and dies. The wife goes mad until a severe fall and the touch of a little boy's hand restores her memory some five years afterwards. And Wellington winds up his futile existence in a wild orgy of wine and women. All the splendor of a Far Eastern harem he revels in. But he dies cursing the ancestor who first contracted the terrible malady.

Howard Hickman gives a performance realistic and effective as the moral and physical no-account Wellington. George Fisher has an appealing role, which he handles capably, as the doctor who hesitates at informing the women of Wellington's condition until too late. The situation is given added force and sustaining value by the fact that the doctor is in love with the woman himself. In the critical period of the doctor's life, when he must decide whether to violate the ethics of his profession and prevent the marriage and so ruin his own standing or stand aside and see her go helplessly to an awful fate, Mr. Fisher shows the best acting. This is an extremely powerful point in "Blue Blood." It is done effectively from every standpoint.

In fact, "Blue Blood" is a mighty powerful picture from first to last. There are no dull moments, and of intense dramatic situations there are a formidable array. Unmentionable diseases usually seem to jack up the intensity of a picture a hundred per cent. Eugene Walter's play, "The Knife," was a real hair raiser. And so, too, is "Blue Blood," by J. Grubb Alexander and Fred Myton. The fact that it is no picture for the family theatre is obvious immediately the theme is considered. Eliot Howe directed. The picture is pretentious, the setting being generally imposingly rich and the modern harem scenes a marvel of extravagance. Mary Mersch as the woman, gives another strong performance. Ida Lewis and Nona Thomas complete the cast.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Spencer Wellington (Howard Hickman), last of a long list of "blue blooded" artistocracy, suffers from paresis. His physician, Dr. John Rand (George Fisher), warns him against marriage, but to no effect. Peculiar circumstances and Rand's anxiety over his professional standing force him to remain silent. But he shudders with horror when he realizes that Wellington has allied himself with Grace Valiant (Mary Mersch), the woman he himself loves. Glancing over the family tree of the Wellingtons, Grace discovers the terrible step she has taken. Her child is born a defective and dies. She goes mad at the thought of it living. An orphaned baby is substituted, but it is not until five years have passed that Grace's reason is restored. In the meantime Wellington has taken to violent profligacy and he finally dies from his excesses. With Grace's reason returned and with Wellington dead the picture closes leaving the doctor to console her.

"Tyrant Fear"

(Paramount-Ince—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

AN attempt to diagnose, to sound the psychology of fear is combined with a rather conventional story of the northwestern snows, its peoples and its usual dance-den. Its author, R. Cecil Smith, has had much better success with his melodrama than he has with his psychological motive. Allaine, the protagonist of the incomplete dissertation on fear is afraid of the brute-men surrounding her until she finds herself with a gun in her hand. Afterwards she is unafraid. But even a gun can be shot clean and with only a limited supply of cartridges on hand Allaine might well quake and quiver before her enemies again. So Mr. Smith's analysis is hardly worthy of consideration. In fact those who see "Tyrant Fear" will be rapt in the melodrama. They will probably forget all about the title and the heroine's moral conversion.

A series of beautiful snow scenes form a background for the picture's action. Dorothy Dalton as Allaine gives a good performance and Melbourne MacDowell, Thurston Hall and William Conklin render effective support. The picture opens with the wedding of Allaine and Jules Latour, one of the brutes. The action surrounding it is somewhat overdone. The fact that no one has any sympathy at all for Allaine strikes a rather unrealistic note. The subsequent action shows the transformation Allaine brings about in two men. The brute dance hall keeper awakes to the fact that there are good women after all and the weakling piano player takes a new lease on his life when Allaine enters it. While the working out of the destinies of these three people is lacking in dramatic intensity, due to the absence of a human note, their trials and tribulations provide interesting pictorial matter.

R. William Neill's direction merits generally favorable comment. John Stumar's photographic work is of the best.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Allaine Grandet (Dorothy Dalton), a daughter of the Canadian wilds, is given in marriage by her father to Jules Latour (William Conklin), a trapper in whom brute passions always predominate. For money and liquor he turns her over to Dermont (Melbourne MacDowell), proprietor of the dance hall, gambling den and saloon in the settlement. Here she encounters Harley Dane (Thurston Hall), erstwhile gentleman, now only a poor imitation of a human being. He plays the piano in the dance hall. A trapper fresh from the wilds offers to gamble with Dermont for Allaine. He wins. Allaine in her struggles to free herself from him pushes him through a railing around the balcony and he falls to his death. Subsequently when she sees Dane mistreated by Dermont she gives up her job and cares for him, eventually restoring him to health. He tells of his love for her and declares his intention of first going back to his people and making a success of himself before sending for her. Her marriage to Jules is the stumbling block. Allaine goes to Dermont and asks for a team of dogs for Dane, promising to give anything in return. Dermont is moved by her great love for Dane and grants her request unconditionally. And soon afterwards the body of Jules is found frozen in the snow and Allaine departs with Dane.

"The Doctor and the Woman"

(Jewel Production—Six Reels)

Reviewed by Joseph L. Kelley

JEWEL PRODUCTIONS gathered in the strands of a worthwhile screen drama when it secured the rights to Mary Roberts Rinehart's story, "K," presented on the screen under the title, "The Doctor and the Woman." The author laid a firm, sustaining foundation and under the direction of Lois Weber, it has blossomed forth into one of the most entertaining screen dramas seen for some time at the Broadway theatre, where it ran for a limited engagement last week to crowds fully appreciating its every quality of entertainment in pantomine. The little human touches which have been evidenced here and there during its exposition stand out with all prominence, and the subtle, convincing manner in which the chief characters have been vitalized by Mildred Harris, True Boardman, Albert Roscoe, Zella Caull and Carl Miller, is impregnated with an interest compelling force attaining a resistance hard to overcome.

True Boardman is easily the star of the picture. He has the sympathy of his audience from first to last and the manner in which he has held from his audiences his true status, speaks in highest terms for his ability as an impersonator of character and an exponent of dramatic art. Miss Harris makes the role of Sidney Page all that the author expected and in doing so she has accomplished a work that is far from being menial. Her light was not meant to shine with the same brilliance as that disseminated by "K."

The drama opens with a fresh, cooling atmosphere hovering about its every scene as registered by Director Weber. With action running at low ebb the director has kept the interest at high water mark by a cleverly injected suspense element. The audience is expectant, not to be disappointed. With every scene comes a new interest—not of major importance but advancing a pace further the plot of the nicely woven story and telling without the superfluous language of the pantomimic stage, simple details, simply, and without running off on a tangent.

There has been no attempt at high-flown dramatic passages or episodes. Director Weber has revealed the obvious, the simple little happenings of everyday life in such a manner as to overcome and discount the old saying that the obvious is never interesting. She has made it so—the members of the cast have made it so. You will be convinced despite your belief. Just as the simple, homely utterances of President Lincoln fascinated, so does the exposition of the Mary Roberts Rinehart's creation as interpreted by Director Weber and cast, fascinate. Its simplicity gets you and you wonder why it is.

The photography is excellent throughout. Some fine lighting has been accomplished by the technical man and the cameraman lived up to all the expectations of the manipulator of the overheads, side-banks and spots. The sub-titles are to be commended. Each has its place and each performer its one simple duty without supplanting action.

Albert Roscoe has a punch in both hands when it comes to convincing that Dr. Max is in evidence. Zella Caull peeps over the horizon of the vampire group and gets recognition from all. Carl Miller as the jealous lover unconsciously gives to this production a touch of humor that would have been lost in the hands of others. The cast is very good.

THE STORY AND THE PLAYERS

K. Le Moyne (True Boardman), known as K——, arrives in a small country town, and takes lodgings with Mrs. Page. Her daughter, Sidney Page (Mildred Harris), is the belle of the town. Mrs. Page is an invalid and Sidney takes roomers to help support her mother.

Little is known of the stranger K——. He keeps to himself and evinces a friendly interest in Sidney. Sidney's sweetheart, Joe Drummond (Carl Miller), becomes jealous when he learns that an attractive roomer has arrived in the household of Sidney's mother. Sidney expresses a desire to become a nurse and sees Dr. Max Wilson (Albert Roscoe) in regard to the matter. Dr. Max, as he is called. places her in the hospital, in which he is attending surgeon. Dr. Max is an admirer of women, and is attracted to Mildred. He fears Carlotta Harrison (Zella Caull), a nurse in the hospital, who is jealous of his attentions to Sidney.

The name of a Dr. Edwardes was known throughout the country. He had disappeared in a mysterious manner after several operations which he had performed had proved unsuccessful. One of the nurses tells Sidney that she wished Dr. Edwardes could be found to treat Dr. Max.

On the night of the shooting K—— is walking in the neighborhood of the tavern, and learns of the tragedy. He goes to the hospital to see Dr. Max and to learn how Sidney is. He is recognized by Carlotta. It develops that he, K—— is in reality Dr. Edwardes.. He operates on Dr. Max, and Dr. Max quickly recovers. It also develops that the reason why he had been unsuccessful in his operations was because Carlotta, who was nurse in the hospital at the time, had conspired to injure his reputation. Sidney marries K——, and Dr. Max marries a nurse girl, but not Carlotta.

" The Hand at the Window "

(Triangle—Five Reels)

Reviewed by F. G. Spencer

A MYSTERY story of compelling interest, well concocted, well sustained and as well directed is about the correct summing-up of " The Hand at the Window," as the writer sees it. The actions of the denizens of the underworld are vividly portrayed, their " lingo " as depicted in the sub-titles is indeed realistic, and the character parts are uniformly well acted by the different participants in the cast.

Joe King as the detective and later as Captain and Inspector of Police, gives a good account of himself, as also does Francis McDonald as Tony, the counterfeiting Dago. Margery Wilson, who marries the Captain and conceals her real identity until the closing chapter, acquits herself creditably, and a real surprise is sprung when, after her marriage, she rounds up the head of the " circulation department " of the counterfeiting gang, and reveals her identity as a member of the secret service. On being telegraphed to report to Washington to go on another important case, her husband, the Inspector of Police, wires back " Miss Bowers cannot report; just got a life sentence. Inspector Moran."

The Italian quarter in Mulberry street, and a section of Bronx Park, are the main locations selected, and they are beautiful specimens of the photographer's art by C. G. Peterson. Raymond Wells directed.

This picture should be a winner from a box-office standpoint and should not fail no matter where shown.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Roderick Moran (Joe King), detective sergeant of the New York Police Department, secures the conviction of Tony Brachieri (Francis McDonald), notorious counterfeiter. The latter swears revenge in these unique words, " When you get married, Meesta, look out." Moran becomes interested in Laura Bowers (Margery Wilson), who takes a room at the boarding-house in which he resides. Her business is a mystery to him. She wins his love. The two become engaged. Then Moran recalls the threat made by Tony five years ago. However, his mind is set at rest by the shooting of Tony, who makes an effort to escape from prison. Moran and Laura are married. A few moments after they enter their new home a bullet crashes through the window and almost kills Moran. The assailant flees. A thumb-print is found on the window. It corresponds with Tony's finger-prints. But Tony is dead. The police are baffled. Laura follows her former mysterious occupation. She brings the Calabrian Kid (Irene Hunt) into Moran's office one day and exposes the Kid as the murderer. The Calabrian is the woman who had been married to Tony and sworn by him to obtain revenge. Moran learns that his wife is a secret service operative for the Government, who has been on the trail of counterfeiters.

" The White Man's Law "

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

SESSUE HAYAKAWA'S latest picture, " The White Man's Law," gives him the role of an African Arab, the sincere, serious-minded, honorable native, as pitted against a profligate Englishman. It is a role which he handles with all the skill at his command, although it is not of real featured prominence. Jack Holt, as the Englishman, has a big part, and he plays it excellently. But Florence Vidor seems to be the real star of " The White Man's Law." As the little French Sudanese girl, Maida Verne, the pet of the English colony who is overwhelmed by the contrast of her new life with that of her old, she gives a delightful and appealing performance. Miss Vidor has climbed rapidly in the recent Hayakawa pictures. She is young and pretty and has a distinctly delicate and appealing personality. Never before has she had the opportunity which her present role offers her, and her work here is positively captivating.

The story of " The White Man's Law " was written by Marion Fairfax and John Browne, and prepared for the screen by Miss Fairfax. It is a remarkably well handled picture, with plenty of suspense and situations that grip. James Young directed. The African atmosphere is convincing in every scene. A remarkably pretentious production for a five-reel feature creates an air of realism that always surrounds the action. Among those who appear in the large supporting cast are Herbert Standing, Maym Kelso, Forrest Seabury, Ernest Joy, Charles West, Noah Beery and Frank Deshon.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Sir Harry Falkland (Jack Holt), a dissolute Englishman, is given the chance to redeem himself by establishing an ivory trading station in Southern Africa. In the English colony there he meets Maida Verne (Florence Vidor), a French Sudanese girl, the protege of the governor. She is loved by John Ghengis (Sessue Hayakawa), an Oxford educated Arab. Sir Harry wins the love of the girl, and on the evening of his departure to the interior on an ivory expedition with Ghengis takes her out for a ride in his motor. They do not return until the morning. Sir Harry promises to marry her providing she keeps silent until his return. At the first stop on the trip he receives a letter from England saying that his wife (Clarissa Selwynne) has sailed to join him. The expedition is a success. Sir Harry in a native boat, with Ghengis, starts for home, the rest of the party, including the elder Ghengis (Joseph Swickard), travel by land. The letter drops from Sir Harry's pocket and Ghengis sees it. The men fight. Sir Harry attempts to drown Ghengis, and puts on ahead believing he has done so. Back in the village he is hailed with acclaim. But he ignores Maida and laughs at her tale of public disgrace. When Ghengis returns, however, there is another story to tell, Sir Harry realizes what it means to be ostracized for an act like his—there has been one terrible example. And at the instigation of Ghengis he takes his own life. Later Ghengis and Maida are married.

" A Mother's Secret "

(Bluebird—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

" A MOTHER'S SECRET " is a somewhat meandering picture dealing with spies, their attempts to secure valuable plans, and presenting Ella Hall in a number of situations and scenes molded to show her at her best—as a little girl. There is reliable comedy in the scene where Grey, the youthful millionaire gives Angela a whole armful of dolls because, in her short dresses, he believes her thirteen instead of eighteen. This situation, it must be confessed is not strikingly original in any respect, but Miss Hall and Emory Johnson play it nicely and derive the most from it. The spy thread is introduced for suspense and, indeed, the machinations of divers agents of the enemy, serve to lend added interest to the story. The fact that it is irrelevant to the main purpose of the plot and introduced for effect alone matters little, all things considered.

Lois Zellner is author of " A Mother's Secret," the scenario being the work of Doris Schroeder. Douglas Gerrard, who directed, has presented the picture realistically and handled the majority of the scenes with taste and a realization of their respective importance. The few scenes of a French town under bombardment are vivid. Mary Mirsch, T. D. Crittenden and Grace McLean constitute the principal support to Miss Hall and Mr. Johnson. Mrs. L. C. Harris as the old negro mammy contributes a humorous characterization.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Angela (Ella Hall) lives with her grandmother in the south and has never seen her mother, who after the death of her husband married Captain Eldone (T. D. Crittenden), of the English army. Captain Eldone is serving in France and Lady Eldone (Mary Mirsch) works in the ranks of the Red Cross. The Captain has in his possession a plan of a new siege gun. Of this he tells his wife. Shortly afterwards he is reported killed. When Lady Eldone goes to America she is watched by German agents desirous of securing the plans and by Howard Grey (Emory Johnson), a millionaire in the employ of the United States Secret Service, pledged to help Great Britain secure the plans. Angela, now a girl of eighteen, gives her mother a shock when she arrives to live with her. Lady Eldone plans to catch Grey for her husband and the presence of an eighteen-year-old daughter is rather disconcerting. So Angela is dressed in short skirts once again, much to her distaste and her wrath is great when Grey presents her with dolls and takes her on his knee. Rose Marie (Grace McLean), Lady Eldone's maid, a German agent, believes she has spotted the plans and summons assistance in the guise of a masseur. Angela, who has run away from her mother, unable longer to bear being her rival in love returns at the same time the plotters are trapped and soon after in walks Captain Eldone very much alive. His presence naturally puts an end to any other marital schemes of Lady Eldone and when Grey learns that Angela is eighteen instead of thirteen he becomes peculiarly attentive.

" Nine-Tenths of the Law "

(Atlantic Distributing Corporation—Six Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

MITCHELL LEWIS is featured in this picture laid in the northern pine forests. Mr. Lewis' performance in " The Barrier " is still a lingering memory. It was one of the greatest pieces of acting the screen has ever witnessed. But his role in " Nine-tenths of the Law " does not give him the opportunities necessary to make his performance great. The appeal of his 'Poleon Doret was deep. His part here seldom allows him to penetrate beneath the surface. Leneau is picturesque, pleasing and likeable, but when it comes to picturing suffering and sorrow, it is the woman who is the main exponent. And the performance of Jimsey Maye as Leneau's wife, while realistic in its appeal, is not heart-deep. In fact, the performance worthy of chief note is that given by young " Breezy " Reeves as the Little Roughneck. This little tot is natural and thoroughly able. His work will do more toward capturing an audience than that of the mature performers. Reeves Eason as " Red " Adair, gives a melodramatic picture of a bad man.

" Nine-tenths of the Law " was written by Mr. Eason. It is a simple tale in which the Little Roughneck, a kidnapped child, eventually falls in the kindly hands of Leneau and his wife, and once more brightens the home made dark by the death of their baby. The melodramatic note is slight, but provides a certain amount of sustaining interest. The scenes were photographed in pine woods and are a delight. The camera work is fair, but the photography not of the best. Sub-titling could be improved. The main title is drawn from a remark made by Leneau, and has nothing to do with the story.

Slight in plot, "Nine-tenths of the Law" is notable because of the performance of the child and its beautiful mounting. The punch one expects in a special release is missing.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Happiness vanishes from the lives of Leneau (Mitchell Lewis), a trapper, and his wife (Jimsey Maye) when their baby dies. The woman's grief is inconsolable. But the sun shines again when a little boy (Breezy Reeves), kidnapped by "Red" Adair (Reeves Eason), escapes from him and finds the Leneau hut. Red's effort to regain the boy is frustrated by Leneau and he so soundly punishes the bad man that he dies soon afterwards. On his death Leneau learns where the boy was stolen from, and, despite the love of his wife for the child, he takes him back to the city. The woman in despondency contemplates suicide. She is about to jump from a high cliff when Leneau returns to save her. And the boy is with him. For instead of being the son of the rich judge from whom he was kidnapped he turns out to be an orphan for whom the judge was searching for a home.

"Society For Sale"

(Triangle—Five Reels)

Reviewed by F. G. Spencer

WILLIAM DESMOND is presented in "Society for Sale" in a character entirely different from any he has essayed before, for now he appears as the "Honorable Billy," a scion of the British nobility—bankrupt of course—and herein lies the foundation of the film.

The heroine, Phyllis Cline, a one-time manikin, having been bequeathed a goodly sum of money, prevails upon Billy to engage himself to her for a "consideration," in cash. And complications upon complications ensue.

The theme is well handled, gives Desmond and Gloria Swanson plenty of scope wherein to display their histrionic powers, and taken all in all is so handled as to warrant a good reception.

"Society for Sale" is from the pen of Ruby M. Ayres; the scenario was written by Charles J. Wilson and the picture directed by Frank Borzage.

There is a really sustaining plot throughout and a rather one-sided love story too, one-sided indeed until Billy realizes his love for the girl and realizes too that he is about to be outdone. A too promiscuous play of the monocle by Billy detracts somewhat from the otherwise good features of the picture.

This is a picture that will appeal to a great number of fans and particularly those who have just a "comic supplement" idea of British nobility. Release date April 21.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

The Honorable Billy (William Desmond), a member of exclusive English society, squanders his income. Phyllis Clyne (Gloria Swanson) inherits a fortune, and wishes to break into society.. For a financial consideration she persuades Billy to open the gates of society for her. Billy's sense of honor causes him to balk, but Phyllis refuses to permit him to pull out of the agreement. She meets a dissolute rake, Lord Sheldon (Herbert Pryor), against whom Billy warns her. She accuses him of jealousy.

In a quarrel with Furnival (Charles Dorian), who proposes to Phyllis, he removes the objectionable suitor. He learns that Phyllis is nothing but a manikin and is shocked at the deception. Placed in a bad position with his friends, Billy has, nevertheless, learned to love her. She leaves him. He tries to adjust himself to his old life. Phyllis runs away with Lord Sheldon. The fugitives meet with an accident, and Sheldon is killed. Billy discovers that Lord Sheldon is her father, and it all ends happily.

"Danger Within"

(Bluebird—Five Reels)

Reviewed by F. G. Spencer

LITTLE ZOE RAE is really a clever little actress, but in this picture she is made to assume not only the airs, the antics and premonitions of a juvenile, but she is given the aforethought and ingenuity of one far exceeding her age. It is, however, a cleverly executed plot, for her simple mannerisms and childish ways smooth out the wrinkles of an old man's withered soul, and he at last "finds" himself. Little Zoe is already an emotional actress—she registers grief, joy, surprise, anguish and anticipation as readily and as potently as many of her seniors, and this is a picture of many sides, and hers a role of just as many angles. The story is by Charles T. and Frank Dozey; the scenario is by Frank H. Clark and it was produced by Rea Berger.

The photography is exceptionally good.

It is a picture that will appeal strongly to the "family" element.

This picture has the heart interest and the winsomeness that eventually win.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Tom Paulton (William Carroll) is employed in the brokerage office of Matthew Wedgestone (C. H. Mailles), and is about to be discharged. Paulton's wife, Grace Paulton (Winifred Greenwood) is crippled through an accident, and they cannot afford to pay Dr. Trevick (H. Dunkinson) the sum of $300, which the latter says will be the fee for an operation.

Just at this juncture Wedgestone's manager, Gilbert Bolson (True Boardman), is instrumental in an attempt to put through a scheme to ruin old Wedgestone, and incidentally enrich himself. To effect this he prevails upon the doctor to quarantine Wedgestone's house on the plea that the butler is suffering from a virulent attack of small pox. While the quarantine is in effect and the old broker forcibly kept indoors the manager and doctor put their plans to work, and all would have gone well had not little Zoe fled from the rear of the house with a message to her father, giving him full power of attorney to prosecute the deals Wedgestone had contemplated before his incarceration.

She reaches the city just in time, and Wedgestone's stock is saved.

"At the Mercy of Men"

(Select—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

"AT THE MERCY OF MEN" is a picture laid in the early days of the Russian revolution, rather unsavory and by no means realistic with respect to the principal character portrayed by Alice Brady. The opening reel with its scenes of the three officers on a debauch and the rape of Vera Souroff is shocking even to one accustomed to seeing the villain turn the key in the door and attack the helpless heroine. There was certainly no doubt about it that Vera was at the mercy of men, but they didn't have any mercy. The ex-Czar is then brought into the story and at the suggestion of the ex-Czarina forces Count Nicho, one of the three officers, to marry Vera. The trio had sworn to one another never to tell the name of the man who did the worst. So Count Nicho, because he is oldest, gets a wife thrust upon him. Eventually after revolutionary squalls from which Vera rescues her husband, he tells her the identity of the guilty man and she is contented with him—even loves him. This change of Vera's is on the face of things quite unsatisfactory. It is hard to believe that any self-respecting woman, the sort of woman Vera is supposed to be, would turn to love a man after he had acted as did the Count. We don't pretend to be any authority on feminine psychology but this action of Vera's seems to be against the rules of the game.

Miss Brady, with a Russia hair dress, plays with feeling and creates an appealing character until the turning point in her attitude toward the Count. Frank Morgan as the Count and Jack Johnson, W. C. Carleton, Yolande Buquette and Robert Walker carry supporting roles. Charles Miller directed from a scenario by Paul West.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Vera Souroff (Alice Brady), music teacher of Alice (Tula Bell), daughter of Countess Zaptine (Yolande Buquette), while passing home through the streets of Petrograd, is overpowered by Count Nicho (Frank Morgan), an officer in the Czar's Own Guard, out on a wild revel with his companions, Count Andreas (Robert Walker) and Count Michael (C. Porches). She is trapped in a private dining-room, and the three officers, thoroughly drunk, attack her. When help arrives it is too late. Vera returns to her home to be cast aside by her fiance (Jack Johnson) when she tells him what has happened. Countess Zaptine on hearing her sad story goes to the Czarina, who brings her influence to bear on the Czar. From the ranks of the officers of the Guard, Vera picks out the three culprits. But they have taken an oath to tell nothing of the affair. As a consequence, the Czar forces Count Nicho, the oldest, to marry Vera, and then casts him in jail with his companions. Vera, however, is not satisfied. She wishes to know the identity of the man who is to be the father of her child.. When the revolution breaks out and Vera hears that the three officers are to be killed by the angry mob, she goes to the jail. In defending themselves, Counts Andreas and Michael are killed, Count Nicho seriously wounded. Vera takes him to her home, and hides him from the revolutionists. Later when his wound is well he finally breaks his vow, and tells Vera that he is the guilty men. This satisfies her, and the picture closes with her in his arms.

Pathe Comedies

(Rolin Film Company)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

"HIS BUSY DAY" is a two-reel Rolin number featuring Toto. It is not much on continuity as other of his comedies have been and gives the appearance of having been hastily patched together. By far the funniest series of scenes in it shows Toto dressed in a tiger skin attempting a nature dance. The two reels trace his adventure as cameraman for the Hearst-Pathe Weekly. It is a good thing for the weekly that its cameramen are generally unlike Toto.

"Kicked Out" is a one-reeler featuring Harold Lloyd, whose chief task is to do a small bit of female impersonating. In gags and general get up it fails to reach the exceedingly high standard which Lloyd has been setting for himself of late. It is more like his first efforts, particularly when he starts throwing handfuls of salad about the table.

Studios For Rent

Most conveniently located Studio in New York City—

318-320-322 East 48th Street.
Floor space—80 x 100.

Room for six good sized sets.

Carpenter shops equipped with latest machinery.

2000 Amperes gives any kind of light effects.

Will contract to furnish you your sets on a 10% basis, saving you your rent in lumber alone.

People can reach your Studio in four or five minutes. Props, on a minute's notice. No waits on account of location of Studio. A big money saver.

Rent by the week or month, also yearly leases.

Address ROLAND WEST
318 East 48th Street New York City

Unexcelled Film Laboratories and Studios

HIGH CLASS PRINTING, DEVELOPING TINTING AND TONING

STUDIOS For Rent by Week, Month or Yearly Leases

124 School Street Yonkers, N. Y.
Telephone: 4600 Yonkers

"Leap to Fame"

(World Film—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

CARLYLE BLACKWELL does just what an efficient newsreporter should do in "Leap to Fame." He runs head on into a German spy plot and before the smoke has cleared away has nabbed the leader and rescued the much distressed heroine and made her his wife. This is raising reportorial efficiency to an exceptionally high degree. The style in which Raymond Schrock has developed this plot is comedy-melodrama. Mr. Blackwell makes a genial and ingratiating reporter who refuses to take things quite seriously but the numerous twists of the plot have brought the suspense well up in the rating. The action is ever rapid and includes a scattering of nearly spectacular stunts such as Trevor's descent from the roof of a house via a rope, and his rescue of the girl Carl Hoffman, naturally enough a German spy.

Evelyn Greeley makes an attractive heroine. Lionel Belmore says "hoch" and "Gott und Himmel" with expression fiendishly Teutonic and Muriel Ostriche swaggers as a little East Side tough. Frank Beamish and Alec Francis render creditable accounts of themselves. Mr. Blackwell's work as director is adequate.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Charles Trevor (Carlyle Blackwell), having learned to play an excellent game of draw poker in college, is sentenced to work on a newspaper by his father (Alec Francis). In covering the night court he witnesses the escape of an alien enemy and giving pursuit captures him. This leads to his meeting with Dorothy (Evelyn Greeley), a young lady endeavoring to regain a priceless formulae stolen from her father by German spies. So Trevor allies himself with the distressed Dorothy for more reasons than one and stops not until he has landed the tribe of spies, broken into print with a feature story and returned to his parent with the heroine of the exciting melodrama as his drama.

"Dolly Does Her Bit"

(Diando-Pathe—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

HERE at last has Baby Marie Osborne a vehicle in which she is permitted to act like a genuine child. There is no shallow sentiment and Marie unites no couple in the midst of breaking the ties that bind. Lucy Sarver, author of "Dolly Does Her Bit," conceived a thoroughly pleasing and fanciful little story that runs its pace without any lapses in interest. The little star has for her chief support the black-skinned youngster who has appeared in all her recent pictures. He is a natural and spontaneous fellow and in his present role is the center of a number of unusually humorous scenes. Baby Marie herself gives a clever performance.

The settings provided by the Diando company show a marked improvement over those in the last picture while William Bertram's direction is commendable in all departments.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Hilda Best (Alice Saunders), a seamstress, receives a child-sized mechanical doll to dress as a nurse for the Red Cross Bazaar. Her niece, Dolly (Baby Marie Osborne), guards it while her aunt is out, but the children of the neighborhood get wind of its presence in the house and overwhelming its little keeper carry it off. It meets with a disaster when it gets in the path of a runaway team. Dolly and her little Ethiopian friend bury the remains with great ceremony. Subsequently Dolly takes its place and with only a few friends in her confidence is successfully auctioned off at the bazaar. She goes to a rich society woman, whose little daughter is crippled. Burglars break into the house of the rich lady that night and when Dolly surprises them they kidnap her. She escapes early the next morning and gives the alarm to the ploice. The reward for the capture of the burglars goes to her. Afterwards she promises to remain the companion of the crippled child for the rest of her life.

"A Black Sherlock Holmes"

(General-Ebony Comedy—One Reel)

Reviewed by F. G. Spencer

WITH real "colored folks" in the cast, this burlesque on Sherlock Holmes shows many amusing phases of the detective game as seen from the negro comedian side. The characters of Nick Carter, portrayed by Sam Robinson; Rheuma Tism, Rudolph Tatum; I Wanta Sneeze, the inventor, George Lewis; Cheza Sneeze, Evan Junior, and Baron Jazz, Sam Jacobs, are all well carried, and most of the incidents are ludicrous in the extreme.

It will make a fair filler for the average program.

Four Christie Comedies

(Christie Comedies—One Reel Each)

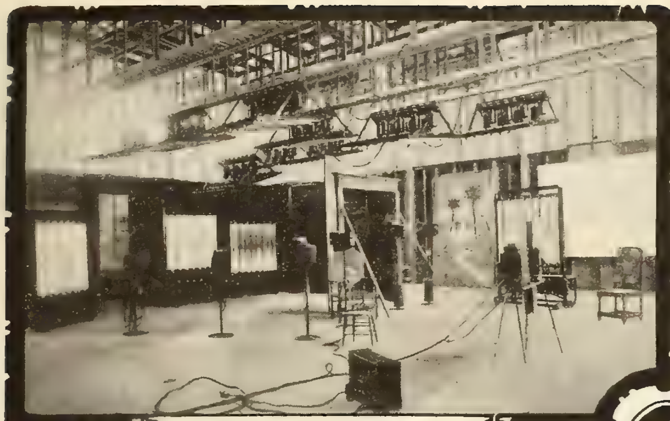
Reviewed by Joseph L. Kelley

THREE of the latest consignments of Christie Comedies to be shown for review are corking good examples of clean, snappy comedy. They are, "All Dressed Up," which is the best of the four, with Betty Compson, Dorothy Dane and Harry Edwards; "Red Crossed," with Ethel Lynne and "Smiling" Billy Mason and "Betty's Adventure," with Betty Compson, "Smiling" Billy Mason and Harry Edwards. The fourth, "By Orange Aid," featuring Bobby Vernon, Eleanor Field and Dorothy Dane, is one of the poorest Christies which has been shown in recent months. It has no substance and the attempt at comedy by Bobby Vernon gets no further than the bare attempt. Bobby has little to work with in the way of a story, the author having been content to rest on the fact that an orange show held somewhere in California, would afford sufficient interesting detail to offset the lack of comedy situations.



INDOOR STAGE

OUTDOOR STAGE

DOLLARS 60 DOLLARS

WILL RENT A SPACE 48 × 50 ON THIS SUPERB OPEN-AIR STAGE AND 30 DOLLARS A DAY WILL RENT THE INDOOR STUDIO INCLUDING ELECTRIC CURRENT—REMEMBER—COOPER-HEWITT—LIGHTED

KLUTHO STUDIOS
JACKSONVILLE, FLA.

ERNEST SHIPMAN
17 W. 44TH ST., N.Y.
CAN TELL YOU MORE

"All Dressed Up" is one of the snappiest one-reelers that Christie has shown. Betty Compson shines in this short subject and she and her work are ably supplemented by Dorothy Dane and Harry Edwards, Mr. Edwards being particularly good. Friend wife is out of town and hubby strikes up a flirtation with the little lady across the hall. She meets him in the hall on the day that friend wife returns and asks that he deliver a dress to the cleaners for her. Friend wife see hubby and he explains that he has just bought her a new dress. Friend wife puts on the new dress and is seen by the little lady across the hall. The trouble starts but hubby squeezes out to the satisfaction of all concerned.

"Red Crossed" develops some clever situations. Ethel Lynne and "Smilling" Billy Mason, husband and wife in this particular instance, decide to boost for the Red Cross fund. She bets him that she can raise more money than he can. Both engage the services of their friends, unknown to the other. Billy engages in a little poker game and his wife, finding that she is a few hundred behind in the race, hits on an idea. She and girl friends dress as cops and raid the poker game. The offenders are promised freedom for a few hundred. But the regular cops arrive—well Billy and Ethel manage to be "within the law."

"Betty's Adventure" has some real live comedy situations and the story told is logical and at times hits the dramatic high spots. Betty is romantic and seeks adventure. Billy is likewise affected. They meet under rather romantic conditions. She is mistaken for a Count's wife but proves her identity. Her dreams are realized, for she finds a husband and has experienced real romance. Harry Edwards in the role of the Count does some clever work in this reel. All three principals are good.

"By Orange Aid" is not much in the way of comedy. Bobby Vernon is too affected in his manner of putting over the comedy, or trying to, and is under the big disadvantage of having to interpret a poorly written story. Eleanor Field and Dorothy Dane do their best to overcome the frailities in the script.

"The Face in the Dark"

(Goldwyn—Six Reels)

Reviewed by Joseph L. Kelley

"THE FACE IN THE DARK," an Irving S. Cobb creation, is the late medium through which Mae Marsh greets the picturegoing public. Hobart Henley directed and J. C. Bitzer was cameraman. Considered purely from an entertaining standpoint this late Goldwyn production is in rank with those plays which stand between Miss Marsh's best and her average pictures. The fact that it is a detective story goes a long ways toward heightening its entertaining value. In the hands of a Conan Doyle the story would have presented a more sustaining backbone for its general theme smacks of the Doyle style. Mr. Cobb has done very well with the script but he has not made quite clear the why and wherefore of Charles Ridgeway's attitude toward his daughter, in keeping from her the fact that he was working on the mystery which had drawn her sweetheart in its web of suspicion. On the other hand it is perfectly feasible and logical to believe that Mr. Cobb's reason for keeping such information from the daughter was because she, herself, was supposed to be gifted with the keener perception of a detective, having inherited same from her father.

Miss Marsh's work in this production is on par with her quality work in other productions. She finds some difficult moments in this play but rises to meet them every time, and does so without the least show of exertion. Niles Welch, playing opposite in the leading juvenile role, does admirable work. Mr. Welch screens like a winner, acts with ability and grace and expresses emotions without leaving the impression that he is acting for the camera. Alec B. Francis, as Charles Ridgeway, is good, as per usual. Mr. Francis' work before the camera is always commendable. Donald Hall does effective work in the role of a detective. Harry C. Myers has a less important role but convinces in his bit. Willard Dashiell, Isabelle Wilson and Alice Wilson are seen in minor supporting roles.

News Notes from Canada

Allen Interests Take Over Two Theatres

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made that the Allen Interests have taken over two more Ontario theatres. These two houses are the Temple theatre in Hamilton and the Majestic Theatre in London. Extensive improvements and alterations will be commenced immediately on both houses to bring them up to the high standard required by this company.

The Temple in Hamilton has a splendid location. It was officially taken over by the Allens on April 15, when "The Bluebird" was the film offering of that week. Plans have been made between the management of this theatre and the Hamilton Daily Spectator for an unique advertising campaign that will doubtless quickly inform the Hamilton public of the policies under the new regime.

Al Morgan, who has been occupying the position of manager of the Temple, will continue in that capacity. Mr. B. J. Cronk, manager of the Allen theatre in Toronto, was in Hamilton last week conferring with Mr. Morgan on various matters pertaining to the policies of the house, and it is expected that everything will be running like clock-work very shortly. The Temple seats nearly 2,000.

The Majestic theatre in London, the other house acquired by the Allens, also has a splendid location in the Forest City. Tommie Logan, the present manager, will be retained.

Exhibitors Look Askance at Daylight Law

Daylight saving is now in effect in Canada, and exhibitors are not looking with any degree of favor upon the measure. When several of the Eastern Provinces tried daylight saving two years ago, it was found to be greatly against the theatrical interests, and it was expected that a protest would have been lodged by the men most concerned, but nothing seems to have been done. Business has been so bad with some exhibitors owing to war conditions, that the extra hour of daylight is felt to be the last straw.

Exchanges Satisfied with Season's Business

Reports from all the Eastern Canadian exchanges say that business during the past winter has been excellent, in spite of the fact that the poor train service has greatly hampered shipments.

All of the big features issued under the Regal banner are reported to be working overtime, and the Universal office says "The Price of a Good Time" is breaking all records.

Canada Likes Mildred Harris

The Universal feature, "The Price of a Good Time" was shown in St. John recently, and seldom has a picture received such praise. It is generally conceded that this is a great production from every point of view, and although Mildred Harris is a comparative stranger to the people in this part of Canada, she was so well liked that she may be sure of a welcome when she returns in her next feature.

Seen and Heard in Canada

John Griffin, of the Griffin Amusement Company, made a trip throughout Western Ontario recently, and visited some of his theatres in Western Ontario towns.

It is rumored that the New Princess theatre in Toronto will show pictures this summer. The Princess, which was recently opened, is controlled by the Whitneys of Detroit. They showed but one picture, since it has been opened, "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea."

Among the out-of-town exhibitors who were in Toronto recently were Mr. Weir, of the Star theatre, Meaford; Mr. Martin, of the New Strand theatre, Kingston; Mr. Yates, of the Royal theatre, Parry Sound, and Dave Stewart, of the Red Mill theatre, Hamilton.

Plans are out for a modern moving picture theatre, which will be built in Amherstburg, Ont., by Clyde Curry, proprietor of the Favorite theatre, Windsor, Ont. Amherstburg is situated a few miles below Windsor, on the Detroit River, and has had a steady growth within recent years. It is also a great summer town.

The Royal theatre in Hamilton, formerly managed by Mr. Disher, has been closed indefinitely. The Empire theatre in London, which has been closed for some time, has reopened for business under the management of Mr. Spurgeon.

There is one paper at least in Toronto that is catering to the film business in the Queen City. Commencing March 30, the Toronto Daily News inaugurated what they term "The Daily News Photoplay Calendar," and will make it a permanent feature each week in the Saturday edition.

Of the following Toronto theatres, Allen, Astor, Carlton, Coliseum, Colonial, Doric, Eclipse, Empress, Family, Garden, Garrick, Globe, His Majesty's, Imperial, Madison, Mary Pickford, Model, Monarch, Oakwood, Park, Peter Pan, Playhouse, Red Mill, Royal, St. Julien, Strand, Willowvale, Windsor and York, only one theatre, the York, is featuring a daily change of features. The majority change their feature three times a week, while some change twice a week.

Rumors Are Rife

It is reported that the Superfeatures Film Co. has taken over the Four-Square and the Eagle's Eye, and that Metro is about to amalgamate with Regal.

Universal Entrenched in Canada

The exhibiting end of the motion picture business in Canada has gone directly across "No Man's Land" and now appears to be safely launched on a prosperous era, according to reports made by A. Tisdale of the Canadian Universal Film Company, Ltd., to Bluebird and Jewel Production officials.

In a letter written on April 2 last Mr. Tisdale lists fourteen theatres that heretofore have not used the product of either Bluebird or Jewel as now using them continually, and in several cases for full week runs.

"Every first run theatre in the Province of Alberta has contracted for Jewel Productions," Mr. Tisdale wrote, "and second run theatre managers are wiring and writing for dates."

Mr. Tisdale also reports that Universal Serials are most popular and that the Canadian serial market is booming, some houses using as many as four serials a week.

"Slacker" Test Cuts in on Receipts

The military authorities are now rounding up the slackers under the Military Service Act, and in doing this they have caused, it is claimed, no little inconvenience to exhibitors. The customary procedure is to go to a theatre when it is crowded and demand proof from every man of his right to exemption. All married men of military age must now carry a marriage certificate, and all unmarried men must produce registration papers. This action on the part of the authorities has had the effect of keeping some of the young men away from places of amusement.

Saskatchewan Requires License for Operators

It became known last week that, beginning with April, any person desiring to become an operator of a projection machine in Saskatchewan must obtain an apprentice license from the Provincial Secretary. An operator's license is not granted until the applicant has passed an examination.

McRae Successful with Theatre

Don McRae, who has taken over the theatre in Campbellton, formerly owned by Mr. Dimmock, is reported to be doing great business. Mr. McRae was manager for Regal before he became an exhibitor, and was credited with being one of the most popular men on the road.

Releases in the Independent Field

For Manufacturers' Addresses, Names and Addresses of Buyers handling films in any territory, or any other additional information write—State Rights Department, Motion Picture News

Arrow Film Corporation

The Deemster.
Eyes of the World.
Ramona.
Weavers of Life.
Souls Redeemed.
Persuasive Peggy.
Today.
The Mad Lover.
The Woman's Law.
Right Off the Bat.
The Struggle Everlasting.

Big Productions Film Corp.

VICTORIA FEATURE FILMS
The Sunset Princess (Marjorie Daw).

Bluebird Extraordinary

The Eagle's Wings (Herbert Rawlinson).
Hell Morgan's Girl (Dorothy Phillips).
Mother o' Mine (Rupert Julian, Ruth Clifford, Ruby La Fayette).

Jules Burnstein

Shame ....7 parts

Century Comedies

(FEATURING ALICE HOWELL)
Balloonatics ....2 reels
Automaniacs ....2 reels
Neptune's Naughty Daughter.............2 reels

Christie Film Company

One Reel Comedy Issued Weekly
Love and Locksmiths.
Hearts and Clubs.
Almost a Bigamist.
More Haste Less Speed.
Betty Wakes Up.
Stepping Out.
Almost Divorced.
Help! Help! Police!
Their Seaside Tangle.
One Good Turn.
Thirty Days.
Nearly a Papa.
Cupid's Camouflage.
Five to Five.
Many a Slip.
The Night of His Life.
Mum's the Word.
Circumstantial Evidence.
In the Dark.
Whose Wife?
The House that Jack Built.

Cinema Distributing Corp.

The 13th Labor of Hercules.

Clune Productions

Ramona ....8 reels
Eyes of the World.......................9 reels

Commonwealth Pictures Corp.

Charlotte, in The Frozen Warning.

Coronet Film Corporation

LIVING STUDIES IN NATURAL HISTORY
Animal World, No. 1 Issue.
Animal World, No. 2 Issue
Birdland Studies.
Horticultural Phenomena.

Cosmofotofilm Company

Incomparable Mistress Bellairs...........4 reels
Liberty Hall ....4 reels
The Black Spot..........................4 reels
Victoria Cross ....4 reels
His Vindication ....5 reels
I Believe ....7 reels

Doll Van Film Corp. (Chicago)

The Cold Deck.
To-Day.
The Mad Lover.
Public Defender.
Carmen of the Klondike.

M. S. Epstin

Raymond L. Ditmars' "The Depths of the Sea," in a series of four parts.

Export and Import Film Co.

Feb. 18. Birth of Democracy.
Mar. 4. Why the Bolsheviki?

The Fordart Films, Inc.

(Francis Ford Productions Co.)
Berlin via America.

Foursquare Pictures

The Sin Woman (Irene Fenwick, Clifford Bruce, Reine Davies).
The Bar Sinister (Edgar Lewis's production).
Her Fighting Chance (Jane Grey).
Madame Sherry (Gertrude McCoy).
The Silent Witness (Gertrude McCoy).
The Great White Trail (Doris Kenyon).
One Hour (Zena Keefe and Alan Hale).
A Trip Through China.
The Fringe of Society (Milton Sills, Ruth Roland).
The Eagle's Eye (Serial) (Marguerite Snow and King Baggot).
The Cast-Off (Bessie Barriscale).

Fort Pitt Corporation

The Italian Battlefront.

Frohman Amusement Corp.

The Witching Hour (C. Aubrey Smith, Jack Sherrill, Helen Arnold, Marie Shotwell and Robert Conness........6 reels
Conquest of Canaan......................5 reels
God's Man ....9 reels
My Own United States.

General Enterprises, Inc.

Mother (Elizabeth Risdon, McClure)....6 parts
The Warrior (Maciste) (McClure)......7 parts
The Liar (Jane Gail, Stanley Walpole)...6 parts

Golden Features

A Bit of Life...........................1 reel

Jesse J. Goldburg

"Outing-Chester Pictures"
(To be issued one a week)
Apr. 22. Kaieteur, the Perfect Cataract.
Apr. 29. An Ex-Cannibal Carnival.
May 6. A Mountaineering Memory.
May 13. A Coorial on the Orinoco.
May 20. Pines Up and Palms Down.
May 27. A Jungle Joy Ride.
June 3. Zuni Kicking Race.
June 10. Two Dutch Islets of the West.
June 17. Pin Feather Pickaninnies.
June 24. A Tropic Melting Pot.

SCRANTONIA PHOTOPLAY CORP.
Apr. 22. The Chinese Musketeer.
Apr. 29. Feet and Defeat.
May 6. Cheerful Liars.
May 13. Fate and Fortune.
May 20. Parson Pepp.
May 27. The Ring and the Ringer.

RIALTO FILM CORPORATION
Apr. 15. My Husband's Friend.

Graphic Features

Apr. 1. Moral Suicide.

D. W. Griffith

Intolerance ....9 reels

Hiller & Wilk, Inc.

The Battle of Gettysburg...............— reels
The Wrath of the Gods (Sessue Hayakawa).5 reels

Historic Features

Christus ....8 reels

M. H. Hoffman, Inc.

One Hour (Zeena Keefe and Alan Hale).6 reels
The Silent Witness (Gertrude McCoy)...6 reels
A Trip Through China (Brodsky's Art Pictures) ....8 reels
Her Fighting Chance (Jane Grey).......6 reels
Should She Obey? (Alice Wilson, Gene Genung and Norbert Myles).........6 reels
Whither Thou Goest (Rhea Mitchell and Orrin Johnson) ....5 reels
The Great White Trail (Doris Kenyon)..6 reels

Ivan Feature Productions

One Law for Both (Rita Jolivet, Vincent Serrano, Leah Baird, Pedro De Cordoba, James Morrison)..............7 reels
Babbling Tongues (Grace Valentine, James Morrison, Arthur Donaldson)........7 reels
Married in Name Only (Gretchen Hartman, Milton Sills, Marie Shotwell)........6 reels
Sins of Ambition (Barbara Castleton, Wilfred Lucas, Leah Baird, James Morrison) ....7 reels
Human Clay (Mollie King)..............5 reels
Life or Honor (Leah Baird, James Morrison, Violet Palmer, Edward Mackey) ....6,500 ft.

Jester Comedies

Feb. —. The Recruit (Twede Dan)......2 parts
Mar. —. His Golden Romance (Twede Dan) ....2 parts
April —. All "Fur" Her (Twede Dan)...2 parts
May —. The Wrong Flat (Twede Dan)..2 parts

Marine Film Co.

Lorelei of the Sea.....................— reels

Masterpiece Drama Productions

Who's Your Neighbor?.................... —

Popular Picture Corporation

Corruption ....6 reels

Renowned Pictures Corporation

The Public Defender.....................6 reels
Naked Hands ....5 reels
Mother Love and the Law.................7 reels
In Treason's Grasp.......................5 reels
Should She Obey?........................7 reels

Frank J. Seng

Parentage ....7 reels

State Rights Distributors, Inc.

Carmen of the Klondyke (Clara Williams).

Sterling Pictures Corporation

The Mystic Hour (Alma Hanlon feature).6 parts
When You and I Were Young (Alma Hanlon feature) ....5 parts
The Golden God (Alma Hanlon feature)..5 parts
She Was a Dangerous Girl (Cartoon comedy) ....500 ft.
Zippy the Fireman (Cartoon comedy)....500 ft.
Zippy in a Sanatorium (Cartoon comedy).500 ft.
Zippy Buys a Pet Pup (Cartoon comedy).500 ft.
Slick and Tricky (Cartoon comedy)......500 ft.
Doctor Bunny's Zoo (Cartoon comedy)...500 ft.
The Old Forty-Niner (Cartoon comedy)..500 ft.
Mr. Coon (Cartoon comedy).............500 ft.
Mose Is Cured (Cartoon comedy)........500 ft.
Zippy's Insurance (Cartoon comedy).....500 ft.
Zippy's Pets (Cartoon comedy)..........500 ft.
The Unknown (Cartoon comedy)........500 ft.

Moe Streimer

A Daughter of the Don..................10 reels

Submarine Film Corporation

The Submarine Eye......................7 reels

U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corp.
Just a Woman (Charlotte Walker).

W. H. Productions Co.

William S. Hart as Two Gun Man in "The Bargain" ....6 reels
William S. Hart in "The Bandit and the Preacher" ....5 reels
William S. Hart in "The Hell Hound of Alaska" ....5 reels
Also Series of two-reel W. H. Hart productions.
Satan's Pawn (Bessie Barriscale).

Western Import Co.

Mickey (Mabel Normand).

Wholesome Films Corporation

The Penny Philanthropist (Peggy O'Neil and Ralph Morgan), D...................... 5
Cinderella and the Magic Slipper (Special Children's Cast), Juv...................... 4
His Awful Downfall (Rex Adams), 1,000 feet, C.
Little Red Riding Hood (Juvenile), 4,000 feet.

World Pictures

Over Here ....5 reels

Features--Current and Coming

Bluebird Photoplays

Apr. 15.	A Rich Man's Darling (Louise Lovely)	5
Apr. 22.	The Marriage Lie (Carmel Myers)	5
Apr. 29.	A Mother's Secret (Ella Hall)	5
May 6.	Danger Within (Little Zoe Rae)	5
May 13.	The Guilt of Silence (Monroe Salisbury, Ruth Clifford)	5
May 20.	Title Not Decided	5

Universal Productions

Apr 8	Her Fling (Special Attraction) (Dorothy Phillips)	5
Apr. 15.	No Release
Apr. 22.	The Scarlet Drop (Special Attraction) (Harry Carey, Mollie Malone)	5
Apr. 29.	No Release
May 6.	The Two-Soul Woman (Special Attraction) (Priscilla Dean)	5
May 13.	No Release
May 20.	The Bride's Awakening (Mae Murray)	6

Famous Players-Lasky Corp.

(Successors to Paramount Pictures Corp.)

PARAMOUNT PICTURES

Mar. 25.	LaTosca (Pauline Frederick)	5
Mar. 25.	"Naughty, Naughty!" (Enid Bennett)	5
Apr. 1.	Honor of His House (Sessue Hayakawa)
Apr. 8.	His Majesty, Bunker Bean (Jack Pickford)
Apr. 8.	The House of Silence (Wallace Reid)
Apr. 15.	Rich Man, Poor Man (Marguerite Clark)
Apr. 15.	Unclaimed Goods (Vivian Martin)
Apr. 22.	Playing the Game (Charles Ray)
Apr. 29.	Let's Get a Divorce (Billie Burke)
Apr. 29.	Tyrant Fear (Dorothy Dalton)

ARTCRAFT PICTURES

Mar. 11.	Amarilly of Clothes-Line Alley (Mary Pickford)
Mar. 25.	De Mille's "The Whispering Chorus"
Mar. 31.	Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird"
Apr. 1.	The Tiger Man (Wm. S. Hart)
Apr. 8.	The Lie (Elsie Ferguson)
Apr. 22.	Mr. Fix-It (Doug Fairbanks)

First National Exhibitors' Circuit, Inc.

On Trial.
Charles Chaplin.
Daughter of Destiny (Mme. Petrova).
Herbert Brenon's "Empty Pockets."
The Sign Invisible (Big Mitch Lewis).
The Fall of the Romanoffs.
Tarzan of the Apes.

Dec. 23.	The Daughter of Destiny (Mme. Petrova)	7
Feb. 1.	The Light Within (Mme. Petrova)	7
Mar. 18.	The Life Mask (Mme. Petrova)	7
Apr. —.	Tempered Steel (Mme. Petrova)	7

Fox Film Corporation

(Special Features)

Apr. 7.	The Bride of Fear (Jewel Carmen)	5
Apr. 14.	Western Blood (Tom Mix)	5
Apr. 21.	American Buds (Jane and Katherine Lee)	6
Apr. 28.	Her One Mistake (Gladys Brockwell)	5
May 5.	Brave and Bold (George Walsh)	5
May 12.	Peg of the Pirates (Peggy Hyland)	5
May 19.	The Firebrand (Virginia Pearson)	5
May 26.	Blue-Eyed Mary (June Caprice)	5

Fox Standard Pictures

Feb. 3.	The Forbidden Path (Theda Bara)	6
Feb. 10.	Les Miserables (Wm. Farnum)	9
Mar. 17.	Woman and the Law	7
Mar. 24.	Rough and Ready (Wm. Farnum)	6
Apr. 7.	The Blindness of Divorce	7

Goldwyn Features Corp.

Mar. 10.	The Floor Below (Mabel Normand)	6
Mar. 24.	The Splendid Sinner (Mary Garden)	6
Apr. 7.	The Danger Game (Madge Kennedy)	6
Apr. 21.	The Face in the Dark (Mae Marsh)	6
May 5.	Joan of Plattsburg (Mabel Normand)	6

GOLDWYN SPECIALS

The Manx-Man	7
For the Freedom of the World	7

W. W. Hodkinson Corporation

(Paralta Plays)

Mar. 1.	"Within the Cup" (Bessie Barriscale)	7
Mar. 15.	"Humdrum Brown" (Henry B. Walthall)	5
Apr. 1.	"An Alien Enemy" (Louise Glaum) Substituted for Kerrigan release)	5
Apr. 15.	"Blindfolded" (Bessie Barriscale)	5
Apr. 29.	"With Hoops of Steel" (Henry B. Walthall)	—
May 13.	"The Snapdragon" (Louise Glaum)	—
May 27.	"Rose O' Paradise" (Bessie Barriscale)	—

Jewel Productions, Inc.

Sept. —	Come Through (Drama)	—
Sept. —	Pay Me (Drama)	—
Sept. —	Sirens of the Sea (Drama)	—
Oct. —	Man Without a Country (Patriotic)	—
Oct. —	The Corespondent (Drama)	—
Nov. —	The Price of a Good Time (Drama)	—
Dec. —	The Grand Passion (Drama)	—
Dec. —	K (Drama)	—

Perfection Pictures

(GEORGE KLEINE SYSTEM)

Feb. 25.	Ruggles of Red Gap (Essanay)	—
Feb. 11.	The Unbeliever (Edison)
Apr. 7.	A Pair of Sixes (Essanay)	—
	Curse of Iku (Essanay)	—

Metro Pictures Corporation

Apr. 1.	The Landloper (Harold Lockwood) Metro-Yorke	5
Apr. 8.	Social Hypocrites (May Allison)	5
Apr. 15.	With Neatness and Dispatch (Bushman and Bayne)	5
Apr. 22.	Treasure of the Sea (Edith Storey)	5
Apr. 29.	Riders of the Night (Viola Dana), Metro	5
May 6.	The Trail to Yesterday (Bert Lytell), Metro	5
May 13.	Cyclone Higgins, D.D. (Bushman & Bayne), Metro	5
May 20.	The Winning of Beatrice (May Allison), Metro	5
May 27.	Lend Me Your Name (Harold Lockwood), Metro-Yorke	5

(SCREEN CLASSICS, INC., SPECIALS)

Lest We Forget (Rita Jolivet), Screen Classics, Inc.	8
The Legion of Death (Edith Storey), Metro-Rolfe	7
Blue Jeans (Viola Dana), Metro-Rolfe	7
Revelation (Nazimova), Screen Classics, Inc.	7
The Slacker (Emily Stevens), Metro	7
Draft 258 (Mabel Taliaferro), Metro	7
My Own United States (Arnold Daly), Frohman	8
The Million Dollar Dollies (Dolly Sisters), Emerald	5

(METRO SPECIALS)

Blue Jeans (Voila Dana), Metro-Rolfe	7
The Legion of Death (Edith Storey), Metro-Rolfe	7
Revelation (Nazimova), Metro	7
The Slacker (Emily Stevens)	7
Draft 258 (Mabel Taliaferro)	7

Mutual Film Corporation

Apr. 1.	A Bit of Jade (Mary Miles Minter) American	5
Apr. 8.	The Richest Girl (Ann Murdock) Frohman	5
Apr. 15.	The Primitive Woman (Margarita Fischer) American	5
Apr. 22.	(Title to be announced later), Mutual-Star Production	5
Apr. 29.	Hearts or Diamonds (Wm. Russell)	5
May 6.	Social Briars (Mary Miles Minter) American	5

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Apr. 7.	Twenty-One (Bryant Washburn) Pathe	5
Apr. 14.	The Busy Inn (N. I. Panoff, Mme. Nadya Lesienko Mme. Orlova, N. A. Backsheef) Russian Art	5
Apr. 21.	Ruler of the Road (Frank Keenan, Kathryn Lean, Ned Burton, John Charles) Pathe	5
Apr. 28.	Dolly Does Her Bit (Baby Marie Osborne, Alice Saunders, Louis Hahn, Georgia Woodthorpe).
May 5.	How Could You, Caroline? (Bessie Love, James Morrison)	5

Select Pictures

Dec. —	Shirley Kaye (Clara Kimball Young)	5
Dec. —	The Honeymoon (Constance Talmadge)	5
Jan. —	Woman and Wife (Alice Brady)	5
Jan. —	Ghosts of Yesterday (Norma Talmadge)	6
Jan. —	The Marionettes (Clara Kimball Young)	5
Jan. —	The Studio Girl (Constance Talmadge)	5
Mar. —.	By Right of Purchase (Norma Talmadge)	6
Mar. —.	The Shuttle (Constance Talmadge)	5
Mar. —.	The House of Glass (Clara Kimball Young)	5
Mar. —.	The Knife (Alice Brady)	5
Apr. —	The Reason Why (Clara Kimball Young)	5
Apr. —	Up the Road with Sallie (Constance Talmadge)	5
Apr. —	At the Mercy of Men (Alice Brady)	5

SPECIAL RELEASES

Over There (Chas. Richman, Anna Q. Nilsson)	6
The Lone Wolf (Bert Lytell, Hazel Dawn)	5
The Barrier (Rex Beach Production)	7
The Wild Girl (Eva Tanguay)	5
The Public Be Damned (Charles Richman, Mary Fuller)	6

Triangle Distributing Corporation

(Subject to change without notice)

Apr. 7.	The Vortex (Mary Warren)	5
Apr. 7.	The Boss of the Lazy "Y" (Roy Stewart)	5
Apr. 14.	The Law of the Great Northwest (Margery Wilson)	5
Apr. 14.	Who Killed Walton? (J. Barney Sherry)	5
Apr. 21.	The Hand at the Window (Margery Wilson)	5
Apr. 21.	Society For Sale (Wm. Desmond)	5
Apr. 28.	The Lonely Woman (Belle Bennett)	5
Apr. 28.	Paying His Debt (Roy Stewart)	5
May 5.	An Honest Man (Wm. Desmond)	5
May 5.	Mme. Paulette (Claire Anderson)	5
May 12.	Her Decision (Gloria Swanson, J. Barney Sherry)	5
May 12.	Wolves of the Border (Roy Stewart)	5

Vitagraph V-L-S-E.

Apr. 1.	Little Miss No-Account (Gladys Leslie	5
Apr. 8.	The Business of Life (Alice Joyce)	5
Apr. 15.	The Girl from Beyond (Nell Shipman, Alfred Whitman)	5
Apr. 22.	A Bachelor's Children (Harry Morey, Florence Deshon)	5
Apr. 29.	The Seal of Silence (Earle Williams, Grace Darmond)	5
May 6.	The Little Runaway (Gladys Leslie, Edward Earle)	5
May 13.	The Strength of the Weak (Alice Joyce, Walker McGrail)	5
May 20.	The Golden Goal (Harry Morey, Florence Deshon)	5

World Pictures

Apr. 1.	The Cross Bearer (Montagu Love)	7
Apr. 8.	The Witch Woman (Ethel Clayton)	5
Apr. 15.	The Trap (Alice Brady)	5
Apr. 22.	The Purple Lily (Kitty Gordon)	5
Apr. 29.	Leap to Fame (Carlyle Blackwell, Evelyn Greeley)	5
May 6.	Masks and Faces (Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson)	6
May 13.	Journey's End (Ethel Clayton)	5
May 20.	Vengeance (Montague Love, Barbara Castleton)	6

Short Subjects Current and Coming

Educational Film Corp. of Amer.

SCENICS—EDUCATIONAL

Jan. 2.	A World of Dreams	800 ft.
Jan. 9.	A Trip Through Japan, No. 3	900 ft.
Jan. 16.	The Hound of the Hills	700 ft.
Jan. 23.	Making of an American Officer	1,000 ft.
Jan. 30.	Just for Joy	900 ft.
Feb. 6.	The Trail to the Sky	700 ft.
Feb. 13.	The Ridge Roamers	800 ft.
Feb. 20.	A Mountain Observatory	1,000 ft.
Feb. 27.	The Forbidden Isle	900 ft.
Mar. 6.	From Here to Summerland	800 ft.
Mar. 13.	Strange Fishermen of Russia	900 ft.
Mar. 20.	Our Hawaiian Army	1,000 ft.
Mar. 27.	The Making of the Plotless Picture	700 ft.
Apr. 3.	The Making of Russian Caviar.	850 ft.
Apr. 10.	White Water and Windy Willie—Where the Clouds Come From	1,000 ft.

DITMARS "LIVING BOOK OF NATURE"

Jan. 14.	The Animals in Midsummer	500 ft.
Jan. 28.	Life in the Insect World	500 ft.
Feb. 11.	Turtles of All Lands	500 ft.
Feb. 25.	Evolution	500 ft.
Mar. 11.	Animal Traits	500 ft.
Mar. 25.	Adaptation	500 ft.
Apr. 8.	Night Animals	500 ft.

CARTOONS

Apr. 22.	Vanity and Vengeance (Katzenjammer Kids)	500 ft.
Apr. 29.	Doing His Bit (Happy Hooligan)	500 ft.
May 6.	Der Two Twins (Katzenjammer Kids)	500 ft.

BENJAMIN CHAPIN'S PARAMOUNT SERIES

The Son of Democracy.

Famous Players-Lasky Corp.

PARAMOUNT BRAY PICTOGRAPHS

Mar. 4. In the Moonshine Country; Stage Women's War Relief; Magic for Home Use; Cartoon: Pinkerton Pup's Portrait.
Mar. 11. War and the Motorcycle; Hawaii and Her Natives; Cartoon by Wallace Karlson.
Mar. 18. Rose Culture; Uncle Sam's Coin Factory; Physical Culture Terpsychore; Cartoon: Hornets of the Sea, by J. F. Leventhal.
Mar. 25. Lumbering for Wartime; Hawaiians and Their Strange Customs; Women in the World of Work (Interior Decorating); Cartoon: Bobby Bumps, by Earl Hurd.
Apr. 1. Training Women Sharpshooters; Our Bone Relations; A New Use for a Houseboat; Cartoon by — "Me and Gott" — Bray Studios.
Apr. 8. Grizzly Bear Pets; Uncle Sam's Stamp Factory; Cartoon by Wallace Karlson.
Apr. 15. Women in the World of Work; Hawaii, The Beautiful; Cartoon by Earl Hurd.
Apr. 22. Microscopic Revelations; Horse Training by Experts; Scientific Rose Culture; Cartoon by Bray Studios.
Apr. 29. Titles Unavailable.

PARAMOUNT BURTON HOLMES TRAVELOGUES

Mar. 4. On the Way to the Front with the Chinese Labor Corps.
Mar. 11. The Alaska Cruise.
Mar. 18. A Summer Day in Skaguay.
Mar. 25. Over the White Pass.
Apr. 1. Down the Yukon.
Apr. 8. In Happy Honolulu.
Apr. 15. Peerless Pineapples of the Pacific.
Apr. 22. High Spots of Hawaii.
Apr. 29. Our Filipino Fighting Force.

PARAMOUNT ARBUCKLE COMEDIES

Mar. 18. The Bell Boy.
Apr. —. No April Release Reported.

PARAMOUNT MACK SENNETT COMEDIES

Mar. 11. Sheriff Nell's Tussle.
Mar. 25. Those Athletic Girls.
Apr. 8. Friend Husband.
Apr. 22. Saucy Madeline.

PARAMOUNT FEATURE—"THE SON OF DEMOCRACY"

Mar. 4. My First Jury.
Mar. 11. Tender Memories.
Mar. 18. A President's Answer.
Mar. 25. Native State.
Apr. 1. Down the River.
Apr. 8. The Slave Auction.
Apr. 15. Under the Stars.

Fox Sunshine Comedies

Mar. 3.	Her Husband's Wife	2 C
Mar. 17.	A Selfmade Lady	2 C
Apr. 7.	A Waiter's Wasted Life	2 C
May 5.	A Neighbor's Keyhole	2 C

Fox Film Corporation

MUTT AND JEFF ANIMATED CARTOONS

Apr. 7.	The Freight Investigation	½ reel
Apr. 14.	The Leak	½ reel
Apr. 21.	On Ice	½ reel
Apr. 28.	Helping McAdoo	½ reel
May 5.	A Fisherless Cartoon	½ reel
May 12.	Occultism	½ reel
May 19.	Superintendents	½ reel

General Film Company

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES
(O. HENRY STORIES)

The Rubaiyat of a Scotch Highball (Agnes Ayres, Edward Earle)	2 D
The Buyer from Cactus City (William Dunn, Miriam Miles)	2 D
The Purple Dress (Agnes Ayres, Evart Overton)	2 D
The Enchanted Profile (Agnes Ayres, Evart Overton)	2 D

BLUE RIDGE DRAMAS
(Ned Finley)

The Return of O'Garry	2 D
Mountain Law	2 D
The Raiders of Sunset Gap	2 D
O'Garry Rides Alone	2 D
The Man from Nowhere	2 D

ESSANAY
GEORGE ADE FABLES
ESSANAY COMEDIES (1 reel)

The Soup and the Fish Ball	1 C
A Tough Knight	1 C
Our Little Nell	1 C
Check Your Hat, Sir	1 C
Wild Algy of Piccadilly	1 C
All Stuck Up	1 C
The Lie That Failed	1 C
The Jazbo Sheriff	1 C

SNAKEVILLE COMEDIES
(One reel each)

Slippery Sam and the Green-Eyed Monster.
When Macbeth Came to Snakeville.
Slippery Slim and His Tombstone.
Slippery Slim and the Impersonator.
When Slippery Slim Met the Champion.
Snakeville's New Waitress.
Slippery Slim's Dilemma.

ESSANAY SCENICS

Water Powers of Western Canada	1 Sc.
Through Canada from Coast to Coast	1 Sc.
How Canada and the Farmer Co-operate in Grain Raising	1 Sc.
Agricultural Opportunities in Western Canada	1 Sc.
Water Powers of Eastern Canada	1 Sc.
A Romance of Rails and Power	1 Sc.
Grand Canyon of Arizona and Canyon de Chelley	1 Sc.

CHAPLIN COMEDIES

By the Sea	1 C
In the Park	1 C
Work	2 C
A Woman	2 C
The Tramp	2 C
His New Job	2 C
A Night Off	2 C

JAXON FILM CORP.

"A DAUGHTER OF UNCLE SAM" SERIAL (Jane Vance, Wm. Sorelle) 12 Episodes	1 D

JAXON COMEDIES

The Unofficial Maneuver	1 C
What Occurred on the Beach	1 C
An All-Fools' Day Affair	1 C
Beating Him to It	1 C
Forced Into Matrimony	1 C

JUDGE BROWN STORIES

Thief or Angel	2 C-D
The Accusing Toe	2 C-D
The Rebellion	2 C-D
A Boy Built City	2 C-D
I'm a Man	2 C-D
Love of Bud	2 C-D
Dog vs. Dog	2 C-D

THREE C COMEDIES

Stealing a Sweetheart (Lou Marks, Pearl Shepard, Oom Paul)	1 C
A Hash House Romance (Lou Marks, Pearl Shepard, Oom Paul)	1 C
The Hod Carrier's Million (Claude Cooper, Virginia Tracy Clark, Kenneth Clarendon)	1 C

HANOVER FILM COMPANY

Camille (Helen Hesperia)	6 D
The Marvelous Maciste	6 D

PHYSICAL CULTURE PHOTO PLAYS CO.

Physical Culture Magazine (Issued Monthly)	1 Edc.

PIEDMONT PICTURES CORPORATION
(SELBURN COMEDIES)

Hubby's Holiday	2 C
Too Much Elephant	1 C
Wedding Bells and Lunatics	1 C
His College Proxy	1 C

CLOVER COMEDIES

The Wooing of Coffee Cake Kate	1 C
Rip Roaring Rivals	1 C
He Couldn't Fool His Wife	1 C
By Heck, I'll Save Her	1 C
The Paper Hanger's Revenge	1 C

EBONY COMEDIES

A Black Sherlock Holmes	1 C
Spying the Spy	1 C
The Porters	1 C
A Milk Fed Hero	1 C
Busted Romance	1 C
Spooks	1 C

EXPORT AND IMPORT FILM CO. (Inc.)

Why—The Bolsheviki	5 D

NOVELTY FILMS
(Cartoons, Novelties, Scenics)

ME, der Kaiser; Our Heroes; Strange Sights in the Pacific Islands	1
Power, Pro and Con; England's Leaders on Land and Sea; Scenic	1
The Girth of a Nation; 4 Famous Battles of the Civil War; Scenic	1
Truths on the War in Slang; Scenic	1
Oh! What a Beautiful Dream; Scenic	1
The Ghost; Hocking the Kaiser; Scenic	1

DUPLEX FILMS, INC.

Shame (Zena Keefe)	7 D

RANCHO SERIES

In the Shadow of the Rockies	2 D
Where the Sun Sets Red	2 D

Goldwyn Pictures Corp.

CAPITOL COMEDIES
(Featuring "Smiling Bill" Parsons)

May 6.	Bill's Baby	2 reels
May 20.	Bill's Predicament	2 reels
June 3.	Birds of a Feather	2 reels

VICTORY FILM MFG. CO.

The Triumph of Venus	5 D

King Bee Comedies

Mar. 1.	The Rogue	2 reels
Mar. 15.	The Orderly	2 reels
Apr. 1.	The Scholar	2 reels
Apr. 15.	The Messenger	2 reels
May 1.	The Handy Man	2 reels

George Kleine System

MONTGOMERY FLAGG'S COMEDIES
"GIRLS YOU KNOW"

Jan. 2.	Screen Fan	Edison
Jan. 16.	The Bride	Edison
Jan. 30.	The Superstitious Girl	Edison
Feb. 13.	The Matinee Girl	Edison
Feb. 27.	The Artist's Model	Edison
Mar. 13.	The Man Eater	Edison
Mar. 27.	The Stenog	Edison
Apr. 10.	The Art Bug	Edison
Apr. 24.	A Good Sport	Edison

ESSANAY

Mar. 1. Broncho Billy's Leap.
Mar. 8. Broncho Billy and the Rattler.
Mar. 15. Broncho Billy's Close Call.
Mar. 22. Broncho Billy and the Settler's Daughter.
Mar. 29. Broncho Billy's Indian Romance.
Apr. 5. Broncho Billy, A Friend in Need.
Apr. 12. Broncho Billy's Wild Ride.
Apr. 19. Broncho Billy's First Arrest.
Apr. 26. Broncho Billy and the Rustler's Child.
May 3. Broncho Billy's Last Deed.

LINCOLN-PARKER WORLD TRAVELOGUE

Feb. 1. Panama Canal, Part 1.
Feb. 8. Panama Canal, Part 2.
Feb. 15. Colombia, Part 1.
Feb. 22. Colombia, Part 2.
Mar. 1. Peru, The Land of Incas, No. 1.
Mar. 8. Peru, The Land of Incas, No. 2.
Mar. 15. Peru, The Land of Incas, No. 3.
Mar. 22. Peru, The Land of Incas, No. 4.
Apr. 29. Puno and Scenes Around Lake Titicaca, Bolivia.

Metro Pictures Corporation

METRO-DREW COMEDIES

Mar. 18.	Special Today	1 C
Mar. 25.	When a Man's Married	1 C
Apr. 1.	Gas Logic	1 C
Apr. 8.	A Youthful Affair	1 C

Mutual Film Corporation

STRAND (BILLIE RHODES)

Mar. 19.	His Quaker Girl	1 reel
Mar. 26.	Up She Goes	1 reel
Apr. 2.	She Couldn't Grow Up	1 reel

Apr. 9. For Art's Sake........................1 C
Apr. 16. Her Helping Hand...................1 C
Apr. 23. Mary's Frame-Up.....................1 C
Apr. 30. Spotted ....1 C
May 6. Over the Garden Wall...............1 C

SCREEN TELEGRAM

Issued Sunday and Wednesday of Each Week

MUTUAL-CHAPLINS

Oct. 29. The Adventurer........................2 C

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Sunday, April 28, 1918
Hey, There! (Harold Lloyd, Bebe Daniels Harry Pollard) Rolin....................1 C
His Busy Day (Toto, Clarine Seymour, Margaret Joslyn, Bud Jamison) Rolin.......2 C
Picturesque Wales—Llangollen and Picture Spots in England (Col. Travel)....Split reel
Wednesday, May 1, 1918
Hearst-Pathe News, No. 36................1 top
Saturday, May 4, 1918
Hearst-Pathe News, No. 37................1 top
Sunday, May 5, 1918
Kicked Out (Harold Lloyd, Harry Pollard, Bebe Daniels) Rolin....................1 C
Our Fighting Ally—The Tank.............1 top
Wednesday, May 8, 1918
Hearst-Pathe News, No. 38................1 top
Saturday, May 11, 1918
Hearst-Pathe News, No. 39................1 top

SERIALS

"THE HOUSE OF HATE" (ASTRA)

Two reels each
(Pearl White, Antonio Moreno, Paul Clerget, John Webb Dillion, Peggy Shaner)
Apr. 7. Fifth Episode, Spies Within.
Apr. 14. Sixth Episode, A Living Target.
Apr. 21. Seventh Episode, The Germ Menace.
Apr. 28 Eighth Episode, The World Secret.
May 5. Ninth Episode, Poisoned Darts.

Triangle Distributing Corp.

TRIANGLE COMEDIES

Mar. 3. A Discord in A Flat.................1 C
Mar. 3. His Hidden Shame..................1 C
Mar. 10. Wives and Worries..................1 C
Mar. 10. She Didn't Do It.....................1 C

KEYSTONE RELEASES

Apr. 21. Their Neighbor's Baby (Fritzie Ridgeway) ....2 C
Apr. 28. Mr. Miller's Economies (Edward Brady, Chas. Dorian)....................2 C
May 5. I Love Charles Albert (Ed. Brady, Ann Kroman)...................2 C
May 12. Newspaper Clippings (Francis McDonald, Claire Anderson)........2 C

Universal Film Company

NESTOR—A Kitchen Hero (Eileen Sedgwick) ....1 C
Wednesday, May 8, 1918
L-KO—Her Movie Madness (Gale Henry, Hughie Mack) ....2 C
Monday, May 13, 1918
NESTOR—New York, By Heck (by Hy Mayer) ....1 C
Wednesday, May 15, 1918
L-KO—Title Not Decided....................2 C

UNIVERSAL ANIMATED WEEKLY

Apr. 3. Number 18.
Apr. 10. Number 19.
Apr. 17. Number 20.
Apr. 24. Number 21.
May 1. Number 22.
May 8. Number 23.
May 15. Number 24.

UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE

Apr. 6. Issue Number 65.
Apr. 13. Issue Number 66.
Apr. 20. Issue Number 67.
Apr. 27. Issue Number 68.
May 3. Issue Number 69.
May 10. Issue Number 70.
May 17. Issue Number 71.

UNIVERSAL CURRENT EVENTS

Apr. 6. Issue Number 47.
Apr. 13. Issue Number 48.
Apr. 20. Issue Number 49.
Apr. 27. Isue Number 50.
May 3. Issue Number 51.
May 10. Issue Number 52.
May 17. Issue Number 53.

LYONS-MORAN STAR COMEDIES

Apr. 8. A Pigskin Hero..................1 reel
Apr. 15. The Tail of a Cat...............1 reel
Apr. 22. ....1 reel
Apr. 29. Mum's the Word.................1 reel
May 6. Whose Baby Are You?..........1 reel
May 13. The Dodgers.....................1 reel
May 20. The One-Horse Show............1 reel

SERIALS

"THE BULL'S EYE"

Two Reels Each
(Eddie Polo)
Apr. 1. Ninth Episode, Dynamite.
Apr. 8. Tenth Episode, Coyotes of the Desert.
Apr. 15. Eleventh Episode, Fired.
Apr. 22. Twelfth Episode, Burning Lands.
Apr. 29. Thirteenth Episode, Sold at Auction.
May 6. Fourteenth Episode. The Firing Squad.
May 13. Fifteenth Episode, The Stained Face.
May 20. Sixteenth Episode, Running Wild.

"THE LION'S CLAWS"

Two Reels Each
(Marie Walcamp)
Apr. 1. First Episode, A Woman's Honor.
Apr. 8. Second Episode, Beasts of the Jungle.
Apr. 15. Third Episode, The Net of Terror.
Apr. 22. Fourth Episode, A Woman's Scream.
Apr. 29. Fifth Episode, The Secret Document.
May 6. Sixth Episode, The Dungeon of Terror.
May 13. Seventh Episode (Title Not Decided).
May 20. Eighth Episode (Title Not Decided).

BOY SCOUTS TO THE RESCUE

Universal Special
Apr. 15. Aides of a Nation, No. 1........2 reels
Apr. 22. On the Trail, No. 2.............2 reels
Apr. 29. The Great Mine Disaster, No. 3.2 reels
May 6. The Spies, No. 4................2 reels
May 13. Treachery at Sea, No. 5.........2 reels

FINLEY NATURE STUDIES

Split Reel
Apr. 1. Number 12, "A Day at Yellowstone Park" and "Beautiful Devon—the Land of Romance, England."
Apr. 8. Number 13, "Sea Birds and Animals" and "The Land of Long Ago."
Apr. 15. Number 14, "Wild Animals at Yellowstone" and "Atop the Alps" (Scenic) Split reel.
Apr. 22. Number 15, Wild Bird Pets" and "In and Around Key West, Fla." (Scenic) Split reel.

Vitagraph

BIG V COMEDIES

Apr. 1. Sleuths and Slackers.
Apr. 8. Rummies and Razors.
Apr. 15. Counts and No Counts.
Apr. 22. Whistles and Windows.
Apr. 29. Flirts and Fakirs.
May 6. Laws and Outlaws.
May 13. Spies and Spills.

VITAGRAPH COMEDIES

Feb. 4. Surprising Husband.
Feb. 11. Coals for the Fire.
Feb. 18. Sweets to the Sour.
Feb. 25. Their Godson.

VENGEANCE AND THE WOMAN (Serial)

Mar. 11. The Desperate Chance (Twelfth Episode).
Mar. 18. Sands of Doom (Thirteenth Episode).
Mar. 25. The Hand of Fate (Fourteenth Episode).
Apr. 1. The Reckoning (Fifteenth Episode).

THE WOMAN IN THE WEB (Serial)

(Hedda Nova, J. Frank Glendon)
Apr. 8. Caught in the Web (First Episode).
Apr. 15. The Open Switch (Second Episode).
Apr. 22. The Speeding Doom (Third Episode)
Apr. 29. The Clutch of Terror (Fourth Episode).
May 6. The Hand of Mystery (Fifth Episode).
May 13. Full Speed Ahead (Sixth Episode).

DREW COMEDIES

(Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew)
Mar. 11. Their First Quarrel.
Mar. 18. Telegraphic Tangle.
Mar. 25. His Wife Knew About It.
Apr. 1. Following the Scent.
Apr. 8. The Home Cure.
Apr. 15. The Deceivers.
Apr. 22. Beautiful Thoughts.
Apr. 29. All for the Love of a Girl.

DREW COMEDIES

Apr. 15. The Deceivers.
Apr. 22. Beautiful Thoughts ....1 C
Apr. 29. All for the Love of a Girl..........1 C
May 6. The Story of the Glove...........1 C
May 13. Fox Trot Finese.....................1 C

EXHIBITORS' PERSONALS

ARIZONA

Jack Kenny has relinquished his lease on the Crystal theatre, Sullivan street, Miami.

IDAHO

Frank R. Newman, manager of the Pantages theatre at St. Lake, Utah, is considering the advisability of putting on a Pantages circuit in Boise.

KENTUCKY

Rowland Clark, proprietor of the Arista theatre, Lebanon, has assumed the management of the Alhambra theatre at Campbellville. The Alhambra was formerly the property of W. I. Meader, deceased.

MASSACHUSETTS

H. R. Lefebvre has sold the Orpheum theatre at New Bedford to Thomas J. Charrette, the present manager of the Casino and Royal theatres.

Elias Low has taken over the management of the Crystal theatre, on Trumbull Street, near Front Street, Worcester.

Louis Rosenweig has bought the Victoria theatre property at Springfield. The property includes the theatre and block on Chapman street.

MINNESOTA

J. M. Freeman has bought the Lyceum theatre of Moorehead from William McKallor.

MISSOURI

The Strand motion picture theatre, located at Thirty-sixth street and Troost avenue, Kansas City, was recently sold to E. A. Finch and H. W. Hildebrand of St. Joseph for $6,000.

NEBRASKA

Bart Chipman has taken over the management of the Oliver theatre, Lincoln.

Peter Schnitzen, proprietor of the Kroy Cafe, York, has bought the Dean motion picture theatre.

S. S. Groves will have his new motion picture theatre ready for opening about April 15.

NEW JERSEY

Harry T. Miller has leased the Columbus theatre, Bernardsville, for a term of five years from April 1. Mr. Miller states that he will continue the motion picture entertainments, running for the present two nights each week—Wednesdays and Saturdays. He is completing arrangements to secure some of the best films obtainable for the Bernardsville people and expects to add new features from time to time.

Joseph Belloni, who has had charge of the theatre for the past five years, will retire from the show business entirely.

NEW YORK

The Mack theatre, corner of Washington street and Third avenue, Rensselaer, which has been closed for a few weeks, reopened recently under the management of Mr. W. R. Jones, of Salem, N. Y., he having leased the place. He is an exeperienced movie manager and promises the public that he will put none but the best of stars shown on his screen.

NORTH DAKOTA

J. M. Freeman, of the Reel theatre, East Grand Forks, has sold the theatre to M. Garber, of Grand Forks. Mr. Garber already has taken possession.

OHIO

Ed. Cohn and Charles Hall, both of the Consolidated Film Co., have purchased the Daisy theatre, Cleveland.

Charles Weidner, late assistant treasurer of the Grand Opera House, Cincinnati, has assumed the management of the Colonial theatre, Columbus.

OKLAHOMA

J. C. Plew has bought the Gem theatre at Snyder from C. A. Roberts.

PENNSYLVANIA

Richard C. Ellis has bought the motion picture theatre at 4545-47 Lancaster avenue, Philadelphia, from Gustavus C. Sidel.

Watson and Daley of Hagerstown have taken over the "It" theatre at Waynesboro.

Solz and Goldberg, of Pittsburgh, recently disposed of their interests in the Majestic theatre, Rochester, to M. Winograd and L. Cowan, also of Pittsburgh, who will hereafter conduct business under the firm name of the Majestic Amusement Company.

Richard Louther, Tice Berkey and Evan Rhoades, three young men of Somerset. have secured a lease on the Bijou theatre property at Somerset, and will open the theatre, for many months closed, soon.

William Welliver has purchased the C-Nic theatre at Scranton.

L. W. Jones, former mayor of Coatesville, has signified his intention of opening the motion picture theatre soon.

Jas. J. Weist, manager of the Gem theatre here, and Jos. F. Weist, have purchased from W. H. Hampton the lease of the Carlton theatre in Du Bois, one of the best equipped motion picture houses in this part of the State.

The motion picture theatre at 1412 and 1414 South Broad street, Philadelphia, on a lot 32 by 178 feet, has been sold by Emil Rosenberger to Tillie Borowsky, for a nominal sum and a mortgage of $13,000. It is assessed at $14,000.

John Wolfe has sold his interest in the Happy Hour theatre at Johnstown to his late partner, C. J. Brown.

SOUTH DAKOTA

The Conde Opera House, Conde, has been reopened under the management of J. P. Wolf.

TENNESSEE

H. A. Ragle has assumed the management of the Palace theatre at Maryville.

VERMONT

The Shrine theatre building, Rutland, is to be sold shortly by the trustee in bankruptcy, E. H. O'Brien.

WYOMING

Rutledge Bros. are the new managers of the Opera House at Pine Bluff.

Through the purchase of the Hub theatre, Cowley, the Mormon Church has launched into the motion picture business. The theatre was sold to the trustees of the Church of Latter Day Saints, and they will continue the business.

Accessory News

— SECTION OF MOTION PICTURE NEWS —

Motiograph de Luxe

Noted for

Its Simplicity—Ease of Operation—and Perfect Projection

Lamphouse well ventilated.

DOOR on both sides.

Condenser mount so arranged Condenser breakage is reduced to minimum.

Speed Control lever and starting switch in handy place.

Magazines large and roomy.

If you haven't inspected the Motiograph De Luxe DO SO! You will easily see its many points of superiority.

Write for literature

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co.

564-572 West Randolph Street
Chicago, Illinois

WESTERN OFFICE:
833 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

THEATRE DECORATIONS

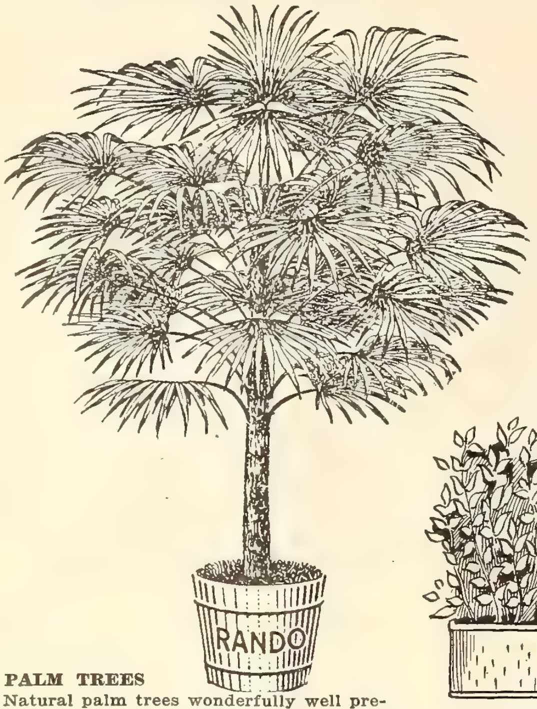
The Randall Line of Quality Artificial Flowers and Plants

Send for Catalog of

ELECTRIC FOUNTAINS

FOR THEATRES

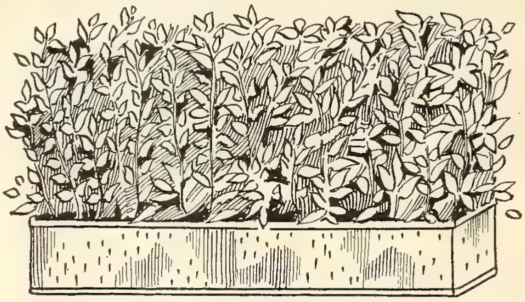
They Are Portable and Require No Piping



PALM TREES

Natural palm trees wonderfully well preserved. Life like appearance and lasting quality.

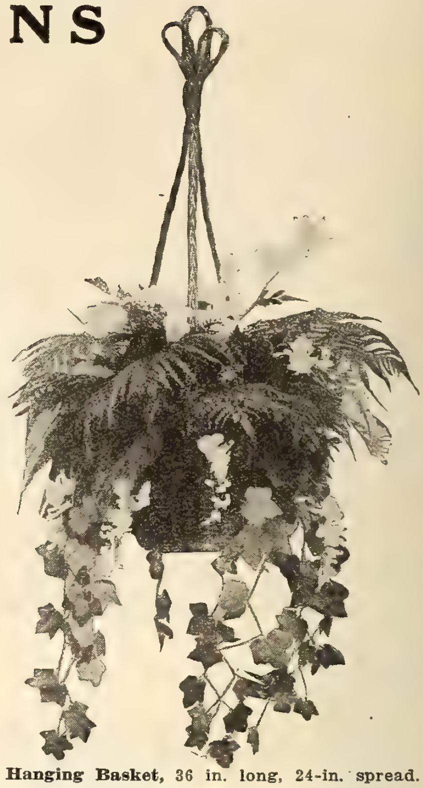
	Leaves	Height Feet	Price Each	Price Dozen
No. T711..	10	6	$3.00	$30.00
No. T713..	12	7	3.75	37.50
No. T715..	15	8	4.50	45.00
No. T717..	18	10	5.50	55.00
No. T719..	20	12	7.25	72.50



BIRCH BARK WINDOW BOX

No. 651—Birch Box with Boxwood Hedge—An exceptionally attractive theatre decoration. Beautiful well made box filled with the highest quality Boxwood. This represents a big value at the following prices:

15 inches high, per running foot	$2.00
22 inches high, per running foot	2.50



Hanging Basket, 36 in. long, 24-in. spread.

No. FT3036—Hand-Woven Reed Hanging Basket	$2.50
12 Wistaria Sprays, Yellow, Pink or Lavender (Nasturtiums, Daisies, Asters, etc., if preferred)	1.75
12 Green or Autumn Tint Adiantum Fern	1.00
12 Green Ivy Vines	1.25
Complete as shown	$6.50

A. L. RANDALL CO., 180 N. Wabash Ave., CHICAGO

BETTER SATISFACTION

This notice is addressed to the minority of our subscribers who do not regularly answer advertisements. The service described is, however, open and free to all who wish our help.

We do not wish to discourage you from writing direct to our advertisers; in fact, you do not do enough of it for your own good, but we do want you to get the proper goods to fit your needs.

There are many, perhaps you, who are too busy to write each company separately; therefore we are offering our co-operation, which means that you will receive full information on any subject which you may designate by merely filling out the coupon, designating by numbers the goods in which you are interested.

Your inquiries thus received will be forwarded to reputable manufacturers, even though the goods on which you wish information are not advertised in the "News."

1. Advertising Novelties
2. Architectural Suggestions
3. Arc Controllers
4. Brass Rails
5. Building Material
6. Cameras—Camera Attachments —Camera Lenses
7. Carbons
8. Chairs
19. Chair Upholstery
10. Change Making Machines
11. Condensers
12. Converters and Transformers
13. Developing Material
14. Developing and Printing
15. Developing Tanks
16. Disinfectants and Perfumes
17. Economizers
18. Electric Signs
29. Elevators and Escalators
20. Exterior Lighting
21. Film Cabinets
22. Film Carriers
23. Film Cement
24. Film Cleaners
25. Film Dyes
26. Film Stock
27. Fire Extinguishers
28. Floral Decorations
29. Gas Engines
30. Generators (See Gas Engine Card)
31. Heralds
32. Interior Lighting
33. Interior Telephones
34. Laboratory Apparatus
35. Lenses
36. Lighting Sets
37. Lithographers
38. Lobby Display
39. Lobby Novelties
40. Metal Ceilings
41. Motors
42. Mural Paintings
43. Musical Instruments
44. Paints
45. Perforating Machines
46. Printing Machines
47. Programs
48. Projection Booths
49. Projection Lenses
50. Projection Machines
51. Projection Machines (Homes)
52. Rectifiers
53. Reels
54. Rewinders
55. Rheostats
56. Safety Exit Locks
57. Screens
58. Slide Ink
59. Slides
60. Slip Covers
61. Stage Setting
62. Studio Lights
63. Tickets
64. Ticket Selling Machine
65. Ticket Taking Machine
66. Tripods
67. Uniforms
68. Vacuum Cleaners
69. Ventilating and Fans

Gentlemen: Please send me descriptive matter on the subjects marked in the above lists.

Name.........................

Theatre.........................

City.........................

State.........................

Accessory News

SECTION OF MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Devoted to the technical branches of the motion picture industry, containing records of the latest accomplishments in the mechanical and scientific field; projection helps, inventions and suggestions; camera devices analyzed and commented upon; musical cue sheets for important feature pictures; improvements and innovations in the building and furnishing field.

No charge is made in these departments for answering questions of any nature. Correspondence is invited.

E. Kendall Gillett........ ....Editor

Alfred S. Cory............................Technical Editor

Cue Sheets

THE question of co-operating with motion picture theatre managers in improving their music is one which has been much discussed. We realize that any method which might be followed would be open to criticism and would only be of value to certain houses if used exactly as prepared. No one method can be universally applied.

In taking the matter up and weighing the various methods which were suggested we hit upon the "cue sheet" as probably the best for all concerned. The "cue sheet" as supplied does not necessarily have to be followed—it was never intended that it should be. The idea from its inception was that it should be a guide to the musician by which he should judge as to the general character of the picture—where the changes and jumps in the action occur—and the tempo which is best suited to the action depicted.

Everyone is not infallible—no two people judge values from the same viewpoint—therefore we say that every player should see every picture before it is played, whether he has a "score" or "cue sheet." We believe that we have the best available musical man preparing "cue sheets" for publication in the News, and the same thing applies to the film manufacturers who supply this service. We do not, however, claim that every man will agree with the selections as recommended but we do claim that they will be a great help to all musicians as a guide and short-cut to better music for the picture.

The letter quoted below was received from the Director of one of the leading Picture Theatre Symphony Orchestras. His criticism of the "cue sheets" is perfectly logical from his viewpoint, and undoubtedly he could find other instances of incorrect musical conception as he conceives it. We will venture to say, however, that he will find the "cue sheets" of great value if he refers to them week in and week out.

"THE MUSIC CUE SHEET"

"Almost without exception the leading film producers maintain today, a Musical Service Department. This service consists in engaging men, who, by repute or otherwise, seem to them to be competent to provide each photoplay with the best possible music setting. The result is the 'Music Cue Sheet' or 'Musical Suggestion Sheet.'

"They, the producers, not being able, musically, to judge or criticize the selection or adaptation of the numbers chosen, send it out to all the exhibitors with the producer's stamp of approval. To be on the safe side, I will venture the statement that not 50 per cent of the Musical Directors, Organists, or Pianists throughout the country, look at them. Those that do take advantage of this service, and adhere to them, give performances that jar and offend people musically able to judge the fitness of things. Why is that?

"I have before me the cue sheets of a dozen photoplays to which I have had the pleasure of setting music. Not one of them could I use. There is no word of fault to be found with the class of music selected, on the contrary, that is the only redeeming feature about them, but volumes could be written on their relationship to the picture.

"Take the Cue Sheet on 'Headin' South.' The title is 'Headin' South in a Hurry,' and the number selected is Rimsky-Korsakow's 'Son of India.' Now I should like to leave it to the musicians at large, to say whether this number fits a scene showing Fairbanks riding at full speed over the desert, winding up his mad dash, roped by Mexican bandits, and running right into a band of desperadoes. Yet this is what the Cue Sheet calls for.

"Take 'Amarilly of Clothes-Line Alley.' The title reads, 'You ought to see my mother dance.' Mother, big, husky and Irish grabs the butler, and they do an Irish jig. 'Bedouin Girl Fox Trot' is the piece selected on the cue sheet, despite the fact that a flash is shown of an orchestra, in the picture, stopping the dance number they are playing, and breaking into a jig. This particular picture gives every chance to portray the characteristics of the Irish, their love of a fight, their good humor, the smile that lies beneath every tear; but not the slightest hint of all this could be given the audience if the cue sheet had been followed literally. One could quote such examples of 'misfits' indefinitely.

"Of course, this service is gratis, to be used or not, and while one should 'not look a gift horse in the mouth' yet, why maintain it, when it is of no use?

"It could and should be made of utmost value, even to those who pride themselves that they can give as good or better musical setting than any to be found upon a 'Cue Sheet.'"

* * * *

(The cue sheets referred to above were not prepared by the "News'" representative, nor were they printed in the "News.")

The shortcomings and limitations of any one general system which tries to cover all the varied conditions which exist in motion picture theatre musical equipment are realized. There will never be, to our mind, a plan conceived which will work out so that it can be universally applied and accepted. Just as no two people think exactly alike so no two musicians analyze a picture exactly alike. Therefore, we claim that as a general guide for the musician whose time is limited the "cue sheet method" is the best yet conceived, though we do not recommend that they be blindly followed if the player has the opportunity of seeing the picture in question before he has to play it at the first performance.

E. K. Gillett.

Equipment Operating — Projection — Questions Answered

Offset Projection

By Will C. Smith

[Communicated to the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and reprinted from the Transactions of the October, 1917, meeting]

WHEN a projecting machine is set in any other position than directly opposite the center of the picture screen, in other words, when the projecting machine is "offset" from the center of the screen, certain highly undesirable effects are produced in the picture. These undesirable effects are of two kinds, first, blurring of certain edges of the picture and, second, distortion of the objects appearing on the screen.

Taking up the first of these effects, i.e., blurring of the edges, this is seen to be due to the fact that one edge of the screen is further from the lens than the other edge, and, consequently, if any chosen part of the picture is focused clearly on the screen other parts of the picture must, of necessity, be out of focus. When the "offset" of the projecting machine from the screen center is not greater than, say, 5° to 10°, then the blurring effect is not particularly noticeable, but when, as in some theatres, the angle is as great as 35° it is utterly impossible to produce a picture of any attractive size which is tolerably sharp all over.

The second of the ill effects of "offset" projection, the distortion of the objects shown, is due to the fact that the light beam coming from the projection machine to the screen is cone shaped and grows rapidly larger in area as the screen is approached. Consequently, if a section is taken through such a light cone at an angle, then, since one edge of the section-plane cuts a narrower part of the beam than the other edge, it follows that one edge of the picture will be larger than the other, and the farther the cutting section is taken from the lens the larger the projection is, so it follows that the same object moving to different positions in the picture will undergo a change in size.

Considering now a special case, which is perhaps the most common case of "offset projection," let us consider that the projecting machine is placed in the balcony of a theatre, directly in line with the center of the screen on the stage but considerably above it. Then the light cone will come down to the screen and strike at an angle, and the following undesirable effects will be apparent:

(1) The top and bottom of the picture will be blurred, while the middle will be clear.*

(2) A body moving from the top to the bottom of the picture will become considerably larger.

(3) All vertical objects will be large at the bottom and small at the top—for instance, a man will have big feet and a small head.

(4) All objects will be abnormally tall.

When the projecting machine is horizontally in line with the center of the screen, but a considerable distance to one side of it, then the same kind of distortions are present in the picture, but with some difference, as follows:

(1) The sides of the picture will be blurred, while the middle will be clear.*

(2) A body moving from one side to the other of the picture will become larger or smaller.

(3) All horizontal objects will be larger at one end than at the other.

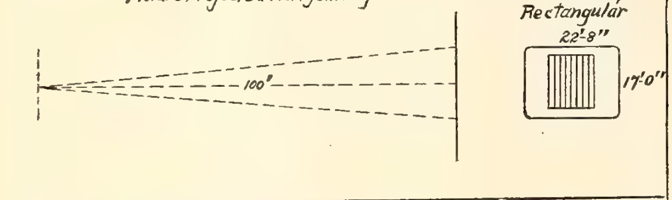
(4) All objects will be abnormally extended laterally.

In some theatres the projecting machine is offset, both horizontally and vertically, in which case the picture shows evidence

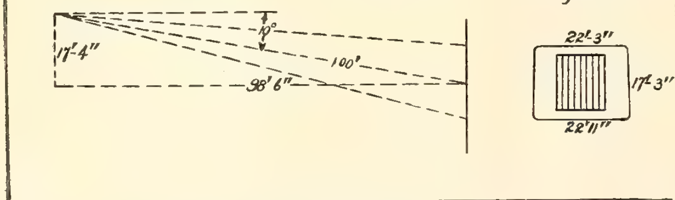
---

* This assumes that the objective has been so focused as to give a sharp delineation at the center of the screen. If one side of the projected image is sharply focused, the picture will show a gradual falling off, laterally, in definition, which becomes poorest, of course, at the side of the picture opposite to the one focused for. Ed.

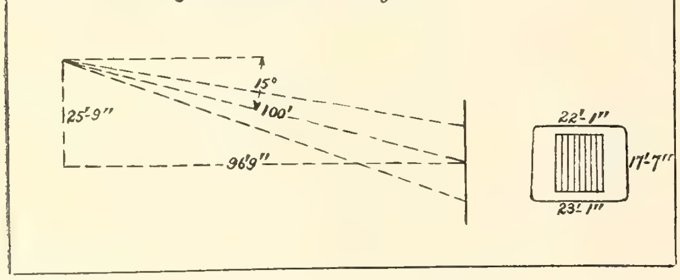
Picture Projected Horizontally



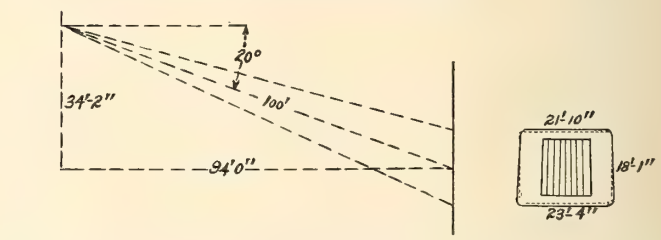
Picture Projected 10° Down from Horizontal



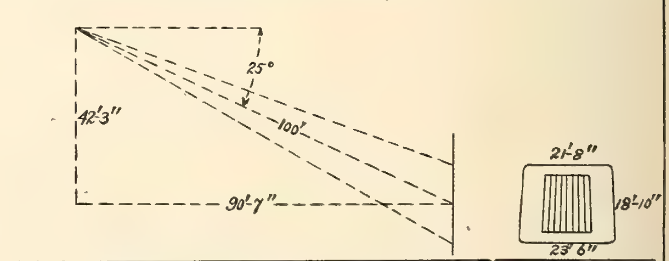
Picture Projected 15° Down from Horizontal



Picture Projected 20° Down from Horizontal



Picture Projected 25° Down from Horizontal



Picture Projected 30° Down from Horizontal of both kinds of distortion described in the special cases above.

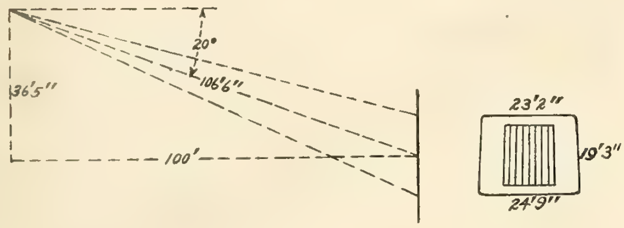
There have been certain attempts made to correct the bad effects of "offset projection," but, owing to the fact that distortion and uneven screen definition are inevitable consequences of so placing the projector that the axis of projection is not normal to the screen surface, these methods have proved far from successful. These corrective methods consist in:

(1) Filing the aperture plate of the projecting machine, and thus giving the light cone a distorted shape previous to its reaching the screen—the result of this distortion and the natural distortion being neutral and thus giving a picture with a correct border line. But it should be noted that this method does not in any way correct the distortion actually within the border.

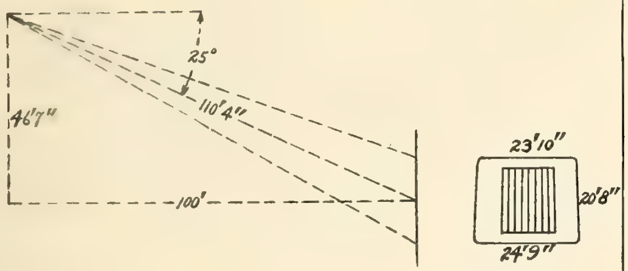
(2) Showing a small picture high upon the screen. The disadvantage of this method is apparent.

(3) Tipping the screen one way or the other. This method makes the picture hard on the eyes of the audience and is consequently little used.

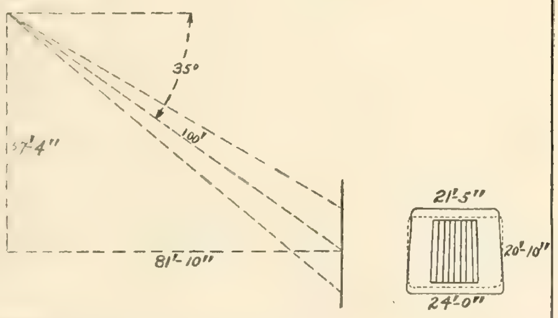
Picture Projected 20° Down from Horizontal



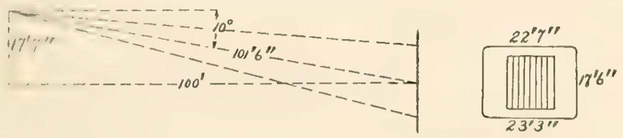
Picture Projected 25° Down from Horizontal



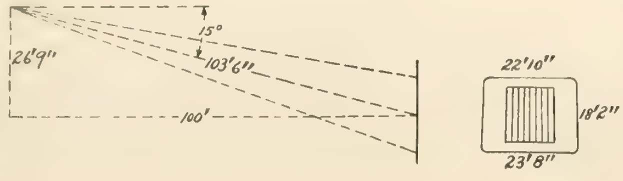
Picture Projected 35° Down from Horizontal



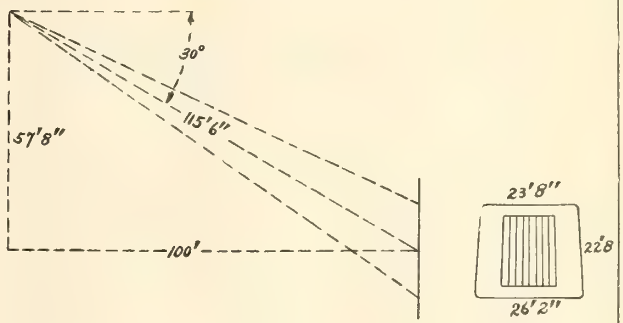
Picture Projected 10° Down from Horizontal



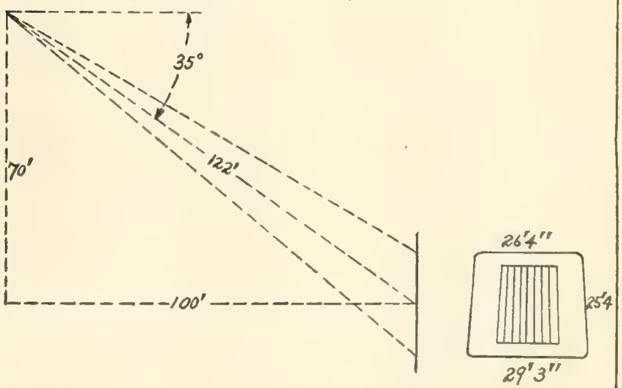
Picture Projected 15° Down from Horizontal



Picture Projected 30° Down from Horizontal



Picture Projected 35° Down from Horizontal



In conclusion it may be stated that there is at the present time only one way of preventing the ill effects of "offset projection" and that is to eliminate the "offset," in other words, to place the projecting machine nearly opposite the center of the screen.

The Perfection Renewable-Tooth Sprocket

SPROCKETS for motion picture machines have for years been a source of annoyance to operators, theatre owners, and film exchanges alike. Various manufacturers of motion picture machines have, at times, attempted to eliminate sprockets from the machines, employing rubber rollers and other means to feed the film from the upper magazine and to the lower magazine.

A new upper and lower sprocket has just been placed upon the market that is meeting with tremendous success. It is accurately manufactured from the best carbon steel and has renewable sprocket teeth units that can be replaced so that it is not necessary to discard the entire sprocket. The saving thus incurred permits the machine owner to replace worn sprockets more frequently and at a considerable saving.

The introduction of the Perfection Sprocket, distributed by the Ray Smith Company, Milwaukee, with renewable teeth units, has proven a revelation to machine owners, operators and film exchanges alike, as worn sprockets are the direct cause of more film damage and poor projection than any other machine defect.

Perfection Sprockets are manufactured for Powers, Simplex and Motiograph projectors.

The Essential Requirements
for

Improved Projection
are
SPEER CARBONS

SPEER Alterno Combinations
for A.C. Work
and
SPEER Hold-Ark Combinations
for D.C. Work
Produce Incomparable Results

Write today for descriptive folders. Read the unbiased opinions of operators

---

Place an order now with your Supply House

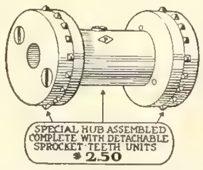
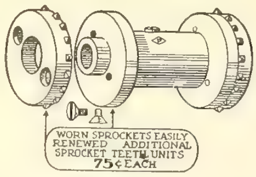
"The Carbons with a Guarantee"

Manufactured by
SPEER CARBON COMPANY
ST. MARYS, PA.



SPECIAL HUB ASSEMBLED COMPLETE WITH DETACHABLE SPROCKET TEETH UNITS
$2.50

For Powers, Simplex and Motiograph Projectors



WORN SPROCKETS EASILY RENEWED ADDITIONAL SPROCKET TEETH UNITS
75¢ EACH

DO YOU DISCARD the entire sprocket on your motion picture machine simply because the sprocket teeth are worn? PERFECTION take-up and feed sprockets—WITH RENEWABLE SPROCKET TEETH UNITS are the acme of perfection in accuracy of manufacture and material used.

First cost no more—renewals at an unprecedented saving. "Worn sprocket teeth are the direct cause of more film damage and poor projection than any other machine defect." Examine your machine today, before you are asked to pay for damage done to an expensive print.

If your dealer cannot supply you we will forward postpaid upon receipt of draft or money order.

THE RAY SMITH COMPANY
Theatre Equipment and Supplies
174 Second Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

WHY PAY—
$58.50 for 110 volt Motors

and an additional sum for 220 volt motors for POWER 6A when we will sell you a thoroughly efficient motor equipment, 110 or 220 volts A. C. or D. C. for $35.00 net, including the motor attachment for your mechanism? Our motors have no wooden bearings and no friction wheels to wear out. We are exclusive distributors for SIMPLEX Machines and all Supplies.

LEWIS M. SWAAB
1327 VINE STREET PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Texas Operator Uses Cue Sheet for Change-Overs

G. A. YAGER, the operator in charge of the projection room of More's theatre, Vernon, Texas, is responsible for the latest innovation to be adopted by the Universal Film Company, which consists of a cue sheet for motion picture operators to notify them when to change their reels without breaking the continuity of the picture.

In numerous theatres throughout the country the operators have followed the procedure of punching holes in the positive print near the end of each reel as an alarm system to warn them that the reel is about exhausted and that it is time to either switch to their second machine, or, where a house uses but one machine, to change the reel.

The result of this system of punching holes near the end of a reel results in an irregular looking picture on the screen which leaves the impression on the audience that the theatre is carelessly managed, that the operator does not know his business, or that the theatre is renting very old pictures which are in bad condition and have been sent out without rehabilitation.

Under the system suggested by Mr. Yager and which he has been using successfully for a long time there are no punch holes, the projection is perfect, and the picture runs smoothly—the change from one reel to another being so smooth that the audience is unable to determine where one reel ends and another begins. To the audience a five-reel feature appears as one continuous, smoothly told story without breaks of any kind.

The system followed by Mr. Yager is to have a private screening all by himself as soon as he receives his show. At the end of each reel he makes a note of the scene upon which he should make his switch to the following reel and from these notes compiles a cue sheet, which he keeps continually before him. For instance, Mr. Yager recently presided over the projection machine during the run of the Ella Hall feature, "New Love for Old," and his change cue sheet read:

Reel No. 1—Change after girl slaps Italian.
Reel No. 2—Change when father embraces daughter after starting to whip her.
Reel No. 3—Change when Italian, hat in hand, starts from room. Note—He first goes to door at left, listens, then exits to right.
Reel No. 4—Change when Italian is seen climbing from window in exterior.

As a result of Mr. Yager's system not only does he give a perfect show, but he also returns his print to the exchange in good condition. Each reel returned by Mr. Yager is not short several feet as is usually the case where operators use punch holes to notify them that the time for change has come. The punch holes, of course, have the tendency of weakening the print, and the breaks occur where the punch holes are made. The end of the reel is thrown away and the next operator makes his own punch holes still farther along toward the beginning of the reel. Owing to this punch hole method, thousands of feet of positive film has to be discardeed every week, the result being that the fifth and sixth-run exhibitors, in numerous cases, do not receive complete prints.

As the result of Mr. Yager's suggestion Bluebird, Universal Special Attractions and Jewel Pictures will be accompanied by operator's cue sheets just as soon as it is possible for the company to prepare them, in order that the exhibitors may give perfect shows without jumpy endings at the termination of each reel.

Operators' Inquiries

C. B. LEFFLER, PARIS, TENN., "Would you advise the use of the new Mazda lamp for projection? Is it practical?"

REPLY: Under certain conditions—i. e., when the screen picture is not over 12 feet wide, and when the arc to be replaced is not over 35 amperes D. C. or 50 amperes A. C., the Mazda illuminant may be substituted with satisfaction in so far as screen brightness is concerned. Other characteristics of the Mazda projection light have been considered in past issues of the Projection Department, and our reply to another correspondent (this column, issue of April 13) may also be consulted.

H. W. WOLCOTT, WATERVILLE, N. Y., "How can the exchanges be induced to properly inspect films before shipping to the theatres?"

REPLY: As a member of the National Anti-Misframe League, get into touch with the department heads of the various exchanges which supply your shows, and advise them of the efforts which you and all other League members are making to improve the condition of their films. Solicit the cooperation of the exchanges toward that end, and endeavor to make them feel that they should reciprocate your efforts in the upkeep of their property by giving it increased attention at the exchange.

National Anti-Misframe League
Pledge

As a motion picture operator who has the interest of his profession at heart and is willing to assist in eliminating some of the evils practised in the operating-room, I promise that I will to the best of my ability return films to the exchange in first-class condition. Furthermore, I will when it becomes necessary remedy all misframes, bad patches, etc., that may be in the film which I receive and in this way co-operate with my brother operators and give greater pleasure to those who make up the motion picture audience by showing films that are free from such defects. I also promise that I will not make punch marks in film, and when film is received by me, with punch holes, I will notify the exchange to that effect so that they may use their efforts to correct this evil.

Roll of Honor

George H. Reese	Lagrange, Ga.
Wm. Tooze	Eastport, Me.
C. C. McMillan	Fort Scott, Kan.
Lester E. Ashe	Orangeburg, S. C.
Floyd Hill	Clovis, N. Mex.
Fred Knoll	Sioux Falls, S. D.
Truman W. Vollmer	Quincy, Ill.
Frank Anerino	Quincy, Ill.
Carl Lawrence	Lynchburg, Va.
R. C. Hedrick	Odin, Ill.
Willis J. Clarkson	Hartford, Conn.
W. A. Weaver	Wilburton, Okla.

Members Previously Recorded	830
Members Recorded This Week	12
Total Membership to Date	842

A Movie Nightmare

By M. Roy Mitchell

Last night I had the nightmare, 'twas such an awful dream,
I saw the things impossible, that happen on the screen.
There was dainty William Farnum, in silken hose and skirt;
Cruel-hearted Mary Pickford, with a deathly looking dirk.
Poor, thin Roscoe Arbuckle, the shadow of a man,
Was shooting crap with Billie Burke, imagine if you can:
Wm. S. Hart a ribbon clerk, Harold Lockwood drawing steams,
Julian Eltinge was a blacksmith, how peculiar it all seems;
Theda Bara was a cowgirl, Doug. Fairbanks was a page.
And Mary Garden's comedy, swept the props clear off the stage.
George Beban was an English lord, Wallace Reid a Chinese cook,
While Charlie Chaplin ran a stage, from Cheyenne to Sandy Hook;
Earle Williams was a bandit, Sidney Drew a hostile Turk
And robust Mabel Normand, was the village grocery clerk.
Mack Sennett was a peanut butcher, on the A. T. and Santa Fe,
And the boy who made the engine go was homely Charlie Ray;
Francis X. Bushman was office boy, for poor old Thomas Ince
And Al. St. John, the beautiful, was a Bolsheviki prince;
Bessie Barriscale was also there, and I could not understand
Why poor old Bess, was all in now, and ran a hamburg stand.
And there was Olive Thomas, the girl who didn't know
That Alice Joyce and Tom Moore, were married years ago;
Poor, little Hobart Bosworth, was crying like a child,
He said he couldn't understand what made the women wild.
Then with a start, I wakened, it was time for me to go,
For I'm the operator at the motion picture show.

Can I Display a Better Picture?

This is a question exhibitors are asking everywhere, for they realize it is the quality of picture displayed that holds their customers' patronage.

Why not give your patrons the best, keep them coming and do it at a big saving?

THE BRECO CONVERTER

THE MODERN METHOD OF CHANGING A. C. TO D. C.

Was designed for your particular benefit. It enables the operator to display a clear, sharp, brilliant picture, free from eye strain or flicker.

HIGHLY EFFICIENT, ECONOMICAL, VERY EASY TO OPERATE

Will operate one or two arcs at a big saving in current. Very easy to install. Takes up little space and can be operated without special instructions.

LOW IN PRICE UPKEEP MINIMUM

Get particulars of this modern necessity

THE BRECO ELECTRIC CO. Sole Licensees 206 Huron St., Toledo, Ohio, U.S.A.

Write us today for descriptive literature

The Camera

Artificial Light in the Motion Picture Studio

By Max Mayer

[A paper read at the meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, Rochester, April 9th, and published by kind permission of the Society.]

WHEN we turn back to the early pages of motion picture history we come to the time when our pioneer producers began to look upon picture making as an everyday and all-day task, rather than an occasional diversion. It was then that the pranks of old Sol began to be felt more keenly than when it was practical to wait for the clouds to roll by. Confronted by a rapidly growing demand, the producer readily saw two alternatives, the land of eternal sunshine or artificial light; so he promptly reached out for both. Artificial light was being extensively used, both for still photography and in the Graphic Arts, and fairly suitable units were therefore available for cinematography. At that time the main aim was to get lamps enough to light the sets, and somehow they never seemed able to get quite enough, no matter how many were used. This condition prevailed until the more recently developed tendency to produce pleasing and natural light effects superseded the earlier method of flooding the scenes with light from every available point. Thus the lights were used virtually to produce shadows and contrasts, and far better results were obtained with less light; in fact, many effects difficult and impracticable to obtain by sunlight are more readily achieved in a darkened studio with suitable electrical equipment. This subject as a whole is wide in scope, and the writer dares herein to attempt nothing more than a superficial discussion thereof.

To this end three general classifications will aid in dealing with the topic:

(1) The nature of the light sources.
(2) The manner of their application.
(3) The manner of installation of equipment.

Under the first heading consideration should be given to the color composition of the light, the degree of concentration of the light source itself, the nature and value of reflectors and auxiliary reflecting surfaces, and the nature and value of diffusing screens.

Color Composition of Light

The color sensitiveness of the photographic emulsion, of course, determines the usefulness of the spectrum range of the light source. The modern film used in the motion picture camera is sensitive over a considerable portion of the sun spectrum, and consequently sunlight will record on the film more speedily and correctly than a light source in which one or more colors to which the emulsion is sensitive are absent or weak. Artificial light sources which do not cover the full sensitive range of the emulsion cannot give maximum results, unless used in conjunction with other light sources which supply that deficiency. The mercury vapor lamp, though completely lacking in some colors, is nevertheless a valuable unit for this work, owing to its wonderful light diffusion, and it is very extensively used in conjunction with powerful arc lamps employing "white flame" carbons. There is a great deal of valuable information to be gathered on photographic color values, and it is to be hoped that the S. M. P. E. may be favored at an early date with a paper on this topic by some of the many brilliant men of the Eastman laboratories.

Concentration of Light Source

If a light source were considered as a point, the light would emanate therefrom equally in all directions, and the rays would all form diverging angles. Such a point of light would be the extreme concentrated light source. Consider now a plane surface—a square for example, formed by minute light sources, whose collective intensity is equal to an assumed intensity of the aforementioned concentrated light source. Such a luminous surface might be considered an ideal diffused light source. At a given distance this diffused light source, as compared with the concentrated light source, would evenly illuminate a greater area at a proportionately lesser intensity. In the language of the studio, the light from the luminous surface would not carry so far as the concentrated light, but would be more scattered or diffused, producing an effect often very much desired in photography. If the light, from a concentrated light source, such as a flame arc, for example, were passed through a piece of roughed glass or similar medium, a diffusing or scattering effect may be obtained, involving, of course, a loss proportionate to the absorption of the medium. Thus it is practicable to obtain most any degree of diffusion from a concentrated light source; but the scattered light from a luminous surface cannot be concentrated. Another form of concentrated light, now extensively used as an auxiliary, is the projected beam or spot light. This is usually in the form of a high-powered hand-feed arc (70 to 100 amp. and often more) with a single plano-convex condenser. The principal fault with this form of unit is its low efficiency, probably mostly due to the filtering effect of the thick condenser glass. However, the striking effects obtained by this means will easily offset this inefficiency. It might be interesting and instructive to note the effect obtainable through a condenser lens of quartz as compared with the ordinary glass condenser.

Reflectors and Reflecting Surfaces

The use of reflectors on various types of lamps is to re-direct the rays, which would otherwise go in useless directions, toward the object to be illuminated, and further to obtain by their use various degrees of concentration, according to the shape of the reflectors. While surface mirrors would probably represent the ideal reflecting surface, their use would hardly be practicable owing to the difficulties of keeping large numbers of them clean under the studio conditions. Either a mat white surface of slightly bluish tint or a mat aluminum surface are found quite satisfactory, particularly for the flame arcs, as the white ash deposit from the carbons does not materially alter the reflective value of the surface; thereby keeping the light source practically as constant as the lamp itself. With mirror-surfaced reflectors this ash deposit would gradually decrease the light strength, and cleaning would suddenly restore it to full brilliancy. It is plain that this would be a disturbing factor to the camera man. The value of reflecting panels has long been recognized by portrait photographers. Cinematographers also use them when working with sunlight; but they have been slow to adopt them in conjunction with artificial light. These auxiliary reflectors are, however, none the less valuable for this purpose. Mat white or aluminum painted surfaces have been the customary practice, but a much more effective reflecting surface may be made by stretching white oil cloth on a frame, treating the smooth surface with sizing and coating it with leaf aluminum, in a manner similar to that employed in show window lettering. Such reflectors will do wonders in bringing out detail in shadows and in toning down hard contrasts, and will actually reduce the number of lamps required.

Diffusing Screens

Much experimenting has been done with different materials for diffusing the light and unfortunately the ones which absorb the least light are also least capable of resisting the hard usage in the studio. Very thin glass roughed, finely ribbed, or of otherwise irregular surface, while highly efficient, is out of the question owing to its fragility. Draughtsman's tracing linen is a good and fairly efficient diffuser, but must be kept at a considerable distance from the heat of the arcs to prevent burning or scorching. As this increase in distance from the light source increases the degree of diffusion and necessitates a larger diffusing area, this material is only practicable where extreme diffusion is desired, and therefore, for contrasty effects it is better to use a smaller surface closer to the light source. Strips of glass, about one-eighth inch in thickness, roughed, ribbed, or prismatic, give fair results, and one form of diffuser made of woven spun glass mounted in frames does quite as well and overcomes the mechanical weakness of the fragile glass strips.

Arrangement of Light Sources

Almost everyone directly connected with the art and technique of motion picture production has some pet ideas of his own on lighting, and many who exploit their ideas in their daily work are getting commendable and pleasing effects; some as the result of forethought in arranging the light, and others by mere accident. However, the arrangement of the lights and reflectors is as much a matter of art as of science, and it is futile to attempt to make fixed rules along these lines. In fact, such a step would meet with just resentment, for many of the beautiful effects we see on the screen are the result of unique and original ideas of artistic minds. In photographing the modern film play no fixed set of light arrangement is practical, as the lights must be placed for each scene to suit the effect desired.

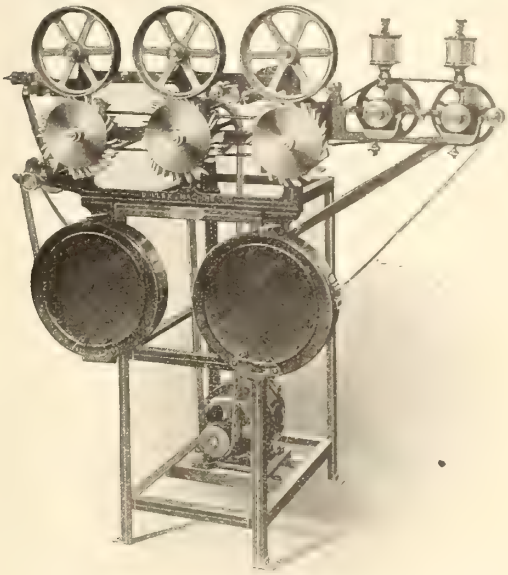
For the general illumination of a scene, the aim should be to attain inconspicuous soft lighting, showing the entire scene and figures therein well modeled and in good detail. In this case well diffused light and plenty of it is necessary, for if the lamps be placed close to the camera line, the difference in intensity from the light to the opposite side of the set would be extreme, while if the lamps are placed at considerable distance from the line this difference in intensity between opposite sides of the set would be greatly diminished, but the amount of light required would be proportionately greater. With sunlight this disturbing condition does not enter, for with the light source ninety odd millions of miles away, the difference in distance from the sun between opposite sides of the set, would make a ridiculously trifling computation. But in the above condition, the intensity diminishing by inverse squares of the distance must be considered, and practice shows that the lamps should be kept away from the camera line by at least one-fourth the distance across the set at that point. However, this is seldom carried out and the cameraman is generally blamed for unsatisfactory results, while the real fault lies in the fact that sets are usually so crowded together in the studios, that there is no room left for lamps except close to the camera line. To offset this condition, an excessive amount of top light is then crowded over to the dark side of the set, and while this may help in a way, the effect obtained is unnatural and seldom pleasing. On the whole it is best to confine general lighting to small sets or to avoid it altogether on interiors. If we study the sunlight illumination of the average room, we find that we must resort to effects in order to simulate the natural conditions and shadows.

Back lighting is a splendid way of obtaining pleasing and natural results. This is effected by placing the lights well back and directing them toward, but not at, the camera, masking the direct rays at the lamps and preferably using a shielding tube with perfectly dull black interior, over the lens barrel, to prevent halation. Thus the figures and objects in the set will be silhouetted and by the proper front arrangement of reflecting surfaces and well diffused lights at a fair distance, the features and details may be perfectly modeled in shadow, with pleasing highlight relief effected by the rear lights. Of course, good judgment and practice are essential to carry this out effectively. This arrangement adapts itself better for an added light effect from a window, lamp, fireplace, or the like, than a general illumination, as the figures being detailed in shadow will light up readily by contrast when they enter within the range of the added light; while in a set fully lighted, such an added effect requires an extremely powerful light source to further illuminate the already well lighted features, and the effect is usually spoiled by the washing out of detail.

Back light may be effected either by top lamps or floor stands or by both. When top light is used, the lamps are best fitted with diagonal reflectors and hung near the back of the set. Care must be used to hide the shadow line cast by the rear of the reflector. The lamp should be so hung that this shadow line comes just at the junction of floor and rear wall. In small sets an aluminum reflecting panel suspended in front of camera just clear of the lens angle and another on the floor in front of the camera, both carefully set at proper angles, will supply sufficient front light to outline features and other details in shadow, and a diffused floor light on one side, some distance back of the camera, will mold

For Quality and Service—

The NEW IMPROVED DUPLEX CLEANING and POLISHING MACHINE



Used by all of the foremost laboratories

DUPLEX MACHINE COMPANY, Inc.
316-318 Seventy-Fifth Street Brooklyn, N. Y.

Employ EVANS' SERVICE for your DEVELOPING and PRINTING and profit by our superior facilities, greater experience and prompt service.

Remember quality workmanship insures public approval and public approval spells producer success.

EVANS FILM MFG. CO.
416-24 West 216th Street New York City
Telephone, St. Nicholas 3443

GOERZ

Goerz Kino Hypar F/3.5

A summer of unprecedented activity in the motion-picture industry is fast approaching. No camera-man who hopes to enjoy the financial benefits of this activity can afford to be without the latest and best equipment. The GOERZ KINO HYPAR F:3.5 has met every studio and field test. It is made in 1⅝, 2, 2⅜, and 3-inch focus and may be fitted to nearly every standard camera on the market. Used in connection with GOERZ VIGNETTING DEVICES, this lens is unsurpassed. Write or call for the latest descriptive matter. Act now!

C. P. GOERZ AMERICAN OPTICAL COMPANY
317-J East 34th Street, New York City

The film that first made motion pictures practical is easily identifiable by the words

"EASTMAN"
AND "KODAK"

on the film margin.

EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Small Town Exhibitors!

When your Electric Current Supply Fails—

Attach the De Vry to Storage Batteries, and your show goes on without delay.

Any size picture up to twelve feet; any throw up to seventy-five feet.

Used by Western Electric Company, General Electric Company, Westinghouse Elec. Mfg. Co., National Lamp Works.

Motor Drive
Size 17"x17"x7" over all. Weighs but Twenty Pounds. Takes Standard Size Reels and Film.

THE DE VRY CORPORATION, 117 North Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.

Printing, Developing, Toning, Tinting

Titles
Domestic Foreign

Empire City Film Laboratories, Inc.
345 West 40th Street New York

these details most pleasingly. Such an arrangement, used effectively in one of the studios, consisted of six double arc top-lights, one 8-tube mercury vapor bank, a six by eight-foot hanging reflector, and a four by eight-foot floor reflector. This outfit, with no other light was used repeatedly in sets of twenty to twenty-five-foot depth with splendid results. This is just one illustration to show how a pleasing effect may be obtained with a small number of lights. An almost endless variety of light arrangement could be described here; but that would stretch this already lengthy paper into a probably wearisome volume.

(To be continued next week)

From a Cameraman at the Front

THROUGH the courtesy of Mr. T. R. Brown of the Motion Picture Specialty Corporation, New York City, we are enabled to reproduce the following letter which a member of his family received from his brother, James S. Brown, Jr., motion picture expert with the Signal Corps of the U. S. Army in France. Mr. Brown sailed for France in last October, taking with him the first of the Akeley cameras to be used by the army. His letter follows:

"Have had my troubles since I left you in Paris and am afraid what I have had is only a beginning. I left, as you know, on the morning eight o'clock train and didn't arrive at the place I was going until 8:30 that night, as I had to wait in some God forsaken place for five hours for connection. When I finally did arrive I found that headquarters had moved; in fact, the whole division except a few companies and they were going out at 1 o'clock a.m.

"After much trouble I managed to get my two men in a box car, or rather three men as I picked up J— M—, who had orders to report to that division and had been traveling all over France trying to find them. As for myself I got a seat in the officers' car which was built in the seventeenth century and therefore minus any windows.

"I have been cold in my life, but never quite so cold for such a long time. To make a long story short, we arrived here at 9.00 p.m. that night, all much the worse for wear. I blew them all to a good hotel, and believe me there wasn't much sleep lost by any of us. Next morning I reported and saw J— M— planted with the fighting 69th or the 165th now. I spoke to the major of the Signal Corps and could have gotten him a good job, but he had his mind set on going into the worst thing he could find and believe me he will soon be in it and in it right.

"It's great to wake up in the morning and hear the guns booming away about twelve miles off, with the aeroplanes as thick as bees. If you were here you would be getting out of bed every minute or less. Jim kids me because I am so wild over the planes.

"I spend half of every night running to the window to watch every plane I hear and as a result caught a peach of a cold. It seems every time a trainload of troops come in Mr. Boche comes over and takes a look while the anti-air guns pop away at him.

"I have entire charge of the photography in this division and have fitted up a very good office and dark room, for this will be my headquarters. I also have a Ford truck for my exclusive use which assures me transportation whenever I want it. In fact, I have everything very much the way I hoped to have it.

"This room which was billeted to me is 40 degrees below zero, and my hand is so cold I can't write any more. I left the dirty water in my basin last night and this morning the whole thing was frozen solid and broke the basin, but I am feeling fine and happy as possible. Write this to the folks. I expect to go up very shortly."

Dobbs Becomes Superintendent of Palisade Laboratories

IT is announced by the Palisade Laboratories, Palisade, N. J., opposite 129th street, that Mr. George Dobbs has taken charge of their well appointed laboratories, where he will specialize in high grade negative development and in the production of positive prints of superior quality.

As is generally known in the trade, Mr. Dobbs was connected for many years, with the laboratories of the New York Motion Picture Company, having been in charge of their Fort Lee plant for some time past.

Mr. Dobbs considers that he has been fortunate in bringing with him to the Palisade Laboratories some of the most skillful members of his previous staff, and in addition has made extensive improvements in the Palisade equipment. He is therefore in a position to render quick service and solicits the patronage of producers and others who appreciate good laboratory work.

Music and the Picture

Review of Latest Compositions

1—“ I Want to See My Girl in London,” by M. Pinkard. A wealth of melody combined with snappy rhythms make this song exceptionally effective and desirable. In point of originality this song hit leaves nothing to be desired. (Published by the Independent Music Co., 850 S. 23rd St., Omaha, Nebraska.)

2—“ Valse Parfume,” by Romberg. A melodious waltz by the composer of the famous “Auf Wiedersehen” and “Blue Paradise” music. (J. W. Stern, 102 W. 38th St., New York.)

3—“ My Paradise,” Waltz by J. S. Zemecnick. A tuneful waltz movement published by Sam Fox, Cleveland, Ohio.

4—“ My Belgian Rose,” Waltz by Benoit and Garton. A waltz of exceptional beauty most appropriate for society dramas. (Leo Feist edition.)

5—“ Somewhere in France is the Lily,” the most appealing March Ballad ever written by Jos. E. Howard. (M. Witmark edition.)

6—“ Some Sweet Day.” The sensational Fox Trot hit—absolutely the greatest Jazz Number on the market—composed by the writer of the famous “ Missouri Waltz.” (Forster Music Co. edition.)

7—“ Adoration,” by Felix Borowski. An orchestra arrangement by Chas. J. Roberts equally effective for small and large orchestra combinations. (Carl Fischer edition.)

8—“ Hawaiian Nights,” by Lee S. Roberts. The most wonderful Hawaiian Waltz sensation of the year, introducing the very popular “ Aloha Oe.” (Richmond Music Co. edition.)

9—“ Stolen Sweets,” a beautiful and melodious Waltz Movement by Harry von Tilzer. (Published by Harry von Tilzer.)

10—“ Barnyard Blues,” Jazz Fox Trot by D. J. La Rocca. The big hit of the Dixieland Jazz Band as recorded by the Victor Talking Machine Co. Record No. 18255 under the title of “ Liberty Stable Blues.” (Leo Feist edition.)

11—“ Sorrow Theme,” by Edowarde Roberts. Most appropriate for pathetic scenes. (Cinema Music Co., Columbia Theatre Bldg., New York City.)

12—“ Source dans Le Desert,” Idyl by Marguerite W. Horton. Some most interesting songs by this composer have already been published.

13—“ Carry Me Back to Old Virginny,” Waltz. This grand old melody has been offered as a song; its great success had led the publishers to also publish it as a waltz. (Oliver Ditson edition.)

14—“ Among the Roses,” Reverie by M. L. Lake. A composition destined to become a nation’s favorite. A melody which will thrill, inspire and charm even the coldest audience. (Carl Fischer edition.)

15—“ In the Land of Wedding Bells,” by Geo. W. Meyer. Leo Feist’s latest hit.

16—“ At the Yankee Military Ball,” fox trot, by Harry Jentes. The most popular and most often requested fox trot—and exquisite dance number which every music lover will appreciate. (Leo Feist edition.)

17—“ The Vampire ” (A dramatic theme), by Sol. P. Levy. An original composition most appropriate for the purpose as described in the title. (Published by the Cinema Music Co., Columbia Theatre Bldg., 47th St. and 7th Ave., New York City.)

18—Compositions of value to the “ Motion Picture Musician ” obtainable from J. W. Stern, 102 W. 38th St., New York City.)

- 1—Light Romantic Theme No. 1. Arranged as Violin Solo. Will make the love story on the screen stand out.
- 2—Light Romantic Theme No. 2. Arranged in Duet form. Two violins, cello and organ. Two violins, flute and oboe. Clarinet and two cornets muted with organ or piano accompaniment. Three unique tonal effects combined in one arrangement.
- 3—A. B. C. Sacred Set No. 1. Contains “ Onward Christian Soldiers,” “ Rock of Ages,” “ Doxology ” and “ Choral.” Four different religious temperaments.
- 4—Heavy Descriptive Agitato No. 1. A new style agitato that has class and depth. The kind of a number that keeps lengthy action of this character interesting. No up-to-date leader can afford to be without it.
- 5—Redemption Theme. A theme that expresses mother-love in every sense of the word. Used in the Evelyn Nesbit picture “ Redemption.” Don’t neglect adding this to your library.

19—“ Land of Joy,” New York’s big, smashing Spanish musical success, has been published by G. Schirmer, 3 East 43rd St., New York City, and a “ Selection Waltz ” and “ One-Step ” from this show are now obtainable at special reduced prices.

20—“ Doing Our Bit,” the famous New York Winter Garden production, is also published by G. Schirmer, and several of the best and most popular extracts of this show are now obtainable in single form—at special reduced prices.

Music and the Photoplay

By W. E. Greene, President of Paramount Pictures Corp.

SECOND only in importance to the house itself is the matter of appropriate music in the proper presentation of photoplays. With the growth of the motion picture, and its uplift from a manufacturing project to an artistic industry, music has become a vital consideration.

The idea of musical accompaniment, of course, was coincident with the exhibition of pictures, but the matter of APPROPRIATE music is a subject that has kept pace with the progress in film production. It is admitted that crimes, without number, have been committed against musical art, and I recall—with a shudder—an incident I witnessed on South Halsted Street, Chicago, some years ago, when the Passion Play was exhibited to the accompaniment of the popular Hootchy-Kootch.

When the producer has spent a vast sum of money, often running into six figures, on a photoplay, he has brought together an artistic ensemble, in which the composite work of numerous artists are harmoniously joined. In an Artcraft picture we have such stars as Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, William S. Hart, Elsie Ferguson, Geraldine Farrar and George M. Cohan, admittedly the premier stars of the screen and stage. Their work is directed by such wizards of the screen as D. W. Griffith, Cecil B. De Mille, Thomas H. Ince, Maurice Tourneur, Allan Dwan, John Emerson and other famous producers. Expert photographers film the scenes and attend to the developing and printing.

When the producer has finally placed the picture in the theatre he has exhausted every avenue and used every means at his command to make a pleasing picture, but as viewed on the screen, it appeals only to the sense of sight, and is in fact “ the silent drama.” The addition of musical accompaniment gives it tongue, and in reality furnishes the soul of the production, and makes it doubly attractive by appealing to the sense of hearing of the audience.

The average patron of a high class motion picture theatre, and even the musicians themselves, probably do not realize how important the music is, but employes of the producing companies, who see the pictures in the projecting rooms of the studios without music and then witness the presentation at theatres like the Strand or Rialto, appreciate the worth of music.

The value of the recent Artcraft spectacle, Geraldine Farrar in "The Woman God Forgot," was greatly enhanced by the accompanying music, which no doubt had much to do with the great success of even this magnificent production.

D. W. Griffith's "Birth of a Nation" was made a stirring subject by the accompanying music, and no one who has witnessed the picture will ever forget the high bugle notes as the Ku-Klux Klan appeared, which fairly lifted the audience out of its seats. Consideration of these two pictures, which are conceded to be the most stupendous and artistic film productions in the history of motion photography, produced by Cecil B. De Mille and D. W. Griffith, respectively, shows that the best photoplays it is possible to make, entirely regardless of expense, are made materially more pleasing by the addition of the proper musical accompaniment.

How much more, therefore, is it necessary to give attention to the musical score for lesser pictures, which are the daily source of income for the theatres. And I am sure that if the musicians knew how much their co-operation with the industry is appreciated by everyone in it, it would be an incentive to high aims on their part.

Musical Agent for the Americas

The French Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers of Music have appointed Oscar Osso as its sole agent for North and South America. Mr. Osso has, for the past two years, successfully represented the interests of the Society of French Playwrights and Composers; and this second appointment now concentrates into the one office the collection of royalties for French music and the transaction of the business of the Society of French Playwrights and Composers. These two societies practically control the entire artistic, dramatic and musical output of France.

Since no public performance of a French musical or dramatic work may be given without the consent of the author or composer, Mr. Osso, as the duly authorized agent of his principals, announces his willingness to co-operate with such establishments as may need this license.

Extensive plans are being formulated for a national propaganda campaign to exploit French music in America. The American music-loving public have not heretofore been fully aware of the genius of French composers, and it is the intention of Mr. Osso to establish a library of French music for the convenience of artists and musicians. Mr. Osso will employ various other means to educate the American musical public to a fuller appreciation of the superiority of French musical accomplishments.

"THE MARRIAGE BUBBLE"

(Triangle Production)

Theme: "By the River," Romance (12/8 Animato) by Morse

1—"Lanette" (Melodious Valse Lente), by Henton (3 minutes and 25 seconds), until—T: "Peter is endeavoring to drown."

2—"Dramatic Tension," by Sol. P. Levy (1 minute), until—T: "The stranger."

3—Theme (1 minute and 50 seconds), until—T: "A plan to save the day for Peter."

4—Continue to action (2 minutes and 25 seconds), until—T: "When the lightning bugs, etc."

5—"Canzonetta" (Moderato), by Nicode (3 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "Morning and the arrival, etc."

6—"Moderato Agitato," by Becker (2 minutes and 35 seconds), until—T: "Why did you faint?"

7—"Under the Leaves" (Melody-Allegro), by Thome (4 minutes), until—T: "Seeing double."

8—"Aragonaise" from "Le Cid" (Allegro), by Massenet (2 minutes and 40 seconds), until—S: Peter escaping through the window.

9—Light hurry to action (2 minutes and 15 seconds), until—T: "You're not going to desert us now?"

10—Theme (2 minutes and 20 seconds), until—T: "The return of Peter."

11—"Vanity" (Allegro Caprice), by Jackson (3 minutes and 40 seconds), until—T: "I suppose my job is finished."

12—"Legende" (Melody), by Friml (2 minutes and 40 seconds), until—S: Interior of dark room.

13—Storm Furioso to action (1 minute), until—S: Castle burning (fire scene).

Note—Watch Explosions

14—Hurry for fire scenes to action (5 minutes), until—T: "What is your name?"

15—Theme (40 seconds), until * * * * * END.

"THE HEART OF THE SUNSET"

(Rex Beach Production)

Theme: "Love Theme" (4/4 Andante Sentimento) by Abbott Lee

1—"Characteristic Tremolo," by Lovenberg (2 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "And Austin Alaire's husband, etc."

2—"Dramatic Recitative" (4/4 Andante Dramatico), by Sol. P. Levy (3 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "Dave Law, a Texas Ranger."

3—"Admiration" (Moderato Grazioso), by Jackson (1 minute and 20 seconds), until—T: "The murderer."

4—"Jovitta" (Characteristic Mexican Serenade), by Armand (3 minutes), until—T: "With the dying day, etc."

5—"Tragic Theme" (4/4 Andante Molto), by Paul Vely (1 minute and 45 seconds), until—T: "Rosa returned to her father's house."

Note—Begin pp and Watch Shot.

6—"Mexican Kisses" (slow Habanera), by Roberts (1 minute and 25 seconds), until—T: "It is growing late and I must, etc."

7—"Ein Maerchen" (Dramatic Fantasia), by Bach (5 minutes), until—T: "Any honest Greaser needs, etc."

8—"Dramatic Agitato," by Hough (1 minute and 40 seconds), until—T: "Did Paniflo get away?"

9—Theme (2 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "Where were you last night?"

10—Continue ff (1 minute), until—T: "Having delivered his prisoner."

11—"Bella Mexicana" (Mexican Serenade), by Langey (2 minutes and 25 seconds), until—T: "I was at Corpus Christi, etc."

12—"Flirtation" (Valse Int.), by Meyer Helmund (4 minutes and 45 seconds), until—T: "That ain't the worst of it."

13—"Three Graces" (Allegro Int.), by Herman (1 minute and 40 seconds), until—T: "Palomas joy, etc."

14—"Romance" (Andante Sostenuto), by Karganoff (3 minutes and 35 seconds), until—T: "I am going into long dresses."

15—"Capricious Anette" (Allegretto Moderato), by Borch (1 minute), until—T: "In Mexico, General, etc."

16—"Manzano" (Mexican Int.), by Brooks (3 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "Tad Lewis was a clever cattle thief."

17—"Dramatic Tension" (3/4 Andante Molto), by Sol. P. Levy (5 minutes and 5 seconds), until—T: "I'm sick of your meddling."

18—Continue pp (35 seconds), until—T: "In the days that followed."

19—Theme (1 minute), until—T: "Senor, my brother Panfillo, who killed him?"

20—"Spanish Moderato," by Redla (45 seconds), until—T: "Longorio was an ardent suitor."

21—Continue to action (3 minutes and 10 seconds), until—S: Longorio enters Alaire's room.

22—"Serenade" (Dramatic Moderato), by Widor (2 minutes), until—T: "Paloma Jones had reached, etc."

23—"In Lovers' Lane" (Characteristic and Melodious Intermezzo), by A. Pryor (3 minutes and 35 seconds), until—T: "The Awakening."

24—Theme (3 minutes and 25 seconds), until—T: "On the following morning, etc."

25—"L'Adieu" (Dramatic), by Favarger (3 minutes and 30 seconds), until—T: "Tortured by the thousand."

26—Continue ff (1 minute and 30 seconds), until—T: "Dave returned hopeless."

27—Continue pp (45 seconds), until—S: Paloma reading theatrical advertisement.

28—"Legend of a Rose (2/4 Allegretto), by Reynard (2 minutes), until—T: "Although border conditions, etc."

29—Continue pp (40 seconds), until—T: "Jose prepared to carry."

30—"Heavy Mysterioso," by Sol. P. Levy (3 minutes and 45 seconds), until—T: "Where is the Senorita?"

Note—Watch Shot.

31—"Dramatic Tension," by Reissiger (3 minutes and 30 seconds), until—T: "I have carried Longorio's good will, etc."

32—"Dramatic Mysterioso," by Borch (3 minutes and 45 seconds), until—T: "When I was in the Philippines."

33—"Prelude" (Heavy Dramatic), by Rachmaninoff (4 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "Into the heart of the sunset."

34—Ad. Lib. Tremolo (20 seconds), until—T: "After a night of rumors, etc."

35—"Allegro Movement," from the "Elijah Fantasia," by Beethoven (arr. by Tobani) (2 minutes and 15 seconds), until—S: Alaire reading letter.

36—Continue or repeat to action (1 minute), until—T: "Let no one leave this house."

37—"Erl King" (Dramatic Agitato), by Schubert (5 minutes and 25 seconds), until—T: "I am unarmed, I am a friend, etc."

38—"Rustles of Spring" (Dramatic Agitato), by Sinding (2 minutes and 20 seconds), until—S: Wedding ceremony.

39—"Sorrow Theme" (Pathetic), by Roberts (1 minute and 35 seconds), until—T: "So I'll make her a widow again."

40—Heavy Agitato to action (2 minutes), until—T: "It was a night of suspense."

41—"Cavatine" (Dramatic Mod.), by Bohm (3 minutes), until—T: "The crisis came with the dawn."

42—Pathetic Andante, by Vely (4 minutes), until—T: "True to its principles, etc."

43—Theme (3 minutes and 25 seconds), until—T: "Gringoes."

Note—Begin Cue No. 43 with Ad. Lib. Tympany Rolls.

44—Battle Hurry to action (2 minutes), until—S: Alaire reading letter.

45—Theme (2 minutes and 15 seconds), until—T: "Longorio's men, etc."

46—Battle Hurry to action (2 minutes and 45 seconds), until—S: American cowboys rescue Dave and Alaire.

47—"Dramatic Allegro" to action (2 minutes), until—S: American flag in view.

48—"America" ("My country 'tis of thee," etc. First eight bars only), until * * * * * END.

(Additional Music Cues on page 2742)

The thinking Exhibitor

Who has faith in the prosperity of the Industry
Who has confidence in his judgment of Values
Who has the desire to give his patrons the ultimate in entertainment—realizes that Music furnished by contributes one half to the success of his feature

The FOTOPLAYER

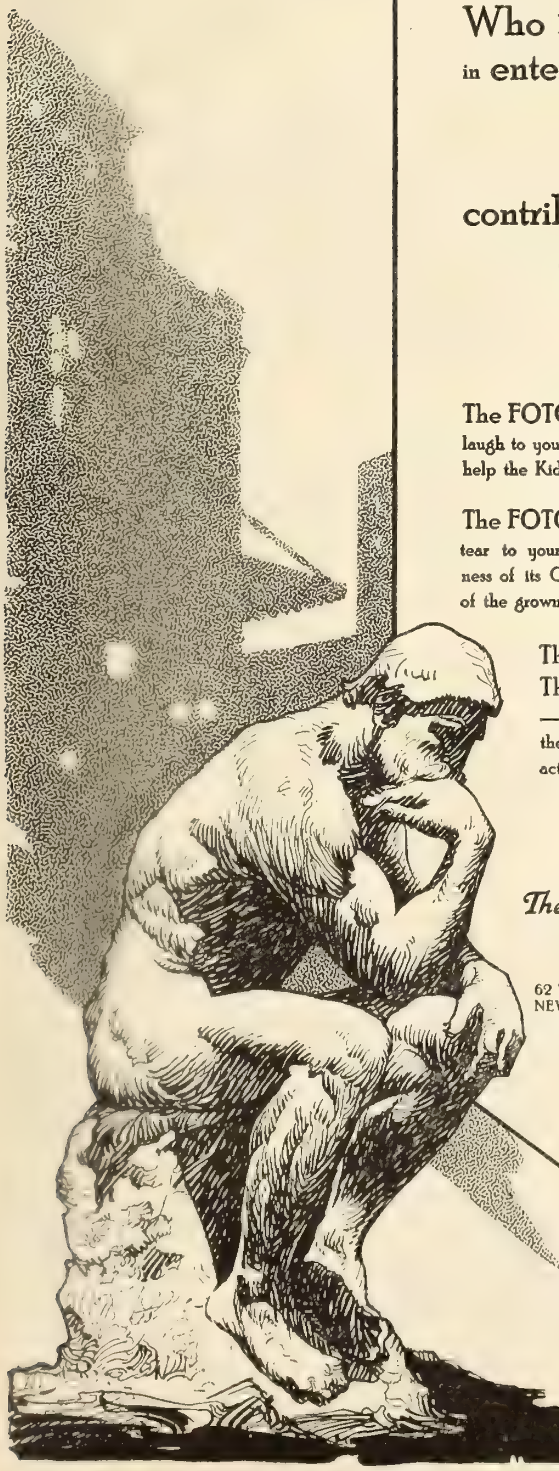
The entire evening's program in the "Land of Make Believe" becomes real and your audience live and react to every emotional response of screen action

The FOTOPLAYER adds another laugh to your comedy—the traps and effects help the Kiddies to see with their ears.

The FOTOPLAYER adds another tear to your Drama—the wonderful sweetness of its Organ tones dominates the senses of the grown-ups.

The FOTOPLAYER adds security to your Music problems—no guesswork and waste in your pit—therefore an economic up-keep

The FOTOPLAYER adds additional revenue to your box office by the increased patronage due to superior musical entertainment.



The FOTOPLAYER may be played manually or by roll
The Double Tracker device permits the operation of two rolls—one plays while the other is ready for instant change. Fotoplayer music is therefore an accurate accompaniment to every shade and meaning of emotional action on the screen.

WE CONSTRUCT ORCHESTRAL PIPE ORGANS
TO MEET YOUR SPECIFICATIONS—WRITE US

The American Photo Player Co.

62 West 45th Street
NEW YORK CITY

14 E. Jackson Boulevard
CHICAGO, ILL.

109 Golden Gate Avenue
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Parkway Building
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Geo. L. Parker
120 Boylston Street
BOSTON, MASS.

Thos. Goggan & Sons
DALLAS and
SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS

Sherman, Clay & Co.
SEATTLE, WASH., and PORTLAND, ORE.

2805 Benton Boulevard
KANSAS CITY, MO.

737 South Olive Street
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Louis Grunewald Co., Inc.
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

W. D. Dyer & Bro.
ST. PAUL, MINN.

E. Witzman & Co.
MEMPHIS, TENN.

Lyon & Healy
CHICAGO, ILL.

Frederickson-Kroh Music Co.
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.

"MISSOURI-WALTZ"

The World's Greatest
and
Most Popular Waltz

For Piano - - - 30c Per Copy
For Orchestra - 11 and Piano 25c
For Orchestra - Full and Piano 35c

Forster Music Publisher, Inc.
736 South Michigan Avenue
CHICAGO, ILL.

INFORMATION

I am interested in Motion Picture Photography and would like

Without Obligation

on my part to obtain information on the equipment as checked

CAMERAS
CAMERA ATTACHMENTS
TRIPODS
LENSES
FILM STOCK
STUDIO LIGHTS
LABORATORY APPARATUS
DEVELOPING AND PRINTING

(Tear out this advertisement and mail to MOTION PICTURE NEWS, 729 7th Avenue, New York.)

Name ....
Theatre ....
Address ....
....

"THE DANGER GAME"

(Goldwyn Production)

Reviewed on page 2416

Theme: "Sweet Jasmine" (Melodious Allegretto) by Bendix

1—Theme (1 minute and 15 seconds), until—T: "William Rogers, Merchant Prince."

2—Continue to action (3 minutes and 15 seconds), until—T: "Let's make a night of it,"

3—"Serenade" (2/4 Allegretto), by Kautzenbach (2 minutes and 15 seconds), until—T: "Pinnacle of Fame."

4—"By the River" (12/8 Moderato-Romance), by Morse (3 minutes and 10 seconds), until—S: Close up of book—the danger game.

5—"Valse Lente," by Schuette (3 minutes and 45 seconds), until—T: "As for Gilpin, etc."

6—"Dramatic Recitative," by Levy (1 minute and 20 seconds), until—T: "A glimpse into the secluded, etc."

7—"Doloroso" (Poeme D'Amour-Moderato), by Tobani (2 minutes and 50 seconds), until—T: "A marriage license bureau."

8—"Gavotte and Musette" (Allegro Gavotte), by J. Raff (2 minutes and 15 seconds), until—S: Interior of dining room.

9—Theme (5 minutes), until—S: Madge near letter box.

10—"Mysterioso," by Sol P. Levy (4 minutes and 5 seconds), until—S: Madge powdering her nose.

11—Light Hurry—to action (1 minute 30 seconds), until—T: "And so began her great adventure."

12—Theme (4 minutes and 50 seconds), until—S: Newspaper Clipping of Powder Annie.

13—"Valse Caprice," by Rubinstein (5 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "I've always admired your work."

14—"Essence Grotesque" (Comic Mysterioso), by Lake (4 minutes and 15 seconds), until—T: "So Powder Nose Annie, etc."

15—"Pizzicato Bluette" (Characteristic), by Lack (3 minutes and 30 seconds), until—T: "Clytie gets a close up, etc."

16—"The Booster" (a Trombone Rag), by Lake (3 minutes and 15 seconds), until—T: "Say, Angel face, quit vampin'."

Note—ff during dancing scene only.

17—"The Vampire" (Dramatic Theme), by Levy (1 minute and 25 seconds), until—S: The fight.

18—"Dramatic Agitato," by Hough (1 minute and 10 seconds), until—T: "Jimmy decides that it is his duty."

19—Theme (3 minutes and 45 seconds), until—T: "Home was never like this!"

20—"Ballerina's Vision" (Valse Lente), by Braham (2 minutes and 10 seconds), until—S: Hunter entering Clytie's room.

21—"Love Theme," by Abbott Lee (3 minutes 10 seconds), until—T: "Lay off that girl."

22—"Dramatic Tension," by Levy (2 minutes), until—T: "A nice little nifty job."

23—"First Waltz" (Characteristic Concert Waltz), by Durand (4 minutes and 50 seconds), until—T: "If I wanted to be a certain, etc."

24—"Love Song" (Dramatic), by Flegier (2 minutes and 30 seconds), until—T: "Kid Glove Jimmy had just, etc."

25—"Pastel Menuet" (3/4 Allegro Giocoso), by Paradis (3 minutes and 45 seconds), until—T: (on card) "James Gilpin."

26—Theme (4 minutes and 50 seconds), until * * * * END.

"BOSS OF THE LAZY Y"

(Triangle Production)

Reviewed on page 2556

Theme: "Love Song" (Dramatic) by Flegier

1—"Violetta" (Characteristic Concert Moderato), by Tobani (2 minutes and 20 seconds), until—T: "For years there had been bad blood, etc."

2—"Western Moderato," by Bach (4 minutes), until—T: "Well, son, I got him, etc."

3—"Tragic Theme" by Paul Vely (3 minutes), until—T: "Bar S. Ranch in the Durango County."

4—Continue pp (50 seconds), until—T: "At the earnest request of the wounded."

5—Theme (4 minutes and 20 seconds), until—T: "After a journey of numerous, etc."

6—"Sorrow Theme," by Roberts (2 minutes), until—T: "After a journey of numerous, etc."

7—"Melody," by Friml (3 minutes and 50 seconds), until—T: "Hands up!"

8—"Dramatic Agitato," by Hough (2 minutes), until—T: "Betty tells Cal."

9—"Dramatic Narrative," by Pement (1 minute and 40 seconds), until—T: "The days that follow."

10—"Reve D'Amour" (Allegretto), by Zameznik (4 minutes and 25 seconds), until—T: "I think you're progressed enough."

11—Theme (3 minutes and 25 seconds), until—T: "Lazette."

12—"Heloise" (Mod. Intermezzo), by Langey (2 minutes and 40 seconds), until—S: Interior of barroom.

13—"Dramatic Tension," by Sol P. Levy (2 minutes and 20 seconds). until—T: "If Cal. Marston had realized, etc."

14—"Intermezzo" (Moderato), by Huerter (2 minutes and 30 seconds), until—T: "In the days that follow."

15—"Lanette" (Valse Lento), by Henton (1 minute and 50 seconds), until—S: The fight.

16—Hurry to action (1 minute and 45 seconds), until—T: "Step by step Betty's pilgrim, etc."

17—Theme (3 minutes and 20 seconds), until—T: "Days of suspicion, etc."

18—"Illusion Moderato Intermezzo," by Bustanoby (1 minute and 25 seconds), until—T: "Randall's some day arrives."

19—"Moderato Agitato," by Becker (2 minutes and 30 seconds), until—T: "Why don't you keep out."

Note—Wash Shots.

20—Continue pp (1 minute and 15 seconds), until—T: "In the days that follow."

21—"Return to Me Soon" (Allegro), by Gregh (3 minutes and 45 seconds), until—T: "In which invincible."

22—Hurry to action (1 minute and 40 seconds), until—T: "The surrender of a worthy foe."

23—Repeat "Return to Me Soon" pp (same as Cue No. 21) (1 minute and 45 seconds), until—T: "At length open battle."

24—"Heavy Mysterioso," by Levy (4 minutes and 40 seconds), until—T: "And in discussing the incidents, etc."

Note—Wash Shots.

25—Theme (2 minutes), until * * * * * END.

"THE VORTEX"

(Triangle Production)

Theme: "Romance" (Andante Sostenute) by Karganoff

1—Popular One Step, to action (1 minute and 30 seconds), until—T: "With the Herfords it is the old story."

2—Valse Lente, by Schuett (1 minute and 50 seconds), until—S: Girl at piano.

3—Piano, improvise to action (1 minute and 5 seconds), until—S: In garden.

4—Theme (2 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "I can't stand it."

5—Piano, improvise to action (on dance music) (40 seconds), until—S: Guests are leaving.

6—"Inspiration" (Andante Sostenuto), by Edwards (3 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "Tortured by jealousy."

7—"Serenade" (Allegretto), by Kautzenbach (4 minutes), until—T: "You realize what it means."

8—Theme (2 minutes and 25 seconds), until—T: "Anxious to end his suspense."

9—"Allegro," by Bach (2 minutes and 50 seconds), until—T: "After an hour of watchful waiting."

10—Dramatic Tension, by Sol. P. Levy (2 minutes and 25 seconds), until—T: "Years before he had lost, etc."

11—Theme (4 minutes and 20 seconds), until—T: "His injuries aren't serious."

12—"After Sunset" (Dramatic), by A. Pryor (3 minutes and 30 seconds), until—T: "Tortured in a hell of, etc."

13—"Petite Serenade" (Allegretto), by Horton (2 minutes and 25 seconds), until—T: "No, I am not ill."

14—Dramatic Recitative, by Sol. P. Levy (1 minute and 45 seconds), until—T: "And where Meredith, etc."

15—Continue ff (50 seconds), until—T: "Impatiently waiting."

16—"Serenade" (Dramatic), by Widor (7 minutes and 30 seconds), until—T: "With her faith in Dunning shattered."

17—Theme (3 minutes and 50 seconds), until—T: "Well, where were you, etc."

18—Tragic Theme, by P. Vely (2 minutes), until—T: "That was clever of you."

19—"Lisolette" (Moderato), by Adam (3 minutes and 15 seconds), until—T: "And so they came again."

20—"L'Adieu" (Dramatic), by Favarger (4 minutes), until—T: "Then I'll stay too."

21—Theme (3 minutes and 50 seconds), until * * * * END.

"THE LOVE BROKERS"

(Triangle Production)

Reviewed on page 2254

Theme: "Love Song" (Dramatic) by Flegier

1—"Melody" (Moderato), by Kretschmer (4 minutes and 50 seconds), until—T: "Peter Ladislaw, who has been, etc."

2—"L'Adieu" (12/8 Dramatic), by Favarger (3 minutes and 25 seconds), until—T: "That night, at Olga's apartment."

3—Piano improvise to action (1 minute 50 seconds), until—T: "I've interested, etc."

Note—Play good popular tune—Vocal with Piano acc.

4—"Budding Roses" (Valse Caprice), by Kretschmer (5 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "I know you are sincere."

5—Continue pp (45 seconds), until—T: "News that astonishes."

6—"Dramatic Tension," by Levy (1 minute and 20 seconds), until—T: "Thoughts of home."

7—"Dramatic Narrative," by Pement (2 minutes), until—T: "And in the home of his fathers."

8—"Adoration" (Andante), by Borowski (6 minutes and 40 seconds), until—T: "Mr. Townsend wishes to have, etc."

9—Theme (3 minutes), until—T: "It's you, you've helped them, etc."

10—"Last Spring" (Dramatic), by Grieg (4 minutes and 35 seconds), until—T: "Why, you're crying!"

11—Sorrow Theme by Roberts (1 minute and 40 seconds), until—T: "I am going with you, etc."

12—"Dramatic Tension," by Winkler (1 minute and 45 seconds), until—T: "At the hospital, etc."

13—"Nocturno in F" (Melodious Moderato), by Krzyzanowski (2 minutes), until—T: "Balked in her endeavor, etc."

14—Theme (2 minutes and 25 seconds), until—T: "Charlotte's protests, etc."

15—Piano solo improvise to action (1 minute and 40 seconds), until—T: "And at Highfield it seems, etc."

16—"Dramatic Recitative" to action (3 minutes), until—T: "A Spring day in the mountains."

17—"Gavotte" (Moderato), by Gossec (2 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "They will try to get money."

18—Theme (1 minute and 45 seconds), until—T: "Catherwood's opinion of Charlotte."

19—"Dreams of Devotion" (Heavy Dramatic), by Langey (4 minutes and 25 seconds), until T: "Next morning Townsend speculates."

20—Theme (2 minutes), until * * * * * END.

"BABBLING TONGUES"

(Ivan Production)

Theme No. 1: Love Theme Broken Melody by von Biene

Theme No. 2: (Babbling Tongues), Gavotte and Musette by Raff

1—Silence (1 minute and 10 seconds), until—T: "Joseph Morean, a retired business man."

2—"Menuet No. 2 in G," by Beethoven (1 minute and 15 seconds), until—S: Mob scene in Wall Street.

3—"Intermezzo," by Arenski (50 seconds), until—T: "Everyone turned from me."

4—Continue pp (25 seconds), until—S: Flashback to mob scene.

5—Continue ff (45 seconds), until—T: "Through that timely loan."

6—Continue pp (35 seconds), until—T: "Paul Savary, a struggling dramatist."

7—"Romance," by Frommel (4 minutes and 30 seconds), until—S: Close up of Therese reading back.

8—Love Theme (1 minute and 40 seconds), until—T: "And so the passing weeks."

9—"Melody," by Kretschmer (2 minutes and 50 seconds), until—S: Interior of kitchen (maid and butler).

10—"Blue Violets Mazurka," by Eilenberg (1 minute and 45 seconds), until—T: "The morning sun found Paul."

11—Continue pp (2 minutes), until—T: "Louise Morean, Joseph's brother."

12—"Ballerina's Vision" (Valse Lente), by Braham (2 minutes and 15 seconds), until—T: "Smiles and meaning glances."

13—Continue pp (1 minute and 10 seconds), until—T: "My dear, 1 am going to call, etc."

14—"Dragon Fly Mazurka" by Strauss (2 minutes and 30 seconds), until—T: "Madame Demarest is cut."

15—Love Theme (1 minute and 30 seconds), until—T: "Viscount Armand de Bellervie, etc."

16—"Theme No. 2" (2 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "Why not let him find out."

17—Continue pp and slow (20 seconds), until—S: Girl playing piano.

18—Piano solo improvise to action (2 minutes), until—T: "My dear, if you expect to go, etc."

19—Love Theme (1 minute and 50 seconds), until—S: Fade out into scene maid near garage.

20—"Theme No. 2" (3 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "As your brother Joseph's friend."

21—Continue ff (1 minute and 30 seconds), until—S: Therese at piano.

22—Piano solo improvise to action (1 minute and 40 seconds), Pathetic Melody until—S: Therese stops playing piano.

23—Love Theme pp (1 minute and 15 seconds), until—T: "Therese believe me, I know how."

24—Continue ff (50 seconds), until—T: "There, I must tell you, etc."

25—"Dramatic Recitative," by Levy (4 minutes and 10 seconds), until—S: Full view of dining room.

26—"Adagio Pathetique," by Godard, until—S: Interior of restaurant.

27—"Theme No. 2" (1 minute and 40 seconds), until—T: "Felix tells of the coming duel."

28—"Second Movement Allegro" from Romantic Overture by Keler Bela (2 minutes), until—T: "I'll kill him; yes, I'll kill him!"

29—Continue fff (1 minute and 45 seconds), until—T: "There is an unlet room."

30—Love Theme ff (2 minutes and 30 seconds), until—T: "But she insists on seeing you."

31—"Tragic Theme," by Paul Vely (2 minutes and 20 seconds), until—T: "It is Joseph's voice."

32—Continue ff (1 minute and 40 seconds), until—T: "I am here to defend my wife."

33—"Dramatic Agitato No. 43," by Borch (2 minutes and 30 seconds), until—S: Paul hides Therese in closet.

34—Continue or repeat ff (1 minute and 15 seconds), until—T: "Open the door, can't you see he is dying."

35—Silence (10 seconds), until—T: "My God, Therese."

36—Last Movement Grandioso from Lake's "Easter Fantasia" (50 seconds), until—S: Paul fights his duel.

37—Agitato to action (1 minute and 15 seconds), until—S: Therese leaves Paul's room.

38—"Largo" from "New World Symphony," by Dvorak (5 minutes), until—T: "But, Monsieur, my orders are, etc."

39—Love Theme ff (2 minutes and 35 seconds), until—T: "What good does crying do?"

40—"Fifth Nocturno," by Leybach (4 minutes and 40 seconds), until—T: "Don't touch me."

41—From Poco Agitato Movement (second last movement) of Lake's Easter Fantasia" (2 minutes and 15 seconds), until—T: "You cur."

42—Sudden Orchestra stop, then silence (30 seconds), until—T: "See, they are together."

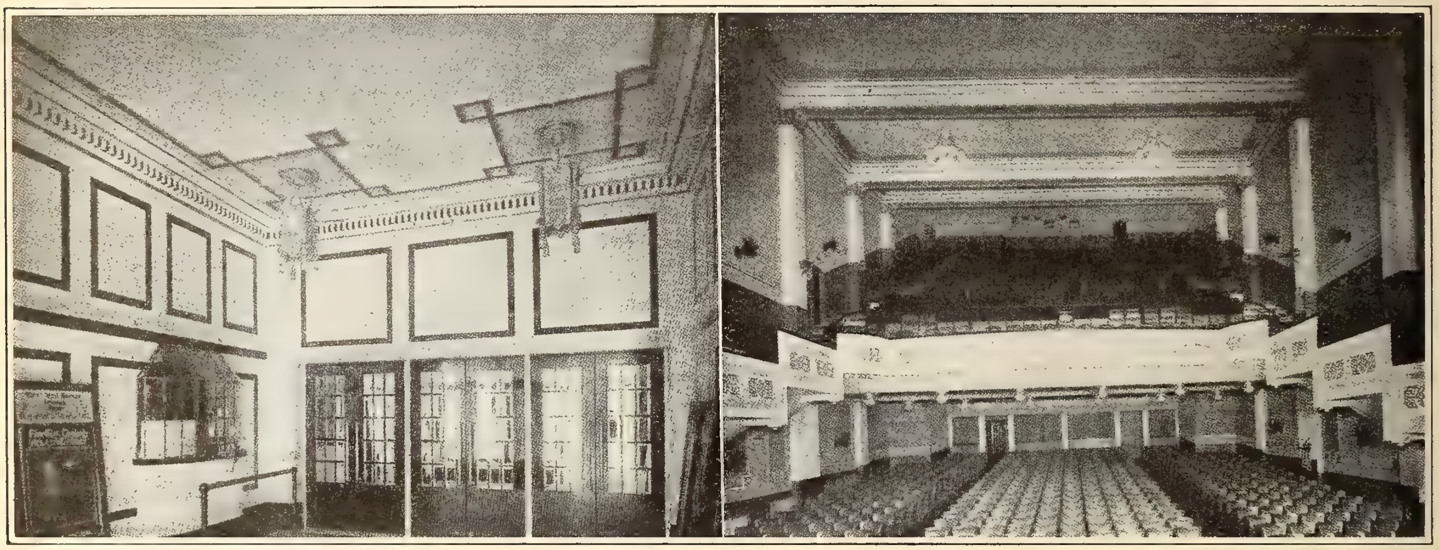
43—"Elegy," by Massenet (2 minutes and 20 seconds), until—T: "Traitors at last I see, etc."

44—"Ave Maria," by Gounod (2 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "Let no one touch this woman."

45—Love Theme ff (1 minute and 20 seconds), until * * END.

THE BARTOLA
will make your music a feature.
Write for particulars.
CHAS. C. PYLE, General Sales Agent, 707-712 Mallers Bldg., Chicago, Ill. Factory, Oshkosh, Wis.

Theatres Worth While



Lobby and Auditorium, Grand Theatre, Estherville, Iowa

Unique Theatre in Iowa City

RECENTLY there came to the MOTION PICTURE NEWS a folder bearing on the front the interesting direction: "See the Place That Made Estherville Famous." Search of the gazetteers brought us the information that Estherville is a town in Iowa with a census population of 3,404, yet it probably has the finest theatre of any city of the size in the country.

But more interesting even than that fact is that the business is a double one, for the theatre is run in conjunction with a big confectionery and cafeteria by F. H. Graaf and is an assembly place for people for miles around. It was opened on September 20 of last year and has been a big success from the start.

The building is of brick and the house has a seating capacity of 1,000 in balcony, boxes and on the lower floor. The theatre is ventilated by the exhaust fan system and heated by steam. The lighting system is direct and indirect. Ornamental plaster is used for the interior decorations, the colors being gray and blue.

There are two Simplex machines with a throw on 100 feet to a gold fibre screen.

New Theatre Opens in Etowah

MARCH 23 saw the opening of a new motion picture house in Etowah, Tenn., the Gem. It is owned by Manning and Wink and under the management of H. V. Manning. It has a seating capacity of 250, indirect lighting system and all modern conveniences.

The projection room is equipped with two Power 6 B machines which have a throw of sixty feet. The Gem is using an incandescent equipment with which the management has been experimenting for five months in its other house.

Music is furnished by a Seeburg model M organ. Paramount, Artcraft, Goldwyn, Triangle and Universal Pictures are shown, there being five shows a day of from six to seven reels each for an admission of ten and fifteen cents.

YOUR THEATRE'S PICTURE

Let Us Know When It Is Ready and We Will Tell You the Data We Want

WE are anxious to print pictures and descriptions of the "Worth While Theatres" in this department—especially the new houses. However, with the present delays that are encountered in the shipment of building materials, it is impossible for us to keep any accurate account of the days for future openings and we invite managers to send in photographs of such new houses, both interior and exterior views together with description and we will then send a blank for the additional data that we need.

Established houses which have not been pictured in the NEWS are invited to share these columns. This matter is intended not only to give an account of the better houses, no matter the size, but also to give hints which may prove of value in future construction and equipment.

In sending photos be sure to enclose them in cardboard to prevent breakage.

Brevoort Opens in Brooklyn

BROOKLYN added a handsome new theatre to its list on May 1st with the opening of the Brevoort, on Bedford avenue at the corner of Brevoort place.

This theatre is in the best business section of Bedford avenue and convenient to the Bedford, Stuyvesant and Hill residential sections. It is a valuable addition to the development of the section, it will be the largest, most spacious and elaborate of any theatre in Brooklyn, devoted exclusively to high-class photoplays and good music. The seating capacity is 2,500, 1,800 being on the ground floor. No expense has been spared in providing embellishment of the highest type, with all the comfort and luxury that the most modern architecture and construction can provide.

The exterior is of tapestry brick and limestone, of pleasing proportion and attractive appearance, with marque at main entrance.

The entrance is through an inviting lobby, resplendent with polished marble, plate glass, mirrors, tiling and ornamental plaster, all of pleasing design.

The auditorium is impressive with its massive classic pilaster, richly paneled walls, ornamental cornices, painted domed ceiling, elaborate striking proscenium arch and stage effect, unusual lighting and color provisions, beautiful decorations and layings.

All of the 2,500 seats are comfortable and with ample space between and with no columns or obstacles of any kind between any seat and the screen.

Liberal orchestra space is provided, large enough to accommodate any number of musicians, arranged for concert features, with retiring and dressing rooms.

Among the many attractive features of the up-to-date house is the surprising and delightful promenade foyer on the mezzanine floor, with its waiting and lounging rooms, homelike open fireplace, beam ceiling, columns, seats, reading tables, writing desks, mirrors, artistic lighting fixtures, draperies, etc. Smoking rooms for men and dainty, well appointed retiring rooms for women and children are provided. Comfortable loge boxes are provided in the part of the balcony, where smoking will be permitted.

New Brevoort theatre, Brooklyn

An elaborate modern ventilating system has been installed, permitting of a complete change of air every few minutes.

The building is fire-proof and with its liberal aisle foyer in leading to its many exists, allows of emptying its entire capacity in the shortest possible time.

The Brevoort was designed by R. Thomas Short, architect, and erected by the Brevoort Holding Company, a well-known organization, including some of the best known business men of Greater New York. The details of the building were under the personal supervision of A. H. Schwartz, who is interested in the Rialto and Linden theatres of Brooklyn. Associated with Mr. Schwartz is the well-known theatrical man, H. C. Miner, whose support in promoting the Brevoort has been of the greatest assistance.

Directory of New Theatres

ALABAMA

The open air theatre being erected by the city of Birmingham at Capitol Park is fast approaching completion. James E. Carey is in charge of the construction work.

ARIZONA

James N. Xalis, manager of the Lyric theatre on G avenue, Douglas, is planning to erect a new building on the site where the present theatre now stands. It is his intention to put up a three-story building, to contain a theatre that will be modern in every respect. Construction work will be commenced this week.

CALIFORNIA

J. R. Dippo, of the Avenue theatre, Oakland, is building a new theatre at Twenty-seventh and San Pablo avenue, and has placed his entire order for the operating room equipment with G. A. Metcalfe.

S. Enea, of Pittsburgh, is reconstructing his theatre, modernizing and improving in all directions.

The Loring theatre, at Riverside, of which C. L. Nye retains the ownership, is to be altered into one of the most beautiful entertainment houses in southern California. The management will then be taken over by Howe & Merrill, of the Regent and Orpheum theatres.

Completely remodeled and rejuvenated and under the management of the Liberty theatre, the New Rialto theatre, on the Pike, Long Beach, was opened to the public last week. The lobby has been enlarged and redecorated, a ladies' rest room has been added, and the entire house improved. Otis Hoyt, owner of the Liberty and Columbia theatres, and Charles Freshwater, late owner of the Family and Star theatres in Hamilton, Mont., are the men behind the new theatre. Mr. Freshwater assumed the active management of the Rialto.

G. A. Cox is erecting a new theatre on First avenue, Glendale, to have a seating capacity of 450. The front is to be of red ruffled brick with an inlay of gray brick. Prism glass in steel frames will form deep transom windows across the front, and an ornamental steel awning hung with chains will lend a decidedly metropolitan air to the place. There are to be three entrances, one into a centre aisle and the other two into narrow aisles extending through the reserved seat sections. The interior is to be finished all in soft gray with ivory panels. A commodious orchestra pit and an adequate stage are features not to be overlooked. The lamp house is to be absolutely fireproof, lined throughout with asbestos, and large enough to accommodate two machines. On one side of the lamp house is to be an office room, and on the other a store room. The building is to be heated by hot water, and for summer an excellent ventilation system is to be installed, together with several large and small fans. The building is to be modern in every detail, offering to the people of this community an up-to-date place of amusement. Cox states that the new theatre will continue to be known as the Rainbow.

The new Hambler playhouse on Park street, near Encinal, Alameda, is about ready for opening, James Hamblen, owner, announces. The theatre represents a $50,000 investment in building alone and many innovations have been introduced. The vacant property adjoining has been leased for the free parking of autos of the theatre patrons. The mezzanine floor will contain ladies' parlors and a nursery. The theatre will seat 1500 persons.

J. L. Thurlow, the new manager of the Matilija, Hot Springs, Ventura, County is effecting some wonderful changes and improvements to this once popular resort. Among others he is installing a large, well equipped motion picture theatre.

Plans for the improvement of the E. P. Benjamin property at Ocean Front and Colorado Street, Santa Monica, have been announced and include the installation of a motion picture theatre which will have a seating capacity of about 800.

CONNECTICUT

Work has been started on the building which P. J. Handel will build at Easterly Place, New Haven. It will be of wood, 60 x 108 feet, and will be used as an open air motion picture theatre. The cost will be about $7,000.

GEORGIA

Thomas W. Lamb, New York architect who designed the Rialto and Rivoli, two of Manhattan's most modern and beautiful theatres, Tuesday completed preliminary plans for remodeling Loew's Grand theatre, Atlanta, which he stated would make that house one of the most attractive and comfortable theatrical buildings in the entire country.

Improvements outlined by Mr. Lamb which are in addition to those announced a short time ago by Marcus Loew, the lessee, would provide a new front for the theatre to make it conform with the most modern structures of the kind in the East.

The entrance will be altered and beautified, and in its centre will be erected a large dome with indirect lighting. The front wall of the theatre proper will be moved considerably nearer the street providing in addition to an increased seating capacity a more commodious lobby, which will be tastefully decorated, and large reception rooms. Mr. Lamb hopes to erect also a mezzanine floor half way up to the balcony where a comfortable waiting room would be arranged. A modern lighting system will be installed throughout the building.

Preparations are already well advanced for the installation of a new marquee, large pipe organ and typhoon fan system and for the refurnishing and reseating of the house as announced by Mr. Loew.

J. Frank Jackson, who formerly owned and operated a motion picture theatre at Macon, is making arrangements to open a new theatre in the same city soon. He announces a contest for the selection of a suitable name.

HAWAIIAN TERRITORY

Officers of the People's Theatre Company have decided that the seating capacity of the theatre which they propose to erect on the site of the skating rink on Fort Street, Honolulu, under the present plans will be inadequate and have, therefore directed Ripley & Davis, architects, to draw new plans, to include a balcony and make the structure three stories high.

Under the new plans the theatre will have a seating capacity of 2,000 and meet the needs of Honolulu for many years to come. The palm garden feature will not be changed.

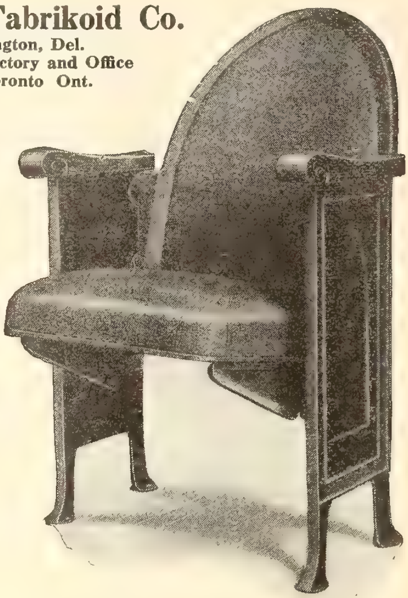
ILLINOIS

Plans are under consideration to enlarge the Gem theatre, Johnston City, to increase the seating capacity to 1,000.

Schoenstadt & Son, promoters of Chicago, are considering the advisability of erecting a motion picture theatre in Rockford. While nothing definite has as yet developed, the Schoenstadts are said to be seeking a suitable site upon which a theatre of 25,000 seating capacity could be erected.

TYPHOON COOLING SYSTEM
TYPHOON FAN COMPANY 1544 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

How can an advertiser continue advertising? By giving YOU value.



DU PONT AMERICAN INDUSTRIES

Seats that Stay Beautiful

Here is a theatre seat that will be beautiful after years of hard service because it is covered with Du Pont Fabrikoid, which does not wear shabby and is absolutely unaffected by water, grease, stains, dust or perspiration.

Du Pont Fabrikoid Co.
Wilmington, Del.
Canadian Factory and Office
New Toronto Ont.

No. 248
Made by

Wisconsin Cabinet & Panel Co.
105 W. 40th St.
New York

DU PONT

ADVERTISE YOUR BUSINESS

BY THE QUALITY OF YOUR PROJECTION

Nothing is as good as the Best, and the Best can only be obtained by an up to date machine.

We will take in your old machine on part payment on a New Machine or sell you a New Machine on the MONTHLY PAYMENT PLAN.

Write today for Particulars and Catalog

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY

Largest Exclusive Dealers to the Moving Picture Trade

300-302 Mallers Building 5 South Wabash Avenue
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Dealers in Motiograph, Standard and Simplex Moving Picture Machines, National Carbons Minusa Screen and Everything for the Theatre

WE SELL ON THE INSTALLMENT PLAN

"NEWMAN" BRASS FRAMES AND RAILS

A FEW REASONS

why "NEWMAN" METAL FRAMES have been chosen by all the big circuits and best class of theatres.

1—Because the constant exposure to all sorts of weather conditions cannot affect "NEWMAN" NON-CORROSIVE METAL FRAMES.

2—Because of their richness in beauty and design, they liven the entrance and render the lobby more inviting than any other kind of frames.

3—Because they will outlast a dozen wood frames. They are practically un-wear-out-able.

INSIST ON THE NAME "NEWMAN" WHEN BUYING FRAMES

Write for New 1918 Catalog

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
Established 1882
717-19 Sycamore Street, Cincinnati, Ohio
68 W. Washington Street, Chicago, Illinois
Canadian Representative—J. T. Malone,
Rialto Theatre Bldg., Montreal, Canada
Pacific Coast—G. A. Metcalfe, San Francisco, Cal.

Frames, Easels, Rails, Grilles, Signs, Choppers, Kick Plates, Door Bars

A photoplay house of attractive design and architectural beauty was opened at Division street and Milwaukee avenue, Chicago, last week, according to a report that came indirectly from Victor Bardonski last week. Mr. Bardonski, who is the owner of the new building, has christened his temple to the silent art not with the name of any of the great actors, directors or producers of the screen, but has decided on the name of Chopin. It is probably to be inferred from this that music is to play an all-important part in the presentation of the first-class productions which will be shown at this new Northwest Side theatre with seating accommodation

INDIANA

"The Princess," Cayuga's new motion picture theatre, was opened last week to capacity business. F. C. Richardson is the owner and manager.

Samuel Schiller, vice-president of the Schiller Film Company, a Chicago concern, has submitted a proposition to the J. S. Cruse Realty Company, which has to do with the Epmire theatre building on North Delaware street, Indianapolis. Mr. Schiller's proposal calls for a remodeling of the theatre to increase its seating capacity to approximately 4,000. This will mean, it is understood, practically a rebuilding of the theatre, with a more imposing entrance on Delaware street.

Richardson Bros. are opening a new motion picture theatre at Cayuga, to be known as the Rivoli.

A. F. Brentlinger, of Fort Wayne, is in direct charge of the construction of the new motion picture theatre at Terre Haute, which promises to be one of the foremost in Southeastern Indiana.

A. R. De Voe opened the American, his new motion picture theatre, on West Van Tress Street, Washington, last week to capacity business.

Gus Weggen is planning to install a motion picture theatre in his vacant building at Hebron.

IOWA

E. A. Hunt is erecting a new theatre at Rock Rapids, details of which will be announced later.

The Plaza theatre, at Waukee, was recently opened under the management of J. R. Manning.

KENTUCKY

Mrs. Charles R. West has contracted with N. A. Powell for the rebuilding and remodeling of her motion picture theatre on North Main street, Winchester. The Auditorium Theatre Company has leased the property and expects to be ready for opening June 1.

MASSACHUSETTS

The plans to enlarge the Majestic theatre, Pittsfield, call for all space occupied by the two stores in the building. It is to have a seating capacity of 2,000 or more.

MICHIGAN

Henry Opal, proprietor of the Majestic theatre, Hubbell, is compelled to increase the seating capacity of the house, and while doing so intends to make other improvements also. The seating capacity of the theatre was increased last season, but the ever-growing popularity of the house makes another raise necessary.

The Liberty theatre, Negaunce's newest motion picture theatre, was opened recently under the personal managemnt of Otis Rule, the lessee. It has a seating capacity of 4,500.

MINNESOTA

The Star theatre, at Battle Lake, was recently opened by E. A. Tanner.

The Unique theatre, at Bricelyn, was recently opened.

MISSOURI

A new theatre has just been completed at Hatfield, where both pictures and road shows will be exhibited. Giles Saunders has the management.

NEW JERSEY

A plot of land adjoining the Pannaci Hotel at Seabright has been leased to the New York Film Company, who will put up a motion picture theatre.

NEW MEXICO

Fred Cameron opened his new motion picture theatre at 312 West Central street, Albuquerque, last week to capacity business.

OHIO

Tippecanoe City boasts the finest motion picture theatre for a town of its size in the state, the Auditorium, having been opened on the 6th day of April, under the management of Messrs. Bennett and Partlow.

PENNSYLVANIA

J. J. Mayrosh, a citizen of Nazareth, has purchased for $33,000 a piece of property on Northampton Heights, Bangor, upon which he intends to erect a motion picture theatre.

Plans have been made for a new Majestic theatre at Punxsutawney. Messrs. McCartney and Johnson are handling the proposition.

Plans for the erection of a motion picture theatre on the site of the old Lycoming Opera House, Williamsport, have been drawn by Frank Keeney, of New York, and accepted by Jesse S. Bell, who is building the theatre.

SOUTH DAKOTA

A new motion picture theatre is about to be opened at Morristown by

TENNESSEE

The erection of a large motion picture and vaudeville house at Berryville is being considered by the Southern Commissary Company, and a representative of the Marcus Loew of the theatres will arrive here today or Tuesday to go over the plans for the new theatre. The theatre will be run seven days in the week, according to the plans.

TEXAS

Plans for a $35,000 theatre at Orange have been accepted. It is to be of interlocking hollow tile, stucco finish, and is to be erected on a lot 45 x 145 feet on Front Street at the rear of the First National Bank.

Business Offerings

Music Rolls for sale for 65 note electric pianos. All in good condition. 75 cents per roll. Address Lyric Theatre, Salem, Ill.

FOR SALE—Aeolian Grand Organ, 115 rolls Oratorio, Classical, Operatic and general. Reason for selling, lack of room. Price reasonable. Address H. Herbst, 211 So. LaSalle Street, Chicago.

NO MONKEY SHINES
We guarantee satisfaction in M. P. Machines and Accessories
CALL and BE CONVINCED
INDEPENDENT MOVIE SUPPLY COMPANY
Sixth floor 729 Seventh Avenue
Write for price list N

Unless You Have The
Automaticket System
You Are Losing Money
1733 Broadway, New York

The movie crowd like good music. The Estey Theatre Organ will give them good music.

THE ESTEY ORGAN COMPANY
Brattleboro, Vermont

See our page ad in the May 11 issue of the Motion Picture News.

UNIVERSAL
Motion Picture Camera
more speed, better results, at half the price.

Write for 6 new features

Burke & James, Inc.
240 E. Ontario St., Chicago

Theatre and Exchange Mailing List Service

We rent lists of or address contemplated or existing theatres, exchanges, state rights owners, publicity mediums and producers, selected as to territory, class, etc. Twenty thousand changes were recorded in our list last year. Its use means a saving to you of from 30 to 60% in postage, etc.

MOTION PICTURE DIRECTORY CO.
80 Fifth Avenue, New York
Phone, 3227 Chelsea
425 Ashland Block, Chicago
Phone, 2003 Randolph
Addressing Multigraphing
Printing -N 160 Typewriting

The Munday Building on El Paso street, El Paso, is being demolished to make way for the new "Ellanay," a motion picture theatre projected by Lewis & Andreas. The seating capacity will be in the neighborhood of 1,000.

UTAH

"The Order of the Gleam," an organization composed of twenty-seven women of the University of Utah, has started a campaign to raise $1,000 before the close of the present school year, for the purpose of erecting a new theatre on the campus. Miss Emily Higgs, president of the Gleam Club, is chairman of the Finance Committee.

WISCONSIN

The F. H. Linderbery Company contemplate the erection of a new motion picture theatre at Ellsworth in the near future.

(Music Themes—continued from page 2743)

"HONOR'S CROSS"

Theme: "Love Theme" (Dramatic) by Abbot Lee

1—"Valse Lente," by Schuette (1 minute and 15 seconds), until—T: "I went up the mountain, etc."

2—Popular Rag to action (1 minute and 20 seconds), until—T: "Marian Cabot, etc."

3—Popular Waltz to action (35 seconds), until—T: "Jeane their daughter."

4—Continue pp (1 minute and 35 seconds), until—S: Interior of factory.

5—Piano Solo, Cabaret Scene (2 minutes), until—T: "No, you don't remember!"

6—"Dramatic Recitative," by Sol P. Levy (1 minute and 45 seconds), until—T: "Well, what are you going? etc."

7—Continue ff with ad. lib. Tympany Rolls (40 seconds), until—S: After the short fight.

8—Continne pp (1 minute and 50 seconds), until—T: "Do you think McCann?"

9—Piano Solo improvise, watch action carefully (30 seconds), until—S: Woman leaves piano.

10—Theme (2 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "In the Sierras, where."

11—"Forest Whispers" (Mod. Gavotte), by Losey (40 seconds), until—T: "The Try Out."

12—Continue pp (25 seconds), until—S: Young man at piano.

13—Piano Solo improvise to action pp (15 seconds), until—S: Flashback to exterior scene.

14—Repeat "Forest Whispers" pp, by Losey (4 minutes), until—T: "On Newspaper Dist. Attorney Montgomery, etc."

15—"Romance" (Dramatic), by Karganoff (1 minute and 10 seconds), until—T: "A representative audience, etc."

16—Continue to action (50 seconds), until—S: Interior of cabaret.

17—Piano Solo improvise cabaret scene (3 minutes and 45 seconds), until—T: "If you like that kind."

18—Theme (2 minutes and 15 seconds), until—T: "What's the matter, did you?"

19—"Tragic Theme," by Paul Vely (2 minutes), until—S: Exterior of real estate office.

20—"Albumleaf" (Moderato), by Kretchmer (6 minutes), until—T: "Where can I see you to-night?"

21—"Canzonetta" (Moderato), by Nicode (2 minutes and 15 seconds), until—T: "Telegraph Hill's gangster."

22—Hurry to action (fight) (45 seconds), until—T: "District Attorney Montgomery follows, etc."

23—"Intermezzo" (Allegretto), by Pierne (1 minute and 20 seconds), until—T: "A quiet Sunday evening.

24—Hurry to action (riot scene) (1 minute), until—S: The fight.

25—Continue ff (3 minutes and 25 seconds), until—S: The girl returns home.

26—"Dramatic Tension," by Sol P. Levy (4 minutes and 50 seconds), until—T: "After the first sleep."

27—"After Sunset" (Dramatic Moderato), by Pryor (4 minutes and 15 seconds), until—T: "I'm through, Dolan."

28—Continue pp (35 seconds), until—T: "That evening the District Attorney, etc."

29—Theme (3 minutes and 20 seconds), until—T: "Far into the night, etc."

30—"Heavy Mysterioso," by Levy (50 seconds), until—T: "With avenues to decent employment."

Note—Watch Shot.

31—"L'Adieu" (12/8 Dramatic), by Favarger (5 minutes), until—T: "The following even."

32—Theme (2 minutes and 15 seconds), until—T: "She just drove off with Dolan."

33—"Dramatic Agitato," by Hough (2 minutes and 45 seconds), until—S: Girl reading letter.

34—Theme (40 seconds), until * * * * * END.

Theatres Changing Hands

ILLINOIS

Hogan and Davidson are having a sloping floor put in their Dreamland theatre at Sheridan.

Ray Lancaster has sold his interest in the Landale theatre, Carlinville, to John Devitt, and the theatre will now be under the joint management of Daley and Devitt.

The Apollo Amusement Company of Peoria has secured a ninety-nine year lease on the building located at 317 Main street, immediately adjoining the Apollo theatre on the north.

Reputation and Art Laboratories

Reputation is a structure that is never complete.

We are building ours—the work we do for you is its foundation. Therefore, every job is made perfect in order that our Reputation will stand firm.

ART LABORATORIES
Developing — Titles — Printing
316 East 48th Street
Murray Hill 6973 Edmond Kuhn, Supt.
Office
Bryant 8324 1476 Broadway

TransVerteR

You Need a Transverter

The Motor-Generator that produces perfect arcs for Picture Projection

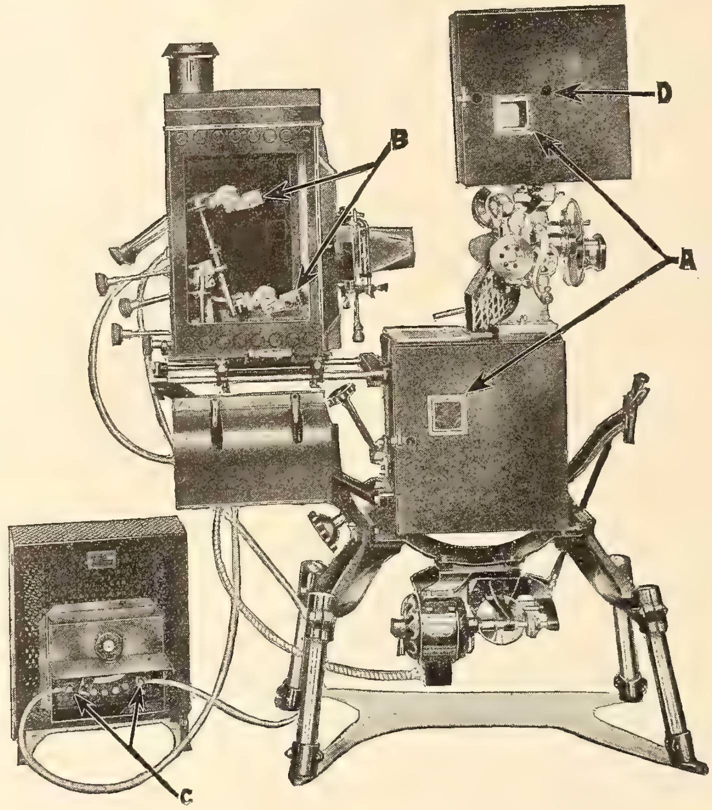
You can make a perfect dissolve with two-arc Transverter

The Hertner Electric & Mfg. Co.
1908 West 114th St., Cleveland, O.

Exclusive Canadian Distributors
PERKINS ELECTRIC CO.
Head Office: Montreal, Can.

Power's Cameragraph No. 6 B

With all latest improvements for the convenience of operation



A—Glass in Magazine Doors
B—Grip-o Carbon Holders
C—Improved Rheostat Terminals
D—Revolving Magazine Spindle with Spring Tension

Price $388.00 F. O. B. N. Y.

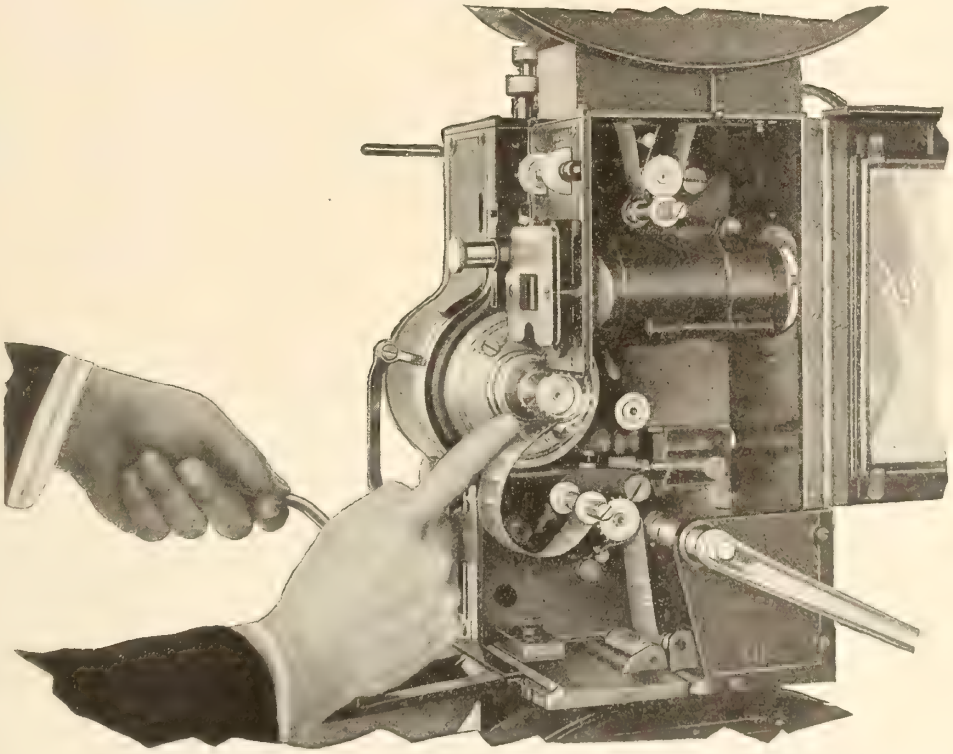
NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY
INCORPORATED
PIONEERS OF PROJECTION
90 GOLD ST. NEW YORK

Simplex

You can't put it on

When you hear others tell of the steady picture the Simplex projects, don't imagine that this is a quality we've put onto the Machine, and that it will wear off.

No. Steadiness of picture is designed and built right into the Simplex. It's a quality that stays in; and that's why it is the Machine with Permanently Perfect Projection.



The idea is simply this:

The Intermittent Sprocket is very close to the Aperture and it stays there.

This is so very important because the film is not made of a perfect material; it shrinks and undergoes changes that introduce inaccuracies. And the greater the distance between the Sprocket and the Aperture, the greater is the effect of these inaccuracies upon the position of each picture in the Aperture—upon the steadiness of the picture on the Screen.

And the Simplex is the only Projector (a patented feature) in which framing is accomplished by revolving the Intermittent Sprocket around its own center. Its distance from the Aperture does not increase in framing, but it sticks close by, and errors in the film are thereby kept off the Screen.

That isn't all. We frame the picture by turning the entire Intermittent Sprocket Oil Chamber; and your mechanical sense will tell you that such a round bearing can be made to move freely without the slightest perceptible looseness, whereas any movement in a straight line must be produced by mounting the parts loosely on rods or guides, without the possibility of a really close, shakeless fit.

There's no room here for other, less important reasons. What we have shown you will help you understand the sound mechanical reasons for the Simplex's unequaled steadiness of picture.

Designed-and-built-in qualities beat so-called "talking-points" all hollow

THE PRECISION MACHINE CO. INC.
317 East 34th: St. New York

The First National Exhibitors' Circuit contracted to pay Mr. Charles Chaplin more than a million dollars for his exclusive services; then they protected their investment by contracting with us to do all their printing and developing.

You all know that we screen-inspect every print, so you can imagine what fun we had when "A DOG'S LIFE" was sent out to make the world merrier.

And, we looked at scores of prints of that great production "TARZAN OF THE APES" and with every showing our faith in First National judgment grew stronger.

Have you seen "Alimony," "The Sign Invisible" and Mme. Petrova in "The Life Mask," "The Light Within" and "The Daughter of Destiny"?

Of Course, We Made the Prints.

Rothacker

FILM MFG. CO. CHICAGO U.S.A.

PERFECT DEVELOPING & PRINTING

There are reasons—
Come and see them.

MAY 11, 1918

Motion Picture News

Reg. in U. S. Patent Office

DOMINATES THE FIELD

LIBRARY
MAY 1918

SUCCESS
Paramount Pictures
ARTCRAFT PICTURES

Here's the Doorway to Success!

GRASP THE HANDLES, SWING OPEN THE GATES! BOOK

Paramount and Artcraft Pictures

(Nationally Advertised)

All of Them. Be a 100% Exhibitor!

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY CORPORATION
ADOLPH ZUKOR Pres. JESSE L. LASKY Vice Pres. CECIL B. DE MILLE Director General
NEW YORK

VOL. XVII-NO. 19 Entered as Second Class Matter, October 13, 1913, at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3rd, 1879 PRICE 10 CENTS

MAE MURRAY

SPECIAL PRODUCTION

"THE BRIDE'S AWAKENING"

A DRAMATIC FEAST IN LAVISH SETTINGS

BOOK THRU YOUR NEAREST UNIVERSAL EXCHANGE OR UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING CO.
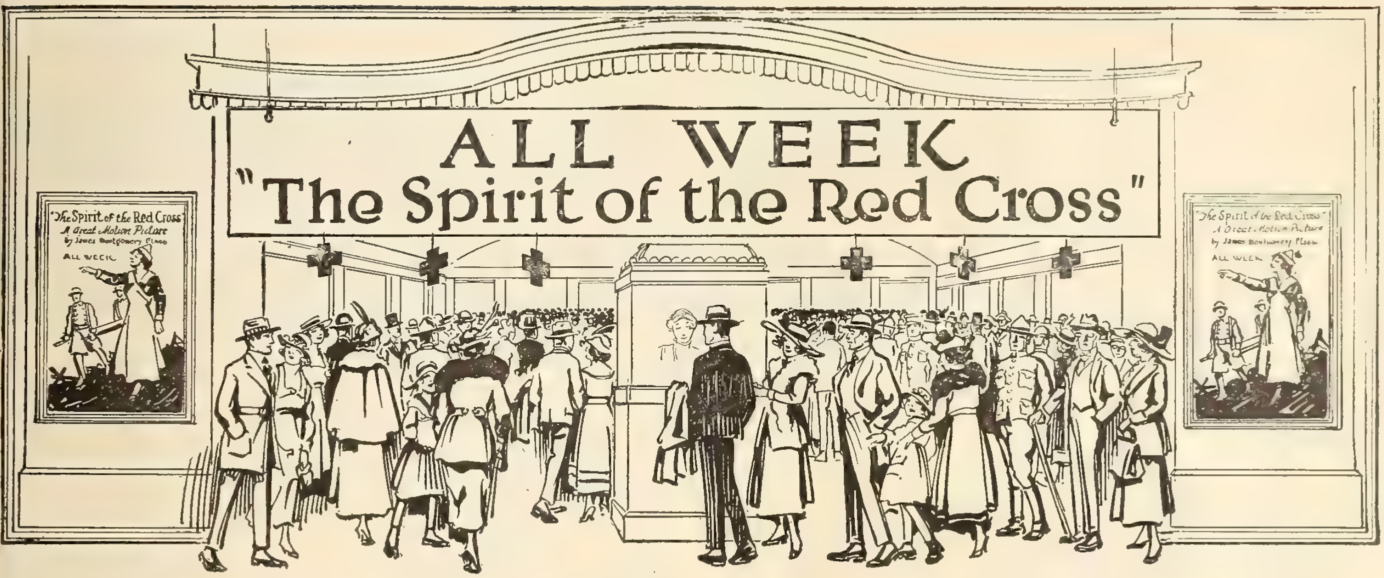
1600 BROADWAY CARL LAEMMLE PRESIDENT NEW YORK



ALL WEEK
"The Spirit of the Red Cross"
"The Spirit of the Red Cross" A Great Motion Picture by James Montgomery Flagg
ALL WEEK
"The Spirit of the Red Cross" A Great Motion Picture by James Montgomery Flagg
ALL WEEK

Put It Over Big!

Exhibitors by the thousands have rushed to book

"The Spirit of the Red Cross"

A TWO-REEL MOTION PICTURE BY

JAMES MONTGOMERY FLAGG

Produced by Jack Eaton and E. F. Warner for The American Red Cross.

NOW comes the chance to do even more than the Red Cross asks. Put this picture over big! Decorate your lobby with Red Cross posters which will be furnished free by the Red Cross Chapter in your community! Advertise the production. Give it a run longer than you ever gave any other picture! Show it early in the campaign and re-book it later on.

Prove to your patrons that you are back of the Red Cross with every ounce of energy that is in you.

"THE SPIRIT OF THE RED CROSS," RELEASED ON APRIL 28,
IS BOOKING NOW AT THE FOLLOWING EXCHANGES—

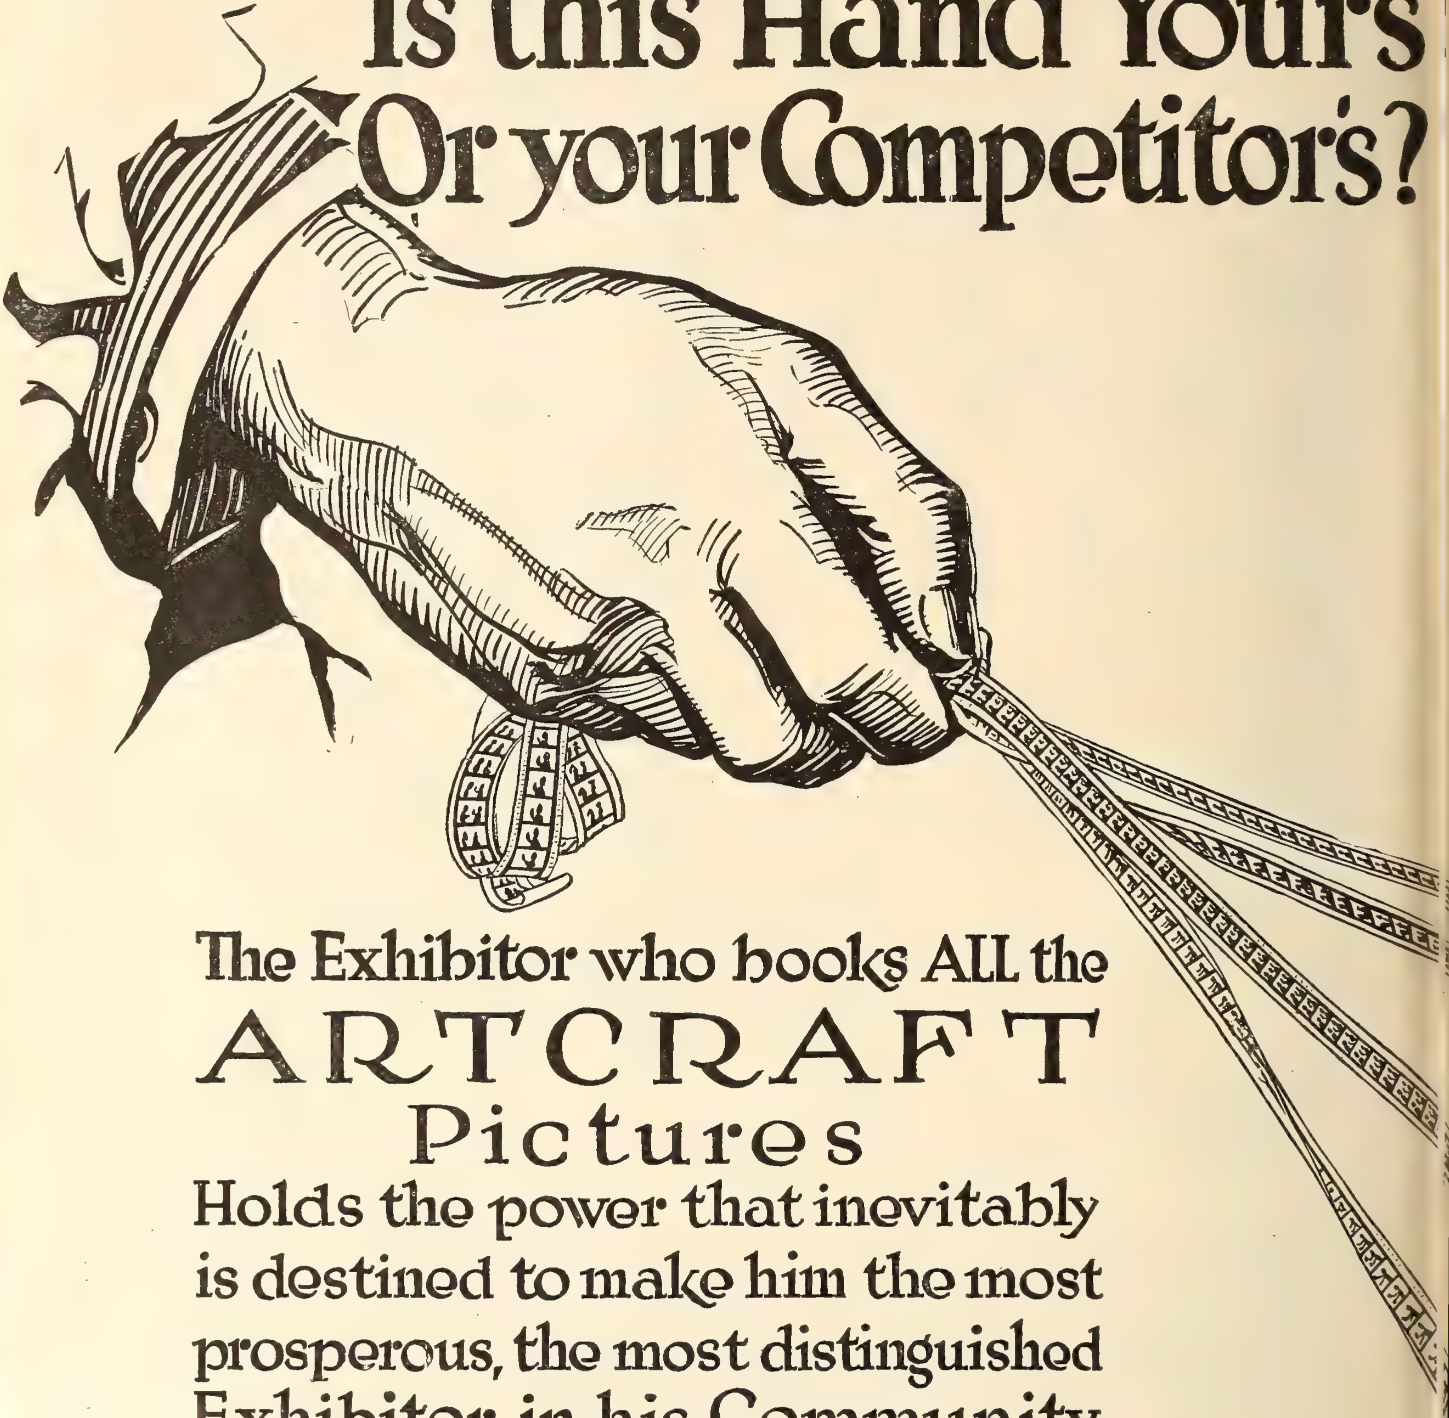
FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY CORPORATION
FOX FILM CORPORATION
GOLDWYN DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION
METRO PICTURES CORPORATION

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC.
SELECT PICTURES CORPORATION
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION
VITAGRAPH
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

(This advertising space contributed by Motion Picture News, and is acknowledged by Jesse L. Lasky, Chairman Red Cross Committee, National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.)

How can an advertiser continue advertising? By giving YOU value.

Is this Hand Yours Or your Competitor's?



The Exhibitor who books ALL the

ARTCRAFT Pictures

Holds the power that inevitably is destined to make him the most prosperous, the most distinguished Exhibitor in his Community.

TRADE MARK Paramount Pictures

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY CORPORATION
ADOLPH ZUKOR Pres. JESSE L. LASKY Vice Pres. CECIL B. DE MILLE Director General
NEW YORK

TRADE MARK ARTCRAFT PICTURES

ARTCRAFT PICTURES

Since January 1st
In order of release

January

ELSIE FERGUSON
in "Rose of the World"

WILLIAM S. HART
in "Wolves of the Rail"

MARY PICKFORD
in "Stella Maris"

February

ELSIE FERGUSON
in "The Song of Songs"

WILLIAM S. HART
in "Blue Blazes Rawden"

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS
in "Headin' South"

March

MARY PICKFORD
in "Amarilly of Clothesline Alley"

CECIL B. DeMILLE'S
"The Whispering Chorus"

Maeterlinck's
"THE BLUE BIRD"

April

WILLIAM S. HART
in "The Tiger Man"

ELSIE FERGUSON
in "The Lie"

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS
in "Mr. Fix-It"

"THE LITTLE RUNAWAY"

A Love Drama of an Irish Colleen Who Found the End of the Rainbow.

She was a little Irish lass who lived in a small thatched cottage, while he had a "Lord" in front of his name, and was master of a fine mansion.

But out in the wide meadowland where they first met, both were equal. She didn't know that he was the hated Lord Killowen, her own landlord And he never thought of the shabbiness of her frock, for all he saw was the two Irish blue eyes of her and the wind-tossed cloud of golden hair.

You Can Just Imagine What a Human, Whimsical, Money-in-the-Box-Office Drama This Will Make

FEATURING

GLADYS LESLIE and EDWARD EARLE

By PAUL
WEST

Directed by WILLIAM P·S·EARLE

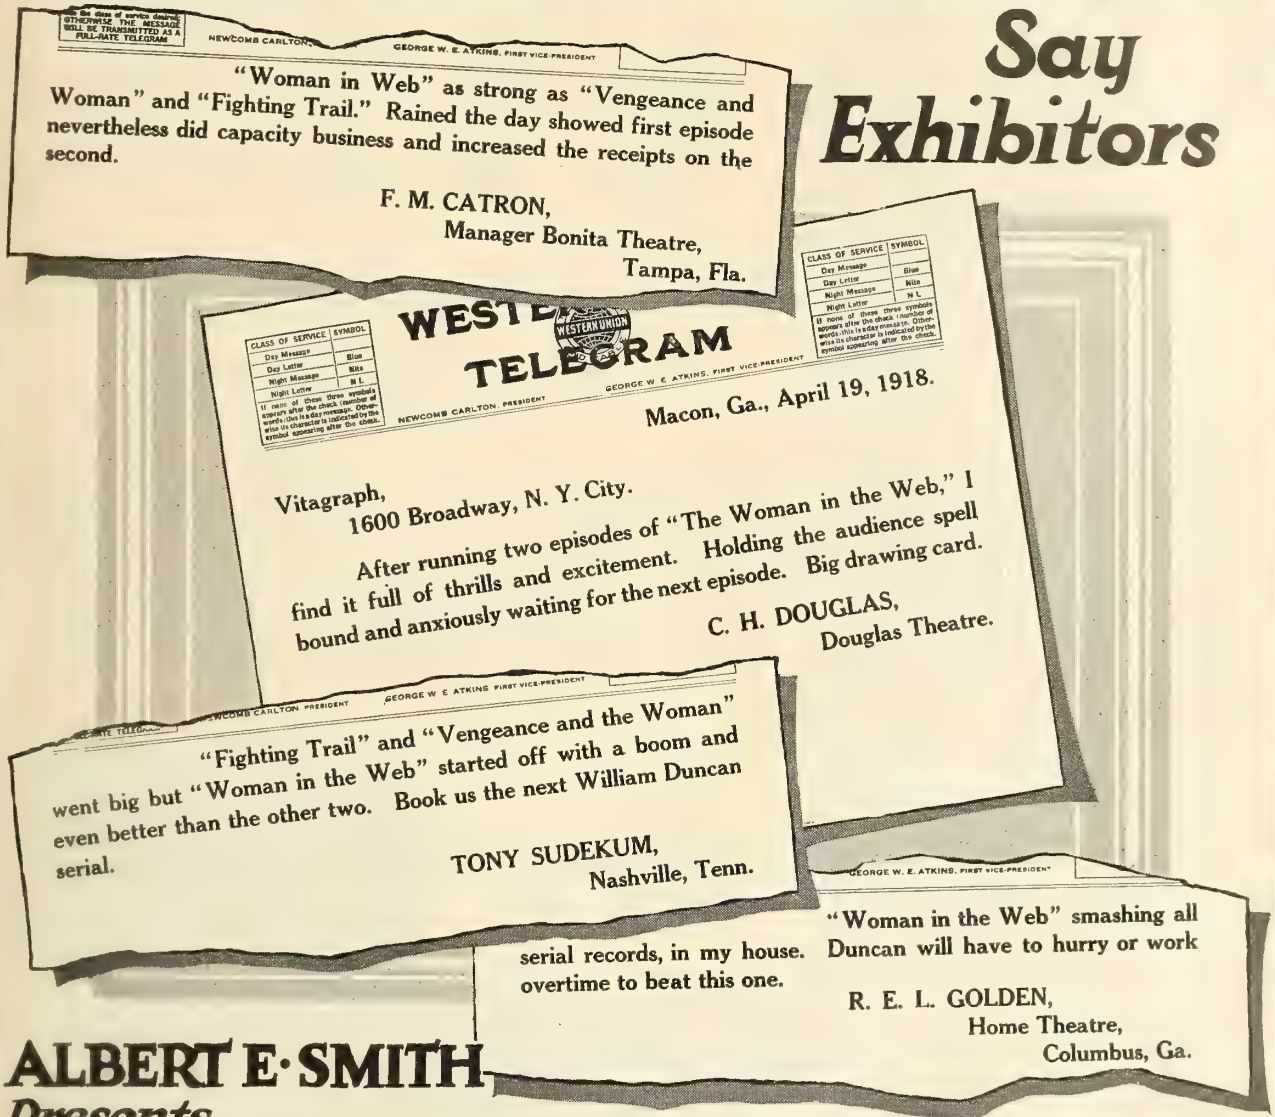
VITAGRAPH

ALBERT E. SMITH, PRESIDENT.

"Another Serial Record Breaker!" Say Exhibitors



"Woman in Web" as strong as "Vengeance and Woman" and "Fighting Trail." Rained the day showed first episode nevertheless did capacity business and increased the receipts on the second.

F. M. CATRON,
Manager Bonita Theatre,
Tampa, Fla.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAM

NEWCOMB CARLTON, PRESIDENT GEORGE W. E. ATKINS, FIRST VICE-PRESIDENT

Macon, Ga., April 19, 1918.

Vitagraph,
1600 Broadway, N. Y. City.

After running two episodes of "The Woman in the Web," I find it full of thrills and excitement. Holding the audience spell bound and anxiously waiting for the next episode. Big drawing card.

C. H. DOUGLAS,
Douglas Theatre.

"Fighting Trail" and "Vengeance and the Woman" went big but "Woman in the Web" started off with a boom and even better than the other two. Book us the next William Duncan serial.

TONY SUDEKUM,
Nashville, Tenn.

"Woman in the Web" smashing all serial records, in my house. Duncan will have to hurry or work overtime to beat this one.

R. E. L. GOLDEN,
Home Theatre,
Columbus, Ga.

ALBERT E·SMITH
Presents

Hedda Nova and J·Frank Glendon in

"THE WOMAN IN THE WEB"

VITAGRAPH'S Marvelous Photo Serial of Melodramatic Adventure

by ALBERT E·SMITH and CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY

DIRECTED by DAVID SMITH and PAUL HURST

SELECT SP PICTURES

Still forging ahead!

ALICE BRADY

in

"At the Mercy of Men"

from the scenario by Paul West
Directed by Charles Miller

Exhibitors who have seen this, Alice Brady's latest Select Picture, pronounce it the greatest production she has yet made, and predict a tremendous success for it in the box offices of the country. Have you secured your play dates?

Every Select Picture made by Alice Brady a hit! Prior releases: "Her Silent Sacrifice," "Woman and Wife" and "The Knife"

SELECT SP PICTURES
SECURE PROFITS

DISTRIBUTED BY
SELECT PICTURES CORPORATION

SELECT SP PICTURES

LEWIS J. SELZNICK presents

CONSTANCE TALMADGE

in

"Up the Road With Sallie"

from the novel by Frances Sterrett
scenario by Julia Crawford Ivers
directed by William D. Taylor

Clean as a whistle and swift as a wink!—this story of a young adventurer who sought romance with a bank-roll, and found it!

Furthering the success already attained by CONSTANCE TALMADGE in "Scandal," "The Honeymoon," "The "Studio Girl," and "The Shuttle"

SELECT SP PICTURES SECURE PROFITS

DISTRIBUTED BY
SELECT PICTURES CORPORATION
729 Seventh Avenue New York City

Goldwyn Pictures

IF WE ONLY OWNED YOUR THEATRE FOR A WEEK—

WE would want to put our enthusiasm and imagination behind the presentation of an unusual picture.

We would take MABEL NORMAND IN "JOAN OF PLATTSBURG," our newest and in many respects greatest Goldwyn Picture, and play it in your house.

We would start our musical program with "Keep the Home Fires Burning" for an overture and swing through this heart-thrilling story with patriotic music that would make every person in the audience feel that he was watching Gen. Pershing's victorious army marching triumphantly home to the music of Sousa's inspiring military bands.

There never has been a picture with such a grip on the emotions; that clutches at your heart and puts a mist before your eyes as does MABEL NORMAND IN "JOAN OF PLATTSBURG." Properly handled by resourceful showmen, it will pull audiences up in their seats cheering and shouting.

It isn't a war picture . . . It isn't a battle picture . . .
It isn't a morbid picture.

It IS a picture of Faith and Courage and Hope and Inspiration.

And at this very moment when millions of persons are perplexed and wondering, it contains the answer to the question asked by all loyal Americans: "What can I do to help my country?"

Every LIVE exhibitor with energy and imagination will clean up with Mabel Normand in "Joan of Plattsburg," by Porter Emerson Browne. Released everywhere May 5.

GOLDWYN PICTURES CORPORATION

SAMUEL GOLDFISH, President EDGAR SELWYN, Vice President
16 East 42nd Street New York City

REX BEACH PICTURES

LOS ANGELES VERDICT ON THIS REMARKABLE STORY.

LOS ANGELES TIMES: "Heart of the Sunset" has been the talk of the town all week. . . . A picture for human beings.

THE EVENING HERALD: Rex Beach did not lose his punch in switching from Alaska to Texas. "Heart of the Sunset" has kept a line standing outside Quinn's Rialto at every performance.

LOS ANGELES EXAMINER: "Heart of the Sunset" is a great production chock full of thrills. . . . Another Rex Beach hit.

LOS ANGELES TRIBUNE: This production has all the power that the public expects in a Rex Beach story.

LOS ANGELES RECORD: The one American author who always delivers a real story on the screen is Rex Beach. Further proof of this is found in "Heart of the Sunset."

REX BEACH'S

Screen Classic of the Great Southwest

HEART OF THE SUNSET

DIRECTED by FRANK POWELL

This stirring production now beginning its successful career in the larger cities—and at advanced admission prices in many—repeats the wonderful box-office feats of "The Spoilers," "The Ne'er-Do-Well," "The Barrier" and "The Auction Block." Wire now for prices and playing dates.

GOLDWYN DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION
16 East 42nd Street New York City

Book These Three Great Profit-making Pictures!

GIVE your audiences "big drama." They love it. Give them punch. They demand it. Give them thrills. They respond to them. The successful box-office pictures are those that stir people up inside. Strike at the heart, at the brain, at the emotions.

You can do all of these things with the three unusual Selexart productions now immediately available to all exhibitors under a single contract—and at fair rentals.

"Blue Blood"

HOWARD HICKMAN
in Blue Blood
By J. GRUBB ALEXANDER and FRED MYTON
DIRECTED by ELLIOTT HOWE

"Honor's Cross"

RHEA MITCHELL
in
Honor's Cross
By H. B. DANIEL
DIRECTED by WALLACE WORSLEY

RHEA MITCHELL
and
HOWARD HICKMAN
in Social Ambition
By W. E. WING
DIRECTED by WALLACE WORSLEY

"Social Ambition"

Watch the trade press reviews on these productions. You will want to play them. They are money-makers; they were made to appeal to the many instead of the few. They are well-made; finely produced and will instantly prove profitable and popular on any program. Write at once to the nearest Goldwyn office for a press sheet and announcements which will help you put these over successfully.

GOLDWYN DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION
16 East 42nd Street New York City

CAPITOL COMEDIES

"Bill's Baby"
"Birds of a Feather"
"Bill's Predicament"

HE had gambled away his girl's engagement ring, so he kidnapped a beautiful baby, entered it at a baby show, won the first cash prize, bought his sweetheart a new ring—and got in a peck of trouble.

A Real Comedy Plot

THEY pretended to love home and checkers, this newly-wedded pair. But both were birds of the night; moths that loved the flame. They played the game separately before deciding to play together.

Laughter and Lingerie

WITH the aid of a toupe he won for his bride a lovely girl who just hated the sight of bald-headed fat men. But many things happened to make him lose both his hair and his bride, as you can imagine.

Here's More Comedy

GOLDWYN invites the 16,000 exhibitors of America to try and find a regular supply of consistent, clean and clever comedies—comedies starring a real comedian; comedies that have wit and fun and plot and basic stories worth the footage they consume; comedies free of slapstick vulgarities. It is a hard task to discover them and we therefore confidently announce that

"SMILING BILL" PARSONS

in CAPITOL COMEDIES

26 a year Every Second Monday

will be a life-saver for thousands of exhibitors; a mirth-maker on programs that would be dreary and laughless. So great is the appeal of these new comedies that they have been booked at once by the great Stanley and Arcadia Theatres, Philadelphia; Miller's Theatre, Los Angeles; the Jones, Linick & Schaeffer and Ascher Bros. chains of theatres in Chicago and by hundreds of other great amusement institutions of the nation. The first "Smiling Bill" Parsons releases are:

"BILL'S BABY" Released May 5

"BILL'S PREDICAMENT" Released May 19

"BIRDS OF A FEATHER" Released June 2

These Capitol Comedies are released exclusively through the offices of Goldwyn and to get ahead of your competiton you should make application at once for prices and playing dates.

GOLDWYN DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION

16 East 42nd Street New York City

TRIANGLE

TRIANGLE
Classified A-1

TRIANGLE is a torpedo aimed at the obstacles that stand in the way of the exhibitor in this year 1918.

The most efficient men in TRIANGLE—men especially picked and trained—have eliminated thousands of dollars of waste—sums of money that would give your adding machine brain fever.

We've fought and conquered that demon " WASTE " which stands at the door of your theatre stealing your profits. Our policy has been simply common sense backed with the ideals that have made a success of every business to which they have been applied since Hector was a Pup.

Progress is often costly, and the Motion Picture Industry has paid a horrid price for her experiments. The tremendous shortage of good pictures at a fair price has brought about a demand for productions which $10,000 per week stars and enormous extravagance cannot supply.

Yesterday is a memory, this is 1918 with more working hours on the face of the clock than ever before. Honesty, good business methods and A-No. 1 service are as necessary to the Motion Picture Industry as third line trenches and shock troops in modern warfare.

An honest blunder demands no excuse. The mistakes and losses of the past are in the discard—only the future counts. Don't let failure repeat itself.

TRIANGLE is a mighty force by which a new and better Motion Picture Service is being developed that is bound to help that theatre of yours CASH IN.

Hold the throttle—Watch the gauge and signals or there'll be a wreck, and you'll be in it.

There's an Exchangeman near you who can take the name of your Theatre and the letters TRIANGLE and spell SUCCESS with them. See him.

TRIANGLE DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION

1457 BROADWAY :: :: NEW YORK

50 cities

are following the lead of successful exhibitors in booking for week runs the greatest opportunity now before the picture theatres of America.

WILLIAM L. SHERRILL'S

MY OWN UNITED STATES

with Mr. Arnold Daly

Opens the new Brevoort in Brooklyn with a run
Opens the Park Theatre Indianapolis with a run
Opens the Playhouse in Chicago with a run
Week runs Alhambra, Toledo-Casino, Washington and the bookings are rolling in.

It will make your theatre the Big attraction centre in your neighborhood

SCREEN CLASSICS INC.

Metro Pictures Corporation, Distributors.

Now ready for booking

Biggest advertised personalities in America.

Every Household talks of them, every Magazine writes of them

The DOLLY SISTERS

in

The MILLION DOLLAR DOLLIES

A drama of romance, beauty and power.

Will pack your house to the very door

Directed by Leonce Perret
Made by Emerald

A SCREEN CLASSICS INC. production

Metro Pictures Corporation - Distributors -

Metro Pictures Corporation presents

VIOLA DANA

A new and wonderful success production written and directed by John H. Collins.

RIDERS of the NIGHT

5 Acts of Dana delightfulness and strength

Released by METRO APRIL 29th

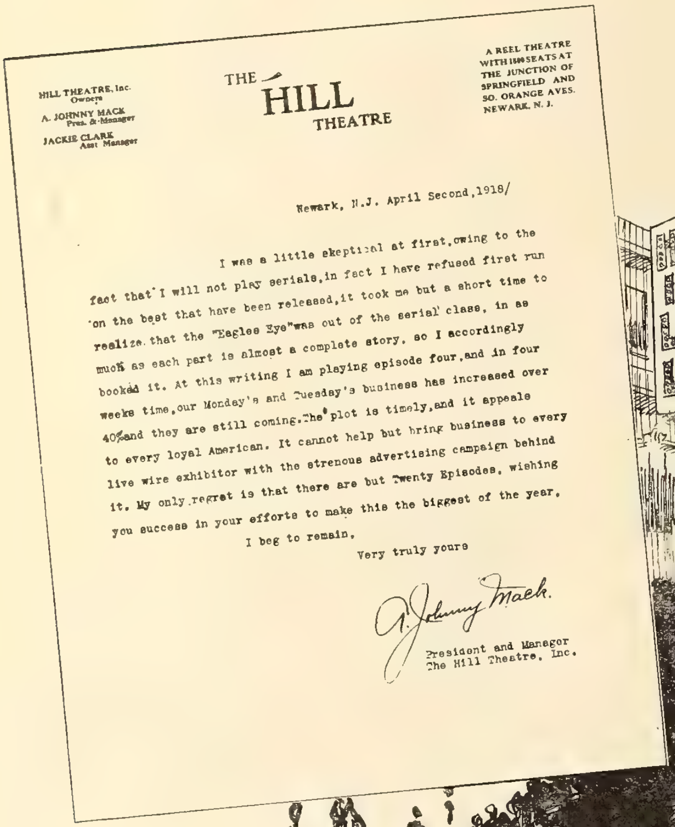
OUR MONDAY AND TUESDAY BUSINESS INCREASED OVER 40% WITH "THE EAGLE'S EYE"



HILL THEATRE, Inc.
Owners
A. JOHNNY MACK
Pres. & Manager
JACKIE CLARK
Asst Manager

THE HILL THEATRE

A REEL THEATRE
WITH 1800 SEATS AT
THE JUNCTION OF SPRINGFIELD AND
SO. ORANGE AVES.
NEWARK, N. J.

Newark, N.J. April Second, 1918/

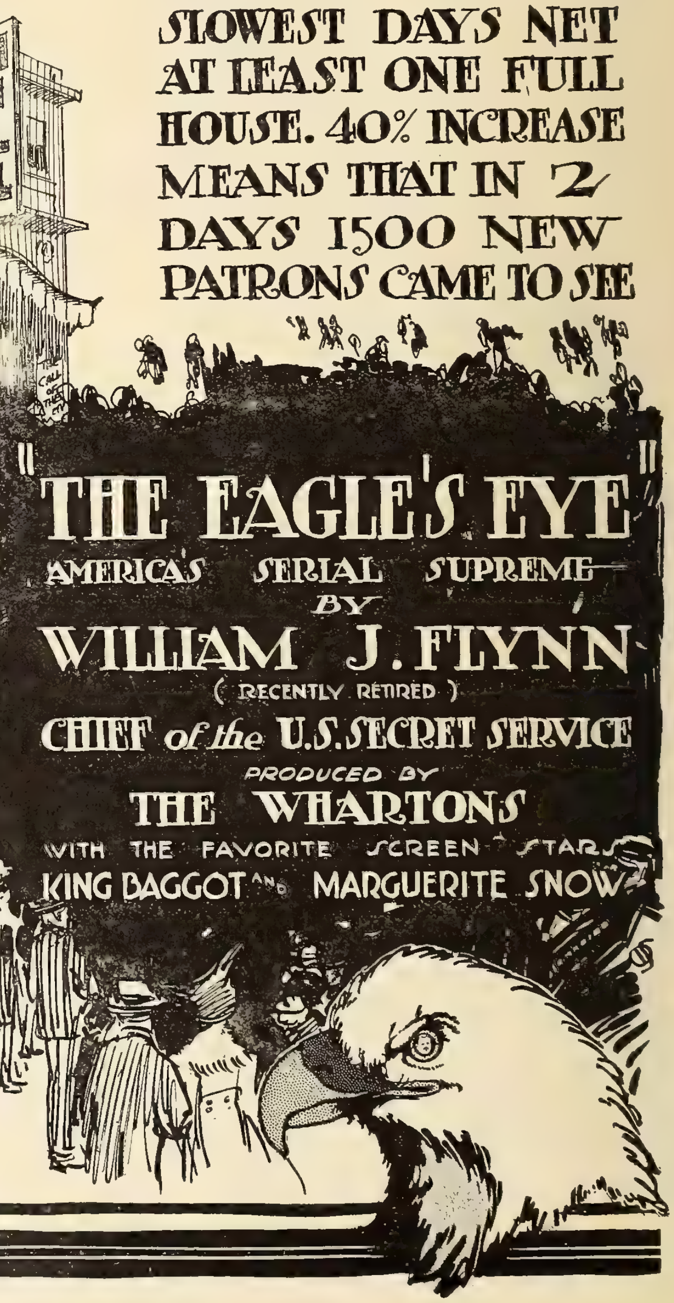
I was a little skeptical at first, owing to the fact that I will not play serials, in fact I have refused first run on the best that have been released, it took me but a short time to realize that the "Eagles Eye" was out of the serial class, in as much as each part is almost a complete story, so I accordingly booked it. At this writing I am playing episode four, and in four weeks time, our Monday's and Tuesday's business has increased over 40% and they are still coming. The plot is timely, and it appeals to every loyal American. It cannot help but bring business to every live wire exhibitor with the strenuous advertising campaign behind it. My only regret is that there are but Twenty Episodes, wishing you success in your efforts to make this the biggest of the year.

I beg to remain,

Very truly yours

A. Johnny Mack.

President and Manager
The Hill Theatre, Inc.



THE HILL THEATRE SEATS 1800. MR. MACK'S SLOWEST DAYS NET AT LEAST ONE FULL HOUSE. 40% INCREASE MEANS THAT IN 2 DAYS 1500 NEW PATRONS CAME TO SEE

"THE EAGLE'S EYE"

AMERICA'S SERIAL SUPREME

BY

WILLIAM J. FLYNN

(RECENTLY RETIRED)

CHIEF of the U.S. SECRET SERVICE

PRODUCED BY

THE WHARTONS

WITH THE FAVORITE SCREEN STARS

KING BAGGOT AND MARGUERITE SNOW

BOOK

THROUGH YOUR NEAREST

FOURSQUARE EXCHANGE

Foreign Rights Controlled by ARROW FILM CORP. N.Y.C.

For Further Information Address
THE WHARTONS Publicity & Supply Dept.
1476 Broadway - - New York

Lovely

MARY MILES MINTER

in

"Social Briars"

—Beauty and innocence put one over

Produced by AMERICAN FILM COMPANY, INC.

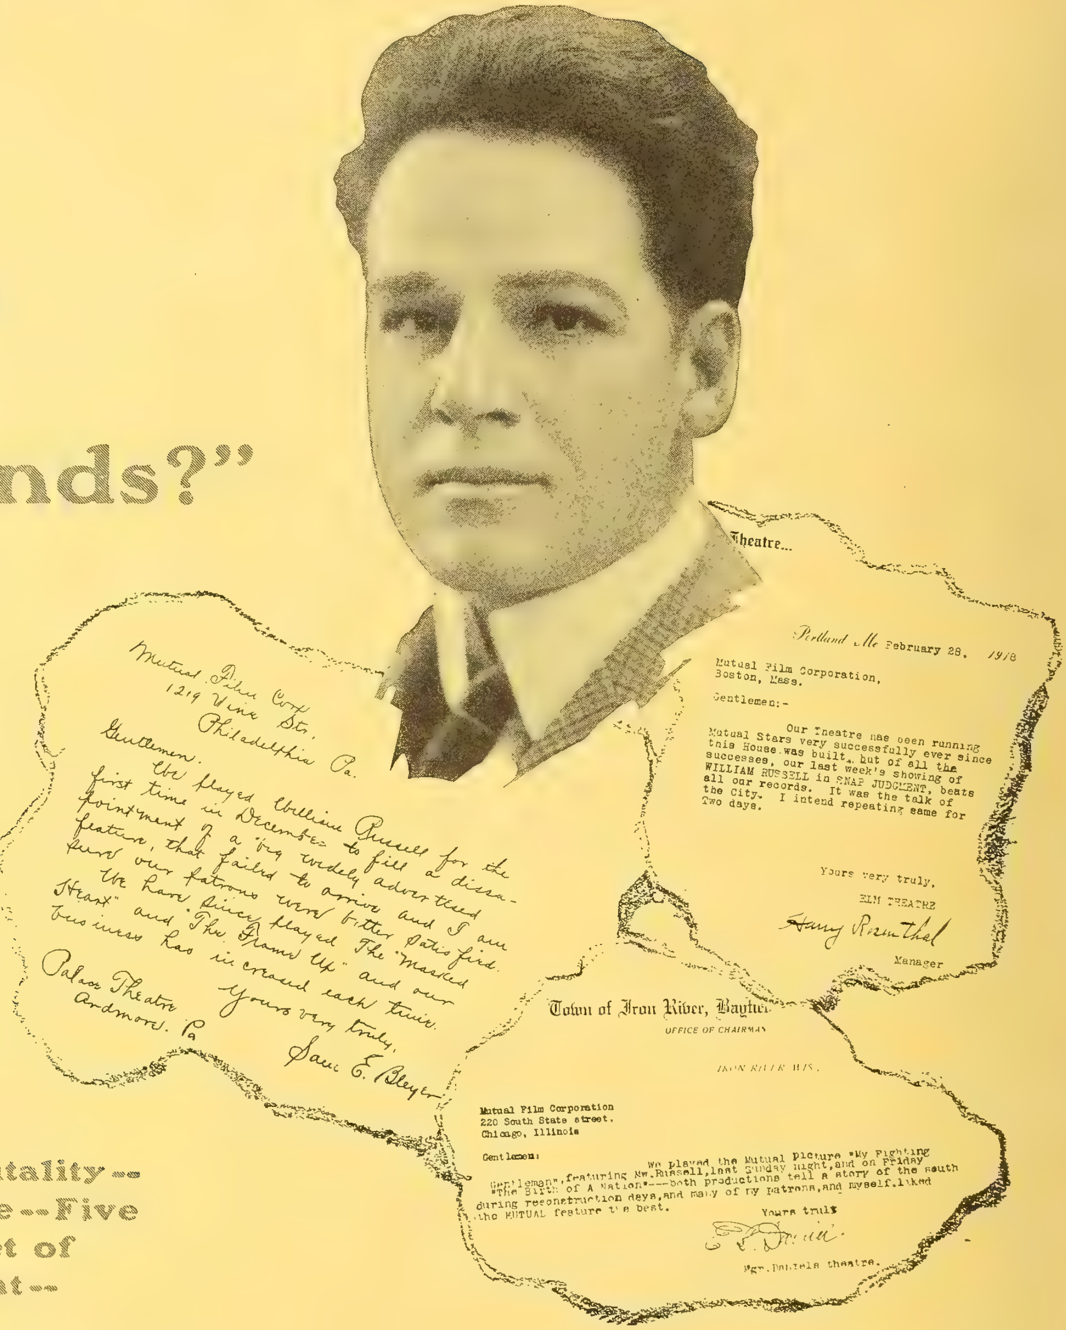
Available May 6 at

PROFITS IN RUSSELL—

Keen exhibitors everywhere are playing William Russell productions to consistent and certain profits.

"Hearts or Diamonds?"



Mutual Film Corp.
1219 Vine Str.
Philadelphia Pa.

Gentlemen.

We played William Russell for the first time in December to fill a disappointment of a "big widely advertised feature, that failed to arrive and I am sure our patrons were better satisfied.

We have since played The "Masked Heart" and "The Frame Up" and our business has increased each time.

Yours very truly,
Sam E. Bleyer

Palace Theatre
Ardmore. Pa

Theatre...

Portland Me February 28. 1918

Mutual Film Corporation,
Boston, Mass.

Gentlemen:-

Our Theatre has been running Mutual Stars very successfully ever since this House was built, but of all the successes, our last week's showing of WILLIAM RUSSELL in SNAP JUDGMENT, beats all our records. It was the talk of the City. I intend repeating same for Two days.

Yours very truly,
ELM THEATRE
Harry Rosenthal
Manager

Town of Iron River, Bayfiel

OFFICE OF CHAIRMAN

IRON RIVER WIS.

Mutual Film Corporation
220 South State street.
Chicago, Illinois

Gentlemen:

We played the Mutual picture "My Fighting Gentleman", featuring Mr. Russell, last Sunday night, and on Friday "The Birth of A Nation"---both productions tell a story of the south during reconstruction days, and many of my patrons, and myself, liked the MUTUAL feature the best.

Yours truly
Mgr. Daniels theatre.

Alive with vitality—Action galore—Five thousand feet of entertainment—Story by William Hamilton Osborne—Directed by Henry King.

Produced by
WILLIAM RUSSELL PRODUCTIONS, INC.

Available April 29 at MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION EXCHANGES

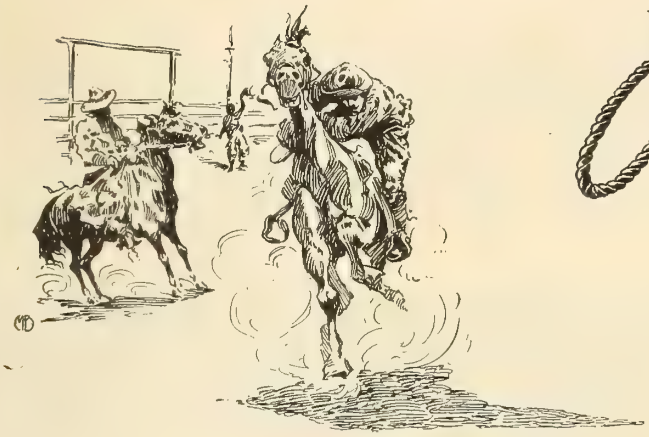
GENERAL FILM COMPANY



Rancho

DRAMAS

The Man's West of the Plateau and the Rockies

Here's a new two-reel series that gives every theatre a chance to satisfy that ever-present public demand!

LIVE STUFF WITH THE OZONE TANG

RIDING THRILLS

RESCUES

ROPING STUNTS

BANDITS HEROES

DARING LASSES

NOVEL SITUATIONS

Note: Release dates of RANCHO Dramas are arranged to alternate every other week with other General Film western releases, giving a regular and reliable advance booking schedule.

Produced by NATIONAL FILM CORPORATION Denver

Distributed Exclusively by General Film Company
25 West 44th Street, New York City

How can an advertiser continue advertising? By giving YOU value.

GENERAL FILM COMPANY

A Consistent Product

CLOVER COMEDIES

Bud Duncan Dot Farley Kewpie Morgan

Here is something you can tie to. There is never a disappointment in CLOVER Comedies—the one-reel prime ingredient of a good house program.

The Wooing of Coffee Cake Kate
Rip Roaring Rivals
By Heck, I'll Save Her

A Widow's Camouflage
Love's Lucky Day
Oh, the Women!

He Couldn't Fool His Wife
The Paper Hanger's Revenge
From Caterpillar to Butterfly

One Every Week—Rain or Shine

Tried and Proven Favorites of the Comedy Screen—Bud Duncan, Diminutive and Droll—Dot Farley, the Versatile and Magnetic—Kewpie Morgan, Big as a Barn and Rompish as a Colt.

Produced by NATIONAL FILM CORPORATION, Denver
Distributed Exclusively by General Film Company
25 West 44th Street, New York City

GENERAL FILM COMPANY

THE THRILL SERIAL FOR PATRIOTIC AUDIENCES

A DAUGHTER of UNCLE SAM

with

JANE VANCE

and

William Sorelle

The Spy Expose Serial of the Great War at Home

- A Serial of One-Reel Episodes
- A Serial of Condensed Action
- A Serial of Twelve Episodes
- A Serial of American Appeal
- A Serial That is Timely
- A Serial Fitting Any Program
- A Serial with a Magnetic Star
- A Serial with a Soldier Hero

The Sensible Serial

Produced by JAXON FILM CORPORATION, New York

Distributed by General Film Company, New York

Thirty Exchanges

How can an advertiser continue advertising? By giving YOU value.

GENERAL FILM COMPANY

EBONY COMEDIES

Real Colored Players

Here is the laugh irresistible—Here are pictures with the spontaneous negro mirth predominant—Here is the big novelty card of 1918 for the movie audiences.

BOOK THE SERIES

One a Week

You insure your patronage a real A1 attraction—the Black-Face Act Diverted to the Silent Drama.

A Black Sherlock Holmes

Spying the Spy

The Porters

A Milk Fed Hero

A Busted Romance

Spooks

and more coming

Produced by EBONY FILM CORPORATION Chicago

Distributed by General Film Company, New York

Thirty Exchanges

GENERAL FILM COMPANY

WOLFVILLE TALES

by ALFRED HENRY LEWIS

Western Stories from a Powerful Pen, Full of Native American Vigor, Their Eloquence and Appeal Interpreted upon the Screen

A GOLD MINE FOR THE PICTURE HOUSE!

Important Announcement

Beginning with the release of May 4, a WOLFVILLE TALE by Alfred Henry Lewis will alternate with an O. Henry Story in the Broadway Star Feature offerings, thus providing a high-grade weekly selection of picturized American literature in popular two-reel form.

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES

Distributed Exclusively by General Film Company,
25 West 44th Street, New York City

GENERAL FILM COMPANY

More Praise for Judge Brown Stories:

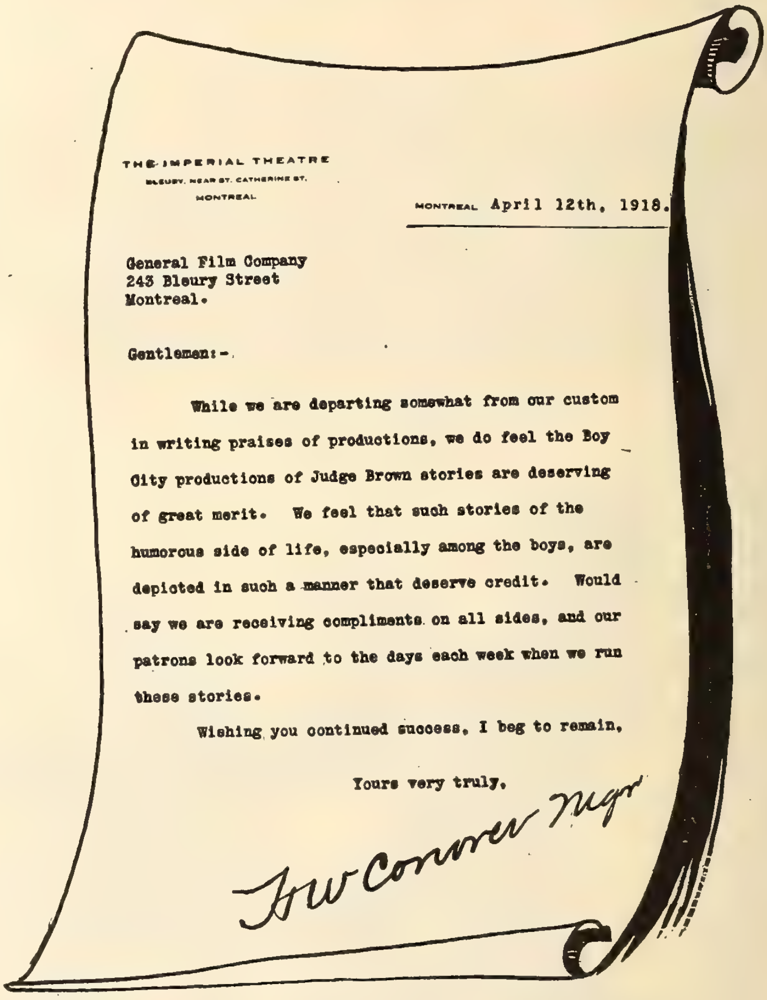
This time from H. W. Conover of the Imperial Theatre, Montreal

It is what one big exhibitor writes, obeying that impulse to yield commendation where commendation is due!

⁂

WHY DO THEY PRAISE JUDGE BROWN STORIES?

It is because they are the Goods. They make the box office receipts jump. They bring people back to see more of them. They are splendid little gems of human playfulness and heart interest.



THE IMPERIAL THEATRE
BLEURY, NEAR ST. CATHERINE ST.
MONTREAL

MONTREAL April 12th, 1918.

General Film Company
243 Bleury Street
Montreal.

Gentlemen:-

While we are departing somewhat from our custom in writing praises of productions, we do feel the Boy City productions of Judge Brown stories are deserving of great merit. We feel that such stories of the humorous side of life, especially among the boys, are depicted in such a manner that deserve credit. Would say we are receiving compliments on all sides, and our patrons look forward to the days each week when we run these stories.

Wishing you continued success, I beg to remain,

Yours very truly,

H W Conover Mgr

Have you shown the two great patriotic Judge Brown Stories, "Bud's Recruit" and "I'm a Man"? Have you shown the one about the old swimming hole? The one about a little colored boy who tried to join the white boys' gang? The one about stealing milk to save sick babies? The one about three boys who ran away and as punishment had to boss their homes for a whole week? The one about the preacher's son who put "pep" into his dad? And the half dozen others that rock you with laughter? If not, DO IT NOW.

Produced by BOY CITY FILM CORPORATION Culver City, Cal.

Distributed Exclusively by General Film Company,
25 West 44th Street, New York City

Be sure to mention "MOTION PICTURE NEWS" when writing to advertisers

TRADE ANNOUNCEMENT

To the Exhibitors of the United States and Canada

AT the Hotel Astor, April 8-9-10, representative exhibitors and producers met, discussed and considered the question of co-operative booking and distribution of pictures.

The undersigned were constituted a permanent committee of exhibitors to perfect a national organization of exhibitor booking associations, with these fundamental principles in mind:

1—To insure EXHIBITOR MANAGEMENT and CONTROL in very fact, as well as promise.

2—To in no way disturb existing booking organizations, but rather to encourage them.

3—To keep the capital of each association in its OWN depository, and under its OWN control.

4—To maintain all the benefits of "Open Booking," and at the same time, provide a CONSISTENT and DEPENDABLE schedule of releases.

5—To secure, not only ALL the concessions in rental prices which the combined buying power of exhibitors will earn, but the MAJOR SHARE of all excess profits as well.

6—To distribute the cost of all productions on a fair and business basis to each booking association, and to every member of such an association.

7—To regulate expenditures, according to sound business methods and to protect exhibitors against excessive salaries, extravagant advertising and pretentious executive offices.

8—To arrange, on behalf of the booking associations, now existing, and such others as shall be formed, for an affiliation with a national, or central clearing house, upon terms that are JUST and EQUITABLE to all concerned.

In accordance with these principles, and in co-operation with substantial business interests, not heretofore associated with the film industry, the committee has perfected arrangements for an affiliation of exhibitors' co-operative booking associations, for operation on a national scale, to be known as the AFFILIATED DISTRIBUTORS CORPORATION.

The committee invites the co-operation of booking associations, now formed, in the furtherance of its efforts, and solicits the opportunity to work with exhibitors in territories not yet organized into booking associations. Exhibitor organizers are available without expense.

An announcement of the associations which have aligned themselves with this movement, together with further details of its operating plans, will be made next week. These plans will be found to be strictly constructive—not destructive.

Interested exhibitors would do well to preserve this, and subsequent announcements, as the advertising expenditure, like all other operating charges, will be limited, in keeping with the determination to conserve the profits of the organization FOR THE EXHIBITOR.

CHARLES C. PETTIJOHN
General Counsel for Committee

SYDNEY COHEN, Pres., M. P. E. L. of N. Y. State, Chairman
BYRON PARK, Salt Lake City, Secretary.
JOSEPH HOPP, Nat'l Vice-Pres., M. P. E. L. of America.
LOUIS FRANK, Director, A. E. A. for Illinois.
FRANK REMBUSCH, Nat'l Sec'y & Treas., A. E. A.
JOHN MANHEIMER, Pres., Manhattan Local, M. P. E. L.
KING PERRY, Sec'y., A. E. A. for Mich.

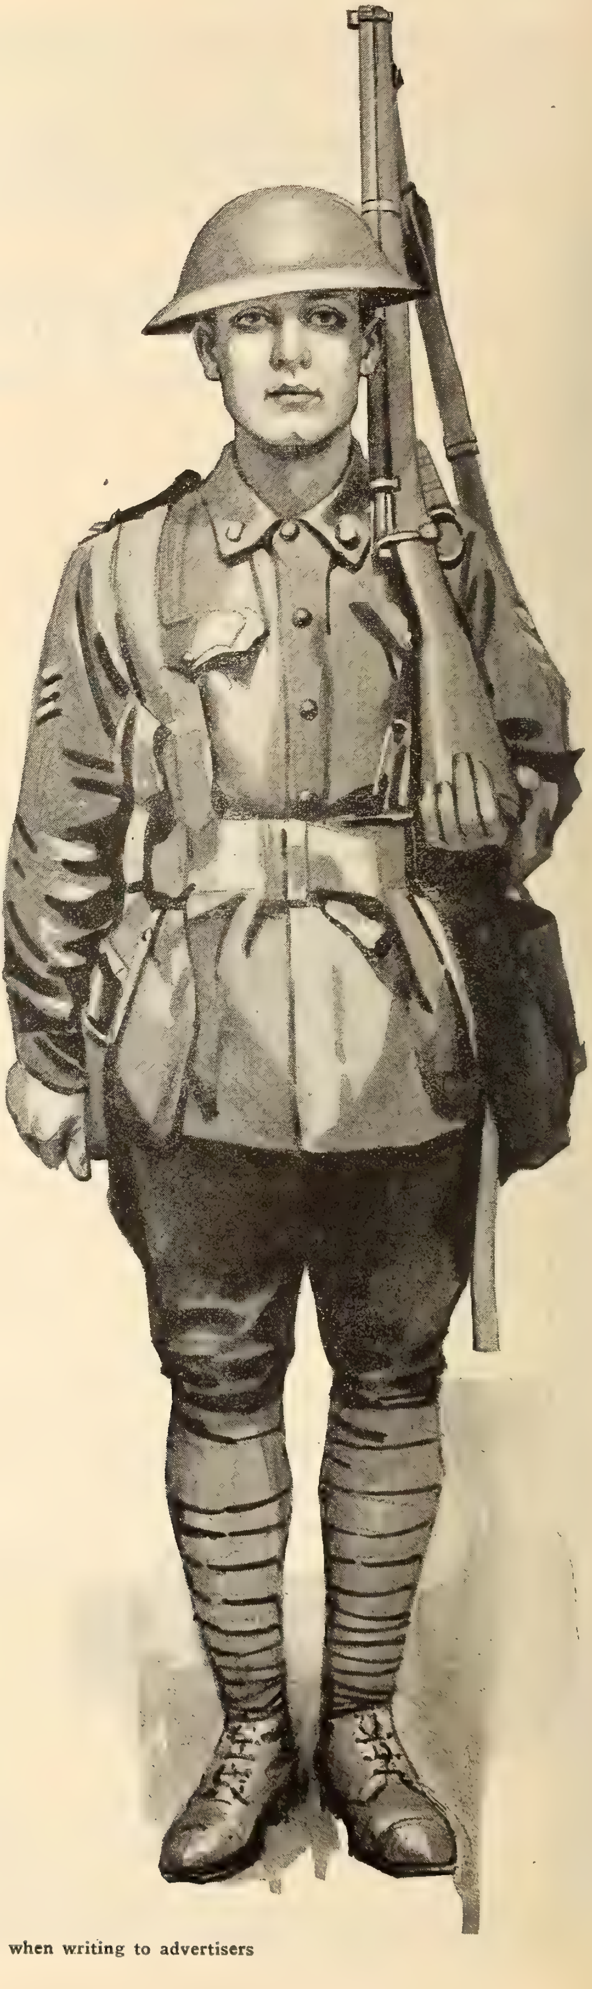
AFFILIATED DISTRIBUTORS CORP.

527 FIFTH AVENUE - - - NEW YORK

BRITAIN'S BULWARKS

12 One reel Pictures Released One A Week Beginning May 12th



Official Government Pictures showing every phase of the Army and Navy which have done so much to keep the Mad Wolves of the Universe from America's shores.

Always Instructive, Always Entertaining. Your Audiences will appreciate them.

Pathé

New York, Boston, everywhere, successful exhibitors agree on the tremendous drawing power of

PEARL WHITE
AND ANTONIO MORENO
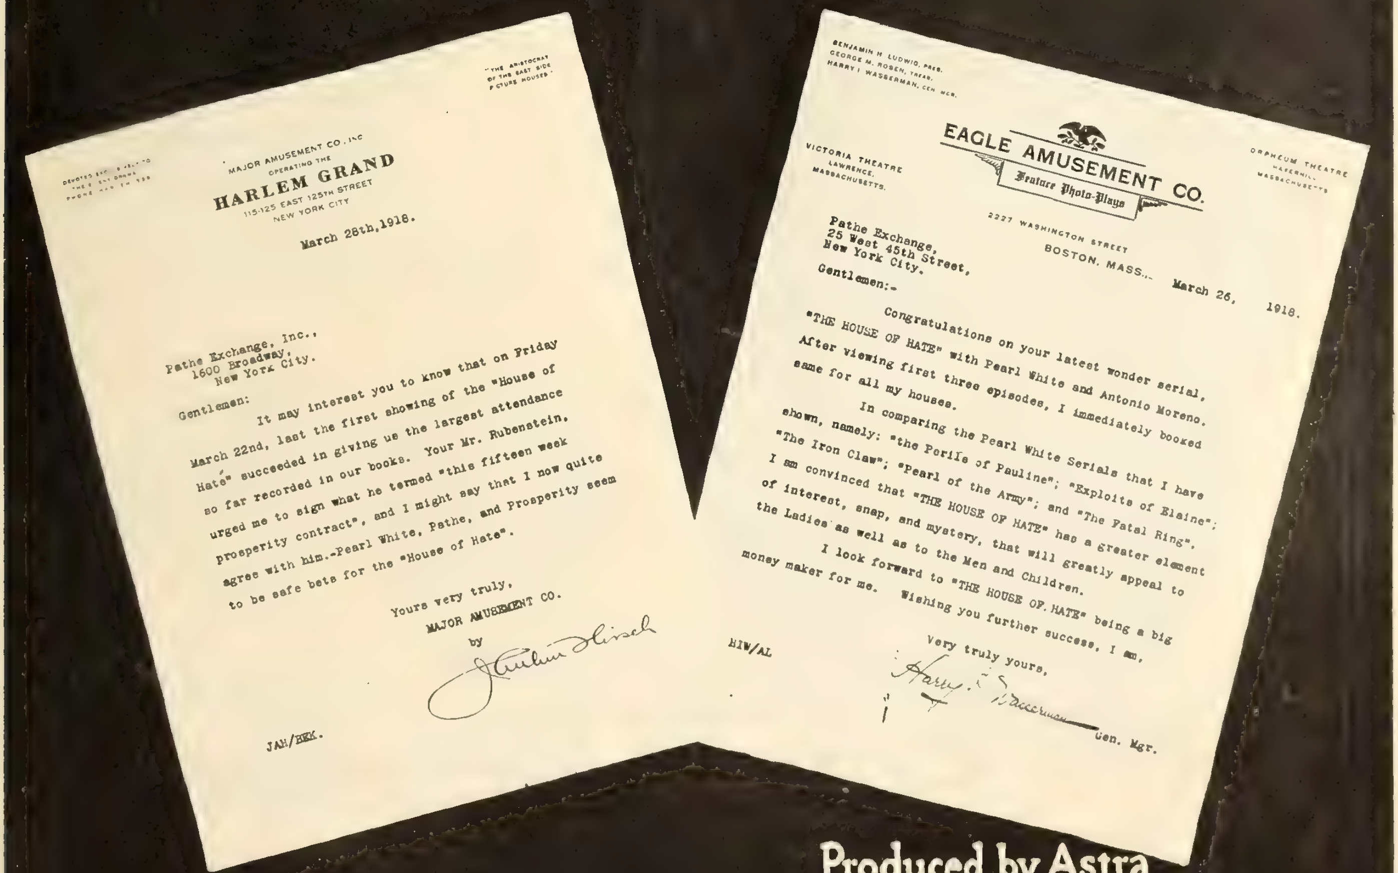
in the sensational serial
THE HOUSE OF HATE



"THE ARISTOCRAT OF THE EAST SIDE PICTURE HOUSES."

MAJOR AMUSEMENT CO., INC.
OPERATING THE HARLEM GRAND
115-125 EAST 125TH STREET
NEW YORK CITY

March 28th, 1918.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.,
1600 Broadway,
New York City.

Gentlemen:

It may interest you to know that on Friday March 22nd, last the first showing of the "House of Hate" succeeded in giving us the largest attendance so far recorded in our books. Your Mr. Rubenstein, urged me to sign what he termed "this fifteen week prosperity contract", and I might say that I now quite agree with him.-Pearl White, Pathe, and Prosperity seem to be safe bets for the "House of Hate".

Yours very truly,
MAJOR AMUSEMENT CO.
by
J. Arthur Hirsch

JAH/BEK.

BENJAMIN H. LUDWIG, PRES.
GEORGE M. ROSEN, TREAS.
HARRY I. WASSERMAN, GEN. MGR.

EAGLE AMUSEMENT CO.
Feature Photo-Plays

VICTORIA THEATRE
LAWRENCE,
MASSACHUSETTS.

ORPHEUM THEATRE
HAVERHILL,
MASSACHUSETTS

2227 WASHINGTON STREET
BOSTON, MASS., March 26, 1918.

Pathe Exchange,
25 West 45th Street,
New York City.

Gentlemen:-

Congratulations on your latest wonder serial, "THE HOUSE OF HATE" with Pearl White and Antonio Moreno. After viewing first three episodes, I immediately booked same for all my houses.

In comparing the Pearl White Serials that I have shown, namely: "the Perils of Pauline"; "Exploits of Elaine"; "The Iron Claw"; "Pearl of the Army"; and "The Fatal Ring". I am convinced that "THE HOUSE OF HATE" has a greater element of interest, snap, and mystery, that will greatly appeal to the Ladies as well as to the Men and Children.

I look forward to "THE HOUSE OF HATE" being a big money maker for me. Wishing you further success, I am,

Very truly yours,
Harry I. Wasserman
Gen. Mgr.

HIW/AL

Produced by Astra
Directed by Geo. B. Seitz
Written by Arthur B. Reeve and Chas. A. Logue
Scenarios by B. Millhauser

WORLD-PICTURES

AFTER TWO

MARIE DRESSLER

ANNOUNCEMENT

For two years we have studied the comedy field—studied your needs, the wants of your patrons—and comedies for box-office value.

Tests, investigations, surveys, took time—only the right comedies, starring the right

NOW READY—
Marie Dressler, star of "Tillie's Punctured Romance," "Tillie Wakes Up," etc.,
in
"FIRED"
and
"AGONIES OF AGNES."

SEE THEM—Ask your nearest branch for a private showing of these two series of comedies now!

YEARS' SEARCH

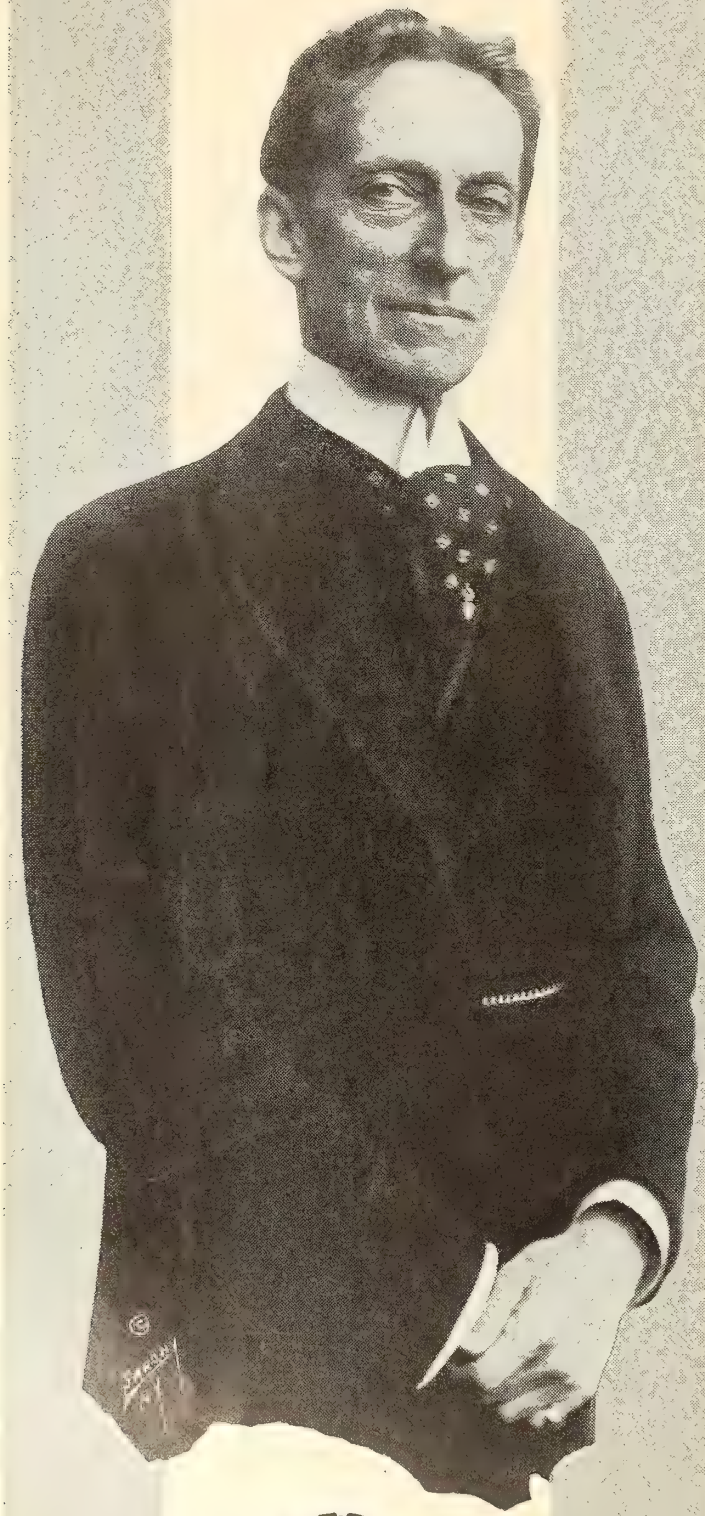
personalities, would do. We combed the market and secured the irresistible Marie Dressler and the fascinating Fay Tincher — different in type, different in personality, but each with a series of two-reel productions PAR EXCELLENCE.

WORLD-PICTURES

FAY TINCHER

NOW READY—
Fay Tincher, the hit of "Don Quixote," "Bedelia's Bluff," etc., etc.,
in
"MAIN 1—2—3"
and
"SOME JOB."

SEE THEM—Ask your nearest branch for a private showing of these two series of comedies now!



A
"FIRST NATIONAL"
ATTRACTION

Your Patrons will all want to see this

HERBERT BRENON

Presents

Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson

in the beloved classic

"Passing of the Third Floor Back"

You and they know it to be one of the most appealing of entertainments

Any First National Exhibitors' Circuit Exchange

Ambassador James W. Gerard's

"My Four Years in Germany"

at the Regent, Paterson, N. J., Week of April 15th

A. M. Fabian of the Regent, to whom we are indebted for permission to publish his receipts

Fabian says his receipts increased every day

Here are the Figures including War Tax

Opened Mon. Apr. 15 to	$840.92
Tues. Apr. 16	$1012.62
Wed. Apr. 17	$1219.06
Thurs. Apr. 18	$1375.16
Fri. Apr. 19	$1625.66
Sat. Apr. 20	$2027.50
Total on the Six Days	$8100.92

Mr. Fabian has booked a return season of six days, to open just a week later

The People Want it, NOW!

Never was a film which received such enthusiastic newspaper support. The Government and patriotic bodies are solidly behind it.

A "FIRST NATIONAL"
ATTRACTION

FIRST NATIONAL EXHIBITORS CIRCUIT

Produced by Mark M. Dintenfass and Harry M. Warner. Directed by William Nigh. Scenario by Chas. A. Logue.

Wire any First National Exhibitors' Circuit Exchange

How can an advertiser continue advertising? By giving YOU value.

$5.00 a Seat

Do you know that people are actually paying as high as $5.00 a seat, night in and night out, at the 44th Street Theatre, New York City, to see

D. W. Griffith's

SUPREME

Not one night, not for one seat, but time and again patrons who were unable to secure tickets to see Mr. Griffith's masterpiece, have voluntarily paid as high as $5.00, the excessive price demanded for choice seats by ticket speculators and ticket brokers who realized in advance the wonderful success of "Hearts of the World,"

Never in the history of motion pictures has anything
Mr. Griffith's latest and greatest achievement, turn

All records in the history of the Motion Picture business have been shattered to smithereens by the sensational success of Mr. Griffith's great triumph. Greater success than even "The Birth of a Nation."

Box Office Statements Sworn to Before

READ THIS GLOWING PRAISE FROM NEW YORK CRITICS:

New York World (Charles Darnton)

"Hearts of the World" is more than a picture play. It is a world drama—it goes straight to the hearts. It is this human quality that makes "Hearts of the World" as big as mankind.

New York Tribune (Harriett Underhill)

New Griffith picture scores great success. Every character in the play is real. There was not a jarring note in the whole performance.

New York Sun (Laurence Reamer)

"Hearts of the World" setting of a love story. Dramatizes war as memorably as Emile Zola's story, "The Attack on the Mill."

New York Times

War vividly seen in Griffith film. A story that quickly stirs the emotions.

New York American (Victor Watson)

"Hearts of the World" another Griffith triumph. A story more vital than "The Birth of a Nation." Last night's audience was spellbound. It is a monster success.

New York Globe (Louis Sherwin)

Griffith's latest a great picture. There is more thrill, more action, more fine photography, more beautiful scenes, more magnificent acting and more reality than you will get in a dozen so-called feature pictures.

New York Telegram (R. G. Welch)

"Hearts of the World" is more than a masterpiece. It is an inspiration. Scenes of outdoor life that have the atmosphere of great painted canvases. Realistic to the last degree.

Propositions for certain State Rights of D. W. Griffith's supreme triumph "Hearts of the World" will now be received and considered. Address all communications to Wm. Elliott, F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest, Mgrs., Century Theatre, New York City

D. W. Griffith's

"Hearts of the World"

TRIUMPH

$6,893.75

more than the famous receipts of "The Birth of a Nation" during six weeks run in Los Angeles. That is the recordof D.W.Griffith's "Hearts of the World."

"Caruso Night" at the famous Metropolitan Opera House never drew bigger crowds than those clamoring night after night to see "Hearts of the World."

created such an absolute and complete sensation as ing thousands of people away at every performance

These records, which cannot be tampered with, show the gigantic and amazing receipts of "Hearts of the World" during the past four weeks at the 44th St. Theatre, New York, during the past six weeks at the Auditorium in Los Angeles, and last week in Boston.

United States Government Officials

SENSATIONAL SUCCESS DUPLICATED IN BOSTON:

Charles S. Howard, in the Boston Globe

" 'Hearts of the World' amazing in art and realism. Quite beyond compare with any previous achievement of even the wizard who created 'The Birth of a Nation' and 'Intolerance.' More artistic photography, more action and thrill and more realism than has ever before been revealed."

Edward Harold Crosby, in the Boston Post

"When D. W. Griffith attempts anything he goes in for the stupendous. His 'Birth of a Nation' startled filmland with its magnitude and marvelous attention to detail. His 'Intolerance' brought into an evening's entertainment all the principal events in the world's history. And now comes 'Hearts of the World,' that in point of execution and vivid realism eclipses all his other efforts."

Forest Izard, in the Boston Transcript

" 'Hearts of the World' is the producer's vivid quality that reveals anew his remarkable power of vigorous, large-scale action. Mr. Griffith is of bold and sweeping imagination and in the execution of his designs he masterfully stops at nothing. The only acted scenes of the great war that carry adequately an impression of its awful vastness."

Katharine Wright, in the Boston Herald

"Griffith's film as masterpiece. The grim vividness of battle is only one element in the picture. The story itself holds the attention of the audience. Every phase of the story has been elaborated and treated with the utmost significance. The acting throughout is of the best."

E. F. Harkins, in the Boston Advertiser

"Griffith scores triumph. 'Hearts of the World' holds audience at Majestic Theatre enthralled. Art and realism, perfection of detail. Audience cheered and applauded. At the end there was a furore of applause for the United States troops—the Rainbow Division—marching to the front. It was a remarkable night."

Fred J. McIsaac, in the Boston American

"Like former Griffith productions, this was mounted on a grand scale. A large orchestra performed a brilliant score. The march of the French army, war-worn and grim, to the tune of The Marseillaise, drove the great audience frantic with enthusiasm. Contains a pulsating and never-to-be-forgotten love story and personal adventures of the most wonderful and thrilling character."

Townsend Walsh, in the Boston Traveler

"The Majestic Theatre was crowded to its utmost capacity. To say that the large audience was thrilled and inspired by this latest creation of David Wark Griffith is to feebly convey the impression made by a finely conceived and exceptionally wrought product of this genius of the film."

Propositions for certain State Rights of D. W. Griffith's supreme triumph "Hearts of the World" will now be received and considered. Address all communications to Wm. Elliott, F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest, Mgrs., Century Theatre, New York City

"Hearts of the World"

Gaumont News

PEERLESS PERIODICAL OF THE SCREEN

Every Tuesday

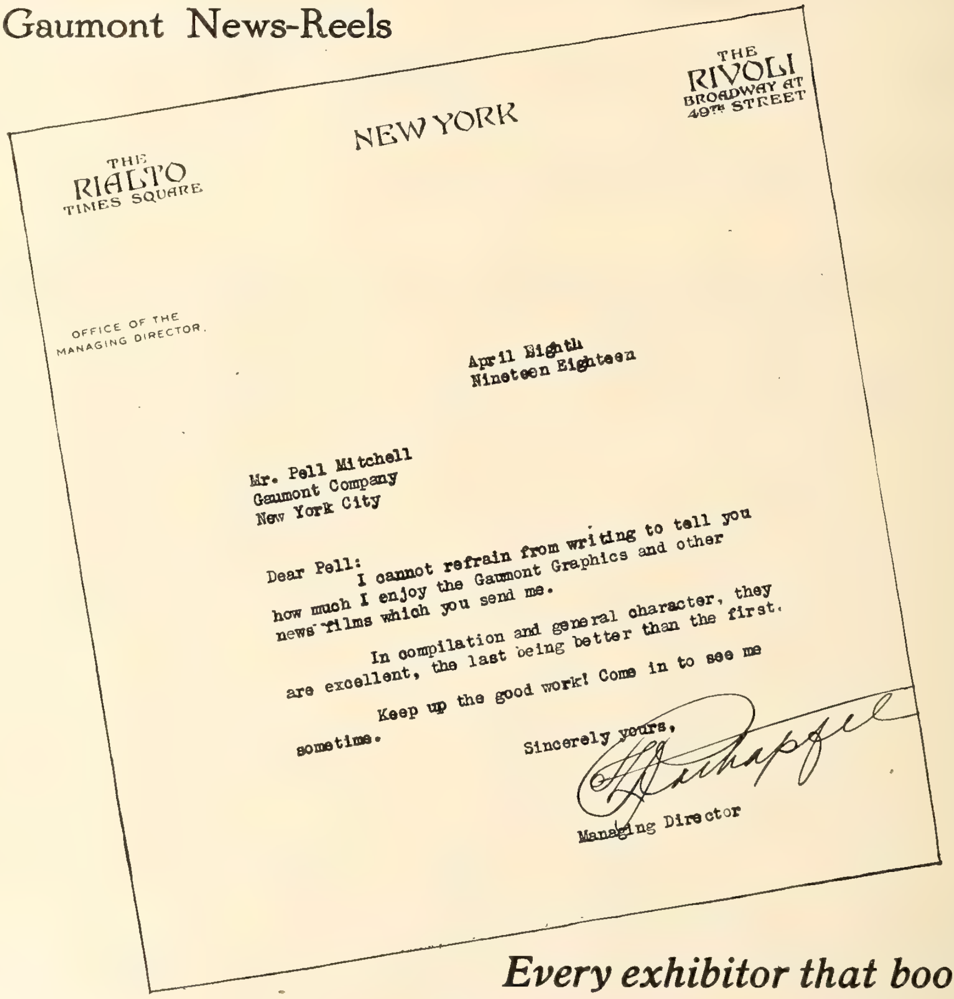
Gaumont

Gaumont Graphic

Every Friday

THE NEWS REELS OF REAL NEWS

S. L. Rothapfel, Managing Director of the Rialto and the Rivoli, Manhattan's motion picture theaters de luxe, considers the Gaumont News-Reels EXCELLENT.



NEW YORK

THE RIALTO
TIMES SQUARE

THE RIVOLI
BROADWAY AT 49TH STREET

OFFICE OF THE
MANAGING DIRECTOR.

April Eighth
Nineteen Eighteen

Mr. Pell Mitchell
Gaumont Company
New York City

Dear Pell:

I cannot refrain from writing to tell you how much I enjoy the Gaumont Graphics and other news films which you send me.

In compilation and general character, they are excellent, the last being better than the first.

Keep up the good work! Come in to see me sometime.

Sincerely yours,

Rothapfel

Managing Director

Every exhibitor that books them forms the same opinion.

Produced by

Gaumont Co.

NEW YORK LONDON PARIS

CHAOS — The WAY OUT

LIKE the boom towns of the mining country, the motion picture industry is now paying the price of its "get-rich-quick" development.

The reaction has come. Chaos is rampant.

In the midst of this discord, a carefully built business plan has been launched, which offers definite relief to a depressed and harrassed industry. It is the Hodkinson Co-partnership Plan—a plan which provides in place of—

Producer dominance born of greed, and fostered by selfishness— — — — →	Absolute independence of either producer or exhibitor control, and freedom to deal fairly with both.
Unprincipled business methods, inefficient management, and half-baked organizations of mushroom growth— — — →	Sound commercial principles and methods of proven success, administered by a recognized leader in the motion picture industry.
Lack of consistent quality in picture production — — — — — — — →	A continuous supply of consistently good product, because all the producer revenue goes into the making of pictures.
Diversion of Exhibitor's rightful profits →	A co-partnership plan which provides for the return to the Exhibitor of approximately 70% of the distributing profits.
Misuse of Exhibitor's deposits for the financing of production, and maintainance of extravagant exchange systems →	No deposits required from Exhibitor Co-partners.
Inflated capitalization of producing companies, resulting in unfair burden on the exhibitor— — — — — — — →	Conservative capitalization and no watered stock.
Exhibitor forced to endure strangling contracts and exorbitant rentals. Producer confronted with an indefinite and varying market— — — — — — →	Fair prices and equitable agreements for the Exhibitor. A definite and stable market for quality product.
Mutual distrust between Exhibitor and Producer, causing friction and resulting in lack of progress— — — — — →	An absolutely impartial position between these two factors, making for harmony, progress, and profit.

As one concerned with safeguarding your investment, you cannot afford to ignore the Hodkinson Plan. Let us tell you—in a detailed, confidential letter—just what protection and profit it guarantees you.

W. W. HODKINSON CORPORATION, 527 Fifth Avenue, NEW YORK

"Hodkinson Service at all General Film Exchanges"

W. W. HODKINSON
Has Found The Way

LOUISE GLAUM

PARALTA PLAYS

PICK OF THE PICTURES

BESSIE BARRISCALE

BESSIE BARRISCALE

in

"BLINDFOLDED"

E. Richard Schayer
Author

Robert Brunton,
Mgr. Productions

Directed by
RAYMOND B. WEST

Peggy Muldoon was trained to believe that the law was made to keep the poor poor; and the rich rich;
that the best way to make a living
was to break safes.
And Peggy thought the life of a yegg was a glorious one.
Then she read a little book.
Emerson's Essays.
She read the words with her eyes
but the meaning went straight to her heart.
And her heart told her
she was wrong.
and her heart showed her the path of righteousness.
And she went that path.

PARALTA PLAYS, Inc.

8 WEST 48th STREET
NEW YORK CITY

Foreign Distributors: Inter-Ocean Film Corporation.

Canadian Distributors: Globe Films, Ltd.

HENRY B. WALTHALL

DISTRIBUTED THROUGH
"HODKINSON SERVICE"
AT ALL GENERAL FILM EXCHANGES

J. WARREN KERRIGAN

LOUISE GLAUM

PARALTA PLAYS

PICK OF THE PICTURES

BESSIE BARRISCALE

CURRENT ISSUE

HENRY B. WALTHALL

in

"WITH HOOPS OF STEEL"

ELIOT HOWE
Director

FLORENCE FINCH KELLY
Author

ROBERT BRUNTON, Manager of Production

> "The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried, > grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel."
>
> —Shakespeare

Emerson Mead is a cowpuncher.

but he knows his Shakespeare.

Also, he knows his pals,
Tommy and Nick.

So when he is accused of murder,
and the evidence goes dead against him;
his two pals are willing to hang for him.

But HE who cements friendships and solar systems,—
HE puts justice into the hearts of Mead's accusers.

And the hunted outcast
becomes a hero.

PARALTA PLAYS, Inc.

8 WEST 48th STREET
NEW YORK CITY

Foreign Distributors: Inter-Ocean Film Corporation.

Canadian Distributors: Globe Films, Ltd.

HENRY B. WALTHALL

DISTRIBUTED THROUGH
"HODKINSON SERVICE"
AT ALL GENERAL FILM EXCHANGES

J. WARREN KERRIGAN

SELECTED FOR THEIR

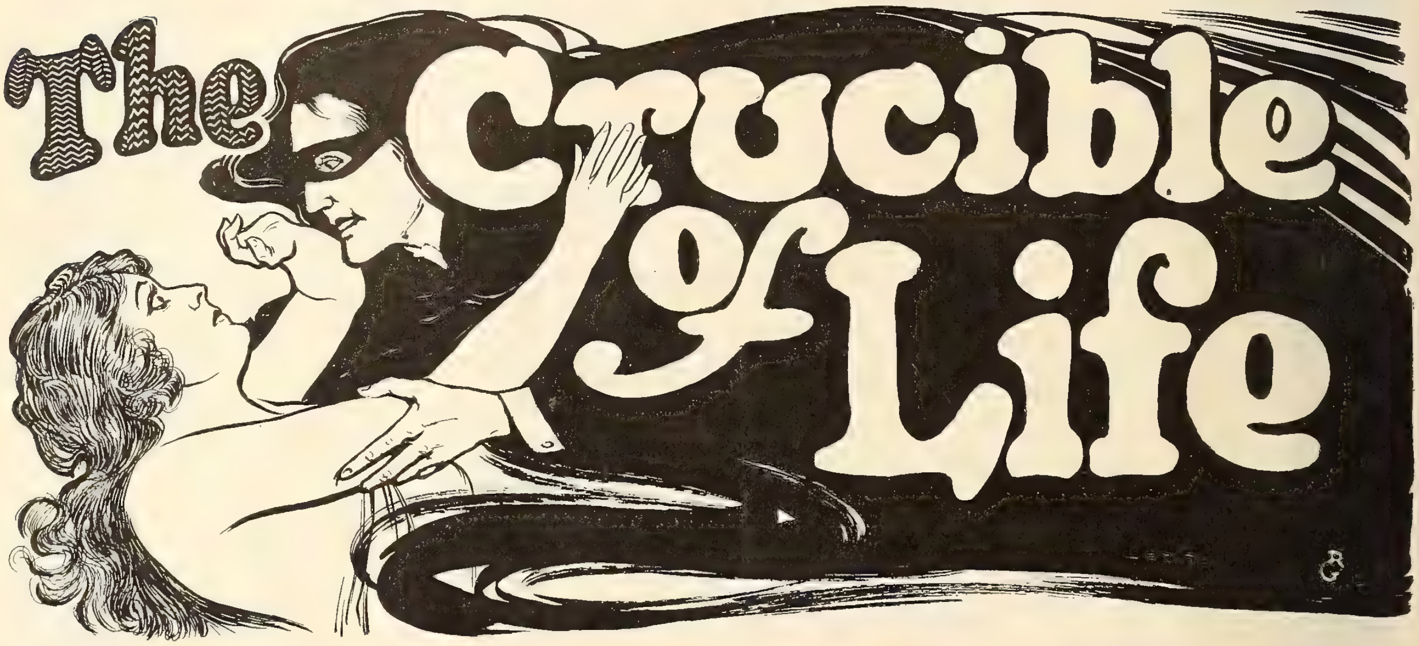
U. S. EXHIBITORS'

EXTRA

Full of the Kind of Thrills that Audiences Like

GRACE D'ARMOND

IN



Staged by Captain Harry Lambert

With WINIFRED HARRIS, JACK SHERRILL, FRANK O'CONNOR, EDWIN FORSBERG and a large supporting company

THE TRADE REVIEW said:

> "It is full of the kind of thrills that audiences like. The action never lags and the entire production has been produced in excellent style.
>
> "'THE CRUCIBLE OF LIFE' provides exhibitors with a real red fire attraction that stacks up as a certain hit wherever shown."

BOOK THRU

FOURSQUARE:
NEW YORK (729 Seevnth Avenue)
BUFFALO (47 West Swan Street)
DETROIT (304 Jos. Mack Bldg.)
CHICAGO (207 So. Wabash Ave.)
DENVER (1735 Welton Street)
SEATTLE (2014 Third Avenue)
PITTSBURGH (127 Fourth Avenue)
LOS ANGELES (514 West 8th Street)
PHILADELPHIA (1325 Vine Street)
CINCINNATI (301 Strand Th. Bldg.)
ST. LOUIS (301 Empress Th. Bldg.)
CLEVELAND (310 Sloan Building)
KANSAS CITY (1120 Walnut Street)
SAN FRANCISCO (191 Golden Gate Avenue)
MINNEAPOLIS (206 Film Exchange Bldg.)
SOUTHERN STATES FILM COMPANY
ATLANTA (114 Walton Street)
DALLAS (1900 Commerce Street)
GLOBE FEATURE FILM COMPANY
NEW ENGLAND (20 Winchester St., Boston)
FRANK GERSTEN, INC.
NEW JERSEY (220 W. 42d St., New York)
SUPER-FEATURE FILM COMPANY
CANADA (59 Victoria Street, Toronto)

Foreign Rights to all "U. S." Productions Controlled Exclusively by ROBERTSON-COLE COMPANY, Times Bldg., New York

BOX OFFICE VALUE
BOOKING CORPORATION
ATTRACTIONS

A BIG SPECIAL PICTURE ELABORATELY
STAGED AS THE NEW BACON-BACKER
STUDIO'S INITIAL OFFERING

THE MAGNIFICENT BACON-BACKER PRODUCTION OF

HARRY S. SHELDON'S
POWERFUL MODERN DRAMA
OF
NEW YORK LIFE

Staged by
PERRY VEKROFF

Presenting CHARLOTTE WALKER, ANNA LEHR, ROBERT CAIN,
HUNTLEY GORDEN, WILLIAM H. TOOKER, BRADLEY
BARKER, FRED RADCLIFFE and WILLET KERSHAW

BOOK THRU FOURSQUARE EXCHANGES

Julius Steger's CHARLOTTE WALKER in "JUST A WOMAN"
Eugene Walter's greatest drama since "Paid in Full"

Thos. H. Ince's BESSIE BARRISCALE in "THOSE WHO PAY"

Sidney Olcott's WALKER WHITESIDE and VALENTINE GRANT in
"THE BELGIAN"

Thos. H. Ince's "THE ZEPPELIN'S LAST RAID"

U. S. EXHIBITORS' BOOKING CORPORATION

FRANK G. HALL, President
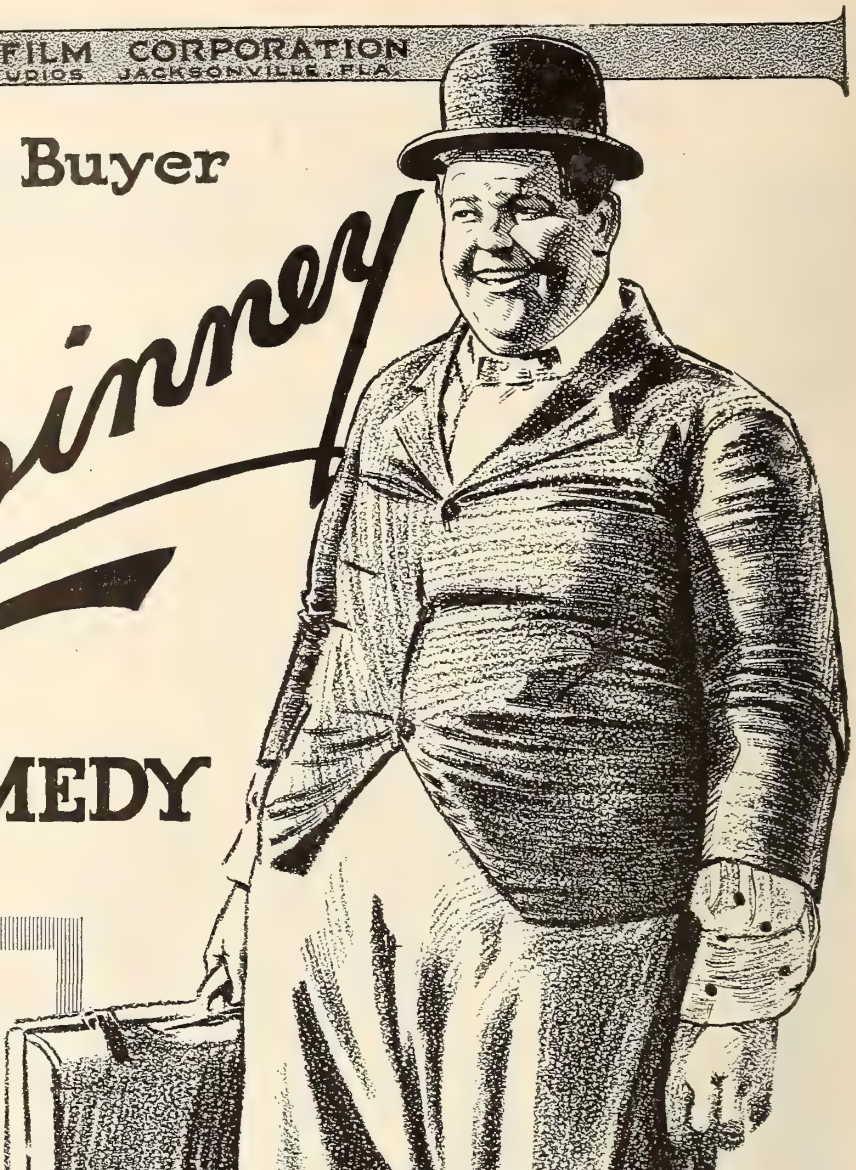
TOP O' THE TIMES, NEW YORK

FLORIDA FILM CORPORATION
KLUTHO STUDIOS JACKSONVILLE, FLA.

Mr. State-Right Buyer Here it is !!

A Josh Binney COMEDY



Funny Fatty Filbert

Something New in Mirthful Photoplays

A REAL STORY FILLED WITH

THEME and PLOT	2 REELS	SNAP and GINGER

Interpreted by

FUNNY FATTY FILBERT

and his
Laugh Making Associates

Hosts of Pretty Girls

POSITIVELY NEW AND ORIGINAL RELEASES

THREE FINISHED AND ONE EACH MONTH to follow

All personally directed by Josh Binney

ERNEST SHIPMAN 17 W. 44 ST. N.Y. REPRESENTATIVE

THE RIGHT TO USE THE NAME OF FROHMAN

Mr. Daniel Frohman in a letter sent to the Press and Trade Journals, has stated that neither he nor Charles Frohman was ever connected with The FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORPORATION and that the name of FROHMAN was and still is being used without authority.

We desire the trade and public should know—as we believe they do—that these gentlemen never were connected with this Corporation, and therefore are not entitled to credit for any of its success.

The statement, however, that the name was and is being used without authority has no foundation in fact, and Mr. Daniel Frohman must know this, as evidenced by the following excerpt from a contract made by and between Gustave Frohman, the older brother of Charles and Daniel (and who I am informed is responsible for their being in the Theatrical business) and William L. Sherrill, viz.:

"This agreement made this tenth day of June, 1914, by and between Gustave Frohman, party of the first part, and William L. Sherrill, party of the second part, witnesseth party of the second part agrees that he will organize a corporation under the laws of Delaware, which shall be named THE FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORPORATION.

The party of the first part hereby authorizes the use of the name of FROHMAN in the corporate title of THE FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORPORATION, and agrees to act as president of said corporation for a period of at least ten years. IF HE IS SO ELECTED BY THE DIRECTORS.

The party of the first part agrees that he will not actively be identified with any other company producing motion picture films during a period of ten years from the date thereof.

Signed in duplicate on this 10th day of June, 1914, City of New York.

SIGNED Gustave Frohman, Party of the First Part.
William L. Sherrill, Party of the Second Part.

On January 13th, 1916, we purchased the stock holdings of Gustave Frohman.

The success we have attained in building up the name of The Frohman Amusement Corporation with the trade justified our directors in not changing the corporate title.

NOTHING SUCCEEDS LIKE SUCCESS
VIZ
OUR LAST GREAT DELUXE PRODUCTION

"MY OWN UNITED STATES"

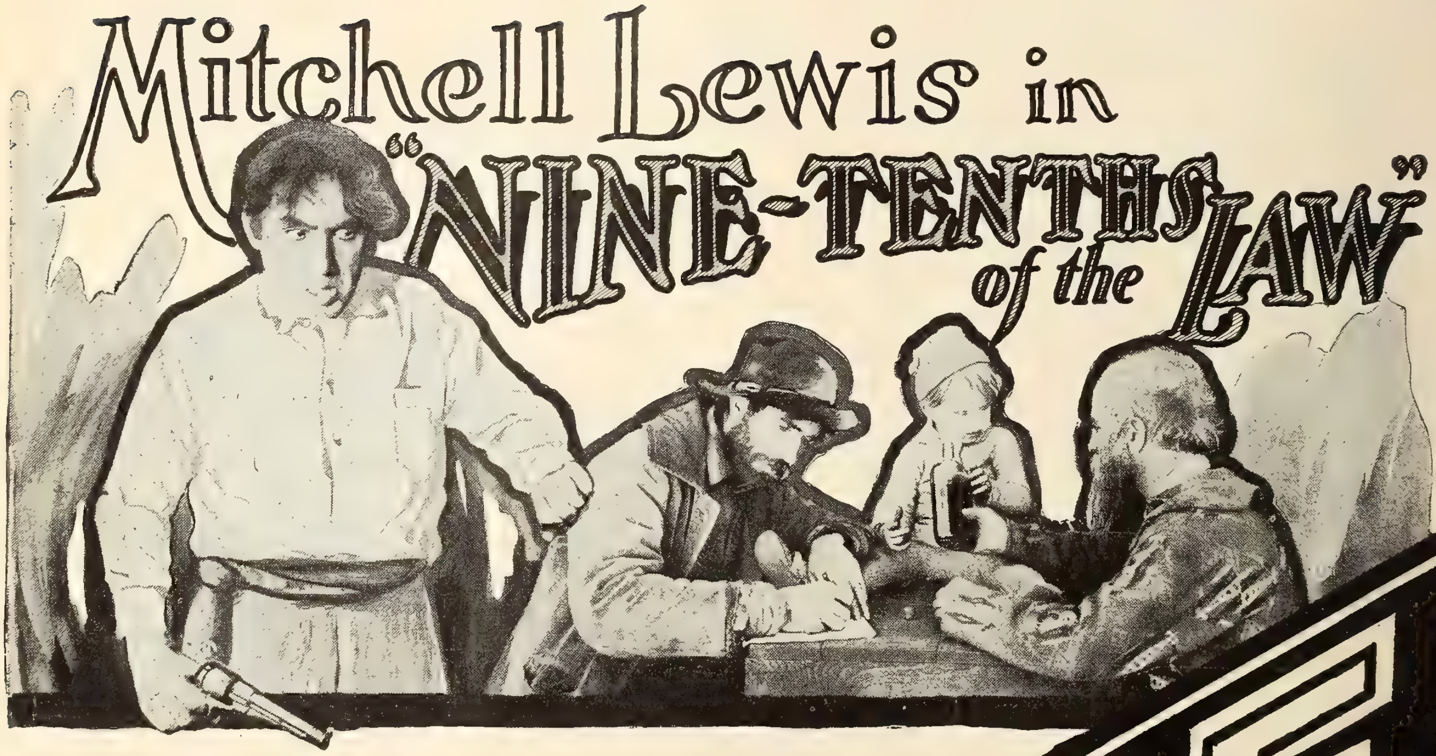
The Frohman Amusement Corporation, William L. Sherrill, President

TO BE SOLD

SIX REELS

OF

The Star of "The Barrier" and "The Bar Sinister" in a Powerful Drama of the Northwoods



STATE

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD says:

"This is a feature that will make its way wherever shown. It is so big and simple in its conception and so direct in its development that it will have almost universal appeal.

THE TELEGRAPH says: "It is the type of photoplay that appeals to every fan and should prove a good box office attraction."

ATLANTIC DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION

IMMEDIATELY

SEVEN REELS
OF
The Beautiful Broadway Favorite in a Gorgeously
Mounted Drama of Life on the Great White Way

WITH AN ALL-STAR CAST INCLUDING
HARRY SPINGLER, WILLIAM H. TOOKER, GEORGE S. TRIMBLE
ROBERT CUMMINGS AND LILLIAN COOK

THE DEVIL'S PLAYGROUND is by far the most pretentious photodrama of life in the gay metropolis ever produced. Full of gripping situations and quick action, its many spectacular scenes are laid in the big cabarets and tea dansants, completely ignoring the underworld.

GEORGE A. ENRIGHT TIMES BLDG., NEW YORK

SCREEN GEMS!

That's what the critics call the REVIVIFIED BRONCHO BILLY pictures of the hills and plains. Ten superb dramas now booking. To be followed by others. Run one every week

Essanay

George Kleine System
Distributors

Perfection Pictures

Motion Picture News

Vol. 17 No. 19. May 11, 1918

The Week in the Film World at a Glance

FEATURES

MONEY-MAKING PICTURES (WM. A. JOHNSTON).2799
SPEAKING EDITORIALLY 2800
SERVING IT WITH SPEED AND GINGER..........2801
WHAT KIND OF A FELLOW IS—QUIRK?..........2809
THE INDEPENDENT FIELD TICKER..........2853

OF SERVICE TO EXHIBITORS

Exhibitors' Service Bureau..........2818
Rothapfel's Answers to Exhibitors..........2823
Ready-Made Ad Talks..........2828
Short Subjects in Review..........2857
Newsy Items from the Studios..........2866
Releases—Current and Coming..........2867-70
Projection Department 2874
Music and the Picture..........2881
Theatres Worth While..........2887

NEWS OF THE WEEK

Industry Pushes Loan Hard..........2805
Vitagraph's Report Optimistic..........2807
Berst Heads United Theatres..........2802
"Hearts of the World" Cut in Chicago..........2802
Pauline Frederick in Mix-Up..........2803
War Film Through News Weeklies..........2803
Sherry Leaves Famous Players..........2804
In and Out of Town..........2806
New Incorporations 2803
Live News from the Producers..........2830
In and Out of West Coast Studios..........2864
In the Independent Field..........2851
Coming Programs Offerings..........2842
Exhibitor to Exhibitor Service Bureau..........2816
Glances at the Programs..........2843

SCREEN EXAMINATIONS

"Berlin via America" (Fordart Films)..........2859
"Biggest Show on Earth, The" (Paramount-Ince) 2861
"Blindfolded" (Paralta Plays)..........2858
"Denny from Ireland" (W. H. Clifford Prod.)..........2860
"His Smothered Love" (Paramount-Mack Sennett)..........2860
"House of Hate, The" (Pathe)..........2861
'Josh Binney Comedies"..........2860
"Lonely Woman, The" (Triangle)..........2862
"Masks and Faces" (World Film)..........2858
"Non-Stop Kid, The" (Rolin-Pathe)..........2860
"Paying His Debt" (Triangle)..........2862
"Reason Why, The" (Select).......... 2860
"Seal of Silence, The" (Vitagraph)..........2862
"Soul of Buddha, The" (Fox Standard)..........2862
"Spotted" (Strand-Mutual) 2859
"Two Soul-Woman" (Universal) 2860

Newsy Announcements of the Week Found in the Ad-Pages

"Bride's Awakening," a Dramatic Offering, with Mae Murray 2752
Boost "The Spirit of the Red Cross"..........2753
Tht Artcraft Offerings Since the First of the Year.....2754-55
Vitagraph Presents "The Little Runaway"..........2756
The Merit of Vitagraph's Latest Serial, "The Woman in the Web"..........2757
Alice Brady in "At the Mercy of Men," a Select..........2758
"Up the Road with Sallie" a High Mark in Comedy.....2759
Timeliness of "Joan of Plattsburg"..........2760
Rex Beach's "Heart of the Sunset" Released by Goldwyn..2761
Three Great Profit-Making Pictures Offered by Goldwyn...2762
Twenty-six Parsons Comedies a Year from Goldwyn......2763
Triangle Business Methods..........2764
Fifty Cities Take "My Own United States" for Week's Run 2765
The "Million Dollar Dollies" Now Ready for Booking...2766
Viola Dana in "Riders of the Night"..........2767
"The Eagle's Eye"..........2768
Mary Miles Minter and William Russell Head Mutual Program 2769-70
Rancho Dramas on General Film Program..........2771
Clover Comedies Have Three Popular Leads..........2772
"A Daughter of Uncle Sam"..........2773
The Ebony Comedies with Real Colored Players..........2774
Wolfville Tales to Alternate with O. Henry Pictures on General 2775
The Judge Brown Pictures..........2776
The Affiliated Distributors' Corporation Makes an Announcement 2777
"Britain's Bulwarks," in Great Series from Pathe..........2778
"The House of Hate"..........2779
Marie Dressler and Fay Tincher Make Comedies for World 2780-81
Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," a First National Attraction......2782
What Fabian Did with "My Four Years in Germany"..2783
New York and Boston Papers on "Hearts of the World" 2784-85
Rothapfel Praises the Gaumont Graphic..........2786
Hodkinson 2787
Bessie Barriscale in Deeply Appealing Picture..........2788
Henry Walthall in a Western Characterization..........2789
'The Crucible of Life"—U. S. Exhibitors..........2790
"The Devil's Playground" Also Offered by U. S. Exhibitors 2791
The Josh Binney Comedies..........2792
The Right to Use the Name of Frohman..........2793
Mitchell Lewis in "Nine-Tenths of the Law"..........2794
U. S. Exhibitors Offer "Broadway After Dark"..........2795
Broncho Billy's Reissues Called Screen Gems..........2796
"Chase Me, Charlie"..........2798
Regarding "The Doctor and the Woman"........2844-45-46-47
Another Record Smashed by "The Kaiser"..........2854-55
"The Lion's Claws"..........2856

Wm. A. Johnston, Pres. and Editor. Henry F. Sewall, Vice-Pres. E. Kendall Gillett, Sec. and Treas.

Published on Tuesday every week by MOTION PICTURE NEWS, Inc., 729 Seventh Ave., New York, N. Y. 'Phone 9360 Bryant. Chicago Offices, Mgr. Wm. J. McGrath, 220 So. State St.; 'Phone 755 Randolph. Los Angeles Offices, Mgr. J. C. Jessen, 429 South Figueroa St.; 'Phones 780 Pico, F-4661. Subscription $2 a year, postpaid, in United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands. Canada, $3. N. B.—No agent is authorized to take subscriptions for Motion Picture News at less than these rates. Have the agent who takes your subscription show his credentials and coupon book.

Copyright, 1918, by Motion Picture News, Inc.

The Feet That Put The Kick into

THE CHAPLIN JINGLE

"CHASE ME CHARLIE"

A British Version of Charlie Chaplin's Funniest Films Taken from the Famous Essanay-Chaplin Comedies

Screen time one hour

Jingles by Langford Reed

Essanay

George Kleine System Distributors

Perfection Pictures

MAY -1 1918 ©CIB412630

"When you see it in 'The News' It's News"

Motion Picture News

HAS THE QUALITY CIRCULATION OF THE TRADE

"The Exhibitors' Medium of Communication"

Volume 17. No. 19 May 11, 1918

Money-Making Pictures

IN the opinion of our critics the three feature pictures at New York's leading photoplay houses last week were the three best pictures at these theatres in any one week.

They were: "The Tiger Man"—Wm. S. Hart—at the Rialto; "The Danger Game"—Madge Kennedy—at the Strand; "Mr. Fix-It"—Douglas Fairbanks—at the Rivoli.

These pictures pleased; the audiences were satisfied; the houses were packed during the week.

And now it naturally interests us to inquire: Why?

It should be noted that these three big theatres in New York are not always criterions for the rest of the country; yet in the instance of these three pictures we have little doubt but that the reports from everywhere will come back with the notation: "Audience pleased," "satisfying pictures," "went big," etc.

What is the reason?

* * * *

THERE is the star, of course. We need not comment on the drawing power of Fairbanks and Hart; Madge Kennedy has already scored a success and is known as a sure drawing card, with probably a brilliant future.

We do not attempt to underestimate in the slightest degree the value of the star.

The titles are excellent—all three of them.

And we'll grant each picture all the other equivalents of box-office success.

Just the same, it is true that none of these stars ever appeared in better pictures; and eliminating one by one each entertainment value, one arrives at the simple conclusion that the success of the three pictures is primarily due to their themes.

The answer—to satisfied audiences—is pleasing themes.

Just that.

* * * *

THE Fairbanks and Kennedy pictures are light, happy, realistic. The Hart picture is more sombre in tone, but it involves and portrays a story of self-sacrifice—that one theme which in all its many variations always grips the hearts of all audiences everywhere and which has been the theme of many of the greatest novels and plays.

Heart interest themes—themes of life—of happiness—of simplicity and brightness.

Here assuredly is the plain answer to pleased audiences.

It's a pretty plain one.

Producers ought to see it; they know mighty well that pictures count most in this industry of ours. Every other consideration, however important in itself, is based upon good pictures, pleasing pictures. Exhibitors want good pictures more than they want anything else. The box-office income ebbs and flows as pictures please or don't please the picture public.

* * * *

IN the production workshop of our industry we look too much out on life through the little dark windows instead of through the one big window that shows life and sunshine—broadly and truly.

This is the window the public prefers to look out upon.

We are of the opinion that there should be producing policies at the headquarters of every producing company, formulated and held fast to by men of power, breadth of vision and experience.

We are also of the opinion that too many themes are picked by directors and scenario writers who are unexperienced in administering to the great American public and who have never proven their ability to do so.

* * * *

A FEW weeks ago the executive offices in New York of a prominent producing company got "orders" from its West Coast Studio to prepare for the production of a novel by a celebrated author.

A new executive experienced in public entertainment objected mightily. "The theme is wrong for pictures," he said. "It won't do at all."

"But," said a fellow executive helplessly, "these are 'orders' from the studio."

"Orders or no orders," said the other, "that novel will not be picturized."

And thus was saved from our box-office reports another of the too many pictures marked "excellently done, but audience was not pleased."

* * * *

WE hope that producers in general read the article in our April 20th issue by George Carpenter, manager of the Paramount-Empress theatre, Salt Lake City.

Mr. Carpenter, like ourselves, disclaims any God-given genius to create sure-fire pictures. But the box office, he says, is a barometer, and its registrations surely are plain enough for all to read.

He asks the producer flatly if he isn't leaving too much to the scenario staff; and he adds this sound advice:

(Continued on following page)

Speaking Editorially:

Advertising the Plot

EXHIBITORS who use newspaper advertising space will be greatly interested in the statement by James Q. Clemmer of the Clemmer theatre, Seattle, published in this issue.

Mr. Clemmer is a leading advertiser in a city which leads all others in newspaper advertising on the part of picture theatres.

Mr. Clemmer says he has long since passed beyond the unlicensed and hectic bally-hooing of pictures as "the best ever," etc. He has also evoluted past the era of merely playing up the star.

He now advertises the Plot, analyzing its entertainment values, and in a few pat phrases whetting the public appetite to taste the whole story. We published an attractive advertisement of Mr. Clemmer's last week built on these sane though novel lines.

Not only do we find much interest in this style of advertising, but even more in the fact generally that Mr. Clemmer gets his advertising copy right out of the Goldwyn advertising in the trade papers.

In other words, Goldwyn, realizing that pictures must not only be sold to the trade, but beyond the trade to the public, so constructs its trade paper announcements that the exhibitor can—and is encouraged to—reproduce them in his newspaper to attract his public.

This is merchandising pictures—or, at least, a fundamental and admirable step in that direction.

This is using trade-paper space so that it is of double value to the exhibitor—using it, in other words, as it should be used, for the genuine merchandising of the goods advertised.

Beware of Titles!

A PROMINENT exhibitor in New York last week turned down two excellent pictures because their titles—misleading in each instance—were too sensational for the high character of his house.

There is too much of a tendency, here and there, in the production world to strain at titles.

The impulse, evidently, is something like this: "We've got a fine picture here. Now, let's get a big, flashy title that will surely put it over, that will grip the public and drag 'em in."

In the straining that follows, all other considerations—very important ones—are lost sight of to gain the single end of utter sensationalism.

One point lost sight of is that first-run houses are of such standing in their respective communities that they positively cannot countenance these slap-bang titles.

Another is that no house whatever relishes a title so far removed from the real story that the audience feels it has been lured in by false promises.

What Picture Theatres Will Become

THE Strand theatre, New Orleans, has an advisory committee composed of fifty prominent citizens.

The management works closely and successfully with this committee in judging pictures and their titles.

A very fine and intelligent move—right in the direction of the true future of the better picture theatre, namely, as the center of each community's life and thought, a future of assured stability, influence and permanence.

Rewriting the Recipe

IT would be interesting, with the aid of an auditor and the books of one of the large producers, to analyze into cook book recipes the productions of the past five years.

At one time, early in the five-year period, the formula would read something like this:

"Mix one fifteen dollar scenario with a seventy-five dollar a week director, stir well with a hundred dollar cast, exploit in a haphazard manner and make a financial clean-up.

A few years later found the proportion allotted "story" bought to the glory of twenty-five dollars a reel, the director mounting to three hundred and over, the cast at the same figure of a hundred, and a new ingredient added called "star" at $350 per week."

The changing years brought frog-like leaps for the items marked "Director" and "Star"—and a woeful anaemia for the one listed "Profits."

What is to-day's recipe?

We have an idea our auditor friend mentioned in the opening paragraph would find even increasing proportions of "Story" allotted, "Exploitation" poured in serious quantities, "Director" remaining at his previous levels, while the star——?

Well, these are the days of conservation—and they do say that the war breads are far more sustaining than the pretty white flour.

So Say We

HERE'S an exhibitor's box-office report card that carries a message.

An eastern theatre says: "My Four Years in Germany—at prices raised to 25 cents and $1.00 top—broke all records of four years' standing. Week run.

"Every house in the United States and every American should see the picture."

And ditto, we might add, the other excellent patriotic specials now on the market.

Money-Making Pictures

(Continued from preceding page)

"We are now entering the epoch when the simple story, true to life and carrying optimism and sunshine, not only in action, but in breezy subtitles, will be the money maker.

"It is time, Mr. Producer, to indulge in Spring house-cleaning and sweep into the discard big-salaried egotists with warped imaginations and distorted love for the bizarre and fantastic.

"Throw open the windows, let in a little fresh air and install some new blood with a sane viewpoint on what constitutes entertaining screen drama."

Mr. Carpenter says the producer will have to begin at the bottom of things—namely, with the selection of the right themes, else nothing will be accomplished.

To all of which we say fervently: "Amen!"

W A Johnston

Serving It with Speed and Ginger

BOY, page Mr. William A. Brady again! Page that set of adjectives we always use for William A. Brady speeches.

Yes, William A. broke loose again—and once more in a worthy cause. In fact, the worthiest cause of all—Liberty Bonds.

William A. swung his arms and scorched his hearers this time at the Playhouse theatre meeting of motion-picture men to plan the final drive of the Third Liberty Loan campaign. He first got everybody mad, and then got everybody agreeing with him when he declared that the picture industry has not done its share.

William A.—we are afraid—is right. The stars have done yeoman work in boosting for the Loan, the executives came across royally with pledges at the New York theatre meeting, the exhibitors, as shown by reports from all over the country, have stepped right up to the front—but— —

How about the great number of two, three and four hundred dollar a week people whose names have been missing from the lists?

How about each one of us? Are we all doing a lot of talking—a lot of praising of the other fellow—and little ourselves?

Or are we "buying till it hurts"?

Knowing that even then it don't hurt half as much as a splinter of shrapnel.

* * * *

"J. A. BERST has been chosen head of United Picture Theatres." There is one of the biggest news items of the week.

Biggest because, while it has been rumored for weeks that the move was to come, we know it will be a bomb-like surprise to many film men.

Only the official announcement could convince all with whom we have talked in the past few weeks.

And now the official announcement has come.

* * * *

IT is interesting to read that William Sherry, while retaining his financial interest in Famous Players-Lasky, has withdrawn from active connection to devote his time to his "private enterprises."

We would like to know just what plans Brother Sherry has up his sleeve. Frankly, we have a wholesome respect for the Sherry judgment—ever since the days when the Sherry New York State Exchange was so big as to overshadow the Paramount of those days.

And further back—to the days of Sarah Bernhardt in "Queen Elizabeth."

* * * *

EVIDENTLY, and happily, the time has come to cease treating Major Metullus Lucullus Cicero Funkhouser of Chicago as a subject of derision and satire.

His order to cut two scenes from "Hearts of the World" which show German brutality, and which are founded upon facts, is not merely a matter of concern to the Chicago public but also to the Government of the United States, to Great Britain, whose official stamp the pictures bear, and to all our allies in the war for world freedom and civilization.

"ONE OF MANY" WITH WORDS OF PRAISE

P. S. Harrison,
Motion Picture News,
New York City:
My dear Mr. Harrison:

The reviews on every picture that you have written up in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS have been great, so different from the ordinary reviewer.

I personally had lost all interest in reading reviews in the Trade Journals, as in the past they have meant nothing. Your reviews, written in simple language, in a manner that every exhibitor can understand, and written from your experiences as an exhibitor, are indeed a great help to the motion picture industry. Yours very truly,

CALIFORNIA FILM EXCHANGE, INC.,
D. Bershon, Manager.

DO you remember that wail from "Anarchist" last week? Remember the pounding he gave the average house organ?

Remember also that we told you that we expected—and hoped—for a comeback from the house organ fraternity?

Well, we have one comeback already—and a snappy, bang-up retort it is. It arrived too late for use this week, but will have it ready early for the next issue.

Next week, also, will probably give you another one of those "Letters from a Self-Made Exhibitor." Had one about ready this week when the rush of news crowded it to the wall.

* * * *

THERE'S a news story in this issue that should have a strong sentimental interest to all of us, and especially to the old timers.

It tells about the sale of the Edison studio and laboratory.

The event is said to mark the final curtain on the Edison participation in the motion picture business.

Doesn't it give your heart a twinge of regret—to see the Edison name connected with the industry's birth, fading from the screen for the last time?

And the irony of it, "The Unbeliever," the latest Edison offering, is listed on the top row among the current big money-makers.

* * * *

WE are glad to hear that the Film Division of the Committee on Public Information seems inclined to let the war films continue to be distributed through the news weekly channels.

This is a bad time to experiment—the fate of the original handlers of the airplane program shows that—and, no matter what the minor objections, the method that gets "approximate" results quickly is the war time method.

Chairman Hart deserves commendation for his move in calling upon the exhibitors of New York for expressions of opinion regarding the methods to be followed.

Hodkinson Announces Results

Return Postcard Answers Received Show Widespread Interest in and Thorough Understanding of Corporation's Tying-in Plan

THE results obtained from the campaign of propaganda literature which the Hodkinson Corporation has been spreading broadcast over the country have been amazing, it is claimed by the department in charge of this work.

The fourth circular of the series of eight contained a return postcard, the idea being to get some idea of the manner in which the exhibitors were reading and digesting the material that was being put forth.

Officials of the company state that the number of replies received to this fourth circular has surprised them considerably, and the general tone of the answers received by the company suggests that the exhibitors are wide awake to the possibilities of the Hodkinson plan if it is successful in its complete development.

Commenting on the basic ideas underlying the campaign, officials of the company stated that the first purpose was to prove to the exhibitor that the Hodkinson plan is based upon business principles and laws of commercial enterprise that have hitherto been absolutely ignored by the motion picture industry.

Secondly, it was planned to show how the Hodkinson Corporation stood absolutely independent in the unique position of being free from control alike from exhibitor and producer, and also to convince the exhibitor that Mr. Hodkinson is the type of man in whom the exhibitors can have confidence of results to be obtained and promises fulfilled.

The last circular of the group to be sent out is a specific and detailed explanation of the plan itself and contains one of the typical Hodkinson charts which shows in a very clear and concise fashion the exact manner in which the exhibitors ought to be tied up, one to another and all together, in the combination of local exchange organizations interwoven with and supported by the central one.

The voicing of opinion of exhibitors has been somewhat of a surprise to the Hodkinson Corporation, as it was felt that, due to the deluge of schemes and propositions that had been in the market in the past few months, a lengthy course of education would be necessary before the exhibitor could be convinced that Mr. Hodkinson had something really different and with a genuine chance of success. Briefly explained, it is simply a gathering together of the exhibitors in various sections of the country to form exchanges to distribute the product locally. The exhibitor who has a share in his local exchange benefits by the assurance of always receiving good product; he also gets a share in the profits and really has something to say about the distribution costs and prices of his product. Then again every investor or co-partner in the local exchange receives a share in the central organization and receives a portion of the profits made by that company, with headquarters in New York.

Garson's Productions Nearing Completion

Harry I. Garson, personal manager for Clara Kimball Young, reports rapid progress with his companies on the Coast. Miss Young, who is busily engaged on her latest picture, "The Claw," by Cynthia Stockey, will complete that Select film soon. Mr. Garson's independent production "The Hushed Hour," in which Blanche Sweet is featured, will be completed about the same time as "The Claw."

It is unofficially stated that "The Hushed Hour" will be offered on open market by Mr. Garson.

The latest member of the cast of "The Hushed Hour" to be engaged is little Bennie Carpenter, who appears in D. W. Griffith's "Hearts of the World." Little Bennie is said to be one of the cleverest children yet seen on the screen and his work in "The Hushed Hour" is said to be a knockout.

General Denies Story

A statement published in New York April 27 that General Film Company had taken over the New York exchange of George Kleine is denied by the former.

An official of General Film Company is authority for the denial, and it is announced that this exchange has not been taken over by General Film Company.

Co-operative Distributing Organization Formed

The Affiliated Distributors' Corporation has been organized under the laws of the State of Delaware with an authorized capital of $100,000 for the furtherance of co-operative booking by exhibitors on a nation-wide scale. The organization is the direct outgrowth of the meeting called by Frank Rembusch of Indianapolis and held at the Hotel Astor the early part of April. The permanent committee appointed at the Hotel Astor meeting to develop a plan for national co-operative booking, headed by Sydney Cohen, president of the New York State Exhibitors' League, has held a number of meetings and the new organization is the crystallization of their efforts. The various associations now operating throughout the country are to form the nucleus of the Affiliated Distributors' Corporation. They will maintain their complete independence, financially and otherwise, the primary purpose of the national organization being simply that of a clearing house to facilitate the acquirement of pictures.

You are not going to war. The men who are need all the comforts you can give them. Help them get cigarettes. That is your patriotic duty. If you aren't helping in the "smokes" campaign, get busy—now. Don't be a slacker!

Chicago Censor Cuts "Hearts of the World"

The Chicago Board of Censors, headed by Major Funkhouser, is at it again.

This time it was D. W. Griffith's newest masterpiece, "Hearts of the World," to come under the knife, with the result that parts of some scenes were taken out for no logical reason, it is claimed.

Following this action a lusty complaint has gone up from the Griffith trenches, held by Elliott, Comstock and Gest, and it looks now as though another of the many quarrels with the Chicago board is on.

In referring to the part of one scene sliced by Major Funkhouser's ever-ready shears, the management of "Hearts of the World" makes the claim that the cut was made through sympathy for the Germans and their cause. This scene showed a German bayoneting a wounded French soldier.

"Hearts of the World" as shown in its entirety in other cities was highly praised, and none of the scenes were objected to by censors or public.

United Theatres Elect Berst President

J. A. Berst, who until recently headed the Pathe organzation, was elected president of United Picture Theatres of America at a meeting of the directors held on April 27. Lee A. Ochs retains his place on the directorate, serving hereafter in the office of vice-president, and several further important additions to the directoral body will shortly be announced, it is expected.

Mr. Berst in his letter of acceptance said: "I accept the presidency of United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., because I am thoroughly convinced that the cooperative system proposed by you will remedy existing evils and still do justice as between the producer and the exhibitor. During a career of more than twenty years in the industry, my policy has been 'Fairness to the exhibitor!' But even with the gratifying support of thousands of exhibitors during my two terms as president of the General Film and my vice-presidency and general management of Pathe, the realization has gradually come to me that the competitive method of handling films is unscientific, wasteful and injurious to the interests of all concerned."

Harold Lockwood's Natal Day Celebrated

On Friday, April 12, the birthday of Harold Lockwood, was celebrated at Baron Longs Tavern in Watts, Cal., at a surprise dinner given in the screen star's honor by Fred J. Balshofer. All the members of the Yorke-Metro attended the festivities as Mr. Balshofer's guests, and they took the opportunity to give expression of the esteem in which they held Mr. Lockwood by presenting him with a silver loving cup, suitably engraved. The entire affair was arranged without an inkling of the plans reaching Mr. Lockwood, and he was so surprised that he admitted that for the first time in his life he was completely overwhelmed.

New Corporations

FOLLOWING is a list of new companies within the industry which were incorporated during the week ending April 27 according to the records of the Corporation Trust Company of Jersey City, N. J.

NEW YORK

Rivoli Film Producing Company, Inc., Manhattan. Motion pictures. Capital, $8,000. Incorporators: David Marans, Solomon Fox, Morris Alster.

Lyceum Moving Picture Company, Inc., Manhattan. Theatrical and motion pictures. Capital, $1,000. Incorporators: Sarah Bernardik, Jacob Bael, Rufus F. Andrews.

DELAWARE

Affiliated Distributors Corporation, Wilmington. Manufacture of motion picture films. Capital, $100,000. Incorporators: F. D. Buck, M. L. Horty, M. E. Longfield.

ILLINOIS

Champaign Orpheum Company, Chicago. To operate and manage, conduct and control theatres and places of amusement. Capital, $2,500. Incorporators: Benjamin B. Kahane, George A. Trude, Frank B. Cain.

Little Players Film Company, Chicago. To produce, exhibit and release motion pictures. Capital, $5,000. Incorporators: Madeline Brandeis, Courtland Van Deusen, Leo W. Hoffman.

T. J. Davis Cinema Corporation, Chicago. To manufacture and deal in films, etc. Capital, $10,000. Incorporators: T. J. Davis, Frank J. Drufke, Arthur A. Sherrard.

Van Courtland Productions, Inc., Chicago. To produce, exhibit and release motion pictures. Capital, $500. Incorporators: Madeline Brandeis, Courtland Van Deusen, Leo W. Hoffman.

Famous Stories Film Corporation, Chicago. To deal in scenarios, plots, motion picture plays. Capital, $18,000. Incorporators: James C. Jeffery, Charles V. Clark, Stephen A. Cross.

Edison Sells Its Studio and Equipment

One of the most important of recent transfers in the film industry is the purchase by the Lincoln and Parker Film Company, of Worcester, Mass., of the Edison studio at 2526 Decatur avenue, New York, its equipment and the equipment of the Edison Positive Film Plant at Orange, N. J., from Thomas A. Edison, Inc. By the terms of the deal the purchaser also comes into possession of over a million feet of Edison negatives, released prior to the Edison-Kleine arrangement.

The Lincoln and Parker Film Company also acquired the right to reproduce Edison feature subjects and Edison Conquest Pictures on their narrow-width and nonstandard film, but all other rights in such subjects are retained for a period of years, by the Edison Company and the George Kleine system, through which they will be available as before. All rights in the James Montgomery Flagg series, "Girls You Know," are so retained.

Included in the Lincoln and Parker deal are the educational and scientific subjects upon which Mr. Edison was working a few years ago. It is announced that Mr. Edison will act in the capacity of a consulting editor to the new company, and that his son, Charles Edison, is to become a member of its board of directors.

The Edison Company promises a further announcement shortly, as to its future activities in the motion picture field, but it is known that a number of new productions, including "The Wall Invisible," with Shirley Mason, and several stories by O. Henry, Richard Harding Davis, Ralph Henry Barbour and other authors of prominence, are being made ready for early release.

Pauline Frederick in Mix-Up

Los Angeles Has Her Dickering with Goldwyn, but Remaining with Lasky—Then Willard Mack's Denial Spills the Beans

(Special Los Angeles Correspondence)

PAULINE FREDERICK, from all accounts, will be a Goldwyn star at the expiration of her present contract with Lasky.

Miss Frederick broke into the local spotlight by means of a story recently appearing in the Los Angeles Times. This account gave the first intimation that Miss Frederick was likely to be interested in making other connections, but it concluded with the flat statement that the star would remain with Lasky.

All might have been well but for the fact that the Los Angeles writer used the phrase, "playing both ends against the middle," in referring to Miss Frederick's activities. This got under the skin of Willard Mack, the playwright and husband of the star, who immediately sent a sizzling wire across country from New York declaring that Miss Frederick's next pictures would be made by the "Frederick Feature Film Company" and distributed by Goldwyn.

The news story from the Los Angeles Times, appeared on Sunday, April 14, and follows:

MISS FREDERICK WITH LASKY

"The battle which has been raging between Goldwyn and Lasky-Famous-Players for the services of Pauline Frederick is finished with Lasky-Famous-Players as the winners, according to word received from New York by Lasky yesterday.

"Miss Frederick, it appears, had been playing both ends against the middle and Goldwyn was so sure they had her that they made the announcement. However, at the last moment, it appears Lasky offered some concession in the contract promised and Miss Frederick went back to her old love."

The telegram follows:

"Miss Grace Kingsley, Los Angeles Times, Los Angeles, Cal.:

"Sunday issues Times, fourteenth, story Pauline Frederick remains with Lasky all wrong. Wording Miss Frederick playing both ends against middle very unfair. No necessity. Her cards on the table. Frederick Feature Film Company will make her next pictures and Goldwyn will distribute them. Special facor to me and your usual clean break. Run this big.

"WILLARD MACK."

War Subjects Through Weeklies

New York Exhibitors Tell Hart, of Division of Films, War Subjects Should Go Through Regular Channels

CHARLES S. HART, director of the Division of Films, Committee on Public Information, of which George Creel is chairman, in order that he might get the opinion of the prominent exhibitors in Greater New York as to the most advantageous way in which Government war subjects could be released, consulted a representative body of New York exhibitors at the committee's New York office, 110 West Fortieth street, on April 26.

Louis Blumenthal spoke for the exhibitors and summed up the situation by saying that in the opinion of the New York exhibitors the Committee on Public Information could find no more advantageous medium through which to get the Government war subjects before the public than by releasing them through the established channels—the exchanges of the four principal producers of the News Weeklies, Pathe, Universal, Gaumont and Mutual.

Mr. Hart informed the committee of exhibitors that the Government was negotiating with the Allied nations, England, France and Italy, for a reciprocal exchange of war subjects, and that the Government subjects would be released in 1,000 feet reels, distributed among the four weeklies produced by the companies getting out these weeklies.

Nothing definite was decided as to the question of distribution. The matter will have to be taken up with the heads of the committee in Washington, Mr. Hart informed the exhibitor. He expressed his opinion, however, that the suggestions offered by the exhibitors present at the meeting would be followed in deciding upon the method of release and the channels through which the war subjects would be given the public.

Mr. Hart presided at the meeting. Mr. Blumenthal spoke for the exhibitors. Those present were: Henry Haring, Charles Haring, Ike Haststall, D. W. Chamberlain, large theatre owner of Minneapolis; Benjamin Lyons, Gus Koenigswell, Rudolph P. H. Saunders, Morris Needles, Sol Coleman, C. R. Martins, S. H. G. Saphier, John Manheimer, F. Y. Langtree, Al. Groeschal, San Francisco. The representatives of the trade journals present were, James Hoff and Sam Spedon, MOTION PICTURE WORLD; Ted Eltenhead, EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW, and J. L. Kelley, MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Sydney Cohen Bereaved

Much sympathy was expressed throughout New York film circles last week for Sydney S. Cohen, president of the New York State League, on the death of his wife.

Funeral services were held Sunday, April 28th, leaving Martinpicks Chapel, 122nd street and Lenox avenue, at 10 a. m. Many motion picture friends of Mr. Cohen and the deceased were in attendance.

Goldburg Moves to Larger Offices

After May 1, 1918, Jesse J. Goldburg, States Rights and Special Sales Representative of independent attractions, will move his offices from the Times Building, New York, to 120 West 41st Street.

Sherry Leaves Famous-Lasky

Head of Paramount Purchasing Department Resigns Office—To Devote All His Time to His Other Enterprises

WILLIAM L. SHERRY, one of the original Famous Players franchise owners and the first man in the United States to purchase the rights to the Jesse L. Lasky productions and who recently assumed charge of the Paramount purchasing department, resigned from that position and his executive positions with the Paramount Corporation and will now, temporarily at least, devote his time and enterprise to his other interests. Mr. Sherry will retain his financial interest in Paramount, which is said to be as large as any individual participant in that organization.

William L. Sherry began film operations shortly after the formation of the Famous Players and was the first purchaser of that concern's output. He opened an exchange at 126 West 46th Street and immediately began exploitation of his products. During the first few months of Famous Players, Mr. Sherry showed his grasp on the rental end of the business by establishing a rental price and dignity of distribution which soon earned for him the respect of various producers and when the Lasky company was formed, although other buyers bid higher than Mr. Sherry, he secured the output by reason of his remarkable handling of other big features.

Mr. Sherry was one of the original organizers and vice-president of Paramount and when the Famous Players-Lasky Company absorbed the exchanges he became one of the largest stockholders and a director in the Famous Players-Lasky Company, which office he still retains. He will continue to handle "Joan, the Woman," from his new offices. He made a record in the outright purchase of this feature and it is understood that he is in the market for other film plays of important character.

William L. Sherry

Mr. Sherry's leave-taking from the Paramount was one of mutual arrangement, and his going does not mar his great respect and friendly feeling for his associates in that organization. In talking to a representative of this paper, he stated emphatically that not in all his long connection and his social affiliations with the heads of the Famous Players-Lasky and that organization's department heads, has he had one word amiss to speak of them and that he considers their acquaintanceship as among his greatest assets.

Mr. Sherry intends to remain in the film business but in what capacity and in what channel he does not wish to state. However, he has a number of high-class propositions at his refusal and will issue a statement of his future intentions within a few weeks. Temporarily he will be located at Room 501, Godfrey Building.

Affiliated Makes Announcement

Affiliated Distributors' Corporation, with temporary offices in Suite 523, 1472 Broadway, New York, is making an announcement to the trade in the advertising pages of this issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

This announcement is addressed to the exhibitors of the United States and Canada, and sets forth the object of a permanent committee of exhibitors to perfect national organization of booking interests. Eight fundamental principles are cited.

National Board of Review Luncheon May 3

The annual luncheon of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures will be held at the Hotel McAlpin, Broadway and 33rd Street, on Friday, May 3, at 12:30 o'clock. Among those who have been invited as guests are: Irvin S. Cobb, Miss Marguerite Clark, Miss Pauline Frederick, J. F. Flinn, Director of Advertising and Publicity for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; George Middleton, the well known dramatist and scenario writer, and Miss Hetty Gray Baker of the Fox Company. Subjects related to the making of motion pictures and their distribution will be discussed.

Crystal Film Company Moves

Notice was sent out last week from New York to the effect that the Crystal Film Company and the Triumph Film Corporation, of which Joseph A. Golden is president, will remove their offices to Suite 815, Longacre Building, at Broadway and Forty-second street.

The change went into effect May 1.

Josiah Pearce, Pioneer in South, Dies

Motion pictures lost one of the pioneer exhibitors with the death, on April 19, of Josiah Pearce, founder and head of the firm of Josiah Pearce & Son, owners of a string of theatres in New Orleans. The end came unexpectedly at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. T. Au Werter, Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. Pearce was born in England sixty-seven years ago, but came to this country while still a boy, first locating in Pittsburgh. In the fall of 1903 he started his first amusement venture at Conneaut Lake, Pa., and in the fall of 1905 he opened the first motion picture house in the South, at Memphis, Tenn. Later in the same year he opened the second of the South's theatres, this one in New Orleans. From that time forward his interests gradually centered in New Orleans where his firm now owns the Tudor, Trianon, Rialto, Dreamworld, Newcomb and Bijou Dream. He at one time owned houses in other cities of Louisiana and Mississippi but sold these a couple of years ago.

Of late he has not been active in business, his theatres in New Orleans having been conducted by his son, J. Eugene Pearce, one of the best exhibitors in the country. In addition to the motion picture houses, Mr. Pearce also owned a number of other amusement devices which were in charge of a second son, Fred W. Pearce.

Brady Spectacle at the Casino

William A. Brady's spectacular motion picture drama, "Stolen Orders," based on the Drury Lane melodrama, "Sealed Orders," will be presented at the Casino theatre, New York, for two weeks commencing May 2.

Mr. Brady, in producing the picture, has changed the scene of action from England to America and is now offering it on the screen when the spy question is the most vital problem our authorities have to deal with. Many of the big scenes were actually taken on a battleship by permission of the United States Government which encouraged the production of the picture as an expose of the operations of the German spies.

The cast includes such notable stars as Kitty Gordon, Carlyle Blackwell, Montagu Love, June Elvidge, Madge Evans and George MacQuarrie.

Warren and Cast Return from Carolina

Edward Warren, of the Edward Warren Productions, Inc., returned last week from Asheville, North Carolina, where he has been photographing the exterior scenes of his latest state rights feature. Mr. Warren was accompanied by the principal actors in his production, including House Peters, Anna Lehr, Corene Uzzell, Henry Sedley, Wilfred Lytell, Dale Hanshaw, Frank Lang and his cameraman, Edward C. Earle.

Industry Adds Millions to Loan

Big Drive Nears Finish with Motion Picture People Going Over the Top for Big Gains—Metro's Efforts Net Ten Millions

ACCUSTOMED as the motion picture industry is to the mention of money in big, round figures, it is probable that the sum total added during the past week to the Third Liberty Loan by stars and others will set a new record for discussion where cash is the chief topic of conversation.

Millions of dollars were turned into the coffers of Uncle Sam through the efforts of patriotic motion picture folk, who sacrificed much to get out and boost the good cause along. Everything from selling kisses to auctioning off war relics was on the program, and these little novelties added variety to the week and much coin to the treasury.

Metro Up in Front

Ten millions of dollars have been added to the coffers of Uncle Sam for the Third Liberty Loan by Metro Pictures Corporation. Of these, five millions were secured by the Metro star, Emmy Wehlen, in her whirlwind tour of Eastern cities, when she "took the stump," in speeches and songs, in behalf of the Loan. Miss Whalen added to her own holdings of the two previous loans by taking $40,000 worth of bonds.

Metro stars on the Pacific coast have also done their share toward obtaining an oversubscription to the Loan. In one evening, in Los Angeles, Metro stars more than doubled the subscription gained by motion picture workers in that city in several evenings previous. Viola Dana and Bert Lytell put their whole hearts and souls into the work. With the assistance of a "jazz" band, and speeches by Director Frank Reicher, Albert Shelby Le Vino and Ralph Robinson of Metro's West coast studio, throngs of people were persuaded to sign their names to the subscription blanks for large amounts.

Other Metro workers who were busier than the proverbial bee are Rita Jolivet, Baby Ivy Ward, Christine Mayo and E. M. Saunders.

Vitagraph Not Idle

Vitagraph Studio in Los Angeles is now well up in the list of motion picture organizations in results achieved in the Liberty Loan drive. A recent Wednesday was Vitagraph night in the local campaign, and as a result of the efforts of Earle Williams, William Duncan, Nell Shipman, Grace Darmond, Larry Semon and other Vitagraph stars, the total sales for the evening were $16,550. A big rally was held at the studio in Hollywood and Nell Shipman, who had just returned from Kernville, made a speech. Bill Duncan, star and director of Vitagraph serials, also made a speech. He and Miss Shipman each donated $200 to the cause in addition to the personal bonds they had already purchased. Larry Semon donated $100. Contributions were made also by Grace Darmond, Earle Williams, Al Garcia and others. W. S. Smith, studio manager, made a splendid appeal, and addresses were also delivered by Grace Darmond and Al Garcia.

All of the Vitagrapher workers have been actively working for the drive and virtually every man and woman at the Hollywood plant has subscribed in liberal amount for the bonds. Their subscriptions and their efforts are among the big factors that are helping Los Angeles go over the top for Uncle Sam and the world freedom.

OF VALUE TO YOU!

IS the Minneapolis Strand a big enough guarantee to you of worth in a picture or a review service? Well, read this:

The Harrison box-office reviews are very good. I have run several of the pictures he O K'd and they have all been winners.

CHARLES G. BRANHAM,
Strand Theatre,
Minneapolis, Minn.

Manager Branham is only one of the many exhibitors finding reviewing satisfaction in the "Exhibitor to Exhibitor" Reviews. Are YOU?

Normand Sells Kisses

Rarely has an idol of the cinema faced an audience under more exciting circumstances than marked the visit of Mabel Normand to the Harlem Grand theatre, in East One Hundred and Twenty-Fifth street, April 21.

The big house was packed to the doors, Manager Arthur Hirsch estimating the attendance to be fully 4,000. John Case, representing the 43d District of the Liberty Loan Committee, announced that Normand, star in Goldwyn Pictures, had consented to appear, although her hoarseness would prevent her from repeating the speech she had been making in other theatres. After subscribing for a $5,000 bond, Miss Normand auctioned kisses, and the total amount of the evening was $12,500.

Madge Kennedy, another Goldwyn star, appeared at the Strand theatre the same evening, and appeared following the exhibition of a picture in which she was the star. She urged all present to buy bonds. Miss Kennedy had previously appeared in Philadelphia and Detroit.

Zukor Day Big Success

Adolph Zukor Motion Picture Day at the Liberty Theatre in front of the Public Library on Fifth Avenue proved to be the greatest day in the Liberty Loan drive of the Stage Women's War Relief. Over $300,000.00 in subscriptions were realized on this day.

Soon after the opening ceremonies Jesse L. Lasky, Arthur S. Friend, and Emil Shauer of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation appeared and subscribed $100,000 in behalf of their company, another $25,000 having been subscribed earlier in the day by members of the office, exchange and studio staffs. Because of a very important engagement out of town which demanded his personal attention, Mr. Zukor was unable to appear.

One of the most noticeable events in the day's activities at the Liberty theatre, was the appearance of Governor Whitman who was introduced by Elsie Ferguson. The Governor gave a stirring address which resulted in a run on the clerks making out the subscription blanks.

Miss Ferguson made three appearances at the toy theatre during the day making speeches, selling bonds and giving autographed photos of herself to subscribers. Her activities helped considerably toward making this a record day for the drive at the Public Library.

Billie Burke also made an appeal and worked hard with splendid results for two hours. Others who appeared were Alice Brady, Mildred Manning, Thomas Meighan, Gertrude McCoy, Crauford Kent, Rita Jolivet, Madame Clayborg the Metropolitan singer, Lois Ewell, Edith Jeanne, Henri La Bonte, Percy Richards, "the man in white," Siegfried Phillip, Francesca Marni and many other stars of screen, stage and opera fame.

HERE AND THERE

William S. Hart closed his Liberty Loan tour of the Pacific Coast in San Francisco the night of April 26 and Allen L. Chickering, director of the Speakers Bureau for the Twelfth Federal Reserve District, said that the tour had been successful beyond expectations. Over two million dollars was Hart's record.

Gertrude McCoy has been giving all her spare moments to the government, and toured many of the Eastern states in the interest of the Liberty Loan and War Savings Stamps.

Pathe advised last week that "France in Arms," a motion picture, was used in Newark, N. J., recently in connection with the Loan.

Harold Edel, managing director of the Strand theatre, acted in the capacity of motion picture director in the Loan drive at City Hall, New York, on April 23, taking pictures of various committees for exhibition at his theatre.

Madge Evans, little World star, has been setting a fast pace.

Baker to Leave Russian Art Film Corp.

Samuel Baker, film cutter and editor, expects soon to leave the employ of the Russian Art Film Corporation which releases its pictures on the Pathe program. He is as yet undecided as to his new connections.

Select Seeks Membership in N. A. M. P. I.

The Select Pictures Corporation has filed its application as a distributor member of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, making thirteen distributing companies which are now affiliated with this important branch of the national body.

The producer membership originally taken out by Lewis J. Selznick has been transferred to the Select Pictures Corporation, so that Select is now on a par with all of the other big companies, including Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Universal Film Manufacturing Company, Pathe Exchange, Inc., World Film Corporation, Fox Film Corporation, Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, Metro Pictures Corporation, Vitagraph Company of America, all of which are represented in both the producer and distributor branches of the organization. Mr. Morris Kohn, treasurer, will represent the Select Pictures Corporation in the producer and distributor divisions.

The First National Exhibitors' Circuit has also recently joined the distributors' division and it is expected that some of the companies which are producing for the First National will shortly apply for membership in the producers' division.

Rodgers Returns to the General Film

W. F. Rodgers, who left General Film Company just a year ago to handle sales activities for Goldwyn, has returned to his old post of sales manager for General. Mr. Rodgers was one of the first employes of General Film, starting with it in New York before it had even one exchange. His beginning was as a bookkeeper. From that position he was shifted to the sales department. Then he became a traveling auditor for the company. The next promotion was at headquarters, as assistant to the general manager. In that capacity he did a great deal of inspection and organization touring. Later he was stationed at Albany as a branch manager. For a time after this period he held a position outside the organization, but returned to it later when General Film took over the Kinetoscope Company, whereupon he became its sales manager.

Pathe Service Flag Has 2,080 Stars

There are 2,080 stars in the Pathe Service Flag.

Mr. Ferdinand Zecca, the new Director General of Productions, who arrived recently in New York from Paris, says that more than 2,000 French, English and Italian employees of Pathe have served in the ranks of the Allies as officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates. More than 200 died on the battlefields. More than 500 have been decorated for bravery. A large number have been wounded, released from service and returned to their positions with the Etablissements Pathe Freres.

More than 80 men have responded to the call to the Colors in the United States and the list is rapidly growing.

In and Out of Town

Paul Cromlin, president of Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, returned, last week, from a business trip to Washington.

Louis Brock of Inter-Ocean made a hurried trip to Washington and back, last week.

Leon Schlesinger and E. H. Kaufman, of Inter-Ocean returned to the city last week, after several days' absence on business.

H. J. Klutho, head of the Klutho Studios, Jacksonville, Fla., is in New York. Mr. Klutho is going to convince producers here that Jacksonville is an ideal place to shoot exteriors or interiors.

"Josh" Binney, screen comedian, director and producer of the "Josh" Binney Comedies, and founder of the Florida Film Corporation, Jacksonville, Fla., is in New York with his first bunch of comedies.

Date of Thrift Stamp Day Changed to May 6

THRIFT STAMP DAY has been changed from May 1 to May 6.

THIS CHANGE OF DATE WILL HELP THE SUCCESS OF THRIFT STAMP DAY.

It gives American business five days more to prepare for "The Biggest Business Day in History."

It means that the American people will have nothing else to distract their attention from Thrift Stamp Day.

May 6 is a MONDAY, which means that Thrift Stamp Day will fall on the day when people will have more money to invest in Thrift Stamps and to buy things at the Special Thrift Sales.

So remember your new slogan is "SIXTH OF MAY, THRIFT STAMP DAY IN THE U. S. A." More time to put it over bigger and better than ever. Keep hustling.

Edith Storey Makes Red Cross Dance a Success

Edith Storey, Metro star, and Lew Cody, her leading man, recently turned a Red Cross benefit dance, on Catalina Island, which threatened to be a dismal failure, into a brilliant success. And this is how it happened: The members of Miss Storey's company, including herself and her director, George D. Baker, all bought tickets for the patriotic party, but when the star arrived she found that there were more musicians than dancers. "This must not be a failure," said Miss Storey. "Let's help out." So they fared forth to scour the island for dancers. And they got them—twenty of them at the first clip—and Cody paid for all their tickets at a dollar each. The next trip yielded thirty more. When they had finished, the success of the dance was assured, but Cody was broke.

To Organize Screen Club in Cleveland

Cleveland will have one of the biggest Screen Clubs in the country, if present plans materialize. Several years ago a screen club was organized in that city, and for quite a while it flourished, but gradually it went into a decline, and finally disappeared altogether. There were several reasons for this. In the first place the club was organized as a combination social and business affair, and because of the business end of it, representatives of conflicting branches of the industry were not eligible for membership. Also the business conducted by the club clashed sometimes with the business conducted by the Exhibitors' League, and there was considerable hard feeling between these two organizations. Gradually the social side of the screen club far overshadowed its business interests, but it was neither large enough nor comprehensive enough to succeed on that basis alone, and it just naturally disintegrated.

Now, however, the business interests of the film industry are well looked after by the League representing the exhibitors and the Board of Motion Picture Exchange Managers representing the exchanges. That leaves the way clear for the formation of an all-film social club. Manager Emery Downs of the Knickerbocker, the last president of the Screen Club, and Sam Gerson, of the Buckeye Poster Rental Company, sent notices to all the members of the film industry to meet at the Strand theatre last Tuesday night, at eleven o'clock, to discuss the merits of organizing a new Screen Club, which shall be purely social. More than one hundred exhibitors and exchange managers answered the call in person, and were enthusiastic over the proposition. In two weeks another meeting will be called to elect officers and adopt a constitution.

The discussion was followed by a showing of Charlie Chaplin's present release, "A Dog's Life," which is breaking all records at the Stillman theatre this week.

Stars as Auctioneers for Red Cross

Clara Kimball Young, Select star, and Wallace Reid, of Paramount, acted as auctioneers and sold various articles at a recent benefit for the Red Cross at the Los Angeles Red Cross Tea Room. All the proceeds, and they were considerable, went to the organization. The two stars made speeches and Miss Young succeeded in making Wallace buy her photograph for $5. Another picture of herself she disposed of for $55.

Hearst-Pathe News Shows Bond Drive

The current Hearst-Pathe News shows the activities of many of the foremost Government officials in the interest of the Liberty Loan drive. They include President Wilson, who is seen inspecting the tank, "Britannia," at Washington; Mrs. Wilson reviewing a street pageant at Philadelphia, and Secretary McAdoo speaking at San Antonio, Texas.

Vitagraph Reports More Business

Third Annual Meeting of Stockholders Held in New York—Frank Frost Chosen Vice-President in Place of Clendennin J. Ryan

WALTER W. IRWIN, treasurer and general manager of the Vitagraph distributing organization, reported to the stockholders at the third annual meeting held last week. In several respects, the report was remarkable. In the first place, it shows that the business of the company for the past year—which was the third year of the existence of Vitagraph's own distributing organization in the United States and Canada—increased 22 per cent over the business of the second year. This increase was recorded notwithstanding the fact that the business of the company for the second year increased 47 per cent over that for the first year, this increase of 47 per cent being in itself a record in view of the large business which the company did during the first year.

Canadian Market Sidelights

An interesting sidelight on the business, as revealed by Mr. Irwin's report to his company's stockholders, relates to the Canadian market, which for the Vitagraph organization has produced a large volume of profitable business notwithstanding that Canada has been known as "the graveyard of the film industry." Mr. Irwin has ever been a firm believer in Canada and long ago predicted that at the close of the war such immigration as the European countries permitted would largely be to the Dominion.

The first Vitagraph exchange was opened in Toronto in January, 1916, and the company since that time has established branches in Montreal, St. John, N. B. and Winnipeg.

In summarizing the results for the last year, Mr. Irwin pointed out to the company's stockholders the difficulties which have beset the motion picture industry during the last year and the fact that his company's net business increased almost one-fourth in spite of these difficulties is an encouraging sign for the future of the motion pictures. He commented on the severe weather of the last winter, in most sections of unprecedented severity, and the resultant demoralization of train service which added to the transportation problems already existent through the necessary restrictions imposed by the government. To this was added the imposition of the war tax on film and theatre tickets, epidemics in several southern states, floods in Ohio and other sections of the Middle West and the "heatless Mondays.".

Loss Through Closings

The latter caused great initial losses all through the industry, but subsequently the exhibitors recovered somewhat by the extra business they did when they were permitted to operate on heatless Mondays and closed their theatres on Tuesdays instead.

The early closing order in New England had a sanguinary effect on business. Mr. Irwin pointed out, as did the Monday closing rule in Canada, which was only put into operation on February 8 last.

In one section of his report Mr. Irwin called attention to a situation which may well be taken as a warning by all others in the industry so that they may prepare to protect their organizations against reduced efficiency and scarcity of employes. This relates to the military situation. Mr. turers, very few of whom until recently knew each other or seemed to want to know each other, began to bid for such players; and upon acquiring them, saw to it that they were extensively advertised as stars, thus again enhancing their value and again causing other bids to be made for their services, with the results now existing.

"Some day or other, a producer will arise with sufficient capital and courage Irwin stated that out of a personnel of 600 employes, the Vitagraph distributing organization had lost seventy-five members through enlistments or the draft and that at the present time thirty per cent of the company's employes are subject to the draft. This condition, in varying proportion, undoubtedly prevails throughout the industry so that it is time employers began to consider the filling of gaps left by the departure of men to take up arms, by the employment of men beyond the military age and the training of youths and girls to recruit their organizations up to normal strength.

Industry Is Healthy

In closing his report, Mr. Irwin took occasion to refer to the general health of the motion picture business, as regards expenditures for stars, and to look into the future. On this subject, he said with great frankness:

"In order to make any recommendation for the future, it is necessary to examine the past. The industry has been traveling a very rocky economic road. Because of its youth, it has been and is undergoing a commercial evolution. Many evils have existed and still exist.

"The tremendous salaries paid to stars is due to a number of causes, one of which is the conduct of the exhibitor himself. The exhibitor upon discovering that certain players were developing a good will with the public, quite naturally began to advertise those players instead of the company making the picture. As a consequence, the drawing power of the player so advertised was quickly and greatly enhanced, with the result that the manufac- to throw into his scrap basket any picture which does not come up to a given standard, and to back up these pictures which fully merit release with intelligent and persistent national advertising of his trademark.

Longer Runs Help

"Three years ago the daily change was in vogue, but the better and bigger pictures are causing even small exhibitors to run such pictures for two and three days, and in some cases, for a longer time in order to permit the picture to be seen by a proper percentage of the population from which they have to draw, through the word-of-mouth advertising.

"Moreover, with the policy above outlined, no speculative business is so devoid of speculation as this one."

The annual election of officers for the Vitagraph distributing organization resulted in only one change, Frank J. Frost of New York being elected vice-president of the company in place of Clendennin J. Ryan, who is now an officer in the Aviation Corps in France. Albert N. Smith was re-elected president, and Mr. Irwin was re-elected treasurer, secretary and general manager.

Rapf's Productions Handled by Syndicate

Harry Rapf's two state rights productions, "The Struggle Everlasting" and "The Accidental Honeymoon," released in Greater New York through the newly organized Exhibitors' Booking Syndicate, have had such successful distribution through this medium that the Detroit exhibitors have arranged for a convention in Detroit, at which all of the leading exhibitors of the state will be present, to consider handling Mr. Rapf's productions in the same manner.

Mr. Rapf will attend the convention, at which time it will be arranged for the distribution of his two features in the territory to be handled by the new syndicate, which will operate from Detroit.

"The Struggle Everlasting" ran successfully for a week in New York City at the Eighty-first Street theatre and at the 181st Street theatre. It was shown at the Eighty-first Street theatre for three days, while it turned away the crowds at the 181st Street theatre for two days.

From other exhibitors Mr. Rapf has received word that this picture has proved a big hit. Mr. Rapf left for Detroit last Wednesday.

N. Y. City Officials See "Safety First" Film

"Careless America," a "safety first" film made by Universal at the instance of H. L. Firestone, of the Firestone Tire Company, was presented at the Broadway theatre, New York, on Monday, April 22, to an audience consisting of New York City officials, delegations from automobile clubs, representatives of Eastern railroads and leaders in civic life.

Injunction Against New Apollo

Keystone in Co-operation with W. H. Productions Establishes Rights in Court — Infringement Was Charged in Complaint

THE KEYSTONE FILM COMPANY, with the co-operation of W. H. Productions, through their attorney, Walter N. Seligsburg, have won what the latter corporation termed, last week, a great victory for the industry. W. H. Productions thinks this court decision will be of benefit in eliminating duping and infringement upon copyrights.

Judge Hough, in the District Court of the United States, Southern District of New York has ordered, adjudged and decreed as follows:

"That the Keystone Film Company is and has been at all times the owner of a good and valid copyright to Charlie Chaplin in 'Dough and Dynamite' and other Keystone subjects.

"That the New Apollo Feature Film Company, Inc., Hugo Mayenthau, have infringed upon the said copyright and upon the exclusive right of the Keystone Film Company by purchasing, distributing and vending, exhibiting or causing to be exhibited, copying or causing to be copied, printing or causing to be printed the said copyrighted motion picture photoplay entitled 'Dough and Dynamite' and other Keystone subjects.

"That the defendants and each and every one of them have settled with the complainant by agreement for all damages and profits done by the said motion picture photoplay and in infringement of the said copyrighted photoplay, entitled 'Dough and Dynamite.'

"That a perpetual injunction has been granted, directed to the said defendants, the New Apollo Feature Film Company, Inc., Hugo Mayenthau, also known as Hugo Frank Mayenthau, and each of their clerks, attorneys, agents, servants, employes, workmen and confederates and each and every one of them from directly or indirectly making or causing to be made, copying or causing to be copied, printing or causing to be printed, publishing or causing to be published, selling or causing to be sold, renting or causing to be rented, exhibiting or causing to be exhibited, advertising or causing to be advertised, vending or offering for sale, lease or hire, or in any wise concerned in the making, copying, printing, publishing, selling, exhibiting, advertising, vending, hiring or offering for sale or lease any work containing any and all portions of complainant's said copyrighted motion picture photoplay entitled, 'Dough and Dynamite,' and other Keystone subjects that have been copyrighted, each before referred to, and from directly or indirectly performing, representing or reproducing, or aiding or abetting others in performing, representing or reproducing any and all of the said copyrighted motion picture photoplays or any part thereof."

The action has been discontinued against the defendant.

Raver Tenders His Thanks

President of Showmen's League of America Expresses Appreciation of Manner in Which Benefit Was Supported

HARRY RAVER, president of the Showmen's League of America, writes an appreciative letter to the editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, expressing his gratitude over the splendid manner in which the members of the motion picture profession rallied to the support of the Showmen's Hospital Benefit at the Hippodrome, April 21. His letter follows:

"Editor, MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

"Dear Sir: Through the columns of your valuable publication I wish, on behalf of the Showmen's League of America, to express appreciation for the splendid support given to our Showmen's Hospital Benefit at the Hippodrome, April 21, by the representative men and women of the motion picture profession who so unselfishly aided in making the event a success. As chairman of the Motion Picture Division of the ticket committee I sent through the mails an appeal for recognition of our effort to provide hospital care for showmen in adverse circumstances who become ill, and was overwhelmed by the generous and whole-hearted response. Not only did the best blood of the industry respond financially, but I was made happy in the knowledge that they used their seats and assisted in filling the huge Hippodrome to capacity. That, in spite of dozens of other benefit performances, the Liberty Loan drive and other appeals for funds, our undertaking was a tremendous success, we of the Showmen's League feel duly proud, but more particularly so because the first appeal I have ever made to the motion picture profession was answered so generously and freely. And when it is considered that some $70,000 worth of Liberty Bonds were sold to our audience, and that members of the motion picture industry subscribed for at least one-third of the amount, there is added reason for exultation.

"Gratefully, HARRY RAVER,
"Pres. Showmens League of America."

The Oklahoma Way

First National headquarters is in receipt of the following wire from the president and general manager of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit of Oklahoma, which has elicited congratulatory replies:

"Am pleased to advise that this office has a new representative, T. E. Larson, Jr., thirty-six hours old; weighed eight pounds upon arrival. Made first appearance in Los Angeles but wired would soon be on the job. This is in keeping with our policy of acquiring something new and different in First National babies. T. E. LARSON."

General Exchange Moves to Godfrey Building

General Film Company has moved its New York exchange from Twenty-third street and Sixth avenue to the Godfrey Building, 729 Seventh avenue. The transfer was facilitated by the retention of the accommodations already in place in the new quarters, which were just being vacated by what was known as the Artcraft exchange of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. General Films' New York branch consequently finds itself now in one of the most completely appointed picture exchanges in the United States.

Negotiations for the leasing of this floor of the Godfrey Building, which is regarded as one of the most advantageous locations for a film exchange in New York, had been going on for a week or two after General Film decided to remove uptown. They were finally closed in time to coincide with the removal of the Artcraft office. The General exchange, therefore, was able to take its place on this entire floor, it being the ninth or first express elevator stop, with all promptness.

Goldstein Found Guilty in Federal Court

Robert Goldstein, promoter of the Continental Producing Company, that made "The Spirit of '76," was found guilty in the Federal Court in Los Angeles, of violating the Espionage act. Sentence has not been passed but the minimum is one year in prison and a fine of any amount up to eleven thousand dollars. It was judged that Goldstein introduced into this film pro-German propaganda in showing inhuman acts of British soldiers during the Revolutionary war. The names of several German officers were brought into the evidence at the trial. The film is said to have cost nearly $200,000.

An attempt was made to show the film at Chicago in September of last year, but the showing was stopped by Major Funkhouser, and the action of the censors was upheld by the Federal Court there. In November Goldstein leased the Clune theatre for a showing of the picture, and after three or four presentations, it was seized by Federal officers and the promoter and producer arrested.

Four Fox Releases in New War Service Bulletin

Two William Fox Special Features and two Mutt and Jeff animated cartoons are listed in the newest War Service Bulletin, issued by the War and Navy Department's Commissions on Training Camp Activities, for use in the camps of the Army and Navy. The present Bulletin takes account of pictures released between April 1 and April 15. Announcements are issued semi-monthly.

The films are "A Camouflage Kiss," starring June Caprice and directed by Harry Millarde, and "The Bride of Fear," in which Jewel Carmen starred. The cartoons, made by Bud Fisher for release through Fox Film Corporation, are "The Freight Investigation" and "The Leak."

What Kind of a Fellow Is—Quirk?

Being a Glance at the Real Human Side of the Big Men of the Picture Game Caught in Action

By William A. Johnston

IT isn't every editor who gets the chance to flitter and flutter in the flattering light of publicity.

Most of them never get the chance.

Others take on themselves the joy of writing such frothy things as this series, and then see their name in print each week right on the same page with such names as Richard A. Rowland, William Fox, and so on.

While still others make such gosh-hanged successes of their particular mission in life that they bust right into this series—and get their names in the big type atop the page, while we repose inconspicuously a few lines below.

"They," in this case, refers solely and completely to James R. Quirk.

We might get even with Brother Quirk for topping us in the electric lights by writing about ourselves all through the rest of this page—just as we gave half of Paul Cromelin's page to Hackensack, most of Hiram Abrams to baseball, and a little of Watterson Rothaker's to dancing.

That's a privilege fellows like Quirk and ourselves have. We can do anything we want with our own white space and black type—and when it is done we know it's good.

But we'll fool Quirk by telling you just who he is:

"James R. Quirk is the man who, in Photoplay Magazine, has produced the MOTION PICTURE NEWS of the fan field."

Could we say any more?

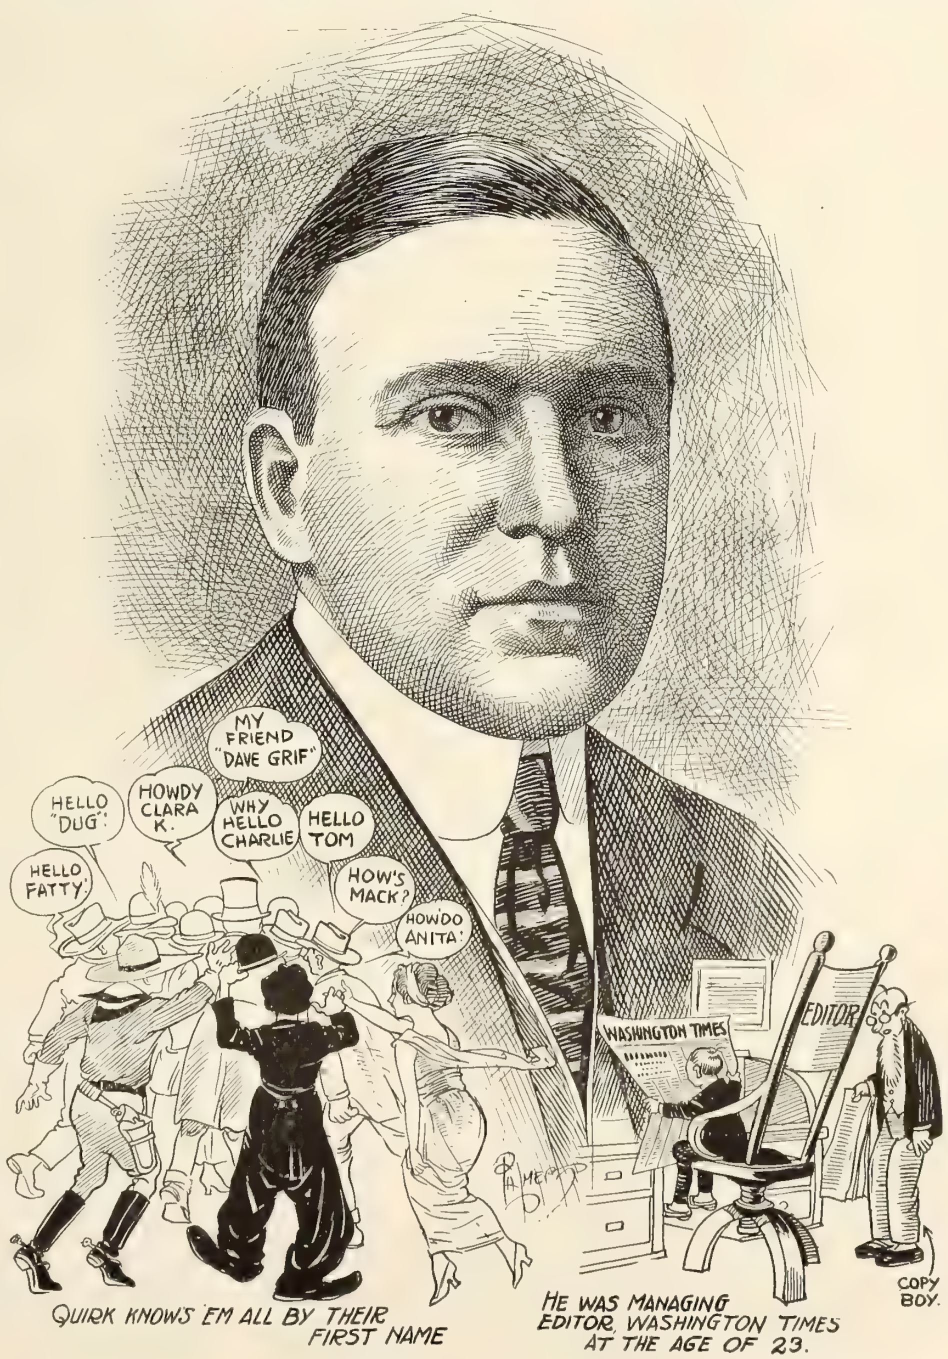
And now we'll fool all of you by letting some one else write the rest of this page. It happened this way. When it neared the time for James Quirk's interview, we wrote the following short note to Terry Ramsaye, of the Mutual, and once the Chicago Tribune's daredevil reporter:

"DEAR TERRY: We have a suspicion that all those Chicago fellows like Freuler, Rothacker, Spoor, Kleine, and so on, wear their 'company manners' when they come to New York. Perhaps we don't get the close-up view of them that you Chicago folks do. Send us a few inside facts."

We expected a few hastily scribbled notes, but we imagine Terry doesn't run to half-written stories—for back came a manuscript all ready for the printer.

Here—at spaceless rates—it is:

Mr. Quirk knows more artists, directors, producers and writers personally than any man in the world. Two of the largest producers always get his opinion on the fan interest in a star before they sign the contract. Situated midways between New York and Los Angeles the motion picture folks always drop into his office for a chat while waiting for their train East or West. Some one called him "Grand Crossing Jim," and it has stuck. He has been in every large studio in America.



QUIRK KNOWS 'EM ALL BY THEIR FIRST NAME

HE WAS MANAGING EDITOR, WASHINGTON TIMES AT THE AGE OF 23.

Mr. Quirk is a lucky man. God and his Irish ancestors gifted him with a sense of humor. He laughs his way through mountains of work. He laughs his way through every difficulty. I saw him laugh an advertiser out of a contract for twelve pages right over the telephone. Golden laughter. I call it.

That is his secret of getting work out of people, too. He was managing editor of the Washington Times at twenty-three. Every man under him was older, yet he laughed that staff into producing the first successful Sunday evening newspaper in America.

Now, at thirty-two, he's a $ucce$$.

"You seem to have a good time getting out your magazine," I said to him.

"Good time?" he replied. "Why, I get so much fun out of my work that I'd hate to die because I'd lose my job."

Here are some of the things he said while I sat in his office. They give the best in-

(Continued on page 2810)

Clemmer Theatre Sells the Plot

Seattle Type of Advertising So Impresses Goldwyn Official That Company Adopts It For Exhibitor Aides in the Future

JAMES Q. CLEMMER, proprietor of the Clemmer theatre, Seattle, offers other exhibitors the plan of selling the plot of the feature productions to the public. A Goldwyn official just back from the Pacific coast points out his example as evidence of the skill that may be used in exploitation work.

There are two important assets of the Clemmer, one the features that it presents and the other its splendid orchestra. There is a third, and big asset in Bart Burtleson, advertising manager for the house and general assistant to Mr. Clemmer. The work of Mr. Burtleson has made such an impression on the Goldwyn officials that the company has arranged the preparation of "Seattle style" of copy for its future exhibitor advertising electrotypes.

On the Goldwyn productions the Clemmer has been using four full columns in the Seattle Sunday Times. One of these specimens was reproduced in the NEWS last week. The cost of one insertion of such an advertisement, including the making of the plate, is about $175, but the theatre is satisfied that the expense is more than justified by the increased patronage drawn.

"I have been an exhibitor for a great many years," says Mr. Clemmer in explanation of his newspaper advertising copy. "During that time, like other exhibitors, I long ago exhausted superlatives in exploiting pictures opening in my theatre. I began to find that superlatives no longer 'pulled.' The public did not believe them—and justly so.

"Nor was it sufficient for us to announce that this or that producer 'presented' this or that star in this or that story. Certain producers, Goldwyn close to the top, have established both production and star value. But I wanted something else to sell to the public; some unique angle to challenge attention. And I found it.

"In the Clemmer theatre advertising we now sell THE PLOT of our productions to the public, in addition to producer name and star name. We pull the public in past the box-office and into the orchestra seats by building our advertising so that it reveals what the story is. We do not tease or pique them in with a single phrase or catch-line. We let them know in advance in bold display print the detailed theme—written and illustrated as cleverly as we possibly can. We noted, soon after Goldwyn began releasing, that its advertising announcements in the trade papers made a point of telling exhibitors the actual plot of the various Goldwyn productions—weeks before their dates of release. We tear these pages out of the trade papers and file them till we need them. Then when the time comes to advertise an attraction locally we look over these advertisements and lay-outs. Sometimes we use them flat, just as they stand. Often we add to them.

"On other occasions we feel that we have a brighter and better idea than Goldwyn has about its own productions, and on such occasions we use our own copy. In our advertisements of Mae Marsh in 'The Face in the Dark' you will note that we use the lines, 'A bit of gray thread, a bit of ash from a cigar, etc.,' exactly as it was used in Goldwyn's trade paper advertising announcement. That kind of advertising aids an exhibitor in his showmanship, in putting over an attraction, in getting its spirit to the public.

"Personally, I think that the Seattle type advertising is the most effective amusement copy created in the United States. I have studied the advertising of all other large cities and I have found none that I consider equal to it for challenge—and that is the first element to be considered."

What Kind of a Fellow is Quirk?

(Continued from page 2809)

dication of the character of this laughing genius of the publishing business.

"I have two pet hates in this business of producing motion pictures," he said; "the producer of smut pictures and the producer of mediocre pictures."

"I believe they must have built a special addition onto one of the departments in hell for the smutty producers. I put them on the same level as the keepers of white slave establishments."

"I don't give a Continental damn for the silly girl type of film fan. If I couldn't appeal to the real people of America, the mothers and fathers, and grown men and women who go to moving pictures for wholesome, clean enjoyment, I'd quit."

'My motto for photoplay is "Clean pictures, first, last, and always."

"I think most of the pictures made today are real works of art, and I'm proud to be associated with the men making them. The other fellows are dead or dying."

"The future of the film business? Tremendous. The demand for pictures is as real as the demand for soap. It is a necessity now. There must be an end to overproduction, and the mediocre producers will adjourn to the scrap heap. The war will only make the business better. No real disaster can happen to motion pictures. Disaster may come to individuals or companies, but not to the art. It will go right along."

"The public is getting wise."

Milne Denies Rumor

A report current that Peter Milne is to sever his connection with MOTION PICTURE NEWS to accept a position in the scenario department of a producing organization is denied by Mr. Milne.

You are not going to war. The men who are need all the comforts you can give them. Help them get cigarettes. That is your patriotic duty. If you aren't helping in the "smokes" campaign, get busy—now. Don't be a slacker!

Sherrill Gives His Side of Frohman Name

William L. Sherrill, president of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, last week sent the following letter to the trade publications, concerning the recent near-argument over the name Frohman:

"Daniel Frohman, in a letter sent to the Press and Trade Journals, has stated that neither he nor Charles Frohman were ever connected with the Frohman Amusement Corporation and that the name of Frohman was and is still being used without authority. We desire the trade and public should know—as we believe they do—that these gentlemen never were connected with this corporation, and therefore are not entitled to credit for any of its success.

"The statement, however, that the name was and is being used without authority has no foundation in fact, and Mr. Daniel Frohman must know this as evidenced by the following excerpt from a contract made by and between Gustave Frohman, the older brother of Charles and Daniel—and who, I am informed, is responsible for their being in the theatrical business—and William L. Sherrill, viz.:

"'This agreement made this tenth day of June, 1914, by and between Gustave Frohman, party of the first part, and William L. Sherrill, party of the second part witnesseth party of the second part agrees that he will organize a corporation under the laws of Delaware, which shall be named the Frohman Amusement Corporation.

"'The party of the first part hereby authorizes the use of the name of Frohman in the corporate title of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, and agrees to act as president of said corporation for a period of at least ten years, IF HE IS SO ELECTED BY THE DIRECTORS

"'The party of the first part agrees that he will not actively be identified with any other company producing motion picture films during a period of ten years from the date thereof.

"'Signed in duplicate on this tenth day of June, 1914, City of New York.

"'(Signed) GUSTAVE FROHMAN, Party of the First Part.

"'WILLIAM L. SHERRILL, Party of the Second Part.'

"On January 13, 1916, we purchased the stock holdings of Gustave Frohman. The success we have attained in building up the name of the Frohman Amusement Corporation with the trade, justifies our directors in not changing the corporate title."

Vitagraph Announces Its June List

President Albert E. Smith, of Vitagraph, announces that Harry Morey, Alice Joyce, Gladys Leslie and Earle Williams will be seen in Vitagraph Blue Ribbon features on the June schedule.

The list follows: June 3, Harry Morey with Betty Blythe in "Playing With Fate"; June 10, Alice Joyce in "Find the Woman"; June 17, Gladys Leslie in "The Soap Girl"; June 24, Earle Williams in "The Girl in His House."

Klutho Studios Present Unusual Chance

The Klutho Studios, of Jacksonville, Fla., if all reports from the Southland are to be taken at their face value, should be among the most popular locations this summer for producing organizations. These studios are said to present a very unusual opportunity to companies who contemplate filming pictures in the South—or even to those who do not contemplate it.

H. J. Klutho, of the Klutho Studios, was in New York last week on business, and said to a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS that he made the trip partly on purpose to acquaint the producers of Broadway with the remarkable facilities of not only the studio in Jacksonville but of the city itself. Klutho Studios, Mr. Klutho advised, are new, and equal any of the larger ones of the East in equipment and facilities. In addition to the completeness of the plant, the country supplies foliage in full bloom, and bathing scenes can be made this early in the year without inconvenience.

Through his advertisements in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, Mr. Klutho is making it known to producing companies that his fully equipped plant is available during the summer months at an especially low rental. Several negotiations are now under way, it is understood, as it appears the producers recognize the benefits to be derived from a studio in the South, yet close enough to New York to make long trips unnecessary.

Division of Advertising Has Dinner

The Division of Advertising of the Committee on Public Information had a dinner on Tuesday evening, April 23, in the rooms of the New York Advertising Club.

Among the prominent speakers were James H. Baker, who has just returned from an official visit to the battlefields of Europe and who told some wonderful stories of conditions in London and Paris; Col. F. S. Evans, of the Royal Artillery, British Army, and Charles Dana Gibson, chairman of the Division of Pictorial Display.

Among the three-minute rapid-fire talks was one by Harry Levey, of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company's Industrial Department, who represented the Screen Advertisers' Association.

Unity Buys Three Ivan Pictures

Ivan Film Productions, Inc., announces the sale of "Sins of Ambition," "Married in Name Only" and "Life or Honor?" to the Unity Photoplays Company for the territory of Illinois and southern Wisconsin. Frank Zambreno, president of Unity, made the purchase. Ivan also reports the sale of "Human Clay" to the Foursquare Pictures, Inc., for the same territory.

Tobacco Fund Grows

The total amount of contributions to "Our Boys in France Tobacco Fund," received to April 27, is $204,682.95.

Jesse Lasky Goes to the Coast

Will Make Preparations for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation's Summer Production Drive—Announces Acquisition of Shirley Mason

JESSE L. LASKY, vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in charge of productions, left New York last Sunday for the West Coast studios where he will immediately begin preparations for the handling of several Paramount and Artcraft productions in which new stars will appear.

Before leaving New York Mr. Lasky made public the fact that Shirley Mason, well-known screen star, had just signed a contract with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation whereby she is to be featured in John Emerson and Anita Loos stories for Paramount release. Miss Mason has appeared before the public the greater part of her seventeen years, having been identified with the stage since early childhood before going into pictures. Miss Loos and Mr. Emerson are already engaged on the story for her initial production which will be filmed in the East.

"Among the new stars who will begin work at the West Coast studios for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation," said Mr. Lasky, "are Fred Stone and Ethel Clayton, whose engagements with our organization were recently announced. By popular request from exhibitors throughout the country, Vivian Martin has been re-engaged under a new contract to continue her appearance in Paramount Pictures. Other stars whose names cannot be announced at this time, will also begin work in California for us early in June, their combined activities plus those of our present producing units, comprising a gigantic summer drive which will considerably enlarge our stars' series plan.

"Our contract with Lina Cavalieri has also just been renewed. Madame Cavalieri's new Paramount vehicle now being completed at Fort Lee, 'Gismonda,' is the biggest production yet staged by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in the East and will mark another notable achievement for Paramount. Edward Jose, the talented director whose past successes have placed him foremost among the masters of motion picture technique, is staging 'Gismonda.' Madame Cavalieri will continue to work in the East.

"Activities in our Eastern studios are running along at record pace and despite the unfavorable weather we have had here recently the New York and New Jersey companies are well ahead of their release schedule. Elsie Ferguson has just left for Montana where she will appear in a new Artcraft picture under the direction of Marshall Neilan, who has just finished the George M. Cohan picture for Artcraft release, 'Hit the Trail Holliday.' Pauline Frederick has just completed 'Fedora' and Marguerite Clark, after her triumphant Liberty Loan tour, has started on a new picture taken from a famous subject, the title of which I am unable to mention at this time.

"Although many of our stars have been working exclusively for the Government in connection with the Third Liberty Loan campaign their pictures are well in advance of release dates so that these engagements for Uncle Sam will not delay the usual presentation of their newest screen vehicles. I am particularly pleased with the manner in which the Eastern studios held up against fuelless days, stormy weather and other handicaps. With the improved working facilities as a result of better weather in the East and West, the forthcoming summer will find our studios more active than ever before."

Mr. Lasky will remain in California until the early part of June when the increased activities of the Western studios will be well under way. Since he has left Hollywood he has been extremely busy in New York, his Red Cross and patriotic efforts here adding considerably to his work of supervising the producing activities of his company.

"A Dog's Life" in 240 New York City Houses

According to a report filed by Sales Manager Carey Wilson, of the First National Exchange of New York, the Charlie Chaplin comedy, "A Dog's Life," was booked by 160 of the leading houses of Greater New York the week of April 21, and 80 others, with an average seating capacity of 1,000, during the week of the 28th.

During the week of the 21st the comedy was headlined the entire week at Keith's Palace, Colonial, Royal, Alhambra and Riverside theatres; Keith's Harlem Opera House; Proctor's Fifth avenue, Twenty-third Street, Fifty-eighth Street and 125th Street theatres; Shackman's Eighty-first Street: Fox's Riviera, Star, Audubon, Nemo, Washington, Crotona and City; Lowe's New York, National, Victoria, American, Circle, 116th Street, Greeley Square, Forty-second Street, Eighty-sixth Street, Boulevard and Orpheum; the Grand Opera House, and B. S. Moss's Regent, Hamilton, Prospect and Jefferson.

In Brooklyn, during the week of April 28, "A Dog's Life" was one of the most heavily advertised features at Keith's Orpheum and Bushwick as well as the Crescent theatre; and was also selected by the management to open the New Brevoort.

Fannie Ward Assumes Yet Another War Duty

Fannie Ward, the Pathe star, has undertaken still another war duty. In addition to her various activities she is raising a fund for the Motion Picture Hospital for Convalescent Soldiers.

An appeal for subscriptions was received last week at the Pathe home office from Miss Ward. Because of the worthiness of the cause and the popularity of the screen favorite a collection was taken and the company made a subscription doubling the amount which will be added to the fund which is is raising on the Pacific Coast where she is at work upon "A Japaiese Nightingale."

"U" to Try Shorter Features

Laemmle Goes to Coast to Put Numerous Innovations Into Effect—Universal to Keep Eye on All Magazine Stories

CARL LAEMMLE, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, has gone to Universal City, where he will take up with the technical staff numerous suggestions of the New York executives regarding productions. One of the innovations Mr. Laemmle expects to put into effect is the making of two and three-reel features from the material which heretofore has been extended into five and six-reel output.

An ordinary five-reel picture, according to Mr. Laemmle, should be produced from a story in which there appears to be enough material to make ten reels. After the picture is made careful eliminations will cut it to not more than five or six thousand feet at the outside with the picture action smooth and continuous.

"The same applies to many of the five-reel features now being marketed," said Mr. Laemmle. "Numerous of them should be cut to three or even two reels, and they will be much more attractive from the standpoint of the audience.

"The time when a two-reel subject can be padded to a five-reel feature has not gone by of course, but the time when this may be done and the perpetrators collect money on the act has passed.

To impress this upon the producing force is one of the big reasons for my present trip. I want to prove to our directors that it is possible to make a splendid two or three-reel picture that is so good that the exhibitors throughout the country will advertise the short subject in preference to the longer subject on their program, and upon which they look as their feature. In one or two isolated cases in the picture business it has been demonstrated that my idea is not wrong."

As a clincher to his argument that short subjects be featured as against five-reel features, Mr. Laemmle asked:

"Do you know of a single exhibitor who advertises a feature on the day on which he runs a Chaplin?"

"But under no circumstances," Mr. Laemmle explained, "should my advocacy of the short feature be construed as an opinion from me that I think the longer feature should be eliminated. I do not advocate any such thing. But I do say that two-reel subjects should not be padded to five reels. And I do predict that in the very near future the exhibitors will make their program of two, three or four short subjects unless the market affords enough regular, unpadded feature pictures. The day when a producer can flash two and three hundred feet of a flash back simply to produce footage is rapidly ending."

to produce footage is rapidly ending, in fact its doom has long since been announced and its death knell sounded.

Educational Films Foster Laughs

General Manager Hammons Reports Record Business on Hooligan and Katzenjammer Comic Cartoons

"SMILE and buy a Liberty Loan Bond" is one of the slogans adopted by E. W. Hammons, vice-president and general manager of the Educational Films Corporation in its recent advertising. This was meant as a patriotic slogan, but its spirit is also reflected in the phenomenal business that is being reported by the company.

According to Mr. Hammons, the animated cartoons of "Happy Hooligan" and "The Katzenjammer Kids" have had a wonderful reception all across the continent. Newspaper clippings from San Francisco and other cities tell of the manner in which they have been received, and bookings from each one of the exchange centers have shown a higher mark than was expected.

This is largely explained by the high quality and by the big publicity drive that has been put behind these comics by the Hearst syndicate of newspapers. These comics are read every Sunday by not less than 25,000,000 people. The Hearst syndicate of papers, which includes not only those owned by Mr. Hearst himself, but those subscribing for the service have been giving much publicity not only to these cartoons, but to the entire product of the company.

This publicity campaign is to be enlarged with the addition of Henry MacMahon as publicity manager for the company. There will be a comprehensive plan followed in sending out this material.

News from Robert C. Bruce is that the first of his Scenics Beautiful may be expected within a short time. In the meantime titles are being made and editing is progressing rapidly on the George D. Wright pictures of "Mexico of Today," and announcement concerning them is expected within a short time. Already several presentations of the entire series of these pictures have been arranged by leading exhibitors.

Last week Educational Films scored what is claimed as a world's record with the exhibition of short subjects at the three leading New York houses, the Rialto, Rivoli and Strand. At the Rialto there were three different pictures from this company including "Italian Hydroplane," "Logging in Italy," and "Here and There in Venice," while at the Rivoli the Carrarra marble quarries and the cathedral at Milan, two different pictures, were featured. At the Strand the Educational-Ditmars picture of wild horses was one of the most interesting hits the whole of program. Educational Films products were also shown at practically every other Broadway motion picture house and in every instance were vigorously applauded.

Petrova and Director Are Back from South

Accompanied by Ralph Ince, her director, and a staff of studio employees, Madame Petrova returned last week to New York from Asheville, North Carolina. Madame Petrova has been busy in the South for several days, securing scenes for the fifth special Petrova production, "Patience Sparhawk." This story, adapted from the novel by the famous author, Gertrude Atherton, was especially chosen, it is stated, because of the opportunities offered for beautiful exteriors and out-of-the-ordinary photographic effects. In order to be assured of the best possible results in the achievement of these ends, Madame Petrova and her director, Ralph Ince, decided to shoot many of the scenes in and around Asheville, a section of the South rich in natural beauty and excellent picture locations. The scenes obtained by the Petrova cameraman, Harry Harris, are said to have fully justified their expectations.

G. V. Smith in United P. T. Cincinnati Office

George Vivian Smith, lately president of the Economy Grocery Stores Company, of Cincinnati, who has taken a prominent part in the organization of co-operative companies for the buying and distributing of many lines of merchandise, has become identified with the United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., and assigned to the Cincinnati office under the management of C. C. Hite.

Harry Carey Signs for Two Years More

Harry Carey has signed a contract agreeing to appear in Universal pictures for two years more. The contract is said to call for a large increase in salary, largely owing to Carey's splendid work in "Phantom Riders," "Straight Shooting," "Wild Women," and several other equally good pictures. The manner in which he has come forward as a true "Western type" also makes him a valuable asset to Universal.

Cohen, of Bee-Hive, Reports Good Bookings

Milton L. Cohen, manager of the Bee-Hive Exchange of New York, has just closed schedule contracts with the following theatres for the Billy West King-Bee Comedies:

Home and Star theatres, Newark, N. J.; City theatre, Hoboken, N. J., and the Princess theatre, Jersey City, N. J. Westchester theatre, Bronx; Palace theatre, Bronx; Regina theatre, and Arch theatre, all of Greater New York.

The up state bookings arranged for the Bee-Hive include the Stratton theatre, Middletown; La Rochelle theatre, New Rochelle; Strand theatre, North Tarrytown; Star theatre, Ravena; Park theatre, Mappenger Falls; Stratford theatre, Poughkeepsie, and Bright Spot theatre in Rensselaer.

Exhibitors Box Office Reports

LAST MINUTE REPORTS

These Bulletins Came "Under the Wire" as Motion Picture News Went to Press

The Great Adventure (Pathe-Bessie Love)—"Rather weak." "Bessie Love no drawing card."

The Honor of His House (Paramount-Hayakawa)—"Good picture." "Well liked here." "The end of this picture did not please any too well. Went big, though."

The Landloper (Metro-Lockwood)—"Not as good as usual." "Just an average program offering, but Harold Lockwood always draws well."

The Unbeliever (Edison Special)—"Returned for a week and scored extra big."

Mr. Fix-It (Artcraft-Fairbanks)—"This is a very pleasing picture." "Very good."

My Four Years in Germany (First National)—"Extra big for a week." "Prices raised to a dollar top. Broke all records of four years' standing. Every American should see this feature."

Tarzan of the Apes (First National)—"Extra big. One week." "Extra big. Interesting picture but bad finish." "Fine picture but extra business did not materialize."

House of Silence (Paramount-Reid)—"Very Bold. Has no place on Paramount program."

Editor's Note: The Box Office Report chart includes all pictures released within the previous eight weeks on which a sufficient number of exhibitor reports have been received to base a verdict. In the column "Average of Exhibitors' Reports" the term "Extra Big" indicates a picture which far surpassed expectations; "Big" means a picture doing better than the usual business for that day under average conditions; "Average" is the grading given the production on which business held up to normal; "Poor" indicates the picture falling below normal in box office and entertainment value.

TITLE, STAR, AND BRAND	AVERAGE OF EXHIBITORS' REPORTS	EXHIBITORS' OWN COMMENTS
AMARILLY OF CLOTHESLINE ALLEY (Mary Pickford—Artcraft	Extra Big	"Excellent and well liked by all." "Pleasing picture, plenty of good laughs and satisfactory box office attraction." "Keep Mary in this class of stuff and everyone will be happy." "Good picture." "Please immensely. Neilan a great director. Good cast and some human characters."
AMERICAN LIVE WIRE, AN (Williams—Vitagraph)	Average	"It will satisfy at any rate." "Nothing extra, but fair card." "Earle popular here." "Very poor. Lacks story interest."
ANSWER, THE (Rubens—Triangle)	Average	"Very artistic; somewhat padded." "Ordinary."
ANN'S FINISH (Fischer—Mutual)	Average	"Fair program offering." "Held well for three days." "Very good entertainment."
BELL BOY, THE (Arbuckle—Paramount)	Extra Big	"Thanks to Roscoe, Keating and St. John am drawing them in despite Holy Week." "Great Stuff!" "Extra Good." "Fatty's best yet. Did record biz." His best." "He never made a better one than this." "Some picture."
BELOVED TRAITOR, THE (Marsh—Goldwyn)	Average	"Did not draw." "Fair picture." "Conventional subject." "Good story, but star not popular here."
BIT OF JADE (Minter—Mutual)	Average	"Minter is well liked."
BLUEBIRD, THE (Artcraft)	Average	"Big for ladies and children." "Wonderful." "Splendid picture but our patrons don't take to this kind." "Disappointment from every angle." "They do not want fairy tales." "Average person didn't care for this."
BLUE BLAZES RAWDEN (Hart—Artcraft)	Average	"Well liked." "Hart reissues are hurting his new pictures." "Big." "His worst picture.' "Two days to capacity." "Pretty good." "Very good."
BRACE UP (Rawlinson—Bluebird)	Average	"Better than average."
BRASS CHECK, THE (Bushman-Bayne—Metro)	Average	"Big. Bushman coming back strong." "Good Bushman but stars are not liked here." "Few more like this and Bushman will class 1A." "Not as good as usual for Bushman.' "Very good." "Star does not have his old drawing power. Good picture."
BREAKERS AHEAD (Dana—Metro)	Average	"Fine picture." "Good."
BROADWAY BILL (Lockwood—Metro)	Average	"Lockwood good; story poor." "They all like Lockwood." "Excellent picture but Lockwood is not a pugilist." "Very good." "Star well liked. Good picture."
BY RIGHT OF PURCHASE (Norma Talmadge—Select)	Big	"Splendid." "With 'The Bell Boy' a 100% show."
CAPTAIN OF HIS SOUL, THE (Desmond—Triangle)	Average	"Desmond has done better."
CLEOPATRA (Bara—Fox)	Extra Big	"Will play a return date on this sure." "Good picture, business rotten (maybe Holy Week?)." "Great show." "Excellent."
CLAIM, THE (Story—Metro)	Average	"Good business." "Exceptionally strong Western, Story at her best." "Story has no drawing power here." "Star is popular." "Best picture we have had with Story." "Pictures like this will put Story a story higher." "Good picture. Well directed."
CROSS BEARER, THE	Average	"Big for two days." "Booked for week, closed on Thursday." "Good picture."
DEVIL'S WHEEL, THE (Brockwell—Fox)	Big	"Great picture." "Some title for my class." "Big. William Scott deserves equal credit with star." "Dandy show; patrons liked it." "Star better than in others." "Average picture." "Average business." "Best Fox Special this year."
DEBT OF HONOR, THE (Hyland—Fox)	Average	"Fair picture." "Not much." "Pleasing picture." "Good picture; star not known yet. "Very good." "Good show."
DESIRED WOMAN, THE (Harry Morey—Vitagraph)	Average	"Only a fair picture." "Good picture."
FAITH ENDURIN' (Stewart—Triangle)	Big	"This star drawing better every time." "Fine value." "Good picture. Well received. One of Stewart's best."
EAGLE'S EYE, THE (Wharton Serial)	Big	"Continues pleasing." "First episode went over big." "Drew fair business in poor serial town." "Second episode slow."

TITLE, STAR, AND BRAND	AVERAGE OF EXHIBITORS' REPORTS	EXHIBITORS' OWN COMMENTS
FAMILY SLEKETON, THE (Ray—Paramount)	Average	"Sermon has no place on the screen. Keep Ray in Rube roles." "Very disappointing." "Ray drew them but it didn't please." "Ray draws very well." "Poorest Ray in long time." "Not up to standard." "Nothing to picture." "Well liked. My patrons like him better in more comedy." "Very good."
FIGHTIN' GRIN, THE (Farnum—Bluebird)	Average	"Not up to Farnum's standard." "Poor picture for Bluebird." "Farnum popular here."
FLOOR BELOW, THE (Normand—Goldwyn)	Big	"Very good. Best yet from Normand." "Nice picture, fully up to Goldwyn standard." "Mabel big favorite." "Picture good though drew poor. Six reels too long for small house." "Very good, but did not draw." "Pleasing." "Very satisfactory. Drewfairly well all three days." "Very good."
FLARE-UP SAL (Dalton—Paramount)	Big	"While good it didn't go over." "Pleased everybody." "As good as Dalton has done." "Big." "Ince Standard. Standard at her best in this type of play"
FLASH OF FATE (Rawlinson—Universal)	Big	"They want good melodrama." "Pleasing." "Picture mediocre."
FORBIDDEN PATH, THE (Bara—Fox)	Big	"Bara in a very pleasing role." "Pleased the Bara fans." "Big for two weeks."
GIRL AND THE JUDGE, THE (Tell—Mutual)	Average	"Very nice picture."
IRL IN THE DARK, THE (Myers—Bluebird)	Average	No comments received with reports.
GIRL WITH CHAMPAGNE EYES, THE (Carmen—Fox)	Average	"A good picture." "Went big for me." "Average value." "Star not popular." "Very good picture." "Below Fox standard." "Fair program picture."
GHOSTS OF YESTERDAY (Talmadge—Select)	Extra Big	"Best Talmadge to date." "Star becoming more popular with each picture." "A good bet." "Great with the women." "Conceded one of Talmadge's best." "Beautiful production star popular. Good business." "Best Talmadge to date. She is growing popular." "Fine picture. Star well liked." "Repeat booking. Stood them up while raining outside."
HARD ROCK BREED (Wilson—Triangle)	Big	"Went very well." "Good title; sounds picturesque." "Great picture, strong cast."
HANDS DOWN (Salisbury—Bluebird)	Big	"Not Salisbury's best by any means." "If anybody but Bluebird had this they'd ask $150 for it."
HEADIN' SOUTH—Artcraft)	Extra Big	"This star made our Holy Week business best we ever had. Will play return on this." "Not as good as others. Stealing Hart's stuff won't do." "Great medicine for the box office."
HEIRESS FOR A DAY (Thomas—Triangle)	Average	"Pleased audience extremely well." "Clean comedy drama." "Fine picture."
HIDDEN PEARLS (Hayakawa—Paramount)	Average	"Good picture." "Drew well; star popular here." "Story has objectionable episode."
HIRED MAN, THE (Ray—Paramount)	Big	"Three days; great." "Star becoming great favorite; show well done." "Ray a coming big star." "Star very pleasing." "Good."
HIS ROBE OF HONOR (Walthall—Paralta)	Poor	"Fair picture but star does not draw." "Title bad." "Little too long." "Too heavy and slow."
HOPPER, THE (Mong—Triangle)	Average	"Good picture."
HOUSE OF GLASS, THE (Young—Select)	Big	"Up to standard." "This kind will bring Clara back." "Good picture." "Not up to standard."
HOUSE OF HATE, THE (Pathe Serial)	Big	"Sustains interest."
HUCK AND TOM (Jack Pickford—Paramount)	Extra Big	"Fine for family trade." "Good clean stuff that brings business." "Dandy picture." "Becoming very popular." "Excellent." "Positively nothing to surpass this release. A clean-up anywhere."
INNOCENT (Ward—Pathe)	Big	"Pleased most of my patrons and drew well." "Good picture; fair drawing card." "Didn't take as well as it ought." "It's a shame to make Fanny act so young." "Very good. This star is sure to please." "Good feature." "Splendidly directed picture. Didn't hold up second day." "Fine picture."
JACK SPURLOCK, PRODIGAL (Walsh—Fox)	Poor	"Did not please." "Star draws them big, but story is off." "Walsh pulls well." "Not up to his standard." "Poor picture for George Walsh."
KAISER, THE (Jewel)	Extra Big	"Biggest since 'Birth of a Nation'! Broke all house records.
KEYS OF THE RIGHTEOUS (Bennet—Paramount)	Average	"Title against picture; story did not go." "Just fair." "Not a drawing card." "Extra good." "Good picture."
KNIFE, THE (Brady—Select)	Average	"Poorest Select picture. Not fault of star; uninteresting story." "Did not draw. Crude melodrama; way below standard."
LA TOSCA (Fredericks—Paramount)	Average	"Good production, well staged, but not generally liked." "This type of picture does not draw well." "People do not care for this kind of play. Anything with costume is dead." "Very good picture." "Failed to please and failed to produce the cash. Too gruesome. Heard many complaints. Not a laugh in picture." "Very good."
LAND OF PROMISE, THE (Burke—Paramount)	Average	"Star was killed by serial, 'Gloria's Romance'!"
LES MISERABLES (Farnum—Fox)	Extra Big	"Capacity, great feature." "Return engagement, business held up all week." "Great story; great production." "Very fine production." "Farnum does his best work." "Patrons satisfied, but too long for my house." (700 seats in high rent section.) "Strong picture. Well done. Star at his best."
LIGHT WITHIN, THE (Petrova—First National)	Average	"Nothing big." "Just a fair feature." "Good picture."
LIMOUSINE LIFE (Thomas—Triangle)	Average	"Appeals to the ladies, but not the men."
LOVE ME (Dalton—Paramount)	Average	"Star well liked. This is a dandy picture." "Big business for me." "Fair drawing power but watch this star." "One of the best we have had."
LOADED DICE (Keenan—Pathe)	Big	"Remarkable. Great production." "Good picture." "No drawing power." "Ought to have done better; comments good." "Morbid story. Lots of crime. Very dramatic." "Good story but this star gets no dough." "Splendid picture, though story is morbid. Star fine." "BoMWW to please them all."
MADAME JEALOUSY (Fredericks—Paramount)	Poor	"Star not popular in this picture." "Not suited for pictures, too deep. Waste of time to produce such stuff." "Nix." "Patrons don't like this style." "Poor Pauline doesn't get a chance." "Ordinary." "Very bad story." "Appealed to better class, but not a two-day star here."
MENACE, THE (Vitagraph)	Average	"Good picture, both are going to make stars." "Fair production." "Excellent picture but no pull." "Poor picture."
MIDNIGHT TRAIL, THE (Russell—Mutual)	Average	"Our patrons said this was Russell's best." "Good." "Not up to Russell's standard.' "Fair."
MOTHER'S SIN, A (Williams—Vitagraph)	Average	"Not up to standard but star got it over." "Below average." "Just a piccure.'
MORAL LAW, THE (Brockwell—Fox)	Average	"Poor photography, subject will not please." "Story good." "Photography punk, picture the same." "Good picture."
NANCY COMES HOME (Triangle)	Average	"Story pleased." "Fair picture."
NAUGHTY, NAUGHTY (Bennett—Paramount)	Big	"Extra good. This is a dandy comedy." "One of the best. Make more like this." "A good picture. Poor title."
NEW LOVE FOR OLD (Hall—Universal)	Average	No comments received with reports.
NEARLY MARRIED (Kennedy—Goldwyn)	Average	"Public divided on this star, she don't draw here."
NOBODY'S WIFE (Lovely—Universal)	Average	No comments received with reports.
OTHER MAN, THE (Morey—Vitagraph)	Average	"Good picture, Morey popular." "Perfect—100." "Liked." "Star and Grace Dormond well liked."
OTHER WOMAN, THE (Hyland—Pathe)	Average	"They liked this." "Excellent picture, attractive star."
ONE MORE AMERICAN (Beban—Paramount)	Average	"Good picture and pleased public." "Beban doesn't draw." "Good, pleasing picture." "One of the most interesting pictures in a long time." "Very good." "He is an artist." "Great stuff."
OUR LITTLE WIFE (Kennedy—Goldwyn)	Poor	"Poor story, star pleasing." "Only a fair picture." "Nothing to title or picture." "Not equal to her other two." "Pleasing star but nothing wonderful as drawing card."
PAINTED LIPS (Lovely-Universal)	Average	No comments received with reports.

TITLE, STAR, AND BRAND	AVERAGE OF EXHIBITORS' REPORTS	EXHIBITORS' OWN COMMENTS
PETTICOAT PILOT, A (Martin—Paramount)........	Big	"Immense." "Star improving." "Good light feature." "Very good." "Title means nothing and star alone doesn't draw for me."
REVELATION (Nazimova—Screen Classics, Inc.)....	Big	"Liked by everybody." "One of the best I have ever seen. Nazimova wonderful." "Business held steady for four days. Picture gave wonderful satisfaction."
REVENGE (Storey—Metro)........................	Average	"Not satisfactory to our patrons." "Back to the nicolet with this sort."
RUGGLES OF RED GAP (Holmes—Essanay).........	Big	"Everybody enjoyed and boosted this."
SIX SHOOTER ANDY (Mix—Fox)..................	Poor	"Good picture but not in it with Mix's first." "Title too melodramatic." "They didn't come." "Fair Western; pleased." "Poor picture. Poor photography." "Not as good as 'Cupid's Round-Up.' "
SON OF DEMOCRACY (Chapin—Paramount)........	Big	"Exceptionally good attraction." "Fair but did not hold up with first week." "Good family card." " Keeping them away." "Fine stuff." "Ninth of series. Still going strong. Brought many new faces to theatre." "Best series ever produced." "Big drawing card." "Great pictures." "Opinion divided on 'Mother'."
SONG OF SONGS (Ferguson—Paramount)...........	Average	"Fine picture. Ferguson will prove drawing card soon." "Very fine." "Star very good but one of those pictures that goes with half and other half doesn't like it."
SPLENDID SINNER, THE (Garden—Goldwyn).......	Average	"Fine production." "Great." "Well produced but six reels too long for small house." "Very bad ending." "Very good picture." "Very good, but nothing to make them talk or send others." "Magnificent production, but ending very bad." "Much better jhan her first picture. Second day better than first." "Good picture. Public well satisfied though opinion divided on the tragic ending. Went over better than 'Thais'."
STELLA MARIS (Pickford—Artcraft)................	Big	"Great. We cut to 5879 feet." "One of her best." "Business held up on second day to first. "Made big hit." "Repeated to good business."
SHELL GAME (WEHLEN—Metro)..................	Average	"Very pleasing picture." "Excellent production." "Well liked by all."
SHOES THAT DANCED (Starke—Triangle)..........	Average	"Pleased."
SILENT SACRIFICE (Brady—Select)...............	Average	"Fair picture, but no knockout."
STRONG WAY, THE (Elvidge—World).............	Average	No comments received with reports.
SUNSHINE NAN (Pennington—Paramount)..........	Average	"Poor offering." "Star's last production well liked and patrons expected better picture.'
THING WE LOVE (Reid—Paramount)...............	Poor	"Poor picture."
TIGER MAN, THE (Hart—Artcraft)................	Big	"Good picture, but locally all exhibitors are killing Hart with reissues." "Hart not drawing as well as when first with Artcraft." "Some kind soul should steal Hart's wardrobe and guns. Then maybe we'd get a change."
TURN OF A CARD, THE (Kerrigan—Paralta).......	Big	"Broke all house records. Four days." "Better than his first." "This company has them all beaten."
UNFAITHFUL and MARRIAGE BUBBLE (Combination Bill—Triangle).............................	Average	"Seemed good to get away from the long features. Public enjoyed the change."
UNDER SUSPICION (Bushman-Bayne—Metro).......	Average	"Everyone seemed to like this." "Best Bushman in months." "Well Liked."
WEAVER OF DREAMS (Dana—Metro)..............	Average	"Dana holds up fairly well. Picture no good." "Poor attraction."
WHIMS OF SOCIETY (Clayton—World)............	Average	No comments received with reports.
WHISPERING CHORUS, THE (DeMille—Artcraft)..	Average	"Acting excellent. Story too morbid." "Very gruesome.
WIDOW'S MIGHT, THE (Eltinge—Paramount).......	Average	"Very good picture." "Clean, excellent novelty." "Fine, one of his best." "Eltinge best in this so far." "Better business than last one, Eltinge improving as draw." "Stories of this star too much alike." "Eltinge pleases." "Eltinge does good work and drew for two days."
WIFE HE BOUGHT, THE (Myers—Bluebird)........	Big	"Excellent attraction."
WILD STRAIN, THE (Vitagraph)..................	Average	No comments received.
WITHIN THE CUP (Barriscale—Paralta)............	Big	"Not as good as her first one. An entertaining picture but too long." "Good story, well acted, but too long."
WASP, THE (Gordon—World)......................	Average	No comments received.
WOOING OF PRINCESS PAT, THE (Vitagraph).....	Poor	"No room for this type."
WILD WOMEN (Carey—Universal)..................	Big	"Good stuff." "Pretty good picture. Better than average business for two days."

FLASHBACKS

Individual Reports Received on Reissues and Pictures Released Previous to February

Apostle of Vengeance, The (Triangle) — " One of Hart's best." " Business average." " We repeated this one three times, to success."

Argument, The (Triangle)—" Average."

Avenging Trail (Metro)—" Average."

Bab's Matinee Idol (Paramount)—" Average business here."

Bargain, The (Hart re-issue)—" Business big."

By Right of Purchase (Select)—" Rain killed this for me." " Business average."

Clean Up, The (Bluebird)—" Average."

Daughter of Destiny (Petrova)—" Dandy picture, and did big business."

Family Skeleton, The (Paramount)—" Charles Ray was well liked, and picture was good." " Patrons like Ray better than ever."

For the Freedom of the World (Goldwyn)—" Extra big for me."

Headin' South (Artcraft)—" Excellent picture, which gave excellent service." " Business average."

Love Letters (Paramount)—" Average."

Man Without a Country, The (Jewel)—" Did average business for me."

Men Who Have Made Love to Me (Essanay)—" Very much out of the ordinary." " Well liked, with business big."

Pride of New York, The (Fox)—" Big business."

Public Defender, The (State Rights)—" Good picture, business average."

Scandal (Select)—" Gave universal satisfaction."

Shoes That Danced (Triangle)—" Very poor."

Sign Invisible, The (First National)—" Good picture that pleased the majority."

Slacker's Heart, A (State Rights)—" Did big business for two days."

Tarzan of the Apes (First National)—" Ran it for a week, starting with extra big business, which dwindled gradually until Saturday." " Did big at the box-office."

Troublemakers (Fox)—" Average business." " No business account of public meeting."

Vortex, The (Triangle)—" Very good picture."

Whip, The (State Rights)—" A remarkable picture." " Did very good business for me."

Wild Women (Universal)—" Average."

Zeppelin's Last Raid, The (U. S. Exhibitors)—" Big business first day and poor the second."

EXHIBITOR TO EXHIBITOR REVIEW SERVICE

[These reviews, by P. S. Harrison, are based solely on the entertaining qualities of the picture. All other factors are considered of secondary importance.]

"Masks and Faces"

World Has a Good Bet in This All-Star English Production

(World—May 6)

"MASKS AND FACES" has been produced at the invitation of the Academy of Dramatic Art, of London, England, and, aside from the entertaining qualities it possesses, it ought to create a stir in your community, as it presents the greatest stellar aggregation of the English stage. Celebrities such as Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, Gertrude Elliott, Irene Vanbrugh, Henry B. Irving, Gladys Cooper, Stella Campbell, Dennis Nelson Terry, Ben Webster and many others appear in it, willing for the purpose of charity to lay aside their personal feelings and take minor parts.

The story is based on the novel by Charles Reade. It is about "Peg Woffington," a humble orange girl peddler in a little town, who in time grew to be the idol of the English stage. She met a handsome man and they fell in love with each other, but when she discovered he was married she willingly gave him up and helped his wife to regain his love.

With a cast headed by Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, who portrays the role of Triplet, this offering will appeal best to high class audiences and it will prove a worthy entertainment.

ADVERTISING SUGGESTIONS.—This is a costume play and, as the present-day picture-goer doesn't favor them, you should avoid placing in the lobby of your theatre anything that would indicate its nature. I would suggest you use hand painted signs instead of the regular advertising matter usually furnished with a picture. If you can secure a picture of each of the principal stars, it would be the best thing you could use. The main thing is to get them in, then you know they will go away satisfied.

In your newspaper advertising lay emphasis on the fact that the greatest stage celebrities of the English stage appear in this picture.

"The Soul of Buddha"

Theda Bara Fans Have Another Good Time in Store

(Fox-Standard)

THIS is a melodrama that has been very artistically produced and is perfectly clean.

The story, written by Miss Bara herself, deals with Bava, a young Hindu girl, whose mother dedicated her to a Buddhist temple as a sacred dancer. Later she runs away and marries Sir John Dare, a major in the English Army, by whom she was attracted while dancing at a religious festival. For this she was accursed by Ysora, the High Priest, who later followed them and killed their child and its nurse. In Paris, while dancing an Oriental dance on the stage, Ysora, disguised as a Buddhist, kills Bava before the audience, thus carrying out his oath of vengeance.

Theda Bara fans will not be disappointed in this picture.

"M'liss"

Bret Harte's Story Not of Mary Pickford's Usual Style, Directed by Marshall Neilan

(Artcraft—May 13)

THE last reel of this feature is the whole picture, practically speaking, the balance being rather slow and uninteresting, with the exception, of course, of the several amusing Pickford pranks and a few other humorous situations, which, however, are "trimmings" only and not the main plot.

The scenario has been taken from the book by Bret Harte. The story, of course, is a standard favorite. As a picture, however, I don't think it is the best that could be given to this star. A successful book does not always make a good picture, as the screen has a different effect on a person. A father who is a drunkard, for instance, when given to such a star as Mary Pickford, is not a very acceptable event, while the introduction of the booze bottle will do harm in proportion to the number of times it is seen. Again, a murder in a Mary Pickford picture is just as pleasing as an average size family's meal seasoned with a bucketful of salt.

The story, in a few words, is about a wild, untutored, but courageous and good-hearted girl who knows how to take care of herself, daughter of a drunken father, who fell in love with the handsome teacher. When her father is murdered the suspicion rests upon him. Eventually the real assassin is found.

The direction is faultless and the photography like a dream, and, had the story been as good in proportion, this feature would be a knockout. As it is, it is above the average, with an appeal mostly to the grown-ups.

"How Could You, Caroline?"

"Clean and Entertaining" the Verdict for Bessie Love's Latest Pathe

(Pathe Play—May 6)

BESSIE LOVE looks better in this feature than in any one that I have seen her in in the past, and, although there is nothing big about it, I consider it entertaining and well worth the effort. At any rate, it is the kind that will leave a pleasant taste, as a spirit of joyfulness and youthfulness prevails throughout it.

The story deals with the adventures of a romantic school girl, who, after reading a novel, becomes afflicted with ultra-romantic ideas, has several escapades and is finally brought to "earth."

Mr. Morrison acts his role very well, aided by an excellent supporting cast.

It is a thoroughly clean attraction that will appeal to any audience, especially to a high-class one.

ADVERTISING SUGGESTIONS.—In your advertising bring out the fact that this is a boarding school photoplay, as by doing so you will attract the school boys and the girls. Also say the heroine, disguised as a cabaret dancer, attended the bachelor dinner given in honor of her sweetheart. During the dinner some of the bachelors, in agreement with the heroine, decided to have a little fun by having a mock-marriage performed between the two, but it turned out to be a real marriage, as the bachelor that performed the ceremony happened to be a real judge.

"The Seal of Silence"

Earle Williams in a Well Staged "Heavy" Drama

(Vitagraph-Blue Ribbon—April 29)

FROM a production point of view, few better produced features than this are released on the Vitagraph program, acting, directing, photography, heart appeal and dramatic strength all being of the highest merit. From an entertaining angle, however, it will please only those who like "heavy" subjects.

The story was written by William Addison Lathrop; and there are some points in it that will not appeal to a great number of picture-goers. One of them is that the story is based too much on marital discord. This may be entertainment, but not of the best kind. People want to get away from trouble, not run into it. Another point is the agony it will give some people, especially parents with little children, between the time the child is inoculated with the lockjaw germs by accident and the time he is cured. This last incident, I agree, contains good suspense, but will by no means please.

Mrs. Kathleen Kirkham deserves special mention for the dignified portrayal of her role, so does Grace Darmond. Mr. Williams is as good as usual. It is a clean offering.

"The Biggest Show on Earth"

Circus Atmosphere Adds to Pleasure in Enid Bennett's Latest

(Ince-Paramount—May 6)

THIS is a very pleasing attraction in every respect. The story was written by Florence Vincent and is about a girl who was performing in her father's circus as a lion tamer and who, when of age, was sent away to be educated. When at school the girl meets a young man and they fall in love. When later the boy's mother finds out that her son has become engaged to a girl formerly connected with the circus she is horrified, but her husband steps in and tells her that he is half owner of that circus and it was this money that enabled them to put up such a respectable front.

A real one-ring circus was hired to produce this picture, and it shows Miss Bennett (by clever substitution, of course, and still cleverer double exposure) in the cage taming the lions. The story possesses good suspense and it has an original ending. Besides, it is clean and it offers wholesome entertainment to any kind of an audience.

ADVERTISING SUGGESTIONS.—Base your advertising on the fact that a real circus, with lions and elephants, has been used in the production of this picture. You may use the following idea for your newspaper: "Do you remember the days when you used to lie awake with the anticipation that the circus was coming to town, when you tried to be the first to offer your services to carry water to the elephants, and if you failed, you made the side wall your main entrance, considering yourself lucky if you escaped the boot of a heartless watchman at the spot above the seat of your trousers? Well, this picture will bring those days back to your memory."

"The Guilt of Silence"

Harrison Can't Say Enough Good Things About Salisbury's Latest

(Blue Bird—May 13)

THIS photoplay was photographed in Big Bear Valley, in the San Bernardino Mountains, California, almost every outdoor scene being taken while the snow was still falling, and with the snow-laden trees and the snow-covered mountains in the background, nature is presented in all its beauty.

The snow scenes beat anything that I have ever seen since I have been identified with the motion picture business. They are alone worth the price of admission. As for the story, it is all about Alaska, and the kind that will hold your interest well. It is the best Salisbury contribution to date. His acting, as well as that of Miss Clifford, in "The Savage," was intensely dramatic, but in "The Guilt of Silence," it is equally as good. This offering, however, will please better, chiefly because in the former Mr. Salisbury took the part of the brute with the primitive instincts, while in this one he takes the human part—that of a man with a noble character and pure mind, to whom love gives strength to silently bear his sufferings. Such a part never fails to win the sympathy of the spectator.

This feature ought to make a hit with any audience.

"At the Mercy of Men" Shown Again

IN view of the condemnation "At the Mercy of Men" received at the hands of the reviewers, the Select Pictures Corporation has willingly eliminated the scene in the room which was particularly objectionable. For this they deserve credit, as it shows a spirit of co-operation.

Exhibitors will do well to once more read my review of this production, on Page 2662 of the May 4th issue, with the knowledge that the particular scene I mentioned there has been eliminated. Naturally, however, this does not change the fundamental conception of the story.

"The Reason Why"

"Clara Kimball Young's Best," Writes Harrison of This Select

(Select—April 30)

THIS is without question the most interesting and entertaining Clara Kimball Young picture ever made. There are several reasons for this: Miss Young is at her best, the supporting cast is composed of the best talent obtainable, the story is excellent, and it has been produced by one of the best directors in the United States at the present time. Do you remember "Seventeen," "Great Expectations," "The Moment Before"? (The last two are named from the production point of view and not from that of entertainment). Well, the same director produced this one. He is a man who knows how to get the values out of a story and the best there is in a player.

> ## A WORD FROM THE WISE
>
> "Incidentally I might add that I have become very much interested in the reviews by P. S. Harrison. They are written in such a frank manner and with such good horse-sense that it behooves everyone interested in photoplays to follow them closely.
>
> "HAROLD B. FRANKLIN,
>
> "Manager Shea Hippodrome Company, Inc."

The story was written by Elinor Glyn, and gives Miss Young the role of the wife of a prefect of police in Russia who was assassinate,d leaving her with her only consolation, their boy, Mimo. She went to a wealthy uncle in England, who proposed to a Lord who owed him a big sum of money, that he marry his niece in return for the cancellation of his debt. She had failed to mention she had a boy before the marriage. Later the boy took sick, and while she was visiting him, her husband, out of suspicion, followed her, and when he found out, he placed the worste construction on it regarding her past. Later the boy died, and when the husband, sick of the mockery of the marriage was ready to leave her, she explained and a reconciliation took place.

There is only one bad point about this feature that keeps it from being 110 per cent perfect, and that is the death of the boy. It gives you a very sad feeling just at the time when all should be contentment.

This attraction is perfectly clean.

"The Trail to Yesterday"

Bert Lytell in a Western Drama with Thrills A-Plenty

(Metro—May 6)

THIS is a very well produced Western picture with good suspense and some good thrills. It will surely entertain.

The story is based on the novel of the same name by Charles Alden Seltzer. As a whole, it is a clean, not grewsome attraction that ought to go well with any audience, the over-particular included, for a change.

"The Million Dollar Dollies"

The Dolly Sisters in an Out of the Ordinary Attraction

(Screen Classics, Inc., Released Through Metro)

"THE MILLION DOLLAR DOLLIES" is an airy like, novel and pleasing extravaganza. It has been produced much on the order of a stage musical comedy, with artistic settings and beautiful backgrounds.

There is not much to the plot, the entertainment qualities of the offering depending almost entirely on the personalities of the Dolly sisters, who are most charming.

This ought to prove a splendid attraction for high-class audiences.

Exhibitor Service Bureau

Indianapolis Theatres Un-Sung

Only Two of Them Advertise Every Day and Newspapers Leave a Lot to Be Supplied in Co-operation

INDIANAPOLIS is a one-theatre advertising city. By that we mean that there is but one house that uses the papers seven days in the week and uses them liberally and intelligently. That is the Circle theatre, a house that ranks in the very forefront of all the motion picture houses in America for its splendid exploitation work. And as a matter of fact there is but one other theatre in the city, the Alhambra, that uses newspaper space every day. That is a sad state of affairs so far as regular advertising is concerned and in such cases one would not expect to see the newspapers doing a great deal for the motion picture houses.

Yet in such cases the answer is always that the newspapers should go out and do missionary work among the exhibitors, that they should first show the real spirit of co-operation and prove to the motion picture theatre owners how it does pay to advertise.

By the last census Indianapolis had a population of 259,000. It is a highly prosperous city and has important advantages in that it is connected with a vast territory through interurban systems. The Indianapolis papers, of course, circulate through that territory and aside from the local advantage of advertising, it seems that the theatres are overlooking an opportunity in not attempting to get these thousands of out of town people to come to Indianapolis and see their shows.

As a matter of fact there was practically no motion picture advertising in Indianapolis until the Circle theatre opened. That house has set the example and on Sundays some of the other houses are following, yet there appears to be no concerted advertising plan so far as most of the houses are concerned.

There are about fifty theatres in Indianapolis. The three first-run houses are the Circle, seating 3,100, the Alhambra with 1,100 and the Colonial with 1,200. There are seven other downtown houses with seating capacities ranging from four hundred to a thousand. The remainder are neighborhood houses with a seating capacity averaging around five hundred.

The Indianapolis situation is unusual in that there is only one Sunday paper published there. There is a total of but three papers, so that the tax on the theatre is not so great as in most cities if the theatre desires to use all of the available sources of exploitation. The papers are:

News, Afternoon daily.
Star, Morning and Sunday.
Times, Afternoon daily.

According to the Lord and Thomas circulation figures the Times has only about half the circulation of the other afternoon paper, so that it would be possible for the exhibitor to practically cover the field by using but two papers, if he desired to cut his expenses down to the minimum.

The News and the Star are conservative papers, the News especially following about the same policies that it did fifty years ago. The Times is newer and more liberal in its views. None of these papers have really done anything to encourage the motion picture theatres to use space. The News appears to merely "tolerate" motion pictures. It belongs in the class of papers that are found here and there who so far as motion pictures are concerned are living in a past age. They are prosperous and content with that prosperity, and so they are unwilling to go out and develop new business. Sometimes one does not see much difference between so-called "conservatism" and laziness.

It might take trouble to develop the motion picture houses of Indianapolis to the point where the majority of them would become good advertisers. The News might have to get out of its rut, spend a little money, do a little work and bend from its pedestal, but it would pay, and even the most "conservative" newspapers like to see an increased balance on the ledger. We regret to see the situation in this case for the News is one of the leading newspapers of the nation in public opinion. So is the Kansas City Star, but we are going to reserve until later what we have to say about the way that paper treats motion pictures.

The Star shows evidence of liberality in dealing with the picture houses. It devotes a considerable share of one of its Sunday sections to amusements, but the "drahma" is still mighty strong with the Indianapolis papers and so the photoplay is given the second position. For instance on the first page of this section, which is reproduced opposite, the stage gets the top position across the page and the motion picture has to go to the bottom. Under a small heading "What Pictures Show" there is a reading notice for each house that advertises, each one of these merely captioned with the name of the theatre. These notices are evidently regarded in the light of a necessary evil for there is no attempt made to have them appear newsy. There is also a box giving the attractions at the various houses. A separate position on another page is given the attraction at the neighborhood houses and here is a two-column layout devoted to them. This we regard as extremely liberal treatment. The advertising of these theatres is also carried in a separate position. The neighborhood houses advertising are the Keystone and Bijou with a combined space of 3½ inches double column, the Crystal with three inches double and the Victoria, Mecca, Sander's and Blair's with less than an inch double column.

The Circle theatre always uses big space on Sunday and in this issue has five full columns on "The Unbeliever." The Alhambra is the next largest advertiser with nine inches double column while the Colonial uses five double and the Isis and Regent four double. On this page the Strand, also a neighborhood house, uses 3½-inch single. The Star has a total of thirteen houses advertising.

There is not a line of real motion picture news in the Star. It goes about the work evidently in a cut and dried manner. There is really no reason why any person should read the matter that it prints except that the person is HUNTING for the show that he wants to see. With the exception of the two layouts there is nothing attractive about the motion picture department, yet it is so much better than anything that the two other papers do that it stands out by comparison.

During the week the Star is very liberal, devoting a column of reading matter a day to the leading houses. The Monday column contains actual reviews of the pictures, not mere reading notices and is well worth while. The Circle and the Alhambra are the only two houses that advertise every day, the Circle using the much larger space. On Wednesday, with its mid-week change in bill, the Alhambra comes up to large space, using 10½ inches across three columns while there are small ads from the Mecca, Colonial and Regent.

In addition to this the Star will often print a story and a picture for one of the theatres. As a matter of fact the Star is so liberal during the week that we cannot understand why the paper is not willing to publish a REAL photoplay department on Sunday, giving news and gossip of the pictures and the players.

Saturday is the "big day" for the News so far as motion pictures is concerned. It uses a three-column layout on the attractions at the leading houses and then sticks the reading notices down in a corner of the paper, where one has to hunt for them. The Circle again here uses five full columns, and the Alhambra 6½ inches across four columns. The Colonial, Isis, Keystone, Regent and Mecca also advertise. On the Wednesday change in bill the News carries advertising from the Circle, Alhambra and Isis.

(Continued on page 2827)

Indianapolis Newspapers and Most of the Exhibitors Cooperation-Shy

Three pages on the top row and the first at the left on the second row are from the Sunday Star. The next is from the Monday edition. The page at the right in the center row and at the left of the bottom row are from the Saturday News, and in the center of the bottom row from the Wednesday News, the day that many theatres change their bills. At the right of the bottom row is the Saturday page from the Times

PART TWO DRAMA and EDITORIAL PAGES 13 to 24
THE INDIANAPOLIS SUNDAY STAR.
STAGE
Viewpoint of the Critic
Music and Musicians
In the Local Theaters
The Motion-Picture Houses

REO
Motorists
Mohawk Tires
City Hall Auto Shop
MICHELIN
Why MICHELIN Universal Wears Longer
Ford, Overland and Studebaker Owners
AC SPARK PLUGS

ENGLISH'S
LA SALLE MUSICAL COMEDY COMPANY 30 PEOPLE 30 WITH GUY VOYER
The Time, The Place and The Girl
Pauline Frederick "Madame Jealousy"
Vivian Martin "A Petticoat Pilot"
BIJOU
CRYSTAL
VIOLA DANA "WEAVER OF DREAMS" VICTORIA
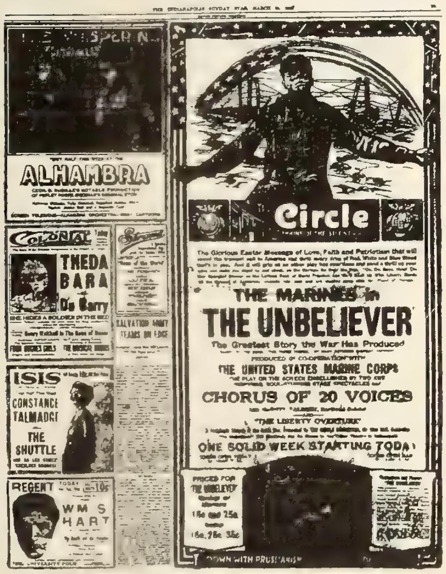
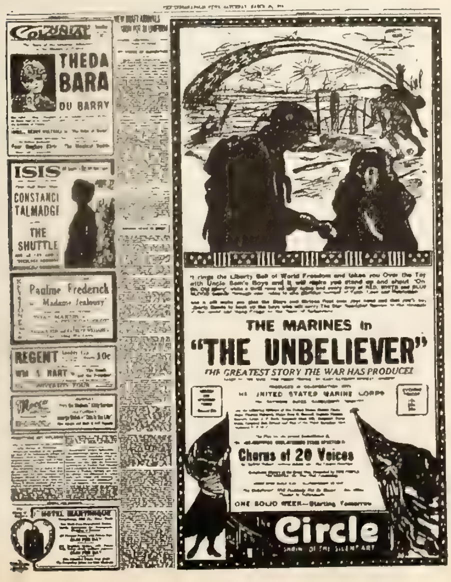
MECCA
SANDER'S
WHEN YOUR KIDNEYS FEEL LIKE LUMPS OF LEAD
Spring Specials
Oilar Banner



ALHAMBRA
Colonial THEDA BARA Du Barry
ISIS CONSTANCE TALMADGE THE SHUTTLE
REGENT WM. S. HART
Circle
THE MARINES in THE UNBELIEVER
The Greatest Story the War Has Produced
THE UNITED STATES MARINE CORPS
CHORUS OF 20 VOICES
ONE SOLID WEEK STARTING TODAY
DOWN WITH PRUSSIANISM

"THE UNBELIEVER"
CHORUS OF 20 VOICES
Circle
Alhambra
COLONIAL
REGENT
BOOKS
New Victor Records for April
Taylors
OLD FASHIONED FAMILY REMEDY FOR COLDS AND BODY BUILDING
BERGO

PHOTOPLAY ATTRACTIONS IN CITY
PETTIS DRY GOODS CO.
BAKER'S BREAKFAST COCOA
THE WHISPERING CHORUS
Cecil De Mille
Kathleen Williams
Tully Marshall
ALHAMBRA FIRST HALF NEXT WEEK



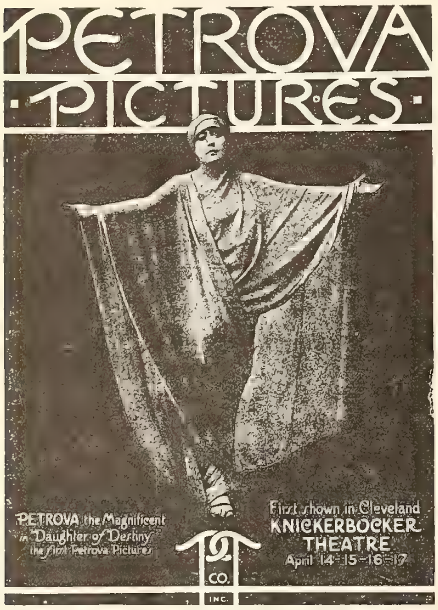
Colonial THEDA BARA DU BARRY
ISIS CONSTANCE TALMADGE THE SHUTTLE
Pauline Frederick "Madame Jealousy"
REGENT WM. S. HART
THE MARINES in "THE UNBELIEVER"
THE GREATEST STORY THE WAR HAS PRODUCED
UNITED STATES MARINE CORPS
Chorus of 20 Voices
ONE SOLID WEEK—Starting Tomorrow
Circle

Circle
THE MARINES "THE UNBELIEVER"
ALL THIS WEEK
ALHAMBRA
JACK PICKFORD
HUCK and TOM
IT PAYS TO EXERCISE
ISIS
ENGLISH'S
La Salle Musical Comedy Company
The Time, the Place—the Girl
KEITH'S
PARK
Christian Science
LYRIC
MOTHER GRAY'S SWEET POWDERS FOR CHILDREN
AEOLIAN VOCALION

KEITH'S
Circle
The Marines in "The Unbeliever"
The United States Marine Corps
COLONIAL Theda Bara
REGENT HART
ALHAMBRA FIRST HALF NEXT WEEK
The Whispering Chorus
PARK "GOOD MORNING, JUDGE"
ISIS CONSTANCE TALMADGE THE SHUTTLE

Your Idea---and Ours

HERE is a splendid example of the use of trade paper advertising for the local house. This advertisement appeared in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS with the first announcements of Petrova pictures. Evidently Emory N. Downs, manager of the Knickerbocker in Cleveland, Ohio, preserved it, and he used it intact, except that over it he lettered the name of the picture and the name of the theatre and date.



PETROVA
PICTURES
PETROVA the Magnificent in "Daughter of Destiny" the first Petrova Pictures
First shown in Cleveland
KNICKERBOCKER THEATRE
April 14-15-16-17
CO.
INC.

Many exhibitors will conclude that this was too much of an advertisement for Petrova Pictures, but it is easy enough to see the effect the Knickerbocker was after. It wanted to center the attention of Petrova fans on that house, and it certainly succeeded.

Another thing was that the display was so different from the others on the same page that it got immediate attention.

You want all the returns possible, but never ask for the moss back.

GOOD business.

Most exchanges are afraid to advertise. Most exchange managers expect the newspapers to give them frequent stories about themselves and telling the photoplay editors how they are trying to get the exhibitors to do the advertising.

Here is a case in Atlanta, Ga., where the exchange man jumped into the field, and we'll take a guess that he cleaned up as the result of it. "Blue Jeans" made a hit in Atlanta, and the Criterion, which is far ahead of the other theatres in advertising, booked a number of other Metro pictures. The exchange got into the field while the public interest was aroused, and this display, which occupied a space five columns wide and ten inches deep, must not only have brought new business to the

The Overwhelming Success
OF
BLUE JEANS
Which was shown last week at the Criterion Theater has convinced the management of the tremendous public demand for METRO pictures:- In consequence they have contracted for all forthcoming releases of the plays including the following great stars
HAROLD LOCKWOOD
FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN
and BERT LYTELL

Hereafter these wonderful stars can only be seen in the latest releases at—
The Criterion—
Distributed by METRO
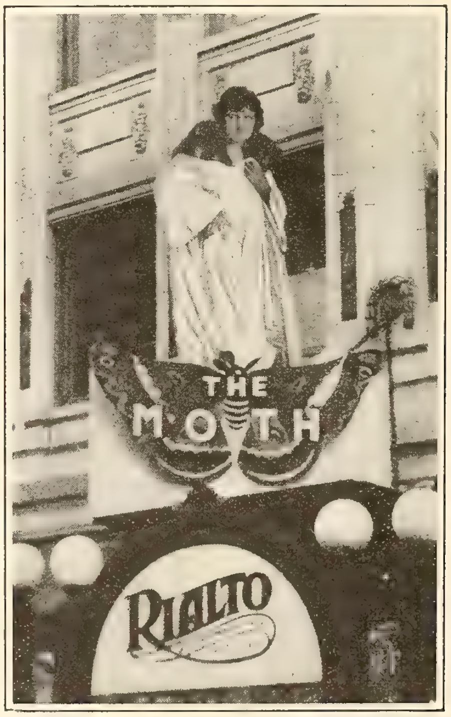
ATLANTA BRANCH 146 MARIETTA ST.

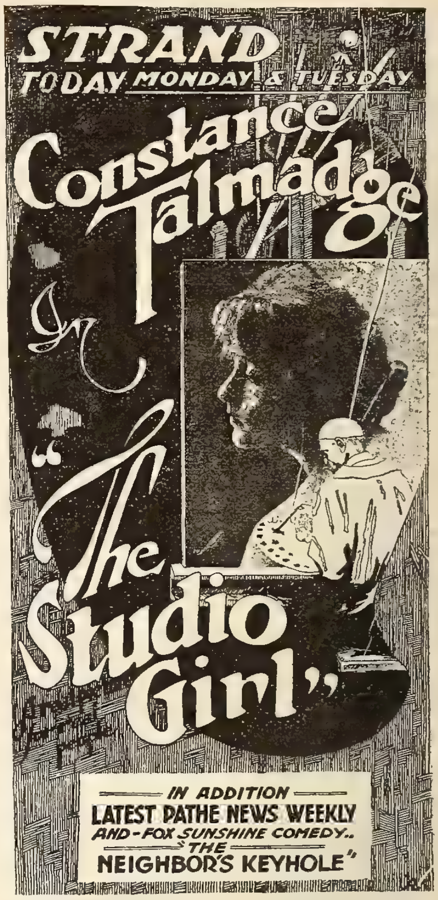
Three-ring circus methods have no more place in your exploitation than pink lemonade has in your theatre.

A. C. RALEIGH, publicity manager of the Rialto theatre, Butte, Montana, believes in getting all of the exploitation possible from every part of the theatre. During the showing of Norma Talmadge in "The Moth," he used a large cut of the star as she appeared in the production above the electric sign on the theatre.



On another occasion, during the showing of a Charlie Chaplin picture he used seven figures of the comedian, one above each of seven huge letters spelling his name.

This plan of using cut outs in connection with the front of the house is a very good one and when they can be employed above the street level so that they do not interfere with the entrance it is all the better, but they must be made so distinctive and with such large lettering that they will be easily understood.



STRAND
TODAY MONDAY & TUESDAY
Constance Talmadge
In
"The Studio Girl"
IN ADDITION
LATEST PATHE NEWS WEEKLY AND-FOX SUNSHINE COMEDY..
"THE NEIGHBOR'S KEYHOLE"

GET the idea into the advertising—some idea—and you are going to pull the people in. Theoretically, the title of the picture is its strong point. Producers strive their hardest to get a title that will attract and when you get one of this sort play that idea through your display.

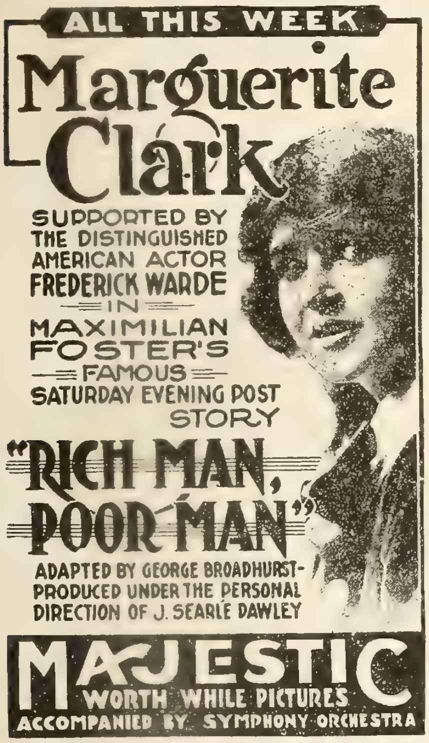
Strand theatre, Syracuse, which we have commended many, many times here gets the right principle on "The Studio Girl." Of course, when you see the way the designer has carried out the idea you say to yourself: "Waht a simple thing it is." But how many of you would go into a lot of superlatives, or meaningless expressions? Here the atmosphere of the studio has been created, a fascinating, mysterious atmosphere to most people, and it results in the sort of a display that will draw the public.

Kill off the parrot and get a bunch of nightingales.

TWENTY words less and this would have been a splendid display. Majestic theatre, Columbus, O., is generally a mighty good advertiser and in this case there was a good idea. The picture of Marguerite Clark looking from the side into the reader's eyes is well placed and the proper value is given the name of the star, the title, the name of the theatre and the date.

But there's too much detail about everyone who had anything to do with the picture. Once we wrote a caption on a cartoon on the Evening Journal and we signed it "By Artist Blank." Arthur Brisbane jumped all over us. "Don't tell the people that he's an artist. If he is they'll know it." And such is the case with Frederick

What Live Wires Are Doing



ALL THIS WEEK

Marguerite Clark

SUPPORTED BY THE DISTINGUISHED
AMERICAN ACTOR
FREDERICK WARDE
IN MAXIMILIAN
FOSTER'S FAMOUS
SATURDAY EVENING POST STORY

"RICH MAN, POOR MAN"

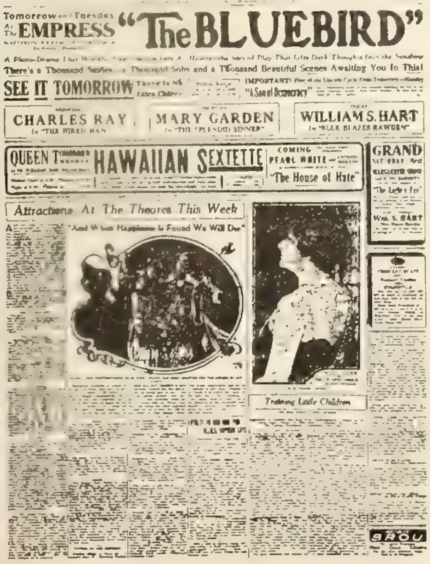
ADAPTED BY GEORGE BROADHURST-
PRODUCED UNDER THE PERSONAL
DIRECTION OF J. SEARLE DAWLEY

MAJESTIC
WORTH WHILE PICTURES
ACCOMPANIED BY SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Warde. If he is the distinguished American actor the people know it. Nor are they interested in knowing that the picture was adapted by Broadhurst and directed by Dalley. That's all good information for the trade, but it means nothing to the fan. White space would be much more valuable.

Ideas are first cousins to gold certificates.

WE have spoken before about "top of page" advertising, the sort that some few newspapers still allow. We don't like it because, as excellent as the position of the advertisement is, something else always has to be sacrificed. Here is a specimen from Owensboro, Ky. The Empress theatre has used a space five inches deep across seven columns, or a total of thirty-five inches; in other words, almost two full columns.



Tomorrow and Tuesday
At The EMPRESS
"The BLUEBIRD"

There's a Thousand Smiles a Thousand Sobs and a Thousand Beautiful Scenes Awaiting You In This!

SEE IT TOMORROW

IMPORTANT!

"A Sound Democracy"

CHARLES RAY
In "THE HIRED MAN"

MARY GARDEN
In "THE SPLENDID SINNER"

WILLIAM S. HART
In "BLUE BLAZES RAWDEN"

QUEEN Tomorrow Monday
HAWAIIAN SEXTETTE

COMING
PEARL WHITE
"The House of Hate"

GRAND

"The Eagle's Eye"

Wm. S. HART

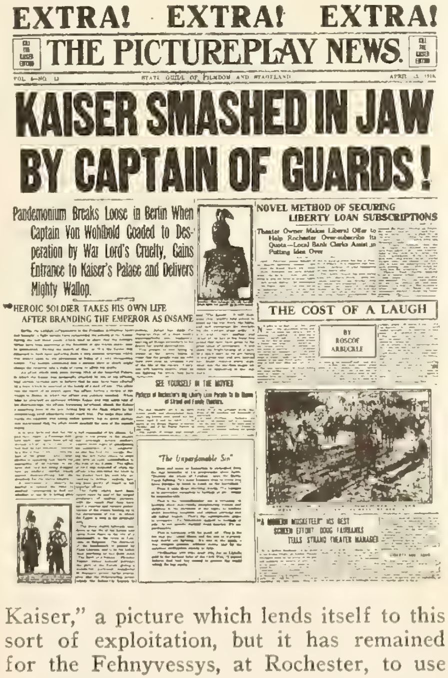
Attractions At The Theatres This Week

"And When Happiness Is Found We Will Die"

Now the first impression that is given the eye when it strikes this page is one of repulsion. The first instinct is to turn over to some other page and if that is stifled the next is to go on down to the reading matter. Another fault is that this sort of display gives long lines to read and a third fault is the temptation to use a lot more matter than would have been the case if the space had been only two or three columns wide. And still another thing that you would have to figure on is that if you get this space there is no reason why another fellow cannot get the space just under you and add still further to the confusion. Undoubtedly this advertisement attracted attention, but with the use of a cut, which was impractical in the present arrangement, we believe that far more people would have read it.

The sit-back-and-wait policy generally results in not only your own feet going to sleep, but those of your patrons, so that they can't get up the energy to walk to your theatre.

REPRODUCTION of the first page of a fake newspaper has been popular and effective advertising for "The Kaiser," a picture which lends itself to this sort of exploitation, but it has remained for the Fehnyvessys, at Rochester, to use a special edition of the Picture Play News, a weekly newspaper published in the interest of motion pictures, to put over the stunt.



EXTRA! EXTRA! EXTRA!

THE PICTUREPLAY NEWS.

STATE GUIDE OF FILMDOM AND STAGELAND

KAISER SMASHED IN JAW BY CAPTAIN OF GUARDS!

Pandemonium Breaks Loose in Berlin When Captain Von Wohlbold Goaded to Desperation by War Lord's Cruelty, Gains Entrance to Kaiser's Palace and Delivers Mighty Wallop.

HEROIC SOLDIER TAKES HIS OWN LIFE AFTER BRANDING THE EMPEROR AS INSANE

NOVEL METHOD OF SECURING LIBERTY LOAN SUBSCRIPTIONS

Theater Owner Makes Liberal Offer to Help Rochester Over-subscribe Its Quota—Local Bank Clerks Assist in Putting Idea Over

THE COST OF A LAUGH

BY ROSCOE ARBUCKLE

SEE YOURSELF IN THE MOVIES

"The Unpardonable Sin"

The first page, which is reproduced here, was a smashing ad for "The Kaiser," and it was particularly effective because it reached not only all of the regular readers of the paper, but hundreds of extra copies were printed so that every one in the Rochester district knew about the production.

SEND THEM IN

If Others' Ideas Aid You, Yours Will Help Them

ALMOST every day we have letters from exhibitors telling how ideas that are printed in these pages have helped them. We feel sure that this has been the first real SERVICE that has ever been offered the exhibitors. We have kept it up consistently, the only changes being made toward expansion.

Many of the most prominent exhibitors are now sending in their matter, but there are some others who are holding back. Whether you care for the publicity or not, you owe it to your fellows to record your good ideas here for the benefit of others. And remember that every good idea contributed toward the prosperity of the industry is an asset to you.

Send photographs where possible of stage settings, lobby displays and special stunts.

"The Kaiser" was shown at the Rialto theatre for a week, and also at the Family theatre, a vaudeville house during the week, on Sunday. Both houses were jammed throughout the day.

Advertising is the yeast that makes the dough come up.

HERE is a peculiarly effective display. Nine times out of ten we would say that it is bad advertising, but in this case we would say that it is mighty good.

While we are without the information, we would guess from this that the thing that the manager wanted to bring out as striking was that there was an exceptional bill at the Strand for that week. He was wise in avoiding such expressions as "Wonderful Double Bill," and the like. Instead of this he merely recited his picture. He used unusual rule effects between the reference to the music, the feature and the comedy, and he made the public read everything that he had to say.

For advance advertising, such as it was, for it appeared on the Sunday that the bill started, we would say that it is a curiosity-arouser and a business-getter.

STRAND Sunday Noon
THE PLAYHOUSE of MINNEAPOLIS

SANTREY

JOHN BARRYMORE
and MIKE DONLIN
in
"RAFFLES THE AMATEUR CRACKSMAN"

MACK SENNETT'S OWN
Pepful Prancing Pullets
in
"THOSE ATHLETIC GIRLS"

Is Your Orchestra Merely a Necessity? Hyman Points Out How It Brings Business

BY EDWARD L. HYMAN

Manager Victoria Theatre, Buffalo, and Member Advisory Board

DO you consider your orchestra a necessary and expensive evil?

Do you regard it as merely a part of the mechanics of the theatre and give it as little attention as possible?

Are you making the orchestra serve the purpose for which it was ordained?

These are three questions which I am asking fellow exhibitors for the reason that I interrogated myself similarly when my orchestra became a problem and almost a nuisance to me.

I have striven to make my orchestra a principal attraction of the theatre which I manage. I have given every member opportunity to show the best in him, and they have responded.

It is all very simple, that is, it works out after you have answered the questions above. And don't kid yourself while you are answering them.

THIS IS GENERAL MARY PICKFORD who will lead the VICTORIA Film Drive with these aidecamps

PAULINE FREDERICK

MAE MARSH

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN

BEVERLY BAYNE

VIOLA DANA

ANN PENNINGTON

AND OTHERS

THE BIG DRIVE IS ON !!!

Major General MARY PICKFORD and An Army of Illustrious Screen Heroes and Heroines Will Attack the Concentrated Forces of General Lonesomeness, General Gloom, General Grouch, General Unhappiness, General Dissatisfaction and General Boredom

AT THE Victoria Theatre

Ferry and Grant Streets

FOR TWO WEEKS April 14 to April 28

Further Information Inside

EDWARD L. HYMAN, Manager

Cover of Victoria theatre program during Liberty Loan Drive

It took me months to get the orchestra that was most efficient and that not only suited me fairly well—but pleased my audiences.

You needn't spend half your receipts in unifying the orchestra either. Take the material you have, and let them know that you are in sympathy with their musical inspiration, that their tempermental leanings are yours, that you realize that they have the ground work of superior musicians, and that they have been forced to prostitute their talents rather than to reveal them in their true light.

I "found" my orchestra through a fifteen-minute musicale which is featured at least once every months upon the Victoria stage.

The idea made itself manifest when I noticed that careful selection of numbers and a desire on the part of the musicians to play to suit me, had caused the audiences to arouse themselves to the good quality of the music and that they applauded the men more and more often. They seemed to warm up under that appreciation and the music became better and better. The men were willing to stay after the show and rehearse.

I found out that my leader had a wonderful bow, that he would make good in solo work. I gave him the chance to "find" himself. He appeared several times in solo work and brought the house down. The same thing applies to my 'celloist and xylophonist.

"Either you are able to get up and give a solo or you aren't good enough to play in the Victoria orchestra," was what I told them one night. Now, I am going to give you your opportunity. I am going to feature a fifteen-minute musicale at next Sunday's performance, and I am going to give you all a chance, and I am going to advertise it hard. We got together, and the pianist, 'celloist, violinist and xylophonist all selected short numbers.

The evening of the musicale I placed the men on the stage along with a grand piano and a number of pretty lamps. We were playing "The Garden of Allah," as I remember it. I announced the first number on the screen, the curtains closing over the screen and the director-violinist appearing in the spotlight. He played "Souvenir" superbly and did not respond to the encore so that the other members could appear. The curtains parted over the screen and announced the pianist in a solo number. He played the Hungarian Rhapsody and caused a small furore. Then the screen announced the Victoria soloist and she sang "'Kiss Me," from "Modiste." The xylophonist followed. All the time taken was fifteen minutes. There were no waits and the program was not long enough to bore. It broke up the program of pictures and got the crowd ready for the comedy.

My orchestra men were pleased with their success and they are all co-operating to the end that we are getting their best efforts. A new life has been injected into the orchestra. They feel that they amount to something in the regard of the public. And above all they have dignified the Victoria orchestra—for they are all soloists, men who are able to hold their own alone. The fifteen-minute recital is a special attraction at the Victoria, verily. It has helped business and has helped the musicians to find themselves.

If you don't smile and look pleasant to your patrons, your competitor will soon be smiling at your expense.

You are not going to war. The men who are need all the comforts you can give them. Help them get cigarettes. That is your patriotic duty. If you aren't helping in the "smokes" campaign, get busy—now. Don't be a slacker!

Hyman Aids Army

Buffalo Visitor Will Manage One of Camp Theatres

TELEGRAMS from Buffalo bring the information that Edward L. Hyman, manager of the Victoria theatre, one of the highest class neighborhood houses in the country, and a member of the Advisory Board, has been appointed manager of one of the Liberty theatres conducted by the war department and reported Monday at Camp Merritt, Tenafly, N. J., on April 26.

Mr. Hyman volunteered his services and received his appointment from R. M. Smith, director of the Liberty theatres at the various army camps. Mr. Hyman has been connected with the Mitchell H. Mark enterprises for some years and during the past three years has been manager of the Victoria. Mr. Hyman was married only a few weeks ago.

Mr. Hyman is certainly fitted for his new work, for he fully understands the manner of adapting his theatres to the needs of a section or a people and there can be little doubt that he will soon have a wonderful following among the boys who are about to go over and drive out the Hun.

Display Made on "Eagle's Eye"

Forty-seven leading newspapers of the country last week carried full pages of text and pictures in printing the first episode of the novelization of "The Eagle's Eye," the serial story of German plots in America uncovered by William J. Flynn, recently retired chief of the United States Secret Service. This was the start of one of the biggest publicity campaigns that has been seen.

The Philadelphia Public Ledger featured the first episode as the main news story of the day, starting it at the top of the first column on the first page. The Boston Advertiser and American made it the chief feature of the war section of the paper. The Washington Times devoted pages to advertising the serial. These are only a few specimens of the sort of co-operation given during the first week.

The second week of the campaign showed the number of papers using the novelization increased to nearly seventy. Other papers will start week by week until the number using the novelization of Chief Flynn's expose of Hun plotting will be about one hundred and fifty.

The difference in schedule for the various newspapers was caused by the insistence of The Whartons, producers of the picture, that the publication should occur at the time when it would aid exhibitors of the serial in the greatest possible way. The release dates on the episodes are not the same in all parts of the country, and for that reason the beginning of the publication of the novelization was not made the same for all parts of the United States and Canada.

Rothapfel's Answers to Exhibitors

Mr. Rothapfel Will Answer Here any Questions Regarding Problems in Exhibition. The Only Conditions Are That the Questions Must Not Bear on the Merits of Particular Pictures or Services and That They Must Come Through the NEWS. Address Your Inquiries "ROTHAPFEL ADVICE, EXHIBITORS' SERVICE BUREAU, MOTION PICTURE NEWS."

LXXVIII—I have built a theatre in a section of the city where there has never been a house before. It is an aristocratic section in its own mind, but really no better than several other sections. Yet there is undoubtedly a feeling of opposition to my house because I have dared to invade the section. I believe that the reason of this is that the people have come to look upon a picture house as a place adorned with gaudy posters, resounding with the music of a mechanical piano and encouraging loafing. How would you suggest that I overcome this feeling? I really believe that there is a fine prospect for unusual business here, but I have to overcome the prejudice first. Would you suggest inviting residents of the section, giving benefits, or what?—ARISTOCRAT.

MY dear man, the first thing that you must do is to get the idea out of your mind that "it is an aristocratic section in its own mind."

Your attitude is wrong, and is bound to reflect, and the reason people are not coming to your theatre is, perhaps, because you yourself are keeping them away from it. Have a good friendly spirit toward them and select pictures for your theatre like I have advised my friend in the previous question. If necessary show them the pictures free of charge, but get them in there. The mouth-to-mouth advertising and the comment will soon put your theatre on a good solid foundation, and it won't be so hard to do things after that.

Avoid giving benefits if you can help it. The only benefit you can give is to yourself, and give one of those to yourself every day.

The way I would overcome prejudice is, first of all, I would get an introduction to several of the most influential people in the neighborhood, and get their support. Ask them to give you a chance to prove that you are trying to do something fine. They will not fail you if you are trying to show them that you are doing something good.

There are lots of ways that might suggest themselves to me, but I think you ought to work this out yourself, as I do not know what you are doing and what is available, therefore I am not in a position to give you any more advice than what I have already given you.

LXXIX—I am in a very strict Protestant community. Wednesday night is known as prayer meeting night, and it has been suggested to me that I should close the theatre that evening. As a matter of fact, I do not do a large business, but there is a certain element that wants to come. Do you think it would be a good idea to close merely during the hours of service?—GEORGIA.

MY advice to you is under no condition cater to any sect or creed. If they don't want to come to your place let them stay away, but don't cater to them. There are people who would want to come, and there isn't any use in offending one to cater to the other. It is optional that the party who wants to come whether or not he can. Otherwise go right ahead as you are doing.

LXXX—I am in a coal mining town of 2,500 and show four nights a week, always two feature nights and two serial nights, filling in the serial nights with news reels, comics and travel pictures. I have had quite a few patrons who have asked me why I do not sell them tickets for the entire serial at a discount for cash. What would you advise, and what discount for cash?—J. S.

THIS is a matter that you must decide for yourself. I do not know what your conditions are and what your policy is, and it is a matter that is purely administrative. I do not believe that you should, under any condition, sell bargain tickets to your theatre, yet it may be a condition that would help you and make you realize a little money in advance which would be worth while. Surely, I cannot tell you what to do in this kind of a case.

LXXXI—What is your policy about war pictures? I have noted that you have put on several and that you evidently have done big business with them, but right here we are up against the proposition of too many war pictures. It is my own opinion that where a picture is frankly such, shows war scenes and has a patriotic appeal, it is worth while, but that pictures where the war is dragged in as a background become tiresome.

I am located in a residential section, and it seems to me that the war has come closer to my patrons than to the general run of people, for so many boys have gone from this section. Do you show this second class of war pictures or do you avoid them? Personally I believe that we should have as much comedy as possible in these days, but I am up against the proposition of having to play at my theatre the pictures that have been advertised at the big downtown houses.

In many cases I see these pictures myself and know that they will not please, but for some reason my public thinks that when I refuse to book some picture that has been strongly advertised downtown that it is because I am unwilling to pay the price. Do you think that it would pay me to adopt a policy of pleasant pictures?—N. A. N.

WAR pictures are all right provided that they are handled properly. There was a time when war pictures were in great demand and drew a tremendous business, but the people have been bunked so often by flaring advertisements and many promises which have not been kept that they are now suspicious and, unless you have some of the real thing (and I will admit that there are mighty few of them now in circulation) I would advise you to be very careful in running the so-called war pictures.

A great many fine shots are embodied in all of the weeklies and you will get probably enough war stuff in them to satisfy your patrons. But, of course, understand me, if you should get some exceptionally good pictures and know them to be authentic, and if they are properly edited, avoiding the gruesome and morbid scenes and showing the spectacular and thrilling scenes, I do not think you will have any trouble in obtaining a good crowd.

You are right about the residential section and about the comedy. As I have said in some of my previous answers, you cannot show too much comedy these days.

Do not labor under the impression that the public think that you do not book the pictures that are advertised big downtown because of the high price, but start a counter campaign against this thing by stating that, although a picture is heavily advertised downtown, you will not show it if it does not meet with your approval. State that it is your aim to procure only those films that meet with your approval and that you are trying to show nothing but pleasant films and that you wish to avoid the gruesome and morbid.

You will find that you will get many followers who will write you about the fine work you are doing. By all means enter into your work in a personal way. You write a very fine letter and your personality seeps through it. You will make a success if you hit the nail a good, hard wallop on the head and get to your patrons personally.

Don't worry about what the downtown houses are showing. If the picture is good, however, you will then know what to expect and you will be able to improve on their presentation. This in itself is worth something.

By all means adopt the policy of pleasant pictures. You cannot go wrong.

LXXXII—I have a considerable foreign population here. I would like to know how you advertised your first theatre, as I understand that your patronage was largely of foreigners. A considerable share of my people do not read the local weekly, which is published in English, and therefore I am finding it hard to reach them. As I change my program daily, it is impossible for me to send out circular letters on each picture. I would like to know how to build up this foreign patronage.—ILLINOIS.

THE best way to get to a foreign population is to get to them through individuals. Go to the most influential foreigner of each respective element and make him go right to his people and talk about it.

You will find that foreigners greatly exaggerate and paint in the most flowery language. You will find that by creating an interest this way they wil come to your theatre and you should accept advice from those people you know.

Seeing the Rialto and the Rivoli with Rothapfel

BY the time this is read Lieut. S. L. Rothapfel, U. S. Marine Corps, will be on his trip of the marine stations of the country which will occupy at least three weeks. During that time he will direct the making of a number of pictures for the Government which will be released through the various news weeklies.

Last fall we told you about the way that the Rialto operated during the absence of "the boss," but now the staff will have on its hands the Rivoli as well. And we don't mind saying in advance that the staff will get away with it, and you may expect to see new things pulled every week, for such is the organization of the two theatres, and so perfectly are all the employes imbued with the Rothapfel spirit that they will carry out his ideas just as if he were here.

"Different" is the best description of the two shows this week. Last week the choral effects were largely in evidence, and probably the reader of the accounts decided that these were splendid things, but entirely too expensive for his house. This week there is not a choral effect in either bill, and the presentations are just as satisfactory. It shows that it is not necessary to have big choruses to get the same satisfying effects—if the artistic touch is everywhere and the same standard kept up in each number.

The symphonic poem from "Mazeppa" is the overture at the Rialto, and after this comes of the splendid Newman travel pictures, released by Educational, "Our Egypt of the Southwest." These show the ancient tribe of Hopi Indians in their homes, at work weaving baskets and making vessels of clay. There is a touch of humor through them. There is a special musical score prepared by the Rialto for this, but it is composed of so many different numbers that a recital of them here would be meaningless.

Carlos Meja, tenor, then sings "Salut! Demeure" from "Faust." For this all the light effects are in red with the exception of the centerdome where red and blue are both used. After the start of the song the side panels open carrying out the Byzantine effect of the main stage setting.

There is a remarkable Animated at the Rialto this week, opening with Universal pictures of West Point boys in camp, and for this "The Spirit of Independence" march was used, the audience giving the marching cadets a big hand. Then follow Gaumont pictures of the parade of sailors at San Pedro, Cal., shown to "Admirals All." This includes some fine shots of men on battleship and going up into the masts. Then came a very funny incident with Gaumont pictures of raising chickens. In fact, this number is so good that it was split up, half of it being used in the Rivoli Animated. "Chicken Reel" is played with this, and it gets a succession of hearty laughs. From the same source come pictures of Chicago school children starting a pig club, and the grunts and squeals of the pigs as reproduced by the orchestra add to the merriment. Pathe supplies "Picture Spots in England" for which light music is used.

Now here is a point to get. You all know that "God Save the King" and "America" are the same in the music. Now watch the effect that is obtained by counterpointing these two airs. Universal now comes with pictures of Queen Mary reviewing the women's ambulance corps and "Royal Hearts" is used, this having the counterpoint of "God Save the King." It brings intense applause this music continuing through Universal pictures of the demonstration in Trafalgar Square. Then follow Universal pictures of the bicycle climb at Los Angeles.

And then come Hearst-Pathe pictures of women starting a school for war work at Washington, and for this "Daughters of the American Revolution" march is used, this having the counterpoint of "America," having the effect of not only recalling the British pictures that went just ahead, but increasing the enthusiasm. It was a case of getting the spirit of the Allies over in a manner that left its impress upon every one. This same music continues through Gaumont pictures of New York's Liberty Loan parade. There are many splendid shots in this, and it brings constant cheering, an especially big demonstration being given the French sailors. To "Anniversary March," Universal shows a glimpse of Schwab, head of the nation's shipbuilders, and then from Gaumont come pictures of the workmen at shipyards pledging their aid to the nation.

Gaumont supplies most interesting pictures of the French decorating the first of the American heroes. Almost everyone in the audience watched to see whether the officers would salute the men decorated on either cheek, but evidently the officers knew American customs for a handshake is substituted. "Stars and Stripes Forever" is the music for this and it continues through pictures of Clemenceau bidding goodbye to the men in Paris and then come shots of General Wood, General Foch and Secretary Baker on the way to the front that leave the audience applauding. In fact, the music continues a little while after the end of the Animated and the applause continues in just as great a volume.

Miss Gladys Rice then sings "A Perfect Day." This young woman, under the training that she has had at the two houses, has become one of the most satisfactory soloists in New York; she is always welcomed. For this number the lights are at first all in red, toward the end of the song becoming blue, giving the evening effect.

Billie Burke in "Let's Get a Divorce" is the feature attraction this week, and it keeps the audience laughing throughout. There is special music, on the burlesque order, used for the opening of the picture where Cyprienne is reading her romance to her chum. For instance, one scene shows a horseman riding through the snow, but hoof beats, such as if the animal were galloping over a bridge are used, and at the death of the hero, the wailing music is used. The coming of the angels brings burlesque trumpet effects, and when the title asks that the orchestra play "Goodbye," it is done on the horns. All the way through the music spurred the many laughs on.

Then the orchestra plays "The Evolution of Dixie," an interesting series of variations of the Southern song, it being played as a minuet, a waltz, in ragtime and finally as grand opera. It got an even bigger reception than the overture.

More of the comedy element is supplied at the end of the bill with a Sunshine comedy that is especially good in the water chase stuff, "A Neighbor's Keyhole."

Selections from "Faust" form the overture at the Rivoli and gets one of the biggest receptions that we have seen. All the lighting effects are in red, of course.

Special orchestration is again used for the double scenic number, the first being another of the news and travel pictures released by Educational. This is "Tidbits of Travel" and includes scenes in Japan, China, the Philippines and in Hawaii. It ends with some mighty interesting studies of the results of intermarriage of the races. The second half of the scenic number is supplied by Pathe with "Picturesque Wales."

With an introductory on the organ giving the harp effect so realistically that one looks for the player, Alberto Bachman, violinist, then plays "Concerto—Last Movement," by Saint Saens, with the house dark and the spotlight on him. There is a wonderful special setting for this, the curtains parting, showing a window looking out on the hills then at either side the colored glass effects, each with a Madonna. Blue and red lighting is used, adding to the wonderful effect. This setting is the work of John Wenger, who has just been added to the staff of the two theatres as art director.

Then comes the Animated. This week Mr. Rothapfel has done something that he has never done before since the opening of the Rivoli and that is to use a few of the same scenes that are shown at the Rialto, but they have such a punch to them that it was hard to avoid it. It opens with Hearst-Pathe pictures of "The Men at the Helm," showing General Foch, General Petain, and President Wilson, and here "Dunlap Commandery" march is used and then follow H.-P. pictures of the assembling of the new Liberty trucks, shown to "Hippodrome March." The same music carries through Universal pictures of the tank, "America," and through Gaumont pictures of the workers at the oil fields helping to win the war. Then comes the other half of the chicken pictures which are also shown at the Rialto and again "Chicken Reel" is used, with the effect of the cackling hens and peeping chicks being well reproduced. This continued through Gaumont pictures of harvesting the cauliflower crop and then comes

(Continued on page 2825)

This attractive lobby display on "Jules of the Strongheart" at the Star theatre, Everett, Wash., attracted a great deal of attention. The ticket booth was built like a log cabin; spruce trees were used for the main decorations, with a drop showing mountains in the background

This Week at the Strand

THIS is very much war week at the Strand, purposely so because the entire gross receipts of the week are to be invested in Liberty Loan bonds. The audience is kept up to a high pitch of enthusiasm throughout and there is so much applause that some would think that many in the audience would get tired.

The feature is "My Four Years in Germany" and if there was any doubt about whether it would draw at the Strand after being in its fifth week at the Knickerbocker, this was certainly allayed by the crowd that was waiting for a chance to get into the theatre when we left about nine o'clock Sunday night.

The overture this week is "Pomp and Circumstance," a wonderful composition which is used very often at the Rothapfel houses in connection with some magnificent scenic. Before the end of this comes a film made by Managing Director Edel himself, showing his meeting the members of the Mayor's Committee on Women on National Defense, and presenting them the key to the Strand for the week and pledging the whole receipts to investments in Liberty Bonds. This comes to an end with a Hearst-Pathe cartoon, "Have You Bought Liberty Bonds?

Then comes a remarkable picture in Winsor McCay's creation of the sinking of the Lusitania. It is, of course, not a photograph, but made of 25,000 separate drawings, requiring the work of the artist over a considerable part of two years. It reproduces the tragedy in detail and there is a splendid musical accompaiment with it, the orchestra and organ playing, "Nearer My God to Thee" as the big liner takes the final dive.

At the end of the drawing-picture there are worked in some Pathe pictures of American vessels of war and of marching troops, giving the idea that America is going to avenge such deed as the slaughter of women and children. There is, of course, a whirlwind of applause here.

Then the curtains part and with a setting showing tents in the foreground and hills and a river in the back, the Strand Soldier Quartette sings "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" and "Over There."

Now comes the feature. It is not necessary to review this further here except to say that Mr. Edel has arranged a splendid musical score for this. There are lots of opportunities to bring in patriotic music. For instance, "Yankee Doodle" is played with the showing of Ambassador Gerard. Agitato effects are used through the cruelties of the Germans to the Belgians and to the prisoners and at the end when there are shown the marching British, French, Belgians and finally the Americans, there are a number of the most popular of war tunes played. The audience is kept constantly applauding. With the music included it is a picture that stirs one to the very depths.

At the end of the feature there are introduced pictures of General Foch, General Pershing and others that add still further to the enthusiasm and every one of the audience goes away from the theatre a better and madder American and more anxious than ever to do his bit.

Rialto and Rivoli

(Continued from page 2824)

a clever Universal cartoon, entitled "The Quaint Tale of the Pipe and the Pup." This shows Uncle Sam in the role of the "Pied Piper," calling meats, sugar and all other provisions to him. First, there are the strains of "Yankee Doodle" heard and this is played throughout on the flute with first one instrument and then another bringing out clearly "I Hear You Calling Me," and then the bass horn finally answering with "I'm Coming." The effect of this on the audience may well be imagined.

Gaumont supplies pictures of McAdoo at San Antonio with "Liberty Bell" played, and then come Universal pictures of the Liberty Loan parade and then stars of the opera aiding the loan and cartoonists drawing for it, and then Fairbanks, as he appeared at Chicago. Gaumont pictures of the bicycle climb and the woman's service school at Washington follow, and from the same source there are pictures of 20,000 women in the parade with the orchestra playing "Daughter of the American Revolution. Universal supplies pictures of the cadet flyers at Princeton and Hearst-Pathe shows fliers in the air at Nantucket, with "Here We Come."

There comes a big punch with the Hearst-Pathe pictures of the French honoring American heroes and for this "He's a Yankee Doodle Boy" is used. This ends with Clemenceau's inspection of the American forces Gen. Wood visiting the French lines and finally a wonderful shot of marching troops that almost brings the walls of the house down from the applause.

With a setting representing a scene in Palestine, Desere La Salle sings "Vision Fugitive" from Herodiade. Then follows the feature, Enid Bennett in "The Biggest Show on Earth" a very happy film and here again the special music did a great deal to aid to the enjoyment, one of the touches being given with the imitations of the circus band of jazz music.

Now look how a little thing can score—how it can make one of the biggest of all the hits. Mr. Rothapfel has been using the old songs a good deal recently and he has delighted his audiences with them. This week he is using a bunch of selections of some songs of about fifteen years ago, opening with a strain of "Auld Lang Syne" and then turning into "Bedealia," "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree," "Under the Bamboo Tree" "When You Were Sweet Sixteen," "She Was Bred in Old Kentucky" and finally, "Put on Your Old Gray Bonnet." All through this number the people were singing and whistling. It got close and is a thing that people will talk about for weeks.

You can do it easily—even with a piano. It's worth trying and it's worth starting to think about digging out original ideas and putting them over and making the people talk about your theatre.

The bill closes with Mutt and Jeff in "Helping McAdoo" which has some train chase stuff in it that pleases.

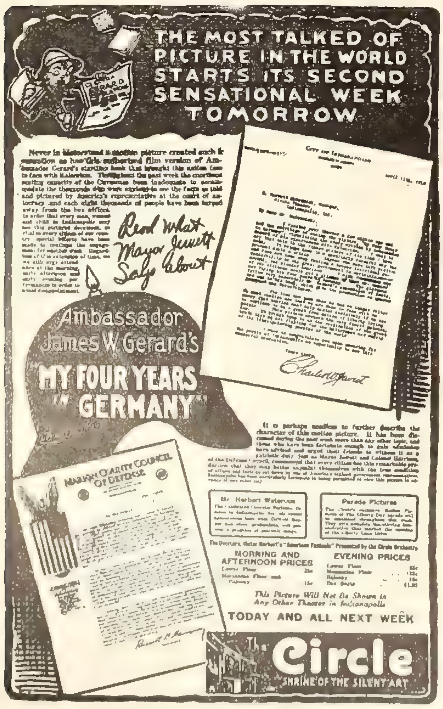
How M'Cormick Put Over "My Four Years in Germany" for Two Weeks

LONG runs of big pictures appear to be coming into their own all over the country. In Detroit, San Francisco, Los Angeles and a number of other cities there have been pictures shown during the last two months for weeks in place of the few days that they would have been kept on the screen a year ago.

Intelligent exploitation, liberal use of space in the newspapers and grasping every idea that the pictures offered have been responsible for this record. In other words there has been real constructive showmanship and these cases have proved that pictures can be put over for long runs where the exhibitor has the goods and where he makes a serious effort.

One of the most notable of these presentations is offered by S. Barret McCormick, managing director of the Circle theatre, Indianapolis, who has just shown "My Four Years in Germany" for two weeks. And during that time though the Circle seats 3,100 and six shows were given every day it is estimated that thousands were turned away. It was no rare sight during the engagement to see lines two blocks long of people waiting to buy tickets.

Now Mr. McCormick learned that Former Ambassador Gerard was to be the guest of Indianapolis on Saturday, April 6, to open the Liberty Loan drive. The Circle had already booked the picture, but it became apparent that if Mr. McCormick could arrange to get the film immediately following the visit business would be much greater. So he got busy by wire and finally a special messenger was on the way from New York with a fresh print and the advertising campaign reaching Indianapolis the night before the picture was first shown.



THE MOST TALKED OF PICTURE IN THE WORLD STARTS ITS SECOND SENSATIONAL WEEK TOMORROW

Read what Mayor Jewett Says about

Ambassador James W. Gerard's MY FOUR YEARS IN GERMANY

MARION COUNTY COUNCIL OF DEFENSE

Mr. Herbert Waterous

Parade Pictures

MORNING AND AFTERNOON PRICES

EVENING PRICES

This Picture Will Not Be Shown in Any Other Theater in Indianapolis

TODAY AND ALL NEXT WEEK

The Circle
SHRINE OF THE SILENT ART

Endorsements used to stimulate interest during the second week of run

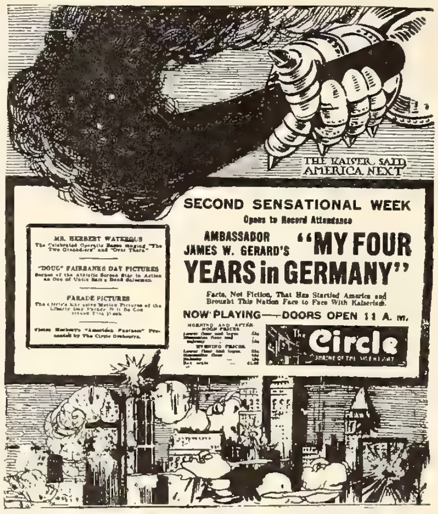
It Was Not an "Accident"

Other exhibitors congratulated Mr. McCormick on the coincidence that brought the picture to Indianapolis just at the time of Mr. Gerard's visit, but there was no coincidence to it—it was work by Mr. McCormick.

Circle theatre always used big space in the newspapers. In this case the big campaign was started on the day of Mr. Gerard's visit, and when he led a parade of 40,000 citizens and spoke in the big municipal hall. The announcements of the picture greeted every one who took any part in the celebration and naturally aroused their desire to see the picture. Of course the newspapers devoted all sorts of space to the visit of the former ambassador and the front pages were covered with pictures. It was also natural that reference should be made through these stories to his book and also that Mr. Gerard himself should refer to his book and his experiences in Germany.

Note that the first, or Saturday, advertising which occupied five full columns referred all the way through it to the fact that Mr. Gerard was the city's guest that day. Mr. McCormick used large pictures of Mr. Gerard in all of this earlier advertising and quoted freely from the book. He did not have to use adjectives or detailed descriptive matter, but he did want to couple up the appearance of the picture with the fact that it was the experience of the man whom the people could see that day in flesh and blood.

It is impossible to reproduce the entire newspaper campaign used by the Circle here, but it should be observed that Mr. McCormick was not content with a big splash before the picture was shown and then let it carry itself. He kept up his exploitation every day during the engagement. For instance we are reproducing one display that was used just as the picture ended its first week. It carried letters from the mayor and from the Council of Defense endorsing the film.



THE KAISER SAID AMERICA NEXT

SECOND SENSATIONAL WEEK
Opens to Record Attendance
AMBASSADOR JAMES W. GERARD'S "MY FOUR YEARS in GERMANY"
Facts, Not Fiction, That Has Startled America and Brought This Nation Face to Face With Kaiserism.
NOW PLAYING—DOORS OPEN 11 A. M.

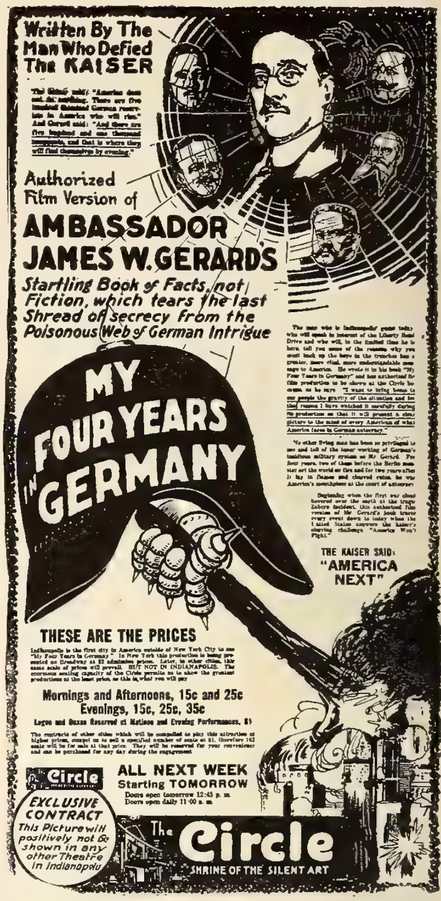
MR. HERBERT WATEROUS
The Celebrated Operatic Basso Singing "The Two Grenadiers" and "Over There."

"DOUG" FAIRBANKS DAY PICTURES

PARADE PICTURES

The Circle
SHRINE OF THE SILENT ART

How the Kaiser's threat to America was emphasized in advertising



Written By The Man Who Defied The KAISER

Authorized Film Version of AMBASSADOR JAMES W. GERARD'S Startling Book of Facts, not Fiction, which tears the last Shread of secrecy from the Poisonous Web of German Intrigue

MY FOUR YEARS IN GERMANY

THE KAISER SAID: "AMERICA NEXT"

THESE ARE THE PRICES

Indianapolis is the first city in America outside of New York City to see "My Four Years in Germany." In New York this production is being presented on Broadway at $2 admission prices. Later, in other cities, this same scale of prices will prevail. BUT NOT IN INDIANAPOLIS. The enormous seating capacity of the Circle permits us to show the greatest productions at the least price, so this is what you will pay

Mornings and Afternoons, 15c and 25c
Evenings, 15c, 25c, 35c
Loges and Boxes Reserved at Matinee and Evening Performances, $1

ALL NEXT WEEK
Starting TOMORROW
Doors open tomorrow 12:45 p. m.
Doors open daily 11:00 a. m.

EXCLUSIVE CONTRACT
This Picture will positively not be shown in any other Theatre in Indianapolis

The Circle
SHRINE OF THE SILENT ART

Five full column display used Saturday before opening of picture

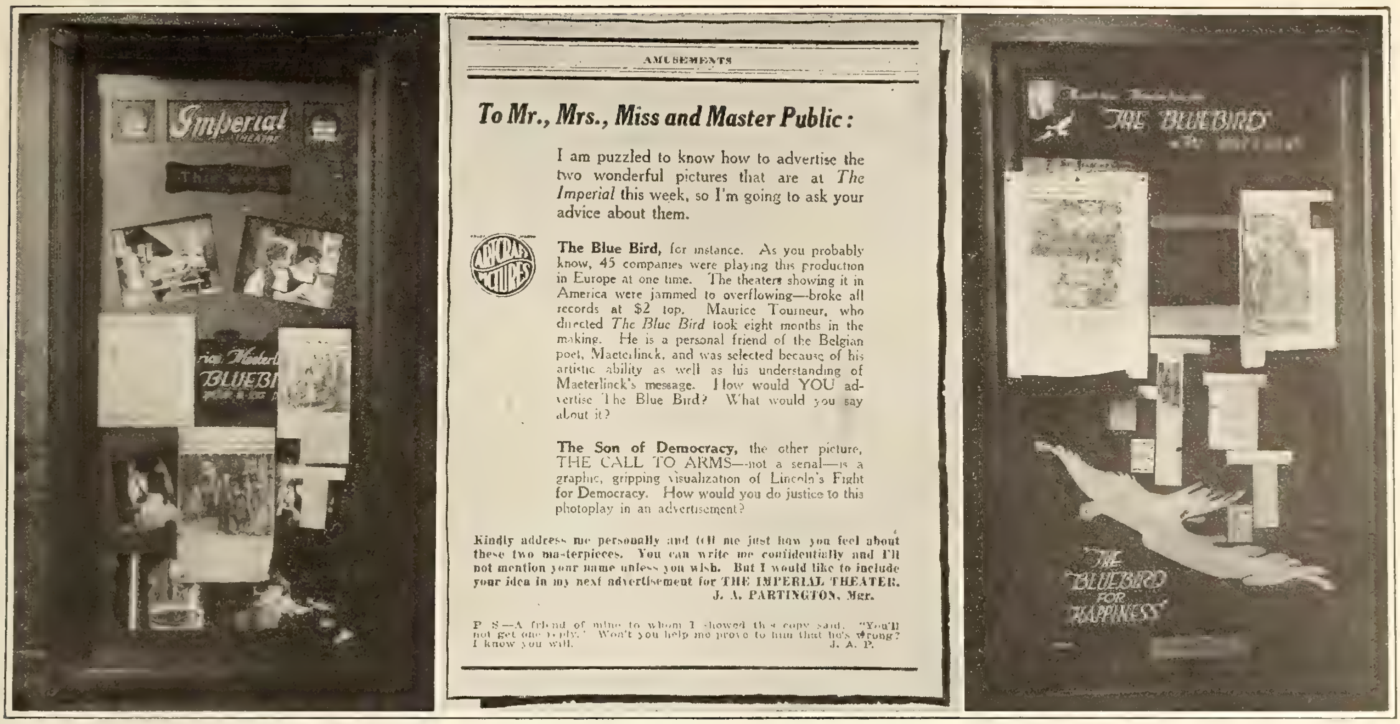
"America next," the quotation from the kaiser was used through the advertising and after the first few displays which featured Mr. Gerard's picture the illustrations were devoted to what would happen to America if the hun had his way. It was all striking advertising of the sort that hits you in the face, but we would like to know how many exhibitors would keep up such advertising during the run. Easily the vast majority might have made a splurge at first and then expected the word of mouth advertising to carry the picture along. It would have done so to a certain extent, but when Mr. McCormick put behind all of this the continued advertising there was not a soul in Indianapolis and the surrounding territory that was not talking about the picture.

The whole city and the surrounding territory was billed for the picture like a circus and people came to Indianapolis from all parts of the state to see the picture.

Here is Mr. McCormick's own conclusion of the result of the showing:

"Undoubtedly we are getting out of the old 'movie' days. The picture business is merely setting out on the path of real theatricalism where long runs, good admission prices and big pictures will undoubtedly solve the big problems that face the industry today."

In addition to "My Four Years in Germany" the program during the two weeks included pictures of the Liberty Loan parade in Indianapolis and Herbert Waterous singing "The Two Grenadiers" and "Over There."



AMUSEMENTS

To Mr., Mrs., Miss and Master Public:

I am puzzled to know how to advertise the two wonderful pictures that are at The Imperial this week, so I'm going to ask your advice about them.

The Blue Bird, for instance. As you probably know, 45 companies were playing this production in Europe at one time. The theaters showing it in America were jammed to overflowing—broke all records at $2 top. Maurice Tourneur, who directed The Blue Bird took eight months in the making. He is a personal friend of the Belgian poet, Maeterlinck, and was selected because of his artistic ability as well as his understanding of Maeterlinck's message. How would YOU advertise The Blue Bird? What would you say about it?

The Son of Democracy, the other picture, THE CALL TO ARMS—not a serial—is a graphic, gripping visualization of Lincoln's Fight for Democracy. How would you do justice to this photoplay in an advertisement?

Kindly address me personally and tell me just how you feel about these two masterpieces. You can write me confidentially and I'll not mention your name unless you wish. But I would like to include your idea in my next advertisement for THE IMPERIAL THEATER.

J. A. PARTINGTON, Mgr.

P. S.—A friend of mine to whom I showed this copy said, "You'll not get one reply." Won't you help me prove to him that he's wrong? I know you will. J. A. P.

In the center is the opening advertisement of the Imperial, San Francisco, on the "Blue Bird," and at either side the use made of the display panels for showing the newspaper clippings.

Indianapolis Theatres Show Little Desire to Advertise Attractions Every Day

(Continued from page 2818)

The Times has a three-column layout on attractions in the Saturday issue and the usual reading notices and then forgets about pictures. The Circle uses smaller space here, and the Alhambra, Isis, Colonial and Regent also advertise. No other days the Times devotes a column of reading notices to the theatre.

As a matter of fact we donbt whether there is any city in the country where there is more interest in motion pictures. Because of the large circulation of two of the Indianapolis papers in the surrounding territory the photoplay department ought to be a feature of the papers because the smaller papers canot afford to devote a large amount of space to the matter and the picture fans would naturally look to the big city daily.

Of course one bad feature of the situation is that the Star is without competition on Sunday, yet that paper is doing more than any of the others and it is possible for the theatres to reach all of the Sunday readers by using one publication.

In a situation like this it is difficult to find which party is really at fault, especially when we find that there are but thirteen out of the fifty theatres advertising in any paper and only two of the whole number advertising every day. Certainly, on the surface there is not a great deal of encouragement for a newspaper to start a real motion picture department and depend upon business that may develop.

But the answer to this is simple. The average motion picture manager who has never advertised hasn't any more than a very hazy idea of what it is worth to him. He is generally hard to convert, but the hardest man to get to believe in advertising is generally the most enthusiastic in the end.

Here is one case that came under our observation, and it might well happen in Indianapolis. A high-grade neighborhood house was advertising on Sundays in one paper that paid little attention to motion pictures. The solicitor for another paper which had determined to run a regular motion picture department went to him for the advertising. The manager refused, at first, on the ground that it was largely duplicate circulation. He was right in that contention, but finally he signed the contract, though he did it purely to encourage the newspaper to print motion picture matter rather than in expectation of direct return that he would get. In six months he found that his advertisement, run every day in this second paper, and at the same cost of his full program for the week which he used in his first paper brought him five times as much return. The moral is that it pays to tie up to the paper that is giving its columns to interesting matter about the industry, and that it will pay the newspaper that does so for it will be able to convert and retain the man who has been afraid to advertise.

There is an open field in Indianapolis. We rather believe that the Star and the Times are willing to co-operate with the exhibitors. We suggest that they start a man out on this work. One of these papers ought to be able to get fully half of the theatres. This will increase the audience of the newspapers, it will aid a feature that is popular with the city readers and it will prove one of the most popular appeals to the out-of-town readers.

Partington Makes Unusual Appeal with "Blue Bird"

J. A. PARTINGTON, manager of the Imperial theatre, San Francisco, and a member of the Advisory Board, put over an unusual piece of original exploitation with "The Blue Bird."

Here is a picture distinctly different from the ordinary feature and Mr. Partington was right in determining to make a different appeal with it. So he devoted his newspaper advertising to talks with the public. In the first of the series, which we have reproduced, he went before the public and invited suggestions for advertising this picture.

This display was followed up by a letter from one of the patrons suggesting what he would do if he were manager of the theatre. One of the things that he suggested was taking a large truck, transforming it into a fairy bower and peopling it with a girl dressed as a fairy and, with two children, who are the main characters in the story. This and some of the other suggestions were adopted by Mr. Partington.

Columns of space were given the production in the San Francisco papers and Mr. Partington attracted unusual attention to these clippings by pasting them over the display frames which held scenes from the production. The attention of the public was then centered on the newspaper praise and in this way every one of the many words of praise for the picture was made to work for the theatre with very satisfactory results.

An arrangement was made with the San Francisco Chronicle to give a free show-

Ready Made Ad-Talks

Bill Russell's First Picture by His Own Company, "Hearts or Diamonds"—Mystery

(Mutual Release—Five Reels)

The first picture produced by William Russell's own company, William Russell Productions, Inc., releasing on the Mutual program, is titled "Hearts and Diamonds," and will be the attraction at the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week. William Russell is starred and appearing in the supporting cast with him are seen Charlotte Burton, Howard Davies, Carl Stockdale, John Gough and Robert Klein. Larry Hanrahan (William Russell) is a connoisseur of rare jewels and is especially interested in diamonds. While in a restaurant he notices a beautiful girl wearing a brilliant necklace of diamonds. She is accompanied by an elderly man of distinguished appearance. Leaving the restaurant that night, he is an eyewitness to an attempted hold-up and discovers after investigation that the parties in the automobile which was held-up were the girl and man whom he had seen in the cafe. They introduce themselves as Col. Paul Gascoyne and daughter. Larry is invited to call and does so. Adrienne, the girl, attracts him, as do the diamonds which she wears. Col. Gascoyne holds himself out as a chemist capable of producing diamonds of priceless value. Larry purchases a stone and is convinced of the Colonel's ability to produce them. He is offered double the amount he has paid for the stone. Not long after as Larry is preparing for bed he turns and looks into the barrel of a revolver in the hands of a heavily veiled woman. A burglar is taking his collection of jewels. The woman escapes and he discovers after she has left that she had dropped her veil. Larry recognizes it as the one that Adrienne had worn when he had first met her. How does Larry unravel the mystery and what is the real identity of Adrienne? See Wiliam Russell in the first picture produced by his own company, "Hearts and Diamonds," at the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week.

Tom Mix in "Western Blood," — Big Romance of the Plains

(Fox Five-Reel Production)

Tom Mix, the star of the new William Fox picture, "Western Blood," which comes to the ——— theatre on ———, has the reputation of being one of the nerviest men on the screen. Nothing has even been suggested to him that he has not done if it helped his picture. He has been thrown from precipices and shot at and hurled about in a way that would cost most men their lives, or at least a good, hard bump or two, to say nothing of their ease of mind, but they never feared Tom Mix. He plays with danger and seems to enjoy it, and never fakes even the slightest portion of his work. "Western Blood" is typical of his work, being a swift-moving drama filled with dare-devil horsemanship. Tex Wilson, owner of a ranch in New Mexico, is supplying the Government with horses. On his way over the plains to Los Angeles he sees a runaway horse.. A girl is in the saddle. Tex gallops after the runaway and lifts the girl from the back of the frightened animal. The girl is annoyed because he did not allow her to master the maddened horse, yet inwardly she admires Tex's spirit. She invites him to a party at her home, where Tex finds he is the only man there without a dress suit. He overcomes this difficulty by forcing a guest who laughed at him to change clothes with him. Later Tex gives a party at his own ranch and insists upon all the cowboys being arrayed in dress suits, despite their objections. Roberta, the girl, is the guest of honor. Enemies of the United States cause the ranch to be raided and Roberta is carried off. Tex follows her across the border and finally effects her rescue. The play was written and directed by Lynn Reynolds and has a wealth of wonderful exterior scenes. Victoria Forde plays the heroine and Frank Clark, Barney Furey and Pat Christman round out an excellent cast.

"Western Blood" is the attraction at the ——— theatre on ———.

Dorothy Dalton at Her Best in "Tyrant Fear"

(Paramount-Ince Five-Reel Production)

A photodrama of the Canadian life, filled with unusually strong dramatic situations, is "Tyrant Fear," in which Dorothy Dalton comes to the screen of the ——— theatre on ———. It is the story of a girl who, obsessed by fear of men and things, regains her soul to become at last, after many trials, a courageous woman and to find happiness in love in the end. Beautiful exterior scenes, together with faithful reproductions of interiors of rough cabins and dance dives, make this production one of distinctive merit. Supporting Miss Dalton are a number of popular Paramount players, including Thurston Hall, Melbourne MacDowell, William Conklin, Lou Salter and Carmen Phillips. The picture was directed, under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince, by R. William Neill, the story being by R. Cecil Smith. Miss Dalton plays the role of a French-Canadian girl who has lived in fear of her father from childhood. The father bargains her away to a brutal trapper, a primitive savage of the basest instincts. He in turn gambles and loses her to the keeper of a notorious dive in a gold settlement of the Far North. There she lives uncomplainingly, the victim of an inborn fear of men and her surroundings. One day, in struggling with the wretch who has bought her, she summons enough courage to shoot and wound him. Instantly her repressed mental strength drives out the fear which has obsessed her since childhood and she is transformed into a full-grown woman, strong and fearless. She has been befriended by a dissipated pianist in the dance hall who is regenerated through love for her, while she in turn has placed her heart in his keeping. The two escape from the dive and returning to the cabin of the husband find his dead body in the snow. Here dawns a new and happier existence for both.

Dorothy Dalton in "Tyrant Fear, a Thomas H. Ince production, is the attraction announced for ——— of ——— week at the ———.

READY-MADE AD-TALKS PUBLISHED IN LAST WEEK'S ISSUE

May 4, 1918.

FEATURES

TITLE OF PLAY	PRODUCER
"A Mother's Secret"	Bluebird	5 reels
"Dolly Does Her Bit"	Pathe	5 reels
"The Busy Inn"	Pathe	5 reels
"The Business of Life"	Vitagraph	5 reels
"Blue Blood"	Goldwyn	6 reels
"With Neatness and Dispatch"	Metro	5 reels
"The Blindness of Divorce"	Fox	6 reels
"The Primitive Woman"	American-Mutual	5 reels
"I'm a Man"	General	2 reels
"Leap to Fame"	World	5 reels
"Society for Sale"	Triangle	5 reels
"The White Man's Law"	Paramount	5 reels
"Where the Sun Sets Red"	General	2 reels

"The Raiders of Sunset Gap"—Story of Moonshiners—Late Blue Ridge Drama

(General Release—Two Reels)

The late Blue Ridge drama, "The Raiders of Sunset Gap," produced under the direction of Ned Finley, was written by L. Case Russell and is in two reels. In the cast are seen Ned Finley, Marion Henry, Richard R. Neil, Harry Hamill and Bert Gudgeon. A short subject, but full of pep from start to finish. A powerful exposition of powerful drama. Buck Lane, a native of Tennessee, becomes interested in the use of dynamite by a stranger who is investigating mineral deposits in the mountains. The stranger is bound for Sunset Gap. Bud warns him not to go because the populace is aroused by recent raids of the moonshiners. The stranger goes but returns wounded. Bud offers to do his work. Bud takes up his duties and no one questions his right except Lem Gill, a native who has returned after several years' absence to help round-up the moonshiners. He has heard that the Farleys operate a still in the neighborhood but cannot locate it. When Bud appears Lem becomes suspicious and intimates that he is a spy. Bud is anxious for the Farleys to benefit by the copper that he is sure is on their land. The officers are closing in on the still, but Bud has anticipated their find and set a charge of dynamite under the still. He blows it up and unearths a vein of copper. When the officers appear he tells them that he has bought the land and that he has located a rich copper vein. Bud and Lem reach a complete agreement and all is settled.

At the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week, the late Blue Ridge drama released by the General Film Company, "The Raiders of Sunset Gap."

Chaplin Comes Back Funnier Than Ever in "A Dog's Life"

(First National Three-Reel Production)

Charlie Chaplin is back again. After an absence of eight months from the screen, he has returned, funnier than ever, in "A Dog's Life," the first of his new $1,000,000 series of comedies. We can almost hear, even now, the roars of laughter from the huge audiences which will greet him at the ——— theatre on ———. For that is characteristic of all audiences which have seen Charlie and his "thoroughbred mongrel, "Scraps," in "A Dog's Life." They just roar and roar and roar—and then roar some more. They just have to. And when they have finished laughing they are not ashamed, for hasn't Charlie Chaplin made more people laugh than all the rest of the world's funny men put together? He has, without doubt. In "A Dog's Life," Charlie is first seen as an outcast, sleeping near a fence in a vacant lot. He is driven away by the police and makes several unsuccessful attempts to obtain work. He happens upon a number of dogs fighting and rescues a little white mongrel from a horrible fate. From that moment the two are pals. Sticking the dog inside his roomy trousers, he enters a restaurant and dance hall, the dog's tail protruding from an aperture in the trousers. A forlorn cabaret singer smiles on Charlie and awakens new hope in his breast, but when it is found that he has no money he and Scraps are thrown out on the street. An intoxicated person has been robbed of his wallet and the robbers have buried it in the ground near Charlie's corner of the fence. Scraps, exploring for food, unearths it, and with the newly-found fortune Charlie goes bock to the cabaret for food and for love. But there the fellows who stole the pocketbook see him and regain their treasure, whereupon Charlie is again thrown out on the street. But Scraps comes to the rescue and recovers the money, to the joy of Charlie and his prospective bride. The final scene shows the lovers in their happy little home in the country.

Charlie Chaplin in "A Dog's Life" at the ——— on ———.

"Resurrection" Presents Pauline Frederick as Tolstoy Heroine

(Paramount—Five-Reel Production)

Pauline Frederick in a Tolstoy role is the satisfying announcement made by the management of the ——— theatre for ———. The play in which Mis Frederick will be seen is "Resurrection," one of the most famous stories written by the great Russian philosophical novelist. Tolstoy was ever daring in his advocacy of the principles of truth, liberty, justice and education of the masses. When he wrote "Resurrection" his purpose was to expose the degrading conditions by which fallen peasant women became social outcasts without hope of redemption, while the noblemen responsible for their ruin were rewarded with the highest honors. The role of the unhappy Katusha was first enacted on the American stage by the late Blanche Walsh in 1903. In its translation to the screen Miss Frederick has achieved an artistic triumph which is proving a worthy successor to her notable performances in "La Tosca," "Sapho," "Bella Donna," "The Slave Market," "Zaza," etc. Katusha is a half-gypsy peasant girl, serving as companion to two maiden aunts of Prince Nekludov. When on a visit to the little Russian village the Prince makes violent love to the girl who, after his departure, is forced to make confession to the Prince's aunts that she is about to become mother to his child. The women are scandalized and Katusha is heartlessly driven into the streets. Her child dies and she falls lower and lower. Six years later, though innocent, she is arrested for a murder and after a farcical trial, is sent to Siberia. Prince Nekludov is one of the jurors who condemn her, and stung with remorse, he obtains her pardon from the Czar. Katusha refuses it because she has fallen in love with Simonson, a fellow-prisoner, and chooses to go into perpetual banishment with him rather than accept the offer of marriage which the Prince makes in order to redeem his past. The picture has been given a sumptuous production. Many of the Siberian scenes were taken on Long Island and the snowy wastes of Russia are admirably reproduced.

Pauline Frederick in "Resurrection," will be the attraction at the ——— on ———.

Edith Storey in a Real Thriller, "Treasure of the Sea"—Thrill in Every Scene

(Metro Five-Reel Production)

Edith Storey, supported by a strong cast of Metro players, is coming to the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week in "Treasure of the Sea," writtten by Leighton Osmun and produced by Metro under the direction of Frank Reicher. The production is in five reels. In the cast with Miss Storey are seen Lew Cody, Lewis Willoughby, Josef Swickard, William De Vaull and Toto De Crow. Miss Storey has the role of Margaret Elkins, whose father was financially ruined by Henry Ames, a scheming lawyer, who was left the power of attorney by Hardwick. Hardwick is in the West. Ames is actuated in his scheme by the love of Margaret, whom he believes he can win if he can remove the barrier raised by the money. Thomas Elkins returns to the West, his old home, and Henry Ames offers him the use of his bungalow. Margaret worries little about the loss of the money. She meets Jim Hardwick. He calls her "the lady of the sea." When she learns his name all her resentment for the hated name of Hardwick is aroused. After a storm, Jim finds the wreck of a ship that has been washed ashore. It is full of gold bullion. He goes to the village for aid to salvage the cargo. Margaret, determined not to be outdone by Hardwick, goes to the village and enlists the aid of a number of gunmen. Her plan is to let Jim's workers get the bullion and then to have her gunmen hold them up. Now come the thrillers, action aplenty and one of the most exciting endings ever witnessed on the screen. Miss Storey is put to the test for real daring, and the stunts she performs in the course of this production are hair-raisers. Hardwick isn't the man you think him to be nor is he the man Margaret thinks him to be—he proves his identity and wins a wife.

Edith Storey in "Treasure of the Sea" at the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week.

"The Doctor and the Woman," Triple Triumph of Picturecraft

(Jewel Seven-Reel Production)

Mary Roberts Rinehart wrote the story, Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley adapted it for the screen and directed its production and Mildred Harris is starred in it. This is the triple guarantee with which "The Doctor and the Woman" comes to the ——— theatre on ———. The story, published as a novel by Houghton Mifflin Company, originaly was entitled "K" and had a tremendous vogue among readers of fiction. For the role of Sidney Page, the heroine, Miss Weber chose Mildred Harris, whose characterization of Linnie in "The Price of a Good Time" stamped her as one of the great emotional stars of the screen. No less fortunate was the choice of True Boardman for the title role of the mysterious "K." His performance comes as near to embodying the ideal of the character portrayed as the average reader will picture him as any could. Albert Roscoe, Zella Caull and Carl Miller give highly impressive portrayals of the other leading characters. An outstanding feature of the presentation is the perfection of detail with which Miss Weber, known as "the Belasco of the screen," has invested the production. "K" is a mysterious stranger who has secured a position as bookkeeper in a gas office in a small town. Under the name of K. LeMoyne he secures lodgings at the home of Mrs. Page, a widow, and excites the interest and sympathy, and soon the quiet admiration, of her daughter, Sidney. The girl wishes to become a nurse and enters the hospital in which Dr. Max Wilson is head surgeon. Max pays considerable attention to Sidney, arousing the jealousy of Joe Drummond. But Carlotta Harrison, one of the nurses, is infatuated with the surgeon and is herself jealous of his attentions to Sidney. Persuading Max to take her to a roadhouse, she hopes there to force his hand by placing him in a compromising position. They are seen and followed by Joe Drummond, who thinks the girl is Sidney. Max and Carlotta quarrel and as the young surgeon discovers her ruse and leaves her he is shot by Joe. Only the "Edwardes operation," performed by a Dr. Edwardes, who has mysteriously disappeared, can save him. It develops that "K" is the missing surgeon. He saves Max's life. But why did he disappear? That's the interesting question which is answered in the story.

"The Doctor and the Woman" is the attraction at the ——— theatre on ———.

Suspense Element Strong in "The Face in the Dark"

(Goldwyn Six-Reel Production)

Ever read "The Web," that Irvin Cobb story which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post? Then you will appreciate what a corking screen drama it makes as it will be presented, under the title "The Face in the Dark," at the ——— theatre on ———. Mae Marsh, "The Girl of a Thousand Faces," has the leading role in this thrilling and surprising detective play, which possesses that quality of suspense, so desirable and even necessary in a good detective story, to a remarkable degree. It is a part which, though different from anything she has ever done before, suits her perfection. Surrounding the star is a splendid cast, which includes Niles Welsh, Alec Francis, Donald Hall, Harry C. Myers, Willard Dashiell and Isabelle Lamon. The production was directed by Hobart Henley, who spared no pains to make it one of the most elaborately staged detective plays ever seen in either the spoken or silent drama. Jane Ridgeway is the daughter of a celebrated detective, supposedly retired from the Secret Service and giving all his time to his new post of bank examiner. She herself is interested in detective work, adores her father and is in ignorance of the fact that he is in league with a band of counterfeiters and bank robbers. Their method is to substitute for the money stolen a quantity of counterfeit, which is furnished them by a mysterious and unseen leader known only as "The Face in the Dark." Jane visits a school chum whose father is president of a country bank and falls in love with Richard Grant, the young teller. Her father stops to see her and visits and looks over the bank. That night the bank is robbed and the young man Jane loves is accused and jailed. Jane pleads to be allowed to work on the case and through close examination of the vault and the adjoining rooms arrives at the inevitable conclusion that the robber is her own father. Confronted with the evidence, Ridgeway confesses to his daughter. But suffice it say, for the benefit of those who haven't read the story, that although Grant is freed Ridgeway does not go to jail. Instead, everybody is most happy in the end.

"The Face in the Dark" comes to the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week.

YOU HAVE TO KNOW

Read Accounts of How Others Are Exploiting Pictures

THE day has passed when it sufficed you to go before the public and say that the picture that you are about to show is the greatest one in which Mary Jones has appeared. Mere generalities no longer bring business; exaggeration and untruth kill it.

Today when you start out to exploit a picture you have to know what you are about; you have to get some real idea and work it up for the public. You can't do this if you are ignorant to start with. These Ad Talks will help you wonderfully. If you are going to play pictures covered here in the future, index these talks or clip them out and preserve them. They are money makers for you.

Mitchell Lewis in Strong Drama, "Nine-Tenths of the Law"

(Atlantis Six-Reel Production)

Mitchell Lewis, star of "The Bar Sinister," "The Barrier" and "The Sign Invisible," comes to the screen of the ——— theatre on ——— in a new play of the Canadian North Woods, "Nine-Tenths of the Law," by Reeves Eason. The story has an abundance of thrilling situations and teems with human interest, the fight for the possession of a two-year-old baby to which its foster parents have become deeply attached forming the basis of the plot. Leneau, a trapper, and his girl wife, Jane, are crushed by the death of their boy of eighteen months. A mile below the trapper's cabin lives "Red" Adair, a dissipated prospector, with his partner, Pappineau, a low-down French-Canadian of the meanest type. One day Adair returns to his cabin from Vancouver with a two-year-old child whom he has kidnaped. He tells Pappineau the boy is the son of Judge La Mar, the richest man in Vancouver, and the two begin planning on the ramson they will demand. They become dead drunk and the child wanders out into the woods. Night comes on and he is caught in one of Leneau's bear traps. The trapper finds him and takes him to his cabin, where he brings happiness to the occupants. As weeks pass the trapper soothes his wife's fears and his own conscience by often repeateing, "Possession is nine-tenths of the law." At length Adair and Pappineau discover the child's whereabouts, and the struggles for his possession ends in the violent death of both of the ruffians. But when Leneau discovers in Adair's cabin evidence of the identity of the child's parents he is more troubled than ever. His fight against his conscience, with his wife finally threatening to take her life if the baby is taken from her, followed by his decision to return the child to its parents, develops a series of gripping situations in which Mitchell Lewis rises to the splendid heights of emotional acting for which he is justly famous. The intensely interesting story ends in a surprise climax in which the dark clouds are suddenly dispelled by a burst of bright sunshine, bringing permanent happiness to the little cabin in the forest. Truly wonderful acting is done by "Breezy" Reeves as the tiny "stranger."

At the ——— theatre on ———, Mitchell Lewis in "Nine-Tenths of the Law."

Victor Potel and Company of Laugh Makers in "Slippery Slim and His Impersonator"

(General One-Reel Release—Comedy)

"Slippery Slim and His Impersonator" is a one-reel laugh-maker with Victor Potel, Harry Todd, Margaret Joslin and Ernest Van Pelt manufacturing the laughs. Mustang Pete slips away with Slippery Slim's diamond ring and goes to Sophie's home, where he asks her to become his wife. She accepts him and he gives her Slim's ring, which he had bought for the purpose of presenting to her himself. Slim is in great despair when he discovers his ring is missing, and his sorrow is complete when he goes to Sophie's home and finds Mustang holding her on his lap. That night he goes to the theatre to forget his troubles. There is a female impersonator in the cast, and after the show Slim becomes acquainted with him. He persuades him to pose as a beautiful blonde and make eyes at Mustang. Mustang falls for it, and is having the time of his life when Slim brings Sophie upon the scene. She throws the ring at Mustang's feet, and turns to Slim, whom she accepts as her future husband.

At the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week.

"When Macbeth Came to Snakeville," One Reel Comedy Full of Laughs

(General Release in One Reel)

Victor Potel, Margaret Joslin, Harry Todd, Evelyn Selbie and Ernest Van Pelt are seen in the Essanay comedy, "When Macbeth Came to Snakeville." The comedy is in one reel and full of laughs. Snakeville is all in a whirl, the world's greatest tragedian is to appear in "Macbeth" at the "Opry House." The "Tank Town" troupe arrives and stops at Slim's boarding house. Slim discovers his wife, Sophie, paying great attention to the leading man, and that evening at the performance she goes into hysterics at the marvelous acting of her ideal. That night she walks in her sleep, and imagining herself to be Lady Macbeth, gets a butcher knife and enters the room of the "Would-be Macbeth." The actor is frightened nearly to death. Sophie finally awakens, but it is not in her power to persuade the actor to remain in town another day, so he leaves, much to the satisfaction of Slim.

At the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week.

Victor Potel and Ted Burns Stage Championship Bout in Smashing One-Reeler

(General One-Reel Release—Comedy)

"When Slippery Slim Met the Champion" is full of punches—real live punches, for Vic Potel and Ted Burns enter the ring and settle it then and there. Snakeville is all excitement. The world's champion pugilist is to arrive the next day, and anybody who can stay three rounds with him is to receive $100. Slim is selected by his friends to try out the champion first, then, if he loses, the rest will try for the prize. The night of the encounter poor Slim is paralyzed with fright, and it is necessary to carry him into the ring. Then the fun starts. He is simply hammered into seven different shapes, but manages to gain his feet each time before the count. Sophie, who is at the ringside nursing a toothache with a bottle of chloroform, suddenly has an idea. She slips Slim the bottle and he saturates his glove with it. In the next clinch, he holds the glove over the champion's mouth until he drops asleep. Slim is then declared the winner and he carries home the "bacon."

At the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week, "When Slippery Slim Met the Champion"—one-reeler full of punches.

Slippery Slim at It Again—This Time in "Slippery Slim's Dilemma"—Usual Laughs

(General One-Reel Release—Comedy)

When Slippery Slim (Victor Potel) finds that his roommate has smallpox there is something doing around the camp where Slim and Mustang Pete reside. "Slippery Slim's Dilemma" tells you all about what happens when the discovery is made. Slippery Slim and Mustang Pete are roommates, also rivals for the hand of the fair Sophie. Slim claims to be a singer and guitar player. Sophie invites them to call, especially asking Slim to bring his guitar. Mustang Pete gets there first and Slim stops beneath the fair Sophie's window and serenades. Next morning Pete awakes first and paints Slim's face. Then he spreads the news that his roommate has smallpox. After a particularly humorous escape from quarantine, Slim proves his immunity, Pete confesses and Sophie returns to her first love—"Slippery Slim."

At the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week, "Slippery Slim's Dilemma," with Vic Potel, Harry Todd and Margaret Joslin.

Live News from the Producers

World Gets "Inside the Lines"

Was Produced for State Rights Market, But Will Be Put Out on Regular Program—Production Very Elaborate

STAGING a battle against what it terms the fiercest sort of competition, World-Pictures has won out in another fight for the benefit of exhibitors using the World program, according to news to that effect this week.

World Pictures has secured for distribution to World contract holders, a superpicture originally produced for distribution on a states right basis. This picture is "Inside the Lines," filmed from the novel and stage piece written by Earl Derr Biggers. World expects all exhibitors to be immensely interested in this announcement.

When "Inside the Lines" was produced in New York City some time ago, there was an immediate request for the screen rights. These were finally sold and the work of filming the production was started at once. Pictured in the cast is Lewis Stone, who starred in the original stage production on Broadway and who has a long record in the spoken drama. He was featured in "The Misleading Lady," "Bunny," and others.

Money has been simply lavished on the screen production, World declares. Expense was no object as the producers filmed the play with the intention of making it the outstanding states rights success of the year. But World-Pictures made a proposition for the purchase of "Within the Lines" for the purpose of releasing it on the regular World program.

Regarding its newly acquired production, World this week said: "There is no doubt of the immense box office value of the picture. It is timely, vital, exceedingly interesting, superbly staged and splendidly played. Playing opposite Mr. Stone is Marguerite Clayton, well known on the screen.

"It is interesting to note that at the present time 'Inside the Lines' has been played for over 400 times on the stage in London.

"World exhibitors are to be congratulated on receiving this new gift from World-Pictures on the regular World program. 'Inside the Lines' will be a tremendous box office puller for every World exhibitor."

World Pictures Presents Ethel Clayton In "Journey's End"

New Ideas Introduced in Petrova Feature

MADAME PETROVA'S fourth special production, "Tempered Steel," made by her own company, and to be distributed through the exchanges of the First National Exhibitor's Circuit, will be released in the early part of May, it is announced from the offices of the Petrova Picture Company. In this production several novel effects in the matter of animated titles and decorative backgrounds have been introduced, it is said. It is also stated that an entirely new effect has been gained whereby the usual abrupt jump from subtitle to scene has been eliminated, the mind of the spectator being carried smoothly from wording to action without in any way breaking the continuity of the story. An original idea in main titles eliminates the subtitles usually used to introduce the principal actors in the play.

"Tempered Steel" was prepared as a special screen vehicle for Madame Olga Petrova by George Middleton from his original story "The Great Star." He is the co-author with Guy Bolton, of the current Broadway success "Polly with a Past." "Tempered Steel" is the first of a series of Petrova pictures to be directed by Ralph Ince, responsible for many big hits.

The many admirers of the Polish actress will be surprised to find her in a totally different role from any of her former characterizations. Depicting the part of a young, high spirited Southern girl thrown into the vortex of theatrical life in Manhattan, Madame Petrova does some of the best emotional work of her long screen career. The story was adapted by Mrs. L. Case Russell, photographed by Harry Harris, and under the direction of Mr. Ince the following players enact the principal characters in support of Madame Petrova: J. Herbert Frank, Thomas Holding, E. J. Ratcliffe, Matilda Brundage, E. T. Carlton, Mrs. E. H. Walton and others.

Complete Cast for Thos. Dixon Play

The filming of the first scenes of "The One Woman," by Thomas Dixon, Jr., was started last week at the Paralta studios in Los Angeles under the direction of Reginald Barker. It is a production of the Mastercraft Photoplay Corporation. After some delay, due to varied discussions as to the scenario, cast and other details, the final selections for the cast have been decided upon. Ada Gleason, remembered for her work in the title role of "Ramona," will play the leading role of Ruth Gordon. Clara Williams, star of "Carmen of the Klondike," will be seen as Kate Ransom, and Lawson Butt, the English actor, will interpret the part of Gordon. Others in the cast will be Herschell Mayall, Thurston Hall and Joseph J. Dowling. The screen version of "The One Woman" was prepared by Harry Chandlee and Mr. Dixon himself, while Mr. Chandlee and E. Richard Schayer collaborated on the final continuity.

Ten Essanay Releases for Month of May

Essanay's releases for May comprise ten pictures, including the Essanay-Chaplin comedy reissue, "A Night Out," in two parts. Other releases include "Broncho Billy's Last Deed," "Broncho Billy's Squareness," "Broncho Billy's Secret," "Broncho Billy and the Greaser," "Broncho Billy's Fatal Joke," "Slippery Slim and the Impersonator," "When Slippery Slim Met the Champion," "Snakeville's New Waitress" and "Slippery Slim's Dilemma."

The second set of ten pictures of Broncho Billy's Western photoplays will start May 24 with "Broncho Billy and the Greaser." Another block of ten of the Snakeville comedies also will be issued, beginning June 1, one week after the last issue of the first set of ten.

Anita Stewart Back with Vitagraph

According to President Albert E. Smith, of Vitagraph, Anita Stewart will start work this week at the Vitagraph studio in Brooklyn on the first of a series of special features under the personal supervision of Mr. Smith. Miss Stewart will be directed by Wilfrid North, who produced "Over the Top."

Miss Stewart's first subject, it is announced, will be Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's "The 'Mind the Paint' Girl," in which Billie Burke scored a great success on the stage. She has entirely recovered from the illness which struck her down last summer and friends say that she is more beautiful than ever.

One of the Momentous Days in the History of Goldwyn Will Be That upon Which "Joan of Plattsburg" Is Released, with Mabel Normand as the Star. It Has Been Praised Highly on All Sides

George Walsh in First May Fox Special

A new George Walsh picture, described as "a mile-a-minute action story, well seasoned with love," is to be the first of the Special Feature releases in May from the William Fox organization. The production was screened in the East under the direction of Carl Harbaugh, and is titled "Brave and Bold."

Like Walsh's previous film, "Jack Spurlock—Prodigal," his present vehicle is an adaptation of a short story by a well-known writer. It is a screen version of Perley Poore Sheehan's fast-moving magazine tale, "Four-Forty at Fort Penn," Fort Penn being one of Pittsburgh's leading hotels. Regina Quinn, who played opposite Walsh in "The Pride of New York," appears again in a similar capacity. The other principals in the company include Dan Mason, Francis X. Conlan and Mabel Bunyea.

Bessie Love Designs Pin for Soldiers' Girls

Bessie Love, Pathe actress, whose latest picture, "How Could You, Caroline?" is released May 5, has designed a "Sweetheart's Service Pin," and the first one made from Miss Love's design was presented to her by Helen Hodge of Los Angeles, whose fiancee, Lieut. Wales, is in the aviation branch of the Army.

"Of course," explained Miss Love, "when I began to work on the design I realized that there was one thing, and only one, to fully express the sentiment which the pin should convey, a heart. So I decided upon a pin very much like the usual service badge. But in place of the star in the center I put a tiny heart."

Got All the Business

Manager Talbot, of the America theatre, Denver, reports to the office of the Select Pictures Corporation that on the day recently when he played "Ghosts of Yesterday," with Norma Talmadge, to S. R. O. all the other theatres on Curtis street were doing only mediocre business.

As to "Joan of Plattsburg"

Goldwyn Contends That Mabel Normand Patriotic Feature, Released May 5, Answers the Question, "What Can I Do for My Country?"

AN exhibitor who a few days ago saw Mabel Normand in "Joan of Plattsburg," the patriotic feature which Goldwyn will release May 5, is said to have remarked: "I would rather be Mabel Normand—right now—than any other star of the screen, because in 'Joan of Plattsburg' she is going to build for herself the increased affection of everyone who sees that production and carry a memorable message to the people of her country."

By creating that thought in an exhibitor's mind, "Joan of Plattsburg" is accomplishing exactly what Goldwyn expected it would. According to those in the Goldwyn offices who write for publication, Goldwyn knew months ago that there would be a flood of war pictures—good ones, bad ones and indifferent ones—and that the time would come in the great European conflict when millions of Americans suddenly would have the great war brought home to them in such a way as to challenge every latent spark of loyalty. Goldwyn knew that the time would come in America when every man, woman and child suddenly would ask: "What can I do for my country?"

"Joan of Plattsburg," provides the answer. Mabel Normand as Joan, the little girl living near a great military encampment, sees for the first time in her life the pictured story of France's Joan, the greatest feminine heroine in all history. She hears the story of Joan and asks, "Can any little girl of today be a Joan of Arc and influence the future of her country?"

And to this the answer is: "Yes; you can build up love of country. You can build faith and courage in your men. You and all other girls and boys and men and women can by your faith intensify and strengthen your country."

Goldwyn itself believes that Mabel Normand in "Joan of Plattsburg," will do more to "keep the home fires burning" than any picture of the year.

Among those supporting Miss Normand are Robert Elliott, Joseph Smiley, Edward Elkas, John W. Dillion and Edith McAlpin,

Secure Four Novels for Harold Lockwood

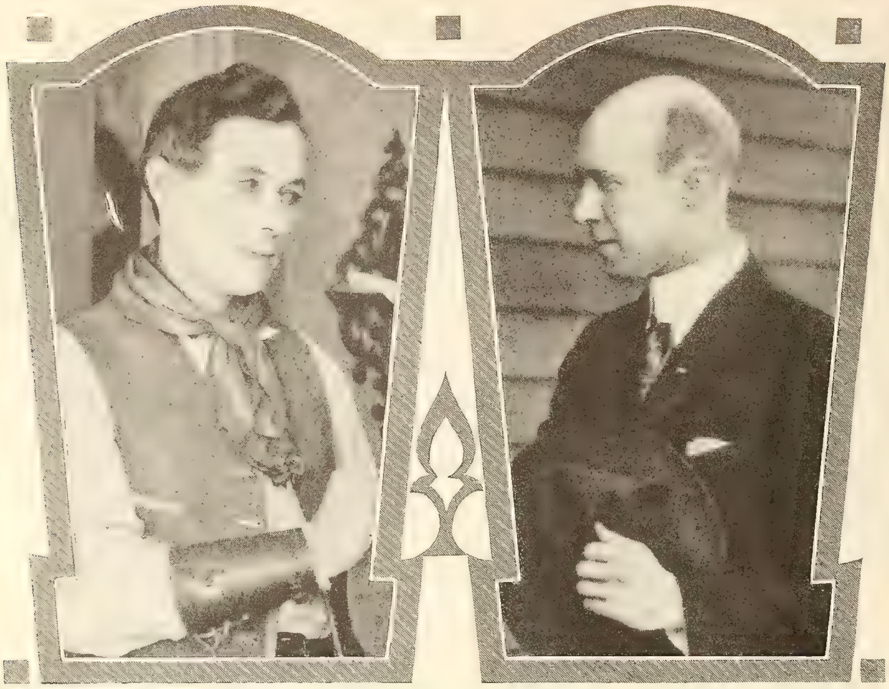
THAT Harold Lockwood will be well supplied with subjects for some time to come is indicated in an announcement by Fred J. Balshofer, president of the Yorke-Metro Company, that the photoplay rights to four successful novels by well-known writers of fiction have been acquired for early production with Mr. Lockwood as the star.

The novels secured are "Lend Me Your Name" and "Pals First," by Francis Perry Elliott; "The Yellow Dove," by George Gibbs, and "A King in Khaki," by Henry Kitchell Webster.

The production of "Lend Me Your Name" was recently begun under the direction of Mr. Balshofer at Metro's Hollywood studios. The story is a farce comedy and was adapted from the novel for the screen by Mr. Balshofer and John B. Clymer.

The central figure in "Lend Me Your Name" is an English earl, who, in order to escape his domineering wife, Sophronia, who is scheduled to join him the next day, trades identities with his double, a second story man, whom he discovers in his home. Mr. Lockwood plays the dual role of the earl and the second story man.

You are not going to war. The men who are need all the comforts you can give them. Help them get cigarettes. That is your patriotic duty. If you aren't helping in the "smokes" campaign, get busy—now. Don't be a slacker!



Camouflage Permits Us to Convey the Impression That Henry B. Walthall, In the Midst of a Scene, Stopped to Greet W. W. Hodkinson When the Latter Visited the Coast. In fact, Mr. Hodkinson Was Shaking Hands With Louise Glaum When the Camera Did Its Bit

Hodkinson at Paralta Studios

Sees Stars Making the Pictures His Corporation Releases—Tells Them of Success of His "Co-operative Exhibitor Plan"

W. W. HODKINSON, president of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, which is releasing Paralta Plays, spent several days last week at the Paralta studios in Los Angeles and met the stars who are making the product that is being placed on the market through his organization. Mr. Hodkinson reached Los Angeles last week in the course of a tour throughout the United States which he is making to develop his well-known "Co-operative Exhibitor" plan, through which exhibitors in all territories will share over two-thirds of the distribution profits of Paralta Plays and other pictures which the Hodkinson Corporation may later handle.

General Manager Nat. I. Brown of Paralta Plays, Inc., took Mr. Hodkinson through the immense plant in which Paralta pictures are made and explained to him the details of production, as well as pointed out the plans for expansion and construction which are now being carried out and which will make the studio, when completed, eclipse in size, equipment and efficiency, all others on the Pacific Coast. Louise Glaum, Henry B. Walthall, Bessie Barriscale and J. Warren Kerrigan all met Mr. Hodkinson and had long talks, in which he told them of the wonderful success with which his "tie-in" plan is being met all over the country and assured them that before long their productions being made for Paralta, if the standard of those already completed is maintained, will reach the best and most extensive motion picture audiences in the United States.

Mr. Hodkinson spoke quite at length concerning his tour and said that exhibitors have signed contracts with him in every city and territory in which he had stopped. "There is no doubt now," he said, "of the triumph of our 'Co-operative plan.' Exhibitors realize, as soon as it is explained to them, the freedom and excellence of service that they are guaranteed through it, and are really anxious to join with me in overcoming the difficulties of the distribution end of the industry. And, now that I have seen the wonderful plant in which these pictures are made, I feel more convinced than ever that I did the best possible thing by choosing Paralta Plays as my first product for release."

After leaving Los Angeles, Mr. Hodkinson will work his way back across the continent finally stopping at New York.

Holt and Florence Vidor Again with Hayakawa

Jack Holt and Florence Vidor are again seen in support of Sessue Hayakawa in the Oriental actor's latest Paramount picture, "The White Man's Law," released May 6. Both appeared with him in "The Honor of His House" and other Paramount pictures. The story is by Marion Fairfax and John Browne, the former writing the scenario. James Young directed.

Name of Minter Picture Changed

The name of the latest Mary Miles Minter release from the American Film Company studio at Santa Barbara has been changed from "The Greater Call" to "Social Briars." The picture is a story of the ambitions of a little country girl who had a wonderful voice and of the social briars that impeded her progress until she found both romance and a career in the big city of which she had so often dreamed.

Howard Hickman to Direct for Paralta

Howard Hickman, prominent on both stage and screen, who has lately been appearing in Paralto pictures, is about to make his advent as a Paralta director. His first production will be "The Rainbow," in which Bessie Barriscale, who, in private life, is Mrs. Hickman, will be the star. Miss Barriscale is now in New York where her sister is critically ill. During her absence from the California studio Mr. Hickman is making preparations so that work on "The Rainbow" may be commenced immediately on her return.

Frank Mayo Signs Again with World

Frank Mayo, who has appeared as leading man for Ethel Clayton, Kitty Gordon and other stars of World Pictures, has signed a long-term contract with the World Film Corporation and will be featured in several forthcoming World productions. Mr. Mayo is an accomplished actor and comes naturally by his talent, for his father, the late Frank Mayo, was in his day one of the leading figures of the American stage.

"Dot" Farley Makes Good in Clover Comedies

Critics who have seen "Dot" Farley in the first six of the Clever Comedies declare that she is doing the best work of her career. The series is being made by the National Film Corporation and is being distributed by General Film. "Bud" Duncan and "Kewpie" Morgan are co-starred with Miss Farley. The young commedienne has just signed a long-term contract with O. D. Woodward, president of the National Film Corporation. Some of the companies with which she has been identified in the past are Essanay, Universal, Fox, Keystone, Kay-Bee, Century and Hamilton.

Dot Farley, In Clover Comedies Through General Film

Rex Beach Picture Goes Big in Los Angeles

Goldwyn reports that the verdict of Los Angeles is unanimously favorable to Rex Beach's "Hearts of the Sunset," which did a week's capacity business at Quinn's Rialto, the first theatre in the country to present the production. "'Hearts of the Sunset' has been the talk of the town," said the Los Angeles Times. "Here is a production shock full of thrills," write Florence Lawrence in the Examiner. "This production has all the power that the public expects of a Rex Beach story," said the Tribune-Express. And the Record: "The one author in America who can always be counted on to deliver a real story on the screen is Rex Beach."

Diana Allen Featured

Diana Allen, a former Ziegfeld Follies girl, and later seen in "Miss 1917" at the Century theatre in New York, is featured in a series of one-reel comedies to be released weekly by General Film Company. The pictures are being made by the Diamond Film Company at its New Orleans studio. Miss Allen's principal support will be Lou Marks, formerly of Keystone and Commonwealth comedies.

"Salome" Promises Some New Lighting Effects

The world of motion pictures is promised something novel as well as effective in lighting in "Salome," Theda Bara's forthcoming production, according to the William Fox office.

It is said that, although the Fox studios at Hollywood, Cal., where the picture was screened, are among the best equipped in the world, more than $15,000 was spent in installing the necessary apparatus for the scenes. Most of the new work appears in the action that takes place in the chamber of Herod. A score of artists and mechanics worked under the supervision of J. Gordon Edwards for seven weeks on the reproduction of the King's throne-room.

Jewel Carmen Doesn't Quite Look Herself In Wm. Fox's "The Bride of Fear," Which Is Proof of Her Versatility

Pauline Frederick's Newest Paramount Production Is "Resurrection," Scenarioized by Chas. E. Whittaker from the Leo Tolstoy Novel

New Paramounts Are Completed

Donald Crisp Puts Finishing Touches on Wallace Reid Subject—Hayakawa Finishes His Contract —Martin Feature

THREE new Paramount pictures were finished at the Western studios last week, it is announced. Donald Crisp has completed filming of "The Firefly of France" on good time and believes it to be one of the most effective pictures he has made for Paramount release. Wallace Reid is star with Ann Little as his leading woman and all report that the picture is not only intensely interesting, but characterized by its speed throughout. One thing happens upon top of another and the spirit of the war times pervades the entire story. Some shots representing a sector under shellfire were taken recently on location, the only casualties being a few bruises sustained when clods of 'dobe were thrown high in the air by bursting mines and rained down upon the actors and crew.

George Melford has also shot the last scenes of Sessue Hayakawa's last Paramount picture—"The City of Dim Faces," and once more quiet reigns. While the picture was in progress the sounds of shrill Chinese pipes and the banging of gongs and the rumble of drums kept a continual chaos of sound. The studio streets were thronged betimes with gaily costumed Orientals, Mandarins and dignitaries of various sorts, with an occasional coolie for good measure.

Vivian Martin has finished "Viviette" at Morosco studio and is getting ready for her next picture, which has not yet been announced. Walter Edwards directed "Viviette" and it is possible that James Young will handle the next film.

A replica of a small canal, one of those branching off the Grand Canal in Venice, with palazzos lining the banks and a flower-decked gondola floating on the placid surface of the water, is one of the excellent scenes that is being utilized at the Hollywood studio to add beauty and realism to "Old Wives for New," Cecil B. DeMille's new Artcraft special.

A gondolied who has rowed many a happy couple down the waterways of the romantic city, is used in the scene and he remarked with no little astonishment and satisfaction when he saw the set —"that is the real-a thing. Justa like Italy. Very fine work-a."

Dorothy Dalton in Story of Frozen North

"Tyrant Fear" is a new Dorothy Dalton Paramount picture from the studio of Thomas H. Ince, directed under Mr. Ince's supervision by R. William Neill. It is said to afford a tragically emotional role for Miss Dalton. She is literally sold to a man as his wife and through fear remains under complete subjection to him. In the end her womanhood and courage triumph. R. Cecil Smith is the author.

Vitagraph to Do "Love Watches"

The Vitagraph Company is said to have secured the screen rights to "Love Watches," the stage play, in which Billie Burke was starred, and will shortly convert it into a starring subject for Corinne Griffith. The play will be directed by William P. S. Earle, who produced "Womanhood," "Within the Law" and other big features for Vitagraph.

One of the Most Modern and Complete Film Plants Is Rothacker's, in Chicago. On the Left Is a Corner of the Printing Room and in the Center Is an Inspector Looking the Films Over at the Tank. On the Right Is the Dry Room

First National Praises Rothacker Work

THAT the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, of Chicago, is turning out the kind of work that satisfies even the most critical in the industry, is plainly evident in a letter which the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, Inc., through Secretary H. Schwalbe, has written to Watterson R. Rothacker.

Expressions of commendation concerning the nature of the Rothacker work, and its good results, have been heard on every side, but none are more emphatic than the First National letter, which follows::

The Rothacker Film Manufacturing Co.,
1339 Diversey Parkway,
Chicago, Ill.
(Attention of Mr. Watterson R. Rothacker)

Dear Mr. Rothacker:—We desire to express our sincere thanks to you for having so admirably taken care of our requirements in the printing of the Charlie Chaplin release—"A Dog's Life."

The Members of the Circuit are highly pleased with the results as shown on the screen and we feel deeply indebted to you for so promptly supplying every Member with the required number of prints before the scheduled time, in accordance with our arrangement.

Turning out over two hundred prints of a three reel picture in the short time that you have done this week certainly establishes a new record for speed, particularly when the fact is taken into consideration that the development and photography is up to the highest standard in every way.

Yours very truly,
THE FIRST NATIONAL EXHIBITORS
CIRCUIT, INC.,
H. Schwalbe, Sec.

Busy Days at Universal City

Universal City, Cal., is a busy place these days. Not only are there Universal Special Productions, comedies and serials in work there, but there are two Bluebird companies and two Jewels engaged in producing features, beside the four other producing companies which are taking advantage of President Laemmle's offer to make use of the big plant.

Mae Murray is being directed by Robert Leonard in "The Big Little Person," by Rebecca Hooper Eastman; Carmel Myers has started work under the direction of Elsie Jane Wilson in "A Penny's Worth of Love"; Harry Pollard is keeping Ella Hall busy on "Nobody's Bride," while Ruth Clifford and Kenneth Harlan are being featured in Rupert Julian's next production, the working title of which is "The Shadowed Man."

Cartoon Ad Series for Chaplin Releases

A VARIATION from the ordinary commercial advertising layout has been put into effect by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit in exploiting the merits of Charlie Chaplin's new comedy series. R. M. Brinkerhoff, the cartoonist, has been engaged to cover every angle of Chaplin's work with characteristic drawings designed to accentuate the humor of the films. The cartoons are not only utilized for trade paper advertising but are being published in the form of heralds and as colored lobby displays. The comments that already have been received upon the Brinkerhoff drawings are said to prove conclusively that it is good business to hand exhibitors a laugh as well as a booking contract when seeking to sign up for "A Dog's Life" and its successors. And these comments have been received in shoals.

R. M. Brinkerhoff, whose daily comic series in the New York Evening World has become widely popular, did his first cartoon work for the Toledo Blade. He also served the Cleveland Leader and the Cincinnati Post before coming to New York to study at the Art Students' League. After completing his course he traveled extensively in Europe and it was in the old medieval library in Venice that he says he came across a series of pictures of a famous harlequin of the days of Goldoni, who was said to have been the greatest clown of his race and time. Brinkerhoff copied some of the pictures of this old-time buffoon, and it is remarkable to note that his costume was strikingly similar to that now affected by Chaplin, from the billowy trousers, tight jacket and long shoes even to the jaunty sport-stick and small mustache.

World Gets a Story from Roy Somerville

Roy Somerville, author of many vivid short stories, has written for World Pictures a story entitled "Hitting the Trail." The scene is laid in New York's East Side and the story treats of the regeneration of one of the inhabitants of that section.

Aside from his work as a magazine writer Mr. Somerville is well known to picturegoers as the author of "Reggie Mixes In," in which Douglas Fairbanks was featured, "Children in the House" and "The Danger Game."

"The White Man's Law" Is Laid in Africa

For Sessue Hayakawa's forthcoming Paramount picture, "The White Man's Law," by Marion Fairfax and John Browne, the West Coast of Africa has been screened. Miss Fairfax wrote the scenario and James Young directed the picture. Florence Vidor will again be seen as the Oriental star's leading woman, and Jack Holt as the villain. It is said to be thrilling.

Neilan Will Direct Next Ferguson-Artcraft

Jesse L. Lasky states that Elsie Ferguson's next Artcraft picture to follow "The Danger Mark" will be directed by Marshall Neilan, who is now engaged in producing "Hit the Trail Holliday," with George M. Cohan. The subject selected for Miss Ferguson is a Western story which will be staged in Montana, Wyoming and Yellowstone Park. Mr. Lasky says it will be the biggest production Miss Ferguson has yet appeared in.

Katterjohn Works on New Starless Production

Monte M. Katterjohn is now engaged in writing a story which he says he has spent three years in gathering material for. "The story will be the thing," he says, "and the cast will be adapted to it. There will be no stars nor featured players. I expect it will be about eight or nine reels in length when produced for the screen. It will be by far the best play I have ever written."

It is probable that this play will be produced at the Paralta studios where Mr. Katterjohn's Selexart feature, "Carmen of the Klondike," was filmed. Under the Paralta banner Mr. Katterjohn has also written "An Alien Enemy" and "Within the Cup," starring Louise Glaum and Bessie Barriscale, respectively.

Viola Dana Starts on "The Only Road"

Director Frank Reicher has started work on the production of "The Only Road," Viola Dana's newest Metro subject. Already a substantial portion of the exteriors and some of the interiors have been taken. It is a Mexican border story and was written by A. S. LeVino. George D. Baker and Mr. Le Vino adapted it for the screen. Casson Ferguson is Miss Dana's leading man and others in the cast are Monte Blus, Paul Weigel, Fred Huntley, Marie Van Tassel and Edith Chapman.

Sumptuous Settings for "Bill's Baby"

Among the settings in "Bill's Baby," the first of the "Smiling Bill" Parsons Capital Comedies, directed by Goldwyn, is a well-appointed club house. The first interior view reveals a spacious reception hall with servants scurrying here and there serving the members. Off the reception hall is seen the billiard room with four tables. Other striking features are the card room, grill, lounge and library. In fact, Goldwyn claims there has never been a two-reeler so sumptuously mounted as the initial Parsons offering.

Scenes for "The Demon" Made on Catalina

George D. Baker, manager of productions at Metro's West Coast studios, spent some time on Catalina Island making exteriors for "The Demon," starring Edith Storey. The story was adapted by Mr. Baker for the novel of the same name by C. N. and A. M. Williamson. The scenes are laid in Algeria and on the island of Corsica.

Al Hall with Fox

Al Hall has signed a contract with William Fox to play the juvenile role in support of Lee Children in a feature, as yet unnamed, now in the making at the Biograph studio in the Bronx under the direction of Kenean Buel. Mr. Hall was associated with Fox some time ago, appearing in "Little Miss U. S. A.," "The Painted Madonna" and Hall Caine's "The Deemster."

"De Luxe Annie" Makes Progress

Norma Talmadge Gets Unusual Cast for Her Newest Select Picture—Eugene O'Brien Has Role Opposite the Star

"DE LUXE ANNIE," on which Norma Talmadge and her forces are busily at work as the star's May release in her Select Star Series, is progressing rapidly with the cast completed. The screen version of Edward Clark's play of the same name has been prepared by Paul West, the filming is under the direction of Roland West, and the photography by Ed. Wynard and Albert Moses. The star is presented, through Select, by Joseph M. Schenck.

Norma Talmadge's leading man in this Select Picture will again be Eugene O'Brien who occupied a similar position in the star's earlier releases, "Ghosts of Yesterday" and "By Right of Purchase." In "De Luxe Annie," O'Brien plays the role of Jimmy Fitzpatrick, the confederate of the crook heroine in the "de-luxe game." Another male role of major importance has been entrusted to Frank Mills, well remembered for his superb work on the stage with Mrs. Pat Campbell, Olga Nethersole, Forbes Robertson and Sir Herbert Tree, and also on the screen where he has supported many other luminaries.

Dr. Fernand Niblo, the alienist-physician, is portrayed by Edwards Davis, who is especially fitted for this role by his own collegiate training as well as an extensive screen experience. Detective Cronin and Cyrus Monroe, the miserly country storekeeper with a weakness for pretty women are drawn by Fred R. Stanton and Joseph Burke respectively, both talented performers before the camera. Joe, the fat grocery boy who provides much of the comedy relief, is played by David Burns, while Mrs. Archer is portrayed by Edna Hunter and little Janet Kendal by Harriet Jenkins, the winning child actress.

Work on "De Luxe Annie" is going ahead under full speed at Norma Talmadge's 48th Street Studio.

Jewel Solves the Novel Title Problem

THE executives of Jewel Productions, Inc., declare they have solved to their own satisfaction the oft-debated problem as to whether a picture made from a widely known novel should be titled as in the original or should be given a new title that will adequately describe the production.

"Give the picture a new title whenever necessary" is the answer of the Jewel officials, "and on all the paper issued have the title and the name of the book from which the story is adapted in equal display."

Th Jewel executives selected "The Doctor and the Woman" with which to make a test case. They arranged for prereleases in two cities where exhibiting conditions are similar. In one the picture was released as "K" which is the name of the Mary Roberts Rinehart story from which the production was made. In the second city the production was released as "The Doctor and the Woman" adapted from Mary Roberts Rinehart's same story.

Bookings in both cities have been carefully checked and the result shows that the original title "K" was not a selling title in so far as the motion picture exhibiting interests were concerned. The exhibitors that booked "K" managed or controlled houses known as the "better class of neighborhood houses" the patrons of which are magazine readers. These patrons were acquainted with the writings of Mary Roberts Rinehart and there was no need to educate them as to the meaning of "K."

On the other hand in the second test zone where the picture was released under the name of "The Doctor and the Woman" with the explanation that it was adopted from Mary Roberts Rinehart's "K," the exhibitors booked it for general consumption and also to obtain the admission money from the followers of the author.

Metro Is as Well Supplied with Male Stars as with Those of the Gentler Sex. Bradley Barker Is with the Dolly Sisters in Their New Picture. Charles Bryant Is Nazimova's Leading Man, and Huntley Gordon Is Also in the Dolly Production

General Gets Wolfville Tales

Alfred Henry Lewis's Stories of the West to Be Released as Two-Reel Dramas—Alternate with O. Henry's

GENERAL Film Company has taken over the distribution of the screen versions of the Wolfville Tales by the late Alfred Henry Lewis. They will be done in two-reel drama form and will be alternated with the O. Henry stories as Broadway Star Features.

The Wolfville Tales are virile tales of the great West which the famous short story teller knew intimately from first-hand knowledge, and are brimful of plot value and human interest material. They are said to provide the best series of Western pictures ever filmed, and General Film predicts for them an unprecedented success. In each case sufficient action to make a program feature is condensed into two reels, insuring a subject of high entertainment worth. Written by an author who ranks alongside O. Henry as one of the greatest of American short story writers, the Wolfville Tales have a splendid advertising value for the exhibitor. The philosophy and quaint humor of the original stories have been retained upon the screen, the titles being taken from the works of the author.

"The Clients of Aaron Green," the first release, dated May 4, is a story of the West, said to be rich in human interest material, exciting episodes and flashes of humor. The tale deals with the attempt of a too-zealous young lawyer to establish himself in his profession in a western mining town.

The week following, General Film will release an O. Henry story, "The Purple Dress," a heart interest story with Agnes Ayres and Evart Overton in the leading roles.

"Clients of Aaron Green" Is One of the Wolfville Stories, Through General Film

Bolo Pasha Faces the Fox Firing Squad

AS evidence of the timeliness of "The Caillaux Case," which William Fox has just completed for the screen, the Fox forces point to the fact that on the very day when dispatches from France reported the execution of Bolo Pasha, the traitor, by a firing squad at Vincennes, the Bolo Pasha of the film drama was executed at the Fox studio at Fort Lee.

Every scene of the picture had been completed but the execution of Bolo. The history of the case had been followed to the minutest detail, and the sensational episodes in the careers of Joseph Caillaux, "evil genius of France"; Mme. Caillaux, his beautiful wife, and Bolo Pasha, the Kaiser's agent in France and America, had been recorded up to the minute. Nothing was lacking but the definite announcement of the arch-traitor's end.

Even the set of the prison yard at Vincennes had been made and the actors in the scene had been notified to be ready at any moment. Director Richard Stanton anticipating the execution, awaited only the flash from the wire to go ahead with the shooting of the final act in the big world intrigue.

The story of this last act in the film play is the story of the press dispatches. Bolo, the once jaunty dandy, has suddenly become an old man. When he is led to the execution post, he is shaking and on the verge of collapse. Asked if he wants his eyes bandaged, he weakly answers "Yes," and while this is being done, he adds: "But it is useless to tie the bandage so tight." These are his last words.

A few seconds later there is a flash of smoke from the rifles of the firing squad, and Bolo Pasha sinks to the earth. Thirteen shots have taken effect in the right side of his head. Yet even then the lieutenant commanding the squad advances to the dead man and fires pointblank into his ear. The firing squad is marched off and a few friends lingering near the yard are admitted to bear the body away.

Speaking of the filming of this great scene in "The Caillaux Case," William Fox said the next day. "I doubt if there has ever been anything quite like it. Although this picture is a film drama which covers years of time and required many weeks to portray on the screen, its final scenes are alive with current interest. It is history and it is news and from the present trend of affairs should not fail to attract.

Mastercraft President Returns to Coast

F. EUGENE Farnsworth made a short visit to New York in the interests of the Mastercraft Photoplay Corporation last week. He left for the Paralta studios in California Friday to supervise the production of Thomas Dixon's novel, "The One Woman," which will be staged there. Mr. Farnsworth had been in Los Angeles for several months planning the filming of the first Mastercraft picture, but in order to overcome certain difficulties regarding the story and the management which were causing indeterminate delays, he made a hurried trip East.

One of the objects accomplished during his stay in the metropolis was his election to the presidency of the Mastercraft Photoplay Corporation of New York, a subsidiary organization to the Mastercraft Photoplay Corporation of Massachusetts, of which Mr. Farnsworth was already president and director-general. The fact that Mr. Farnsworth is now the active head of the New York organization as well as of the parent corporation makes possible the immediate production of "The One Woman," which had been held up previously due to the necessity of sending the scenario back and forth between New York and Los Angeles for approval by both concerns and by Thomas Dixon, the author, who holds an authoritative position in the concern.

Rodney Again Leads with Enid Bennett

Earl Rodney, who was leading man for Enid Bennett, the Thomas H. Ince star, in "Naughty, Naughty!" will have the leading male role in "The Biggest Show on Earth," Miss Bennett's next Paramount subject released May 6. Other important parts are taken by Melbourne MacDowell, Ethel Lynn, Bliss Chevalier and Carl Stockdale, while real circus people appear in many of the scenes.

Shot in the Quicksand!

Scene: Somewhere in California, about midway between one location and another. In background, members of the Universal Company engaged in making the serial, "The Lion's Claws," hiking to the place selected for the next "shot." In foreground, Marie Walcamp, blue-eyed, blonde-haired heroine, plodding wearily along, unmindful of and forgotten by the rest of the company. She falters! An expression of agony o'erspreads her countenance. God! Quicksand! Her feet sink deeper and deeper as the sands grow quicker and quicker. Now she is up to her waist. She screams! In an instant three strong men are rushing to the rescue. But wait! Here IS something! Hurry, hurry, Mr. Cameraman, this sinking girl is begging to be shot. Are you ready? All right, shoot! Now to the rescue! Ah, just in time. But see, she has fainted. And why not?

N. B.: The hole has been carefully marked and charted, not as a matter of mere public safety, but, the Universal Publicity Department asserts, "for future use in pictures where real quicksand is necessary."

William Farnum Starts on Zane Grey Story

William Farnum has begun work at the William Fox West Coast Studios on "Riders of the Purple Sage," the first of two Zane Grey stories he is to do. Frank Lloyd is directing and Katherine Adams will again appear as the star's leading woman. Others in the cast are Marc Robbins, William Burress, Murdock McQuarrie, Nancy Caswell, William Scott and J. Holmes. Mr. Grey will accompany the company when it goes out on location.

Mr. Farnum commenced on his new vehicle directly he had finished the Liberty Loan tour on which he was engaged. It is said that he was most successful in his efforts in arousing California to a thorough appreciation of its duties and that approximately $2,000,000 in bonds were sold through the star's efforts. Mr. Farnum worked tirelessly for the loan and lost his voice entirely as a result of his speeches in its behalf. Director Lloyd was with the actor during the trip.

Mr. Farnum himself bought $88,000 worth of Third Liberty Bonds. Mr. Lloyd took $12,000, making a total subscription of $100,000. A feature of the campaign was that at each meeting held the highest subscription made by any individual would be doubled by the Fox star. In this way Mr. Farnum pledged himself for $88,000. One of his greatest achievements was the selling of $110,050 in bonds in twenty-two minutes at Reno, Nevada.

Chaplin-Mutuals Played 1,692 Houses in Week

Demand for the two-reel Chaplin comedies produced by Lone Star for release through Mutual exchanges is reported as consistently heavy under Mutual's new booking plan. Chaplin-Mutual specials played week before last in 1,692 houses in all parts of the United States. Virtually every booking of the 1,692 was at least a second run. In some instances the pictures had been run as many as twenty times and in one instance the booking of "The Vagabond," the twenty-fifth.

Fannie Ward in the Chief Character of Pathe's "The Yellow Ticket"

Pathe Widens Publicity Circle

Will Give Millions of Readers Chance to See Advertising Before "The Yellow Ticket" is Released in June

ACCORDING to an announcement made by Pathe last week, the readers of the Saturday Evening Post will see advertising on Pathe's "The Yellow Ticket," before the production is released on June 2. This is in accordance, it is said, with the company's decision to be among the first to advertise a single picture on such a large scale in this way, and is cited as an indication of the importance of the feature. The issue of the magazine dated May 25 will carry "The Yellow Ticket" copy, prior to the release of the feature. Pathe announces that the Rialto theatre will screen the picture.

This engagement follows on the recent announcement of Pathe's Selective Feature Service and it is stated on the authority of a Pathe official that the Rialto is paying a record price for "The Yellow Ticket."

This is an indication not only of the strength of "The Yellow Ticket," but the value of the Selective Service Plan of booking which, as worked out by Pathe, combines the good points of the open market for the big house and the program for the smaller one.

A careful investigation of this method—something entirely new for Pathe and marking another progressive advance for that company—brings out the following expressions of opinion from showmen: "I prefer Selective Service because I only want to book those pictures which I know my patrons like—this can only be done by my selecting them.

"By selecting my features I reduce my 'poor days' to a minimum.

"A feature which jams another house may be a frost in my theatre—therefore I welcome the selective booking plan.

"I am the best judge of what my patrons like the most—I study them daily—I know just what they want. Selective booking permits me to choose features which I know I can make money on.

"By Pathe's plan I can take what I want and I am willing to pay a comparatively higher price for the privilege, as this is only fair."

William Fox Completes Three Features

THE week's balmy weather, very favorable for location work, is responsible for the finishing of three new William Fox Special Features—"Blue-Eyed Mary," "Brave and Bold," "Peg of the Pirates" —while "The Firebrand" will be added to the list of completed subjects within a day or two.

"The Caillaux Case," which Richard Stanton has directed with an all-star cast, awaited only word that Bolo Pasha had been executed by the firing squad in France that the scene might be duplicated at the Fort Lee Studios. This production, too—a Standard Picture—is also finished now.

"Blue-Eyed Mary" stars June Caprice and was made under the direction of Harry Milarde. "Brave and Bold" is the action story in which George Walsh has stellar honors; the direction is by Carl Harbaugh; and "Peg of the Pirates," staged by O. A. C. Lund, is petite Peggy Hyland's second William Fox play.

"Peg of the Pirates" needed only a few days' work at the New Jersey plant, as it was almost complete when the company returned from its six weeks' stay in the South. The picture was screened on shipboard and in the out-of-doors to a great extent.

"The Firebrand," a vigorous story of Russia today, is said to be one of the finest photodramas in which the stately Virginia Pearson has yet appeared. Edmund Lawrence is the director.

Progress continues to be made on a new Jane and Katherine Lee subject, in work by Kenean Buel, and as yet unnamed.

Kerrigan Ready to Start Another Paralta

IT is announced by Paralta Plays, Inc., Thomas J. Geraghty's screen version of "Toby," the novel by Credo Harris, has been completed and is now being read for final approval by J. Warren Kerrigan, who will be the star of the picture, and Raymond B. West, who will direct it. The production has been planned for five reels and the cast will be made up from the stock of Paralta productions, with Lois Wilson, who has appeared with Mr. Kerrigan in his last two pictures, probably appearing in the leading feminine role.

Miss Wilson has not been seen in any Paralta Plays since "The Turn of a Card," the picture in which Mr. Kerrigan broke his leg. She has been at the studio several times recently in conference with Mr. West, the director, and officials of the company regarding the production of "Toby." Roberta Wilson, her sister, is now playing one of the principal roles in "Shackled," Louise Glaum's forthcoming Paralta Play.

Final preparations for the production of "Toby," including the construction arrangements, the properties and the completion of the cast selection, are now being made at the studios, and as soon as these have been finished, Mr. Kerrigan will lose no time in commencing on the filming of the picture.

Production of this film will be rushed as much as possible without reducing the standard of quality of the picture, due to the fact that Mr. Kerrigan's absence from the screen after the great success of his first two Paralta Plays, "A Man's Man" and "The Turn of a Card," is said to have brought a great demand from the public for more of this star's pictures.

Petrova Utilizes New Ideas

Results of Representatives' Trip To Be Included in Service Department—May Be of Use to Exhibitors

AS a result of a trip recently made by Herbert Lubin and Bert Ennis, representatives of Petrova Picture Company, for the purpose of ascertaining the exact needs of exhibitors in the matter of proper exploitation material, several entirely original aids have been added to the service department. The most important of these is a new lobby display expressly designed for the purpose of attracting attention to Petrova productions. It consists of a photograph on glass of Madame Petrova encased in an attractive frame. This new novelty may be used in theatre lobbies or in store windows, electric light or daylight being equally applicable to its use. As patrons of the theatre or pedestrians pass by the novelty frame, the single pose of Madame Petrova changes into various positions, each change being enhanced by a series of color effects. The attention compelling powers of this latest Petrova novelty was proved by placing the frame in a New York store window where it attracted the notice of 3,500 passers-by during the course of an hour.

Arrangements have also been completed whereby it will be possible for the exhibitor to secure electrotypes of any of the series of beautiful Petrova advertisements which have been appearing in the trade publications during the past year. These will also be furnished in mat form where the latter style is found to be more convenient.

A stock twenty-four sheet stand has also been prepared for the special use of Petrova exhibitors. A certain quantity of these will be distributed free to each showman to aid him in properly exploiting these productions in the territory surrounding his city.

Together with these helps, it is contemplated issuing an entire new pressbook, which will contain the result of all of the valuable suggestions gathered by Messrs. Lubin and Ennis during their conferences with exhibitors, exchange-men and newspapermen and others interested in the industry throughout the country.

With the new advertising aids listed above, the Petrova service department is at the present time also issuing various styles of cuts suited for newspaper and program use, together with single and double column mats, and a full line of photographs suitable for lobby display purposes.

Universal Tries an Experiment

In Drive to Re-establish Popularity of Short Subjects—No Five-Reel Feature Will Be Released Week of May 13

UNIVERSAL branch exchanges throughout the country are making a drive to re-establish the popularity of one and two-reel subjects as drawing box-office attractions. As an experiment as to the propriety of such a move the company in its releases for the week of May 13 has failed to list a single long feature. The entire program consists of serial episodes, comedies and the usual split-reel releases.

Several months ago President Laemmle sent out letters to numerous exhibitors throughout the country to obtain the opinion of the exhibitors as to the value of short subjects as against the costly features. The answer showed a wide diversity of opinion. While all exhibitors acknowledged that no theatre program would be complete without at least one short subject, few of them were willing to admit that any program would be complete without a five-reel feature.

Scattered throughout the replies were a few letters from exhibitors who felt that their audiences would be just as well pleased with a program consisting of a one-reel subject, a two-reel subject, a three-reel picture and a split news reel.

"But while I feel this to be so," one exhibitor wrote, "I am afraid to try the experiment. I know that many of the present features put out in five reels could be cut to three without hurting the action of the pictures and with a probability that they would be improved. But I do not know that my audience object to picture padding. I even suspect that many of my patrons rather like it, paying rather for footage than quality."

President Laemmle feels that the Universal bookings for presentation during the week of May 13 will give some sort of an answer to the short reel question. No matter what the answer may be, however, Universal will continue to release its special attractions every two weeks.

The releases for the week of the thirteenth will consist of the fifth episode of the Boy Scout serial, "Boy Scouts to the Rescue," this chapter being titled "Treachery at Sea"; the fifteenth episode of the Eddie Polo serial, "The Bull's Eye," titled "The Stained Face"; the seventh episode of "The Lion's Claws," the Marie Walcamp serial; a two-reel L-Ko comedy, a one-reel Nestor, titled "By Heck," by Hy Mayer; a one-reel Lyons-Moran Star comedy, "The Dodgers," and the split-reel subjects, Universal Animated Weekly, Current Events and Screen Magazine. The feature of the magazine is an animated interview with Marion Harland, who at 84 gives some good advice to mothers-in-law.

Fourth Ebony Release

The release of the fourth of the Ebony Comedy series, "A Milk Fed Hero," is announced this week by General Film Company. It is in the form of a rural burlesque. and is said to provide an excellent opportunity for the negro players to present the droll humor of their race. Following this will come "Busted Romance."

Mae Murray's Universal Feature, "The Bride's Awakening," Is a Special Production

Goldwyn Stars Keep Busy at Fort Lee

Goldwyn's three busiest stars are Madge Kennedy, Mabel Normand and Mae Marsh and they have little or no time to rest between productions at Fort Lee these days. Miss Kennedy is now nearing the completion of "The Fair Pretender," under the direction of Charles Miller. Florence C. Bolles wrote the story. During the week many exteriors were made on the Long Island estate of Senator George W. Loft, who entertained Miss Kennedy, Tom Moore, her leading man, Director Miller and Carlyle Moore, his assistant, at luncheon. Carlyle Moore, it will be recalled, was the author of "Stop Thief," a stage success of a few seasons back.

Mabel Normand is now at work on the successor to "Joan of Plattsburg," her May 5 release. The play is as yet unnamed, but the role is said to afford her opportunities quite different from any of her previous work.

Following her return from Georgia; Mae Marsh has finished "The Glorious Adventure," the Edith Barnard Delano drama on which she has been working with Director Hobart Henley for some weeks. The two have already started work on a new play.

"Kidder & Ko" Next for Bryant Washburn

Bryant Washburn's next Pathe Play following "Twenty-One" will be "Kidder & Ko," written by John W. Grey and scenarioized by Charles Sarver. It will be released June 16. Washburn is cast as Cuthbert Kidder who loves pool and hates canned cod and girls. In his support will be seen Harry Dunkison, Gertrude Selby, Wadsworth Harris, Carl Stockdale and others. It is a comedy of the distinctly American type, the story telling how Cuthbert obeys the parental injunction to "go West, young man," and nearly puts the old man out of his own game, winning a bride into the bargain.

"Yellow Ticket," Fannie Ward's Greatest

As Anna Mirrel, the heroine of the screen version of A. H. Woods' stage play, "The Yellow Ticket," which Astra is making for Pathe, Fannie Ward has a role said to be different from any she has ever played before. In dramatic depth it somewhat resembles her part in "The Cheat," but the nature of the characterization and the appearance of the girl she impersonates make her new part a bigger one than any other she has had on either stage or screen, it is stated.

Miss Ward has never been seen in makeup resembling that which she uses as Anna Mirrel in Astra's production of "The Yellow Ticket." In this sensational picture which is to be released June 2, and which has already been booked at the Rialto theatre, New York, her part is that of a beautiful young Jewess whose remarkable facial attributes do not betray the fact that she belongs to the race which in Russia is persecuted belond all manner of belief.

The dramatic story deals with the cruel manner in which the Okhrana or Secret Police take advantage of their position in dealing with attractive girls of the Jewish race. As Anna Mirrel, Miss Ward appears in a role which gives scope not only for unprecedented emotional acting but also for many comedy touches. In making the production, William Parke, the director, engaged the services of a Russian writer, an expert on the conditions depicted. The consequence is that Miss Ward's dress and makeup as the black-haired, striking Anna Mirrell are perfect in every detail, it is asserted.

Hayes Succeeds Taylor

E. J. Hayes has succeeded Charles A. Taylor as manager of the Buffalo Metro exchange. Mr. Taylor was recently appointed manager of the Pathe branch. Mr. Hayes is a former General Film man.

Both are well known to the trade.

Betty Compson Will Appear in a Pathe-Diando Serial

Vitagraph Names New Serial

William Duncan Is to Be Featured in "A Fight for Millions"—July 15 Marks First Release of Fifteen Episodes

"A FIGHT FOR MILLIONS," is announced as the title for the next Vitagraph serial, in which William Duncan, star of "The Fighting Trail" and "Vengeance—and the Woman" is to be featured. Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company, in making public the name of the forthcoming chapter play, also stated that it would be released on July 15 next.

As in his other two successes, Duncan is filling the dual role of star and director and advance reports from the Vitagraph western studio are to the effect that the serial already gives promise of being the best work of Duncan's career. The story was written by Albert E. Smith and Cyrus Townsend Brady, authors also of "Vengeance—and the Woman," and "The Woman in the Web," which is now running.

"A Fight For Millions" will be in fifteen episodes, as were its predecessors, and as a great deal of its action is laid in the snowfields of Northwest Canada, it should make an ideal summer serial. Duncan himself pronounces the story the best that it has been his fortune to interpret since he took his place among the serial stars and exhibitors all over the country are declared to be waiting eagerly for the first showing of the initial chapter.

In "A Fight For Millions" Duncan has been provided with a cast headed by Edith Johnston, who will be seen as his leading woman in place of Carol Holloway, who appeared with him in his other two serials. Miss Holloway suffered a very serious injury in the last serial, one of her heels being fractured, and she has been unable to play for several months.

The male members of the cast include Joe Ryan, acknowledged champion among the cowboy riders and one of the leading "heavies" of "The Fighting Trail" and "Vengeance—and the Woman." He has been a regular member of Duncan's company for more than a year and in addition to his work in the serials also appeared in support of Duncan in "The Tenderfoot" and "Dead Shot Baker," the two Blue Ribbon features made from the Wolfville tales of Alfred Henry Lewis.

Walter Rodgers, another regular of the Duncan company, who played Von Bleck in "The Fighting Trail," and Vincente Howard, who gave a splendid portrayal of the Indian outlaw, "Comanche Pete," in "Vengeance—and the Woman," also appear in "A Fight For Millions."

Mary Minter is Star of "Social Briars"

THE forthcoming release from the studios of the American Film Company, "Social Briars," stars Mary Miles Minter. It is scheduled for release at exchanges of the Mutual Film Corporation, May 6. The story is by Jeanne Judson, scenarioized by Edward S. Sloman, a member of the directorial staff at the American studios, and was produced under the direction of Henry King, who was responsible for Miss Minter in "A Bit of Jade," William Russell in "Hearts or Diamonds," and Gail Kane in "Souls in Pawn" and "A Game of Wits."

Iris Lee (Mary Miles Minter), a rustic beauty with a beautiful singing voice, is unhappy in the restricted environment of village life, and runs away from the house of her narrow-minded and bigoted aunt to seek fame and fortune in the metropolis. She wins fame, but loses her heart to a man whom she believes is unfaithful to her. Heart sore, Iris returns to her native village to the sympathetic arms of the only friend who seems to understand her. How her lover returned, proved worthy and brought her back as mistress of his heart and mansion, is a story that is said to give Miss Minter many opportunities.

The Strand comedy, released May 7, starring Billie Rhodes, is titled "Over the Garden Wall."

Screen Telegram Nos. 20 and 21 are released May 8 and 12. Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War, on his arrival from France; American soldiers leaving training camps in France for first line trenches; Admiral Fullam of the United States Navy paying official respects to Admiral Kantaro Suzuki of the Japanese Navy, on board the flagship Iwate at a Pacific port, are striking features of the Screen Telegram of recent issue.

Pathe Engages Betty Compson for Serial

BETTY COMPSON, heroine of many Christie Comedies, has been engaged for the leading role opposite George Larkin in "The Wolf Faced Man," by W. A. S. Douglas and Lucien Hubbard, which Diando Film Corporation is producing in Los Angeles for Pathe, it was announced last week.

"The Wolf Faced Man" is said to be a thrilling story of romance and adventure in the West and the picture will be marked by the dare-devil stunts of George Larkin, whose reckless daring has made him very popular as a serial star, the beauty and horsemanship of Miss Compson and the size of the cast selected to play with these principals.

Betty Compson has made a name for herself, Pathe cites, reaching stellar honors in little more than two years of screen experience, and she is looked upon by this company as a leading example of the type of player whose increasing popularity will make many of the present greatly advertised million-a-minute stars look to their laurels.

Two Metro Stars "Swap" Roles

Emmy Wehlen and May Allison, Each Preferring the Other's Production, Change Places, with Maxwell Karger's Permission

EMMY WEHLEN and May Allison, Metro stars, recently discovered that each liked best the production already assigned to the other for her next release. So to ensure the happiness of both, Maxwell Karger, studio supervisor, completely altered his plans so that each might have her wish. As a result of the change Miss Allison will play the school teacher, Nancy, in Lois Zellner's five-act romance of the Northwest, "Shadows and Substance," while Miss Wehlen will play the part of Jeanne, the society girl, who marries for money in Katherine Kavanaugh's as yet unnamed feature originally intended for Miss Allison.

It all came about through Miss Allison's reading in the newspapers an account of Miss Wehlen's forthcoming picture. She wrote to Miss Wehlen, who was then on her patriotic tour of the large Eastern cities in behalf of the Libery Loan drive, as follows: "All my life I have wanted to play a school teacher. I always wanted to be a school teacher, anyway—but it was a physical impossibility to be both that and an actress at the same time. Now I am supposed to play a society bud who marries a horrid man with a lot of money and becomes an iceberg—figuratively speaking, of course. I can just see you, Miss Wehlen, as that brilliant, beautiful, superbly gowned iceberg—and I am told that the iceberg melts after a while. Is that any inducement?"

Exhibitors Are Well Acquainted with the May Allison Smile, Which Is a Big Metro Asset

Shortly after Miss Wehlen's receipt of this letter, Mr. Karger was surprised to receive from her a telegram which read: "Please let me play the iceberg." As soon as he discovered what it was all about the transfer of manuscripts was effected. June Mathis began making the scenario version of the Kavanaugh play for Miss Wehlen, and Miss Zellner began making a scenario version of her own play for Miss Allison.

Edwin Carewe will direct Miss Wehlen, and Harry L. Franklin will direct Miss Allison in the new productions exchanged by mutual consent.

"Over the Top" Ends Big Run at Lyric

"OVER THE TOP," Vitagraph's production of Sergeant Arthur Guy Empey's famous book, with Empey himself in the star role, ended its successful run of four weeks at the Lyric theatre, New York, Saturday night, and Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the Vitagraph distributing organization, announces that bookings for the United States and Canada are now under full headway. As announced last week, Mr. Irwin has refused to entertain any offers for state rights or territorial proposals, the exhibitors being given first call, the same as on any other Vitagraph special or regular feature.

Figures compiled by the Vitagraph distributing organization, with the assistance of the McClure Newspaper Syndicate and the Western Newspaper Union, which have distributed Empey's special articles and "Over the Top" to daily and weekly papers, show that more than 1500 newspapers in forty-seven States and the District of Columbia have published his writings. A partial list shows 1339 newspapers, located by States as follows:

Alabama, 2; Arkansas, 28; Arizona, 8; California, 5; Colorado, 41; Connecticut, 6; Delaware, 3; District of Columbia, 2; Florida, 8; Georgia, 22; Idaho, 23; Illinois, 133; Iowa, 71; Indiana, 24; Kentucky, 19; Kansas, 64; Louisiana, 8; Maine, 5; Maryland, 15; Massachusetts, 14; Michigan, 56; Minnesota, 7; Missouri, 73; Montana, 33; Nebraska, 29; New Hampshire, 4; Nevada, 2; New Mexico, 6; New Jersey, 8; North Dakota, 38; North Carolina, 29; New York, 46; Ohio, 42; Oklahoma, 44; Oregon, 1; Pennsylvania, 67; Rhode Island, 4; South Carolina, 22; South Dakota, 17; Tennessee, 11; Texas, 77; Utah, 22; Vermont, 10; Virginia, 24; Washington, 3; West Virginia, 20; Wisconsin, 91; Wyoming, 12. Total, 1339.

This is claimed to be the most widespread publicity ever given a story transformed to the screen, and is one case where the oft-abused term of "ready-made audience of millions" may be legitimately used. To the exhibitor this one phase of "Over the Top" publicity should be worth uncountable dollars and much time, for the groundwork of his advertising campaign already is made. He does not have to tell his public who Empey is, nor does he have to tell it anything about the book, "Over the Top," for both are too well known to even the average reading public.

Ethel Clayton Becomes Paramount Star for Big Productions

ETHEL CLAYTON has become a Paramount star. Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president and head of the production department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, announced last week that Miss Clayton had signed a contract to make a series of star productions to be distributed as Paramount pictures. Early in June she will begin work at one of the West Coast studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and although the title of her first picture has not yet been announced, it is stated that she will appear under the direction of William C. De Mille.

It was while Miss Clayton was appearing in "The Country Boy," under the management of the late Henry B. Harris, that she first attracted the attention of film producers. She had previously appeared with success in Mr. Harris's "The Lion and the Mouse" and "The Making of Bobby Burnitt." Her initial screen appearance was in the first three-reel production ever made, "When the Earth Trembled." It was made by the old Lubin Company. During her three years with Lubin Miss Clayton appeared in sixteen features, including "The Lion and the Mouse," "The Gamblers," "The House Next Door," "The Fortune Hunter" and "The Wolf." However, the two pictures which served to bring Miss Clayton out as a star of real merit were "The Great Divide" and "Dollars and the Woman," the latter under the direction of her late husband, Joseph Kaufman, who afterward produced Paramount and Artcraft features.

William A. Brady then engaged Miss Clayton for the leading role in his stage play, "The Brute," but preferring the silent to the spoken drama she returned to motion pictures and has since appeared in World features.

Ethel Clayton Has Been Engaged to Appear in Paramount Pictures

"Tarzan" Had Record Run at Victoria, Phila.

"Tarzan of the Apes" has just closed a two weeks' run at the Victoria theatre, Philadelphia, where it is said to have played to the largest business on record for the house, General Manager Frank W. Buhler having broken his one-week limit rule for the second time in the history of the theatre.

Much of the interest manifested in the film must be credited to the fine press work done in its behalf in the Philadelphia newspapers. Feature stories were carried by the leading journals during practically every day of the run, the amount of news space devoted to exploiting its merits amounting to approximately 456 linear inches, or considerably more space than many program features get during their entire run throughout the length and breadth of the country.

What is regarded as a remarkable feature about this press campaign is the fact that every story seemed to have a legitimate reason for being, and got by the editors very largely on intrinsic merit, as extravagant advertising spreads were not indulged in to any great extent. Reproductions of some of the best publicity stories are being printed by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit to help exhibitors in other parts of the country in putting over "Tarzan" to the best advantage.

"Cleopatra" Claims Record for Percentage Showings

According to figures now at hand in the William Fox offices, what is said to be probably the largest number of exhibitors that have ever played any production on a percentage system, have shown the Theda Bara super-production, "Cleopatra," on this basis. Twenty companies, the Fox statement says, are still touring the United States and Canada with prints of the big photo-spectacle.

Although a score or more of these companies have been out on the road continuously since October, 1917, when the picture was first presented, there still remain many large cities throughout the country that have not seen the film. Mr. Fox explains this on the ground that it has not been found possible to accommodate them at an earlier date, on account of the press of bookings, and the length of time for which they have been made.

Alice Brady Takes Trip to Asheville, N. C.

Alice Brady, with her director, cameraman and several members of her company, has gone to Asheville, N. C., where she will remain several days filming outdoor scenes for her forthcoming Select production. Miss Brady will return in time to attend the first public showing in New York of her newest Select picture, "At the Mercy of Men," in which a Russian girl is the central figure in a series of dramatic events staged in Petrograd, just before the Revolution.

Exhibitors Laud Big Goldwyn Productions

THE home office of Goldwyn reports that exhibitors the country over are daily sending in unsolicited testimonials of the drawing power of Goldwyn productions. Particularly is this true of "Thais," "The Cinderella Man," "Polly of the Circus" and "Dodging a Million," all made by Goldwyn, and "For the Freedom of the World," the big spectacular production which Goldwyn is distributing.

Joseph B. Foster, manager of the Hippodrome Theatre, Miami, Fla., acclaims "Thais," "the best picture ever shown in Miami." Mr. Foster is now arranging with the Atlanta Goldwyn exchange to repeat on it. "'Thais' is the best box-office attraction ever shown here. It broke all Hippodrome house records and I would like a return date on it whenever you have an open date," Mr. Foster writes.

"The Cinderella Man," the first motion picture ever to have a successful three-day engagement in Washington, Pa., prompted J. W. Mercer, manager of the Globe theatre in that city to write the Goldwyn Pittsburg exchange: "'Cinderella Man,' with Mae Marsh and star cast pleased more patrons than any picture since 'The Birth of a Nation.' All Washington is talking about the production. Thank you for giving me a third day on it. Matinee today doubled yesterday."

From Manager M. F. Rollin, of the Granada, Miss., Opera House, comes the following: "'Polly of the Circus' proved a banner attraction during our week's Thrift Drive campaign. We made money for ourselves, paid all expenses of a sixty-piece band and had some left for the Red Cross, besides selling about $12,000 worth of thrift stamps."

Ned Burns, manager of the New theatre, Staunton, Va., writes: "I've played 'Dodging a Million' today and consider it to be one of the most thoroughly delightful films of the year. It is bright, it is rich and it is different."

From far away Yakima, Wash., comes a letter of praise concerning the engagement of "For the Freedom of the World" at the Majestic theatre. Frederick Mercy, the manager of which writes: "The Goldwyn special 'For the Freedom of the World' is a well-constructed, gripping story and is an excellent box-office attraction. Its title has enormous drawing power. We ran it three days to capacity business, and all our patrons were pleased with it. It is a timely production and I wish to thank Goldwyn for such a patriotic play."

"The Kaiser" Helped Beat LaFollettism

IT develops, according to Jewel Productions, that the motion picture screen played a prominent part in the defeat of La Follettism at the recent election in Wisconsin. That the LaFollette candidate was defeated and a Senator pledged to stand squarely back of the President for the duration of the war was elected, was due, in part at least, to a carefully planned campaign in which the motion picture exhibitors of Wisconsin upset all precedents of the business, forgot competition and worked together for weeks prior to the election.

Several weeks ago several of the most prominent Wisconsin exhibitors journeyed to New York and held a conference with H. M. Berman, general manager of Jewel Productions, to place before him a proposition of allowing a pre-release of the special feature, "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," in order that it might be used in the Badger State in an effort to snow under the disloyal element. As a result of the conference fourteen prints were rushed to Milwaukee for distribution throughout the State. The exhibitors worked out a plan through which these prints were kept busy continually, showing to maximum audiences. In twenty-one days before the Wisconsin election 359,856 persons in the State paid admission to see the picture and the percentage of men who attended the motion picture theatres of Wisconsin was greater than ever before.

Manager Berman of Jewel Productions, had anticipated that the intensified political campaign conducted with the film by the exhibitors would have a tendency to curtail bookings of "The Kaiser" after the election. Instead, according to Mr. Berman, the intensified campaign apparently has increased the interest in the picture. This fact, he says, is attested by the attendance at the White House theatre, Milwaukee, which is still running the picture and will continue to do so until the box-office receipts show a decrease.

Triangle Changes Keystone Release Dates

Triangle announces the following changes in the release dates of the Keystone Comedies.

"Mr. Miller's Blunders," scheduled for release May 19, will be released May 12 under the title of "Mr. Miller's Muddles Through." "Newspaper Clippings," scheduled for May 12, will be released May 19.

Ed. Brady and Myrtle Rishell will be featured in "Mr. Miller's Muddles Through," while "Newspaper Clippings" features Francis McDonald and Claire Anderson.

Davis to Direct Lytell's Next Metro

Will S. Davis, who has just completed "With Neatness and Dispatch," with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, arrived on the Pacific Coast from New York last week and has already started the work of directing Bert Lytell in his second Metro picture. Mr. Lytell will again have as his leading woman Anna Q. Nilsson, who played opposite him in "The Road to Yesterday," just completed. In writing the story and continuity of the new play Mr. Lytell himself worked in collaboration with Albert Shelby Le Vino.

Coming Program Offerings

Eight Paramounts for May

Brilliant Array of Stars to Be Seen in Features Scheduled for Release—Wide Variety in Subjects Offered

According to an announcement from Walter E. Greene, managing director in Chicago of distribution of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, eight Paramount pictures are scheduled for release during the month of May. Five of the productions are from the Famous Players-Lasky Eastern and Western studios, while three were made at the Thomas H. Ince plant in California. The featured players will be Pauline Frederick, Enid Bennett, Sessue Hayakawa, Jack Pickford, Dorothy Dalton, Marguerite Clark, Charles Ray and Wallace Reid.

In his announcement Mr. Greene says: "On May 6 Pauline Frederick, Enid Bennett and Sessue Hayakawa are seen in new vehicles. Miss Frederick plays the stellar role of Katusha in 'Resurrection,' the story of Russian conditions by Count Leo Tolstoy, which created a sensation throughout the world. The subject was adapted to the screen by Charles E. Whittaker. As the half-gypsy peasant girl, Miss Frederick has an emotional role of great appeal. The chief supporting roles are played by Robert Eliott, John Sainpolis and Jere Austin.

"Thomas H. Ince presents Enid Bennett in 'The Biggest Show on Earth,' from the story by Florence Vincent. Miss Bennett plays the part of Roxie Kemp, daughter of a circus proprietor, and intimate scenes of life under the big tops are shown. This picture was directed by Jerome Storm, under the supervision of Mr. Ince, and presents in the supporting cast such players as Melbourne MacDowell, Earl Rodney, Ethel Lynn, Bliss Chevalier and Carl Stockdale.

"Sessue Hayakawa appears in 'The White Man's Law,' adapted to the screen by Marion Fairfax from the story by herself and John Brown. Hayakawa is seen as Ghengis, an ivory trader on the west coast of Africa, who loves a pretty French Sudanese girl. Falkland, a rascally Englishman, becomes a rival. James Young produced this picture, and Florence Vidor, Jack Holt, Herbert Standing, Maym Kelso, Forrest Seabury and Joseph Swickard are in the cast.

Sessue Hayakawa, as He Appears in "The White Man's Law" for Paramount

"Jack Pickford was never seen to better advantage than in 'Mile-a-Minute Kendall,' issued May 13. This is a virile play by Owen Davis, which won a notable success on the speaking stage, adapted to the screen by Gardner Hunting, and directed by William D. Taylor. It is exceptionally well cast, from the star to the minor parts, and is a splendid vehicle for Jack Pickford. The chief supporting players are Louise Huff, Charles Arling, Jane Wolff, Casson Ferguson, Lottie Pickford, Jack McDonald, W. E. Lawrence and John Burton.

"The release for May 20 is a Thomas H. Ince production, starring Dorothy Dalton in 'The Mating of Marcella,' from the story by Joseph Franklin Poland. The direction of this picture, under Mr. Ince's supervision, was in the hands of John Stumar, and Thurston Hall, Juanita Hansen, William Conklin, Donald MacDonald, Milton Ross, Spottiswood Aitken and Buster Irving are in the cast.

"Marguerite Clark's big stage success, 'Prunella,' is the release of May 27, and during the same week Charles Ray in 'His Own Home Town' and Wallace Reid in 'Believe Me, Xantippe,' are offered."

Desmond Featured in First Triangle of Week

"An Honest Man," which heads the Triangle schedule for the week of May 5, has William Desmond in the title role. Graham Pette and Ann Kroman are in supporting roles and Frank Borzage directed. Henry P. Dowst wrote the story, the foundation of which is laid in the power of suggestion.

The second release of the week is "Mlle. Paulette," featuring Wallace MacDonald and Claire Anderson. It is described as a romance of the Adirondacks and was written by George Cowell. Raymond Wells directed.

"I Love Charles Albert" is the week's two-reel Keystone comedy. Edward Brady and Ann Kroman are featured.

President Aboard Tank in Screen Telegram

President Woodrow Wilson, on board His Majesty's tank, "Britannia," touring the White House grounds, is a feature of Screen Telegram No. 17, released by Mutual, April 28. Other features are a stampede of wild animals at the Baltimore Zoo; a parade of 40,000 Union men at Chicago, carrying an effigy of the Kaiser; the return of Secretary Baker from Europe, and cavalry maneuvers behind the firing line on the Champagne front.

In No. 16 are shown the opening games at the big league ball parks.

Barriscale's "Patriotism" Soon Ready

Bessie Barriscale's next Paralta Play, "Patriotism," which was completed at the Paralta studios in Los Angeles last week, will soon be ready for release through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. Director Raymond B. West is now engaged in cutting and assembling the scenes. The story was written by Jane Holly and R. B. Kidd, of the Paralta staff, and the scenario was prepared by Julian Louis Lamothe. Following "Patriotism," Paralta's next presentation will be "Shackled," featuring Louise Glaum.

Miss Barriscale's third Paralta Play, "Blindfolded," has just been released and is said to be meeting with success in all parts of the country.

Bushman-Bayne in All-Star Production

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in "Cyclone Higgins, D. D.," an All-Star Series picture, is the release on Meetro's May 13 schedule. It is the story of how an itinerant preacher tames Yellville, a Southern mountain town of the roughest kind, and finds the girl of his heart. It was written by William Christy Cabanne, who wrote "The Slacker" and "Draft 258."

To Baby Ivy Ward, Metro's four-year-old emotional actress, are said to belong the highest acting honors next to the stars themselves. This little one, who appeared as a Belgian child in "Draft 258," and also as a diminutive patriot in "The Slacker," illuminates many scenes in "Cyclone Higgins, D. D."

Charles Fang, one of the few Chinese players appearing in screen productions, is seen as Jonathan Moses Chi Wu Lung, servant and bodyguard to "Cyclone" Higgins. Fang has played in a number of Metro productions, including "The Shell Game," "The Quitter," "The Three of Us," "The the Diplomatic Service" and a serial, "The Great Secret."

John Prescott interprets the rugged role of Jasper Stone, a deputy sheriff, who meets defeat at the fists of "Cyclone." He has had extensive experience on the stage, both in productions and stock, and has played in feature motion pictures for leading producers.

Helen Dunbar, who appears as Mary Higgins, "Cyclone's" sister, has frequently supported Bushman and Bayne on the screen, first with Essanay and then under the Metro banner. Eugene Borden, Sue Balfour and Robert Carson are other well known members of the cast supporting the stars.

"My Own United States," With Arnold Daly, Which Metro Is Distributing, Is Considered An Excellent Propaganda Feature

Metro Names Cast for May Allison Feature

May Allison's second Metro starring vehicle is "The Winning of Beatrice," by May Tully. June Mathis and Katherine Kavanaugh adapted the story for the screen and Harry Franklin directed the picture. It will be released May 20.

Miss Allison's leading man is Hale Hamilton, who makes his screen debut as Robert Howard, a hustling advertising man who helps "the candy girl," Beatrice Buckley (played by May Allison), win fame and fortune. Mr. Hamilton is a recruit from the stage, where he appeared with great success in "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," "The Fortune Hunter," "A Pair of Sixes," and other productions.

Others in the cast are Frank Currier, Stephen Grattan, John Davidson, Peggy Parr, Dean Raymond, Frank Joyner and Baby Ivy Ward.

Another Toto for May 26

On May 26 Pathe will present Toto in "The Junkman." In this comedy Toto appears as general handy man for Bud Jamison, who makes his fortune by calling "Any rags, any bones, any bottles today?" Toto is said to get more fun out of an ordinary old cartwheel in "The Junkman" than any one who had not seen him do it would believe possible.

The Toto comedy preceding "The Junkman" is "His Busy Day" (April 28), and on June 23 comes "Fire the Cook," Toto being the cuisine expert in question.

Wrecker "Gets His"

"Let's Get a Divorce," Billie Burke's new Paramount picture scheduled for release April 29, tells how a husband turns the tables on a would-be home wrecker and sends him away with the conceit entirely taken out of him. The comedy situations are said to be particularly suited to Miss Burke, who plays the part of Cyprienne Marcey, a romantic girl who is reared in a convent and has her head turned when the restrictions are removed.

Program Glances

Hank Mann is preparing to blossom out as a full fledged Paramount-Mack Sennett comedian. The first picture showing him in his new capacity is expected very shortly.

Vitagraph appears to have put over another good serial feature in "The Woman In the Web," the fourth episode of which stars in hundreds of theatres this week. Hedda Nova and Frank J. Glendon are stars.

That Universal Animated Weekly is very active when it comes to procuring the latest in news pictures, is said to be evident in the current issue of that news reel. President Wilson is among the "shots."

Not to be outdone, Pathe has secured a war special called "Our Fighting Ally—the Tank," released May 5. Pathe would play this up to audiences by accenting the fact that President Wilson recently rode in one.

Francis X. Bushman is a fighting parson and Beverly Bayne is the girl he wins in "Cyclone Higgins, D.D.," an All Star Series picture which Metro will release on May 13. It is said to be a "human" drama.

In the cast of "Tyrant Fear," released under the Paramount trademark April 29, Dorothy Dalton is supported by a cast containing many favorites. This is an Ince production directed by R. Wm. Neill.

Irene Vanbrugh, an English actress, is to appear before American audiences on the screen in "Masks and Faces," which World Pictures will release on May 6. Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson is also in the cast.

The story of "M'liss," Artcraft believes, will offer the most unique opportunity Mary Pickford has yet had to display her diversified talents, her versatility and her charm of characterization.

Universal Screen Magazine for May 17 has already, at this date, scheduled several subjects that should be of great interest. It starts off with some getting-acquainted scenes of the strawberry.

Pathe on May 19 expects to release a Harold Lloyd-Rolin comedy called "Two-gun Gussie," which is claimed to be the funniest thing that ever entered the cackle sweepstakes.

"The Danger Game," Goldwyn's latest Madge Kennedy picture, has apparently made a big splash in the puddle of popularity. Audiences seem all the more interested in Goldwyn releases when they know Tom Moore is in them.

Lots of picturesque mountain scenery is said to be found in the second of the Blue Ridge dramas, "Mountain Law," released by General Film. This is a Ned Finley production.

World Pictures will shortly release "The Heart of a Girl," with Barbara Castleton and Irving Cummings in the leading roles. The story was written by Maravene Thompson and was directed by John G. Adolfi.

There is, according to reports from the Hollywood studio of Famous Players-Lasky, a treat in store for the fair film fans when "Old Wives for New" is released. The gowns are said to be gorgeous.

Advance booking orders for "A Night Out," the new edition of Essanay-Chaplin, have established a new record for the series, it was said last week.

"Peg of the Pirates," in which William Fox will present Peggy Hyland, is nearly completed as a Special Feature. The company went South for scenes, returning to New York last week.

Edward Jose, Paramount director, is in charge of the production of "Gismonda," a spectacle starring Lina Cavalieri. This is said to be the biggest production ever undertaken by F. P. Lasky in the East.

Screen rights to "The Power and the Glory," a novel, has been secured by World Pictures.

Pearl White as Pearl Waldon makes a spectacular plunge through a high window of an office building in the eighth episode of "The House of Hate," set for release April 28.

"Picking the Peerless Pineapples of the Pacific" is the title of the 114th release of the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travelogue, released April 15, and which is a continuation of the Hawaiian tour.

Mary Miles Minter Smiles Her Way Through "A Bit of Jade" for American-Mutual

Pathe Offers a Russian Art Film

Pathe leads off its May 12 program with "The Dagger Woman," a Russian Art film featuring Ivan Mozukin and Olga Zovska of the Moscow theatre. The same week is released part one of the "Britain's Bulwarks" series of war pictures, which shows the women munitioners of England at work and the British cavalry at the front. "Double Crossed" is the title of the tenth episode of "The House of Hate" serial, featuring Pearl White and Antonio Moreno. In this episode Helene Chadwick makes her debut as a member of the cast. "The Non-Stop Kid" is the title of Harold Lloyd's comedy and the educational offering is "Strange Animals from Many Climes." Hearst-Pathe News, Nos. 40 and 41 complete the program.

Mabel Normand Receives Congratulations

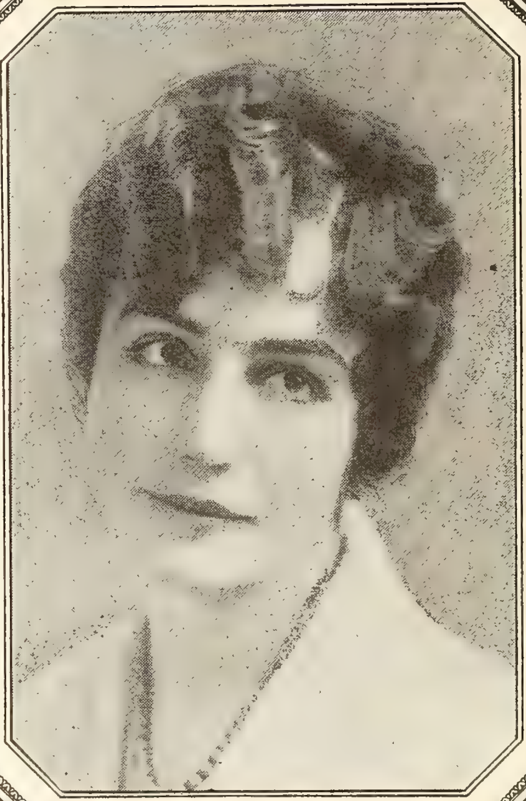
As an indication of the joy that now reigns in the house of Goldwyn over the company's newest achievement, "Joan of Plattsburgh," Mabel Normand is in receipt of a letter from Samuel Goldfish, Goldwyn's president, pronouncing this to be by all odds the finest picture that Miss Normand has ever made.

At a special showing of "Joan of Plattsburg," held for a number of exhibitors holding business meetings in New York, the visitors were said to be unanimous in their expressions of pleasure over the production, which will have its nation-wide release May 5.

June Elvidge Starred

June Elvidge makes her next appearance on the World program in "The Oldest Law," scheduled for release May 27. John Bowers is featured as leading man. Harley Knoles handled the direction.

"The Oldest Law" is, of course, that of self-preservation, and Miss Elvidge, in her portrayal of a young girl struggling for existence in a whirling city, is said to have a role of convincing power.



LOIS WEBER
The Belasco of the Screen

A Five-second Flash of Lois Weber genius

"THE DOCTOR AND THE WOMAN" is the newest Lois Weber Production which has come to delight the unnumbered lovers of photoplays acted, directed and staged as they ought to be acted, directed and staged. Taken from Mary Roberts Rinehart's famous novel, "K," as published by Houghton, Mifflin Co., a story which had two million readers, this intimate disclosure of American life comes to the exhibitors of the country not only with one of the very biggest ready-made audiences that any picture has ever had, but also with the genius-touch of Lois Weber, the Belasco of the Screen, in every situation and setting. And Lois Weber---who produced "Shoes,"—"Where Are My Children,"—"The Hand that Rocks the Cradle,"—"Hypocrites,'—'"Scandal,"—"The Price of a Good Time"---has made more money for Exhibitors than any other producer you can name. Book "THE DOCTOR AND THE WOMAN" thru your nearest Jewel Exchange---or Jewel Productions, Inc., 1600 Broadway, New York.

"Won't you give any other name than 'K'?"

JUST as one never forgets the scent of delicious attar of roses, so you'll never forget the lovely picture of innocent girlhood made by Mildred Harris, the famous heroine of "The Price of a Good Time," when she comes on in

"The DOCTOR AND THE WOMAN"

The shocking revelations of love dishonored which come to little Sidney are made doubly affecting by the remarkable talent of this youthful Star, whom your women patrons will love in the same unusual measure as the men. See for yourself today at any Jewel Exchange.

JEWEL
Productions Inc
1600 Broadway, New York City

"I'd shoot the man who deceived you, Sidney!"

"I thought you were wonderful —till I heard about her!"

LOOKING at it simply from the money standpoint—here is a drama with more and better guarantees of success than any other play of months.

The DOCTOR AND THE WOMAN"

has a title which no man or woman can possibly pass by—a story with a ready-made audience of at least two million men and women—a producer to whose national popularity "The Price of a Good Time" has just made enormous additions. See this triply guaranteed drama at any Jewel Exchange and do it today.

JEWEL
Productions, Inc.
1600 Broadway New York City

"You can't go away—you can't! You dare not leave me—now."

In the Independent Field

"Unchastened Woman" on Screen

Rialto-De Luxe Gives Private Showing of Screen Version of Morosco's Stage Production—Grace Valentine Featured

RIALTO-DE LUXE screen adaptation of Oliver Morosco's stage success, "The Unchastened Woman," in which Emily Stevens originated the title role, was presented for the first time at a private showing at the Morosco theatre, Sunday night, April 21. The screen version, which was written by George Edwardes Hall from Louis K. Anspacher's original play, features Grace Valentine with Frank Mills and Victor Sutherland in the leading male roles. The production was made under the direction of William Humphreys and is shown in seven reels. In the supporting cast are seen Mildred Manning, Catherine Tower, Edna Hunter, Adelaide Barker, Mildred Rankin, Paul Panzer, Mike Donlin and John Hopkins.

The picture presents an epitome of modern city life and shows how it affects both the hearts of the rich and the poor—the results of environment on character. The lives of the poor are contrasted with the rich. A portion of the action of the play is laid in Italy and Switzerland. The story deals with character analysis and character transformation. The picture is said to follow closely the stage version.

Miss Valentine, who has the role originated by Emily Stevens in the stage play, has been seen to fine advantage in screen productions and is said to give a strong portrayal of Caroline Knolleys in the screen version.

Among the prominent buyers, producers and critics who attended the private showing at the Morosco Sunday night, were: Hiram Abrams, Tom Moore, Alan Dale, Harriet Underhill, T. E. Oliphant, J. D. Williams, Col. Fred. Levy, Harry Rapf, L. Lawrence Weber, William L. Sherrill, Kenneth Hodkinson, Ben Blumenthal, B. Howells, J. Wilk, Tom North, Mr. Ramirez, A. Brunet, Joseph Miles, Jules Bernstein, Harry Reichenbach, Paul H. Cromelein, L. A. Lynch, G. B. Garrison, Samuel Goldfish, Alfred Weiss, B. Alperstein, J. A. Golden, J. L. Sullivan, W. H. Seeley, Whitman Bennett, Al. Lichtman, F. H. Elliott, Dr. Shallenberger, A. Goodstein, E. H. Hulsey, Herbert Lubin and Moe Streimer.

Grace Valentine Is Star of "The Unchastened Woman," a Rialto-De Luxe Production

Ford's Second, "A Man of Today," Started

FRANCIS FORD drops a line from the coast where he is now engaged in producing his own brand of feature picture, in which he says that business at the studio is rushing and that work on the second feature following his "Berlin via America," "A Man of Today," written by Elsie Van Name. Edna Emerson, who created the principal feminine role in "Berlin via America" has the leading feminine role in "A Man of Today."

During the coming year it is contemplated that a series of features will be produced, in addition to the small subjects, as per the last announcement from the Ford headquarters. To carry on the work which has been laid out Mr. Ford has entered into negotiations with certain well-known directors and stars, who will be required to produce the number of pictures which will be released under the Ford art banner.

The success which "Berlin via America," the first Fordart production, has made Mr. Ford very enthusiastic over the future. Bids for territories are coming in so thick and fast that its success is already more than assured, it is announced. Mr. Ford has definitely decided to distribute on the state rights markets.

Inter-Ocean Takes Over Office Building

The Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, now located at 220 West Forty-second street, have taken over the entire building, known as 218 West Forty-second street, and will take possession on May 1, according to an announcement made by Paul Cromelin, president of Inter-Ocean, last week. It is said that it will be the first and only office building in America devoted exclusively to the exportation of motion picture products. In speaking of the acquisition, Mr. Cromelin said:

"The building," says President Cromelin, "will be equipped to take care of foreign buyers visiting New York. Heretofore such men lost lots of valuable time through lack of familiarity with our language and customs, methods of doing business and facilities for short cuts known usually to the American only. At Inter-Ocean Building the film visitor to our shores will find himseuf conducting his affairs with the same ease as at his desk in Buenos Aires or Manila. A place will be set aside for his exclusive use during the period of his stay.

"Translators, stenographers skilled in the language of film export, shipping men who are experts in all matters relating to foreign shipment—all are at the visiting buyer's elbow and service. So will be special projecting rooms, now under construction."

The heads of the concern are Paul H. Cromelin, president; Eugene H. Kaufman, office manager, and carbons and accessories; Louis Brock and Gus Schlesinger, foreign sales; Leon Schlesinger, contracts and domestic sales; Madge Maloney, auditor; Martin Cohn, technical, and Al. Hartleib, shipping. The concern acts as foreign distributors for World and Paralto films; "Inside the Lines," "Manx-Man," "Today," "Mad Lover," "Eight Bells," "Thirteenth Labor of Hercules," and other special features; and for Black Diamond, Vim and Bingo Comedies and "Charley" cartoons Speer Carbons are also exclusively handled in the foreign field by Inter-Ocean.

First Two Shorty Hamiltons Ready

W. H. Productions Company have now in preparation for release the first two of the series of sixteen two-reel Shorty Hamilton Western comedy-dramas. These two subjects are titled "A Camouflage Baron" and "Shorty Inherits Forty Wives." Elmer McGovern, the production editor, advises that in their new dress they will be more entertaining than in their original form. More than half the territory is already disposed of on these comedies, it is announced.

Alice Mann, Winsome Comedienne, Who Has Been Engaged by the Camel Film Company of Chicago

"Son of Strife" to Follow "His Daughter Pays"

"A Son of Strife" will be the next feature to be produced and released by the Piedmont Pictures Corporation. It is an American version of a successful Italian stage play that has been so picturized as to conform with American ideas of presentation. The story, which is said to be highly dramatic, has to do with the invasion of Italy by the Austrians and events leading up to and including the battles on the Italian front.

This new picture will be produced with the same care and attention to detail that marked "His Daughter Pays." Releasing arrangements are now being made. "A Son of Strife" and "His Daughter Pays," both feature Gertrude McCoy. She has the role of a Salome dancer in "A Son of Strife."

Hart Re-Issues Booking Big Up-State

George M. Cohen, theatre owner in Newburgh, Poughkeepsie and Beacon, and one of the most prominent exhibitors in this section of the State, has signed with Magnet Film Exchange for bookings on the Hart re-issues, "The Two-Gun Man" in "The Bargain," "The Bandit and the Preacher" and "The Hell Hound of Alaska," also the first Barriscale feature, "Satan's Pawn." The Proctor theatres in Albany and Troy have also booked this series of productions.

Magnet Gets Big Bookings on Hart Re-Issues

Magnet Film Exchange have booked W. H. Productions Company's Wm. S. Hart super-features, "The Two-Gun Man" in "The Bargain," "The Bandit and the Preacher" and "The Hell Hound of Alaska," in New York City over the Moss, M. & S. and Bellaneno circuits, the Bimberg houses, the Keith houses in Brooklyn and Keeney's theatres in Brooklyn.

Pathe Gets "Moral Suicide"

To Distribute Ivan Abramson's Production Throughout the World—Greater New York Excepted—Has Good Record

FOLLOWING the announcement that under Pathe's new feature policy, productions made by independent concerns would be released through its distributing organization, an official of this company states that Pathe has acquired from the Graphic Film Corporation the world rights to "Moral Suicide," except that the producer retains for itself the rights in the counties of New York, Kings, Queens, Richmond, Bronx and City of Yonkers.

"Moral Suicide" is Ivan Abramson's dramatic creation of an absorbing life problem, with a cast including John Mason, Leah Baird, Anne Luther, Hazel Washburn, Sidney Mason, Alan Hale, Jack McLean, Claire Whitney and William Lampe.

Mr. Abrahamson is the creator of "Enlighten Thy Daughter," "Sins of the Parents," "One Law for Both," "Sins of Ambition," "A Fool's Paradise" and "Forbidden Fruit." "Moral Suicide" is considered well up to the standard of these successes, from the standpoint of intense dramatic value of the story, impressive interiors, and locations, high-grade photography and lighting effects. It is a story of a man's downfall and his regeneration.

"Moral Suicide" has been seen in 53 theatres in New York City, Brooklyn and New Jersey and it has played to packed houses, according to reports. The picture opened at Picker's theatre in the Bronx and played to capacity. The Goodwin theatre in Newark played the picture for fourteen consecutive days. It played eleven days in the Bronx at the Burland, Elsmere and Spooner theatres, seven days at the Crescent theatre, Brooklyn, sixteen days over the Meyer and Schneider Circuit in New York and Brooklyn, and among the other well-known theatres playing it are Loew's Pastime theatre and the Madison theatre.

"Moral Suicide" is backed by a publicity campaign in the Hearst newspapers, the New York Evening Journal running an illustrated fiction story of the picture by Ann Lisle, an instalment a day for two weeks; a series of articles by Beatrice Fairfax; a series of drawing by Hal Coffman; a series of articles by Mrs. Wilson Woodrow; drawings by Nell Brinkley; an article by "Abe Kabibble," and a series of burlesque cartoons by E. S. Whelan and arrangements have been made to syndicate this publicity in all the Hearst newspapers in Atlanta, Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Boston, with a circulation totaling in the millions, as soon as the picture is ready for showing in those cities. The release date by Pathe has not yet been set.

Paul Cromlin Against "Duping"

President of Inter-Ocean Answers in Negative When Asked to Extend Privilege to Foreign Buyers

PAUL H. CROMLIN, president of Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, when asked if he approved of the suggestion made to American manufacturers that the privilege to "dupe" their pictures be extended to the buyers in Europe, because of the present embargo conditions, said:

"The danger of such a practice cannot be too strongly emphasized. It is very hard to control the duping of prints, once such a course is generally adopted. It is foolish to feel that there are any safeguards for the American manufacturer, for there may be no end to the duping operations, and how can the American manufacturer maintain a secret service force in foreign countries to watch the welfare of his product?

"And suppose illicit dupers of prints were spotted—what manufacturer can go to the expense of engaging legal talent abroad for each separate prosecution? Even if complete embargo comes, the manufacturer with foresight will decline to extend any such privilege to the foreign buyer. The foreign buyer himself loses out by such a practice, because illegally duped prints will constantly drop out to compete with his so-called legally duped ones. Not only that, but there will be a very great difference in the looks of the picture on the screen. Is the buyer going to risk his reputation for all time by showing prints with poor photography in his territory for just a few months?

"In fact, it is this very difference in the appearance of duped and genuine positives on the screen that has heretofore been the legitimate foreign buyer's surest protection. It has been easy for him to locate illicit competitors, because any child could tell a duped positive from a genuine positive. Are foreign buyers going to voluntarily reject this simple means of protection? And going back to the American manufacturer, can he afford to let his reputation for good photography go because an unfortunate shipping condition might arise and prevail for a few months?

"Can he afford, with his big investment in films, to bring the day of the duper and duping back I think I can answer for most American manufacturers when I say that they would rather not receive a penny from a market for a few months, than sponsor an evil in that market that might well destroy their prospects for all time. I am sure that the average American manufacturer will say: 'If the Government cannot spare space in its ships for my negatives, I will be patriotic enough to lose some money for the time being by totally staying out of that particular market. Under no circumstances will I, to hold the market, allow my pictures to be duped. Rather would I wait until the Government in its wisdom allows me to make shipments again.'"

Billy West, Learning to Knit a Scarf, Muffler, Sweater or Something, Just to Show He Is No Slacker. He Has Already Proved His Ability As a Laugh Maker in King Bee Comedies

"Little Drops of Water, and—"

Pierre Key Explains How by Building Slowly, Foursquare Has Accomplished Big Things

"THERE is an old saying," said Mr. Key, "which most of us know, that 'little drops of water and little grains of sand' manage somehow to make the ocean and a considerable stretch of land. The idea is, or should be, clear to whomever stops to think. Building slowly, bit by bit, in the course of time produces something. Just how good that something is depends entirely on how fine the particular 'bits' are out of which the whole is constructed.

"Foursquare Pictures appear to have been started on that idea. Its growth, also, seems to have gone on through a wholly practicable application of the principle. Accepting one thing, rejecting another, Foursquare has progressed steadily in the direction of the goal that was desired when the company was eleven months' old.

"There is so much that is constructive in Foursquare fundamentals that the trade has paused to take note of these essentials responsible for its development. It was just a year ago that George Backer explained the ideas he felt should be harnessed into making an independent motion picture distributing organization something distinctive. He had then no intimate knowledge of the details of photoplay distribution. He had barely completed his first production; but he was interested in motion pictures because he had imagination—that element with which only big men are endowed.

"Mr. Backer had achieved pretentious undertakings in his own line, in a large way. He was a builder of buildings that stood out, when completed, as structures different from other buildings. Each one reflected the touch of an unusual man's personality; they were George Backer buildings, and, experts recognized them as such immediately they saw them."

"I think," said Mr. Backer in that first talk, "that the time is near for introducting the come again policy into motion picture distribution. It needs the creation of the exhibitor's confidence in the distributor; of treating him with consideration and fairness, so that his good will and patronage may be counted on permanently."

"Mr. Backer had a great deal more to say," continued Mr. Key, "and very soon after he began putting into practice these common sense business ideas of his. For he founded Foursquare Pictures. Recently his large business interest permitting, Mr. Backer found more time at his disposal. And this time he began giving to the conduct of Foursquare. He began to take a more active interest in the selection of the pictures to be distributed and to direct the operation of the company he made.

"Then it was that Mr. Backer's imagination enabled him to see farther into the future of motion pictures. 'I want to take hold of affairs still more,' he announced—and immediately proceeded to do so. Almost simultaneously, he invited an old business colleague—Jacob Wildberg—to join him. Mr. Wildberg, too, represented unusual commercial success. His sphere had been, and still is, manufacturing. For three months Mr. Backer and Mr. Wildberg have accomplished things for Foursquare, and for the exhibitors of the United States and Canada.

"Among the distinctive new photoplays which Foursquare will have for distribution during the next two months are several which will accurately reflect the quality which the exhibitors and public are seeking.

"Reception Given Baseball Good Omen"

"The extraordinary enthusiasm with which the public welcomed the opening of the major league baseball season at the Polo Grounds in this city and elsewhere throughout the country indicates," according to Lynn S. Card, general manager of the U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation, "an unprecedented boom in store for the moving picture industry despite the war.

"In more ways than one baseball and pictures are similar. Baseball is essentially an amusement enterprise, just as motion pictures are an entertainment. Each has its loyal following. It is my contention that if the baseball fans flock to see the games, despite the increase in admissions due to the war tax and the high cost of living, they certainly will not remain away from the motion picture theatres in an effort to economize. Both baseball and motion pictures form a medium to relieve taut nerves. They are a sort of panacea for mental ills, a recreation that the public will need in time of stress.

"Theatres all over Pennsylvania report a general improvement in business conditions. Reports from the Middle West also indicate a spirit of optimism. From the North and South, too, come reports that business is picking up rapidly and a majority of exhibitors expect a flourishing summer season."

Gordon Speaks Highly of W. H. Re-Issues

Nathan Gordon, president of the Globe Theatre Film Company, of Boston, who has acquired the rights from W. H. Productions Company of the three Wm. S. Hart super-features, the series of twenty-eight Mack Sennett Keystone Comedies, the series of sixteen Shorty Hamilton two-reel Western comedy-dramas, and the series of twenty-seven one and two-reel Charlie Chaplins for New England, states that more than the expected amount of inquiries are being received from exhibitors of the New England territory for this product.

Mr. Gordon is considered one of the keenest judges of pictures and one of the shrewdest exhibitors and exchange men in this territory.

W. H. Productions Co. Claims Success with Its Wm. S. Hart Pictures

Foursquare to Distribute Ivan Product

Arrangements have been concluded between Foursquare Pictures and the Ivan Film Corporation, whereby the best features of the latter organization are to be distributed by Foursquare. Excepting the New England territory, and one or two others in which Ivan subjects have already been sold, the various Foursquare exchanges will offer, approximately, every two weeks—beginning May 1st—an Ivan photoplay. In Canada, Superfeatures, Ltd., will handle for Foursquare that portion of the available Ivan product.

"Both Mr. Backer and Mr. Wildberg realize that some of the best box-office pictures which have been made are Ivan," said P. V. R. Key of Foursquare. "Seeking to give Foursquare exhibitors the benefit of a reasonably large variety of photoplay subjects to choose from, they closed with the Ivan Company to give these exhibitors merchandise for which there is an unquestioned demand. 'One Law For Both,' 'Sins of Ambition,' 'Married in Name Only,' 'Babbling Tongues,' 'Two Women and One Man,' and 'Human Clay' are some of the Ivan features which will be handled by Foursquare."

Keeney Starts Third Picture with Calvert

Frank A. Keeney Pictures Corporation is now busily engaged on the production of the third Keeney feature, "Marriage," adapted from Guy Bolton's play of the same name. Mr. Bolton is one of the most successful playwriters for the American stage having to his credit, "Polly with a Past," "Very Good Eddie," "Nobody Home," "The Riviera Girl," "The Rule of Three," "A Fallen Idol," "Oh! Boy" and "Oh! Lady, Lady."

Catherine Calvert has the featured role and the picture is under the direction of James Kirkwood. S. M. Unander, art director for Keeney productions, is engaged in constructing elaborate sets for this production. Mr. Keeney announces that "A Romance of the Underworld," in which Miss Calvert is featured, will be released within the week.

"Mickey" Is About to Get an Old Fashion Licking, It Seems, But That's Only One of the Many Things in the Picture

Questions on South America

By Katalina Adelaide Soule

(Rojas-Randall and Co.)

The last time we gave you some of our reasons for believing there were still gaps in your general and specific knowledge of Latin America. Now we admit that we are inclined to be rabid on the subject—most people are in regard to their own pet hobbies—and we don't want you to stand convicted by our personal opinions, so we're going to ask you to offer yourself a little proof, namely:

Just read over the following random lot of questions and see how many of them you can answer off-hand and at the same time be absolutely sure that you are right—absolutely sure, mind you!

Are you ready? Then begin:

1. What is the total population of Latin America?

(In other words, if you could get them all interested, how many people would be seeing pictures "down there?")

2. Where is Medellin?

3. What is the average monthly attendance at the Motion Picture Houses of Buenos Aires, and approximately, how many such houses are there in that city?

4. During any of the Latin American Civil Wars was there as great a loss of life and property as during the Civil War waged in the United States in the 60's; and how many of these countries have had actual Civil War within the last ten or fifteen years?

(By Civil War, we do not mean "Strikes," written up in extra big headlines, they are no less strikes for all that, and no worse than when indulged in in the North; nor do any strikes actually assume the proportions of a "revolution.")

5. Are the inhabitants of northern Chile the same in color, interests and occupations as those of Uruguay?

6. Under ordinary conditions, how long does it take for your letters and Advertising matter to reach such of your customers, real or prospective, as are located in the leading ports of Argentina, Chile and Brazil?

(And it might be well to remember at this juncture, that the present war is having an effect on southern sailings also. Further, and just as important, it takes as long to get a letter back as it does to get one down; and there are a goodly number of Latins, just as there are of Saxons, who do not always answer "by return mail.")

7. How many cities in Latin America can you name that have a population of 75,000 or over?

8. In what language should film titles be written if productions are to be shown in the following places: Sao Paulo, Antofogasta, Panama, C. Z., Aguascalientes, Bahia, Bahia Blanca, Rio de Janeiro, Barranquilla, Porto Alegre, Pernambuco.

9. Is any magazine devoted entirely to the Motion Picture business published in Latin America?

10. What excuse have you for sending letters, contracts and advertising matter (especially advertising matter) in English to Latin America?

Now, how many of you think you got a "passing grade?"

By the way, speaking of questions:—If there is anything you want to ask the writer of these articles is at your service; while Mr. José Manuel de Aragòn (The Manager of the Moving Pictures Film Department of Rojas-Randall & Co., 26 Beaver Street, City) has very kindly offered to answer any question that producers may wish to put to him in regard to Motion Pictures in Latin America.

"Hearts of World" to Buyers

Griffith's War Drama Offered on Open Market by Elliott, Comstock and Gest — Record Business in Big Cities

"HEARTS OF THE WORLD" will be offered to state rights' buyers, according to an announcement made by William Elliott, F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest Enterprises, the executive and sales managers for David Griffith's production, now running at the 44th Street theatre, New York. It is running also to crowded houses in Chicago, Boston and Los Angeles.

Mr. Elliott, in making the announcement, said:

"'Hearts of the World' is doing smashing business in the four big cities where it is appearing, New York, Los Angeles, Boston and Chicago, where the initial dates have been booked and a speedy disposal of the different territories throughout the country is anticipated. At Clune's theatre, in Los Angeles, the production did $6,893.75 more than the "Birth of a Nation" during the first six weeks of the presentation of each picture. In New York, Boston and Chicago it is a difficult matter to get seats unless ordered well in advance.

"No human organization is big enough to handle the simultaneous presentation of this gigantic triumph of the screen. The psychological time for the exhibition of this wonderful cinema to the public is at hand. It is a screen message that should be seen by every person in the country, and its handling in different territories by individual organizations is felt to be the most effective method.

"In view of its particular timeliness and its great merit in point of cinema technique and general production, it is readily expected that 'Hearts of the World' will far exceed the wonderful success of Mr. Griffith's first big spectacle or any of his succeeding efforts to date.

"We are now prepared to consider offers for territorial rights on this production for its presentation in the immediate future.

Front Pages for "Eagle's Eye"

Country-wide Publicity Campaign for Flynn Serial Played Up Strong by Dailies—150 Papers Using Material

THE publicity campaign in connection with "The Eagle's Eye," the twenty episode serial story by William J. Flynn, which was begun last week, has proved itself a most far-reaching campaign. Forty-seven newspapers in the same number of separate territories carried a full page of text and pictures in printing a novelization of the first episode of the serial.

The Philadelphia Public Ledger, which printed the first episode on April 20, featured it as the main news story of the day, beginning it at the top of the first column on the front page, with a continuation occupying almost a full page inside. The Boston Advertiser and American, which published the first episode the following day in its Sunday edition, carried it as the feature of the War News Section.

In addition to featuring the story itself, all of the newspapers made the novelization the subject of an advertising campaign. The Public Ledger used numerous six sheets throughout Philadelphia, besides space in its own columns, for the week preceding the publication of the first episode. The Washington Times devoted full pages during the week to advertise the beginning of the publication. Not one of the papers failed to use some advertising in connection with it. The second week of the campaign showed the number of papers using the novelization increased to nearly seventy. Other papers will start week by week until the number using the novelization will be about one hundred and fifty.

Al. Harstn, manager of the Regun theatre, at 116th street and Lenox avenue, New York, has capitulated in his prejudice against serials by booking "The Eagle's Eye." The serial began in the Regun on April 20, and Mr. Harstn has written the Foursquare exchanges that if there were more business getters in the serial line of the same sort he would run nothing else but "next episode, next week" stuff.

R. D. (Bob) Shirley, manager of the Muse theatre, in Omaha, Neb., where "The Eagle's Eye" opened on Saturday and Sunday, April 20 and 21, declares that the serial story is the "greatest creator of new patrons for a theatre which he has ever encountered."

"Million Dollar Mystery" in Six Reels

"THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY" is coming back.

James M. Sheldon, president of the Randolph Film Corporation, announces that "The Million Dollar Mystery" is now available as a state rights feature in six reels. Territory is being sold by the Arrow Film Corporation, Times Building, New York City, which company has been appointed sales agent.

Mr. Sheldon in making the announcement said, "The exhibitors of America are now to have an opportunity of again reaping a golden harvest with 'The Million Dollar Mystery,' which the whole trade concedes to have been the most successful serial film ever offered the public. This time 'The Mystery' will be available as a feature production in six reels instead of as a 23 chapter story—exhibitors can run it all in one evening—can show the whole 47,000 feet of thrills which have been crammed into 6,000 feet.

"All the 'stunts,' sensations and thrills of the original production have been retained," explained Mr. Sheldon, "and the best only of the 47,000 feet will again be exhibited. The whole picture has been re-edited and a truly wonderful lot of decorative sub-titles, the work of some of the foremost artists of a big eastern studio, have been inserted. Every one who has been privileged to witness screenings of the new 'Million Dollar Mystery' congratulates us first upon the wonderful fashion in which the story has been retained in the present footage, and secondly upon the remarkable sub-titling.

"Every one of the stars featured in 'The Million Dollar Mystery' has a following of millions. Motion picture fans the world over admire such players as James Cruze, Marguerite Snow, Florence LaBadie, Sidney Bracy, Frank Farrington and Irving Cummings. In this production they did the best work of their entire careers. It was in 'The Million Dollar Mystery' that their reputations were really made. And every one of the thrills in which they participated has been retained and can be seen again in the feature version of the famous serial.

"Territory is now being sold by the Arrow Film Corporation, and is rapidly being disposed of. Buyers of territory instantly recognize the powerful box-office magnet that is being offered and are quick to avail themselves of the opportunity to secure a demonstrated success at a fair price. I am satisfied that 'The Mystery' as a feature production, intended for showing all in one evening, will score as great a triumph as it did as a serial."

Interstate Completes "Zep" Two-Reeler

The Interstate Film Company announces the completion of a special two-reel feature, "The Last Raid of Zeppelin L-21." The picture shows the L-21's raid on London and its destruction by Lieut. W. L. Robinson. A. M. Katzman, of the Press Service Bureau, has been engaged to novelize the story of this raid.

The Press Service Bureau is responsible for the syndication of the novelization of the William J. Flynn story, "The Eagle's Eye," for the Wharton Releasing Corporation, which is now appearing in seventy-five of the largest newspapers throughout the country.

Laura de Cardi, Featured by Harold J. Binney in Florida Films

Binney Signs Artist Model for Comedies

Laura de Cardi, artist's model, has decided to enter the picture profession, and has signed a long-time contract with Harold J. Binney, president and director general of the Florida Film Corporation, of Jacksonville, Fla.

Mr. Binney believes that Miss de Cardi will win popularity with the picture fans. Great care will be used in the selection of stories and support for Miss de Cardi, and it is announced that her first picture will be ready about the middle of June.

Key Prophesies Big Results from "Eagle's Eye"

"There is abundant evidence," declared P. V. Key, of Foursquare Pictures, "speaking of 'The Eagle's Eye,'" of it being a million-and-a-quarter dollar serial. Each week finds an increase in the interest in the great production made by Whartons. Every episode carries an added dramatic value, and in each some new turn to the wonderful work of the U. S. Secret Service which protected the people from the plottings of the enemy, which pretended friendliness at those very moments when the agents were working to harm our government.

Garrett Enlarges Offices

Sidney Garrett, president of the J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., announces that he will open additional offices on the same floor as he now occupies, in the Godfrey Building. The new offices are those formerly used by the Bee-Hive Exchange, which is moving to larger quarters in the same building.

W. H. Get "Carmen of the Klondike"

W. H. Productions Company have acquired the world rights—except the United States—to "Carmen of the Klondike."

Composer of "Mickey" Says "Best Yet"

Neil Moret, one of the authors of the song "Mickey," which is adapted from the photoplay "Mickey," featuring Mabel Normand and controlled by the Western Import Company, in speaking of the success of the song, made the following statement:

"I feel that 'Mickey' is the best thing I have ever done. When I first viewed the production at the Coast, several months ago, it was not for the purpose of writing a song, but the theme, the story and the action inspired me so much that within two hours after viewing 'Mickey' I had conceived the song 'Mickey.' Irrespective of its connection with the photoplay, it has become one of the biggest hits of the year, and re-orders are pouring into our offices daily.

"To date we have disposed of almost one million copies, and at the rate we are going five hundred thousand copies per month will be added to this amount. Now, here's the case of a catchy and melodious song, successful in itself, being linked up to what I believe one of the most wonderful, interesting and entertaining photoplays that has ever been produced, and in view of this fact Daniels & Wilson have arranged to have fifteen thousand retail dealers and all of the five and ten cent syndicates in the country devote a full window display to the song whenever requested by exhibitors who are running the photoplay in their locality. I am sure this will be one of the greatest publicity campaigns that has ever been given to a photoplay, and I also appreciate that the photoplay itself will be of material benefit to the song."

Jester Company has Rapid Rise in Field

The Jester Comedy Company, of which William Steiner is founder, has established itself as one of the most progressive comedy companies in the industry, since its organization only a few months ago. Actual work on these comedies featuring Twede-Dan, was begun only last December. By the middle of January, two were completed.

Mr. Steiner then started his first tour of the United States, and presented to the many exchanges the films, with the result that he closed practically the entire country on his first trip.

The Jesters now showing are "The Recruit," "His Golden Romance," and "All 'Fur' Her." "The Wrong Flat," the fourth release to go forward in May, gives promise of exceeding the booking of any of the first releases.

Billy West's Latest "Bright and Early"

Billy West's late King-Bee comedy is titled "Bright and Early." It will be released June 1. Supporting Billy in this comedy are Babe Hardy, Leo White, Budd Ross, Rosemary Theby, Ethel Gibson and the King-Bee octette of beauties. In "Bright and Early" Billy forgets his conventional grab and becomes a "bell hop,' ringing up trouble from start to finish.

THE INDEPENDENT FIELD TICKER

Territorial Sales Reported During the Past Week

Production	Buyer	Territory
"Carmen of the Klondike"	W. H. Productions, New York	Foreign Rights.
"Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman" (L. Lawrence Weber Photo Dramas, Inc.—Hiller and Wilk, Agents)	J. S. McSween	Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, New Mexico.

Timely Subjects in Gaumont News Reels

In Gaumont Graphic No. 4 is pictured "Insurance Unit," No. 1, at the U. S. Naval Training Station on the Great Lakes, where 25,000 policies averaging $10,000 each have been written. A good-sized army of enlisted insurance experts is necessary to handle the policies, which must be checked and rechecked so that there will be no possibility of error.

This issue of the Gaumont Graphic also shows the first "cruise" of the tank "America." The United States has built many large tanks for her allies, but this monster, built for her own soldiers, weighs 45 tons, and is large enough to carry the biggest British tank in her interior.

Other timely topics in this number show the opening of the baseball and bathing seasons; the Third Liberty Bond campaign; and war pictures taken here and abroad.

A late subject shows the annual visit of the circus to Bellevue Hospital. Since the days of Phineas T. Barnum, the Barnum & Bailey circus has journeyed each year to Bellevue and given a special and free performance for the entertainment of the unfortunate children confined in this hospital.

In Gaumont News No. 5 there are a number of subjects which show some of the things which the United States considers as necessary for the winning of the war as soldiers and guns. One of these subjects pictures a great oil field which will supply much of the oil needed to run our tanks and aeroplanes. Other subjects show the thoroughness with which we are increasing our food supply. The United States now produces annually nearly a billion dollars' worth of poultry and eggs; the picture of a big poultry farm shows how this enormous production is made possible. Meat for our soldiers and the Allies must be shipped from the United States, and to increase the annual production every child in the United States has been asked to raise a hog this year. In order that there may be sufficient meat for shipment abroad, we who remain at home must eat less meat and more vegetables; which means that we must grow more vegetables; and one of the pictures shows how California is doing this. Another scene shows thousands of shipbuilders who have agreed to work to their utmost to bridge the Atlantic and defeat the Hun.

There are sixteen more subjects illustrated in this issue of the Gaumont News. Two of these show the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of the Treasury in their swing around the country to boost the Third Liberty Loan campaign. In Washington, President Wilson is shown taking his first tank ride in the "Britannia."

From France come pictures of the first German prisoners captured by the American soldiers, who are shown interned in concentration camps back of the fighting line.

Parsons at Work on "Tarzan" Sequel

"Smiling Bill Parsons," whose Capitol comedies are released through the Goldwyn Distributing Company, is busy at his Hollywood studios on the sequel to "Tarzan of the Apes." It is now in the making, in addition to two comedy productions under Mr. Parsons' own supervision.

Nine sets adorn the studio stages for the Tarzan picture. Most of these were constructed under the direction of Eugene Ainsworth, a noted English teacher, formerly at Oxford. A huge tank, holding forty alligators and numerous other jungle details, have been constructed, and when these sets have all accomplished their productional purposes, the company, including Elmo Lincoln, Enid Markey, Thomas Jefferson, Colin Kenny, George French, Clyde Benson, Phil Dunham, Bess Meredith (scenario editor), Wilfred Lucas (director), Clyde Benson and Cleo Madison, will leave for New Iberia, Louisiana, where the original Tarzan jungle scenes were made, and where many of those forthcoming will be staged.

It will require months more to complete this production. Isidor Bernstein is in charge of the technical work.

In the Capitol comedies, Bill Parsons has surrounded himself with a cast including Molly Malone, formerly a Universal star; Sampson, Jay Belasco, George French, and seven other well-known players.

Four of these comedies have been completed and prints forwarded to the Goldwyn exchanges.

WHAT PICTURE
EQUALS THIS FOR CASH R

GENTLEMEN! At last we have a new standard by which to demonstrate commercial success in pictures. Released only five weeks, "The KAISER, the Beast of Berlin" has scored such a staggering triumph that already it has become the new measure of money-getting for exhibitors—the picture by which you will hereafter judge all others for Gross Business—for Net Profits—for Attendance—for S. R. O.—for crowds turned away—for "hold-overs"—for "repeats"—for almost deafening applause—for record-smashing in every single detail of the show business. There's just one thing to do with "The KAISER, the Beast of Berlin." Don't wait to ponder, or hesitate, or figure, or delay for any cause whatsoever. Simply wire your nearest Jewel Exchange and GRAB IT!

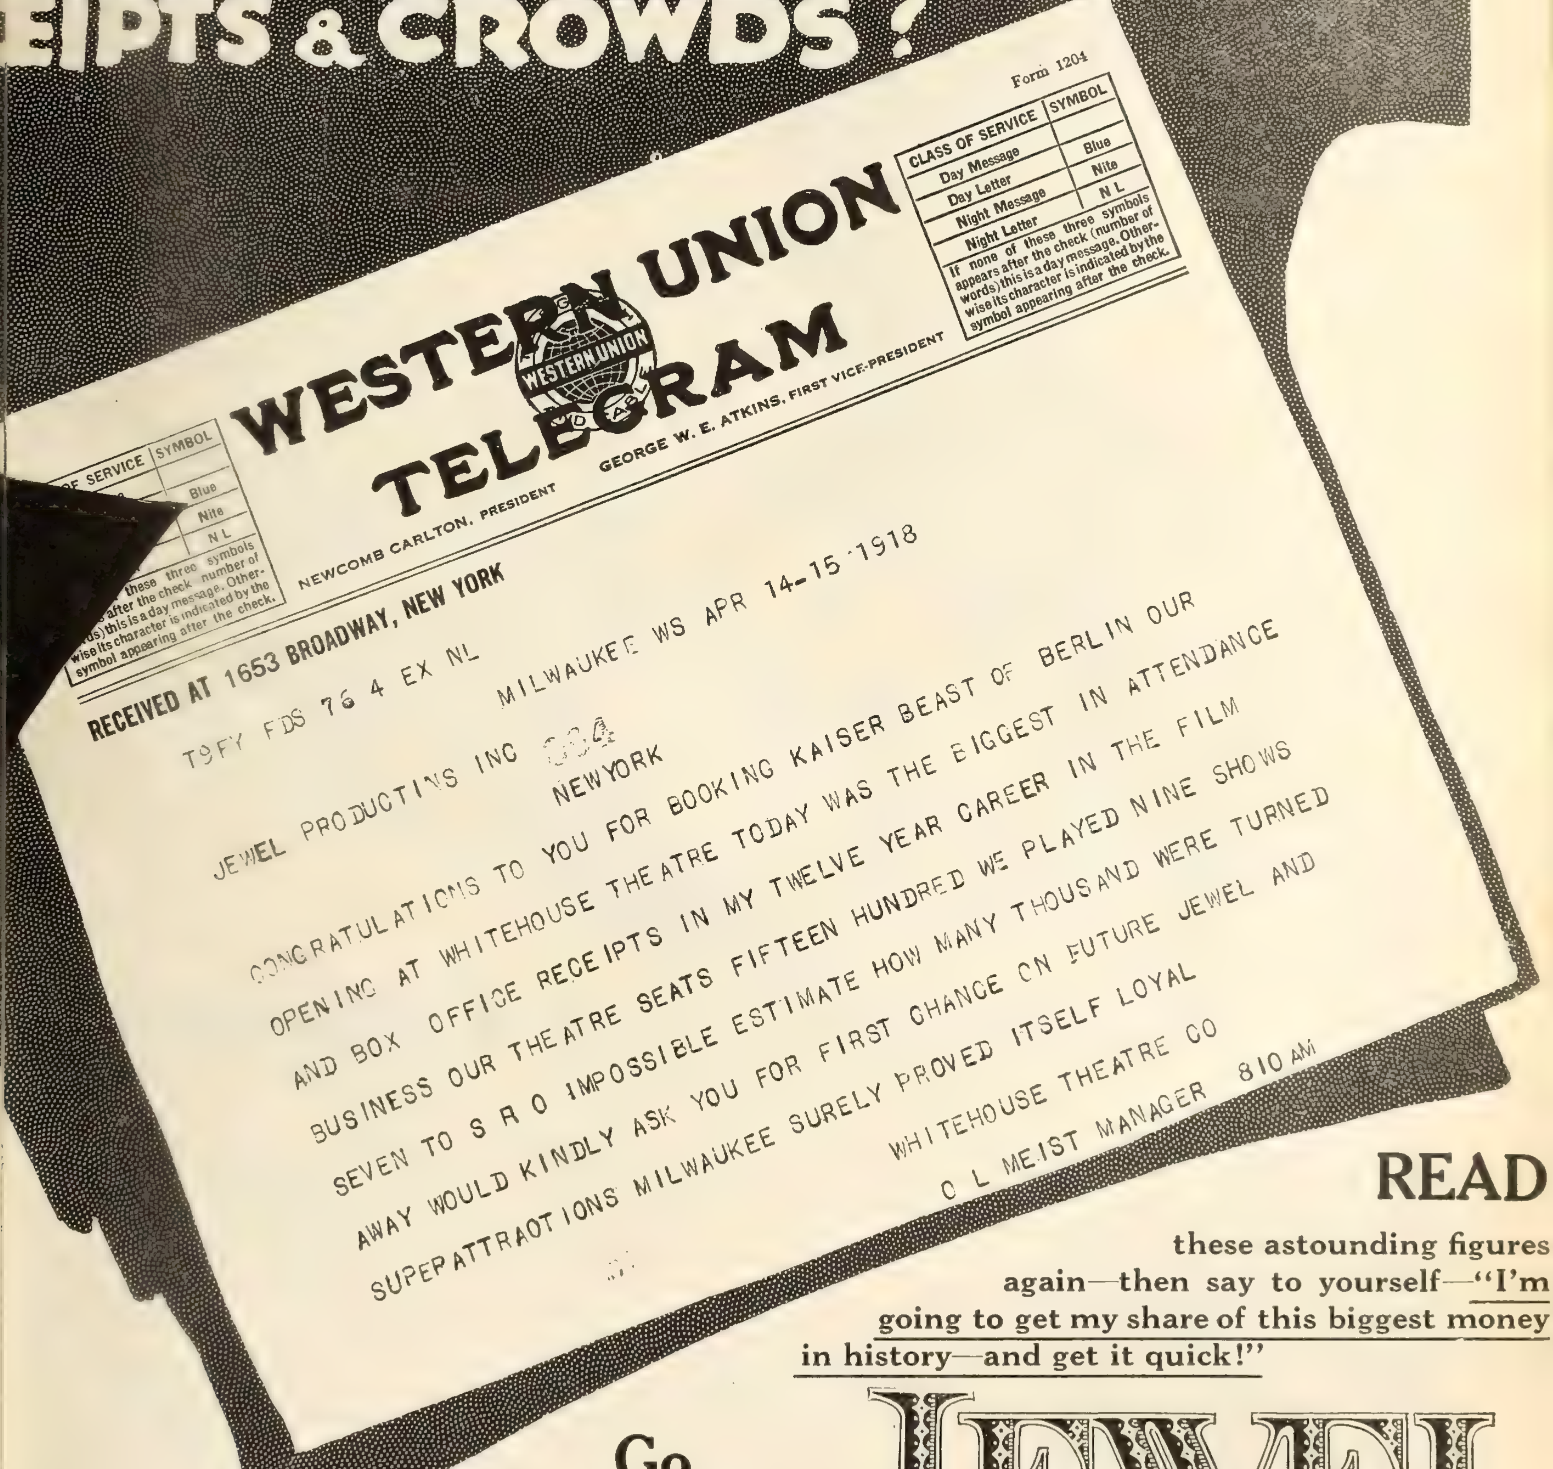
"THE KAISER"
-The Beast of Berlin

IN HISTORY
EIPTS & CROWDS?



Form 1204

CLASS OF SERVICE	SYMBOL
Day Message
Day Letter	Blue
Night Message	Nite
Night Letter	N L

If none of these three symbols appears after the check (number of words) this is a day message. Otherwise its character is indicated by the symbol appearing after the check.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAM

NEWCOMB CARLTON, PRESIDENT GEORGE W. E. ATKINS, FIRST VICE-PRESIDENT

RECEIVED AT 1653 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

T9FY FDS 76 4 EX NL MILWAUKEE WS APR 14-15 1918

JEWEL PRODUCTI NS INC
NEWYORK

CONGRATULATIONS TO YOU FOR BOOKING KAISER BEAST OF BERLIN OUR OPENINC AT WHITEHOUSE THEATRE TODAY WAS THE BIGGEST IN ATTENDANCE AND BOX OFFICE RECEIPTS IN MY TWELVE YEAR CAREER IN THE FILM BUSINESS OUR THEATRE SEATS FIFTEEN HUNDRED WE PLAYED NINE SHOWS SEVEN TO S R O IMPOSSIBLE ESTIMATE HOW MANY THOUSAND WERE TURNED AWAY WOULD KINDLY ASK YOU FOR FIRST CHANCE ON FUTURE JEWEL AND SUPERATTRAOTIONS MILWAUKEE SURELY PROVED ITSELF LOYAL

WHITEHOUSE THEATRE CO
O L MEIST MANAGER 810 AM

READ

these astounding figures again—then say to yourself—"I'm going to get my share of this biggest money in history—and get it quick!"

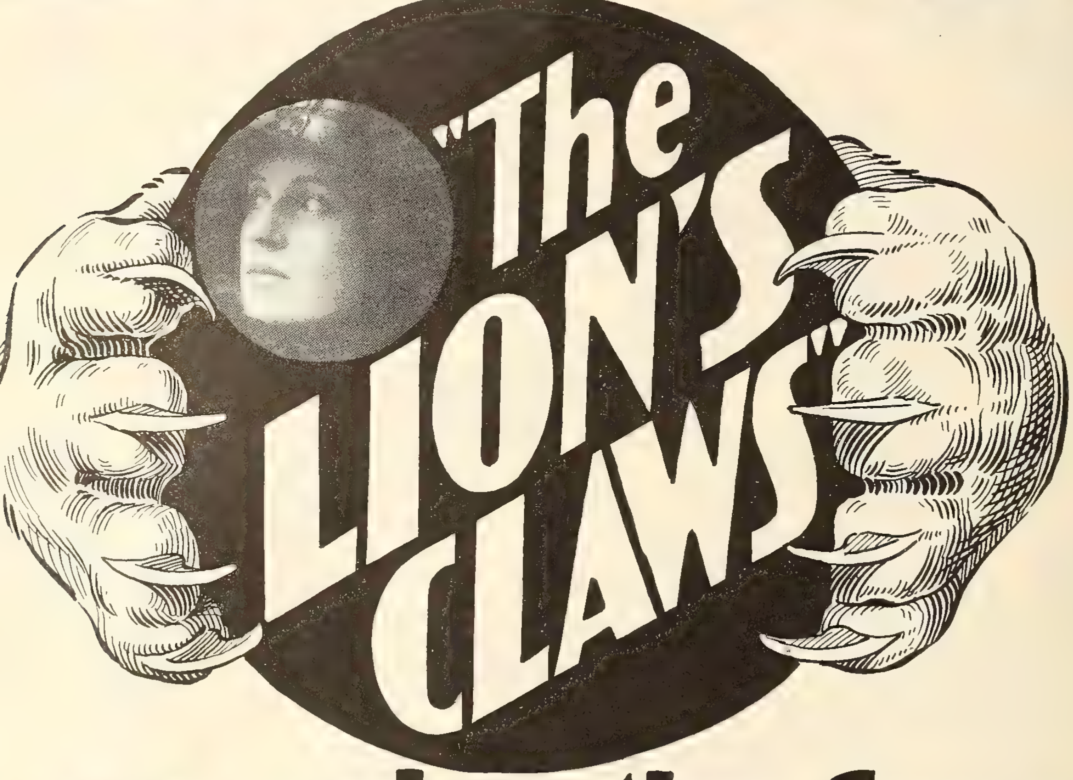
Go today

to your nearest Jewel Exchange and make immediate arrangements for booking this stupendous money-maker. Better still—reserve your run by wire.

JEWEL
Productions INC

1600 Broadway. New York City

Book



It's sweeping the Country

To win the record number of bookings on a serial, "THE LION'S CLAWS" has to possess one essential virtue. It has to be there "with the goods." That "THE LION'S CLAWS" is sweeping the country is most strikingly indicated by the records on the booking ledgers. That's where the figures show whether a serial is there or not. Hundreds of careful Exhibitors have chosen "THE LION'S CLAWS" because of the star, MARIE WALCAMP—the story—direction and thrilling action. Why haven't you booked it as yet? Your Exchange will project it for you. Also see the big Ad. Campaign Book with all the helps—THEN BOOK.

Book thru your nearest Universal Exchange, or communicate with the

UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO.

Largest Film Mfg. Co. in the Universe
CARL LAEMMLE, President
1600 Broadway - - - - NEW YORK

Short Subjects in Review

by Clara DeLissa Berg

E. M. Newman, of Newman Travels, Through Educational, Rests a While with a Native Acquaintance

THE PRINCE OF OUTDOOR SPORTS

It has been our task and good fortune to see and review many reels devoted to that picturesque occupation, logging. Yet none have equalled for beauty of setting and cumulative excitement a picture recently acquired by the Educational Films showing how logs are brought down the swift mountain rivers of Italy.

Whether for safety or convenience, all the logs are bound together to form rafts, and with a small crew of men to guide them and in this instance with the cameraman himself start down the long, tortuous journey to the mill. The current is swift, the stream narrow and winding. Often it is nothing more than a flume which has to be descended by a series of steps. Over these the rafts careen dangerously. Time and again, as we stand on the bank watching, or even have our place on the raft itself, the prisoned logs seem headed for certain destruction against jutting bowlders. But a turn in the current, or a turn of the helmsman's wrist, saves his craft and enables him to ground it safely on the beach where the mill stands waiting.

On the reel with the above are hand-tinted views of Venice, showing some of the lovely byways of the queen city, and strikingly beautiful scenes across the waters at sunset.

"LOGGING IN ITALY" and "VENICE."
EDUCATIONAL FILMS CORP.: MAY.

PLEASANTLY ENTERTAINING PICTOGRAPH

The very interesting microscopic revelations made by Professor Spaeth, of Yale, that appeared in the last number of the Paramount-Bray Pictograph are continued in the current issue. In this are shown tiny water plants and animals invisible to the naked eye.

The training of horses for the use of the New York police gives evidence of the sagacity of these fine creatures, as well as of the patience of the men who educate them. Pretending to be an unmanageable horse is a trick acquired in the course of the training, for the reason that a crowd fears an animal that seems on the point of breaking beyond his master's control and will readily scatter when the horse starts such behavior. A dash after a runaway and its capture bring the episode to an exciting close.

If the cartoonist is to be believed, the waiting line of applicants in the barber shop and the barber's anecdote will soon be a thing of the past. The "Tonsorial Slot Machine" will perform the service with swiftness and in welcome silence.

YET ANOTHER WONDER

We can claim no mechanical knowledge. Therefore we cannot explain the principle of the remarkable hydroplane illustrated in a current release of the Educational Films Corporation, but the result attained, so far as thrills are concerned, is extremely satisfying.

The new device is a large motor boat with a speed of between seventy and eighty miles an hour. Starting on the water, it very soon attains tremendous velocity, and is then seen to rise a foot or so above the surface though on the sides are series of small planes, one above the other, which are partly submerged and which no doubt enable the boat to maintain its equilibrium.

The pictures are taken on an Italian lake, and offer beautiful scenic backgrounds for the very interesting performances of the hydroplane.

"ITALIAN HYDROPLANE."
EDUCATIONAL FILMS CORP.: MAY.

EXHIBITOR KLEIN PROVES FAR-SIGHTEDNESS

Our congratulations to Mr. S. Klein, manager of the Madison theatre of this city, for the patriotism, generosity and far-sightedness that are going to make his theatre a real factor in the home and school life of his neighborhood.

With the co-operation of the National Juvenile Motion Picture League, Mr. Klein is giving Friday afternoon and Saturday morning performances for school children, one-half of the proceeds of which go to school Liberty Bond funds. One school of the several in the vicinity is designated as the beneficiary of each entertainment, and the teachers are given an opportunity to choose the pictures to be shown from the lists furnished by the League. As far as possible, the educational films selected are those bearing directly on the school work, and these are subsequently made the subject of school discussion and composition.

Previous to the day of the performance, circulars announcing it, bearing coupons which, if signed by the parent, will admit unattended children, are circulated through the school by the League. The children buy their tickets, paying ten cents each, from the teachers, and assemble there before the performance. Teachers accompany them to the theatre and are assisted in caring for the children there by chaperons provided by the League.

The plan seems to be working out admirably.

FOR THE FAMILY

Father will be interested in seeing "what sort of a fellow" is Mayor Hylan, pictured in the Screen Magazine as he worked himself up from water boy in the railroad yards to head of America's biggest city. The boys will enjoy the training given the fellows at West Point when they go into summer camp on the shores of the Hudson. Mother and the girls will be amused at the primitive methods of bread-making employed by the negroes in the West Indies, and the youngsters—and lots of grown-ups—will be delighted with the "Humpty Dumpty Circus," that comes to entertain the little boy who was too sick to go to the real circus. Of course it is a vision seen in dreams, for the actors are the dolls and animals that came out of the big box father brought home to console the young victim of mumps, but they act with gratifying agility and humor.

The reel is humorous and pleasantly entertaining, with just a serious thought or two to give seasoning to the whole.

UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE NO. 69.
UNIVERSAL FILMS MFG. CO.: May 10.

PATHE OFFERS SHORT WAR SUBJECTS

For the week of May 12, Pathe offers two reels devoted to various phases of the war.

"Our Fighting Ally, The Tank," which was given a pre-release showing at the New York Strand, was reviewed on this page under date of March 23. Probably no more remarkable pictures of this remarkable engine of war were ever taken. The feats of the monster in going through walls, over tall trees, into and out of trenches are amazing beyond words. Unusually expert work on the part of the cameraman is evident throughout.

Under the general title of "Britain's Bulwarks," a new series of war pictures starts with a split-reel. The first half is given to the girl workers in England's ammunition factories. The second part shows British cavalry on the French front. The twelve reels which form the series will be released one each week.

"OUR FIGHTING ALLY, THE TANK."
"BRITAIN'S BULWARKS NO. 1."
PATHE EXCHANGE; MAY 12.

LACEWORK IN STONE

In what it suggests rather than in what it actually shows of labor involved lies the interest of an Educational split-reel showing the quarrying of the famous Carrara marble, and the exquisite lacework into which it was wrought by those who built the great cathedral of Milan.

Here is a picture which deserves and benefits greatly by appropriate musical interpretation. The weight and solidity of the great blocks, as they are blasted from the quarry and tugged over the road by oxen, can well be indicated by heavy chords, while the delicacy and spiritual quality of the carvings and tracery that frost the towers and buttresses of the sacred edifice should find expression in music of different yet equally appropriate character. At the Rivoli, where it was shown, the chime of a bell added its beauty to that of the pictured scene.

"THE MARBLE QUARRIES OF CARRARA" and "MILAN CATHEDRAL."
EDUCATIONAL FILMS CORP.: MAY.

MEXICAN PICTURES ARE "THE GOODS"

We had an unexpected "look-in" the other day at a private showing of some of the Mexican pictures just acquired by General Manager Hammons for the Educational Films Corporation and we waxed enthusiastic to the point of applause.

The pictures are not only extremely interesting in subject matter and remarkably well taken and edited, but as a matter of fact are the only pictures we can recall in an experience of several years that have come out of the land across the Rio Grande, save an occasional snapshot in a news weekly. They are well worth booking and featuring.

Kitty Gordon Stars In "The Purple Lily," a New World Picture

Screen Examinations

" Her One Mistake "

(Fox—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

GLADYS BROCKWELL has another dual role in " Her One Mistake," a powerful melodrama written for her by George Scarborough. Her interpretation of the two women, Harriet Gordon and Peggy Malone, is an amazing feat of makeup and range of expression. There is no likeness between the Harriet and the Peggy of the picture. As the former, a woman of gentle breeding, Miss Brockwell appears as her natural self. As the latter, the ignorant, though whole-hearted mistress of a crook, she is adorned with wig and false nose and so realistic is her performance that we for one, were more than impressed by her quite marvelous change. Miss Brockwell may not have a " thousand expressions " but she certainly has a more extensive range than the majority of screen actresses.

Mr. Scarborough's melodrama begins with the seduction of the heiress by a gentleman crook. The road house is the scene of the tragedy and it is worked in great detail. Happily the comedy supplied by Willard Louis as the detective prevents it from becoming too harrowing. The other four reels deal with Harriet's love affair with an honorable man, her meeting with the villain once again and the manner in which the tangle is straightened out by the detective and Peggy. It is seldom that a picture comes along where the intricacies of the denouement cannot be divined before they arrive. " Her One Mistake " is one of the few. The interest is sustained right up to the final scene and there is an intensity over the whole picture that is unusual in its strength.

The cast is praiseworthy from first to last. Mr. Louis deserves special mention for his handling of the role of the detective. He makes it both human and humorous. William Scott as the crook, Chicago Charlie, is good and Charles Perley as the attorney, with Mark Fenton and Helen Wright in character parts complete the cast. Edward J. Le Saint directed. His work, always to be depended upon, affords no disappointments here.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Chicago Charlie (William Scott), a gentleman crook, proposes elopement to Harriet Gordon (Gladys Brockwell), and she, trusting him, accompanies him to a road house. There she is doped and left alone when Detective Scully (Willard Louis) arrives in pursuit. In sorrow she returns home, and though no one else learns her story she refuses to entertain hopes of marriage until five years pass. Then the persistent attentions of John Mansfield (Charles Perley), district attorney, finally bring her to say yes. Charlie, at last caught by the police, goes to jail. Harriet takes his mistress, Peggy (Gladys Brockwell) into her home as maid determining to reform her. When Charlie breaks jail he summons Peggy, and then 'phones Harriet that she is ill. Harriet does not realize the dangerous step she has taken until she is caught in the trap. Peggy, only half willing, is sent out to pawn Harriet's jewels. While she is gone Charlie attacks Harriet who, defending herself with a knife, kills the despoiler. She flees to her home. Peggy is arrested for the crime, and refuses to give Harriet away because she has treated her so kindly. Detective Scully, however, picks up the threads of the whole tragedy once he sees Harriet and, sympathetic, reports Charlie's death as a suicide.

" Masks and Faces "

(World Film—Six Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

" MASKS AND FACES " is to be noted in the first place for its unusual advertising possibilities although the costume drama it presents, taken from the play by Charles Reade, one of the best known on the English stage, is of great interest. The cast, headed by Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, is remarkably well suited to undertake the principal roles of such a play. Most of the notables, however, appear in the prologue. Distinguished figures in English literature and the stage are introduced seated about a table discussing the production of the picture. Among those present are George Bernard Shaw, Sir John Hare, Sir James Barrie, Sir Arthur Pinero and Sir George Alexander. These names alone will certainly act as a magnet over a theatre that caters to any sort of intelligent clientele. Supporting Sir Johnston in the enacting of the picture itself are Irene Vanbrugh, Dennis Nielson Terry, Lilah McCarthy, Dion Boucicault, Gladys Cooper, Ben Webster and Winifred Emery, players all well known on the English stage, and the majority of them often heard and seen in this country. This cast appearing in the screen version of the Reade play gives performances that are thoroughly in keeping with the gorgeous old costumes adorning them.

The story centers about a chapter in the history of Peg Woffington, one of the most famous actresses of the English stage. It is thoroughly interesting and not without its appeal. Miss Vanbrugh as Mistress Woffington, Sir Johnston as the poor poet, Triplet, and Miss Cooper and Mr. Terry in the other principal roles giving sincere and intelligently rendered performances if not always quite of, for and by the screen. The settings, even exteriors, are of the studio and while obviously such are generally suitable.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

When Ernest Vane (Dennis Neilson Terry) visits London he meets Peg Woffington (Irene Vanbrugh), noted actress, and is so captivated by her that he forgets all about his wife, Mabel (Gladys Cooper). When she finally arrives and realizes the situation she is driven to plead with the actress herself. So with the assistance of Triplet (Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson), a poet and painter she has befriended, and by using the caddish Sir Charles Pomander (Ben Webster) as a foil, she arouses the jealousy of Vane, and brings about a reconciliation between him and Mabel.

" Blindfolded "

(Paralta Plays—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Joseph L. Kelley

E. RICHARD SCHAYER who is responsible for the story and continuity of " Blindfolded," Bessie Barriscale's latest Paralta play, produced under the direction of Raymond B. West, with Clyde E. Vienna at the camera, succeeded in putting a good resounding punch in the climax but failed to supply the sustaining plot material for a well-balanced photodrama. The initial reels reveal action running on low gear, without genuine dramatic substance. Throughout the building of his story, Mr. Schayer has fallen back on the old reliable leaning post for scenario writers, convenient coincidents. The day is saved on several occasions by this mechanical method of weaving together the plot of " Blindfolded." Mr. Schayer does much to redeem himself in the last reel when he has sprung a surprise in the climax which, if it were bolstered by equally sustaining strength in the introduction and body of its plot, would have netted him results only obtainable from first class photodramas.

Miss Barriscale has done better than " Blindfolded." She is not the one most suited to portray the role of Peggy as created by Mr. Schayer. Peggy is a feminine " Alias Jimmie Valentine " character, and Miss Barriscale is a bit too advanced in years to start " picking up " the profession of safe-breaking. It is never too late to start, but the rule and not the exception is usually followed—the rule in this case would seem to be that Peggy would have taken to the perusal of Emerson before she undertook the study of safe locks.

Director West has gathered together a more-than-ordinary cast for this production. The entire support calls for character work and in the person of Joseph J. Dowling, Patrick Calhoun, David Kirby, Jay Morley and H. M. O'Connor, he has real character material. Mr. Dowling gives an A-1 characterization. His work is of the finest order and adds much to the good qualities of the picture. The camera work is excellent and the interior settings are examples of sticklers for atmosphere. Helen Dunbar, in a matron's part, does her usual good work. Edward Coxen does well in straight and character roles.

" Blindfolded " is of the " crook " brand of dramas which have to run pretty bad in spots to detract interest. This one is not pretty bad but can be ranked with the good ones. It would have been better had it been given a more reasonable and less forced plot. As it stands, it affords the brand of entertainment that thousands of the picture-going enthusiasts devour, foot by foot. It springs a punch in the climax that will cover a multitude of sins, committed in the introduction and body of subject. The author has created some original situations in weaving his plot, especial mention being given the incident showing the leader of the crooks using the stethoscope and realizing the utility of it in his "business."

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Pat Muldoon (Joseph J. Dowling), a crook, known as "The Ear," instructs his daughter, Peggy (Bessie Barriscale) in the gentle art of cracking safes. He has as confederates a band of gunmen and professional burglars. "The Ear" begs alms on the street to cover his identity with crime. He instructs his daughter that stealing from the rich is perfectly right. He is taken suddenly sick and a doctor is called. The doctor makes use of his stethoscope and "The Ear," whi is blind, asks that he leave it with him. The doctor consents, and when he has left "The Ear" experiments with the instrument in detecting the combinations to the safe which he keeps for the purpose of instructing Peggy in the science of "cracking" locks. Peggy proves adept at the game after months of practice. She is sent out on her first "job." Sparks McDonnell (David Kirby), a member of "The Ear's" gang, loves Peggy. "The Mask," another crook, whom the police are seeking, has succeeded in eluding the officers of the law for months. "The Mask" sends one of his confederates to "The Ear" to ask the assistance of Peggy, of whom he has heard, in robbing a rich jeweler. "The Ear" sends his gang, including Peggy. While Peggy is working on the safe the police interfere and she is captured and later sent to the reformatory. After two years she is taken into the home of Mrs. Benton (Helen Dunbar), a rich widow, whose son is wayward. Later Mrs. Benton receives an invitation from her son, who is on the Coast, to visit him. She takes Peggy along. Peggy and her son are attracted to each other and are married. The members of "The Ear's" gang find their way to the Coast, having been driven from the East by the police, and one of them sees Peggy and recognizes her. He asks her to help him in robbing the local bank. Her husband is assistant cashier of the bank. She consents rather than have the crook tell her husband of her past. The crook comes at night for Peggy to assist him in the robbery and is caught by the detective who was working on the job in the East. Her husband is recognized as "The Mask." The detective, seeing that he has reformed and that Peggy means to go straight, says nothing. The crook is shot trying to escape.

"Berlin via America"

(Fordart Films—Six Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

THE best patriotic picture, when not done in Griffith's lavish scale, is the spy melodrama, and "Berlin via America," which Francis Ford offers as his first independent production, is one of this type. His chief protagonist is a veteran of the Spanish-American war who is called upon to serve his country in the present conflict as a spy. First in the United States as a spy among spies, his duties lead him through a number of thrilling situations, and second, as the spy-aviator attached to the German army in France, he brings about the defeat of a certain German regiment by flying over the lines and dropping news of the enemy to the Americans. It has been very well produced by Mr. Ford. There are patriotic speeches to bring to expression the emotions common among us today and there are some fine views of New York parades and of the French and American troops in France.

Script for "Berlin via America" was prepared by Elsie Van Name. It has a number of stirring and appealing moments, the force of which can not by any words be denied. The situation created when the hero enters the Secret Service and is obliged to play the traitor in order to gain entrance to the inner circles of the Teutonic spies is thrilling in itself and gives birth to a number of intense moments when he is denounced by his friends and almost shunned by his mother and sweetheart. Miss Van Name's plot moves with a degree of logic seldom found in the war pictures that have been so speedily produced and thrust on the market of recent date. It is convincing, exciting and patriotic, all in one.

Mr. Ford, in the stellar role, is in the spirit of his work at all times. The support with which he has surrounded himself is sincere from first to last and includes a number of carefully selected types. Edna Emerson as the heroine, Jack Newton and George Henry as American officers, Edward Dorhan, George Jones, William Willis and William Canfield as Germans, with Emma Warren, Lois Scott and Francis Feeney in supporting roles, comprise a cast that, as a whole, does most commendable work.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Phil Kelly (Francis Ford), veteran of the Spanish war and member of the United States Secret Service, is commissioned to spy on the German agents in his native land. To do this he is obliged to act the traitor in order to gain the confidence of the enemy spies. His hazardous work loses him his friends, but he is successful in rounding up the band. In Germany, still unsuspected, he is given an airplane and attached to the Germans in the sector in which the newly arrived American troops are attacking. It is he who is responsible for their victory, and, though found out, help comes before it is too late. His fiancee (Edna Emerson), who is in the Red Cross, finds him in the hospital and they are reunited.

"M'liss"

(Artcraft—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

BRET HARTE'S "M'liss," a story of the West, which, incidentally has been done on the screen before, has been given an excellent production by Artcraft and, with Mary Pickford as the little "limb of satan," makes a picture that cannot help but please. While the part does not contain the acting opportunities afforded her in "Stella Maris," she fully succeeds in bringing out the hoydenish personality of M'liss. This she does with charming effect. And if one be inclined to smile at Miss Pickford's characterization of the youngster who swears worse than her drunken father, because of the fact that the situation presents charming Little Mary acting as a roughneck, he will be no less pleased by her altogether laudable efforts.

The West of the olden days was thoroughly immortalized by Bret Harte and "M'liss" was by no means the least of his many works treating the old frontier. His people are human, his touches of comedy delightful and his plot sustaining in interest and away from the beaten paths of melodrama. The spirit of the original work has been very well caught by Frances Marion who did the screen version of "M'liss." She has kept the meat of the book within the comparatively short space of five reels and has neglected neither the serious nor the lighter side of the story. Marshall Neilan, always an artist, has handled his subject in fine taste. The atmosphere he has brought to the picture is ideal. Some of the camera shots of Walter Stradling's are marvels of clarity and depth.

Thomas Meighan as the school-master seems quite deserving of the affections bestowed by M'liss. Some excellent character work is contributed by Theodore Roberts as the drink-sodden, half imbecile Bummer Smith, by Tully Marshall as the hypocritical old judge and by Charles Ogle as Yuba Bill, the stage driver. The performances of both Mr. Roberts and Mr. Marshall contain a rare quality of humor. Monte Blue, Winifred Greenwood and Val Paul handle their roles with credit.

"M'liss" is all in all a "typical" Pickford picture. It shows her in rags and curls, in situations both humorous and dramatic and pleases from first to last.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

M'liss (Mary Pickford), the "young lion," lives with her dissipated old father, "Bummer" Smith (Theodore Roberts) in Red Gulch, a town in Central California. She resolves to mend her ways when Charles Gray (Thomas Meighan) arrives in the settlement and takes up the business of teaching school. In San Francisco, Smith's brother dies, leaving his fortune to old Bummer, with the proviso that if he dies it shall go to his wife. Servants in his family, Clara Parker (Winifred Greenwood) and Jim Peterson (Val Paul), resolve to gain control of the money. Jim arrives at Red Gulch, and shortly afterward old Bummer is stabbed in the back by an unseen man. Gray, the last person seen with Smith, is arrested, and brought up for trial. On the day of the court proceedings Clara arrives and poses as Smith's wife. Little M'liss still retains her love for Gray, believing his word that he is not guilty. But the judge (Tully Marshall) and the jury determine on his guilt, and Gray is jailed, presumably for life. The townsmen, however, decide upon a lynching party, and set out to drag Gray from jail. In the meantime Uba Bill (Charles Ogle), a great friend of M'liss, has become suspicious of Jim and arranged a trip. As he is riding across the valley he is set upon by the infuriated townsmen who believe him the escaping Gray. Jim gives spurs to his horse, and is eventually shot down. Believing himself betrayed, he confesses having bribed the sheriff's deputy (Monte Blue) to do the killing. Subsequently Gray is released from jail, and joins M'liss to live happily ever afterward.

"Spotted"

(Strand-Mutual—One Reel)

Reviewed by F. G. Spencer

THIS is another of the Billie Rhodes brand of comedy in which she, as usual, is bent on fooling somebody. This time, however, to help her young married friends out of a dilemma, she offers her palatial home to them to entertain a certain rich young bachelor, and further offers to pose as chauffeur for them. This she does in a truly genuine manner and incidentally poses also as their maid. In the former role she assumes goggles and mustache, and in the latter the demure gown and white apron. When Victor notices a resemblance between chauffeur and maid, it is explained that they are brother and sister. He is smitten with the maid, and bribes the chauffeur to intercede for him, and it is only after an amusing string of events that his eyes are opened, and he proposes to her just the same, only to learn that she is an heiress. The reel is well balanced, nicely photographed and will be found a most acceptable filler. Release date, Wednesday, April 30.

"The Reason Why"

(Select—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

"THE REASON WHY," by Elinor Glyn and featuring Clara Kimball Young, is an entertaining photoplay even though the reason for it is never established. When Markrute forces Zara, his niece, to marry Lord Tancred because the latter is greatly in debt to him, one ponders at his eccentricity. In the Lord he gets a heavy liability. However, as long as Mr. Markrute so wills it, the marriage ceremony is performed and then comes the drama, which, with its opposing forces in Zara and Lord Tancred, is sustaining until the finale. The conflict between Zara, who imagines her husband cares only for her money, and Lord Tancred, who imagines that Zara conducts a clandestine love affair, has many moments of intensity. Delving into the intimacy of marriage, Elinor Glyn is able to find much that interests.

Miss Young plays her role for its full sympathetic worth and is completely successful in bringing out the pathetic plight of Zara. Her gowns are varied and gorgeous. Milton Sills is a very natural Lord Tancred, and Frank Losee an impressive Markrute. The only unrealistic things about these gentlemen are their names. Eldean Stewart as Mimo, Zara's child, combines skill with naturalness and takes his important role excellently. Florence Billings, Kate Lester and John Sunderland complete the cast.

Mary Murillo prepared the scenario from the Glyn novel, and Robert Vignola directed. Their work has no faults. The settings are magnificent and the photographic work by Louis J. Physioc is of a high order.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Subsequent to the death of her worthless husband (J. W. Johnston), Zara (Clara Kimball Young) leaves her boy, Mimo (Eldean Stewart), in a London boarding house and goes to live with her uncle, Francis Markrute (Frank Losee). Unaware of her marriage, he has agreed to provide a living for her if she consents to obey him. He soon forces her into a marriage to Lord Tancred (Milton Sills), who is greatly in debt to Markrute. Zara is unaware of the fact that Tancred really loves her and refuses to be his wife in anything but name. They live together, though estranged. The sickness of Mimo calls Zara away, and Tancred suspects another man. Then one evening, in the midst of a reception, Zara is called to the bedside of her boy, who is dying. Tancred follows, sees all and suspects the worst. Later he denounces Zara, but she tells him her whole story, and subsequently they lead a happy life.

"Denny from Ireland"

(W. H. Clifford Production—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

SHORTY HAMILTON is no newcomer to the screen. The two-reel comedies he contributed to the Mutual program under Thomas Ince's direction will be recalled by many. This five-reeler to be marketed in the independent field by Ernest Shipman is the first of several productions featuring this comedian which will be offered as regular monthly releases. In "Denny from Ireland," Hamilton's particular brand of comedy is given full play. As the impulsive, rough-and-ready though good-natured son of the Emerald Isle, constantly in action and ever ready with a typical Irish sense of humor, he creates a character that is a true delight.

The story supplied him was supplied to him and with him ever uppermost. And he is so active that he never tires. One follows his adventurous career from Ireland to Arizona with real interest. It has been given a production in which pretty scenes and photography that for sheer brilliance has never been excelled, prevail. Some of the Irish atmosphere is typical. The supporting cast includes some prominent Irish types. Andrew Arbuckle is seen as the priest. Pomeroy Canon is the Arizona sheriff. The leading lady is thoroughly efficient as is, in fact, the entire cast.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Shorty while celebrating his wedding party learns that his invalid mother has been evicted by the cruel landlord. He arrives at her bedside to find her dead. He vows to kill the villain and searches for him. But the deed has been already done, by a poacher, who aimed poorly. The priest, having heard the poacher's confession and realizing that Shorty will be blamed, aids in his escape to America. His wife remains behind, waiting for him to send for her. In Arizona Shorty finds making money a slow process. He learns of a large shipment of money, and, tempted, hides in the express car, intending to rob. But another robber gets on the job ahead of him. Shorty is moved to help the express agent, but is beaten off. He jumps off the train and finds the money where the highwayman left it. Burying it, he returns to the ranch to discover that his wife has started to America on some money left her by a relative. Safely arrived, they are very happy together until the thought of the money and a prison sentence disturbs Shorty. The company's detective has traced the hold-up to him. The sheriff, however, who has located the money, saves Shorty's neck by making him a deputy and saying that he found it. Then Shorty goes out and captures the bandit, quite satisfying the mystified agent and sweeping away all evidence against him.

"The Two-Soul Woman"

(Universal—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

THERE is fairly good suspense in this feature considering the fact that there is only one situation in the whole five reels. It is adapted from a story entitled "The White Cat," by Gelett Burgess, and contains a certain element of mystery surrounding the dual personality of Joy Fielding. Priscilla Dean in this role does some really capable acting. First the modest young lady, then the cruel and shameless imp, she is successful in bringing out both sides of the character vividly. The story has been well put on and as directed by Elmer Clifton carries interest from first to last, oftentimes attaining a crisis of power.

Girard, Dearholt and Evelyn Selbie give good support.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Chester Castle (Ashton Dearholt) sustains injuries when his automobile overturns which render him unconscious. When he comes to himself he finds himself in a strange house tended by the sympathetic Joy Fielding (Priscilla Dean). Before he fully regains his health he witnesses a great change come over her. All her good characteristics drop from her and she becomes a cruel, fierce, shameless girl, calling herself Edna. It does not take Chester long to discover that she is in the power of a crooked doctor possessed of a hypnotic power. When Joy assumes her bad character she gives him money and shows love for him. When her good self returns Chester marries her. The doctor, furious, once again sets to work to bring about the change and with success. Leah (Evelyn Selbie), Joy's servant, determining to end it, shoots the doctor at this point, and with his death Joy regains her natural manner for all time.

Josh Binney Comedies

(Two Reels Each)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

THE first two of the Josh Binney comedies featuring Fatty Filbert are "Fabulous Fortune Fumblers" and "Fred's Fictitious Foundling." There are as many f's as laughs. The second of the two, the title of which will not be mentioned again because the "f" on our typewriter refuses overwork, is the better. This Filbert comedian is almost as large as Arbuckle and possessed of a pleasing personality. For his own benefit, however, he should not show so much of his body. Huge rolls of fat are not funny. The picture shows him as a crook. His partner dresses him up in baby's clothes and leaves him on the door-step of an old and rich and apparently short-sighted couple. The majority of the action shows Filbert entering the routine of the baby's life and the effect is always ridiculous and often funny. The business is good, the action swift and the support capable. Mr. Binney, however, does not know how to balance his camera on the back of an automobile when photographing a chase without giving his film the flickers.

The first of the comedies refers to Shesa Beara and the Infamous Players Film Company. The story tells of the manner in which a millionaire was fooled by a young lady doing the vampire, and her partners, Filbert and a very much smaller gentleman, into financing a picture for them. The studio gives the usual comedy opportunities and there is a climax to the two reels which is original and highly humorous.

"His Smothered Love"

(Paramount-Mack Sennett—Two Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

THIS is Chester Conklin's picture and as his ability as a comedian is given full play it hardly needs further elaboration on its merits. Let it be said, however, that his business as street car conductor is excellent and the plot he unsuccessfully springs to win the girl is typical of the Sennett gag factory in its farthest flights of imagination. Harry Gribbon is funny, too, and Marie Prevost charms whenever on the screen. Eddie Cline directed.

"The Non-Stop Kid"

(Rolin-Pathe—One Reel)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

THIS is another Harold Lloyd winner in which he takes the place of a professor coming to marry the girl he loves. Perhaps one of the most original and effective gags ever introduced in comedy is the shot of Lloyd pretending to sing while the Victrola plays behind the curtain. He succeeds well until the butler changes the tune from the classical to the alluring Hawaiian movement. Snubs Pollard and Bebe Daniels contribute their usual sterling support.

"The Biggest Show on Earth"

(Paramount-Ince—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

A STORY of the circus has been supplied Enid Bennett for her third appearance on the Paramount program. While it is elementary in conception and treatment it makes an entertaining light offering with a good punch in the last reel when little Roxie enters the lion's cage taking the regular performer's place, in order to save her father, the owner of the circus, from a mob believing itself swindled. Miss Bennett is as refreshing and attractive as ever in the stellar role. The support surrounding her is headed by Melbourne MacDowell as the owner of the circus and Earl Rodney as the young hero. Ethel Lynn, of Christie Comedy fame makes an engaging little flapper, and Bliss Chevalier and Carl Stockdale contribute good characterizations.

The atmosphere of the circus has been very well communicated to the film. Inasmuch as a small show was hired in its entirety for the many scenes under and around the big top it never falls short of realism. The lion taming act is cleverly handled, and the beasts, actually ferocious instead of the usual benevolent variety, create considerable intensity when Roxie enters the cage and puts them through their paces. Florence Vincent is the author of "The Biggest Show on Earth," Jerome Storm directed and Charles Stumer photographed.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Roxie (Enid Bennett), daughter of Nat Kemp (Melbourne MacDowell), part owner and manager of a circus, is the feature attraction at every show when she enters the lion's cage, and puts them through their tricks. In time Kemp sends her off to boarding school, where after standing the snubs of the society girls, she eventually makes friends with their leader, Marjorie Trent (Ethel Lynn), after saving her from a large dog. She is invited to spend the holidays with her, and at her home meets Owen (Earl Rodney), her brother. They fall in love, and Owen asks her to be his wife. She bids him wait, knowing full well the pride of name and family entertained by Mrs. Trent (Bliss Chevalier). During the holidays her father's circus comes to the neighboring town, and the Trents go to see the show. Ross (Jack Nelson), a rebuffed barker, peeved at Roxie's refusal to accept his attentions, plans to spoil Kemp's show. He allows the lions to smell raw meat immediately before the act, and the new tamer refuses to go on with them. Ross then proceeds to stir up the audience, and a small riot is occurring when Roxie, who has slipped away from the Trents, appears and goes on with the lions. She successfully completes the act, although constantly in danger from the beasts, but afterward Mrs. Trent snubs her. Not so Owen, however, and not so Mr. Trent (Carl Stockdale), who announces that he is the other owner of the circus, and that if Roxie isn't good enough to enter his home, then he is not good enough himself.

"The House of Hate"

(Pathe—Ninth Episode)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

THIS episode entitled "Poisoned Darts" shows many developments in the plot. Pearl and Gresham again visit Grimlisk, the lawyer in their endeavor to discover the identity of the Hooded Terror. They are just too late, however, as the Terror has murdered Grimlisk with a poison dart. He also attempts to kill Pearl with his blow pipe and darts but fails. Pearl learns that he plans to destroy her munitions factory at a certain hour and rushes there ahead of him. When he arrives a furious chase is staged. When it ends Pearl hangs on a derrick over a tub of seething acid while the Terror descends from above evidently intending to hurl her to her death. Ezra Waldon who fought the Terror in the last episode was killed, it is revealed.

"The House of Hate"

(Pathe—Tenth Episode)

Reviewed by Peter Milne

ADDITIONAL mystery is supplied in this number of "The House of Hate" when the Hooded Terror is thought to have been shot and killed. In escaping from Pearl he enters a residence. When Pearl follows, she fires and the man in the peculiar garb of the Hooded Terror lies still. But it is not the Terror after all. The scene then shifts to the underworld where Queenie Kate (Helene Chadwick) bemoans the death of "her man" one of the best crooks on the circuit. To Gresham, who enters the underworld "joint" disguised as a tough, she tells her sad tale which reveals the fact that the Terror, after knocking the crook unconscious when he discovers him burglarizing the residence, changed clothes with him. Kate vows to get Pearl's "man" in return. In the meantime the Terror, from his under-

(Continued on next page)

TO EXHIBITORS

FOR BOOKINGS IN

NORTHERN PENNSYLVANIA

AND

SOUTHERN NEW JERSEY

ON

JESTER SUPER COMEDIES

(The Kind the Public Likes)

FEATURING

TWEDE-DAN

The International Mirth Maker

CALL OR WRITE TO

MASTERPIECE FILM ATTRACTIONS

1225 VINE STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

BELL TELEPHONE—SPRUCE 21-43

ALL TWO PARTS—RELEASED MONTHLY

"The Recruit" "All 'Fur' Her"

"His Golden Romance" "The Wrong Flat"

Booked on the "SHOW YOU" policy

A few territories still open. Call or write for terms.

JESTER COMEDY CO.
220 W. 42nd Street, New York
Telephone Bryant 7691

(Continued from page 2861)

world lair, has commissioned various toughs to kidnap Pearl. Gresham volunteers to lead them and when he reaches the Waldon residence betrays them all into the hands of the police. As he takes Pearl in his arms Kate appears at the window ready to shoot him.

This episode is filled with fast, exciting action and appears to be the best of the serial to date. Pearl's escape from her precarious position over the acid tank is not the least of its many thrillers.

"The Lonely Woman"

(Triangle—Five Reels)

Reviewed by F. G. Spencer

BELLE BENNETT is featured in this homely exhibition of small town prejudice, suspicion and narrow mindedness. Playing opposite her is Lee Hill, and both being newcomers and she maintaining an ominous silence as to her origin, and he having arrived on a "side door pullman," both are objects to virulent suspicion. The deacon of the church, a pillar of society, and renting agent of the burg, is somewhat astounded to find that Martha Sellers is well supplied with money, and the village gossip mongers get busy. But when she befriends the tramp, gossip of the most sinister character is rampant. The whole picture reflects the average small community of the past, where a newcomer had to divulge every atom of his or her personal history from the cradle up or be eyed with suspicion. It is a picture with a good story, the continuity is well preserved and the only drawback to the whole is the palpable overacting of the tramp (Jim Ransom). The story is by John A. Moroso, scenario by Catherine Carr, and it was directed by Thomas N. Heffron.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Jim Ransom (Lee Hill), the tramp, just arrived, is barely tolerated and becomes known as the "village lush." Martha Sellers (Belle Bennett), also a new arrival, is not even tolerated, and the majority of the board of selectmen demand that she be driven out of town. The mayor (Walter Perkins) stands up for her, and he is then eyed with suspicion. Thus things go until the tramp, while very sick, in his delirium makes a statement of huge importance to Martha, who is nursing him, and on his recovery substantiates this statement, which is to the effect that he robbed the Fish and Trust Company, made his getaway, and Johnson Blair (Martha Sellers' husband) was now serving a term in Sing Sing for the crime. The tramp has a bill of $1,000 denomination left, not having changed it for fear of arousing just suspicion. This he turns over to Martha, who is able later to prove her husband's innocence and rejoin him.

"The Seal of Silence"

(Vitagraph—Five Reels)

Reviewed by Joseph L. Kelley

"THE SEAL OF SILENCE," Earle Wiliams' latest starring vehicle on the Vitagraph program, deals with the subject of heredity and its reflection in the lives of the children of the parents. The drama opens with a bit too much preliminary explanation, but the idea sought to be brought out is firmly planted and after the run of the second reel, action takes a rapid gait and moves with dramatic precision until the end of the five reels. The picture was produced at Vitagraph's Western studios under the direction of Tom Mills.

William Addison Lathrop, who has contributed several stories to Vitagraph for creation on the screen, is responsible for this one. He started with a good, live idea and has worked into his plot good material for dramatic entertainment on the screen. Some will doubt the advisability of the child being allowed to investigate the contents of the doctor's medicines and will regret the incident which causes the child's illness. However, Mr. Lathrop has evolved a happy ending with the child recovering full health and strength with the result that this will take away the bad taste, if any, of the preceding events in the life of the child.

Mr. Williams in the role of the doctor does his work with a bit too much dignity trailing his movements. Miss Darmond affords Mr. Williams excellent support. Kathleen Kirkham, Martin Best, Kate Price, Colin Kenny and Pat Moore are seen to good advantage in the other supporting roles. Miss Price displays some of her old-time pep in portraying the good old Irish woman. It is hard to beat Miss Price to this place in the cast of characters.

The photography is of the best. The interior sets used are examples of good work by the property men. Mr. Mills, the director, has given a good account of his ability as a director.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Hugh Loring (Earle Williams) is a wealthy young doctor. Mrs. Loring (Kathleen Kirkham), his wife, is fond of society, and frequents a gambling resort, conducted for the convenience of the wealthy patrons. Ruth Garden (Grace Darmond), a friend of Mrs. Loring, is her companion and assists Doctor Loring in his laboratory work. Loring is a close observer of heredity. He desires a child. He holds the opinion that some slight trick of manner displayed by a child reveals the parent. Mrs. Loring has an admirer. Loring learns that he is the one who is taking his wife to the gambling resort. He follows her there, and admonishes her for frequenting such places. His wife, humiliated, leaves him. She goes to her old nurse, Mrs. McBride (Kate Price), and tells her that she is about to become a mother. She does not tell her husband of the expected arrival. The baby is born, and Ruth is summoned to Mrs. Loring's side. The mother dies. Doctor Loring is not informed of either his wife's death or the birth of the baby. The child is left with the nurse, and Ruth returns to the home of the doctor. The nurse is obliged to give up the child after three years. Loring hears Ruth discussing the incident over the 'phone, and he recalls her long absence at the time of the child's birth. He loves Ruth, but he believes the child hers. He receives the child without question. The child is taken seriously ill. Loring saves its life. Then he learns, through his study of heredity, that the child is his and not Ruth's.

"Paying His Debt"

(Triangle—Five Reels)

Reviewed by F. G. Spencer

A MAN'S double, and the mysterious holdup of the stage, frequently enacted, form the base of this fairly interesting drama. A rather clever angle is brought into play when the bandit, having won over his double to assist him, prevails upon the latter to visit the saloon, post office and other rendezvous of the mining population, while he rode several miles out to waylay the stage. Roy Stewart in this dual role gives a good account of himself, and the mystifying looks on the faces of the victims of the holdup, positively identifying "the double" as the marauder, while the miners and saloon habitues are just as positive that the man spent the whole day in their midst is indeed true to life.

The whole cast is well selected, the photography good throughout, and the direction reflects creditably upon Cliff Smith.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

The Man in the play (unnamed) goes West to recover his health, but finds that the average Westerner does not welcome "lungers," as tuberculosis sufferers are termed, and, being left penniless and very sick, is apparently about to succumb. Pete Morton (Roy Stewart) finds him prostrate in the mountains, takes him to his mountain shack and nurses him back to health. In return for this service Morton, having implicit confidence in the stranger and noticing a remarkable resemblance to himself, hits upon the scheme as mentioned above, viz., to have him pose in the village as Morton, while he (Morton) holds up the stage, which stunt he has been pulling off with startling regularity. In the end, however, the substitute fails to make his appearance in town to prove the alibi, on account of his having performed a mission of mercy, in caring for a little girl who had been thrown from her pony. Learning the girl's identity, he returns her to her father, Simon Christy (Wm. Ellingford), who was among the victims of that day's hold-up, and erroneously identifies "the man" as the road agent. In the meantime a posse is gathering. Morton gets wind of how affairs have turned and makes a break for the border. "The man" is rounded up, and things look bad for him, when Father Kelly (Walter Perkins) is sent for and he vouches for the fact that "the man," the injured child and he were together when the hold-up occurred. Here again is a serious state of affairs, but this is straightened out when the sheriff receives a telegram stating that the real bandit (Pete Morton) had just been shot and killed while attempting to cross the border. Then the real identity of both men is learned.

"The Soul of Buddha"

(Fox Standard Pictures—Five Reels)

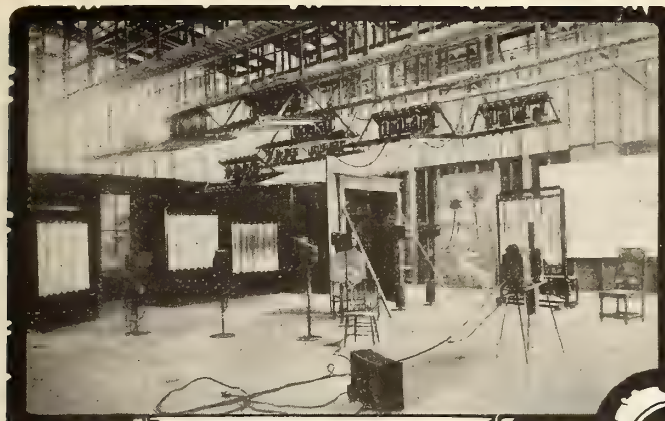
Reviewed by Peter Milne

"THE SOUL OF BUDDHA" is a pretentious feature starring Theda Bara. Miss Bara also takes credit for writing the story. It is a weird and quite fascinating tale of an East Indian dancer, Bava, who, after having been consecrated to the Buddhist faith, breaks the sacred vows and marries. Ever menaced by Ysora, the high priest, she turns to vain pleasures to ease her conscience, but finally pays the penalty of her faithlessness in a most dramatic conclusion. As a piece of pictorial handiwork, "The Soul of Buddha" ranks high, judging it by the other Bara

PHOTOPLAYLETS
MAKE YOUR LOCAL MERCHANTS GLAD TO USE
SCREEN ADVERTISING
Exclusive Territory—Wonderful Sample Outfits—Helpful Cooperation—Investigate
ROTHACKER FILM MFG. CO. 1339-51 Diversey Pkwy. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS



INDOOR STAGE

OUTDOOR STAGE

DOLLARS 60 DOLLARS

A WEEK

WILL RENT A SPACE 48 × 50 ON THIS SUPERB OPEN-AIR STAGE AND 30 DOLLARS A DAY WILL RENT THE INDOOR STUDIO INCLUDING ELECTRIC CURRENT—REMEMBER—COOPER-HEWITT—LIGHTED

KLUTHO STUDIOS
JACKSONVILLE, FLA.

ERNEST SHIPMAN
17 W. 44TH ST., N.Y.
CAN TELL YOU MORE

pictures. It is a story which beneath its lavish production is very simple, and as it is logically conceived and developed, it makes excellent entertainment for the audience desiring the particular type of picture it is.

J. Gordon Edwards' work as director centered ever on his star and it is remarkable the amount of sustained interest he has instilled into the picture when one considers the fact that it runs on a single track throughout its length. The scenes in the East Indian village are full of atmosphere and the settings are all realistic. Miss Bara handles her role typically. A too great tendency to assume a mincing step in the first scenes of the picture is the only obvious flaw in her performance. Hugh Thompson, Victor Kenard and Anthony Merlo creditably interpret a trio of roles of equal importance. John W. Boyle photographed.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

In an East Indian village, Bava (Theda Bara), a flirtatious native girl, is consecrated to the Buddhist faith by her mother. Bava pines under the religious restrictions imposed on her, and when opportunity presents itself she elopes with Sir John Dare (Hugh Thompson), a captain at the British army post. She is pursued by Ysora (Victor Kennard), a high priest of the Buddhist faith, who vows vengeance. For a year Bava lives happily with her husband, and after the birth of her baby her cup is filled. But Ysora, who has dedicated his life to avenging Bava's attitude toward his religion, at length succeeds in killing the child and marking it with the death sign. Subsequently Bava casts aside her husband, and enters upon a life of revelry. She ensnares M. Romaine (Anthony Merlo), a young Parisian, and laughs when his wife (Florence Martin) comes to plead with her. Bava's dancing attracts the attention of a stage manager (Henry Warwick), who sees in her great possibilities. On the evening of her debut her husband, now a physical wreck, breaks into her room, and pleads to be taken back. She spurns him. Going behind the curtains, he commits suicide. On the stage Bava meets with great success, rendering her peculiar East Indian dance, but just before the end, one of the Buddhist statues comes to life—it is none other than Ysora. He stabs her to the heart as the house rings with the cheers of the audience, who believe this the proper termination of the act.

Music cues for motion pictures will be found in the Music Department.

Studios For Rent

Most conveniently located Studio in New York City—

318-320-322 East 48th Street.
Floor space—80 x 100.

Room for six good sized sets.

Carpenter shops equipped with latest machinery.

2000 Amperes gives any kind of light effects.

Will contract to furnish you your sets on a 10% basis, saving you your rent in lumber alone.

People can reach your Studio in four or five minutes. Props, on a minute's notice. No waits on account of location of Studio. A big money saver.

Rent by the week or month, also yearly leases.

Address ROLAND WEST
318 East 48th Street New York City

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Universal Newsettes

Figures compiled at Universal City show that 443 present and former employes paid income tax to the local revenue collector, John P. Carter. The total salaries aggregate $996,311.51.

Among the new plays in production at Universal City is that titled "Nobody's Bride," which is an adaptation from the magazine story of the same name, and will star Ella Hall. Eddie Sutherland is to play opposite Miss Hall, and a very important part will be taken by Priscilla Dean.

Another new play in production is that titled "The Eagle," which will offer Monroe Salisbury in another Western role. Elmer Clifton is to direct the photoplay, and Edna Earl will be the leading woman.

Elsie Jane Wilson has started the filming of "A Penny's Worth of Love," referred to as a light comedy-romance, written by Olga Printzlau. Carmel Meyer is to be the featured player in this.

The Harry Carey story has been retitled "Three Mounted Men." It is of a decidedly Western type, and the direction is by Jack Ford.

Lyons and Moran have started another Star Comedy, which is to be known as "The Woman Haters." Edith Roberts is playing in this, which is from an original script by "the boys" themselves, who are serving as directors as well as leading players.

William E. Wing has been engaged by Manager of Production Henry McRae to write continuity for the circus serial to be put in production shortly, and Wing is now working with Director J. P. McGowan, who will be in charge of filming this fifteen-episode story, which will offer Eddie Polo as the leading player.

Live Triangle Items

General Manager H. O. Davis this week added another director to the Triangle staff in the person of J. W. McLaughlin, who has been identified with the industry on the West Coast for the past several years, serving most of the time as assistant director. McLaughlin has been assigned to the filming of a Southern story, written by William V. Mong, Triangle character actor, which is titled "The Mossback." This will have a Southern atmosphere, and the players who will appear in the cast include Mong, Pauline Starke, George Hernandez, Jean Calhoun, Harry Depp, George Pearce and others. Norwalk, Cal., which has a south-of-the-Mason-Dixon-line appearance, has been selected as settings for many of the exteriors, and the company is working there this week.

Gilbert P. Hamilton is next to make "Iron and Lavender," with Belle Bennett in the featured role, and a supporting cast that includes Walter Whitman, Lillian Langdon, Jack Curtis and others, including Joe King, who will play a dual role.

Peggy Pearce, who has played in one dramatic subject under the direction of Gilbert P. Hamilton, following several years' experience in comedy, will make her debut as leading woman in a Western subject, titled "The Redhaired Cupid," now being filmed by Cliff Smith, with Roy Stewart as the featured player. The supporting cast includes Ray Griffith, Walter Perry, Estelle Evans, Charles Dorian and others.

The new two-reel comedy started this week is at present known as "Newspaper Clippings," and will in all probability be the last to be filmed by Harry Edwards, who leaves April 26 to enter the army at American Lake.

Fox Studio Doings

Plans have all been completed and active work has been started by Director J. Gordon Edwards on the next Theda Bara-Fox picture, "Spanish Love," which gives to this actress the first sympathetic role she has played in more than a year. Many of the exteriors will be made in the San Jacinto Mountains, and it is at that place the company, together with several hundred extras, are working this week. This will be Director Edwards' twenty-sixth photoplay for the Fox Film Corporation, he having been affiliated with that company since the organization became a producing one. Mr. Edwards' engagement dates back to almost three years, and thus he has made an average of eight pictures every twelve months. "Salome," the most recent subject, is now on its way to the releasing offices of the company in New York.

The timber region of Arizona in the vicinity of Flagstaff will furnish the exterior settings for William Farnum's next play, to be directed by Frank Lloyd, "Riders of the Purple Sage," adapted from the Zane Grey book of the same title. William Foster, the cameraman of the company, has spent several days in the vicinity of Flagstaff picking locations, and the producing unit will leave for that section within a few days.

Lynn Reynolds and company of players, which includes Tom Mix, are home from three weeks in the mountain beyond Bear Lakes and are now making the final interior scenes for the coming release. The other Fox company, headed by Gladys Brockwell and directed by E. J. Le Saint, has just completed a subject, and it will be several days before a new one is started.

The F.P.-Lasky Studio

For the first time in the history of the Lasky studio, the week has passed without a producing company working there. The lull in production activities is attributed to the producing plant being far ahead of the releasing organization with subjects, thus making it possible for all members of the staff to be given temporary vacations.

The subjects most recently completed are "The Firefly of France," which has Raymond Hatton in the title role as a daring French aviator, while the star part is taken by Wallace Reid, with Ann Little playing opposite him. Many of the scenes show shell-torn sections of the French battle zone. The C. B. de Mille special Artcraft production, "Old Wives for New," is now in its final editing. This is a screen version of the David Graham Phillips story of the same name, with Elliot Dexter, Julia Faye, Theodore Roberts, Wanda Hawley, Florence Vidor, Tully Marshall and others. Walter Edwards has completed the direction of Vivian Martin in "Viviette," and the last Sessue Hayakawa picture, "The Bravest Way," filmed by George Melford, is shortly to go to the printing department. J. Stuart Blackton is editing and titling "Missing," his war picture, which is set for May release. Sylvia Bremer and Thomas Meighan are principals of this.

Clara Kimball Young is this week working among tiger-clad Kaffirs under the direction of Robert Vignola on out-of-door locations, which have all the appearance of South African scenes. The title of the picture is "The Claw."

Here and There

Thomas H. Ince has readjusted his producing activities to meet the requirements of the Paramount program, which requires eight subjects a year from each of his three stars. The new arrangement provides that Charles Ray and Dorothy Dalton will work alternately, and so now that Ray is busy on the production of "The Nine O'Clock Town," Miss Dalton is taking a vacation from the studio and is spending the time working on the Liberty Loan and visiting troops at San Diego camps, of which she is godmother.

The new arrangement will not in any way alter the productions starring Enid Bennett. She is now at work in a comedy-drama, in which she takes vamping seriously. However, her work will give the subject more the aspect of a comedy than of a serious emotional drama. Douglas MacLean is Miss Bennett's leading man, and

Louise Fazenda Romps Wildly Through "Those Athletic Girls," a New Paramount-Sennett Comedy, Which Has Made a Hit a principal character part is taken by Melbourne McDowell.

Ruth Roland is to return to the screen after an absence of almost a year in a serial, "Hands Up," to be made for Pathe by the Astra Company, now working at Universal City. At present the other players for this picture have not been engaged, but in all probability Val Paul will play the masculine lead, that of a cowpuncher, who has many thrilling experiences to rescue an American girl who is kidnapped by Inca Indians and held to be offered as a sacrifice to their God when she reaches a certain age. William Adler and George Rizard will be the cameramen, and they are now engaged in working out a number of effects prescribed by the working script, which was written by Jack Cunningham. The Astra Company in preparing for the filming of this serial has purchased fifteen Western horses and a great quantity of similar equipment.

Large settings are now being erected at Universal City, one of which is of the mission type, almost 200 feet in length, and containing a lighthouse tower sixty-five feet high.

William Parsons Has Started Out Well to Make 'Em Laugh at His Capitol Comedies, Released Through Goldwyn

Christie Activities

An addition of a six and one-half acre tract of land, diagonally across from the Christie Film Studio, has been added to the possessions of this company. Right now this land is covered with lemon trees, and Mr. Christie is selling the fruit at a small cost to the various Hoover grocerterias in Hollywood.

This new tract of land will be used as the site for special sets. The companies at the Christie plant have increased so rapidly that, with the building of one more stage, there will be no more room for out-of-door sets. And it was particularly for this variety of set that the new tract was procured. The Christie studio already occupies the block on Sunset Boulevard from Gower to El Centro streets. Its new land possession gives it two blocks of studio frontage.

The Christie studio combines lights with daylight in all of their sets. "This," elucidates Al. Christie, "gives Christie comedies their pleasing high-lights."

Charles Christie has used his rapid-fire conversational ability with such telling results to the Third Liberty Loan Committee that his pockets bulge at all times with signed Liberty Bonds.

Vitagraph News Bits

Vitagraph production at the West Coast studios will in all probability be considerably reduced at an early date, inasmuch as Earle Williams is planning on returning to the East upon the completion of the subject on which he is working at present, "The Girl in His House," adapted from the Harold McGrath story of the same name.

Lloyd V. Hamilton Is Contributing His Well-Known Character Skill to Fox Sunshine Comedies

Another Vitagraph leading player who will return East is Hedda Nova, at present working in "The Woman in the Web," serial, being directed by Paul Hurst.

Director David Smith and company, headed by Nell Shipman, are spending the week in the Kern River valley, where inland water stuff for "Baree, Son of Kazan," is being filmed. Alfred Whitman plays the lead opposite Miss Shipman.

William Duncan is making great success in filming the next Vitagraph serial, and is now at work on the fourth episode. Edith Johnson is to continue as leading woman throughout the serial.

Hollywood Hookum

MAY 11, 1918 NEWS MORE NEWS

Herman Katz in town.

Fair and Warm—yes, hot.

Bill Parsons has become habitual user of herpicide.

For the sake of variety, Monroe Salisbury is going to play a Western role.

Threat of reorganizing the Toreadors was heard from Ken. McGaffey way

Bevo town is the new name many are considering Los Angeles should adopt.

Dorothy Phillips threatens to organize a strike if she is given another underworld role.

Doug. Gerrard, the Irish Nationalist's Home Ruler, has joined the ranks of the four-minute men.

Jack Livingston was seen wearing an ulster and felt boots, and so there may be a sanity inquest.

Since Lee Moran has found it necessary to impersonate a feminine role, he has started to learn to knit.

Belle Bennett has adopted an orphan potato patch—bugs and all—just to keep up the habit of adopting.

Triangle has a cowboy, Pete Morrison, who, when thrown from a horse, alights on his head to save his ankles.

Charley Ray was seen in a new blue suit this week—very pert. (Were we English we'd say, very swagger.)

Now, we hear Ruth Roland is to continue to be the serial girl for Pathe. But why permit the Inca Indians to kidnap her?

Stuart Paton had a burning scene for "The Wolf-Faced Man," and all of Glendale became excited, thinking there was a fire.

Clara K. Y. was working in a true South African atmosphere this week. Bob Vignola had about a thousand blacks in tiger skins.

Roy Stewart has been asked for the names of his cowboys, so the girls may correspond with them. The letter says, object—matrimony.

H. O. Davis is setting a new record for Triangle directors. He don't care whether he works twelve or twenty-fours hours a day, now that he is a megaphone wielder.

Chet Withey was seen wearing a hat the other day instead of his English cap. He attracted much attention on the Western Broadway's White Way.

Bert Lytell insists upon being a general utility man. Now he is writing continuity as well as holding a position on the seven-foot line.

Neighbors in the vicinity of Bill Hart's studio are having a real rest during Bill's bond tour with no rapid fire explosions during the nights.

Mon Randall was mistaken for a Wop fisherman the other day, and he's just a pen-and-ink artist, which shows how easy it is to create a mistaken identity story.

Zane Grey seems to be a favorite with the Farnums. Bill's doing "Riders of the Purple Sage," and Dusty is bucking broncos for "The Light of Western Stars."

As all stars have fallen into the habit of becoming godmothers of soldiers, Bill Mason, the smiler, threatens to make application to becoming the goat of some training camp.

Charley and Al Christie have bought a six-acre lemon patch across the street from the studio which causes one to wonder whether the quality of comedies is to be altered.

Bessie Eyton is soon to be seen on the screen via Yorke-Metro route, providing her hair does not cause too much hilation. Some celluloid won't register a firey red—pardon we, Titian.

As Dal Clawson has more than twelve hundred dollars' worth of attachments on his camera, he has found it convenient to tack a title card of a Lois Weber production thereon—it reads: "The Forbidden Box."

Bert Lennon has a hair cut, and the sun was such a shock to his head that its all blistered, proving there was water on the brain, which accounts for the publicity that eminates from the Thomas H. Ince studios.

Lou Cody, while seated with Frances Marion and Edith Storey at a Red Cross Ball, at Catalina Islands this week, was called to one side by the village cut-up, and told that if he wanted one of the swell dames of the village, he, the village cut-up, would get him one after church was out. Edith and Frances felt terribly cut up, but such is fame.

NEWSY ITEMS FROM THE STUDIOS

And still another appearance of Niles Welch this month is on the cover of a song-sheet entitled "That Soothing Serenade," by Harry de Costa. Mr. Welch is doing the troubadour stunt with a guitar for the benefit of May Allison, in the upper right hand corner.

Ralph Ince has been having a harrowing time working out the scene, or its substitute, for the execution of a woman in the electric chair, called for in the text of the newest Petrova picture, "Patience Sparhawk and Her Times."

Mary Garden's favorite role in opera is "Thais." She has sung it over eight hundred times and will probably be seen in it over eight million times. The screen reviewer of it, who pleased her the most, said that "opera might well spare her voice to give to the cinema her eloquent body."

Rockliffe Fellows' attractive countenance has undergone a temporary change in the last few days, during which he has been suffering from an ulcerated tooth. As a result his work in "Patience Sparhawk and Her Times" has been held up.

A new word is heralded by Goldwyn. It is "mabelescent," and means anything merry and madwappish, warm-hearted and tender; anything, in fact, Mabel Normandish.

Following quite naturally the course of human events, Madge Kennedy, after being a bride in several pictures, becomes a widow in "The Fair Pretender," but a self-styled widow, as it were.

Carlyle Moore, the author of the stage success "Stop Thief!" is getting his first experience with the movies assisting in the direction of "The Fair Pretender."

Fans are anticipating the appearance of Edith Storey in "The Demon," which shows her in an entirely new role. No longer is she a Western girl supercharged with vitality winning her way through every hazard, but an American girl sold in childhood in an Algerian slave market and reared in Corsica.

Another "Southern beauty" has jumped to New York and landed on her feet, from all reports. This one is Tallulah Bankhead (from Jaspar, Alabama), whose work in "The Squab Farm" convinced Ivan Abramson that she was a person to add to his cast "When May Betrays."

Elsie Ferguson has gone all the way to Montana, accompanied by her director, Marshall Neilan, and various members of her cast, in order to take scenes for her newest Artcraft picture. This will be her first appearance in a so-called "Western drama."

Betty Blythe, Who Has a Role in Vitagraph's "Over the Top"

Billie Burke is deserting the screen for a time to appear in a new Broadway play.

For the first time those who have never indulged in the subway rush will have the pleasure of seeing others do so without getting mixed up in it themselves. In "Hit the Trail Holliday," directed by Marshall Neilan for Artcraft, scenes were taken at the 145th street station after two o'clock in the morning. A complete train was put at the company's disposal, and several hundred extras were used.

"Unclaimed Goods," the latest Vivian Martin picture, though written by a well-known Los Angeles newspaper man, does not reek of printers' ink, but has to do with the dispatching, journeying, arrival and disposal of a C. O. D. express package—none other than Vivian Martin herself.

Bernard Thornton, whose work opposite June Caprice in "The Heart of Romance" and "A Camouflage Kiss," won recent recognition, has retired to the wilds of New Jersey to work in peace and quiet on a new book. To be explicit, he has leased the Ella Wheeler Wilcox bungalow in Summit.

Again Big Bear Valley, Cal., has been used with marvelous effect for snow scenes. This time in "The Guilt of Silence," in which Ruth Clifford and Monroe Salisbury struggle for life and love in the wilds of the Northwest.

A most pleasing and effective scene in "How Could You, Caroline?" shows the bachelor dinner of Jimmie Morrison the night before his wedding. The heart-shaped table is perfectly appointed and decorated. In the background is a stage, on which several cabaret stunts are given. Miss Love, as one of the entertainers, does a very pretty bit of dancing.

Arthur Guy Empey entertained the whole "Over the Top" cast and various Vitagraph officials at a dinner and dance after a personal appearance of the players at the Lyric theatre last week.

Betty Blythe and Harry Morey with several members of their company spent four delightful days at Glen Cove, L. I., last week, where they took scenes in and about the beautiful DeLamar estate for their new picture, "Playing with Fate." The famous conservatory with its deep pool and little island reached by a golden bridge, its palm trees of natural height, its glinting stream winding in and out of mossy banks and flower beds, made a perfect background for the scenes called for in the pictures.

Quite a jump for Rupert Julian, from playing the Kaiser in the picture of that name to playing a detective in "The Shadowed Man." It merely shows his versatility.

Edward J. Connelly is following Nazimova from screen to stage. He is working with her on her newest picture, "Toys of Fate," and is at the same time playing with her in her revival of Ibsen's plays on the speaking stage.

Lewis Willoughby in the unsympathetic part of Henry Ames, a scheming lawyer, in "Treasure of the Sea," makes a very effective debut into the picture world. He is an English actor, who has just come to this country from Australia, where he has been playing in "Romance" and "Outcast" on the legitimate stage.

Anna Q. Nilsson is another actress born in Sweden who has made good on the screen. Though she has been in the United States only ten years, she has won a place in the heart of the American fan by such acting as she displays in "Heart of the Sunset."

Lew Cody as Jim Hardwick in "Treasure of the Sea" plays up to the ever-strenuous heroine, Edith Storey, decidedly well. His ability to ride, shoot, swim and do all sorts of stunts does not suffer in comparison with the star's ability along these same lines.

It is rumored that in "Playing the Game" Charles Ray takes part in a fight which puts completely in the shade his former efforts in "The Family Skeleton."

Here are two cases to prove that Tom Ince looks after everything, from the smallest detail to the biggest effect. In "Tyrant Fear" he had his character people taught a few expressions in the "Canuck" dialect so that their gestures and the movement of their lips and faces would ring true. In "The Biggest Show on Earth," a new Enid Bennett picture, he rented an entire circus to get the real fun and thrill.

Features---Current and Coming

Bluebird Photoplays

Apr. 15. A Rich Man's Darling (Louise Lovely) 5
Apr. 22. The Marriage Lie (Carmel Myers)... 5
Apr. 29. A Mother's Secret (Ella Hall).... 5
May 6. Danger Within (Little Zoe Rae)..... 5
May 13. The Guilt of Silence (Monroe Salisbury, Ruth Clifford)............ 5
May 20. Title Not Decided.................. 5

Universal Productions

Apr 8 Her Fling (Special Attraction) (Dorothy Phillips)............... 5
Apr. 15. No Release ....
Apr. 22. The Scarlet Drop (Special Attraction) (Harry Carey, Mollie Malone) 5
Apr. 29. No Release.........................
May 6. The Two-Soul Woman (Special Attraction) (Priscilla Dean).......... 5
May 13. No Release.........................
May 20. The Bride's Awakening (Mae Murray) 6

Famous Players-Lasky Corp.

(Successors to Paramount Pictures Corp.)

PARAMOUNT PICTURES

Mar. 25. LaTosca (Pauline Frederick)....... 5
Mar. 25. "Naughty, Naughty!" (Enid Bennett) 5
Apr. 1. Honor of His House (Sessue Hayakawa) ....
Apr. 8. His Majesty, Bunker Bean (Jack Pickford) ....
Apr. 8. The House of Silence (Wallace Reid)
Apr. 15. Rich Man, Poor Man (Marguerite Clark) ....
Apr. 15. Unclaimed Goods (Vivian Martin)..
Apr. 22. Playing the Game (Charles Rav)...
Apr. 29. Let's Get a Divorce (Billie Burke)
Apr. 29. Tyrant Fear (Dorothy Dalton)....

ARTCRAFT PICTURES

Mar. 11. Amarilly of Clothes-Line Alley (Mary Pickford) ....
Mar. 25. De Mille's "The Whispering Chorus" ....
Mar. 31. Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird"....
Apr. 1. The Tiger Man (Wm. S. Hart).....
Apr. 8. The Lie (Elsie Ferguson)..........
Apr. 22. Mr. Fix-It (Doug Fairbanks)......

First National Exhibitors' Circuit, Inc.

On Trial.
Charles Chaplin.
Daughter of Destiny (Mme. Petrova).
Herbert Brenon's "Empty Pockets."
The Sign Invisible (Big Mitch Lewis).
The Fall of the Romanoffs.
Tarzan of the Apes.
Dec. 23. The Daughter of Destiny (Mme. Petrova) 7
Feb. 1. The Light Within (Mme. Petrova).. 7
Mar. 18. The Life Mask (Mme. Petrova).... 7
Apr. —. Tempered Steel (Mme. Petrova).... 7

Fox Film Corporation

(Special Features)

Apr. 7. The Bride of Fear (Jewel Carmen). 5
Apr. 14. Western Blood (Tom Mix)......... 5
Apr. 21. American Buds (Jane and Katherine Lee) 6
Apr. 28. Her One Mistake (Gladys Brockwell) 5
May 5. Brave and Bold (George Walsh)... 5
May 12. Peg of the Pirates (Peggy Hyland). 5
May 19. The Firebrand (Virginia Pearson).. 5
May 26. Blue-Eyed Mary (June Caprice).... 5

Fox Standard Pictures

Feb. 3. The Forbidden Path (Theda Bara).. 6
Feb. 10. Les Miserables (Wm. Farnum)..... 9
Mar. 17. Woman and the Law.............. 7
Mar. 24. Rough and Ready (Wm. Farnum). 6
Apr. 7. The Blindness of Divorce.......... 7
Apr. 21. The Soul of Buddha (Theda Bara). —
May 5. True Blue (Wm. Farnum)........ —

Goldwyn Features Corp.

Mar. 10. The Floor Below (Mabel Normand). 6
Mar. 24. The Splendid Sinner (Mary Garden) 6
Apr. 7. The Danger Game (Madge Kennedy) 6
Apr. 21. The Face in the Dark (Mae Marsh) 6
May 5. Joan of Plattsburg (Mabel Normand) 6
May 19. The Fair Pretender (Madge Kennedy) 6

GOLDWYN SPECIALS

The Manx-Man..................... 7
For the Freedom of the World..... 7

W. W. Hodkinson Corporation

(Paralta Plays)

Mar. 1. "Within the Cup" (Bessie Barriscale) 7
Mar. 15. "Humdrum Brown" (Henry B. Walthall) 5
Apr. 1. "An Alien Enemy" (Louise Glaum) Substituted for Kerrigan release).. 5
Apr. 15. "Blindfolded" (Bessie Barriscale).. 5
Apr. 29. "With Hoops of Steel" (Henry B. Walthall) .... —
May 13. "The Snapdragon" (Louise Glaum) —
May 27. "Rose O' Paradise" (Bessie Barriscale) .... —

Jewel Productions, Inc.

Nov. — The Price of a Good Time (Drama).. —
Dec. — The Grand Passion (Drama)........ —
Dec. — K (Drama)........................ —
The Doctor and the Woman (Drama) ....7 reels
The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin.

Perfection Pictures

(GEORGE KLEINE SYSTEM)

Feb. 25. Ruggles of Red Gap (Essanay).... —
Feb. 11. The Unbeliever (Edison)..........
Apr. 7. A Pair of Sixes (Essanay)........ —
Curse of Iku (Essanay) .... —

Metro Pictures Corporation

Apr. 1. The Landloper (Harold Lockwood) Metro-Yorke 5
Apr. 8. Social Hypocrites (May Allison)... 5
Apr. 15. With Neatness and Dispatch (Bushman and Bayne)................ 5
Apr. 22. Treasure of the Sea (Edith Storey). 5
Apr. 29. Riders of the Night (Viola Dana), Metro 5
May 6. The Trail to Yesterday (Bert Lytell), Metro.................... 5
May 13. Cyclone Higgins, D.D. (Bushman & Bayne), Metro.................. 5
May 20. The Winning of Beatrice (May Allison), Metro.................... 5
May 27. Lend Me Your Name (Harold Lockwood), Metro-Yorke............ 5

(SCREEN CLASSICS, INC., SPECIALS)

Lest We Forget (Rita Jolivet), Screen Classics, Inc................................ 8
The Legion of Death (Edith Storey), Metro-Rolfe 7
Blue Jeans (Viola Dana), Metro-Rolfe....... 7
Revelation (Nazimova), Screen Classics, Inc. 7
The Slacker (Emily Stevens), Metro......... 7
Draft 258 (Mabel Taliaferro), Metro........ 7
My Own United States (Arnold Daly), Frohman 8
The Million Dollar Dollies (Dolly Sisters), Emerald 5

Mutual Film Corporation

Apr. 1. A Bit of Jade (Mary Miles Minter) American 5
Apr. 8. The Richest Girl (Ann Murdock) Frohman 5
Apr. 15. The Primitive Woman (Margarita Fischer) American 5
Apr. 22. (Title to be announced later), Mutual-Star Production 5
Apr. 29. Hearts or Diamonds (Wm. Russell). 5
May 6. Social Briars (Mary Miles Minter) American 5
May 13. (Title to come later)............. —

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Apr. 7. Twenty-One (Bryant Washburn) Pathe 5
Apr. 14. The Busy Inn (N. I. Panoff, Mme. Nadya Lesienko Mme. Orlova, N. A. Backsheef) Russian Art.... 5
Apr. 21. Ruler of the Road (Frank Keenan, Kathryn Lean, Ned Burton, John Charles) Pathe.................... 5
Apr. 28. Dolly Does Her Bit (Baby Marie Osborne, Alice Saunders, Louis Hahn, Georgia Woodthorpe).... 5
May 5. How Could You, Caroline? (Bessie Love, James Morrison).......... 5
May 12. The Dagger Woman (Ivan Mozukin, Olga Zovska), Russian Art. 5

Select Pictures

Dec. — Shirley Kaye (Clara Kimball Young). 5
Dec. — The Honeymoon (Constance Talmadge). 5
Jan. — Woman and Wife (Alice Brady)..... 5
Jan. — Ghosts of Yesterday (Norma Talmadge) 6
Jan. — The Marionettes (Clara Kimball Young) 5
Jan. — The Studio Girl (Constance Talmadge) 5
Mar. —. By Right of Purchase (Norma Talmadge) 6
Mar. —. The Shuttle (Constance Talmadge). 5
Mar. —. The House of Glass (Clara Kimball Young) 5
Mar. —. The Knife (Alice Brady).......... 5
Apr. — The Reason Why (Clara Kimball Young) 5
Apr. — Up the Road with Sallie (Constance Talmadge) 5
Apr. — At the Mercy of Men (Alice Brady) 5

SPECIAL RELEASES

Over There (Chas. Richman, Anna Q. Nilsson) 6
The Lone Wolf (Bert Lytell, Hazel Dawn)... 5
The Barrier (Rex Beach Production)........ 7
The Wild Girl (Eva Tanguay).............. 5
The Public Be Damned (Charles Richman, Mary Fuller)........................ 6

Triangle Distributing Corporation

(Subject to change without notice)

Apr. 21. The Hand at the Window (Margery Wilson) 5
Apr. 21. Society For Sale (Wm. Desmond)... 5
Apr. 28. The Lonely Woman (Belle Bennett) 5
Apr. 28. Paying His Debt (Roy Stewart).. 5
May 5. An Honest Man (Wm. Desmond)... 5
May 5. Mme. Paulette (Claire Anderson).. 5
May 12. Her Decision (Gloria Swanson, J. Barney Sherry).................. 5
May 12. Wolves of the Border (Roy Stewart) 5
May 19. The Honor of Taro San (Jack Livingston) 5
May 19. Old Hartwell's Cub (Wm. Desmond) 5

Vitagraph V-L-S-E.

Apr. 1. Little Miss No-Account (Gladys Leslie 5
Apr. 8. The Business of Life (Alice Joyce).. 5
Apr. 15. The Girl from Beyond (Nell Shipman, Alfred Whitman)............ 5
Apr. 22. A Bachelor's Children (Harry Morey, Florence Deshon) 5
Apr. 29. The Seal of Silence (Earle Williams, Grace Darmond).................. 5
May 6. The Little Runaway (Gladys Leslie, Edward Earle)................. 5
May 13. The Triumph of the Weak (Alice Joyce, Walker McGrail).......... 5
May 20. The Golden Goal (Harry Morey, Florence Deshon)................ 5
May 27. Bares, the Son of Kazan (Nell Shipman, Alfred Whitman).......... 5

World Pictures

Apr. 1. The Cross Bearer (Montagu Love).. 7
Apr. 8. The Witch Woman (Ethel Clayton). 5
Apr. 15. The Trap (Alice Brady)........... 5
Apr. 22. The Purple Lily (Kitty Gordon).... 5
Apr. 29. Leap to Fame (Carlyle Blackwell, Evelyn Greeley).................. 5
May 6. Masks and Faces (Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson) 6
May 13. Journey's End (Ethel Clayton)..... 5
May 20. Vengeance (Montague Love, Barbara Castleton).................. 6
May 27. The Oldest Law (June Elvidge).... 5

Releases in the Independent Field

For Manufacturers' Addresses, Names and Addresses of Buyers handling films in any territory, or any other additional information write—State Rights Department, Motion Picture News

Arrow Film Corporation

The Deemster.
Eyes of the World.
Ramona.
Weavers of Life.
Souls Redeemed.
Persuasive Peggy.
Today.
The Mad Lover.
The Woman's Law.
Right Off the Bat.
The Struggle Everlasting.

Big Productions Film Corp.

VICTORIA FEATURE FILMS

The Sunset Princess (Marjorie Daw).

Christie Film Company

One Reel Comedy Issued Weekly

Whose Wife?
The House that Jack Built.
Never Surprise Your Wife.
In and Out.
Betty's Adventure.
By Orange Aid.
All Dressed Up.
Red Crossed.
Here Comes the Groom.
Somebody's Baby.
A Regular Patsy.
Love and a Gold Brick.

Commonwealth Pictures Corp.

Charlotte, in The Frozen Warning.

Coronet Film Corporation

LIVING STUDIES IN NATURAL HISTORY

Animal World, No. 1 Issue.
Animal World, No. 2 Issue.
Birdland Studies.
Horticultural Phenomena.

Cosmofotofilm Company

Incomparable Mistress Bellairs..........4 reels
Liberty Hall ....4 reels
The Black Spot.........................4 reels
Victoria Cross ....4 reels
His Vindication ....5 reels
I Believe ....7 reels

Doll Van Film Corp. (Chicago)

(In Illinois and Indiana)

The Cold Deck.
To-Day.
The Mad Lover.
Public Defender.
Carmen of the Klondike.

M. S. Epstin

Raymond L. Ditmars' "The Depths of the Sea," in a series of four parts.

Export and Import Film Co.

Birth of Democracy.
Why the Bolsheviki?

The Fordart Films, Inc.

(Francis Ford Productions Co.)

Berlin via America.

Foursquare Pictures

The Sin Woman (Irene Fenwick, Clifford Bruce, Reine Davies).
The Bar Sinister (Edgar Lewis's production).
Her Fighting Chance (Jane Grey).
Madame Sherry (Gertrude McCoy).
The Silent Witness (Gertrude McCoy).
The Great White Trail (Doris Kenyon).
One Hour (Zena Keefe and Alan Hale).
A Trip Through China.
The Fringe of Society (Milton Sills, Ruth Roland).
The Eagle's Eye (Serial) (Marguerite Snow and King Baggot).
The Cast-Off (Bessie Barriscale).

Fort Pitt Corporation

The Italian Battlefront.

Frohman Amusement Corp.

The Witching Hour (C. Aubrey Smith, Jack Sherrill, Helen Arnold, Marie Shotwell and Robert Conness.........6 reels
Conquest of Canaan.....................5 reels
God's Man..............................9 reels
My Own United States.

General Enterprises, Inc.

Mother (Elizabeth Risdon, McClure)....6 parts
The Warrior (Maciste) (McClure).......7 parts
The Liar (Jane Gail, Stanley Walpole)...6 parts

Jesse J. Goldburg

"OUTING-CHESTER PICTURES"

(To be issued one a week)

Apr. 22. Kaieteur, the Perfect Cataract.
Apr. 29. An Ex-Cannibal Carnival.
May 6. A Mountaineering Memory.
May 13. A Coorial on the Orinoco.
May 20. Pines Up and Palms Down.
May 27. A Jungle Joy Ride.
June 3. Zuni Kicking Race.
June 10. Two Dutch Islets of the West.
June 17. Pin Feather Pickaninnies.
June 24. A Tropic Melting Pot.

SCRANTONIA PHOTOPLAY CORP.

Apr. 22. The Chinese Musketeer.
Apr. 29. Feet and Defeat.
May 6. Cheerful Liars.
May 13. Fate and Fortune.
May 20. Parson Pepp.
May 27. The Ring and the Ringer.

RIALTO FILM CORPORATION

Apr. 15. My Husband's Friend.

Graphic Features

Apr. 1. Moral Suicide.

D. W. Griffith

Intolerance ....9 reels

Ivan Feature Productions

One Law for Both (Rita Jolivet, Vincent Serrano, Leah Baird, Pedro De Cordoba, James Morrison)...............7 reels
Babbling Tongues (Grace Valentine, James Morrison, Arthur Donaldson)........7 reels
Married in Name Only (Gretchen Hartman, Milton Sills, Marie Shotwell)........6 reels
Sins of Ambition (Barbara Castleton, Wilfred Lucas, Leah Baird, James Morrison) ....7 reels
Human Clay (Mollie King)...............5 reels
Life or Honor (Leah Baird, James Morrison, Violet Palmer, Edward Mackey) ....6,500 ft.

Jester Comedies

Feb. —. The Recruit (Twede Dan)......2 parts
Mar. —. His Golden Romance (Twede Dan) ....2 parts
April —. All "Fur" Her (Twede Dan)...2 parts
May —. The Wrong Flat (Twede Dan)..2 parts

Marine Film Co.

Lorelei of the Sea.....................— reels

Renowned Pictures Corporation

The Public Defender....................6 reels
Naked Hands ....5 reels
Mother Love and the Law................7 reels
In Treason's Grasp.....................5 reels
Should She Obey?.......................7 reels

Frank J. Seng

Parentage ....7 reels

Sterling Pictures Corporation

The Mystic Hour (Alma Hanlon feature).6 parts
When You and I Were Young (Alma Hanlon feature) ....5 parts
The Golden God (Alma Hanlon feature)..5 parts
She Was a Dangerous Girl (Cartoon comedy) ....500 ft.
Zippy the Fireman (Cartoon comedy)....500 ft.
Zippy in a Sanatorium (Cartoon comedy).500 ft.
Zippy Buys a Pet Pup (Cartoon comedy).500 ft.
Slick and Tricky (Cartoon comedy)......500 ft.
Doctor Bunny's Zoo (Cartoon comedy)...500 ft.
The Old Forty-Niner (Cartoon comedy)..500 ft.
Mr. Coon (Cartoon comedy)..............500 ft.
Mose Is Cured (Cartoon comedy)........500 ft.
Zippy's Insurance (Cartoon comedy).....500 ft.
Zippy's Pets (Cartoon comedy)..........500 ft.
The Unknown (Cartoon comedy)........500 ft.

U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corp.

Just a Woman (Charlotte Walker).

W. H. Productions Co.

William S. Hart as Two Gun Man in "The Bargain" ....6 reels
William S. Hart in "The Bandit and the Preacher" ....5 reels
William S. Hart in "The Hell Hound of Alaska" ....5 reels
Also Series of two-reel W. H. Hart productions.
Satan's Pawn (Bessie Barriscale).

Western Import Co.

Mickey (Mabel Normand).

Short Subjects Current and Coming

Josh Binney Comedies

(FEATURING FUNNY FATTY FILBERT)

May — Fabulous Fortune Fumblers.....2 reels
June — Fred's Fictitious Foundling.....2 reels
July — Freda's Fighting Father.........2 reels
Aug. — Fatty's Fast Flivver...........2 reels
Sept. — Fatty's Frivolous Fiancee.........2 reels

Educational Film Corp. of Amer.

SCENICS—EDUCATIONAL

Jan. 2. A World of Dreams........... 800 ft.
Jan. 9. A Trip Through Japan, No. 3.. 900 ft.
Jan. 16. The Hound of the Hills....... 700 ft.
Jan. 23. Making of an American Officer.1,000 ft.
Jan. 30. Just for Joy.................. 900 ft.
Feb. 6. The Trail to the Sky........... 700 ft.
Feb. 13. The Ridge Roamers........... 800 ft.
Feb. 20. A Mountain Observatory......1,000 ft.
Feb. 27. The Forbidden Isle........... 900 ft.
Mar. 6. From Here to Summerland.... 800 ft.
Mar. 13. Strange Fishermen of Russia.. 900 ft.
Mar. 20. Our Hawaiian Army..........1,000 ft.
Mar. 27. The Making of the Plotless Picture .... 700 ft.
Apr. 3. The Making of Russian Caviar. 850 ft.
Apr. 10. White Water and Windy Willie —Where the Clouds Come From ....1,000 ft.

DITMARS "LIVING BOOK OF NATURE"

Jan. 14. The Animals in Midsummer....500 ft.
Jan. 28. Life in the Insect World........500 ft.
Feb. 11. Turtles of All Lands............500 ft.
Feb. 25. Evolution ....500 ft.
Mar. 11. Animal Traits...................500 ft.
Mar. 25. Adaptation ....500 ft.
Apr. 8. Night Animals ....500 ft.

CARTOONS

Apr. 22. Vanity and Vengeance (Katzenjammer Kids)..................500 ft.
Apr. 29. Doing His Bit (Happy Hooligan) ....500 ft.
May 6. Der Two Twins (Katzenjammer Kids) ....500 ft.

BENJAMIN CHAPIN'S PARAMOUNT SERIES

The Son of Democracy.

Famous Players-Lasky Corp.

PARAMOUNT BRAY PICTOGRAPHS

Mar. 4. In the Moonshine Country; Stage Women's War Relief; Magic for Home Use; Cartoon: Pinkerton Pup's Portrait.
Mar. 11. War and the Motorcycle; Hawaii and Her Natives; Cartoon by Wallace Karlson.
Mar. 18. Rose Culture; Uncle Sam's Coin Factory; Physical Culture Terpsychore; Cartoon: Hornets of the Sea, by J. F. Leventhal.
Mar. 25. Lumbering for Wartime; Hawaiians and Their Strange Customs; Women in the World of Work (Interior Decorating); Cartoon: Bobby Bumps, by Earl Hurd.
Apr. 1. Training Women Sharpshooters; Our Bone Relations; A New Use for a Houseboat; Cartoon by — "Me and Gott" — Bray Studios.
Apr. 8. Grizzly Bear Pets; Uncle Sam's Stamp Factory; Cartoon by Wallace Karlson.
Apr. 15. Women in the World of Work; Hawaii, The Beautiful; Cartoon by Earl Hurd.
Apr. 22. Microscopic Revelations; Horse Training by Experts; Scientific Rose Culture; Cartoon by Bray Studios.
Apr. 29. Titles Unavailable.

PARAMOUNT BURTON HOLMES TRAVELOGUES

Mar. 4. On the Way to the Front with the Chinese Labor Corps.
Mar. 11. The Alaska Cruise.
Mar. 18. A Summer Day in Skaguay.
Mar. 25. Over the White Pass.
Apr. 1. Down the Yukon.
Apr. 8. In Happy Honolulu.
Apr. 15. Peerless Pineapples of the Pacific.
Apr. 22. High Spots of Hawaii.
Apr. 29. Our Filipino Fighting Force.

PARAMOUNT ARBUCKLE COMEDIES

Mar. 18. The Bell Boy.
Apr. —. No April Release Reported.

PARAMOUNT MACK SENNETT COMEDIES

Mar. 11. Sheriff Nell's Tussle.
Mar. 25. Those Athletic Girls.
Apr. 8. Friend Husband.
Apr. 22. Saucy Madeline.

PARAMOUNT FEATURE—"THE SON OF DEMOCRACY"

Mar. 4. My First Jury.
Mar. 11. Tender Memories.
Mar. 18. A President's Answer.
Mar. 25. Native State.
Apr. 1. Down the River.
Apr. 8. The Slave Auction.
Apr. 15. Under the Stars.

Fox Sunshine Comedies

Mar. 3. Her Husband's Wife..............2 C
Mar. 17. A Selfmade Lady................2 C
Apr. 7. A Waiter's Wasted Life...........2 C
May 5. A Neighbor's Keyhole.............2 C

Fox Film Corporation

MUTT AND JEFF ANIMATED CARTOONS

Apr. 7. The Freight Investigation........½ reel
Apr. 14. The Leak.......................½ reel
Apr. 21. On Ice ....½ reel
Apr. 28. Helping McAdoo ....½ reel
May 5. A Fisherless Cartoon.............½ reel
May 12. Occultism ....½ reel
May 19. Superintendents ....½ reel

General Film Company

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES

(O. HENRY STORIES)

The Rubaiyat of a Scotch Highball (Agnes Ayres, Edward Earle)..................2 D
The Buyer from Cactus City (William Dunn, Miriam Miles) ....2 D
The Purple Dress (Agnes Ayres, Evart Overton) ....2 D
The Enchanted Profile (Agnes Ayres, Evart Overton) ....2 D

(WOLFVILLE TALES)

The Clients of Aaron Green................2 D
Cynthiana ....2 D

BLUE RIDGE DRAMAS

(Ned Finley)

The Return of O'Garry.....................2 D
Mountain Law...............................2 D
The Raiders of Sunset Gap.................2 D
O'Garry Rides Alone........................2 D
The Man from Nowhere......................2 D

ESSANAY

GEORGE ADE FABLES

ESSANAY COMEDIES (1 reel)

The Soup and the Fish Ball.................1 C
A Tough Knight..............................1 C
Our Little Nell..............................1 C
Check Your Hat, Sir.........................1 C
Wild Algy of Piccadilly......................1 C
All Stuck Up.................................1 C
The Lie That Failed..........................1 C
The Jazbo Sheriff............................1 C

SNAKEVILLE COMEDIES

(One reel each)

Slippery Sam and the Green-Eyed Monster.
When Macbeth Came to Snakeville.
Slippery Slim and His Tombstone.
Slippery Slim and the Impersonator.
When Slippery Slim Met the Champion.
Snakeville's New Waitress.
Slippery Slim's Dilemma.

ESSANAY SCENICS

Water Powers of Western Canada.........1 Sc.
Through Canada from Coast to Coast......1 Sc.
How Canada and the Farmer Co-operate in Grain Raising ....1 Sc.
Agricultural Opportunities in Western Canada ....1 Sc.
Water Powers of Eastern Canada..........1 Sc.
A Romance of Rails and Power.............1 Sc.
Grand Canyon of Arizona and Canyon de Chelley ....1 Sc.

CHAPLIN COMEDIES

By the Sea...................................1 C
In the Park..................................1 C
Work ....2 C
A Woman ....2 C
The Tramp ....2 C
His New Job.................................2 C
A Night Off..................................2 C

JAXON FILM CORP.

"A DAUGHTER OF UNCLE SAM" SERIAL (Jane Vance, Wm. Sorelle) 12 Episodes ....1 D

JAXON COMEDIES

The Unofficial Maneuver....................1 C
What Occurred on the Beach...............1 C
An All-Fools' Day Affair....................1 C
Beating Him to It...........................1 C
Forced Into Matrimony......................1 C

JUDGE BROWN STORIES

Thief or Angel..........................2 C-D
The Accusing Toe.......................2 C-D
The Rebellion...........................2 C-D
A Boy Built City........................2 C-D
I'm a Man...............................2 C-D
Love of Bab.............................2 C-D
Dog vs. Dog.............................2 C-D
A Boy Built City........................2 C-D

HANOVER FILM COMPANY

Camille (Helen Hesperia)...................6 D
The Marvelous Maciste.....................6 D

PHYSICAL CULTURE PHOTO PLAYS CO.

Physical Culture Magazine (Issued Monthly) ....1 Edc.

PIEDMONT PICTURES CORPORATION

(SELBURN COMEDIES)

Hubby's Holiday...........................2 C
Too Much Elephant.........................1 C
Wedding Bells and Lunatics...............1 C
His College Proxy ....1 C

CLOVER COMEDIES

The Wooing of Coffee Cake Kate............1 C
Rip Roaring Rivals........................1 C
He Couldn't Fool His Wife.................1 C
By Heck, I'll Save Her.....................1 C
The Paper Hanger's Revenge...............1 C
From Caterpillar to Butterfly..............1 C
A Widow's Camouflage.....................1 C
Love's Lucky Day..........................1 C

EBONY COMEDIES

A Black Sherlock Holmes...................1 C
Spying the Spy.............................1 C
The Porters................................1 C
A Milk Fed Hero............................1 C
Busted Romance............................1 C
Spooks ....1 C

EXPORT AND IMPORT FILM CO. (Inc.)

Why—The Bolsheviki.......................5 D

NOVELTY FILMS

(Cartoons, Novelties, Scenics)

ME, der Kaiser; Our Heroes; Strange Sights in the Pacific Islands.................. 1
Power, Pro and Con; England's Leaders on Land and Sea; Scenic.................. 1
The Girth of a Nation; 4 Famous Battles of the Civil War; Scenic.................. 1
Truths on the War in Slang; Scenic......... 1
Oh! What a Beautiful Dream; Scenic........ 1
The Ghost; Hocking the Kaiser; Scenic..... 1

DUPLEX FILMS, INC.

Shame (Zena Keefe).......................7 D

RANCHO SERIES

In the Shadow of the Rockies..............2 D
Where the Sun Sets Red....................2 D
Poverty Gulch ....2 D
Bashful Buck Bailey........................2 D

Goldwyn Pictures Corp.

CAPITOL COMEDIES

(Featuring "Smiling Bill" Parsons)

May 6. Bill's Baby.....................2 reels
May 20. Bill's Predicament..............2 reels
June 3. Birds of a Feather..............2 reels

VICTORY FILM MFG. CO.

The Triumph of Venus.....................5 D

King Bee Comedies

Mar. 1. The Rogue......................2 reels
Mar. 15. The Orderly.....................2 reels
Apr. 1. The Scholar......................2 reels
Apr. 15. The Messenger...................2 reels
May 1. The Handy Man....................2 reels

George Kleine System

MONTGOMERY FLAGG'S COMEDIES

"GIRLS YOU KNOW"

Jan. 2. Screen Fan.......................Edison
Jan. 16. The Bride.......................Edison
Jan. 30. The Superstitious Girl...........Edison
Feb. 13. The Matinee Girl.................Edison
Feb. 27. The Artist's Model...............Edison
Mar. 13. The Man Eater...................Edison
Mar. 27. The Stenog......................Edison
Apr. 10. The Art Bug.....................Edison
Apr. 24. A Good Sport....................Edison

ESSANAY

Mar. 1. Broncho Billy's Leap.
Mar. 8. Broncho Billy and the Rattler.
Mar. 15. Broncho Billy's Close Call.
Mar. 22. Broncho Billy and the Settler's Daughter.
Mar. 29. Broncho Billy's Indian Romance.
Apr. 5. Broncho Billy, A Friend in Need.
Apr. 12. Broncho Billy's Wild Ride.
Apr. 19. Broncho Billy's First Arrest.
Apr. 26. Broncho Billy and the Rustler's Child.
May 3. Broncho Billy's Last Deed.

LINCOLN-PARKER WORLD TRAVELOGUE

Feb. 1. Panama Canal, Part 1.
Feb. 8. Panama Canal, Part 2.
Feb. 15. Colombia, Part 1.
Feb. 22. Colombia, Part 2.
Mar. 1. Peru, The Land of Incas, No. 1.
Mar. 8. Peru, The Land of Incas, No. 2.
Mar. 15. Peru, The Land of Incas, No. 3.
Mar. 22. Peru, The Land of Incas, No. 4.
Apr. 29. Peru and Scenes Around Lake Titicaca, Bolivia.

Metro Pictures Corporation

METRO-DREW COMEDIES

Mar. 18. Special Today......................1 C
Apr. 1. Gas Logic..........................1 C
Apr. 8. A Youthful Affair.................1 C
Mar. 25. When a Man's Married............1 C

Mutual Film Corporation

STRAND (BILLIE RHODES)

Mar. 19. His Quaker Girl................1 reel
Mar. 26. Up She Goes....................1 reel
Apr. 2. She Couldn't Grow Up...........1 reel
Apr. 9. For Art's Sake....................1 C
Apr. 16. Her Helping Hand................1 C
Apr. 23. Mary's Frame-Up..................1 C
Apr. 30. Spotted ....1 C
May 6. Over the Garden Wall..............1 C
May 13. Her Terrible Time.................1 C

SCREEN TELEGRAM

Issued Sunday and Wednesday of Each Week

MUTUAL-CHAPLINS

Oct. 29. The Adventurer.....................2 C

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Sunday, April 28, 1918

Hey, There! (Harold Lloyd, Bebe Daniels Harry Pollard) Rolin..................1 C
His Busy Day (Toto, Clarine Seymour, Margaret Joslyn, Bud Jamison) Rolin.......2 C
Picturesque Wales—Llangollen and Picture Spots in England (Col. Travel)....Split reel

Wednesday, May 1, 1918

Hearst-Pathe News, No. 36...............1 top

Sunday, May 5, 1918

Kicked Out (Harold Lloyd, Harry Pollard, Bebe Daniels) Rolin..................1 C
Our Fighting Ally—The Tank.............1 top

Wednesday, May 8, 1918

Hearst-Pathe News, No. 38...............1 top

Saturday, May 11, 1918

Hearst-Pathe News, No. 39...............1 top

Sunday, May 12, 1918

The Non-Stop Kid (Harold Lloyd, Bebe Daniels, Harry Pollard), Rolin..............1 C
Britain's Bulwarks, No. 1, "Women Munitioners of England" (Official Govt. Pictures), War ....1 reel
Strange Animals from Many Climes (The Crimea), Pathe, Ed.........................1 reel

Wednesday, May 15, 1918

Hearst-Pathe News, No. 40...............1 top

Saturday, May 18, 1918

Hearst-Pathe News, No. 41...............1 top

SERIALS

"THE HOUSE OF HATE" (ASTRA)

Two reels each

(Pearl White, Antonio Moreno, Paul Clerget, John Webb Dillion, Peggy Shaner)

Apr. 7. Fifth Episode, Spies Within.
Apr. 14. Sixth Episode, A Living Target.
Apr. 21. Seventh Episode, The Germ Menace.
Apr. 28 Eighth Episode, The World Secret.
May 5. Ninth Episode, Poisoned Darts.
May 12. Tenth Episode, Double Crossed.

Triangle Distributing Corp.

TRIANGLE COMEDIES

Mar. 3. A Discord in A Flat................1 C
Mar. 3. His Hidden Shame..................1 C
Mar. 10. Wives and Worries.................1 C
Mar. 10. She Didn't Do It...................1 C

KEYSTONE RELEASES

Apr. 21. Their Neighbor's Baby (Fritzie Ridgeway) ....2 C
Apr. 28. Mr. Miller's Economies (Edward Brady, Chas. Dorian)...................2 C
May 5. I Love Charles Albert (Ed. Brady, Ann Kroman)...................2 C
May 12. Newspaper Clippings (Francis McDonald, Claire Anderson)........2 C
May 19. Mr. Miller's Bundles (Ed Brady, Myrtle Rishel) ....2 C
May 26. Little Boy Brown.................2 C

Universal Film Company

Monday, May 13, 1918

NESTOR—New York, By Heck (by Hy Mayer) ....1 C

Wednesday, May 15, 1918

L-KO—Title Not Decided........................2 C

Monday, May 20, 1918

NESTOR—The Bath House Scandal (Carter Haven) ....1 C

Wednesday, May 22, 1918

L-KO—Who's Zoo (Kathleen O'Connor, Rube Miller) ....2 C

UNIVERSAL ANIMATED WEEKLY

Apr. 3. Number 18.
Apr. 10. Number 19.
Apr. 17. Number 20.
Apr. 24. Number 21.
May 1. Number 22.
May 8. Number 23.
May 15. Number 24.
May 22. Number 25.

UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE

Apr. 6. Issue Number 65.
Apr. 13. Issue Number 66.
Apr. 20. Issue Number 67.
Apr. 27. Issue Number 68.
May 3. Issue Number 69.
May 10. Issue Number 70.
May 17. Issue Number 71.
May 24. Issue Number 72.

UNIVERSAL CURRENT EVENTS

Apr. 6. Issue Number 47.
Apr. 13. Issue Number 48.
Apr. 20. Issue Number 49.
Apr. 27. Isue Number 50.
May 3. Issue Number 51.
May 10. Issue Number 52.
May 17. Issue Number 53.
May 24. Issue Number 54.

LYONS-MORAN STAR COMEDIES

Apr. 8. A Pigskin Hero..................1 reel
Apr. 15. The Tail of a Cat..............1 reel
Apr. 22. ....1 reel
Apr. 29. Mum's the Word.................1 reel
May 6. Whose Baby Are You?..........1 reel
May 13. The Dodgers.....................1 reel
May 20. The One-Horse Show............1 reel

SERIALS

"THE BULL'S EYE"

Two Reels Each

(Eddie Polo)

Apr. 1. Ninth Episode, Dynamite.
Apr. 8. Tenth Episode, Coyotes of the Desert.
Apr. 15. Eleventh Episode, Fired.
Apr. 22. Twelfth Episode, Burning Lands.
Apr. 29. Thirteenth Episode, Sold at Auction.
May 6. Fourteenth Episode, The Firing Squad.
May 13. Fifteenth Episode, The Stained Face.
May 20. Sixteenth Episode, Running Wild.

"THE LION'S CLAWS"

Two Reels Each

(Marie Walcamp)

Apr. 1. First Episode, A Woman's Honor.
Apr. 8. Second Episode, Beasts of the Jungle.
Apr. 15. Third Episode, The Net of Terror.
Apr. 22. Fourth Episode, A Woman's Scream.
Apr. 29. Fifth Episode, The Secret Document.
May 6. Sixth Episode, The Dungeon of Terror.
May 13. Seventh Episode (Title Not Decided).
May 20. Eighth Episode (Title Not Decided).

BOY SCOUTS TO THE RESCUE

Universal Special

Apr. 15. Aides of a Nation, No. 1........2 reels
Apr. 22. On the Trail, No. 2.............2 reels
Apr. 29. The Great Mine Disaster, No. 3.2 reels
May 6. The Spies, No. 4...............2 reels
May 13. Treachery at Sea, No. 5.........2 reels

FINLEY NATURE STUDIES

Split Reel

Apr. 1. Number 12, "A Day at Yellowstone Park" and "Beautiful Devon—the Land of Romance, England."
Apr. 8. Number 13, "Sea Birds and Animals" and "The Land of Long Ago."
Apr. 15. Number 14, "Wild Animals at Yellowstone" and "Atop the Alps" (Scenic) Split reel.
Apr. 22. Number 15, Wild Bird Pets" and "In and Around Key West, Fla." (Scenic) Split reel.

Vitagraph

BIG V COMEDIES

Apr. 1. Sleuths and Slackers.
Apr. 8. Rummies and Razors.
Apr. 15. Counts and No Counts.
Apr. 22. Whistles and Windows.
Apr. 29. Flirts and Fakirs.
May 6. Laws and Outlaws.
May 13. Spies and Spills.
May 20. Love and Lavallieres.
May 27. Romans and Rascals.

VITAGRAPH COMEDIES

Feb. 4. Surprising Husband.
Feb. 11. Coals for the Fire.
Feb. 18. Sweets to the Sour.
Feb. 25. Their Godson.

VENGEANCE AND THE WOMAN (Serial)

Mar. 11. The Desperate Chance (Twelfth Episode).
Mar. 18. Sands of Doom (Thirteenth Episode).
Mar. 25. The Hand of Fate (Fourteenth Episode).
Apr. 1. The Reckoning (Fifteenth Episode).

THE WOMAN IN THE WEB (Serial)

(Hedda Nova, J. Frank Glendon)

Apr. 8. Caught in the Web (First Episode).
Apr. 15. The Open Switch (Second Episode).
Apr. 22. The Speeding Doom (Third Episode)
Apr. 29. The Clutch of Terror (Fourth Episode).
May 6. The Hand of Mystery (Fifth Episode).
May 13. Full Speed Ahead (Sixth Episode).
May 20. The Crater of Death (Seventh Episode).
May 27. The Plunge of Horror (Eighth Episode).

DREW COMEDIES

(Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew)

Apr. 15. The Deceivers.
Apr. 22. Beautiful Thoughts ....1 C
Apr. 29. All for the Love of a Girl..........1 C
May 6. The Story of the Glove...........1 C
May 13. Fox Trot Finese...................1 C
May 20. The Mysterious Mr. Davey........1 C
May 27. Rooney's Sad Case................1 C

EXHIBITORS' PERSONALS

MASSACHUSETTS

A. H. Houghton has sold for W. F. Hosmer the Central theatre, in Stoneham, formerly owned by Harry S. Kelsey, and also two lots of land on Prospect street, Wakefield, containing over 40,000 feet and valued at $5,000. The theatre is built of cement and covers an area of about 15,000 feet of land in the heart of Stoneham square, and is valued at $20,000. William N. Ambler is the purchaser.

MINNESOTA

C. F. Hansen has sold the Strand theatre at Warren to F. Emrich of St. Paul.

Irving Burkhardt has purchased the Princess theatre at Wabasha from Joseph Mars.

MISSOURI

The Electric theatre at Springfield is now under new management, G. W. Hartman of Kansas City, for the past two years manager of the Empress theatre at that place, having arrived to assume his duties as manager of the local theatre.

NEBRASKA

T. H. Tetey has leased the Crystal theatre at Ulysses.

N. C. Brewer has purchased the U. S. A. theatre at Sidney from George F. McCreary.

R. O. Brownell and E. Kenford recently purchased the Rex theatre at Allen.

Herbert Bluechel, formerly of Wayne, is now proprietor of the two moving picture theatres at Norfolk, having recently bought the business of the Auditorium theatre. Mr. Bluechel was already proprietor of the Lyric theatre.

NEW JERSEY

Philip Lenni has rented the Manhasquan theatre at Red Bank and expects to open it with moving picture shows three nights a week, beginning April 30.

NORTH DAKOTA

J. M. Wilson, manager of the Orpheum theatre at Minot, has purchased the Lyceum there, and will operate both houses.

OHIO

Following the resignation of Max Schangrin as manager of the Strand theatre, Youngstown, comes the announcement that Mr. Schangrin has purchased the Orpheum theatre in Youngstown, which he will personally manage.

Joseph Derby has sold the Park theatre, Lorain, to Albert E. Gracie.

C. R. Hall, formerly with the Cleveland branch of the Fox Film, has resigned, in order to take over the management of the Savoy theatre, St. Clair avenue and East 105th street. This house was recently purchased by Paul Gusdanovic.

H. W. Powell of Lima has recently taken over the management of the Roma theatre, Lima. He will make extensive improvements and alterations in the house, and will operate it on the same basis as he is conducting the Lyric theatre of Lima, of which he is also the manager.

PENNSYLVANIA

The Family theatre, Third and Harris streets, Harrisburg, control of which was acquired from Jack Gold last Fall by Isaac Marcus, has reopened its doors after having remained closed for several months because of the fuel shortage.

Ben Joffe has sold his interest in the business of the Paramount theatre, Mechanicsburg, to C. L. Lenney, who has assumed management.

J. L. Healy, a prominent exchange man of Harrisburg, has bought the business of the Star theatre of Hummelstown, from Kramer & Karmany and has assumed personal management. He will continue to act as manager of the Harrisburg Film & Supply Company, Chestnut and Dewberry streets, Harrisburg, Pa.

The Park and Jefferson theatres, the former located at Thirty-third and Dauphin streets, the latter at Twenty-ninth and Dauphin streets, Philadelphia, are now under the control of the Green & Altman Amusement Company, who are controlling the Aurora, Norris, Susquehanna and Cambria theatres.

SOUTH DAKOTA

Ruth Wright has purchased the lease on the Grand theatre, Hot Springs, and will personally conduct a motion picture program.

The People's theatre at Redfield has been leased by Ray Scott, who purchased the Star theatre at Lemmon from A. N. Clark.

Accessory News

— SECTION OF MOTION PICTURE NEWS —

EQUIPMENT

The

SECRET of SUCCESS

* * *

Advice or Active Assistance in the Selection or Installation of New Equipment is given by our

SERVICE DEPARTMENT

to any reader or subscriber to

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

WRITE FOR SUGGESTIONS

This Day is Now at Hand

from New York Evening Sun Nov. 9, 1917

fully provided be put in fighting units.

DAY OF BETTER MOVIES SEEMS NEAR AT HAND

Film Failures to Be Cured by Incandescent Lighting System.

The day of better movies will soon be at hand, according to scientists who are experimenting on a new lighting device for moving picture machines.

